Delaware Education summit

Governor Castle has called for a state education summit in preparation for a national summit next month in Virginia.

The Delaware summit is taking the form of a series of meetings during these last two weeks of August.

"I am asking Delawareans who have a special interest in our education system, from educators to students, from business leaders to parents and community leaders, to help me prepare for the national summit," said Castle.

President Bush announced the national meeting during the National Governors' Association meeting in Chicago last month, inviting the nation's governors to join him for two days of discussion on education issues.

"Half a decade has passed since we assessed our education system in Delaware and created a blueprint for reform," said Castle. "Much has changed since 1983.

"For instance, we are far more conscious of the relationship between education and our economy."

Castle said Delaware now has the opportunity to contribute to the national debate about the future of education and, at the same time, identify how local schools can improve in the next few years.

A summary report on the Delaware summit will be submitted to President Bush and other governors in early September.

Paul R. Fine, president of the State Board of Education, will join Castle in chairing the education meetings. Helen K. Foss, the governor's education advisor, and Will B. Keene, state superintendent of schools, will also participate.

Castle and Fine met today (Thursday) with members of the Business Roundtable and with the State Board of Education, the Department of Public

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

The cost of the federal savings and loan bailout will not be shouldered by taxpayers alone, U.S. Rep. Thomas R. Carper said Tuesday night in Newark.

The S&L crisis was among other federal issues — drugs, housing, pollution, abortion, economics and foreign aid — discussed at a town meeting in the city municipal building.

Carper told those in attendance at the meeting that the S&L's will have to contribute to the bailout by increased insurance costs.

"They are going to pay higher insurance premiums," said Carper. "They don't like it. That's part of the cost of the Delaware kicks off Hentennial

Team ranked fifth in AP poll, loses Levelis, Chastain

by David Woolman

Of the Post staff

The University of Delaware football team began its centennial season of football Sunday under less than celebratory circumstances, yet with all the bridled optimism and tough talk the pre-season usually brings.

The Yankee Conference Champions face more than the pressure of defending their title, or the exposure that comes from being a centennial team. The happenings of the past week have the Hens scrambling, if only slightly, to restore some sense of order.

Two first string players, defensive end John Levelis and center Curt Chastain, left the team last week, as did offensive end coach Eric Hammack. The attention of head coach Tubby Raymond has been usurped by the illness of his wife, Sue, as well.

Levelis, an AP honorable mention All-American last year, transferred to C.W. Post after becoming academically ineligible at Delaware. Chastain withdrew due to serious illness in his family.

Hammack, a varsity letter-winner at Delaware from 1983 to 1985, is undergoing tests for a kidney infection this week. Mrs. Raymond underwent surgery for a brain tumor Monday.

Sunday's reaction to all of this was sympathetic concern for all involved and an impatience to get to the always difficult task at hand of preparation for the season, centennial and all.

"Three months ago I didn't think there would be much

Drug symposium scheduled in Newark

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

A legislative symposium on the state's drug problem is coming to fruition at the urging of a local lawmaker.

State Rep. Steven H. Amick, R-Newark, has announced that the symposium will be held Sept. 29-30 in Clayton Hall on the University of Delaware campus in Newark.

William Bennett, the nation's drug czar, has been invited to attend the meeting.

Bennett, former U.S. Secretary of Education, was appointed by President Bush to lead the national fight against drug abuse.

Bennett is scheduled to release his strategy for dealing with the drug problem early in September.

"He has indicated it's a possibility," said Amick of Bennett's invitation to visit Newark.

"His intention is to travel around the country and deliver his plan. We think we have a pretty good shot at it."

Amick said experts in the fields of drug prevention, treatment and education have been invited to the symposium. He is still awaiting firm commitments.

The symposium, he said, will serve as a "learning session" for lawmakers where they will be able to ask questions of the experts.

Amick, who serves as the chairman of the House

Substance Abuse Committee, recognized the need for the symposium after more than 50 drug bills were presented in this year's legislative session.

The amount of legislation, he said, is evidence that lawmakers are struggling to deal with the drug problem.

The symposium will also provide Amick with information that will aid him in his new appointment as a member of the American Legislative Exchange Council's Substance Abuse Task Force.

The Council is an organization of lawmakers, sharing information about legislative issues.

Amick is pleased with the response from state officials to the symposium, who have supported his call for the gathering.

Legislation stemming from the symposium may be considered by General Assembly in a special session this fall. Amick said lawmakers will have the opportunity to make use of what is gained during the symposium.

U.S. Rep. Thomas R. Carper knew Congress was going to have to do more to restore FSLIC funds. The recent bailout bill includes increased supervision of the S&L's.

"We're going to have strong and adequate supervision at the federal level," said Carper.

City moves closer to establish a curbside recycling program

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

A curbside recycling program in Newark is a step closer.

Newark City Council has given the Conservation Advisory Commission permission to begin investigating the cost of a pilot program to recycle the city's trash.

Arthur W. Fridl, city public works director, said a determination must be made as to whether the program is feasible.

"The biggest problem with recycling is you've got to have someone out there to buy the product you're trying to recycle," said Fridl. "If you don't, you're just separating and collecting trash."

One of the biggest stumbling blocks the city may face in setting up a recycling program is the fact that surrounding states already have mandatory recycling. Those mandatory programs have caused the bottom to fall out of the demand for recyclable materials.

Recycling has become increasingly popular as communities run out of space for new landfills.

The city had a recycling program in the 1970s, collecting cans and glass. However, the program ended about five years ago.

"By 1984, we were no longer in the (recycling) business," said Fridl. "There was no longer a market for it."

"It wasn't worth our while to try to collect the stuff," he said.

Although the current market for recyclable materials is not good, Fridl said it may still be cheaper to recycle than to dump in the landfill.

"Right now, it costs us about $42 a ton to dump trash at Pigeon Point landfill," he said.

Fridl said it may be several months before the commission can report to city council on the possible costs of a pilot recycling program. The commission would like to put the program in place for one year to test curbside recycling.

Recycled materials have not been in great demand because of higher costs. Fridl said for recycling efforts to work, government agencies should be required to use recycled products.

"People have to realize it cost a little more to get into recycling."

State opens on-site day care

by Suzanne Sczubelek

Of the Post staff
A handful of children assisted Gov. Michael N. Castle as he ushered in a new era for state employees Wednesday.

The politician cut a gold-colored ribbon held by the children to officially open the first on-site day care center for Delaware's state employees.

"We need state-supplemented day care," Castle told about 50 people gathered under a beating sun on the New Castle campus of the Delaware Department of Health and Social Services.

"(Day care) is no longer a luxury in this country — it is a necessity," he said.

Castle said that the facility, named Hidden Treasures, is the first step in attracting and retaining state employees and showing people that Delaware cares about its workers. He noted that the state is one of the largest employers in Delaware.

DHSS spokesperson Trish Hearn, who plans to enroll her two children, said the purpose of the center is twofold. While it provides day care for all state employees, it is also expected to attract nurses to Delaware State Hospital, which celebrated its centennial this month.

A University of Delaware survey spurred by DHSS secretary Thomas P. Eichler indicates that on-site day care can be a deciding factor for nurses in deciding whether to accept a position and whether to stay there.

Along with DHSS employees, state health examiner Dr. Ali Z.

Hameli and state representatives Katharine M. Jester, D-Middletown, and Phillip J. Corrozi, R-Wilmington, were on hand for the ribbon cutting ceremony.

The New Castle campus of DHSS houses Delaware State Hospital and the administrative headquarters for eight of the department's 11 divisions.

Hidden Treasures operates out of the renovated Gawthrop Building and is run by Career Exploration Program, Inc. The service is offered to employees for a reduced cost.

The rate, about $20 a week lower than other comparable day care facilities, is made possible in part because the state provides the facility and paid for its renovation.

Six DHSS divisions, including the Department of Aging, contributed funds for the center, and employees participated in its interior decorating.

The fee for full time infant day care is $75 per week, and before- and after-school care for 6 to 10-year-olds costs $35.

The program intends to serve up to 75 children, ages 6 weeks to 12 years. Hours are from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. If it becomes necessary, those hours will be extended.

Several children already participate in the program, and Hearn estimates an enrollment of 20 by the middle of next month.

The center is staffed with two professionals with degrees in early childhood care.

"This is a big step for the First State," Castle said.

Oregonian to assume Del. post

An Oregon health official will assume duties as the new director of Delaware's Division of Public Health.

Dr. Lester N. Wright, currently an officer and administrator for Oregon's Department of Human Resources, has been appointed to head the largest division of Delaware's Department of Health and Social Services.

Wright, 46, succeeds Dr. Lyman J. Olsen, who earlier this year announced plans to leave that position to become director of Community Health Services in Delaware.

Wright has held his current position in Oregon since 1983. He is responsible for the medical aspects of the health division's programs, relations with the medical community, legislature and other state agencies.

In the Delaware post, Wright will oversee the division's 1,700 employees and $50 million budget.

Prior to his Oregon assignment, Wright spent seven years in Africa as director of Adventist Health Services in Zimbabwe and with the Lesotho rural health development project.

"Dr. Wright's references are superb, and his knowledge, experience and approach are impressive," said Delaware Health and Social Services Secretary Thomas P. Eichler. "His commitment to preventive health is consistent with the priorities of this administration, and his sensitivity to basic health issues will be of great benefit to Delaware."

Eichler said the state is also fortunate to retain the expertise of Olsen, who will work closely with Wright.

