Thousands gather to honor fallen firefighters

By KARIE SIMMONS

In the days following a deadly house fire that claimed the lives of two Wilmington firefighters, Wilmington Fire Department Chief Anthony Goode couldn't sleep. He stayed awake at night, struggling to find the words to help the families and friends of Lt. Christopher Leach and Senior Firefighter Jerry Fickes fill the void in their hearts. It took a little while before Goode realized the right words to say in a difficult time are actually quite simple.

"We love you," he said. "We love you all."

Thousands of people, including hundreds of firefighters from departments across the country, came out to the Chase Center on the Riverfront in Wilmington on Saturday to honor Leach, 41, and Fickes, 51, who died last weekend while battling a blaze in Wilmington's Canby Park neighborhood.

City eyes tax hike

Administration proposing several ways to diversify revenue

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

Newark city administrators are recommending a 4.5-percent tax increase, a $10 court security charge and a plan to round parking lot fees up to the nearest dollar as city council begins to consider next year's budget.

Finance Director David Del Grande said Monday night the city is feeling "pressure from both sides" as non-utility revenue remains flat or is slightly down and expenses continue to rise.

"It's getting tough to balance the budget these days," he said.

In order to "maintain the services that are in the budget today," Deputy City Manager Andrew Haines said council should consider a 4.5-percent property tax increase starting July 1.

New technology at Chapel Street Playhouse helps hearing-impaired guests

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

For people who are hearing-impaired, going to the theater can be a frustrating experience. Even with hearing aids, the distance from the speakers to their seats and extraneous noise in the room make it hard to discern what the actors are saying on stage.

For Linda Heller and Betty White, it was enough to force them to give up their tickets to the Chapel Street Players in Newark.

However, thanks to a recently installed hearing loop, both women plan to be in the audience tonight when the venerable community theater kicks off its 82nd season.

"I'm looking forward to coming to shows," White said.

A hearing loop consists of a wire that surrounds a theater or other room and transmits sound electromagnetically. The sound is then picked up by the copper telecoil inside most hearing aids and cochlear implants.

"It's like a ramp for people in wheelchairs," said Heller, president of the Hearing Loss Association of Delaware. "It allows access to the sound system."

Other systems, such as receivers that use FM or infrared technology, exist to assist the hearing-impaired in theaters, but none come close to the convenience or clarity of a hearing loop system, Heller said.

With a hearing loop, no extra equipment is needed. A person simply has to push a button on his or her hearing aid to switch to the telecoil.

"Just walk into the theater, sit down, turn on the T switch, and you're in," Heller said, adding that it's also a better option for people who don't wish to draw attention to their hearing impairment. "The beauty of this is you don't have to stick out."

Though they use decades-old technology – a telecoil's main purpose is to help the person hear when using a telephone – hearing loops only recently have begun to catch on in the United States, Heller said. They are more common in Europe.

Several prominent theaters nationwide have installed hearing loops, and in New York City, subway information booths are also fitted with the technology.

About a year ago, the Hearing Loss Association of Delaware launched its Let's Loop Delaware project, which aims to educate consumers about the telecoil in their hearing aids and encourage public venues to install hearing loops. Many people aren't aware the technology is in their hearing aid, Heller said.

The group's first victory came in July when Gov. Jack Markell signed a law requiring hearing aid dealers and audiologists to educate customers about telecoils and hearing loops. New and renovated libraries in Delaware will soon be equipped with hearing loops, and the University of Delaware recently installed a hearing loop in one of its theaters.

Chapel Street Players' project began when White mentioned hearing loops to her friend, Renee O'Leary, who has been involved with the theater for more than 50 years and is known for appearing in every one of CSP's annual fundraisers.

O'Leary took the idea to the theater's board and volunteered to fund the $6,200 project in memory of her late husband, Jack, who used a hearing aid. The project also includes several headsets for people who don't have hearing aids but could benefit from amplified sound.

"I try to do something every year to help. I said, 'well there's an inspiration,'" O'Leary said. "We're not just talking about seniors. Many children also are hearing impaired."

Council adopts new plan for Newark's future

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

After a multi-year revision process, council has approved Comprehensive Development Plan V.

Last week, board members unanimously agreed to adopt the plan, which will go into effect pending a signature from Gov. Jack Markell. Council members Mark Morehead and Jen Wallace were absent from the meeting.

