$155,000 Suit Against B. & O.

Action Filed Against R. R. For Death And Injuries To Students Last May

Argument has been started in the superior court in Wilmington in a suit against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for damages amounting to $155,000 as a result of the grade crossing accident in Newark on May 8, 1926. This accident, which occurred at the grade crossing on North College avenue resulted in the death of two boys and injuries to two others.

Chief Justice Pennewill and Judge Rodney are hearing the case. Charles P. Curley is counsel for the plaintiffs and John W. Huxley, Jr. represents the railroad. These suits were instituted by Charles Walter Hawke, administrator for John L. Hawke, seeking $50,000 for the death of his son; James MacRobert, administrator for Ernest N. MacRobert, seeking $50,000 for the death of his son; John F. Hehl seeking $15,000 for injuries; James N. White, Jr., seeking $30,000 for injuries; Charles Walter Hawke seeking $5,000 damages, and James C. MacRobert seeking $5,000 damages. The accident occurred on the night of May 8, 1926, at the unguarded B. & O. grade crossing at North College avenue, Newark. The four boys, John Hawke, Ernest MacRobert, Carl F. Hehl and James N. White, all students at the University of Delaware, were riding in a Packard sedan, driven by young Hawke and owned by his father, when they were struck by a B. & O. train. The car was completely demolished and Hawke and MacRobert instantly killed. Hehl and White escaped death in some miraculous way, but were both seriously injured.

Settlement In Mrs. Green's Favor

Last week in Washington settlement was made out of court for damages in an automobile accident involving Mrs. C. A. Green, of Newark, and the car of Mrs. Isador Rayner, widow of the late Senator Rayner.

The accident which happened in Washington, December 1, occurred when the chauffeur of Mrs. Rayner executed a left turn directly in the path of the car Mrs. Green was driving. This car, belonging to Mrs. Green's husband, Sergeant Green, attached to the Military Department of Delaware University, was considerably damaged. Sergeant Green went to Washington to attempt a settlement, but Mrs. Rayner elected to take the case to court. As Mrs. Green appeared with witnesses, she was given choice of date for hearing and selected December 29. On that date, when Mrs. Green, accompanied by her husband, went to Washington to appear in court, Mrs. Rayner asked that they drop legal proceedings and accepted full responsibility for the mishap. She is now conferring with Mrs. Green's lawyer to determine amount of damages she will have to pay.

Mr. T. H. Ford, manager of the Newark Atlantic and Pacific Company store, who, accompanied by Donald Armstrong, left Newark at 6.00 a. m. Monday morning, to motor to Florida, reports that they made 340 miles the first day.

Mr. Ford, who is recuperating from an attack of pneumonia, is on a 30-day leave of absence and will probably spend most of it in Florida. He plans to go direct to Miami, where he will visit his sister. On his return, he will resume management of the store. In his absence, L. A. Reed is in charge of things for the A. & P. Company.

Newark Trust Closes Prosperous Year

December Statement Shows Healthy Growth and Reflects Prosperous Community; Name To Be Shortened

The statement of the Newark Trust and Safe Deposit Company, completed December 31, shows not only a healthy and prosperous growth in that institution, but reflects the same prosperous condition in the community it so capably serves.

Besides paying dividends of 14 per cent on capital stock in 1926, amounting to $14,000, the bank also paid depositors interest amounting to $29,979.55. One of the best barometers of business prosperity showed a sharp upturn, when deposits, over the past year, increased over 10 per cent. The value of the stock of the Newark Trust and Safe Deposit Company as a permanent investment was brought out in the last sale, made recently. The last price was $181.50, which would make an original investment made in 1905 of $50, pay an annual dividend of $10.50, or over 20 per cent.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors, it was recommended that the name of the institution be shortened to The Newark Trust Company. This recommendation will be acted on at a special meeting of stockholders on January 26.

Farm Bureau Solicitors In Meeting

Meeting This Afternoon For Instruction On Membership Drive; Farmers Trust Host To Meeting

With a dinner at 12 o'clock at the Blue Hen Tea Room, given by the Farmers Trust Company to the solicitors for Farm Bureau memberships, the opening year was fired in the State-wide campaign for 1927, to open officially next Monday.

