HON. EDWARD T. FRANKS TO SPEAK AT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DINNER ON 23RD

Member of Federal Board for Vocational Education and Co-Worker with Herbert Hoover

PLANS FOR DINNER ASSUMING SHAPE

The principal speaker at the forthcoming Newark Chamber of Commerce dinner, to be held in Old College on the evening of November 23rd, has been announced as Edward T. Franks, representing Manufacture and Commerce on the Federal Board for Vocational Education in Washington.

Mr. Franks has spoken before many such organizations throughout the country and is a finished orator. For fourteen years he was one of the leading speakers from the Chautauqua platform and comes highly recommended. The Federal Board upon which he is serving was appointed by President Warren Harding and includes James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor in the President's Cabinet, Herbert Hoover and many other national figures.

The subject for Mr. Franks' address before the local Chamber is "The Great National Movement." His services were procured mainly through the activity of Dr. R. W. Heim, who knows him personally and who is associated with him in vocational work.

That the dinner will be a rousing success is indicated in the evident interest shown by the business men of the town. Tickets have already been distributed to the members of the organization and early replies would be appreciated by the Banquet Committee.

Among the guests who have been invited to the affair are Mayor LeRoy Harvey, of Wilmington, and the mayors of 18 of the principal towns in Delaware. It is expected that a large percentage of these men will attend. In addition to the visiting town officers, invitations have been extended to H. G. Budd, Secretary of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, and to State Senator-elect Richard T. Cann.

Arrangements for entertainment are fast assuming proportions. The Continental Band will provide music as guest of the Chamber and several novel hits of impromptu fun are being arranged.

It is hoped that the Chamber of Commerce will turn out to a man to this affair and enjoy a good dinner as well as some straightforward and constructive views on the problems of the business man. All reservations should be made before next Monday evening with J. Earl Dougherty, secretary of the body.

THOMPSON APPOINTMENT A COMPLETE SURPRISE

McKelvey, recently resigned.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY MARKS ARMISTICE DAY IN ELKTON

Streets Crowded as Fitting Tribute is Paid at Soldier Memorial

HONOR 16 DEAD HEROES

The Armistice Day celebration in Elkton Saturday evening took on a subdued and impressive aspect when hundreds of the townspeople and visitors from all over Cecil County gathered at the base of the Soldier Memorial in loving memory of the sixteen Cecil County boys who went over there in the service of their country and who never came back. And in the first rows of seats Saturday sat the mothers of many of those boys joining their thoughts and memories with the hosts of other witnesses. Elkton has rarely seen so simple and beautiful public ceremony.

The open square before the Court House and the streets within hearing distance were roped off and were filled with people who came to pay their respect to the soldier dead. During the day individual pilgrimages were made by residents of the town to the monument, there to place floral offerings. When night came, the base of the statue was a mass of flowers. It

He was accompanied by a number of Elkton members of the order.

CONTINENTAL FIBRE CO. TURNS OUT 100 PER CENT

The fourth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice between Germany and the Allies was not forgotten here in Newark. The celebration was not elaborate and could certainly have been improved upon, but it showed conclusively that the people of Newark still kept the flame of patriotism and thanksgiving burning high in their hearts. For several days the Armistice Day movement, led by a few of the town's public spirited men, was found to be dragging perilously near the edge of failure. However, when last Saturday dawned it seemed to awaken in the hearts of the residents the fact that the day must not pass without some sign of recognition of the event which definitely settled all hostilities.

The Parade

Shortly before ten o'clock in the morning, the school children began arriving at the assembly point on Delaware avenue near Wolf Hall, eager to be on hand at the start. Then from all directions came the paraders. The local National Guard Company turned out in almost full strength with their colors, as did the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with their medals glistening in the sunlight. Then came the Fire Company with two pieces of apparatus under command of Chief Wilson; Company E's float, picturing a cleverly concealed machine gun nest with the gunners in position, steel helmets and all. Then came a mounted anti-aircraft gun as Fort duPont's contribution to the parade. What looked for several days to be an insignificant affair took on the earmarks of a real parade.

The real feature of the parade arrived shortly before the start when up Delaware avenue came upwards of 200 employees of the Continental Fibre Co., headed by their band. Each marcher wore a white cap and carried a small American flag. They were well spread out across the street and made a pretty picture as they marched along. The Continental Co. entered into the spirit of Armistice Day to the extent of paying each man who took part in the parade a full day's wages. Such a spirit called forth many comments of praise from the residents of the town. The absence of the University battalion was very conspicuous.

The parade moved along Delaware avenue to Elkton road and thence to Main street. When straightened out along this thoroughfare it extended for more than one half mile. Although there was only one band in line, the rear end of the column was not in the least downhearted. The school children, in particular, were a lively item and enjoyed the proceedings very much. At the head of the column marched the Veterans and Company E with their colors and floats. Then came the Continental Band and the long line of members of that organization. The officials of the company then fell in, followed by the school kids, the Fire Company and several decorated trucks and autos.

The Mass Meeting

Shortly after eleven, the parade wended its way back to the green before Wolf Hall and closed in around the steps of the building. James C. Hastings presided at the meeting and made a short but very effective

STATE TEACHERS ASSOCIATION HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

Local Educators Deliver Addresses at Two-Day Session in Dover

The annual convention of the Delaware State Teachers' Association was held in the Armory and in various departments of the Public Schools in Dover on last Thursday and Friday. Several hundred teachers from all grades and districts throughout the State were present and heard many inspirational and instructive addresses. Beside the business meetings several demonstrations were staged by the teachers in showing the progress made during the year in the various schools.

Newark was well represented, both on the speakers' platform and in the audience. In the enforced absence of Dr. Walter Hüllihen, Dean E. L. Smith spoke in the general meeting Thursday morning on behalf of the University of Delaware. Dean Winifred J. Robinson, of the Women's College, also made an address.

Dr. F. M. K. Foster delivered a talk on modern methods of teaching English literature and followed this with a discussion of several papers presented by teachers of the State upon the same general topic. Dr. W. L. Bevan and Dr. G. H. Ryden delivered addresses to the High School History section on Friday.

One of the items of local interest to come out of the convention was the re-election of Miss Agnes Snyder, Superintendent of Practice Teaching at the Women's College and a leading worker in the local public schools as secretary of the body, a post she has held ever since the Association became active three years ago.

W. A. Wilkinson, of the Department of Education at the University, was chosen chairman of the Resolutions Committee and was elected a member of the Board of Directors for a three-year term.

The main social event connected with the Convention was the Annual Banquet, held in the Armory on Thursday evening. Practically all the delegates were present and enjoyed a most pleasant evening together.

PRINCETON LIBRARIAN HERE FOR CONFERENCE

First steps in the great work of erecting the State War Memorial Library in Newark were taken yesterday at a meeting here, when preliminary plans were discussed and suggestions interchanged. Mr. J. T. Gerould, Librarian at Princeton University, was present at the conference. Mr. Klander, of Day and Klander, the University architects, was also here, and the two prominent authorities went into immediate consultation with Dr. W. Owen Sypherd, Librarian of the University, and Miss Dorothy Hawkins, Assistant Librarian.