The Comprehensive Development Plan is intended to direct the city's land use, economic development, environmental quality, transportation planning, housing and implementation going forward. Once approved, the document has the force of law on planning and zoning decisions.

For the last several years, council has been reviewing the fifth installment of the plan, which includes ways to improve transportation, traffic congestion and parking.

Development Supervisor

Michael Fortner recommended a "corridor-optimization program," to make the most efficient use of the city's 56 traffic signals. He said Newark should coordinate with the Delaware Department of Transportation and focus on four main corridors, including 10 signals on South Main Street and Elkton Road, six signals on Cleveland Avenue, four signals on Library Avenue and 10 signals on South College Avenue.

He also suggested implementing "complete streets" and "traffic calming" designs to make roads safer and balance the needs of drivers, pedestrians, bicyclists and transit users in certain areas. Some of these improvements include better bicycle detection at traffic signals and the two-way cycle track proposed for Delaware Avenue. The plan also details the need for better pedestrian amenities at the intersection of Library Avenue and Delaware Avenue, near College Square Shopping Center.

ping Center.

Fortner said the city needs to work with the Delaware Department of Transportation to establish an area in Newark's downtown core that will be known as the Transportation Improvement District (TID). He said the TID should include East Main Street, Delaware Avenue and Cleveland Avenue from New London Road to Library Avenue – all roads Wilmington Area Planning Council has determined as experiencing "moderate" to "significant" traffic congestion.

The TID would also include both western and eastern connectors to the downtown core in order to accommodate the expansion of the STAR Campus.

For those without cars, Fortner suggested the city develop and distribute a user guide titled "Car-Free Newark" that details information regarding transportation choices in the city and creates a more user-friendly approach. In addition to transit options, the guide will also outline the bicycle and pedestrian facilities network.

He said it would also be a good idea if the city created a working committee in order to improve coordination and enhance DART, UNICITY and UD bus services and facilities. He said city officials need to better understand how transit is organized, because the goal is to eventually link everything together with the improvements planned for the Newark Train Station and the STAR Campus.

The last comprehensive plan was approved in October 2008; however, state law requires the city to review the plan every five years and either readopt or do a major revision every 10 years.

Fortner said Newark needs a new comprehensive plan because the city has changed a lot in the last eight years, especially as the university continues to grow and the STAR Campus gets developed.

Last year, university students accounted for 52 percent of Newark's population, which is estimated to be 32,278.

Fortner said student housing development has taken off in recent years, and now officials have to start thinking about how these new projects impact the city. Protecting single-family neighborhoods and encouraging more owner-occupied housing is still at the forefront, but now, as apartments continue to go up, residents need to take back the homes that have been historically rented to students.

"Neighborhoods around the university are areas we want to preserve," Fortner said.

One of the key differences between the previous comprehensive plan and the document council approved last week is the change in land use designations. There used to be three categories – single-family residential (low density), single-family residential (medium density) and multi-family residential (medium to high density) – but now, the fifth installment of the plan only shows low and high density.

Fortner said low-density residential will include single-family detached and semidetached row or townhomes with densities less than 11 units per acre. High density now means multi-family residences with more than 11 but less than 36 units per acres. These types of housing include garden apartments, townhouses and condos, but do not include dorms or mixed-urban developments.

Fortner believes this change will reduce the need for amendments. In last five years, he said, there have been eight comprehensive plan amendments to accommodate development projects. "We will probably still have them as development plans we never thought of continue to come forward," he said.

Community cleanup set for Saturday

The Newark Parks and Recreation Department is looking for volunteers to help spruce up city parks and roadways this weekend.

The semi-annual community cleanup is set for Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m.

Those interested in volunteering should arrive at the Newark Municipal Building, 220 South Main Street, by 9 a.m. Volunteers will be divided into groups and assigned a park or stretch of roadway to clean up.

Harvest Arts Festival to feature 20 local vendors

Twenty local artists and crafters will display and sell their creations on the Academy Lawn on Saturday as part of the Newark Arts Alliance's Harvest Arts Festival.

Now in its eighth year, the event is timed to coincide with the University of Delaware's Parents and Family Weekend and is intended to add to the vibrancy of Main Street and give out-of-town guests another entertainment option.

Also planned for the festival is live music and face painting.

The event, sponsored by the Downtown Newark Partnership and the Newark Post, is free and runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Newark Symphony Orchestra to kick off 50th season with free show

The Newark Symphony Orchestra will kick off its 50th season with a free family concert on Sunday afternoon.