After the dinner, the solicitors opened their business meeting in the directors' room of the new Farmers Trust building. H. C. Milliken, presiding. Howard B. Hancock, of Bridgeton, N. J., president of the New Jersey State Farm Bureau Federation, was the first and main speaker of the meeting. He gave an interesting address, telling how the New Jersey Federation secured memberships and the work that that Federation had accomplished. He also pointed out the possibilities of Farm Bureau organizations. Mr. Hancock is also overseer of the New Jersey State Grange and one of the most successful farm-

Distributes Prizes

As a climax to the used car sale which the Fader Motor Company has been conducting for several weeks, on January 1 they played a belated Santa Claus to ten people, who were the lucky recipients of prizes at the drawing, at 4 o'clock that afternoon.

Magistrate Daniel Thompson, Mayor Eben Frazer and William Kennedy supervised the drawing. The Connor twins from Baltimore, four-year-old nephews of Frank Fader, head of the Fader Motor Company, pulled out the lucky numbers. The prizes and winners were as follows: $120 Crosley radio set, won by Walter Smith, Newark; $75 Freed-Eisman radio set, won by Herbert Murphy, Newark; Set of 5 wire wheels for Fords, value $35, won by William J. Bernard, Newark; Set of bumpers for Ford, value $25, William Corriden, Elkton; Automatic radiator front, value $15, Joseph Charshee Elk Mills; Firestone tire and tube, James Wood, Harburn, N. J.; Pyrene fire extinguisher, value $11, J. Leslie Jones, Newark; Speedometer, value $10, Norman Ryan, Porters, Delaware; Lock motometer, value $7.50, Benjamin Hendrickson, Newark; Parking light, worth $5, Grover C. Whiteman, Newark.

Child Fatally Burned

Jack Lilly, 18 Months Old, Dies Of Burns When Dress Ignites

Last Thursday afternoon, Jack, the eighteen-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lilly, of North East, was burned so severely when his dress caught fire that he died shortly after a physician had been called to treat him.

During the absence of his mother, who was formerly Miss Mary Dempsey of Newark, Jack crawled to the front of a stove and began playing with some Christmas decorations. In some manner his dress was ignited and he was so badly burned, he died shortly after the arrival of a doctor. Mrs. Lilly had gone across the street to use the telephone and returned to find the little chap in flames. Coroner Howard W. Green was notified, and after making an investigation, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Ambulance Makes Double Trip

The Newark ambulance spent a busy afternoon, yesterday. It was called to take Frank Hall, colored, suffering with pneumonia, from New London avenue to the Homeopathic Hospital, Wilmington, and while it was on that trip, another call was relayed to it to get Mrs. Schneckenberger of Oak Grove. After delivering Hall in Wilmington, it returned to take Mrs. Schneckenberger to the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital for an appendicitis operation. William Clancy and Pete Stiltz were the drivers.

1,000 NEW NUMBERS

An Appeal For A Needy Family

Miss Alice Leak, community nurse, has been informed of a family of ten, living in the country near Newark. There are eight children, ages from three to sixteen years of age. Miss Leak has taken a week's supply of groceries to the home. There is no provision beyond that time for the family unless good-hearted persons come to their relief. Not only food, but clothing of every kind is needed at once. This case is out of the area of the Town Welfare Committee, which will help when the town cases are taken care of.

Call 14 W, or leave supplies with Miss Alice Leak, 34 Choate Street.

Col. H. A. DuPont Died Last Friday

End Comes Suddenly With Heart Attack; Was In 89th Year

One of Delaware's most gallant and distinguished citizens passed away early last Friday morning, when Colonel Henry Algernon du Pont succumbed to an attack of heart disease, at his home, Winterthur, in Christiana hundred. He was in his 89th year and had been ill with a cold for a week, but the end was unexpected, as he had been much better Wednesday and was making plans to spend the winter at his home in Washington.