PROVINCE CONVENTION A COMPLETE SUCCESS

The James Ward Wood Province of Kappa Alpha Order held its first Biennial Convention as guests of the local chapter on last Friday and Saturday. Delegates and guests were present from six other active chapters throughout Maryland and West Virginia, and from Alumni chapters of Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New York and Boston.

On Saturday these visitors were guests of honor at an informal dinner and dance in Old College. Madden's celebrated orchestra furnished the spice for dancing. The patronesses for the affair were Mrs. E. L. Smith, Mrs. George E. Dutton, Mrs. John Shaw, Mrs. Walt H. Steel, Mrs. James C. Hastings, Mrs. N. N. Wright and Miss Marion Parkhurst.

AT LAST

The Newark-Roseville Road was thrown open Saturday for light traffic. This announcement in itself would be most satisfactory as a general news item to every one save the citizens of Newark and vicinity. To them it assumes the proportions of an event or an epoch or something. Accordingly the news spread like an oil fire into every household. After the long wait comes the reward for our patience. With the opening of the Roseville section there stretches a complete ribbon of concrete and macadam from Philadelphia to Washington. Trucks are still bumping over the detour and will be for some time to come, as the newly laid concrete has not seasoned sufficiently to allow the passage of the heavy vehicles.

DE WOLF HOPPER MAY SPEAK IN NEWARK

It has been announced that plans are under way to hold a special meeting of the student bodies and friends of the University in Wolf Hall probably on next Tuesday afternoon, at which time it is hoped that Dr. Wolf Hopper, the nationally known comedian and actor will be able to come down and speak to the assemblage. It is that date Mr. Hopper will be in Wilmington with his company. This will be an extremely delightful entertainment if successfully arranged and all who have heard him will attest.

DR. HULLIHEN BETTER

The latest reports from Baltimore indicate the continued improvement of Dr. Walter Hüllihen who was operated upon by the surgeons there last week. His condition is considerably very good and he is out of danger. Mr. Hüllihen has returned to Newark after spending several days with him.

QUIRE LOVETT IN CRITICAL CONDITION

The past week finds no change in the condition of Mr. Leonard W. Lovett, who is lying critically ill at his home on Orchard Ridge. For several weeks Mr. Lovett has been a very sick man, but when his condition grew dangerous he rallied and a steady improvement was looked for. The past day or two, however, have witnessed a gradual decline and his life hangs in the balance. The members of his immediate family are in constant attendance at his bedside. Mr. Lovett has been making a wonderful fight for recovery from the time he was first stricken several months ago.

NOTED CHURCH WORKER HERE

Rev. C. E. Vermilya, in charge of the Missions and Church Extension Work in all the territory west of the Mississippi River and in Alaska and Hawaii, spent the week-end in Newark as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Manns, on Park Place. Rev. Vermilya spoke at the morning service of the Methodist Church on Sunday. He is on a trip East to attend a meeting of the M. E. Board of Home Missions in Philadelphia.

IN HONOR OF SOLDIER DEAD

Contrasting Points of View

President Harding's Tribute and Prayer

America's attitude toward the rest of the world and the Government's position with respect to the broader aspects of the relationship of nations today formed the theme of President Harding's message to the country on the eve of Armistice Day. The message follows:

"The increasing enthusiasm with which our people join in the annual observance of Armistice Day enforces the conclusion that it is destined to be one of the notable anniversaries in our calendar, and indeed it well deserves to be all of that, for it marks the victorious culmination of our Nation's most impressive participation in the affairs of the world.

"We shall not go amiss if we seek to make our observance of this anniversary, not only this year but every year hereafter, an occasion for appraisal of our relationship to and participation in those wider concerns which involve the welfare of all mankind. I think we have come to realize, as a Nation, that we cannot hope to avoid obligations and responsibilities, often arduous and burdensome, as part of the price we must pay for our fortunate relationship to the confraternity of the Nation.

"It will be greatly to the national benefit, I am sure, if those who most intimately participate in the events of the great world, and among them I, of course, include particularly the men of the overseas forces, shall always keep in mind the fact that their noble service to their country and civilization has imposed upon us a duty to recognize that henceforward we must maintain a helpful and sustaining attitude in all the broader relationships that involve the nations.

"Our first duty will, indeed, be to our own, but that duty cannot be adequately discharged in narrowness and selfishness. That we may be guided to a just judgment of the time and occasion for further proof of our interest in the common cause of humanity, and in choosing the methods whereby to discharge the obligation thus created, will be, I am sure, a fitting prayer for this armistice anniversary."

Ex-President Wilson's Comment and Criticism

Woodrow Wilson, in his first public address in three years, today told a gathering of his admirers in his home that the United States always has stood for justice and that "puny persons now standing in the way" will find their weakness "is no match for the strength of a moving providence."

"I am very much moved by this wonderful exhibition of your friendship and approval, and I have been reflecting today that Armistice Day has a particular significance for the United States because the United States has remained contented with the armistice and has not moved forward to peace.

"It is a very serious reflecting that the United States, the great originative nation, should remain contented with a negation. Armistice is a negation; it is a standstill of arms; it is a cessation of fighting and we are so bent on a cessation of fighting that we are even throwing our arms away.

"It is a singular circumstance to which Mr. Morgenthau has in part alluded, that while we prescribed the condition of the armistice we will not concur in the establishment of permanent peace. That, of course, was brought about by a group in the United States Senate who preferred personal partisan motives to the honor of their country and the peace of the world. They do not represent the United States, because the United States is moving forward and they are slipping backward. Where their slipping will end God only will determine.

"And I have also been reflecting upon the radical difference between armistice and peace. Armistice, as I have said, is a mere negation; it is refraining from force. But peace is a very positive and constructive thing as the world stands nowadays, because it must be brought about by the systematic maintenance of common understanding and by cultivation, not by amiable phrases, but the active co-operation for justice, and justice is a greater thing than any kind of expediency.

"America has always stood for justice and always will stand for it. Puny persons who are now standing in the way will presently find that their weakness is no match for the strength of a moving Providence. If you will pardon an invalid for putting on his hat, I will promise not to talk through it. I think, then, we may renew today our faith in the future, though we are celebrating the past. The failure is in our hands, and if we are not equal to it the shame will be ours and none other's.

"I thank you from a very full heart, my friends, for this demonstration of kindness by you and bid you and the Nation godspeed."

Down on The Farm

MONTHLY REPORT OF NEW CASTLE COUNTY AGENT BAUSMAN

Five Acre Corn Growing Contest
Secretary A. B. Peet of the State Board of Agriculture has requested County Agent Leader M. O. Pence and the County Agent to supervise the weighing of the corn in the Five Acre Corn Growing Contest in this county. The yields in these five-acre plots are not coming up to expectations. Those farmers who expected from 90 to 100 bushels generally are ranging from 80 to 90 bushels. However, these yields are determined on a 20 per cent basis and the exact yields cannot be calculated until the moisture test is complete.

