The new policy will mean less prisoners in the city holding facility and, therefore, less potential liability in the housing of prisoners until they are arraigned in Alderman's Court.

Newark worker press for new pact

by Cathy Thomas

Contract negotiations spilled over into the Newark City Council meeting Monday night when a union representative for public works employees brought the issue before council members.

Vance Sulsky, representative for the local American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union, detailed for Council the disagreements between the city and the workers. About 30 city workers were on hand as he spoke.

The contract talks went to a federal mediator earlier this year. However, the talks have apparently broken off with the last meeting held in early March

March.
Workers have been without a new two-year contract since the old one expired December 31, 1987.

Sulsky alleged that the city is not negotiating in good faith. He said the union and the city still remain apart on three issues — wage increases, the Martin Luther King holiday and standby pay for weekends.

The major contract dispute appears to be over the King holiday in January. Workers have asked that the holiday be added to their list of annual holidays. Public works employees cur-rently have 11 annual holidays. The city has proposed, instead, that the employees trade in a floating holiday for the King heliday.

However, the union has not accepted that offer. Sulsky said the King holiday has special significance to the workers because King was killed while in Memphis for a sanitation workers' strike.

"It's something that has special meaning to our union. It is something we do take seriously," said Sulsky.

Sulsky said the union was willing to remove the King holiday from contract talks if Council would consider an ordinance declaring King's birthday a citywide holiday. Sulsky said the union would accept Council's decision on the matter.

Council went into executive session following Monday night's meeting to discuss a personnel matter. It is not known if the meeting dealt with the contract negotiations.

To many parents in the state, the problem of finding adequate day care is all too famaliar.

Hoping to encourage more private sector involvement in the day care issue, House Ma-jority Leader Terry R. Spence, R-Stratford, has introduced legislation which offers tax in-centives to businesses offering day care services to the children the expense associated with the establishment and operation of a day care facility. "The need for day care in the state is about 75,000 slots for children 13 and under. Right now, there are only about 13,000 slots open. There is a great need," said Spence.
House Bill 467 would grant employers a 50 percent tax credit on both the property and establishment and operation of a day care facility. The benefit cannot exceed an annual tax credit of $50,000.

Spence said the employer-based day care offers benefits to both employers and employees.

"For employers it can help minimize employee time lost due to problems in day care scheduling. For employees, especially two earner families, Spence expects heavy support for his proposal, which he calls a first step approach. The legisla-tion was modeled after similar programs, which were suc-cessful in other states. "I hear the frustration day-in and day-out about day care service," said Spence. "We need to encourage something out of the business sector.

A FAMILY TAX SHELTER

The popular Clifford trust was a effective way to shift income and tax liability without losing control. I ermitted a transfer of assets for a period of ten years and a day, afte which property could revert to the donor. Tax reform erased the advantages of the Clifford trust. Now there are other methods, quite lega for income shifting, but they don offer as much control.

One is a 2503(c) trust for minors: neither principal nor income have to be spent for the child's benefit (though they can be), but the youngster has full control of the money at 21. The major advantage is that trusts are taxed at 15 percent on the first $5,000 of earnings.

Another option is to give assets to elderly parents; a couple could give $10,000 each to each parent, o $40,000 total to both parents. Earn ings are taxed at the parents' rate On their deaths, the money could be returned as a bequest to the donor. It is assumed that the total heritance estate taxes.

A Newark teenager recently took first place honors in an oral Spanish contest during the 99th annual Delaware Council on Teaching of Foreign Language competition.

Kendal Hinmon, 15, was judged as best among nearly 50 other Delaware teens in his ability to conduct a dialogue in Spanish. The contest was held earlier this year in Seaford.

A sophomore at Sanford School in Hockessin, Hinmon began taking Spanish courses in his first year of high school. As a freshman, Hinmon placed fifth in the oral Spanish contest at the same competition.

Although he chose Spanish for no particular reason, Hinmon says he's now glad that he has taken the foreign language course and may someday pur-sue a career which would put to use his talent with the Spanish language.

Youth disrupts Wilson classroom

The disruptive misbehavior of one child in an afternoon kindergarten class prompted parents to complain to the Christina School District board Tuesday night.

Tuesday nigm.

About 14 parents described what they called and "intolerable situation" involving a tolerable situation at the Etta J. kindergartner at the Etta J. Wilson Elementary School. The child, who is unidentified for the protection of privacy, allegedly has been a behavior problem the entire school year.