Colonel du Pont began a long and distinguished military and public career when he graduated at the head of his class at West Point in 1861. He immediately entered service with the Union Army in the Civil War and won his captaincy within a year. He fought in a score of battles and skirmishes and before the war ended was made Brevet Major for "gallant and meritorious services" at the battles of Opequan and Fishers Hill; Brevet Lieutenant Colonel for "distinguished service" at the Battle of Cedar Creek. He also received the Congressional Medal of Honor for "most distinguished gallantry and voluntary exposure to enemy fire at a critical moment" during the Battle of Cedar Creek.

He was elected United States Senator in 1906 and served in the Senate until 1917. He was an infrequent speaker, doing most of his work in committee and in party councils. He became Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, as his chief interest was in military matters. At the time of his death, Colonel du Pont was president of the Wilmington and Northern Railroad, now a subsidiary of the Reading Company, of which he was a director. He resigned from the army in 1875 to assume the presidency of the Wilmington and Northern.

At his farm at Winterthur, Colonel du Pont maintained one of the finest herds of Holstein dairy cattle in the country and was responsible for much of the improvement in dairy stock that has taken place in Delaware. In addition to his military, public and business achievements, he distinguished himself as an author, his last book "Rear Admiral Samuel Francis du Pont, U. S. N.," being published only a few months ago. His other books are: "du Pont and Allied Families," "Story of the Huguenots," "Campaign of 1864 in the Valley of Virginia and Expedition to Vicksburg."

Colonel du Pont was laid at rest Sunday afternoon in the du Pont family burial ground in Christiana hundred, near Christ Episcopal Church, where the funeral services were held. The services were conducted by Bishop Philip Cook, assisted by the rector, Rev. Frederick T. Ashton. In deference to the wishes of Colonel du Pont there was no eulogy, nor were there just the suggestion of military form in the flag draped casket and the sounding of "taps" as the last notes of the organ sounded in the church.

The members of the immediate family who survive Colonel du Pont are his only daughter and son: Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield, of BoBston, and Henry F. du Pont, of Winterthur. They were both at his bedside at the time of his death.

TRI-STATE POULTRY SHOW READY FOR OPENING

The arrangements for the Tri-State Poultry Association Show, to be held in the State Armory, Newark, Del., during the week of January 10th to 15th, have been completed and the birds exhibited will be of much better quality than ever, as the local breeders have been improving their stock, in anticipation of this chance to exhibit.

The secretary, N. J. Lannan, reports having received 500 entries, with all popular classes well filled, so that the show will be well balanced. No admission is charged and door prizes will be awarded. The public is cordially invited to attend. The show will be open daily from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m.

A CORRECTION

Ernest Burnley and family, instead of moving to Wilmington, as stated in our last issue, have moved to Cleveland avenue, this town.

THE GRADE CROSSING PROBLEM

By A. B. BARBER

Manager Transportation and Communication Department, Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Director National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

(Reprinted from December Issue of "Wilmington")

More than ten per cent of all street and highway fatalities occur at railway grade crossings. The Committee on Statistics of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety reported 2,149 fatalities at steam railroad crossings in 1924 in a total of 23,291 highway fatalities, and in addition there were several hundred fatalities at electric railway crossings.

Both the First and Second National Conference on Street and Highway Safety recognized that elimination of the grade crossing is the only perfect solution of the problem. "This does not mean," said the Committee on Construction and Engineering, "that within the next generation every grade crossing of secondary highway and branch line railroad needs be eliminated, but it does mean that municipalities, states and railroads should join in an energetic campaign to carry elimination work forward as rapidly as funds obtainable will permit, with an equitable distribution of the expense. Each municipality, county and state should be at work on comprehensive programs for the elimination of its grade crossings, and should be taking steps to provide its share of the necessary funds."

"At the same time," continued the Committee, "it should be realized that to eliminate even the grade crossings on improved highways and streets would require a greater expenditure than is possible for many years to come, and that therefore the work should proceed on state-wide programs which begin with the highways where a given sum will accomplish the most in the interest of safety. In general the extra hazardous crossings—extra hazardous because of heavy motor travel, heavy rail travel, obscure view or other conditions—should be eliminated first, although there should be included certain other less hazardous crossings because they can be eliminated for very small sums of money."