Wright holds a medical degree from Loma Linda University School of Medicine in California and a master's degree from the Harvard School of Public Health.

Shady deal in Newark

A Newark neighborhood will be a little greener, thanks to some improvements by a city organization.

The Conservation Advisory Commission has directed the planting of 12 trees in Cleveland Heights, a low-income housing development on Cleveland Avenue.

The commission contracted with Gildea's Nursery to plant Dawn Redwood and Willow Oak trees throughout the community.

"When the trees get large, they'll provide shade," Tom Gildea, owner of the nursery. "They really need trees here."

The commission paid for the trees through a $2,000 Community Development Block grant.

Gildea said the trees will require little care — only occasional watering.

"We worked well with the city," said Gildea. "We're glad to participate in such plantings that go on in our city."

In years past, the city parks and recreation department has handled tree plantings. However, an increasing workload on the department has made it necessary to work with outside contractors.

Commission chairman Al Licata said they will continue to plant trees around the city. Persons wishing to nominate an area for tree planting can contact the commission through the city secretary's office.

Information about murder sought

Delaware Crime Stoppers is asking for information on possible suspects that will help solve the murder of David Smith on October 5, 1988.

Smith was in the basement of a vacant building about 12:18 a.m. on October 5. He was drinking with several other individuals when an unknown person approached the victim and asked for money.

The person then struck Smith over the head with a bottle, resulting in the victim's death.

Persons with information about the murder should call 1-800-TIP-3333.

County workers are recognized

Several Newarkers employed by New Castle County government were honored recently for their service.

County Executive Dennis E. Greenhouse recognized those workers with 25 and 30 years of service as well as those employees with a perfect attendance record for five years.

Newarkers honored for 30 years of service were Joseph T. Cella and Anthony Parsi.

Geraldine K. Murzynski of Newark was honored for 25 years of service to the county.

Lawrence Tan and Capt. Stanley Yackoski of Newark were both recognized for perfect attendance in a five-year period.

County employees "provide vital services which protect the health, safety and welfare of New Castle County residents," said Greenhouse. "It is important to recognize their contributions and express our appreciation for their many years of public service."

Recipients of the 30-year service awards received a plaque and a gold pin of the New Castle County seal. Employees with 25 years of service were awarded a plaque and a silver pin. County workers with a perfect attendance record received a $100 savings bond.

Information sought for calendar

The Delaware Tourism Office is now collecting event information for inclusion in Delaware's 1990 annual Calendar of Events.

Published by the tourism office, the calendar has a circulation of approximately 100,000 and is distributed through mail fulfillment, travel trade shows, consumer shows, as well as through travel promotion agencies and information centers.

The calendar is also sent to travel editors, writers and publications throughout the United States.

The deadline for submissions for inclusion in the calendar is Wednesday, Sept. 6.

For information, contact the Delaware Tourism Office at 736-4271.

Governor makes appointments

Governor Michael Castle has appointed two Newarkers to positions on state boards.

Alfonse L. Mercatante, 43 Thorn Hollow Road, has been appointed to a three-year term on the Board of Professional Counselors.

Dr. Lawrence Cohen, 21 Barnard Street, has been appointed to the Advisory Council on Child Mental Health Services. His term will expire in 1992.

Pollution info is available

The Delaware Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control's proposed strategy for managing nonpoint source pollution is available in draft form for public review.

The publication can be seen at DENREC's Dover office and at Conservation District offices in Newark, Camden and Georgetown.

Nonpoint source pollution is the urban and agricultural runoff that threatens groundwater and surface water. It comes, for example, from herbicide, pesticide or fertilizer application, construction runoff, road salt, animal feedlots and manure storage and disposal or seepage from landfills.

The draft outlines goals for developing implementation plans for the control of these diffuse and difficult to regulate nonpoint sources.

Comments on the plan will be accepted through Aug. 31 by Richard Bennett, Division of Soil and Water Conservation, P.O. Box 1401, Dover, DE 19903.

Liability limit for cleanup contractors

The liability of hazardous waste cleanup contractors performing in Delaware is limited under a new law.

The new law is designed to encourage those best qualified to perform hazardous waste cleanup to be willing to respond when cleanup is required.

In the past, contractors have been reluctant to participate in environmental cleanup due to fear of being sued or held liable for problems developing later resulting from the spill or the product itself.

The new law does not protect contractors who are negligent.

"Now, more than at any other time in our history, it is essential to have companies available and willing to respond to cleanup of hazardous discharge and materials," said Delaware Insurance Commissioner David N. Levinson. "The potential threat to Delawareans both from existing sites and from potential catastrophic mishaps is enormous, and timely cleanup response is critical."

Levinson said the legislation requires contractors to utilize state-of-the-art scientific technology, and does not protect companies engaged in reckless or negative practices.

Council to vote on plan

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

A new police facility, a new water treatment plant and open space acquisition are among the city's goals listed in the $3.5 million capital improvement plan.

City Manager Carl Luft will present the plan to City Council Monday night. Council is expected to approve the plan, but specific projects must be considered separately.

The proposed five-year plan does not include complete financing for the major projects. In a letter to council, Luft acknowledges that a financing plan must be established for a new police station and the purchase of open space.

"These will be competing with other needs such as expansion of utilities, replacement equipment and existing facilities," Luft said in the letter.

A bond referendum has been mentioned by city officials as a possible method to finance the city's needs.

"That is certainly the way we're leaning right now — at least for part of these projects," Luft said during an interview.

Luft will outline details about the plan and possible financing considerations during Monday's council meeting. No decisions are expected on financing.

The city planning commission approved the capital improvement plan earlier this year. Along with their approval came a resolution encouraging the city to purchase open space and parkland.

"My biggest quest is to receive direction from council on the planning commission recommendation," said Luft.

Slightly more than 50 percent of the proposed capital plan ($1.74 million) will pay for electric services and substations. Much of the work will entail new lines for residential developments and a new substation to serve the northeast section of the city.

The capital plan also includes: $558,900 to parks and recreation. These funds will finance construction of Elan Park, provide seed money for parkland acquisition and allow for completion of Stafford Park. Park improvements are also proposed.

$532,400 to public works. The primary goal of the program is roadway preservation. Storm drainage and road improvements are proposed on five streets during the planning period.

$480,000 for water and wastewater services. The funds will pay for services to new customers.

$163,500 to the police. The money will pay for new equipment, designed to enhance police operations. This includes new vehicles, communication devices and computer system purchases.

Credit center starts training

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

During the past two years, 28-year-old Vickie Brown of Hockessin jumped from job to job looking for something that could become a career.

Now she believes she has found her niche. She started work last week at the Southwestern States Bankcard Association (SSBA) in Newark.

"I've had several jobs, and this is the one I hope to stay with," she said. "I believe it's going to be a good company."

What makes this job different from others is a commitment the credit card processing company has made to Brown.

"They taught us the things we needed to know to advance," said Brown. "In past jobs, I've been hired and trained at that job, and that was it."

Brown was among 18 new

SSBA employees to participate in an experimental training program. SSBA, in cooperation with the Delaware Development Office, sent the employees for training at Delaware Technical and Community College Industrial Training Center in Wilmington.

Recruited by SSBA, the employees were on the company payroll as soon as their training got under way. Most companies wait until a prospective employee has received training before actually hiring the person.

The new employees spent part of the day at the training center, learning job development skills. The rest of the day was spent at SSBA offices in the White Clay Center where employees became familiar with the company equipment.

Although the employees are trained for entry-level positions processing mail, the jobs are extremely important to the company, according to Dana L. Shoff, SSBA manager of human resources.

"The people have to be extremely responsible," said Shoff. "They are handling payments."

SSBA, which handles credit card services for member banks, has seen the demand for its services grow. That, along with a limited supply of prospective employees, has caused SSBA to begin the new approach to hiring.

"It's very difficult to find a qualified employee — a dedicated employee," said Shoff. "The money that was spent to train these people will be very important."

While at the training center, the employees review math and English skills. Perhaps even more important, according to Shoff, are the job development skills.

"They've learned how to be responsible," she said. "I think that's real important in today's job market."

Those job skills include proper dress for work, dependability, promptness and how to communicate with others.

"All my other jobs and experience never taught us anything like that," said Keisha May, 19 of New Castle. "I think in the years to come it will help me a lot."

Considering the long-term, SSBA cross-trains the employees, preparing them to advance with their company.

Much of their training also involves reinforcing their value to the company.

"They're a part of us and we're a part of them," said Shoff. "We have to let them know that we care."

"They need to know from day one that they're valued employees in the company."

Diabetes programs planned

Delaware has the highest per capita death rate from diabetes in the nation, according to a recent report issued by the Center for Disease Control.

The Delaware affiliate of the American Diabetes Association maintains that a large percentage of these premature deaths can be prevented through patient, professional and public education.

In September, the affiliate will begin offering a diabetes hotline that will enable patients to ask questions of a health care professional dealing directly with the disease.

Support groups and education classes will also be held in Wilmington, Newark and Sussex County.

For professionals, there will be three clinical education programs, one in each county.

Family practice and general practice physicians will be instructed by a specialist in the field of diabetes management who will present updated information on care and treatment of diabetic patients.

The affiliate currently provides statewide diabetes detection through various labs and health centers. Its public awareness campaign will also be increased in November, which is National Diabetes Month.