Parents at the meeting described incidents in which the child could not be controlled and had even caused physical injury to other students

'Conditions in the class have deteriorated to where we believe education has stopped since the teacher must focus on the verbal and physical misbehavior of the child," said Richard A. child," said Richard A. LaBonte, one of the parents. "The teacher has no control over the child. In fact, he has inflicted physical injury

The child was suspended from school earlier this week, but LaBonte said the suspension was not the answer to the pro-blem.

"Suspending the child is not effective since time away from class will not positively alter his behavior. In fact, it will pro-bably have a negative impact," said LaBonte. "Upon re-entry after suspension, it is almost certain that unprovoked physical violence will occur again."

District Superintendent Dr. Michael Walls said there were plans to address the situation. "I am aware of the situation," said Walls. "I did visit the school.

There are some other interven-tions planned."
At the suggestion of board member George Evans, the board went into executive session following the regular meeting to receive further information on the problem.

Also Tuesday night, the board approved a personnel report which included the deletion of three intervention specialists at the district middle schools. The three people now holding those positions and a parent showed up at the meeting to protest the st positions.

The positions, which offered substance abuse counseling and other guidance to students, had been financed with state funds for prevocational programs.

However, the state recently notified local school districts that those funds must be used exclusively for career guidance. Board member Evans voted against the personnel change, saying the positions were need-ed if the district was committed to reducing the drop out rate. An additional $100,000 would have to come from local funds in order to keep the positions

Letters acquired

The University of Delaware Library has acquired an exten-sive group of letters by the American author Djuna Barnes. The collection contains 224 letters (numbering more than 800 pages) written by Barnes to her friend and fellow American ex-patriate, the author Emily ColSpanning a 40-year period from 1934 to 1974, the letters represent the most important extant correspondence of Djuna Barnes. Included with this material is an early typescript excerpt from Barne's most important work, the novel "Nightwood."

Djuna Barnes was born in Cornwall-on-Hudson, N.Y., on June 12, 1892. By the age of 20, she was working in Greenwich Village, as a successful freelance journalist and artist. Barnes also wrote poems and stories for various literary magazines, as well as three plays which had short runs in New York. In 1915, a slim volume of verse and drawings, "The Book of Repulsive Women," was published.

During this period, Barnes knew many of New York's most prominent authors, including Edmund Wilson, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Eugene O'Neill, Robert McAlmon and Peggy Guggenheim, who was to become her lifelong friend and henefactor.

Like many of her contemporaries, Barnes left the United States for Paris after World War I. She arrived there sometime around 1920 and continued to write freelance articles and features during the 1920s for such publications as Vanity Fair, McCall's and The New York Hereld Tribute. York Herald Tribune.

In Paris, she was profoundly influenced by the work of James Joyce, whose "Ulysses" was published in 1922 and whom she interviewed for Vanity Fair shortly thereafter. His influence is evident in her first novel is evident in her first novel, "Ryder." In this 1928 book, she experiments with the stylistic in-novations that would later characterize her best-known work, "Nightwood."

The Djuna Barnes Collection The Djuna Barnes Collection complements several other manuscript collections in the University of Delaware Library documenting the literary era of which Barnes was a part, particularly those relating to Ernest Hemingway, Louis Untermeyer, Elva de Pue Matthews, Walter Lowenfels, William Carolos Williams, and the archives of the magazines Pagany and Signatures.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

DELDOT attitudes rankle Newarkers

Gov. Michael N. Castle needs to take a long, hard look at the Delaware Department of Transportation. It is an agency which is fast gaining a reputation for brazen arrogance.

Newarkers dealing with DELDOT have found a disturbing lack of interest in and responsiveness to community concerns.

That was the case with the truck problem on Christina Parkway and Old Baltimore Pike. Residents along both highways had long been concerned about dangerous levels of truck traffic brought about when some drivers decided to skirt the state-line toll on Interstate 95. The City of Newark took an immediate interest in the problem, sending out extra police patrols when possible.

DELDOT came on the scene long after the problem was identified. It contractred for a $30,000 study which showed that, indeed, trucks were indeed skirting the toll booth, costing the state an estimated $3,600 per day.

Secretary of Transportation Kermit Justice decided to act. He called a press conference the day before Thanksgiving, knowing full well (and he was right) that on a slow news day he would have tons of coverage. But instead of announcing that DELDOT had decided on a decisive course of action, Justice said it was merely studying a range of options. Months after that conference, DELDOT finally put up signs warning long-haul truckers not to use Christina Parkway.