Illustrating the importance of careful study to determine which crossings should be eliminated first, there has recently come to my attention a report made by a Chamber of Commerce committee in a southern city on the accident hazards of the city's grade crossings. Counts were made of the number of trains and the number of vehicles during a day at each of the principal crossings, and these, with factors based on the visibility and the protection at the crossing were used in an empirical formula which developed a rating for each crossing. The rating for the worst crossing figured 1093. That for the second was 457, indicating it to be less than half as dangerous, all things being considered. From this point the rating trailed down to 4.8 for the 29th, showing that the accident hazards are mainly at a few crossings and focusing attention on these.

A vital factor in the elimination program is the cost. The public should recognize its obligation to share in the expense of grade crossing elimination. Legislation on this point varies greatly in different states. In one important eastern state the entire expense is imposed upon the railroad—an attitude which fails to recognize that it is the growing use of the crossing by the public as well as by the railroad that makes the elimination necessary. In many states a special determination of the benefits accruing from the elimination is made in each case and the allocation of cost fixed accordingly.

In New York State the law requires the railroad to pay 50 per cent, the state 25 per cent and the municipality or township 25 per cent. The New York plan has the great advantage that all of the parties affected are able to estimate closely before the project is undertaken what the cost will be to them. A disadvantage is that, in the case of an expensive elimination necessitated by heavy through vehicular traffic, the burden imposed upon the municipality or township may be entirely out of proportion to the benefit to the municipality or township, or to its ability to pay. It may be noted, however, that recent legislation in New York authorizing the expenditure of $300,000,000 for grade crossing elimination did not modify the plan of distributing the expense.

Grade crossing elimination is an uphill battle in many states because more new grade crossings are opened up than are eliminated. This can hardly be charged to the railroads, inasmuch as few new railroad lines have been built in the past ten or more years. It is due mainly to the opening of new streets and the construction of new highways. As the unimportant crossing of a generation ago has in many cases become a danger spot, so the opening up of new crossings today, even though they introduce no great present hazard, is bound to necessitate further heavy expenditures in the future to eliminate these new crossings.

It is obvious that elimination of even the most dangerous grade crossings must be a gradual process, and that, to effect a material reduction in the accidents at the existing grade crossings while the program of elimination is going on, every effort must be made to reduce to a minimum the hazards of those crossings.

The American Railway Association has for many years had a committee working on the subject of grade crossing protection, and this committee has done much to safeguard the public. Standard warning signs, lights and pavement markings have been adopted for use at crossings, standard stop signs for use by crossing flagmen, and standard markings of crossing gates. Flimsy gates have been replaced by more sturdy ones. Shrubbery, advertising signs and other obstructions to view have been removed at many crossings.

Various devices, such as transverse ridges in the roads, zigzag turns and the like have been proposed and tried out to force the motorist to reduce speed at railroad crossings. The Committee on Construction and Engineering of the First National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, however, concluded that such devices are not effective, and recommended on the contrary that the operation of motor vehicles, particularly on and in the immediate vicinity of the tracks should be made as simple and easy as possible so that the operator can apply himself to watching for approaching trains.

In this regard there is much that can be done for a relatively small expenditure. Frequently where the railroad is on an embankment the highway is carried up to the level of the tracks by a short steep grade which breaks sharply at the track itself, causing danger of stalling. Such approaches should be extended and provided with easy verticle curves or level places so that the motorist can stop and hold his car easily within ten feet of the railroad if he discovers a train coming. The same applies to sharp descents to the tracks. Crossing planking should be maintained in good condition, firm and with a smooth surface. Approaches to crossings should be relocated where necessary to eliminate sharp curves and junctions with other highways close to the tracks.