Junior Five Acre Corn Growing Contest

Some of the members of the boys' five-acre corn growing contest are somewhat disappointed in that their yields are not equalling those of last year. However, the yields in most cases are good and the boys deserve much credit for the work they are doing in improving the strains of corn.

Potato Tour

Dr. Manns of the Department of Plant Pathology, and the County Agent attended an automobile potato tour in Salem County, N. J. New Jersey is concentrating on second crop Irish Cobblers and is doing extensive work in certification. This year they have 1200 acres under certification. Even in the face of poor prices the number of acres going under certification is increasing and usually. New Jersey is setting a good precedent for Delaware in this certification work.

Soil Survey

The soil survey conducted by Prof. G. L. Schuster of the Department of Agronomy in co-operation with the County Agent, is still in progress. It is expected that the survey in New Castle county will be completed during the month of November.

The County Agent has received several calls during the month to make lime requirement determinations. This trend might be interpreted that the farmers are again getting back to a permanent system of agriculture.

Corn Shows

According to a motion carried at the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Farm Bureau, the plan of holding two district shows in the county last year was of such success that it will be repeated this fall. The committees in charge of the two shows have been appointed and will meet at an early date. Several local and grange corn shows will be held this fall. The County Agent has already been interviewed relative to providing ribbons and judges for several of these shows.

Japanese Clover

A few requests have been received for samples of Japanese Clover. Arrangements are now being made for two or three Japanese Clover demonstrations next year. The results obtained from the use of Japanese Clover on permanent pastures has been very encouraging in the two lower counties, and there is reason to think it can be made a valuable pasture crop for this county.

Five Year Report

The County Agent has just completed a pictorial report covering his work in the county for the five-year period from October 1, 1917 to October 1, 1922. Appreciating the limited time that the average farmer has at his disposal for the reading of reports and lengthy printed matter, the County Agent has made this report purely pictorial with the necessary captions. Nearly 100 pictures are used. A farmer can take up this report and in a period of fifteen minutes have a general conception of the work that has been conducted in the county during the past five years. It will be off of the press about Christmas. A copy will be mailed to every farmer in the county.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY TO MEET IN DOVER

The Peninsula Horticultural Society will hold its regular meeting in the Dover Opera House on November 22nd and 23rd. The three day session will bring most of the leading fruit men of this and nearby counties to Dover and many interesting lectures will be forthcoming.

Dr. J. F. Adams will present to the meeting several papers, among them, "Use of a Spreader for Improving" and "Investigation of the Apple in Delaware."

Dr. Thomas R. Manns will also present two papers before the body, the subjects are as follows:

"Grape Spraying on the Peninsula" and "Report of Fungus Diseases for the Year 1922."

TO PRESENT MUSICAL COMEDY

"The Microbes of Love," a musical comedy, will be presented by the Educational Committee of the Newark New Century Club, aided by the school children and the townspeople, on Friday evening, November 24th.

The proceeds from the affair will be entirely devoted to buying equipment for use in the local schools. Keep the date open and be there. A clever entertainment will be waiting for you.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE NEWS

Professor George H. Ryden entertained the Seniors and Juniors of his history classes on Friday afternoon, November 10th. Professor Ryden's collections made during his residence in Russia as an officer of the American Red Cross Society added interest to the discussion of present day problems in Russia. Plans for the organization of a Current Events Club were brought forward and it is probable that such an organization will be completed with Professor Ryden, Dr. Bevan and Dr. Crooks as faculty sponsors for it and the seniors and juniors as members.

The members of the orchestra of the Women's College with Margaret Black as chairman, have undertaken to collect and mimeograph the college songs of the year with the idea that some may be of sufficient merit to be given continued popularity.

Professor Otto Muller of the Department of Romance Languages of the University of Pennsylvania, will give a lecture in French before the French Club, on Monday evening, November 20. The men of the French Club of Delaware College will be guests upon this occasion.

Thru Mr. Finney of the Playhouse, the Dramatic Society has extended invitations to visit the college to a number of actors who will appear in Wilmington this year.

DE WOLF HOPPER

AT PLAYHOUSE

The seat sale for one of the most important and attractive engagements to be played at the Playhouse this season is now on and there is already every indication that its high artistic excellence and magnitude will receive the liberal support of local theatre-goers. De Wolf Hopper, without doubt the foremost comic opera comedian of America, and his Gilbert and Sullivan Comic Opera Company will make his appearance at the Playhouse, Wilmington, next Tuesday and Wednesday, presenting "The Mikado" and "H. M. S. Pinafore."

Mr. Hopper's organization numbers fifty, including such well-known artists as: Herbert Waterous, J. Humbird Ruffey, Arthur Cunningham, Henry Kelly, Alice MacKenzie, Bernice Mershon, and Winifred Anglin. There is a chorus of thirty and the company's own special orchestra, under the direction of Max Fichlander.

Mr. Hopper and his company will not appear in any other city in the vicinity of Wilmington.

They were then taken for a sight-seeing trip by Wilmington members and dinner and supper were served by ladies of the church in their dining-room in the basement.

REV. McELMOYLE STILL HOLDS SWAY IN ELKTON CHURCH

Congregation Ignores Presbytery and He Retains Pulpit. Services Well Attended

Despite the fact that such a move was protested and bitterly condemned, the congregation of the Elkton Presbyterian Church heard their own pastor, Rev. John McElmoyle, at the services last Sunday. The church was full at both morning and evening services and no particular mention was made of the trouble between church and Presbytery.

The exact status of Rev. McElmoyle has not been satisfactorily determined. His friends say that no action can be taken to deprive him from his post. On the other hand, the New Castle Presbytery still maintains that he has not the right to preach to his flock.

The whole question has been the topic of household discussion for the past month or more. When the Baltimore Synod met in Washington two weeks ago, the dispute was generally believed settled. But no final nor definite action was taken other than the Synod refusing to take the church from the hands of the New Castle Presbytery. Since that time the matter has been dragging along, much to the discredit of both Church and Presbytery.

Manhood and Newspapers

A word of encouragement to Men who are editors, and a declaration of Newspaper principles edited by Men.

"Every newspaper that enjoys continuity of existence and management has a certain body of principles. They are called the policy of the paper. Those are the principles and beliefs that guide its expressions and opinions. The men who express these opinions are the editorial writers. . . . They are men. They wear neither halos nor horns. They form their opinions just as other men form their opinions, by observation and reflection and information. . . . But each paper has a body of principles that guide its utterances, and the men who write those principles believe them. Nobody in the Times office is ever asked to write what he does not believe."

"As to the restraints that are imposed on abuse of the power of the press, without the interposition of senatorial committees, Mr. Miller said: 'We appear before the jury every day. We appear before the grand inquisition, one of the largest courts in history; we are judged at the breakfast table. We feel that if we were improperly influenced by anybody outside of the office there is none so quick to discover that as the readers of the paper.' This straightforward talk had wide effect. In editorial comment of newspapers the country over Mr. Miller as hailed as a defender of the liberties of the press, who had fought the battle of all honest commentators against official interference and intimidation."