The concert is set for 3 p.m. at The Independence School, 1300 Paper Mill Road.

The show, "To the Planets and Beyond," is designed to appeal to young audience members and features performances of Gustav Holst's The Planets and selections from Star Wars. The concert will be narrated by actor and musician Greg Jukes.

Mayor Polly Sierer will open the concert by conducting the national anthem.

An Instrument Petting Zoo will follow the concert.

Masked gunman holds up Ogletown 7-Eleven

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

A masked robber armed with a handgun targeted an Ogletown convenience store early Sunday morning, police said.

The robber walked into the 7-Eleven in Augusta Square Shopping Center, 699 E. Chestnut Hill Road, just before 2:30 a.m., according to Master Cpl. Gary Fournier of the Delaware State Police.

Displaying the gun, the robber confronted a store clerk and demanded money from the register. The clerk complied, and the robber ran out of the store with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Fournier described the robber as a white man, between 5 feet 9 inches and 5 feet 10 inches tall and between 150 and 170 pounds. He was wearing a dark hooded sweatshirt, black pants and black sneakers and had his face covered.

Anyone with information about the suspect should contact DSP at 302-365-8566. Information may also be provided by calling Delaware Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333, via the internet at www.delaware.crimestoppersweb.com, or by sending an anonymous tip by text to 274637 (CRIMES) using the keyword "DSP."

Two charged with stealing tire, rim off car

Police took two people into custody Tuesday morning after they allegedly removed the tire and rim off a man's car and attempted to place it on another vehicle, authorities said.

The defendants are identified as Katelyn Zimmerman, 24, of Wilmington, and John Bromwell, 25, of Newark.

According to Newark Police spokesman Cpl. James Spadola, sometime between 1 and 7 a.m. Tuesday, someone took the front left tire and rim off a 2001 Ford Taurus that was parked in the 200 block of East Main Street.

The car also suffered $500 worth of damage.

Shortly after the theft was reported, Spadola said, an officer canvassing the surrounding area found two people sleeping in a car at 250 E. Delaware Ave. The car had a jack underneath and the front left tire and rim were not completely mounted.

"It seems like they were trying to put the stolen tire and rim on the car and it didn't fit," Spadola said.

The officer determined the rim and tire matched the victim's Ford Taurus and took Bromwell and Zimmerman into custody.

Both were charged with third-degree conspiracy, theft under $1,500, criminal mischief under $1,000 and multiple drug charges. Bromwell was also charged with unlawfully dealing with a switchblade, issued a $2,300 secured bail and committed to Howard R. Young Correctional Institution.

Zimmerman was issued a $2,150 unsecured bail and released.

iPhone stolen at house party

A partygoer lost her cellphone over the weekend after she left it in a bathroom, police said.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the theft occurred around 1:19 a.m. Saturday at a home in the 200 block of Courtney Street.

The victim told police she was using an upstairs bathroom and placed her rose gold Apple iPhone 6s on the counter. Roughly a half hour later, she realized she had forgotten her phone and went back upstairs to look for it. When she got to the bathroom, her case was still there but the phone was gone.

Spadola said there were approximately 50 guests at the party.

Police tried to help the victim track down her phone, but the Find My iPhone feature was off. Officers are still investigating and do not have any suspects at this time.

Knife-wielding man robs S. College Ave. gas station

Police are searching for a knife-wielding man who robbed a South College Avenue gas station last week.

The robber entered the Sunoco at 1106 S. College Ave. at approximately 1:30 p.m. Sept. 30 carrying a "large fixed-blade knife" and demanded cash, according to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The man reached into the register and grabbed an undisclosed amount of money and was last seen running away south on South College Avenue.

Spadola described the robber only as a white man and did not release any surveillance footage.

Before he left, the woman took pictures of the man, and police are asking for the public's help to identify him. If found, he will face first-degree trespassing

Police seek woman who passed fake bill at Newark Natural Foods

Police are looking for a woman who allegedly used counterfeit cash to pay for food at Newark Natural Foods on Tuesday.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the incident occurred at approximately 9:16 p.m. inside the grocery store in the Newark Shopping Center.

Employees told police the woman initially tried to buy groceries with a fake $100 bill but left the store once the cashier became suspicious of the note. She told the cashier she would be back with a credit card and returned shortly after, entering through the store's Cafe 67 restaurant.