So the truckers moved onto Old Baltimore Pike, and more time elassed before DELDOT may present the problem of the problem of

So the truckers moved onto Old Baltimore Pike, and more time elapsed before DELDOT put up similar signs there.

East Newark residents have been upset about traffic conditions on Harmony Road for years, and rightfully so. So DELDOT, at the insistence of legislators, undertook a study of the traffic situation in the entire Metroform area

the entire Metroform area.

When word got out that the preliminary study would be unveiled last week, this newspaper called DELDOT about attending. A reporter was told, "The press has not been invited...but we won't throw you out." Good thing, because this was a public document, paid for with public funds, and of a great deal of public interest.

The study itself appears to be lacking substance, a point clearly made by County Councilman Michael Purzycki.

Other problems? Eagle Run Road. The loss of public advocate George Jarvis from the DELDOT advisory council...and the beat goes on.

It will come as no surprise to anyone who has so much as driven through our area recent-ly to learn that we are undergo-ing a major and prolonged building boom.

Everywhere one goes houses are under construction, putting are under construction, putting a very heavy burden on our roads and schools, our water and sewer systems, indeed on libraries and parks and almost every public facility.

Many of us would just as soon slow things down a bit, and take some time to adjust, but we also realize that the population of our area is growing and our young realize that the population of our area is growing and our young families need good, affordable housing. And so, recognizing this need, we bear up under the strain, try to find a little room for our new neighbors and struggle to preserve our quality of life by carefully reviewing subdivision proposals to make sure they do not do undue damage to our community. community.

Child care

Support bill

Child day care is an issue which has reached the critical point in Delaware, prompting legislative action in the form of a tax credit for employers who provide or contract out day care while the parents work.

House Bill 467 would give businesses a 50 percent tax credit, not exceeding $50,000, which would be used to establish day care services for the day care services for the employees' children.

by State Rep. Steve Amick

But the same cannot be said for retail development. No one I have talked with tells me that Newark needs new retail development. College Square is barely finished. Castle Mall has had empty stores for years. Brookside Shopping Center has its largest store standing empty. And most importantly, Newark's Main Street has emp-ty stores and a high turnover rate. Stores which have served Newark well for many years, The Farm and Home, Brauns-tein's, Western Auto, Dale's tein's, Western Auto, Dale's Jewelers and many more, have passed on and we as a communi-ty are the poorer for it.

That is why I strongly oppose the proposed large shopping center at Elkton Road and Christina Parkway. Unlike the clear need for new housing, Newark has no need of a new shopping center with 149,000 square feet of retail space. We don't need a supermarket. We have supermarkets going broke as it is. We don't need the traffic which would be generated at that critical intersection. We don't need Kirkwood Highway sprawl on Elkton Road.

sprawl on Elkton Road.

The community does itself no favor allowing developers to continue to build where there is no need while adding critical burdens to a road system already severely overtaxed. A community that allows new development at the expense of existing commercial districts existing commercial districts will find itself saddled with all the problems of abandoned stores, trash, crime and urban blight, with which we are all too familiar.

I hope you will join me at the Newark Planning Commission meeting scheduled for Tuesday, May 3 in the Newark Municipal Building, 220 Elkton Road, to help defeat this proposal.

I sponsored this legislation because our state needs to take an active role in finding solu-tions to this growing crisis in day care. Under my bill, employers would be encouraged to provide day care services at the site of their businesses, or contract for day care.

Credit would also be given for the amount spent in dedicating lease of rental space for child day care. This program would be voluntary, so each employer decides if the tax credit/child care connection is right for his or her business.

Day care is an ever-increasing reality which must be addressed now. With this bill, employers get tax deductions, parents get needed day care, and jobs will be created by the addition of new day care facilities.

University officials are committed to the student-athlete

While watching the Olympics

While watching the Olympics last month, I was pleased to see members of the University of Delaware skating club competing at the international level. This also made me reflect upon the role of amateur sports in general and the importance of athletics for the University in particular.

I find inspiration in the hard work and determination, with few rewards and not much appreciation, necesssary for an amateur athlete to attain excellence. At the University we encourage our student athletes to match that commitment to excellence in sports with a similar commitment in their studies.

It seems to me that there are significant benefits of a strong athletic program to the Univer-sity community. Sports are im-portant to several constituencies, including students, faculty, staff, alumni, and the community-at-large. For students, faculty, and staff, a vigorous athletic program provides a valuable esprit de corps. For alumni, it is one of the ma-jor ties back to the University. And, for Delaware as a whole, it provides for major interaction between the University and the community. This is particularly the case in Delaware, where we have no professional sports fran-who should the players be in the University's athletic programs? It is very important that scholar athletes are indeed scholars as well as athletes. They are only athletes for a few years. They need to have the They are only athletes for a few years. They need to have the wherewithal to succeed in life for a much longer period than that. So, it is essential that they get a good education, one with which they can get a job after their athletic days are past, even if they happen to become professional athletes.