"I can see no ethical moral or legal right that you have to put many of the questions you put to me today. Inquisitorial proceedings of this kind would have a very marked tendency, if continued and adopted as a policy, to reduce the press of the United States to the level of the press in some of the central European countries, the press that has been known as the reptile press, that crawls on its belly every day to the foreign office or the government officials and ministers to know what it may say or shall say—to receive its orders. Such questions tend to repress freedom of utterance and put newspapers under a sort of duress.—From Testimony of Mr. Miller of The Times in Senatorial Quiz."

Free From Europe's Bloody Broils!

Ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge

The American people saved themselves from being chained to that body of death, the league of nations, by turning their government over to the Republican party—and they did this by the most decisive majority ever recorded in the annals of mankind.

We have faithfully obeyed the people's emphatic mandate; and we will continue to obey it. We did not go to Genoa, we will not go to Venice, we will not mix up with foreign quarrels, plots and intrigues anywhere on earth—we will not go to war unless and until we are attacked.

Friends—Not Partners

We stand by the traditional American policy so long maintained that it is now a vital element of American institutions—the policy best announced by Washington, of honorable friendship for every nation and political partnership with no nation.

In view of what has been and is happening in Asia Minor and Turkey, and what is sure to happen in other parts of disrupted Europe, what intelligent and patriotic American man and woman does not now thank God that we have been delivered from any obligation to pour out more billions of American money and sacrifice the lives of American young men on one side or another of perpetually recurring Old World blood feuds.

Consequences of Involvement

Suppose we had bound ourselves to take part every time any part of Europe erupted—which side would we take? Which side would we have taken in the recent trouble, which seemingly, has been suspended for the moment—but only for the moment?

France and England have been in sharp disagreement; and the devolving policies of those recent allies, but ancient enemies may grow steadily more antagonistic.

Into their conflicting interests the particular interests of other nations are, of necessity, constantly projected; and this situation is decisively influenced by historic hatreds and ambitions, by racial feuds and economic, political and even religious considerations, all having their roots deep in the remote past.

Plunge Would Be Fatal

Is it not plain that for us to plunge into this boiling cauldron means that we, too, would inevitably be scalded? Is it not plain that other billions of American dollars would be required of us; without any attack being made on America, that our young men would be subject to call to extinguish with their blood foreign conflagrations not of our kindling, no sparke of which falls on us?

Newspaper Business is Different

"A newspaper is quite a bit different from any other line of business. When once established in a good, live, thriving community it goes on forever while other lines of business may change management occasionally, but the same old paper is issued and read day after day and year after year. There is no use getting peeved at the editor. If he starves out, there is always some one to take his place. You may kill off all the editors you please, but when you come to kill off a well-established newspaper you may just as well give up, for some day it is going to publish your obituary."

A Creed in Action

"To get down to work, whoever else idles; to tell no lies, whoever else may thrive on their use; to keep fit, and the beast in you down; to help any who need it; to take less from your world than you give it. . . . Humdrum decencies, patiently practiced through millions of undistinguished lives, were the myriad bricks out of which all the advanced architecture of conduct was built—the solemn temples of creeds, gorgeous palaces of romantic heroism, cloud-capped towers of patriotic exaltation. Our best friends for a long time to come will find a part of their satisfaction in being nobodies; assured of the truth of the saying that there is no limit to what a man can do so long as he does not care a straw who gets the credit for it."

Thomas Nelson Page and Delaware—His Visit Recalled

Thomas Nelson Page's death recalls his appearance at the University of Delaware commencement of June, 1920, while yet Delaware College had not added to itself the new dignity, and the triple organization had not taken on the blanket title "University." Perhaps few persons suspected the awkward predicament from which Mr. Page cleverly extricated himself on that lovely June morning, though some must have been surprised at the matter of his address.

The fact is that Mr. Page came knowing naught of Delaware College and prepared with a stout manuscript to sing the praises of the traditional small college, such as he had known as a youth in Virginia, the college interested chiefly in the "humanities" and cowed to the simple life. We all know what he found, and many must have noticed the airy fashion in which he tossed aside his manuscript with a cryptic sentence as to his having no further use for the burden.

What he had to do then and there was to improvise an extempore speech instead of the carefully prepared address with which he had come armed. His personal charm of the Virginian, and the genuine interest of much he had to say enabled him to acquit himself with credit, and in the afternoon his delightfully gallant little address at the Women's College, where Dean Robinson covered herself with glory by her graceful and significant speech, completed the conquest of Delaware.

I had some correspondence with Mr. Page after that occasion, and once more I saw him, this time as he entered the Hotel Touraine in Boston. Something in the haste and worry written upon his usually genial face restrained me from renewing one of the most agreeable casual acquaintances of a lifetime. After I had passed on, I realized that he was a widowed man, on his way from his Summer home in Maine to bury his beloved dead in Virginia. And now he is gone, one of the best of those who, living on the New South, spoke with sweetness and light of the Old South. He and Joel Chandler Harris have done more than all the rest of us, to help toward that peace of good will between the races that must come if the South is to prosper.

PARADE AND CEREMONY IN NEWARK

speech, in which he emphasized the fact that Armistice Day was fast losing the glamour of a noisy holiday, and as the years roll by the temper of the American people is such that it is now a day spent in thanksgiving and in loving memory of the boys who failed to come back. Then came music from the band and singing of "America" by the assemblage. Mr. Hastings then introduced Dr. Ezra B. Crooks, of the Department of Philosophy at the University.

Dr. Crooks made a very splendid address to the crowd gathered about him, and proved to be a real buddy of the men who were in France during the War. Dr. Crooks spent many months along the Belgian border with the English troops in relief work and his intimate companionship with the soldiers who held the line has fitted him with a great store of information from which he drew many thoughts in his speech. He was given quite an ovation as he concluded with the prayer and hope that the world will never see another war like the one through which we just passed.

Following this address came the blowing of Taps with the soldiers and civilians standing at attention and with bared heads—a fitting tribute to loved ones who went over with joy in their hearts but whose bodies now lay in the flower-strewn cemeteries in France.

Rev. Herson pronounced the invocation with a wealth of feeling and sent the assemblage away at the close of the ceremonies with the benediction. All in all the meeting at Wolf Hall, although somewhat spontaneous and not fully planned, was a great success and impressed all who were present.

It all goes to show what can be done in Newark when the proper interest is shown. Without the Continental contingent, the parade would have perhaps fallen flat. Without the efforts of J. C. Hastings who organized the affair, there would have been no community interest whatsoever. To these people then goes the credit for they certainly deserve it. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, the National Guard, the Fire Company and the business men who had autos and teams in line are also to be congratulated on the spirit shown.