She used the same $100 bill to purchase food at the cafe, and employees accepted the note,

In 10th year, Main Street Mile sees record turnout

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

When Nic DeCaire organized the first Main Street Mile a decade ago, the race barely drew 100 people. He considered it a success at the time, but dreamed of a time when the race would attract hundreds more runners.

As the race marks its 10th year, that goal has finally been realized. Approximately 870 people registered for Saturday's race, more than double the previous record.

DeCaire ran the race himself for the first time this year, pushing a special-needs athlete in an adaptive racing chair.

"I was in the back, so I got to see the whole pack running down Main Street," he said. "It was pretty neat to see."

DeCaire founded the race shortly after opening Fusion Fitness in Market East Plaza. He was looking for a charity to support, and a Newark Police Department officer who worked out at the gym told him about how the department's K-9 unit needed support. The Main Street Mile grew into an annual event and spawned other fundraising efforts that together have raised more than $200,000 for the Newark Police dogs.

DeCaire attributed the increase in participation to additional marketing surrounding the 10th anniversary and, more significantly, the Delaware Schools Challenge. He invited local schools to form teams of students, teachers and family members to run the race. The four schools that registered the most participants received a donation toward their PTA.

Ten schools participated, registering a total of 300 people.

"That was a huge bump," DeCaire said. "It gave us 300 people who wouldn't normally have signed up."

It also encouraged kids and their parents to get active and race together, DeCaire said, noting there were many first-time race participants.

"For these children to do a 5K is probably a lot, but most all can accomplish one mile," he said.

Newark Charter School took first place with 120 participants, followed by Thurgood Marshall Elementary School with 70.

Hundreds of runners participated in the 10th-annual Main Street Mile on Saturday.

Christiana High School senior Erika White was recently recognized as one of the top junior year cadets in the Navy Junior ROTC program with the Legion of Valor Bronze Cross for Achievement.

She was presented the award at the Christina Board of Education meeting on Sept. 20.

The Legion of Valor Bronze Cross is awarded to only 22 Navy Junior ROTC cadets across the country each year and is reserved for those with outstanding military leadership qualities, Naval Science and school academic standing and extracurricular activities.

According to school district officials, White is in the top 2 percent of her 2017 graduating class and is the

This week's Out of the Attic item is a 1960s-era Newark High School Yellowjackets seat cushion that was recently donated to the Newark History Museum by Cheryl Walker Pearl.

Pearl told the museum that the cushion was "used by me and my sisters at football games from 1967 to 1972."

The reverse side contains advertising from several well-known Newark businesses, many of which are have since closed, including Newark Farm and Home, Newark Lumber Company, Abbott's Shoe Repair, New England Pizza and Girard Sporting Goods.

The cushion will be added to the museum's Newark High School exhibit.

Out of the Attic is produced in partnership with the Newark Historical Society. The Newark History Museum, located in the old train station under the South College Avenue overpass, is open Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. For more info, call 302-234-4145 or visit www.newarkdehistoricalsociety.org

Keene Elementary School unveils outdoor classroom

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

Third-grade teacher Laura Hill was struggling to get her students to grasp the concept of ecosystems and the interdependence of plants and animals as they sat behind desks inside her classroom at Keene Elementary School.

They were learning about how a natural environment functions, but they weren't able to physically see how the animals outside depend on the water and plants to survive. They also couldn't see changes in the environment over time, such as the changes in seasons and the plants and animals that live there.

"It just dawned on me that it would be so much easier to teach science outside, where all of the natural things are," Hill said.

As word spread around the school, Hill learned there were other teachers also itching to get their students outside. They decided to form a committee and reached out to the PTA to see what could be done about building an outdoor classroom in a small, wooded area behind the school, which is located on Lagrange Avenue off Route 40 in Glasgow.

The PTA donated $1,000 toward the cause and after a few months of planning and a couple days of hard work over the summer, the classroom was ready. Teachers, students and school officials unveiled the new learning area, called Keene's Nature Nook, last week.

The outdoor classroom can hold 35 or more students and so far, everyone at Keene is loving it.

Hill said being outside has helped her students understand and write details such as color, texture, sound and smell. She has also seen the Nature Nook have an effect on students' moods because after they come back inside, they're calmer and less fidgety.

"They actually settle out there," added Cheryl Buckingham, an enrichment teacher.