This balance between

This balance between athletics and academics is reflected in the University's position on recruiting student athletes. The average student coming to the University of Delaware is well prepared for study here. We look for a good

Our student athletes compete very well in the academic arena.
The average high school grade-point average of our scholarship

It is a difficult task for the It is a difficult task for the scholar athlete to balance the demands of athletic and academic programs. The Univeristy helps by providing tutors or counselors when necessary, or more flexible schedules than perhaps the average student. The scholar athlete should have the same opportunity to complete a degree portunity to complete a degree as the average student who comes to the University of Delaware. Our scholar athletes have performed successfully in that regard. In fact, the most re-cent figures available show that cent figures available show that a slightly greater percentage of our athletes receive degrees than do other students.

By keeping sports in the pro-per prospective — as part of a student's education — we can place the right emphasis on win-ning. If the University of Delaware chooses to compete in a sport at the intercellagiste a sport at the intercollegiate level, then it should be competitive. It is not fair to the student athletes nor to our various constituencies if, over time, we are not competitive. My own criterion is that we should win are not competitive. My own criterion is that we should win roughly half the time. We are, in fact, doing slightly better than that. Our record for the years 1981-87, in 22 sports, shows that we won 64 percent of the games we played we played.

In some sports, we obviously do better than that average; in others, we do somewhat worse. If, over long periods of time, however, we are either winning all of the contests or losing all of all of the contests or losing all of the contests in any given sport, we are probably doing something wrong. We are either overemphasizing a sport or we are not putting enough resources and enthusiasm into its

In addition to a wide variety of varsity sports at the inter-collegiate level, there are a number of club sports and an extensive intramural program. We are fortunate to have these fine programs at the University of Delaware. I encourage students to participate in them in any way they can and when parto participate in their in an way they can; and when par-ticipation is not possible, I urge them to show their appreciation of our athletes by attending athletic events and cheering

Let's talk advertising...

HELP IN PREPARING YOUR ADS

Who will prepare your advertising? Who will write the copy? Who will design the layouts? Who will take care of the many other details that enter into any advertis ing program

You can do it for yourself. You can turn the responsibility over to somebody who works for you. You may want some help from the newspaper in which you advertise. Or you may decide to hire somebody from outside the company. Even if you decide to handle it yourself, you will probably need at least some outside help.

You can get reproduction proofs for complete newspaper advertisement from companies whose products you sell. These come in a variety of sizes. The newspaper inserts your name and address and also, if you want, the price of the item being offered. Copy and layout for these advertisements are the work of skilled professionals.

If you want to make up your own advertisements, these companies will supply reproduction proofs of models, brand names and other distinctive parts.

Newspapers usually make reproduction proofs of advertisements and illustrations available without charge. These are supplied by syndicated services to which newspapers subscribe for your convenience. The subjects are more general than those supplied by the manufacturers of brand name products.

You can also expect some help in writing copy and making layouts from your sales representative. The larger newspapers have staffs of copywriters and artists to prepare your advertising.

Regardless of the size of the newspaper, each is likely to try to make it easier for you to advertise. Not all this help is free, but it may nevertheless cost less than if you went elsewhere for help.

Tina Mullinax is the advertising manager for the NewArk Post. Her column appears weekly.

Delaware's Mark Prater checks Duke attackman Jamie Pezzulla during Blue Hen victory

Hen lacrosse team gains key win over Duke, 12-7

For a team so admittedly dependent on chemistry in the absence of star players this year, the University of Delaware lacrosse squad showed precious little team play in winning but once in six games.

team effort, and sparked the Hens to a 12-7 upset. Freshman goaltender Steve "Rambo" Ranby, in the net for the first time for the Hens, recorded 23 saves as a starter, and sophomore defenseman Andy Croll scored two goals with a long stick. He was particularly impressed, but not too surprised, with the work of the freshman in the 4x100. "We know that they have speed. Their times are just as good as last year's veteran team." The team will become more competitive when they work out some baton problems, said Walker.

"We're still two or three meets away from getting into what we are going to do for the rest of the season," said Walker.

Murphy of St. Mark's sought by Stanford, William & Mary?

by David Woolman

The inexorable coming of spring takes on new meaning for high school seniors, as future college students await word of where they will be spending the next four or so years.