And last but not least, a word about the hundred or more kiddies who bravely trudged the entire distance without a whimper, waving their flags and trying hard to smile along the last half mile when their little legs were so tired. Some were hardly as big as a minute, but the mere mention of falling out of line was enough to bring many black looks your way. They're a great bunch, these kids. May we state that some of the older generation may learn a few things about community spirit and patriotism from them.

People's Column

Newark, Del., Nov. 14, 1922.
The Editor of Newark Post,
Newark, Del.

There seems to be some misunderstanding among our numerous Newark friends as to why we did not participate in the Armistice Day parade in Newark last Saturday, and I wish you would publish, through the columns of your paper, for the benefit of our friends that the understanding was all the mills in Newark were to close down on that date so that both bands could assist in the celebration, but owing to the fact that two of the mills where Minnehaha's players work did not shut down, and as there was no provision made to take care of the men who would have lost time, barred our band from taking part, but we want the public to understand that we were only too glad to do so only for the reason stated above, and we hope next year, if this celebration is to be held, that there will be some provision made for compensating the players if we are to take part in the celebration. I submit this to the public in behalf of the members of

MINNEHAHA BAND,
C. T. Denney, Secretary.

THE SICK

Although any serious recurrence of the recent diphtheria outbreak in Newark is very improbable, several cases are still noted in town and the vicinity. The latest victim is Caroline, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cobb, of Depot Road. The family is quarantined for the usual length of time. The child's condition is not considered serious at this time.

Harry H. Cleaves, one of the master craftsmen at Kells, is confined to his home with a severe attack of grippe. He was taken ill while at work on Monday and much to his disgust was hustled off to his bed by Dr. Blake. The "kids" miss his presence among them and wish him a quick and complete recovery.

HIGH SCHOOL TO PLAY DOVER FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The Newark High gridiron artists will stack up in their first inter-county struggle of the season on Friday afternoon, when they face the strong Dover High School eleven, coached by Ben Magee, a former football performer for Delaware. Comparative scores of both teams to date will be found on the Sports page. This will be the hardest test of the local outfit in the scramble for the championship to be met this season, and a mighty good game is bound to be forthcoming. Great enthusiasm among the townspeople, both young and old, has sprung up in the past week or two in regard to Newark's really wonderful team. Now is the time for that enthusiasm to be put

ARTIST SERIES LECTURE SATURDAY NIGHT

Syud Hossian, Noted Visitor from India Here under Auspices of Artist Series Committee

AN AUTHORITY ON MOSLEM LIFE

The next entertainment, under the direction of the Artist Series Committee of the University, will enable the people of Newark and nearby communities to hear the most famous man to come out of India since Tagore, the well-known poet. Syud Hossian will lecture in Wolf Hall on next Saturday night on the subject, "The Moslem World and Civilization." He is a quaint character and is well known on the lecture platform.

As his name indicates, Syud Hossian is a direct descendant of the Prophet of Islam, and he comes of an aristocratic family whose Persian ancestors settled in India in the time of the Moghul Empire during the reign of Jehangir (17th century), and for successive generations were among the premier nobility of the land.

Following a short career in the British service, Mr. Hossian took up journalism, contributing to the foremost journals of India, both English and Indian. After winning his spurs in the English press he took up the chief assistant editorship of the "Bombay Chronicle," the leading nationalist organ. By reason of his brilliant oratorical gifts and grasp of politics, he quickly became one of the recognized leaders of the national movement and as a Mohammedan spokesman, played a prominent part in the achievement of Hindu-Moslem solidarity. He then started the new nationalist daily "The Independent," of Allahabad, which, before he gave up the editorship, became the largest and most influential daily newspaper in Northern India.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL MAKING FINE PROGRESS

Great Interest Taken by Boys and Girls in Practical Handicraft

IDEAL SURROUNDINGS

On last Friday a representative of the Post heard for the first time that an Opportunity School really existed in Newark, and straightway he took his footsteps in the direction of the attractive little building in the rear of the Armory on Delaware Avenue.

When he arrived, the teacher, Miss Helen Brown, was reading to the boys and girls the ever-fascinating story of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves. While they were eagerly following the strange and wonderful adventures of the aforesaid Ali Baba, the visitor had plenty of time to inspect the surroundings. He saw an ideal school-room, from the new and improved type of desks which at least looked comfortable, to the great big windows which let in all the sunshine and fresh air imaginable. Over in one corner stood a queer looking object composed of a wooden cylinder and a screen of fine crossing wires. This turned out to be a real workable hand loom. Then a portable Victrola and cabinet came in for inspection, and the score or more of other things which go to make up a modern school room and its equipment.

The visitor was not exactly an old man but he certainly did not have these things in his school rooms. He had hard, uncomfortable desks, plenty of blackboard, and once in a while some kind person would donate a particularly ornamental calendar decorated with Pharaoh's Horses, or The Old Mill or A Platter of Fruit—or any of the old standard calendar subjects. These were all the things he had to enjoy in his school room. But this little room had real pictures, flowers, drawings, charts, exhibits—all manner of decorative things which held the eye and made the walls take on a "homey" appearance.

For here in the Opportunity School, the children are taught to do with their hands—to make useful articles, in addition to routine reading and spelling and arithmetic. There are 19 children now in the school. Here they are given the chance to develop their natural ability for handicraft, and all the help and inspiration which is possible to give them is gladly furnished by Miss Brown. She is at once teacher, weaving expert, brush maker, cook and general all round "good fellow" to the kids in her room.

After the children, carefree and happy at the prospect of a whole long Saturday staring them in the face, had romped out of the room with their reports in their hands, the teacher had a few minutes to show the visitor some of the clever work done by the boys and girls. First she showed a small rug, woven upon the loom over there in the corner and done in two colors. The mat was firm and serviceable looking and mighty attractive. Then we went over to the little bench where they make the brushes. Unlike many such exhibits, there was nothing delicate looking about those brushes. They were modeled after the good old "scrubbin' brush," and made no bones about it. And such they were. Just good, plain, businesslike brushes which every housewife uses. Along with the actual work of making the rugs and brushes, each boy keeps an account of all handwork supplies and the money derived from the sale of the finished articles. Thus is involved a very elementary but none the less practical knowledge of book-keeping, profit and loss, and incidentally tally denominate numbers and fractions. An furthermore, while loom work is in progress, the children are taught to spell the various words used in weaving, and they read of looms and their great value to mankind. Thus is carried on what is known as the corollary work.

There is no doubt that the opportunity given the child in the modern school is worthy of praise. In what we may call the "old days," no such pleasant surroundings and fascinating work was ever thought of. It was work, work, work through the same set of books each day. When they were finished no time was lost in supplying us with others. Now it is different, for these children are not driven to their tasks. They approach them voluntarily because they like the work. And while they enjoy themselves, they are learning something each day.