Buckingham said her students love talking about the classroom and often ask if they can go outside; and it's just as popular among the teachers. She said there are endless uses for the Nature Nook across all of the different subjects and grade levels taught at Keene.

Fifth-grade teacher Janet McVey said she plans to go outside for her own lesson on ecosystems, but it's also a good place to learn about temperature, measuring, math and history.

"When you get down there, you think of more lessons you can do," said Hill. "There's lots of teachable moments down there."

Last week, art teacher Bobby Graham took his third-grade class out to the classroom for a sketching lesson. He instructed them to draw something rough, something alive, something with leaves and something smooth.

Armed with a clipboard, pencil and piece of paper, 8-year-old Madison Dorph walked around the clearing to find her subjects. She ultimately decided to draw a rock, a tadpole, a tree and a leaf.

"It's fun to learn about nature out here, especially when we're in science class, we might find new discoveries," she said, her eyes focused on a tree as her pencil touched the paper.

Madison said she enjoys coming outside for art class because of the natural shapes and colors that just don't exist inside the school.

"Once the leaves start falling, there will be even more colors we can explore," she said. "I even saw a deer here once, but only if we're quiet."

Savannah Martin, 8, said she has been to the outdoor classroom before, but it's better now with benches and mulch.

"I like that it has wildflowers and I like nature," Savannah said. "I don't get to be outside that much because when I get home, I have to do my homework and my chores."

After constructing the classroom over the summer, McVey said she and the other teachers on the committee — Buckingham, Graham, Jean Tucker, Scott Martin, Jason Kraiss, Dwight Jones, Jennifer Frasier, Dawn Martinez and Lori Muhlestein, whose husband built the class-room's wooden benches — created a school-wide contest to name the space.

Every student submitted a suggestion, but they ultimately chose kindergartener Jonathon Peterman's idea to call the classroom "Keene's Nature Nook."

"We wanted our kids to feel a sense of belonging at the school, like they were a part of something," McVey said. "It's just awesome that a kindergartener won."

The committee has only spent $800 of the $1,000 from the PTA and is planning to put the rest of the money toward supplies so more teachers can bring their students outside. Hill said they also want to create a butterfly garden and maybe a mural on the side of the school.

As for the outdoor classroom, Hill said she would love to see a bridge across the small creek there and nature trails so students can explore even more. She said the committee is looking for volunteers, supplies and donations in order to keep Keene's Nature Nook going.

"This is just the beginning, and anything helps," she said.

Out of the Past

Editor's note: Volunteers at the Pencader Heritage Museum have been digitizing old Newark City Council meeting minutes. They share excerpts with Newark Post readers in a weekly column.

November-December 1928 — The board of health urged enforcement of plumbing codes, including certification for each property for which use of cesspools had been. Council agreed to pay all expenses related to disinfecting the cesspools. The board of health also advocated that all surface toilets be outlawed.

Because Annabelle Street was beyond town limits, council's attorney was being consulted as to whether the residents could be compelled to make sewer connections. South College Avenue residents Spence and Fulmer were instructed to lay sidewalks in front of their properties or council would do it, adding 10 percent when billing the owners.

Council agreed to refund Mark Malcolm's $25 fee for breaking into the street to make a water tap because he had been told the tap was already made or he would have done it before street was improved. Malcolm also complained the sewer main was too far from his property and he shouldn't have to bear the whole cost of running a connector. Council said regardless of the distance, his whole property would drain into the sewer and refused to share the cost.

Robert Lewis said his pavement was installed under the guidance of town engineer, but was six inches higher than his neighbor's. He wanted his complaint registered in case of accident. The neighbor, George Griffin, said he would promptly replace his pavement to specifications. Council asked for a letter of intent from Mr. Griffin.

See the original minutes at Pencader Heritage Museum, 2029 Sunset Lake Rd. (Rt. 72 south of Newark.) Regularly open first and third Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Other times by appointment. Contact the website pencaderheritage.org or call 302-737-5792 for an appointment. Family friendly, handicapped accessible and always free.

Key points

On Monday, council heard city staff's initial budget proposal. Here's a look at some of the ways it could, if approved, affect your wallet:

- 4.5 percent property tax increase
- Court security fee made permanent and increased to $10
- Round parking lot fees up to nearest dollar
- Surcharge on building permits equal to 0.5 percent of construction value
- $1/week local service fee on all non-resident employees in the city
- Water rate adjustment and/or stormwater fee to be considered later

TAX

If approved, the city would get an extra $150,000 in 2017 and $300,000 each year going forward.