For some athletes fortunate enough to be recruited to play sports, the news is already in, or decisions are about to be made

One of the area's most heavily recruited seniors is St. Mark's High School's Mike Murphy, a tackle on the football team and field eventer on the track team. Murphy was offered a scholar-ship to William and Mary but declined.

"It was going to be a combination scholarship — half football, half track — and it was going to be real difficult to do two sports and receive the kind of educa-tion that I wanted, so I turned the football down."

The shot put specialist is con-sidering track scholarship offers from Virginia, North Carolina and Stanford. He was rather impressed with the latter.

"Stanford is the kind of school a lot of kids just dream about go-ing to all their lives, and to have a school like that contact me is a real honor.

Murphy plans to study business, and perhaps go on to law school.

Joe Kriesher, another Spar-tan, is confident that he will be going to Towson State University in Towson, Md. to play foot-ball next year. "They really ex-pressed an interest in me, and academically they had what in-academically they had what in-terested me."

James Madison, Bucknell, Northeastern and Glasboro State each expressed interest in the guard, but the business pro-gram at Towson sold Kriesher.

"I'll be redshirted my

"I'll be redshirted my freshman year. Hopefully by sophomore year, I'll be on special teams, and starting by junior year."

Mike Muelheisen and Rick

Helton will jump from Newark High across the street to the University of Delaware. Muelheisen, has only been playing for two years, but his size (6' 6", 260 pounds) makes sity prospect. For him, the ap-peal of becoming a Blue Hen came from his familiarity with the program (his father is the freshman coach), the chance to stay near home, and the good physcial therapy educational facilities.

him a definite Division I-AA var-

"It ought to be interseting," says Muelheisen about playing on his father's team. "It will be harder, but it will be fun."

Helton was contacted by Delaware in the middle of January. "I was pretty excited about it. My friends and family will be able to see me in home games. Plus they have a good school."

The freshman program was another draw. "I think it's a good way for a freshman to learn the offensive and defensive philosophies. I think it's definitely a good thing."

He plans to study business. Glasgow High School quarter-back Matt Olson has not finalized his plans, and is still in con-tact with a number of Division I-AA and II schools, including William and Mary and

UA rate of savings continues to skid

Despite promises that the current bull market would lead to an era of increased savings, the savings rate continues to fall. According to the U.S. Comfall. According to the U.S. Commerce Department, the savings rate skidded to 2.7 percent for the six months ending in February, 1987, as compared to 7.7 percent just five years ago. Experts now predict that the U.S. savings rate could soon approach zero or move into negative territory.

Given today's economy, it is Given today's economy, it is important to have some money locked in at competitive rates for short-term periods of time.

This leads to the importance of having a balanced financial portfolio. A balanced financial plan should include, along with other investment and protection products a processor. tion products, a percentage of assets in a fixed-rate invest-ment product with no market risk — especially because of today's volatile economic and market conditions. Here's one short-term fixed-income instrument that can make a good parking place: investment cer-tificates offered by certificate companies.

Investment certificates give people an incentive to build savings over time by paying better yields than a passbook savings account and offering protection against serious capital losses. Current interest rates, which are backed by cer-tificate company revenues, average between 6 and 9 per-cent. These interest rates are higher than those on average passbook savings accounts, which are federally insured. In addition, an investment certificate is one of the only products that can serve people who don't have a large sum to invest, but who still want to send a son or daughter to col-lege. That kind of a first-time investment has to be safe, have no start-up fee, provide a good return and not penalize the whole nest egg if the investor needs to withdraw some part of it. Depending on the certificate, a minimum monthly install-ment payment can be as small

An investment certificate also can work as a savings vehicle for a child's college education, especially when it accumulates in a Uniform Gift to Minors (UGMA) account. The new tax law made UGMA's more complex, but only for children under 14 who have more than $1,000 in unearned income. For children 14 or older, UGMA's are unchanged. Finally, certificates can be used as an investment for an IRA, or 401(k) plan or other qualified retirement plans. Income tay rules for retirement come tax rules for retirement accounts or qualified plans app-

Vulcan's Rest, later known as Strawberry Hill, lies on a cove of Little Bohemia River called St. Augustine Creek, and adjoins the lend of St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church, Dr. Hugh Matthews, Jr., grandfather of Kittly Knight, purchased the property from James Douglas in 1757 & willed it to the Morton family. The Matthews & Knights were among Cecil County's first families.