A 49-year-old Marcus Hook, Pa. man was hurt Friday when the garbage truck he was driving overturned at Elkton Road and Christiana Parkway, Newark police said. Newark woman wins hunt

A 29-year-old Newark native is the winner of the Newark Post Go for the Gold Scavenger Hunt.

Linda Kruegger of Brookside solved the riddle provided in a July 27 special supplement.

"When I saw it in the paper, it seemed like something fun to do," she said. "It turned out to be a lot of work."

Kruegger answered 21 riddles correctly and then visited each participating merchant to find out their unadvertised Go for the Gold special.

"To go to the stores took me three days," she said. "It took me another couple days to figure out the puzzles."

Kruegger, the mother of two-year-old Joey and five-month-old Jessie, brought her children along on the hunt. She pushed them in a carriage down Main Street as she searched for riddle clues. It proved to be a nice outing for them, she said.

Her husband, Joe, helped her out some with the puzzle, Kruegger said.

"I had a little trouble with it," she said. "I had to look at it, put it away and then look at it again."

Her husband, she said, drove her around as she looked for clues from participating merchants located in area shopping centers.

A floral designer by trade, Kruegger keeps busy now caring for her young children.

As the contest winner, she will receive $250. The money, she said, will buy new winter clothes for Joey and Jessie.

Acierno zoning plan denied

The New Castle County Planning Board Tuesday recommended against a proposal to rezone 66 acres of land at Possum Park Road and Kirkwood Highway.

Developer Frank Acierno has requested commercial zoning for the property known as the AciernoStopyra tract. His plans include a shopping center at the location.

The proposal first came to county planning officials in 1986 but was tabled until the traffic impact was known.

Planning board members based their vote Tuesday on traffic projections from the Delaware Department of Transportation. The rezoning of the property from residential to commercial has been opposed by area residents, particularly by members of Citizens Advocacy Possum Park Area (CAPP).

The issue is expected to receive final consideration by New Castle County Council in late October or early November.

Teen fuses fitness and science

BARTOW, W.Va. — Karen Reese, a recent graduate of Christiana High School, is an accomplished scientist.

But Reese is not the type to be found locked away in a laboratory, hiding beneath reams of data and poking around bottles of chemicals.

In fact, she's quite active, having been captain of the Christiana High field hockey, basketball and track teams.

And while at Christiana, she earned the Presidential Academic Fitness Award and the U.S. Army Reserve Scholar Athlete Award.

This summer, Reese was able to indulge her interests in both science and fitness as one of two Delaware delegates to the National Youth Science Camp held in the mountains of West Virginia.

The camp was founded in 1963 to honor the nation's outstanding science students and to motivate them to achieve their full potential as scientists and as people.

The cornerstone of the 1989 camp program was a series of lectures by prominent scientists. They included astronaut Jon McBride, Dr. Hans Moravec of the Mobile Robotics Laboratory at Carnegie Mellon University, former National Aeronautics and Space Administration deputy director Dr. Noel Hinners, and Dr. Dung Ba Nguyen of the Yale School of Medicine.

"The variety of lectures was very broad," said Reese. "The speakers are interesting and renowned, but there's more to it than that. These people opened my eyes, challenged me to think and cared about what I had to say. That's important."

Camp staff also offered hands-on learning opportunities in computer science, natural science, applied arts and music.

Educational experiences were not, however, limited to camp boundaries and West Virginia's environment providing a living laboratory and physical challenge for many of the delegates.

Fresh off a hiking trip, Reese was beaming. "I had so much fun — and learned a lot, too. We looked at trees and plants, fungi and animals along the way. It's really great to have a professional biologist along on a hiking trip because you become so much more aware of nature and the life around us."

Next month, Reese will enter Houghton (N.Y.) College, where she is considering a major in chemistry. She would like to become a biochemist or chemical engineer.

As camp closed, Reese indicated it was an experience well worth the time. "The people here, delegates and staff members alike, were incredible. I had so many laughs and debates and eye-opening experiences, I can't believe it all happened in three weeks."

"Best of all, I made friends from all around the nation with people that I know I'll be running into time and time again. I had a wonderful time."

Donnelley named dept. chair

Dr. Lawrence P. Donnelley, chairperson of the Department of Economics, has been named acting dean of the University of Delaware College of Business and Economics.

Donnelley assumes the post previously held by Dr. Eric Brucker, a university faculty member for 19 years.

Brucker, who served as dean for 13 years, has accepted the post of Vice President for Academic Affairs at Trenton State College, effective Sept. 1.

"Dr. Brucker, a 1963 Delaware graduate, has served his alma mater well, and I know I speak for the University community, particularly his colleagues in the College of Business and Economics, when I wish him and his family well as they meet new challenges ahead," Dr. Trabant said.

The president cited several accomplishments during Dr. Brucker's tenure, including the college's record of growth, competition for admission, the quality of faculty research, interaction with area businesses and industry and success with external reviews of its faculty, students and programs.

Earlier this year, Trabant said, the college received full accreditation for its accounting master's degree program, making Delaware one of only 48 schools in the country to have earned this professional recognition for both bachelor's and master's degree programs.

In addition, he said, Dr. Brucker was closely involved with the negotiations resulting in the move of the prestigious Stonier School of Banking to the Delaware campus. Sponsored by the American Bankers Association, this two-week summer program aims to advance the skills of bankers who seek advancement to senior-level positions.

At the same time, Trabant noted, the Center for Economic Education in the college has assumed a leadership role in promoting economics education since its founding in 1971 as a joint venture between the university, school districts and the business community.

Dr. Richard B. Murray, acting provost and vice president for academic affairs at the university, praised Dr. Brucker's academic leadership, particularly his "strong commitment to undergraduate education and his support of an outstanding faculty."

Dr. Brucker co-chaired the committee that last year instituted a new student reading list that has proved so successful it will be expanded to include all undergraduates, Dr. Murray said. The reading list program has helped set the academic tone of the university, has helped students explore the world of ideas and has helped create experiences students can share in discussion groups with faculty and other members of the university community.

The College of Business and Economics, the university's second largest, has an enrollment of about 2,200 undergraduate and graduate students.

Trenton State College, located in Ewing Township, has a full-time undergraduate enrollment of approximately 5,000 students and about 350 faculty. Founded in 1855, the college has five schools — arts and sciences, business, education, nursing and technology.

TSC President Harold Eickhoff, in announcing the appointment, said two qualities especially impressed him about Dr. Brucker: "his strong commitment to undergraduate education and his fine record of recruiting and retaining outstanding faculty."

"His contributions at the University of Delaware clearly show that he can provide a very high level of academic leadership. I am delighted that he will be joining us at Trenton State College," Eickhoff said.

Dr. Brucker's appointment followed a national search that attracted more than 130 applications.

Dr. Brucker joined the Delaware economics faculty in 1970, coming from Southern Illinois University in Carbondale. He also served on the faculty at Duke University, where he earned his doctoral degree in 1966.

A member of several professional associations and scholastic honoraries, Dr. Brucker has authored numerous publications and has taught courses on money and banking, micro and macro economics and U.S. productivity. Currently, his research interest involves analysis of organizational productivity.

Dr. Donnelley joined the Delaware economics faculty in 1968. He has served as chairperson since 1976, with a year off in Botswana, Africa, where he served as a Fulbright visiting professor. He also has been a visiting lecturer at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Author or coauthor of 15 publications, papers and articles in professional journals and recipient of several research grants, Dr. Donnelley holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Connecticut and his Ph.D. from Brown University. Both are in economics.

Black student orientation

Talks by Cleo Fields, Louisiana's youngest state senator, and Chuck Stone, columnist and University of Delaware English professor, and a theatrical program will be among the special activities scheduled for the University of Delaware's Black Freshman and Transfer Student Orientation, set Thursday and Friday, Aug. 31-Sept. 1, on the Newark campus.

The program will begin on Aug. 31 with welcoming remarks by University President E.A. Trabant; Stuart J. Sharkey, vice president for student affairs; and Janine Hunt, president of the Black Student Union.

Chuck Stone, professor of English at the University and columnist for the Philadelphia Daily News, will give the opening address. Also that morning, a workshop will cover University structure and resources, support services and faculty expectations.

In the afternoon, students will have time to re-evaluate their fall semester schedules, and an information session and tour for parents will be held.

That evening a picnic is scheduled, and the Stuart Sisters will present a theatrical program entitled "An Afro-American Journey." After the performance, a Black Student Union rap session will be held.

On Sept. 1, activities will include discussions of racism, stress management, the significance of deadlines, getting ready for the first day of class and the problems of procrastination.

The orientation program will conclude with a banquet and talk by Sen. Fields that night in Clayton Hall. Sen. Fields was 24 when he was elected in Louisiana's 14th Senatorial District.

Howell wins Olympic bronze

by David Woolman

Of the Post staff

Out of the mini-tournament, out of the family garage, Kurt Howell has put himself among the best in the country in Greco-Roman wrestling. Howell, an undefeated four-time Delaware High School champion at Newark High School, finished third in the 125.5 pound weight class at last month's Olympic Festival in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, to qualify as second alternate to the U.S. World team.

His finish was as stunning to Howell as it was to the rest of the Greco-Roman wrestling community, which barely knew his name coming into the competition. Now, some are calling him a likely Olympian in 1992.

"I'm surprised they let me in there," says Kurt, a rising junior at Clemson University. "I really didn't have any national credentials."