Residents already endured a 9.5-percent tax hike this year that city officials said would help pay for infrastructure projects, and last year residents saw their property taxes go up by 1.5 percent.

Electric rates will stay the same next year, but increases to the water and sewer rates will depend on the results of rate study that will be presented to council and public on Oct. 12. That meeting will also discuss the possibility of establishing a stormwater fee.

City officials are working with a proposed $49.7 million spending plan, 61 percent of which is expected to go toward personnel costs. The city will spend approximately $31 million on its employees next year, but Haines told council that while the amount seems high, it's actually on par with other municipalities.

"From a regional and national standpoint, I think that's a very effective number," Haines said.

Staff is recommending a 1.5-percent raise for management employees next year; however, employees are not guaranteed the raise and any increases to wages will be based on performance reviews. Management already received an increase last year, when council voted to hike their salaries by up to 3 percent.

Haines said that in addition to rising personnel costs, there is a need to hire an evidence custodian for the Newark Police Department. He said the person will be a civilian employee responsible for handling the day-to-day work in NPD's evidence collection.

"What that would do is [allow us] to repurpose a sworn officer back onto the street," he said.

The proposed capital budget includes ongoing stormwater renovation projects, as well as improvements to the municipal building, reservoir, streets and parks throughout the city. Lower priority projects include spending $130,000 on parking lot surveillance cameras, $54,850 on additional parking meters and $30,000 on "lot full" signs for the parking lots.

Parks and Recreation Director Joe Spadafino said he needs $200,000 to finish a bicycle and pedestrian bridge over White Clay Creek on Paper Mill Road.

Last year, the project was estimated to cost $1 million and was supposed to be completely funded by the Federal Highway Administration and the Delaware Land and Water Conservation Trust Fund. However, Spadafino said Monday that design changes and permit costs have added to the bill, which is now up to $1.75 million.

In 2017, the city is projected to get approximately 63 percent of its funding — $31.5 million — from utilities, while 14 percent will come from property taxes, 9 percent from fines, permits and licenses, and 6 percent from parking lots and meters.

Haines proposed several ways Newark can diversify its revenue, including rounding parking lot fees up to the nearest dollar.

Currently, the fee to park in one of the city's three pay-to-park lots is 50 cents per half hour. The plan under consideration would eliminate the half-hour increment and make the rate $1 per hour, meaning those who park for a portion of an hour could see an increased fee. For example, a driver who parks for 20 minutes would pay $1 instead of 50 cents. The 10-minute grace period would remain.

Haines said the extra quarters could add up to more than $100,000 in additional revenue for the city next year if the change is implemented on Jan. 1.

The city could also place a charge on renovations and construction projects to help pay for emergency services. Haines explained that building permits would be assessed a surcharge of 0.5 percent of the construction value, and the money would be used to offset the cost of city's subvention to Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder, Co., as well as some of Newark's own public safety expenses.

Another suggestion, Haines said, is to increase the existing court security fee from $5 to $10.

In 2014, council voted to implement a $5 charge per fine for those found guilty in Alderman's Court. The fee does not apply to non-guilty judgments or parking tickets, but does apply to traffic violations. It was originally intended to sunset this year.

Haines said making the fee permanent and increasing it to $10 will generate approximately $40,000 to $50,000 each year, and the city could use that money to make additional physical renovations to the courtroom and waiting areas as well as hire an in-house bailiff instead of using a third-party agency. The part-time position would be held by a civilian, working within the police department.

"We could talk to the police department and see if that's an attractive position for a retired police officer," Haines said.

Council is set to discuss the court fee increase at the regularly-scheduled meeting on Oct. 10.

Mayor Polly Sierer said Monday she likes the idea of changing the parking lot rate and increasing court fees.

"I commend you for coming up with some other sources of revenue, and we need to keep doing that," she said.

Several other council members, however, took issue with some of the increases.

Councilman Luke Chapman didn't like the building permit surcharge or staff's idea to charge a $1 per week local service fee for non-city

When the firefighters entered the home, the floor collapsed, trapping three — Leach, Ardythe Hope and Brad Speakman — in the basement.

Fickes went into the house to save them, but fell when the floor collapsed further. Fickes, who had been employed by WFD for 13 years, died as a result of the collapse, as did Leach, a 14-year veteran of the department. Hope and Speakman are still in the hospital recovering.