The name "Strawberry Hill" was probably derived from the orchard of tiny led applies having the flavor of strawberries. It was also known for its wharf, bathing & boaring in the summer, and fox hunting in the winter.

'Sweat chic' snob appeal

Once upon a time, naive people like me believed joggers were genuinely nice people who loved nature and were kind to children. Not any more. I am thinking of asking my senator to introduce a bill permitting people to jog only in the privacy of their own homes.

As you can tell, I have had it up to here with bullying joggers. There they go, pounding down the street flaunting their good health, trim fannies, and superb cardiovascular systems. It is bad enough that I have to avoid hitting them when they insist on running in the street.

(What are sidewalls for anyway?) Now. when they insist on running in the street (What are sidewalks for anyway?) Now that it is spring, it's worse because the joggers have shed their baggy clothes for more revealing items. It is hard to stay in my lane and drive like the very sensible person that I am when a hand-some hunk flicks his biceps and triceps at me.

I am truly concerned about male I am truly concerned about male drivers who watch sweet young things flicking the sweat off their pectorals. Those males are my husband and his carpool. It really isn't good for a driving man to have his hormonal level elevated too quickly. Besides how does he explain to the policeperson that he drove up the elephane pole attempting to avoid a new telephane and the new telephane pole attempting to avoid a new telephane and the new telephane are new telephane and the new telephane and telephane are new telephane are new telephane and telephane are new telephane and telephane are new telephane are new telephane and telephane are new telephane and telephane are new telephane are to the policeperson that he drove up the telephone pole attempting to avoid a curvaceous jogger.

What got me going on joggers was a recent trip to Washington. As my companion and I were strolling along the Mall between the National Gallery and the Museum of Natural History, we were chased by a herd of pulse-counting joggers, overrun by a swarm of breathless runners, and squished by a squad of sweating speedwalkers all bent on circling the Mall on their lunch hour. Five minutes later, we watched in horror as a phalanx of lunchtime fitness fanatics clobbered a little old lady trying to get to the hot pretzel wagon by the Hirschorn Museum.

Museum.
Old people weren't the only ones at risk. One be-ribboned two-year-old, fresh out of her stroller would have been trampled into the dust were it not for an alert bystander yanking her out of the way of a heedless school of sprinters zipping past the Aerospace Museum.

My experiences on the Mall shows how joggers intimidate us non-joggers, and not only physically. It's scary to hear pounding footsteps catching up with you, particularly when the sound of panting comes above the footsteps. When I was in sixth grade, Officer Friendly came to Grayland Elementary School and instructed us to scream and aim for the structed us to scream and aim for the structed us to scream and aim for the groin if ever we were followed by a heavy-breathing person.

I dislike the uppity way joggers stare at me. What kind of a wishy-washy, weak-willed wimp are you? they seem to ask. I hate to imagine what they think of people who sprawl on park benches and sip sodas.

sip sodas.

Joggers have made sweating
In the good old day fahionable. In the good old days women only "glowed" from exertion. Now, if we don't have riverlets of sweat poring down our spines and ringlets of hair plastered wetly to our scalps we are moral — not to mention physical weaklings. Those wishing to be especially fashionable wipe baby oil on their arms and foreheads to create a chic and

Don't forget the clothes. Wintertime isn't so bad — it's mostly sweat pants and sweat shirts. By the way, has isn't so bad anyone ever given you a reasonable explanation for why runners wear their shorts outside their sweat pants? In the summer, however, joggers wear shorts that are only slightly less revealing than the swimsuits the divers were in the 1984 Olympics. Most mothers wouldn't let their daughters watch that

Finally, there is the snob appeal of jogging. Joggers brag that they get high on running and that it makes them bet-ter people and gives them insights into their very souls and besides it feels

Well, let me tell you what makes me feel good: driving past a jogger as he is slogging up a hill and telling him how much fun it is to drive and then ac-celerating away before he can throw a rock at me.

An employee who retires at age 65 might receive a company pension, stock dividends or a nice watch. But his most valuable gifts are often the experience and wisdom he has gathered through his employment, especially when they can be shared with others.

In 1968, Ross E. Ebert retired as a master chief petty officer from the United States Navy. He retired again in 1985 from his position as a senior operations officer at Wilmington Trust Company, Now, three years into "the good life," he spends Fridays during "tax season" — Feb. 1 - April 15 — at the Newark Senior Center volunteering as a tax aid for the elderly.