"I'm only 21 — I'm the youngest on the team (and the only one still in college). The only thing I've done in Greco was win the junior nationals four years ago. It was kind of like coming in off the street."

Indeed, it was. Most of Howell's experience in Greco-Roman wrestling comes from working with his father, Dick, and brothers, Dicky and Brad, out in the garage cum wrestling cage of his Elkton road home (unlike those he competed against in Oklahoma City, who train with World Team coaches or compete in the Navy or Marines). He trained for the competition by hijacking his collegiate wrestling teammates at Clemson (including his brother Brad) after summer school study hall and having them work him in shifts. Teammates whose entirety of Greco-Roman wrestling knowledge had been taught them by, that's right, Kurt Howell.

And that wasn't all. "The day before we went there I didn't have a (reversible) singlet. I was running around asking everyone for one."

Finally, in a box on the bottom of a stack they found an old singlet worn by Brad a number of years ago.

"It was all stretched out for Brad (who is three inches and 20 pounds heavier than his older brother). I had to cross it over to make it fit."

Old singlet or no, Howell won two matches in the mini-tournament, the final a last minute 8-7 decision over Matt Campbell, to qualify for the fourth seed in the actual Olymp-

Greco-Roman wrestling is a specialized form of wrestling in which the competitors are not allowed to touch each other below the waist. As a result, almost all of the competition occurs standing up.

This is of great advantage to Kurt Howell, who like his two brothers has had knee surgery in the past. The sport in general causes less wear and tear on his knees than would collegiate or freestyle wrestling.

pic Festival competition. There, he received warmups and the kind of stuff usually given Festival competitors, including a new singlet.

The festival competition used a ladder bracket competition, with the two lowest seeded wrestlers going for two falls out of three for the right to take on the next highest seeded competitor. Howell defeated third seeded Navy seaman Clint Yale 11-3 in their first match and then pinned him in the second.

Howell then was defeated by second seed Anthony Amato 15-0, 14-1. Amato was subsequently defeated by top seed Goji Parsegian in the final.

"I was so aggressive, Amato would catch me in things," said Howell, who was subsequently invited to train with Amato and Parsegian at a camp following the competition. "At camp I learned stuff not to do so I wouldn't get thrown."

"Before, I had to rely on being in better shape than everybody and going out there and being aggressive."

"Dennis Koslowski, he was third in the Olympics last year and is a coach now, came up to me after I lost to Amato and said I looked pretty good, and that I need a lot of technique work, but that I had good throws."

"A few more years of work," he said, "and you might be our man in '92." My head was like this big (Howell spreads his arms as wide as he can) after that. I never thought I'd even be talking to Dennis Koslowski."

By the end of the two weeks of camp, Howell had pulled himself up to the level of the best in his weight class — he lost his final match with Amato 9-7. His training partner, Parsegian, a former member of the Russian national team, taught him quite a bit.

"He said, 'Kurt, too fast, I catch you in a lot of throws.... This year you train me for world championship, next year I train you.'"

Parsegian in 29 years old and will probably retire before the next Olympics. Amato has said that he will move up to the next weight class, leaving 125.5 open for a new champion.

Two bantam wrestlers have it out in the Newark High School cafeteria as part of the "Here's Howell" wrestling school. Kurt Howell, second alternate on the U.S. Greco-Roman world team, looks on.

As the second alternate to the World Team, Howell receives financial support, which as a college athlete he keeps in a trust fund and will use for training and competition expenses. As a member of the team, he will be invited to a three week camp in January, and a number of camps and competitions over the summer.

Despite his achievements in Greco-Roman, and the innate advantage of the sport over freestyle for Howell, his career at Clemson is hardly over.

"I have goals in collegiate wrestling too," asserts Kurt. "In the next two years I want to be in the national finals. I don't want to limit my goals. I want to win what I can. If I can wrestle Greco and collegiate at the same time, I'm going to do that."

The question is whether he'll have time for both.

"I guess I'll find out."

Howell camp fills local need

by David Woolman

Of the Post staff

Three years ago there was something missing in local wrestling. Not surprisingly, it was a Howell that decided to do something about it.

Dicky Howell, the oldest of a trio of brothers that was a minor dynasty in the lightweight divisions at Newark High School, opened his "Here's Howell" wrestling summer day camp that year, and has been holding it in August at Newark High School ever since.

"There's really not a whole lot going on for wrestling in Delaware," says Howell, "especially for the younger kids. That's why I chose this area. This camp is really just to promote wrestling in Delaware."

In Howell's mind, wrestling needs promotion in the area. Though he feels the best in Delaware could compete against anyone, as shown in Delaware's competitive match against the South Jersey All-Stars this spring, wrestling in the First State does not have the same kind of depth of quality found elsewhere. Howell thinks he knows why.

"We're still a little behind on feeder programs...but it's coming up. I'm getting a lot of little kids. You get enough little kids out there, a few will stick with it and when they get to high school they have 10 years of experience."

Attendance at the camp jumped from 50 last year to 65 this year. Though he expected his day camp to draw from a smaller area, Howell has a busload of campers coming in from New Jersey, as well as campers from Pennsylvania, Maryland and, of course, Newark.

Though the participants range in age from first grade all the way to rising high school seniors, all are taught the same program.

"We're trying to teach the younger guys the basics and the older guys some things that will make them champions," says Howell. "We teach the same stuff to the little kids as the advanced kids, but whereas we might teach the little kids a single leg and one finish, the more advanced kids will get the single leg and maybe four or five different finishes. They can move a little quicker."

"So we try and hit both realms. I don't want to cut anyone out of the picture."

It's a program that is well appreciated by the participants, who have a wide range of experience.

"They're teaching us a lot of basics and broadening from that," says Skip Thorpe, a senior and 189 pound weight class wrestler from Glasgow High School. "What I like most are the throws — a lot of them are from positions I didn't even know you could throw from."

"They've been to Olympic festivals and stuff like that. There aren't many in the state that have competed that far. They have a lot of experience."

The staff includes Dicky's brothers Kurt and Brad, both wrestlers at Clemson University, his father Dick, a professional strength and conditioning coach, and Mike Millward, George D'Augustino and Matt Avery, all high school assistant wrestling coaches and former teammates of Dicky at Loch Haven University.

Dicky is currently a health and physical education teacher at Highland Regional High School in Blackwood, N.J., where he is assistant wrestling coach. His team was 18-0 in dual meets this season and produced one state champion.

pressure," said team captain Mike McCall, a St. Mark's graduate. "Now that we're here and all together and the magazines came out this summer, the pressure is starting to build."

"It's just a matter of how to deal with it. And that's a matter of hard work."

Said Raymond, "I told them in letters, I told them this morning, I'll tell them tonight: We have a long way to go."

Though both coaches and players have downplayed the loss of Levelis, his absence from the team is probably the most significant occurrence of the season so far. Middle linebacker Todd Eller looks to replace him at right end. As a freshman two years ago, Eller replaced Darrell Booker when the latter left school.

The University of Delaware football team has begun pre-season practice for the centennial season of the program. Practices will be held from 6:55 to 9 a.m. and 3 to 5:45 p.m. every day, and will be open to the public.

Delaware opens its schedule at Boston University Sept. 9. The first home game is Sept. 23 at 1 p.m. against West Chester.

Special events on this year's schedule include Centennial Captains day at the West Chester game, to which all living former Blue Hen football captains will be invited to participate, a reunion of the 1979 National Championship team at the New Hampshire game, Sept. 30, and the Centennial-Homecoming game on Oct. 28 against Maine, which will feature a revival of the Homecoming parade.

Other centennial activities include a celebration dinner Thursday, Oct. 26, a Centennial Lithograph signed by former Blue Hen special teams captain Todd Gerber, a book entitled 100 Years of Delaware Football to be published in October, a uniform patch commemorating the centennial, and a special Pepsi can also commemorating the centennial.

Sue Raymond, the wife of head coach Tubby Raymond, has been hospitalized for a brain tumor. Cards may be sent to her in care of Christiana Hospital, 4755 Ogletown-Stanton Road, Newark, DE 19718. The Raymonds ask that there be no visitors.

ing Tom Bockius, a two time All-State lineman from Newark High, in line for a starting position.

They will protect a backfield which contains only one returning starter, halfback Gil Knight. Daryl Brantley, Admiral Sydnor and Mike McCoy will also see time at halfback.

Fullback is the big question, with Ray Hatch, Ed Michaels and Newark High grad Tom Goudeaux as possibilities, as well as all of the halfbacks, including Anthony Ventresca and St. Mark's grad Jim Lazarski.

As expected, Rob Prosniewski has all but won the quarterback job after a good challenge by Bill Vergantino this spring.

"I feel the same as in the spring," said Prosniewski, who was very confident he had earned the position after the final spring game, "but a little more confident...this summer I worked on throwing."

He will be throwing to returning tight end John Yergey and wide receiver John Gilman. Gene Vadas will do the punting and Don O'Brien returns to do the place kicking.

In all, it's a Delaware team picked highly in the preseason polls: first in the Yankee conference in The Sporting News, Street Smith, and by the news media at the Yankee Conference pre-season media day; fifth in Division I-AA in the NCAA pre-season poll, sixth in Division I-AA by The Sporting News.

"It's nice," admits McCall, "but you can't eat a hotdog without a bun."

"I think our record last year...and the number of guys we have coming back from last year speaks for itself."

And while circumstance has clouded the very beginning of the season, it should not change what McCall and the magazines feel is going to be a successful season.