Thus it was that the Post man wandered upon a scene which he will long remember. It has been quite some time since he has seen a grade school room in action and the impression left upon him was a very pleasant one, indeed. The motto of the little Opportunity School is:

"Happiness first, all else follows." One would have to search long and ardently for a better motto than this. It is the real secret of the new type of school room. Happiness first—the art of keeping the child interested and contented in his work; the gentle and inspiring method of the modern teacher in awakening in him the eagerness to do with his hands as well as his head, but above all this—happiness first. And after all, it applies not only to the school but to the home, the fireside, the office, all places where men gather together in any one group. The Post man is mighty glad he saw the Opportunity School. Just to forget for a little while the hurry and bustle of business, and to take a peep at the American boy at his work—why it makes you gasp with amazement at the new and varied things which go to make up the modern school. Try it some time, you fathers and mothers. Get close with your boy and girl and take an interest in his work. See what he makes; watch him work. Help him along.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY IN ELKTON

will be remembered that at the same date last year this memorial was unveiled, and has proved to be one of the most beautiful of its type in this section of the country.

The opening of the meeting was accompanied by some excellent music by the Elkton Band. This was followed by the Invocation by the Rev. Sidney Dixon and singing by the Methodist Choir under the direction of Charles Weldon and William J. Davis.

Thus the stage was set for the most impressive and well-done ceremony of the evening, and one which will long linger in the memories of those who saw it. The lights in all the business houses nearby, as well as the street lights suddenly went out and the assemblage was left in total darkness. The shout of surprise instantly gave way to a tender silence, for at the foot of the monument facing the crowd was a row of sixteen lighted candles. Mutely they flickered and burned brightly. There is no need to tell what they symbolized. Everyone knew, and everyone was silent and sad.

Then softly in the night air sounded the mellow taps rising and falling—the sweetest call to the Army. Swelling louder blew the call. As the last long note died away, a soft voice called on the names of the dead. As each name was called, one of the mitering candles was snuffed out by a soldier duty or many of the dead. As concluded until the last candle was gone. Then a minute of solid silence—the kind of silence which always settles over a throng when their heartstrings have been touched—then the lights flashed on and the meeting went on.

Following this came the principal address of the evening. Rev. Father McLaughlin, of Wilmington, Del., formerly Chaplain of the 110th Inf. A. E. C., to which Elkton's Unit was attached, delivered a thirty minute talk to the assembled relatives and friends of the boys he knew so well. It was not in the nature of an elaborate oration—just a simple, straight from the shoulder talk woven with it a wealth of meaning and advice, as well as many tender memories.

Father McLaughlin was very popular among the boys of the 110th and no speaker would have been better received by Elkton on its day of remembrance.

The meeting closed with more music by the band and the benediction by Rev. John McElmoyre.

Delaware, time honored and celebrated rival of Delaware upon the football field, came down from Pennsylvania with several camp followers to do battle at the historic Frazier Field. For one of the battle raged up and down the field, and at the final whistle, Delaware walked off the field a beaten team. They tried their best, played clean, fast, and at times spectacular football, but they were not effectively pierced the Delaware defense. On the other side, the Delaware Gold played as if they were playing for the title. Whether the huge crowd in the stands or whether they had it in the time, anyhow they played a game of offensive football which drove the joy into the hearts of the loyal alumni and friends of the team.

The game itself was a treat to the crowd ever to enter the gates of the field. There was no quarter game asked. That game meant a deal to both teams and they played it without letting up on either side. Both teams tackled hard, but Delaware missed many chances to visit backs for losses by negligence, often overrunning Delaware and allowing the runner to escape easily.

Delaware Scores Early

Blue Hens scored right off the bat in the first quarter. Receiving a punt on their own thirty-five, the team marched straight to the field by straight line plunges, backs and delayed plunges. Elliott, then McDonald, then carried the pigskin for a yard. On went the big offensive, far into enemy territory. On the second line, Cherpak took the ball center, faked a pass to Williams for a line plunge, and as the Delaware drew in to stop the thrust, little quarterback turned and around right end and over the right end was touched. Williams scored.

In the same quarter, Jack Hens, Delaware captain and star player, lowered his head and took it at the right side of the line. Instantly he had broken clean and was still on his feet. Though a speed merchant, the red-headed runner ran as he never ran before and fairly hit up the distance. He cut over for interference and was staged a mighty pretty race. Three Red and Black were on the verge of reaching Williams several times, but there was a burst of speed left, and he over the goal line for a touchdown. It was a clean break through the line, and followed by a 60-yard sprint. The best run of the game by far. Naturally the Delawareans went wild.

Haverford Scores

Second period also found Haverford in the scoring column. Cherpak had a Haverford punt after 15-yard run-back. Haverford recovered the ball and earned its first break. Then Brown turned forward pass attack, and those Delaware rooters who saw the Delaware game shuddered when the Delaware aeriels were completed and the ball was on the 6-yard line. He took it over to the frenzied crowd of the Haverford rooting crowd. Bacon kicked goal.

In the third period Delaware again showed her offensive, this time using into use for the first time forward pass attack. Two long passes were thrown. Williams to Price put Williams in a position to carry it over the 3-yard line.

In the last quarter, Delaware lost the ball on downs on the Haverford 10-yard line. Brown fell behind his line to punt, but McKelvie blocked the kick. Brown recovered it but was behind his goal for a few minutes. Then a few minutes later, Haverford again was backed into the Delaware 10-yard line, a pass went from the center and rolled off to the right. Magaw came in fast, and it up and cantered over the Delaware's fourth touch-

"ABSOLUTELY, MR. SHEAN"

Election Day over, Thanksgiving next, and in between, at its swiftest, fiercest, showiest—football. How the number of fans seems to grow by thousands with every autumn! And now that we have the radio, almost everyone can get a chance to "hear" a big game or two. (Seeing by ear is excellent for the imagination; it may work wonders for this far too literal race.)

Football draws a special glamour from the season. It comes with sparkling afternoons; superb yellow chrysanthemums; frost at dawn and haze on the hills. Along the roads over which motors, opulent and pert, spin toward the playing field, of a Saturday afternoon in November, stand cornshocks with big pumpkins drowsing at their feet, and now and then a flock of wild geese are sighted, making a stopover on some pond. All these, taken with the pennants, the songs and the college colors, are by no means the smallest elements in football's prestige. Unfortunately, they are by far the most romantic. Not the most fervent rooter could declare that football is a beautiful or noble game. Nothing Greek about a halfback, deathly sick from a kick in the wind, or a roving centre, conveniently put hors de combat by a consensus of hob-nailed shoes!—Sunday Star.

Newark's football team romped out on the field Saturday all decked out in white sweatshirts plainly numbered. At last it looks like the long hoped for dream may come true and we shall see a real team representing the town. Get behind the boys and help them in the worthy attempt.

JUVENILE GOLF

To residents wandering up and down Depot Road the daily sport of dodging autos is being cast aside for the more entertaining business of watching the kids swinging golf clubs and tramping over the green which runs parallel to the road. Since the Newark Country Club opened for business, the small boys of the town have given up their marbles and kites and bicycles and it seems to the writer that whenever Mother wants to know where her Johnny is she would do very well to stroll over to the campus between the Women's College and Wolf Hall. Here she will no doubt find her truant son busily engaged in dropping the elusive pill into the home-made cup on the "second."