Fickes was also a member of Newark's Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co. and at one time served as an assistant chief. He gave up a well-paying job as an insurance actuary to take a full-time position with WFD.

On Saturday, Goode told the crowd at the Chase Center that he is grateful not only for the sacrifices Fickes and Leach made throughout their careers, but also the sacrifices their families made every time they sent them off to work.

Goode awarded both men with the Medal of Honor and Medal of Valor, which is given to firefighters who have completed an assignment under extremely hazardous conditions. He also posthumously promoted Leach to captain and Fickes to lieutenant and then retired their badges from service, praising their hard work and dedication.

"Today, we come together to honor heroes," Goode said. "Two giants who stood among men."

U.S. Rep. John Carney said he felt the pain in the room, and he felt the pain this past week in Wilmington, Newark and across Delaware as he passed flag after flag flying at half-staff.

"Our whole state is hurting," he said.

Carney said firefighters are among our earliest ideas of what a hero is and it's because they are examples of the human spirit at its best — they make the world a safer place and they answer the call to lay down their lives to save a total stranger.

Often, he said, people throw around words like, "I'd walk through fire for you" or "I'd walk into a burning building for you," when they want to show someone they care, but those aren't just sayings to firefighters.

"It's what you do," he said. Sen. Chris Coons echoed Carney's remarks, referring to Fickes and Leach as "authentic Delaware heroes."

"Whatever might possibly be wrong with America, I am convinced it can be fixed with what's best in America. And your sons represent what is best in America," he said, addressing the parents of the fallen firefighters.

Vice President Joe Biden used his own personal experience with loss as a way to comfort the families of the fallen.

"Faith sees best in the dark, and I know how dark is," he said.

Last year, Biden and his wife, Jill, lost their son, Attorney General Beau Biden, after a long battle with brain cancer. He was 46.

"Jill and I know there's not a damn thing anybody can say to ease the pain," Biden said. "We hope you, as we did, gain some solace from the fact that so many people, so many people understood, appreciate, knew, admired and absolutely are in awe of what your son, your dad, your brother, your husband did."

Biden visited the scene of the fire in Canby Park hours after the tragedy and recalled that all he could think about was the amount of courage it must have taken for Fickes, who he called a "warrior," to step through the door in order to save the trapped firefighters.

He said both men had immense integrity, confidence and loyalty, and while he didn't know them personally, he knew them through the countless other firefighters who have helped him and his family over the years.

"Thank God, but you're all crazy," he said, which prompted laughs from the Woman charged with murder, arson in blaze that killed firefighters

The fire that killed two Wilmington Fire Department firefighters was intentionally set by one of the home's residents, authorities said.

FANA-RUIZ

Beatriz Fana-Ruiz, 27, was arrested Sept. 29 and charged with two counts of first-degree murder, one count of first-degree arson, four counts of assault of a first responder and seven counts of reckless endangerment.

The fire broke out at approximately 3 a.m. Sept. 24 on Lakeview Drive in Wilmington's Canby Park neighborhood. Once firefighters made entry, the floor collapsed, trapping three firefighters in the basement.

Lt. Christopher Leach and Senior Firefighter Jerry Fickes died as a result of their injuries. Two others, Ardythe Hope and Brad Speakman, were injured.

Fickes was also a member of Newark's Aetna Hose Hook and Ladder Co.

The Delaware Office of the State Fire Marshal and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms ruled that the blaze was intentionally set using an open flame.

According to court documents, Fana-Ruiz admitted to investigators that she got angry and went to the basement where she started the fire. She allegedly stated she was drunk and on anxiety medication, so she did not remember anything else.

Fana-Ruiz is being held on $6 million cash bail.

audience. "You're the single most underrated profession in the world."

He praised the hundreds of firefighters in the crowd for running toward danger instead of away and, in doing so, going against every human instinct and providing the hope that ordinary Americans can do extraordinary things.

As for the families of the fallen, he told them their grief will get better, and there will eventually come a time when the thought of their loved one will bring a smile to their face before it brings a tear.

"It's not believable now, but it will come," Biden said. "I promise you."

residents working in Newark. He also wasn't in favor of the recommended parking fee change, adding that it might disincentivize lot usage.

"I'm not initially interested in that," Chapman said.

Councilwoman Jen Wallace agreed that parking rates should stay the same. She said residents want a diverse Main Street with places they can stay for a while and places they can quickly pop into, such as retail stores like Cameras Etc. and Days of Knight.