"As long as we concentrate on what we have to do, practice two times a day for those two and a half hours, I don't see how anything can interfere with us."

"If I were a betting man, I'd bet Delaware."

Kocopy triumphs at Junior Olympics

Mike Kocopy, a rising junior at Newark High School, won three gold medals at the 23rd Junior Olympics, held August 5-12 in San Antonio, Texas. Kocopy won his medals in the Freestyle wrestling, Greco-Roman wrestling and Sambo wrestling competitions, all in the 132 pound weight class.

A member of the Team Foxcatcher wrestling club, he was one of only four Delaware athletes at the competition, and the only wrestler from the state. Kocopy, 17, finished fourth in the Blue Hen Conference wrestling tournament last year in the 125 pound weight class.

Dalrymple strokes to National title

Missy Dalrymple, state high school recordholder in the backstroke, won that event at the East Coast Junior Nationals, held August 9-12 in Buffalo, New York. She defeated 91 competitors in the 100 meter event with a 1:05.55 second effort, which qualified her for the Senior Nationals and the U.S. Open, both to be held this winter.

Dalrymple, a rising sophomore whose victory in the backstroke and the individual medley at the state championship this spring helped Newark High School to the team championship, also competed in the 200 medley, finishing eighth, the 200 backstroke, finishing ninth, and the 400 medley, finishing unplaced. She also placed sixth in the 400 medley relay with Wilmington Athletic Club teammates Trista Pzwaro, Kelti Whitworth and Sherri Burns.

Dalrymple is a former disciple of the Cecil County YMCA swim team head coach Gary Henderson, who retired from that position recently. She moved to WAC this summer.

Reds-Mets win Pony All-Star game

The stars of the Newark Parks and Recreation Pony league Reds and Mets took the measure of the best the Phillies and Expos had to offer with a 16-13 win Wednesday night. Kevin Frazier hit a home run and Fran Kulas hit a triple for the Reds-Mets. Kulas pitched a scoreless inning, as did Ben Albright.

The Reds, coached by Fran Kulas, Sr., won both the Pony league regular season title, with a 14-4 record, and triumphed in the championship tournament.

North wins Senior Shootout

The North team defeated the south 56-54.5 in the second half of The Great North-South Shoot-Out Senior Bowling Tournament held at Prices Lanes earlier in the month. The competition featured 52 bowler teams bowling in groups of four.

The Elkton number three team of Mary White, Viola Wright, Fred Wright and Calvin White put up the high score with a 2553 pin fall. The Seaford number three team of John Lombardo, Bea Orendorf, Carlton King and Willard Sammons had the high handicap pinfall with 847.

For the men, Fred Kochever of Newark had the high series with a 617, Jim McWilliams of Midway had the high game with a 244, Leon Hopkins of Dover had the high handicap series with a 626, and James Lyons of Midway had the high handicap game with a 240.

For the women, Viola Wright of Elkton had the high series with a 536, Mary White of Elkton had the high game with a 198, Erma Milne of Elkton had the high handicap series with a 663, and Mary Richards of Dover had the high handicap game with a 239.

Helen Strang of Midway made a 7-10 split.

Taylor takes five masters medals

Decathlete George Taylor, a resident of Newark, won five medals in the 55-59 age group competition at the Philadelphia Masters Championship Outdoor Invitational Track and Field meet, held at Ursinus College last Saturday.

Taylor won the 110 meter hurdle, placed second in the 300 meter hurdle and 400 meters, and finished third in the long jump and triple jump. Defeating Taylor in the 300 hurdles was Josh Culbreath, an Olympic bronze medalist in the 400 meter hurdles and Bill Cosby's personal track coach.

Lil' Crush win one at Nationals

The Lil' Crush, Midway's 11-12 year old girls representative softball team, reached their goal of winning one game at the fast-pitch national championships in Tulsa Oklahoma two weeks ago before being eliminated from the tournament. The 'Crush qualified for the tournament with a second place finish in the Central Atlantic Regionals last month.

"We faced some harsh reality down in Tulsa," said manager Wayne Hanby.

The 'Crush started out with a 4-3 victory over one of the pre-tournament favorites, the Missouri's St. Louis Gators, who were 70-1 going into the tournament and ultimately finished ninth overall. Good defense and a four inning fourth inning gave the 'Crush the victory. Jesse Chambers and Tammy Hanby both hit two run doubles. Chambers pitched a five hitter with nine strikeouts.

"That was my one game (the one win that was his goal)," said Hanby, "but beating the caliber of the team we beat raised my expectations."

In their second game later that evening, the Lil' Crush lost to Georgia's Redan Bandits 8-0, who wound up 11th overall in the tournament. The 'Crush only managed two hits, and "there were just too many defensive lapses," according to Hanby.

Center should be sketched on city scene

Although the State Theater is gone, interest in construction of a Newark center for the arts continues.

Newark is alive with the arts, home to modern, classical and folk dance troupes, rock 'n' rollers, classical ensembles, community and student theaters and a wealth of visual artists.

But the vibrant nature of the Newark arts scene is something of a well-kept secret because of a lack of facilities for showcasing our many talented artists.

What is needed to push the proposed center forward is a network of Newark's doers, the movers and shakers who know how to get things done.

Wouldn't it be wonderful to see people like Claudia Bushman, Genevieve Gore, Shirley Tarrant, Blake Wilson, Mayor Ronald Gardner, former mayor William Redd and University of Delaware President E.A. Trabant come together for just such a purpose?

The arts can serve as a focal point for the city. It can boost the economy, and it can create a great deal of civic pride.

The Newark arts center is a dream which must not be allowed to die.

Delaware Blue Hens score 100

This season, University of Delaware football celebrates its 100th anniversary.

It's a remarkable achievement and, indeed, Blue Hen football is something of a phenomenon here in the First State.

There is the great winning tradition, the unbroken chain of fine players, the superb coaching, the colorful nickname and, of course, the famed Delaware Wing-T offense.

It all adds up to excitement keen enough to make the 22,000-seat Delaware Stadium the state's fourth largest "city" several weekends each fall.

Like many area residents, I can well remember my first U of D game.

It was the late 1960s, when Tubby Raymond was just beginning to put his special stamp on the team.

My father took me to the game and we sat in the west stands, at that time the only side of the field with the large concrete construction. The east stands were the wooden seats now located in the south end zone.

Delaware was playing Lehigh and I honestly can't remember who won. I didn't really matter to me, I guess. That or I simply was overwhelmed by the spectacle — the blue and gold-clad players on the oh-so-green grass, the band, the cheerleaders, the Delaware fight song. Not to mention the hot dogs and soda.

We returned often to watch a dizzying array of stars. Tom DiMuzio. Chuck Hall. Gardy Kahoe. Dick Kelly. Joe Carbone. Pat Walker.

Every kid picks a personal favorite player and mine was Dennis Johnson, the massive defensive lineman who went on to start for George Allen's Washington Redskins team.

One particular DJ play stands out to this day. We were sitting in the west stands and the opponent had the ball on its own 40 yard line, moving left to right. The quarterback took the snap, a flag flew and everyone stopped play. Except DJ. There had been no whistle so DJ tracked down the quarterback and absolutely buried him for a huge loss.

Delaware declined the penalty and the loss stood, a piece of heady play.

My involvement with the team picked up my sophomore year at Delaware when I joined the sports information department as a student assistant.

My task during football season was to lug mimeograph equipment up to the stratospheric press box and do the film breakdown. That meant carefully numbering and writing down each play on different colored mimeos — one for the Delaware offense, one for the Delaware defense. The information was correlated with the game films the next day for use by the coaching staff.

It was interesting work, keeping close track of the game and listening to the wisecracks of sports writers and the observations of professional scouts.

I remember one scout from the Washington Redskins who raved about the Delaware Stadium turf. Football was meant for real grass, not the synthetic stuff, he said. I agreed wholeheartedly. What's football without grass stains and mud?

Probably the most memorable moment during my brief career as an ancillary Blue Hen was a trip to Akron, Ohio, where Delaware was to play the Akron University Zips in the Rubber Bowl stadium.

We flew out, visited the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, spent a wild night in a rip-roaring Holiday Inn then boarded a bus for the field.

No one really expected too many Delaware fans to attend, Akron being a far piece from Newark, and the mood on the bus was a little subdued. The players had on their game faces, I guess.

But then the bus rounded a curve into the Rubber Bowl (honestly, that's the name) complex and was met by a huge round of cheers from van after van of hard-tailgating Delaware fans.

There were wooden Blue Hen cutouts and Blue Hen hats and Blue Hen jackets and stuffed Blue Hens.

A few well-lubricated folks broke into the fight song and that did it. The somber mood was broken and the team loosened up, and went on to win a close game.

The most memorable game? For me, Jeff Komlo leading the underdog Hens to victory over Joe Klecko's Temple Owls at Franklin Field.

That's what makes Delaware football so wonderful. The personalities, the color, the memories.

Congratulations on 100 years, and here's to 100 more!

The Speaker reports

□ We in the Delaware House of Representatives recently completed our first year in the 135th General Assembly. As Speaker of the House, I am pleased to report to all Delawareans some of the accomplishments of our chamber this past session.

Through the efforts of both the majority and minority leadership, we addressed such issues as seat belts, boating under the influence, lowering the blood alcohol for a DUI offense and requiring headlights during inclement weather.

We debated and passed legislation which will provide funding for rehabilitation and treatment of substance abuse, regulate possession and delivery of prescription drugs and allow drug sniffing dogs to search schools.