As sharp as a No. 2 canary pencil from a lifetime of finance and accounting work, the Newarker figured that tax preparation would be right up his alley and would help keep him "alert and challenged" after retirement. He did do a little cocktail lounge piano playing once and had a five year stint working for an undertaker, but he hasn't quite decided what to do with those skills yet. During six all-day sessions this year, Ebert prepared 36 returns and estimates that by April 15—he will have completed around 70, about twice as many as last year. "The best I remember, when I started working and paying taxes a long time ago it was primarily, 'here's my income; here's what's left over — tax it," he said. Now things are a little more complicated. Preparing this year's routine 1040 takes about an hour if the tax payer has all the necessary information in order.

Ebert's clients are usually on fixed incomes, drawing a pension, or have savings accounts or stocks, but are not affluent. Most of them were not accustomed to filling out their own taxes before retirement. Others need tax help during the years when they sell property or move into retirement centers. Ebert also "double checks" the work of clients who prepare their own forms.

Ebert said that he feels a lot of the tax changes have been over publicized and have frightened people away from filling out their own taxes.

"The changes seem to have a greater effect on the employed sector of the population," he said, pointing out this year's loss of the work-ing couple deduction. A number of seniors

Edna knew she needed help to deal with the grief and, a year after her husband died, she joined a support group of widows and widowers.

Now, several years since her husband's death, Edna, although still bereaved, has made a new life for herself. Part of that new life consists of counseling others who have just lost a loved one and providing them

The Rev. John Patrick Colatch, the

Most people turn to their family and friends for support after a death. However, sometimes a bereaved person still needs help after the family and friends get tired of offering support. The most understanding people are those who have gone through the grief themselves, Colatch said.

Rev. John Patrick Colatch

Most of us are at a loss for words when someone we know has lost a loved one. Unfortunate-ly, sometimes we avoid that person, when they need us the most, because we don't know what to

The Rev. John Patrick Colatch, United Methodist campus pastor to University of Delaware students, advises against leaving the bereaved person alone. At the same time, awkward phrases can only cause more pain

Colatch has compiled a list of by those who seek to comfort the bereaved:

"I know how you feel." No one knows how another person feels. To imply such is to minimize the feelings of the person who is bereaved.

"He or She is at peace." This may be uttered as a statement of faith, but it is not really helpful. The deceased may be at peace, the survivors are definitely not.

"God always takes the best." As one widow said after this statement was made r, "What am I, chopped liver?" "It's God's will." This may be the most damaging statement of all. God becomes the dark avenger, the murderer. Besides, who are we to say that we know what God's

"If there's anything I can do." This statement is made with the best of intentions. An individual who is bereaved cannot think of all the things which need done. Instead of offering the above statement, offer a concrete suggestion such as "How about if I mow your lawn, or wash your car, or shine the kid's shoes?"

• "We must not question why he or she died." A bereaved person has earned the right to question. We should not get defensive when a bereaved or dying person questions God or becomes angry with God. After all, if God cannot take it, who can?

"It was his or her time to die." Save the predestinationist jargon; it is not helpful. How do we know that it was someone's time? Would you make such a statement to the spouse of a suicide victim?

"He or she is only asleep." This one does not even merit comment.

"Well, you still have your children." That may be so, but children cannot take the place of a life's companion

So, what should you say? Colatch advises to keep it simple. Such phrases as "I'm sorry" or "I love you" can provide comfort to a grieving person.

"A shrine is when a child dies and the parents close the door and don't touch that room ever again."

While some of those reactions

Colatch can signal a problem, Colatch said it is important to keep in mind that grief can cause varied reactions among people. Those people who make no progress, whatsoever, in dealing with the grief are usually the ones who need professional counseling. For others, a support group may be all they need.

"Someone needs to seek out a support group if they feel they're not in control anymore," said Colatch.

At the same time, there are people who can handle the grief

"There are some people that don't need a support group. We don't force our help on anyone. That's the worst thing we can do," Colatch said. Colatch has a list of the ten worst things to say at a funeral to the family of the deceased.

told me hurt the most. It's all because we don't know how to say 'I'm sorry.' "

Some of those remarks include: "Oh well, you can have another one," to the parents who have just lost a baby, or "they lived a long life" to someone who lost a parent.

The worst thing to do, though, is avoid the grieving person because of not knowing what to say.

"Just be there to hold someone's hand," said Edna.
"Don't wait for the person to call and say what you can do. Do something."
One of the greatest fears of the bereaved, said Colatch, is that people are going to leave them alone.

"One of the prevalent emo-tions of death is anger and anger at the person who died. It's OK to be angry," said Colatch. Sometimes people will feel guilty for having feelings of anger. That all adds to the stress of the situation. To recognize that stress is one way to deal with it.