Strange how it all happens, isn't it? Instead of arguing long and loud who should play quarterback on the Swamp Angel football team, they now are obsessed with an impassioned desire to bring out a better collection of mashes and iron clubs than any kid in town. And they will patiently spend hours looking for a ball lost a week ago just so that they may take a few wallops at it again.

In watching Young America playing golf in Newark, one is struck with the natural form displayed by several of the kids. They use for the most part shortened clubs but they hit the ball straight and true. They do not bring a whole lot of distance out of their strokes, but they swing correctly and easily and more than that—naturally. Without casting sarcasm it would seem that some of the members of the Club might procure some interesting and instructive tips from the younger generation.

Another novel result of the latest fad for the kids is the fact that the girls are left completely out in the cold. The other day we came across a group of them looking for a lost ball. Upon inquiry, it was revealed that the loser thereof had delegated the group to find the ball while he borrowed another one for the remainder of the course. Thus it seems that the fair sex will continue to play second fiddle even in a harmless game like golf.

Between the kids and some of the college students the campus of the University reminds one of the rush for gold in the Klondike save that the "prospectors" use funny looking sticks instead of the proverbial pick and shovel.

WEIGHT OR SPEED—WHICH?

From the smoke and gloom of busy Pittsburgh comes the story of a battle being waged. However it is a friendly battle and the outcome whichever way it ends will make for one and the same goal. In the back field of the University of Pittsburgh football team are two players fighting for the same position and to date they are still striving. Even Glenn Warner, the "old fox" of football can't decide. Neither can we, for that matter. The fact is we are going to leave it up to you to decide. When you have done, Mr. Warner will no doubt make the suggested decision and send you his heartfelt thanks.

The battle lies between "Tiny" Hewitt and George Colonna for the position. In other words, the fullback post lies between a hulking 205 pound man-mounting who hits the line like a couple of trolley cars, who lowers his head and leaves his feet and can keep it up all day long, and a 160 pound youth, nimble and fleet as a deer, who can carry a ball through a train wreck and not drop it, who can kick and throw passes, run the ends and return punts. It is a battle between speed and brawn. With Hewitt at fullback, the opposing forward line knows that sooner or later that human catapult is going to leap at them like a mad bull ripping and tearing his way through the line for a sure gain. That is his only threat. He cannot kick nor can he run the ends. He is not at all fast as football players go, but give him the ball and a decent start and he will buck the line till milking time. In the Penn game Saturday it was Hewitt who threw into the massed defense of the Penn line on their 3-yard line and it was the same player who shot out the other side with three players hanging on him for the Panther touchdown. He is slow and inclined to fumble at times, but he can tear a line to shreds.

Colonna is light, fast, crafty, and sensational. When he is in the Pitt backfield, the opponents never know what he will do. He is a new man at the University, but he has endeared himself in the hearts of the student body by his brilliant playing. Give him the ball for any type of play and he will perform well. He can average 50 yards on punts, throw forward passes accurately, drop kick, thrust off tackle and skirt the ends like a frightened deer. He is a triple threat at all times. Best of all he is young, ambitious and full of flame and dazzling brilliancy.

There you have in a few words the outstanding characteristics of the two Panther gladiators who are struggling under the watchful eye of Glenn Warner for the only vacancy in that powerful backfield. It all depends upon what type you personally like. But to Warner the problem lies in whether he must sacrifice needed weight for speed and in turn lose the only effective line buckner on the team.

So the question rests. For purposes of debating it could be put in this form—"The Full Back—What Type Should He Be?"

Schall Stars For Visitors

After holding their heavy opponents to one touchdown, scored in the first period and fighting them to a standstill for three quarters of the game Newark weakened in waning minutes of the game and the gridiron warriors from the Diamond State Fibre Co. pushed two touchdowns for a decisive victory.

The first home game of the season brought out a good-sized crowd and they were not in the least discouraged by the showing of the local team. When it is taken into consideration that a green team was on the field, boys who have little or no time for practice and who have not played in years, they put up a most remarkable scrap for most of the game. Experience and team work counted strongly in favor of the Wilmington team and were the main causes for the victory.

Newark has a heavy line and a fairly fast backfield. The line held the onslaughts of the Wilmington team time after time during the early part of the game. Something went wrong in the last few minutes, however, and two touchdowns were pushed over in rapid succession just before the final whistle blew. The lineup:

Aberdeen and Elkton played the third and rubber game on neutral grounds in Havre de Grace Saturday and Elkton surprised by coming out on the short end of the verdict. Both teams have met before and once played a tie game. It was a struggle from whistle to whistle, however, and at all times was Elkton dangerous.

The game was in the nature of a benefit. One of Aberdeen's star players suffered a serious injury several weeks ago while playing, and the game Saturday was staged in his behalf. A great crowd witnessed the fracas. The lineup:

BOXING FEAST IN
ELKTON FRIDAY NIGHTNate Carp Meets Johnny
Tero in Wind-up Advance
Sale Large

The first of a series of boxing bouts to be held in Elkton during the winter will be staged next Friday night in the Armory and from the looks of the card, some classy exhibitions of the "manly art" will be witnessed.

Bill McGowan has undertaken to promote the affairs, and has engaged Frank "Pop" O'Brien, well-known Philadelphia referee to officiate. The ring will be pitched on the Armory floor and the spacious hall should accommodate a large number of fans.

In the wind-up, Nate Carp, of Baltimore, who aspires to the flyweight title, will have as the party of the second part, one Johnny Tero, of New York. Both boys have fought in the upper crust of the boxing fraternity and much is expected of the bout.

Other bouts will be between Battling Barnes, of Wilmington, and Eddie McLaughlin, of Philadelphia; Flinky Kauffman, of Philadelphia, and Joe Mooney, of Chester; Young O. K. Chaney, of Philadelphia, and Soldier Johnson, of Fort duPont, Del.; Samuel Rice, Baltimore.

Quite a number of Newark sportsmen have signified their intention of being on hand for the opening bout.

GAME LIMITS AND RULES

The open season on rabbit, hare, quail, partridge and woodcock in Delaware begins today and runs until December 31st, inclusive. Rabbits are reported plentiful this season, while quail and partridges, though found in small flocks in this end of the State, are more numerous in Kent and Sussex. Sportsmen, this fall, who have had young rabbit dogs they wished to break in, have been handicapped on account of the extremely dry weather, which makes the rabbit's trail almost impossible to detect. And, for this same reason, the older dogs will not be of much service on opening day unless there is some rain or damp weather.

Minors under 15 years of age are not permitted to hunt game in this State with a shot gun or rifle unless accompanied by an adult lawfully hunting. The bag limit for rabbits, a day, is six; woodcock, six; quail and partridges, twelve. A resident may sell in his own county 20 rabbits a season, which were lawfully taken during the season. Rabbits coming from without the State may be sold in any quantities from November 15 to December 31st. The export of rabbits, quail, partridge and woodcock is prohibited, but the holder of a license may export, open to view, 10 rabbits or 20 partridges, lawfully killed by him, provided affidavit is made that the game is not for sale. A non-resident hunting license costs $10.50 and is issued by the commission at Dover.