Our members spent long hours considering and passing a bill to allow certain state-chartered banks to sell and underwrite insurance, as well as legislation dealing with expansion of power of the Delaware River and Bay Authority, salary increases for certain state employees, truth in sentencing, and the personal income tax cut.

We gave priority to the issue of permitting nurses to pronounce death under certain circumstances, while passing a House Joint Resolution urging the granting of disability payments to veterans affected by Agent Orange.

We felt compelled to respond to the desecration of our national flag by passing legislation.

A total of 438 bills and resolutions were passed this session of which 73 were on the state administration's priority list.

This reflects a great deal of work at the committee level and a tremendous amount of bipartisan cooperation and compromise.

Many issues are still being discussed.

The drug problem in our state remains an important item on our agenda. A Substance Abuse Symposium sponsored by the House is scheduled for September 29 and 30.

This seminar will take an in-depth look into this topic. We believe this will assist us in impacting additional legislation to be introduced during the next session.

We in the House of Representatives are firmly committed to meeting the needs of all the citizens of our state. We have completed a great deal and look forward to serving you in what promises to be another very challenging year.

SUMMIT

Instruction and education leaders from the state's school districts.

The governor and Fine will meet with teachers and principals, and with former students, representatives of parent organizations and representatives of private schools on Aug. 30.

"In many ways, Delaware has been a leader in education reform. We have made tremendous strides in upgrading teacher salaries, in raising classroom standards, and in identifying and help at-risk students," said Castle. "With the help of the people I have asked to participate in this summit, we can identify future initiatives in education in Delaware and make a contribution to the President's Education Summit."

The governor said that he intends to emphasize the Delaware Education Commission of the States "Re: Learning" project currently underway at several Delaware schools.

"There is no question that a key lesson in Delaware's education experience is the fact that classroom teachers are a tremendous resource in improving public education," he said.

A president has convened a governors summit only twice before. Theodore Roosevelt called the governors together in 1909 to discuss environmental issues and Franklin D. Roosevelt organized a summit on the national economy in 1933.

BAILOUT

The failure of some S&L's was due to poor management and illegal practices. Carper said the government intends to indict and "seize assets of the crooks that are out there."

The federal cost of the bailout is not included in the federal budget, which is something that disappoints Carper.

"We should do it on budget," he said. "We should still be true to the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction targets."

"That's left a sour taste in my mouth," he said.

ing," said Fridl. "There has to be a mandatory program."

Commission chairman Al Licata said Delaware does not have any mandatory recycling programs.

"We can take pride in the fact that we addressed the problem as early as we did," he said.

Although he speaks frankly of the problems with a recycling program, Fridl believes it should be done.

"Recycling is worthwhile if we can get everything together," he said. "We've got to insure there's a market out there to support it."

Newark YWCA day campers displayed thespian talents in the "Wizard of Oz" production Friday.

Lions, tigers and bears at Y

Somewhere over the rainbow — in the middle of Newark — children met up with the Wizard of Oz Friday.

Sixty YWCA day campers, ranging in ages from 6 to 12 years, presented a matinee performance of the Wizard of Oz at West Park Place Elementary.

By coincidence, the production landed during the 50th anniversary of the Wizard of Oz opening.

"I didn't realize it was the anniversary until after I had chosen it," said Alan Spaulding, production director. "I chose it because it was a good children's classic."

The script varied somewhat from the movie version.

In one scene, three bad witches, dressed in black, shared conversation over tea. A ghoulish-looking character waited on the witches, bringing them their brooms.

Toto was also absent from the production. During the tornado scene, Dorothy runs to the house to retrieve flowers.

The musical arrangement varied, with the children presenting a modern version of the songs.

Spaulding said the summer camp theatre program gives the children an opportunity to express themselves.

"We want to promote the arts in general — music, arts and dance," he said. "All the kids I introduced to the program have been very gung ho."

The children worked on the production several weeks, learning lines, preparing costumes and building sets. Despite all the hard work, their enthusiasm for the production was high.

"We thought it would be a good show to do," said Spaulding. "Everybody likes the Wizard of Oz."

Nineteen hundred and eighty nine, the Year of the Fork

Old times: The fork at 400

by Nancy Turner

Of the Post staff

Summertime and the living is easy with "fist foods" like burgers and fries handily keeping everyone on the move.

But as sure as a melting cone of ice cream will drip down your wrist and hard tacos crumble, fall in coming soon and someone is going to insist that you take a seat at the dining room table and get re-acquainted with the fork, at least in time for Thanksgiving.

1989 is the year of the fork, at least according to Bernard Grun, author of "Timetables of History," who writes that this dining implement's use was first recorded at French Court 400 years ago, in 1589.

There are dissenting opinions concerning the origins of the fork. Amy Vanderbilt proclaimed that it was invented by the ancient Chinese who later returned to "the dainty chopsticks so difficult for the Occidental to handle properly."

However, according to W & R Chambers, forks were originally articles of luxury, used by Anglo-Saxon forefathers throughout the middle ages, to 796 A.D. They were decorative "little forks," with only two tines and forged of iron or steel, that were used by the noble in eating fruit and preserves on state occasions.

Since we established many years ago, as did Coryate in his book of "Crudities" from the 17th century, that "all men's fingers are not alike clean," the fork has held a prized place on our tables.

Modern settings may include a number of forks, ranging from those used for the salad and seafood, to those used for the main-course and dessert. And when the topic of conversation turns to etiquette, it is most likely centered on how these tools are implemented rather than their availability.

In our country, it is acceptable to use either the American or Continental method for eating. "American" being the cut-with-the right, hold-it-down with the left, put-everything-down, pick-the-fork-up-with-the-right-hand, scoop-and-eat method. Call it the American Zig Zag for short.

In the seemingly more efficient European fashion, food is piled on the back of the fork with the knife, im-pal- ed or pressed down so it won't fall off and conveyed to the mouth without ever changing hands.

Over the years, a few good intenders have tried to improve the fork by substituting its tines for teeth, adding a slight bowl, and renaming it "the spork." The spork increases the overall shoveling speed for hasty eaters and has been predicted to be the 21st century replacement of the faithful fork.

So far, sporks have found a home at Kentucky Fried Chicken take-out restaurants, but they were already "finger lickin'" anyway. So much for the credibility of refinement.

Traditions die hard. And it's not likely the fork is going anywhere just yet, except maybe to the dining room. But then fall is coming and so are we.

Holy halogen! Flashlight makes a great toy!

The topic for today is toys — specifically men's toys. The old saying, "The only difference between men and boys is the price of their toys," has a nugget of truth in it.

Some men's toys are simply more elaborate versions of what their children have. I had an uncle whose model railroad layout had two functioning waterfalls and a stationmaster who came out of the depot and waved a glowing lantern at passing pufferbellies. Rumor had it that he had enough track to run from Baltimore to Philadelphia with side trips to Harrisburg and Atlantic City.

Other men's toys are what little boys never expect to have. If Donald Trump's latest pleasure yacht isn't a great, big seagoing toy, what is? And what about Hugh Hefner's jet? or wife?

Then there is my husband's latest toy. A flashlight. It's an ordinary flashlight, not a fancy one that has high and low beams, or one that is approved by the Mounties, or one that has a radio built into the handle or one that doubles as a jumber cable for dead car batteries. His flashlight is a plain old flashlight — a black plastic tube with a bulb and reflector at the front end, a springy spiral wire in the middle and batteries at the back end. On the side, near the front, is a switch with minuscule letters that say "off" and "on."

It was a Father's Day present. I wish I could claim that I was inspired when I chose it. I can't. It would be nice to pretend that I spent hours determining what would be the precisely perfect gift for him. I didn't. I'd like to imagine that each year I have outdone myself when it comes to gifts for the light of my life. I haven't.

The best I can say is that as I accelerated through the hardware store just before Father's Day, my eyes lit on (1) a huge sponge to wash cars and tents that has a reservoir for holding liquid detergent; (2) a magnifying glass with a handle that lights up; (3) a 45-foot, iridescent pink indoor-outdoor extension cord; (4) a flashlight.

Two years ago I gave him a Day-Glo orange extension cord, and last year he got the Gentle Giant Soapy Scrubber Sponge. I couldn't think of any possible use for the Light The Way Magnifier. Which left the flashlight — besides it came supplied with batteries and extra bulbs. What more could any man ask for? Especially from a wife who hadn't gotten within shouting distance of the quarter-finals in organizational skills.

When he opened his present on Father's Day, he was delighted. Not the kind of delighted which swallows, pauses and says, "Just what I have always wanted." But the kind of delighted that grins and blurts, "Gee, my very own flashlight. How did you know I needed and wanted one, and it even has extra bulbs."

After reading the fine print on the package, the dear man got even more excited because the flashlight has a halogen bulb. For those who are writers, a halogen bulb means very little. But for those who are engineers, it means a lot. After a lecture that included three-color graphs and an ex-

'The Delaware Singers' Auditions

The Delaware Singers announce auditions for a Pro-Am Chorus for 40 Delaware high school students. Selected singers will rehearse and perform with the Delaware Singers in their opening concert under the direction of Dr. Peter McCarthy. A $2500 scholarship will be presented to one graduating high school student upon outstanding achievement in a choral-vocal program on the college level.