Colatch believes that children should be educated that death is a natural part of life and then, as adults, they will be prepared for "People need to talk to their children about death," said Edna. "You need to prepare the children for the experience they're going to have and what they're going to see."

Death should be handled in a straightforward manner, according to Colatch. The euphemisms for death such as "passed away" or "expired" are not used in the support group.

Men are taught grief is a sign of

The most important thing to remember is that grief is normal, Colatch said. It is how your body deals with the shock of the less.

During the support meetings, about a hour and a half is spent discussing issues as a group. Refreshments are served after-wards. Sometimes, it is during the refreshments that a lot of the healing takes place. It is when people discuss their problems one-to-one.

A 'River of Gold' at Penn Museum

Last weekend an exciting new exhibit opened at the University of Pennsylvania Museum. The focus of the new show is pre-Colombian gold from the University Museum's excavations at an ancient cemetery in Panama. The ti-tle? "River of Gold." I went up to the press preview and it is a most appropriate name. Auric Goldfinger, a la 007, would be drooling.

On display at the 33rd and Spruce Street edifice are more than 150 gold objects from about 700 to 1100 A.D. There are hammered repousse pla-ques, nose ornaments, ear rods, pendants, bells, bangles and beads. The two pictures with my column may serve to whell your appetite. Gold from this area of Panama, Sitio Conte, has not been on display for more than a decade and this new exhibit presents the new exhibit presents the material in its unique ar-chaeological and cultural context for the first time

Also to be seen in the gallery with "River of Gold" are ceramics, objects made of precious and semi-precious stones and objects made of ivory and bone.

A very special feature is a video tape made from segments of the original 1940 color film of the Sitio Conte ex-

The gold loving Spaniards somehow overlooked the cemeteries of Sitio Conte in the 16th century. The site was discovered at the turn of the discovered at the turn of the century when the Rio Grande de Cocle shifted its bed, partially exposing the gold. The owners of the land, the Conte family, recognized the importance of the site and invited scientific exposuring

In the spring of 1940, a University Museum team headed by archaeologist J. Alden

Mason carried out three mon-ths of excavations. That team found a multi-grave burial (featured in the new exhibit) and it proved to be spectacular. There were great quantities of gold and jewelry placed on and around the grave's chief occupant, a high status person laid out on the middle level of the burial pit.

After spending some time in the gallery it becomes evident that the goldsmiths of this period were consummate ar-tisans. The plaques and cuffs pure gold color and a composi-tion which entirely masked the reddish-hued alloy underneath. Not only is "River of Gold" beautiful to see, you can learn a great deal there too. Fun and education often do go hand in hand in the arts!

Prisoners to serve community

Delaware houses to be repaired through special Prison Fellowship program

Prisoners from the Delaware Correctional Center and Sussex Correctional Institution will repair six homes in a Communi-ty Service Project, April 17 -May 1, sponsored by local chur-ches and the Prison Fellowship

The men, furloughed by state correctional authorities, will be supervised by Prison Fellowship staff and volunteers. They will be repairing homes for the elderly and indigent. Roofing, insulation insulation painting, plastering, insulation and replacing storm windows are some of the tasks they will accomplish.

Since 1981, Prison Fellowship has conducted over 100 such pro-jects across the nation, involving more than 50 cities and over 500 men and women.

Prior to beginning daily work on the homes, the inmates will meet for breakfast and a Bible study led by the Rev. John I. Penn, associate pastor of Newark United Methodist Church.

Inmates will be staying in homes of church members who have volunteered to host the men during the two-week period. The men will return to the Delaware Correctional Center and to Sussex Correc-tional Institution upon completion of the project.

A celebration banquet and service is planned for the evening of May 1 at Brandywine-Trinity United Methodist Church in Wilmington. Inmates families, host families and the many necession. host families and the many people who participated in the pro-ject will be on hand as well as members of the Department of members of the Department of Corrections and Prison Fellowship staff from their Virginia headquarters. Prison Fellowship is an inter-national Christian ministry to inmates, ex-offenders and their families. It was founded in 1976 by Charles "Chuck" Colson, former presidential aide to Richard Nixon. The service projects have been received with praise, with national attention drawn to the projects.

"Community Service Projects model restitution and community service as alternatives to inoffenders," said Colson. "In addition, they involve local churches and Christian families and are an example of the Body of Christ at work."

Additional projects are planned for Wilmington, Smyrna and Seaford in the fall.