The states adjoining Delaware have earlier opening seasons than Delaware has. Pennsylvania rabbit and quail season begins on November 1st, but closes on December 15th. New Jersey season opens on November 10th and closes December 15th, while the Maryland open season begins November 10th and lasts until January 1st.

SHOULD REACH FINALS

Down in Milford last Saturday, the Laurel High School football team ran roughshod over the home aggregation and effectively and completely put Milford out of the running for the Sussex County title. The battle between two former Delaware athletic stars, Joe Rothrock and Phil Marvel, was too one-sided and lacked interest.

In the event that Laurel trims either Seaford or Georgetown, they will meet Newark for the State title. And looking at it from all angles, that is the way it is beginning to shape up. Newark will have to watch one "Pinky" Wooten, star of the Laurel outfit, and to date the heaviest individual scorer in the high school ranks of the State. Incidentally Laurel has scored 150 points in the last three games. Thus did it happen:

Laurel Milford
P. Wooten, left tackle Dickerson
Tritt, center Walls

HEARD AROUND TOWN

by The Loafer

A considerable amount of favorable comment was heard about town concerning the Armistice Day parade Saturday. Interspersed with it was a pertinent criticism. The fact that the R. O. T. C. Battalion of the University did not march was not explained, and Major Row is bearing the brunt of the comment. Since the Trustees of the University declared the day a holiday, and since so many of the boys were scattered to the four winds until afternoon, some of them participating in similar celebrations in their home communities, no adequate showing could be made.

Septic Tanks instead of Cesspools? Down around the old station such a radical and sweeping change is rumored to be the near future policy of the local Board of Health. Let's hear some more about it.

The Democrats are generous in their praise of the Republicans in that the latter used no money in this election. They are conspicuously silent relative to Democratic propaganda that money was available if the susceptibles would hold out. And thereby hangs another tale.

Much more interesting than Crap or Golf, Poker or Bridge, is an analysis of the recent political returns. There are so many "niggers in the woodpile" that you can't even see the wood.

McAvoy fell off the seat on Frazer Field during the game Saturday, but never smiled outside the gates. However, an athletic surgical examination revealed a wonderful grin internally. The old grey mare is still what she used to be. Atta Boy.

Mill Creek Hundred, first and foremost in Republican majorities, certainly balled things up. And following the philosophy of old Elbert Hubbard, Explanations never explain.

Conservatives, sometimes called "old fogies" on the street, certainly got the shock of their lives when they witnessed the Armistice Day parade.

While they said "It can't be done," Jim Hastings and his committee did it. At least some of us did not forget. And America's future depends upon our memories.

SHOWER DOWN, BROTHERS

The great annual Fall Crapshoot-Tournament was held last Sunday afternoon in "stadium," over in Chestnut Grove, facing East, and was voted a huge success by the great number of contestants and interested onlookers. All the leading crack shots were present and their efforts with the ivory rammers often drew forth bursts of mild and entirely conventional applause. Several of the opposing contestants, however, not realizing the presence of such a distinguished audience were repeatedly rebuffed by the promoters of the affair for the almost unforgivable social blunder—groaning aloud when the tide of fortune shifted from their reach. Really, some most astonishing examples of the fine points of the sport were spread out before the great circle of breathless watchers. One gentleman of color was seen on his knees fondling the little cubes and calling continuously for a person named Joe. Joe evidently appeared from some mysterious place for the dusky athlete suddenly ceased his fanatical pleadings and began to count his money. The next stated meeting of Tournament Committee will, no doubt, be held in the near future. The place has not definitely been selected, but from all reports the amphitheatre up White Clay Creek is almost completely safe for plugging up a few knotholes in the fence.

TOWNSPEOPLE ENJOY ANNUAL FRESHMAN PARADE

The residents of Newark were treated to a most entertaining celebration Friday evening last when the Freshmen of the University, aided in a large measure by some talented upper-classmen, put on their annual Frolic along the main streets of the town. Headed by the University Band, the marchers wended their way down Main street as far as the Newark Center station, then counter-marched to Depot road, finally ending up in Old College where a football mass meeting was held on the eve of the Haverford game.

About fifty dollars in cash was awarded to the most laughable and original costumes by the Judges, Dr. Foster, Dr. George W. Rhodes and Major Row.

THE BOOK of the WEEK

Right Royal. By John Masefield. The Macmillan Co., $1.75.

The creator of "Reynard the Fox," perhaps the greatest hunting poem ever written, seems to have that intimate knowledge of animals which can put soul into a story and make the reader live with them their life and the feelings which they have. John Masefield in his latest interpretation (for that is what it can best be called), "Right Royal," displays that subtle understanding which has been characteristic of all of his works. From the start to the dramatic close of the steeple-chase story the author shows himself to be a master of his craft, striking home with his brilliant language and his word pictures in such a manner as to carry his reader in exultation to the throbbing beats of the victorious horse's hoof.

"Right Royal," the disdained charger of noble blood, but as the Englishman would say with the failing of

"fanking" in a pinch revelled in the confidence which his youthful master had displayed in him when he staked his all to win the steeple-chase on Compton Course, the famous English race track with its multitude of hazards, Masefield portrays this when he says:

And now, as proud as a King of Spain,
He moved in his box with a restless tread.
His eyes like sparks in his lovely head,
Ready to run between the roar
Of the stands that face the Straight
Ready to race, though blown, though beat.

As long as his will could lift his feet,
Ready to burst his heart to pass
Each gasping horse in that street of grass.

With this proud spirit and with the horse priding himself on his strength and ability the youthful owner rides him through all falls and dangers winning the race and his love.

How hollow sounding are the words which we can use to express in prose what Masefield has almost, we might say, immortalized in his poem. The crowd, the picture of which is one of the best features of the poem, is portrayed with an understanding of a steeple-chase crowd which is truly remarkable. Masefield loses none of the color, none of the brilliancy, none of the nervous activity which is seen in such a throng, but with the faithful eye of the artist displays the gathering in the language of the horseman. This, however, while wonderful in itself does not contain that splendid fire of the chase which he later depicts.

The steeple-chase—that dangerous and exciting sport of fools, and we may say Kings, since they throughout all history have been the promoters of spectacles, if we may believe the chronicles—with all of its fire and dash, with all of its super abandon and risk, with all of its hazard and daring, Masefield catches in the threads of a brilliant story and weaves a tale which can find equals in the English language. More than that he creates a new character for fiction—a horse character which its personality has all that is fine and noble and spirited.

Those who love horses will find this verse story a thrill which they can understand and the common tale as they deem scarcely possible. To feel that "A noble horse of a noble blood" performs and the language which the story-teller uses in describing it are the factors which make small story great. Masefield has executed a masterpiece which will find recognition for some time to come. C. P. G.