Auditions will be held September 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and September 17 from 1 to 5 p.m. at three Christiana Center in Wilmington (across from the train station). Each singer will be evaluated on the basis of one prepared selection, sight reading ability, and a letter of recommendation from a vocal instructor or choral director.

The Delaware Singers are also holding auditions for paid positions for their 1989-90 concert season. Interested singers should prepare two selections, one in English and one in a foreign language.

Sight reading ability will also be evaluated. An accompanist will be provided.

Selected members will be expected to perform three subscription concerts and invitational concerts in addition to attendance at Tuesday evening rehearsals. For more information on either audition, call 733-0293 or 652-2977.

'Folk Art: Artists and Collectors'

The exhibition "Folk Art: Artists and Collectors," emphasizing the work of Sussex County and the Delmarva Peninsula, will open Friday, Sept. 1 at the Rehoboth Art League's Corkran-Tubbs Galleries.

Among the participating artists are Ivan Barnett, Carol Dyer, Charles Flynn, and Pamela Bounds-Seemans.

Shown will be furniture, antique and contemporary nautical paintings, samplers, toys, ironwork, sculpture and woodwork.

The exhibition will be curated by Lisa Turner Oshins, program specialist with the Library of Congress's American Folklife Center.

She will be assisted by Charles and Betty Palmer of the Rehoboth Art League.

The Corkran-Tubbs Galleries are located at 12 Dodds Lane, Rehoboth Beach.

The exhibition will run through Sept. 29, and hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and noon to 4 p.m. Sundays.

Two outstanding local performers who will be part of the Gold Medal Series during the 1989-90 season at the Grand Opera House are Amy Porter, flutist and Nancy Froyland Hoerl, soprano.

Grand performances by local musicians

The fourth and penultimate series to be offered by the Grand Opera House during its 1989-90 series is the Gold Medal Series. "It is with this series," Executive Director David Fleming said, "that the Grand reaffirms its commitment to presenting exciting young performers on their way to major international careers."

This is such a special series that the Grand offers free to subscribers informative pre-concert lectures and post-concert receptions to meet the performers. The music and special events make this the most interesting series of all. It is also the lowest priced of all the series, making it wonderful family fare. But more about such mundane things later.

I will give chronology its due and list the four events in that order, but I will share the one I am looking forward to most when it comes up in sequence. (I can be prejudiced but still logical!)

The Gold Medal Series begins on Sunday, Oct. 22 with Wilmington native Amy Porter and Friends. Amy has been earning rave reviews from critics not only in New York but around the country. She made her Carnegie Recital Hall debut with the New York Symphonic Ensemble and has been going strong ever since. She is a Juilliard graduate, has won numerous competitions and records for CBS Masterworks. This will be her recital debut at the Grand Opera House.

The Consort of Musicke Trio will be in place on Tuesday, January 23. The trio features Emma Krikby and Evelyn Tubb, sopranos, and Anthony Rooley, luteist. They will perform selected arias and duets by Monteverdi, d'India, Laws, Purcell and others. This group has led the way in authentic performances of early vocal music.

Now, to the performance I am most looking forward to in the Gold Medal Series, the Grand Chamber Players. I had the good fortune to be at their world premiere last year and can't wait to see what musical excitement they have in store for us this year. They earned every bit of the standing ovation which concluded the evening at the Grand last year.

The Grand Chamber Players are all local, professional musicians who get together to bring us performances of works not to be heard on any other stage in our area, or for quite a distance either. The members of the Grand Chamber Players are Nancy Froyland Hoerl, soprano; Barbara Govatos, violin; Charles Holedman, bassoon; Francis Orval, French horn; Vincent Marinelli, clarinet; Julie Nishimura, piano; Lloyd Shorter, oboe and Joan Sparks, flute.

The program they will offer us on Friday, Feb. 9 will include Vivaldi's Concerto in g minor for Flute, Oboe and Bassoon; Brahms' Trio for Violin, Horn and Piano; Gottlieb's "Downtown Blues for Uptown Halls" and Poulenc's Sextet for Wind Quintet and Piano.

On Tuesday, April 17, the Gold Medal Series will close with a recital by Alan Chow, pianist. A rising star, Mr. Chow captured first prize in the Concert Artists Guild International Competition held in New York. He is an exponent of the classic, late romantic and impressionistic schools of music. He is a Juilliard graduate and has appeared with many of the major orchestras of the country.

The Grand really is all of Delaware's center for the performing arts. Costs of some series range to $135.10, but for the Gold Medal Series you can purchase a season ticket anyplace in the house for $33.50. There are few music lovers who cannot afford this price. You could pay that to see any one of the performances in cities to our Northeast. As an added bonus, student tickets are still cheaper!

For information, reservations or a brochure with all five of the series to be presented during the 1989-90 season, you may call (302) 652-5577 or stop by the Grand at 818 The Market Street Mall.

Anonyma concert in Immanuel Church

Anonyma, the folk duo of Anne Lister and Mary McLaughlin, will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 29 in Immanuel Episcopal Church, 17th Street and River-view Avenue, Wilmington.

The concert will include both traditional and contemporary music from the British isles.

Tickets cost $8 at the door or $7 in advance. For reservations, call 994-0495 or (215-444-0446).

Lister, of England, is best known as a songwriter and her works have found their way into the repertoire of such artists as Martin Simpson, Archie Fisher, Maggie Holland, Gerry Hallom and Sara Grey and Ellie Ellis.

Perhaps her most famous work is the song "Icarus," which has traveled widely in the oral tradition and undergone several changes on the way.

Lister plays guitar and synthesizer. She teamed up with McLaughlin, a native of Northern Ireland, in August 1984.

McLaughlin is best known as a harmony singer and accompanist who has worked with various bands, including Traitor's Gait and Martin and Jessica Simpson's Flash Company.

McLaughlin's harmonies are inventive and haunting, and she prides herself on her skill in producing counter melodies.

Since forming Anonyma in 1984, the duo has traveled extensively through Britain and has been received enthusiastically by varied audiences.

Their debut album, "Burnt Feathers," was released in April 1987 by Fellside Records and has earned excellent reviews.

Anonyma's music is difficult to pigeonhole. There is an exciting mixture of traditional music from the British isles with more contemporary material, and arrangements that complement and enhance the content of the songs.

Their original songs offer fresh insight into elemental human emotions and human relationships, as well as powerful reinterpretations of classic myths.

The concert is being produced by RiverHorse Folk Music Productions and Andrew Carmichael Productions.

Kevin Roth of Kennett Square will play the mountain dulcimer and sing a variety of folk, pop and original tunes at this year's Chadds Ford Days, Sept. 9 and 10.

cursor into wave theory and inert gases, I'm pretty sure a halogen flashlight bulb is a lot brighter than an ordinary bulb flashlight bulb. A fact which he demonstrated time after time.

Like the night I found him in the backyard with the flashlight pointed to the sky. "Just sending Morse code to Mars," he announced. Like the time he came into the darkened bedroom and turned on the flashlight under his chin, highlighting his nose and sinking his eyesockets into pools of darkness. "The groom of Frankenstein's bride," he revealed.

Like the time he trailed our frazzled cat through the darkened house, "Just lighting his way, so he won't bump into the furniture," he explained.

You know what would make him happiest of all? Putting a tent up in the back yard, packing him two peanut butter sandwiches and a bag of Oreos, finding his old Sky King Decoder Ring, giving him a flashlight and telling him he's six years old.

Teens learned the value of teamwork at the recent 4-H Teen Conference on the University of Delaware campus. This group put their heads together to solve one of the group challenges during the 4-H Olympics.

Newark hosts 4-H conference

Forty-five Delaware teens participated in this year's 4-H Teen Conference Aug. 6-8 on the campus of the University of Delaware in Newark.

The theme of this summer's program was "Take Aim!"

Aim is an acronym for "Be active; Be involved; Be motivated."

The three-day program provided teens with an opportunity to learn more about themselves and their peers through teamwork and communication.

Teens participated in action-oriented workshops presented by Motivation, a Boston-based leadership development consulting firm headed by Clay Edmunds, and by Allen Rubenstein of the Involvement Theater of Columbia, Md.

The Motivation workshops involved the teens in a variety of exciting, experiential education activities related to leadership, team building and group dynamics.

The Rubenstein workshop focused on teen life experiences, problem solving and decision making through a series of creative skits and songs in which teens acted as problem solvers.

According to Joy Sparks, 4-H agent and advisor to the 4-H Teen Conference Committee, "The teens learned much more by participating in the creative activities of these unique workshops than they could have learned from traditional lecture-oriented workshops."

One of the Motivation workshops, for example, gave participants a working knowledge of various leadership styles. Groups of 4-H'ers were defined as being governed by a specific type of leadership, such as a dictator, a majority, or a consensus. Each group was then required to determine the number of M&Ms in a jar using the decision-making process appropriate to their group's type government.

In the group governed by a dictator, one person made the decision alone. In the group governed by the majority, the teens voted on the decision. And, in the group governed by a consensus, the teens came to an agreement on the decision through discussion. The last group won, coming within four M&Ms of the actual number.

"The success of this group made it apparent to the participants that successful leadership involves more than a single individual or select group of individuals," Sparks says. "It involves open communication within a group in order to take

The teens also took part in the 4-H Olympics — a series of skill tests demanding a degree of both physical and intellectual prowess. Like the other activities, this event helped teens develop teamwork skills.