"These aren't necessarily places you stay an hour," she said, adding she would be in favor of raising parking fines instead.

Councilman Stu Markham hesitated to take a stance without the research. He said he wants to know how many people leave the city's lots under 30 minutes so he can understand the potential impact.

He suggested staff look into summer parking rates as well.

"Maybe we can actually do better for our businesses and electric users if we bring people into the city," he said.

As for the local service fee, Markham asked staff to come back with more information about the legality of such a charge and the types of employees who work within city limits. He said he is concerned about how the fee would affect lower-wage and minimum wage workers, such as restaurant servers who work on Main Street.

"They may just live right outside the city and $1 a week is a lot of money to them," he said.

Council will continue to discuss the 2017 budget over the next several weeks prior to the budget hearing scheduled for Nov. 21. A vote on the budget is expected Dec. 5 or Dec. 12.

Sylvia Ann Finnicum

Sylvia Ann Finnicum, 76, of Newark, DE and Port Charlotte, FL, passed away on Friday, September 30, 2016.

Born in East Moline, IL, on August 30, 1940, she was the daughter of the late Samuel and Elizabeth (Vermeulen) Willard. Sylvia was a farmer's daughter of strong stock. She grew up in Henry County, Illinois, and attended grade and high school in Cambridge where she met her eventual husband, Tom. He went off to the University of Illinois and they soon married and together scraped and scratched their way to his graduation. Upon graduation, they and their three sons moved often the first 10 years with the DuPont Company but Newark was always home base. For the past 22 years, Sylvia and Tom have been snowbirds between Newark, DE, and Port Charlotte, FL.

An avid golfer, she and her husband were members of both the Riverwood Golf Club in Port Charlotte and Newark Country Club. Sylvia was a master gardener and quilter and she loved garage sales. Most importantly, Sylvia was a talented homemaker who devoted her life to her loving family.

Sylvia fought a courageous battle against lung cancer beginning 12 years ago and gained unexpected remission at that time. Unfortunately, the cancer returned a year ago. Her family has deep appreciation for the care she received by the staff at Christiana Care of Newark and the Florida Cancer Specialists of Port Charlotte.

She is survived by her loving husband of 59 years, Loren Thomas Finnicum; children, Bradley T. Finnicum (Sheila) of Wilmington, NC; Douglas S. Finnicum (Sandra) of Kansas City, KS; and Bruce W. Finnicum (Carmen) of Newark; sister, Delila Brock of Clarksville, TN; grandchildren, Samuel, Matthew, Timothy, Brett, Dana, Ariel, and Brooke Finnicum; and her loving Shih Tzu, Archie.

A visitation for family and friends will be held from 10 a.m. until 11 a.m. on Saturday morning, October 8 at the Spicer-Mullikin Funeral Home, 121 W. Park Place, Newark, DE, where a memorial service will follow at 11 a.m. Interment will be held privately in All Saints Cemetery. Friends and family are cordially invited to a reception immediately following the memorial service at the Newark Country Club, 300 West Main St., Newark, DE.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in Sylvia's memory may be made to the American Cancer Society, 92 Read's Way, Suite 205, New Castle, DE 19720 or to Delaware Hospice, 16 Polly Drummond Center, 2nd Floor, Newark, DE, 19711.

Last Alarm

September 24, 2016

Lt. Christopher Leach

Senior Fire Fighter Jerry Fickes

Thank You

Last week the Wilmington Fire Department faced the tragic loss of two heroes who did not hesitate when lives in their community were in danger. Lt. Christopher Leach and Senior Fire Fighter Jerry Fickes made the ultimate sacrifice while serving their community. Two other heroes, Fire Fighters Ardythe Hope and Brad Speakman are still in the Crozier Chester Burn Unit facing a long recovery from serious burns as a result of the same incident.

The fire service is accustomed to responding in their communities and dealing with the trauma and devastation that they may face. But last week the Wilmington Fire Department was the recipient of the trauma.

Other departments where Leach and Fickes served, were also devastated.

Then you, the community, came to their aid with an outpouring of concern, support and compassion.

Businesses, agencies and individuals throughout the region have been relentless in their efforts to feed, house and offer comfort to those who have been impacted by this tragedy. The offers of support are too numerous to list.

Your actions make us ever more proud to serve you, ever so proud to be a part of the fabric of your community.

No words can express the gratitude for your response.