In addition to these activities, conference participants were introduced to potential career options through a series of tours. Teens interested in careers in the sciences, biology, chemistry and medicine toured the Du Pont Stine Haskell Agricultural Research Center or the A. I. du Pont Institute. Others who were interested in food science, food technology and food processing visited Herr Foods, the snack food manufacturer.

"The conference was excellent," according to Sparks. "We look forward to our teens applying their new leadership and problem-solving skills to their 4-H and community activities during the coming year."

Ed Monsen overcomes crash, earns First State diploma

WILMINGTON — Ed Monsen's mom, Barbara, races into the crowded physical therapy area of the Alfred I. duPont Institute Children's Hospital. She's shaking her head and muttering under her breath. "Oh, no," Ed whispers to his therapist at his mom's dramatic entrance. "Am I in big trouble?" Barbara Monsen determinedly marches toward him. "Young man... where have you been," questions Mom. "I've been looking all over this hospital for you."

It turns out Ed, who has been both an inpatient and outpatient at the Institute since 1985, arrived to the hospital via special transport a little early that day and decided to brave the trip up to the rehab unit alone. He told no one that he had arrived and soon there was a frantic search for his whereabouts.

"As long as you're here... but don't do THAT to me again," Mrs. Monsen admonishes, visibly relaxing. She musses the hair on the top of Ed's head with a wide grin on her face. "After all, we can't have you lost before your big day."

The day she refers to has since come and gone and is now a recent memory in the Monsen family's lives. It's the day Ed Monsen, the brain injured Ed Monsen, the death-defying Ed Monsen, jumped another difficult hurdle in his quest to be "just another teenager."

It's the day Ed Monsen, of Scottfield, accepted his diploma from Glasgow High School through the First State School for chronically ill youths, which is operated by the Medical Center of Delaware. It's the day Ed proved to those who said he wouldn't that he could do anything he set his mind to.

Ed, of strong will and weak legs, carefully approached the podium at his graduation as the student guest speaker, and accepted the certificate award on behalf of his parents. Both had stood firmly beside him in his hours of need. He thanked God for his life and he thanked his mom and dad for their support.

Another day approaches. A day which marks the fourth anniversary of the tragedy that changed the Monsen family forever. They can speak calmly about September 8, 1985, now, but it has taken time for the group of mom, dad Edward, Eddie, sister Amy and brother Michael to get over their overwhelming sadness that began that day. It took the life of another family member, 5-year-old Bobby. It critically injured Eddie and left him fighting death.

The four Monsen kids and their father piled into the family pickup and went for a drive to house-hunt for a new home. Barbara Monsen was working at the time.

"I received a call telling me to get over to the hospital as soon as possible... there had been an accident. But that's all I knew," she recalled. The pickup had collided with a van at an intersection. "Our Bobby was killed instantly. The other three children were seriously injured. Ed was given just a few hours to live. He had severe brain injuries and was flown by helicopter to the Maryland Shock Trauma Center in Baltimore.

Miraculously, Ed survived the ordeal. He was in a coma for three months. On Dec. 4, he was transferred to the Institute's inpatient rehabilitation unit. Slowly, hesitantly, he began to talk again, recognize people again and walk again.

"Eddie Monsen is the classic example of how rehabilitation combines science with a lot of prayer and perseverance," said Dr. Michael Alexander, division chief of rehabilitation at the Institute. "His amazing recovery is a credit to the hard work by Ed, his family and the rehab team here who have helped him in daily therapy for nearly four years."

"We're especially proud that the comprehensiveness of the Institute has assisted in helping Ed to do things he thought he'd never do again," explains Alexander.

He refers to the teenager's physical and cognitive involvements as a result of the accident.

"We met a road block some time back in Ed's care. He had such bad knee contractures that he couldn't straighten his legs to walk correctly. Our orthopedic team, under Dr. Richard Bowen operated on Ed to surgically correct the problem by lengthening the tendons in his legs. Now, Ed has improved dramatically in physical therapy and is basically getting around on his own. It's a tremendous improvement," adds Alexander.

Ed Monsen with his physical therapist, Tracy Doherty, at the Alfred I. duPont Institute Children's Hospital.

Ed's parents talk about those improvements with awe. "I saw him at his worst and I'm just thankful he's come this far!" exclaims Barbara Monsen. "It's almost funny when he has to remind ME about things... and then he'll add 'Mom, I'm the one who's head injured!' That's my Eddie, always the one with the sense of humor," she says with a smile.

Now that Ed has accomplished graduating from high school, he speaks of plans to work with computers. He'll continue outpatient therapy at the Institute and to joke and kid with most people he meets. Looking back on days gone by, with the good and the bad, and seeing Ed's achievements, there's no doubt that this aspiring young man will reach any goals he sets.

'Babies and You' program offered

The March of Dimes has begun offering a free prenatal health education program, "Babies and You," the aim of which is to reduce the incidence of low birthweight babies.

Presented recently to employees of Maryland Bank and Chase Bank, "Babies and You" provides an opportunity for individuals to learn how their own health habits can influence the health of their unborn babies.

Joan McLaughlin, assistant clinical director of maternal child nursing at Christiana Hospital, has been delivering the seminars. She has also been training other health professionals to deliver the seminars.

According to March of Dimes, employers have a large stake in the issue because there are more than 35 million women of child-bearing age in the work force.

For details, call the March of Dimes office in Newark at 737-1310.

County offers 'mini-courses'

Leisure time is a prized commodity among most Newarkers, what with rushing here and rushing there.

Understanding the shortage of free time, the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation is offering a wide variety of one-time special interest courses.

"Our adult 'mini-classes' range from investing in real estate to making hors d'oeuvres, and everything in between," says Sheila Greene, recreation coordinator. "They're offered on almost all week nights at locations throughout the county. This fall we're offering many mini-classes, and we have a separate section on holiday crafts alone."

Caroline Wiley has been a crafts instructor for five years, and says, "Teaching these classes is something I can do and still be home during the day. I've met some really nice people and I enjoy sharing the fun of crafting. You're helping somebody to enrich their life."

She has taught courses in marbling, wreath making and stenciling, and says the classes have attracted both men and women. "It's a night out and you get to take something home that same evening."

"Popular classes for men," Wiley adds, "are glass making and wall stenciling. Wall stenciling is something that couples seem to take together."

Greene says the classes attract a range of people, including professionals, homemakers and friends. "It's a real chance to socialize and meet people. Many people take classes again and again. You see familiar faces."

For Vickie Tarczynski of Salem Woods, the classes offer a change of pace. "I'm really interested in arts and crafts and I've recommended these classes to friends. We get to have a lot of fun, and it's a night out."

Salem Woods neighbor Elaine Wilson also enjoys the mini-classes and says it's "easier to learn from a pro."

"You can read books and magazines about crafting," Wilson explains, "but it's nicer to see it done by an instructor. You really learn from these teachers."

Victoria Baldo, a nurse at Christiana Hospital, finds the classes valuable. "Nurses work weird shifts and because I have a one-year-old, I'm on a strange schedule. I think there are a lot of people like me who'd like to get out and pursue a hobby."

For information on fall programs, call 323-6416.

WEDDINGS

Tandy - Heubel

Tandy, Heubel wed

Sharon Lynn Tandy of Newark and John Lantz Heubel of Broomall, Pa. were married Saturday afternoon, June 17 in Limestone Presbyterian Church.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Tandy Jr. of Newark. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heubel of Broomall.

The Rev. Willett Smith performed the double-ring ceremony, in which the bride was given in marriage by her father. Music selections by Bach, Mozart, Handel and Schubert were performed by the Christina Quartet and organist Doris deNagy.

The bride wore an ivory summer-weight satin gown with an old-fashioned Victorian neckline, extensively beaded applied bodice, applied illusion sleeves tapered to the wrist, and cathedral train of Schiffl embroidery and scalloped lace, with a floral-ribboned crown, fingertip-length veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and ivy.

Matron of honor was Elizabeth Tandy Carver, sister of the bride, of Afton, Va. Bridesmaids were Kathryn Tandy, sister-in-law of the bride, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Marielena Rossi of Springfield, Pa.; Colleen Magee of Blue Bell, Pa.; Julie Injaian of Cherry Hill, N.J.; and Janet Hober of Newark.

The bridesmaids wore blush pink satin, lace over satin bodiced, ballet-length dresses, and carried bouquets of pink roses, miniature pink carnations and rubrum lilies, with a touch of white freesia, fern and ivy.

The groom was attended by best man Christopher Sciamanna of Philadelphia; his brothers, Greg and Rick Heubel of Broomall; Fred Loevner of San Jose, Calif.; Ken Ballinger of Newark; and T.K. Tandy of Jacksonville, Fla., brother of the bride.

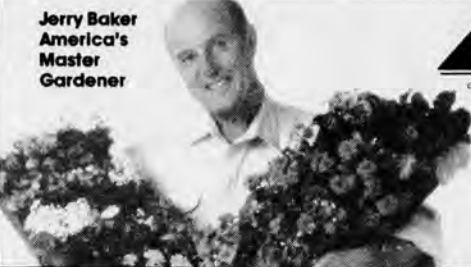

A reception and dinner were held at the Newark Country Club immediately following the ceremony. Music for dancing was provided by Jay Rosenthal.

The bride is a graduate of Newark High School and the University of Delaware, and plans to teach high school biology.

The groom is a graduate of Marple-Newtown Senior High School and the University of Delaware. He is a second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force and is in flight training school at Williams Air Force Base.

The couple resides in Mesa, Ariz.