Unfortunately at crossings where everything short of elimination has been done that reasonably can be done to safeguard the motorist and pedestrian, accidents continue. Every now and then a motor car in broad daylight runs into the side of a train. Crashing through crossing gates is a frequent occurrence, and crossing watchmen are sometimes run over by the very motorists whom they are trying to save from running into the path of an oncoming train. Inatten-tion, faulty judgment as to distances, panic in the face of sudden danger and sheer recklessness in racing for crossings all contribute heavily to avoidable accidents.

Statistics show that pedestrians are the victims in about one-fourth of the fatalities at grade crossings. They, as well as motorists contribute heavily to the death toll at grade crossings through their negligence—negligence which manifests itself, for example, in ducking under the gates after they have gone down, or in crossing behind one train without looking for the train in the opposite direction on the track beyond. They have not the excuse of the motorist that their brakes failed or their engine stalled.

In short, the motoring and walking public itself, by acquiring a wholesome respect for the railroad grade crossing and playing safe on all occasions, can accomplish more next month, next year and during the next ten years to reduce grade crossing casualties than can possible be accomplished by the expenditure of large sums of money to eliminate or protect grade crossings.

It should be accepted as a basic principle that, except in the case of a light traffic rail line crossing at grade a highway carrying heavy traffic, the railroad train has the right-of-way. It obviously is not feasible for the high speed passenger train or the heavy freight train to stop at highway crossings or even to approach them with any further precautionary measure than the warning whistle or bell. There is a growing sentiment, however, that in the case of a little used rail line crossing a major highway the train should approach with caution and if necessary to safety, be flagged across the crossing. This would, of course, apply in the case of but a small percentage of grade crossings.

The intersection of highway with highway is analogous in some respects to the intersection of railway with highway, particularly where one of the highways is much more important and carries much more traffic than the other. The Uniform Vehicle Code recommended by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety provides that vehicles approaching public highways from alleys or private driveways must come to a full stop, and this principle is accepted in many states. In some states also, vehicles on unimproved public highways must come to a stop before entering or crossing improved highways. There is a growing use of the boulevard stop, whereby certain boulevard or arterial traffic highways are given the preference over all intersecting highways, and all vehicles on such intersecting highways are required to stop before entering or crossing the boulevard.

The purpose in each case is to give the user of the more important thoroughfare a conditional right-of-way and safeguard him against the occasional user of the lesser highway thereby affording a higher safe speed on the major thoroughfare than would otherwise be possible.

Such a protected street or highway, however, differs in two important particulars from the railroad. In the first place, while the railroad train has the absolute right-of-way, the traffic on the railroad is not continuous and the waiting motor vehicles and pedestrians have opportunity to cross after one or two trains have passed. The traffic on the through highway, on the other hand, may be so nearly continuous that an absolute right-of-way on that highway would bar traffic from crossing it in safety at any time. Again, as previously pointed out, it is not generally feasible for the engineman to approach the crossing with caution and under such control as to be able to stop if there is highway traffic on the crossing; but the motorist on any public highway is under obligation to operate at all times so that he can stop within a reasonable distance if his path is obstructed. Therefore it would appear that the motorist approaching from the cross street, having fulfilled the requirements to come to a stop, may rightfully enter the crossing with caution, and the motorist on the main thoroughfare must yield him the right-of-way in accordance with the general right-of-way rule, and be prepared to come to a full stop if necessary to avoid a collision. Likewise the motorist on the main thoroughfare must be prepared to yield the right-of-way to pedestrians on the cross walks.

There is work yet to be done in clarifying this relationship between the motorist on the main thoroughfare and the motorist or pedestrian on the cross street, and more particularly in educating both as to safe and proper procedure at such points. Here as in many other phases of motor vehicle operation the written law cannot accomplish all that is to be desired, but must be supported by the law of courtesy. Grade crossing elimination can do away with some of the most serious hazards, the establishment of favorable conditions at crossings remaining at grade and other danger points on highways will contribute further, but these measures must be supplemented by improving the average motorist's knowledge of and attitude toward his responsibilities for the safety of other users of the highways.

Mrs. A. D. Dean Fatally Stricken

Expires About Two Hours Afterwards Without Regaining Consciousness

Mrs. Annie E. Dean, wife of Andrew D. Dean, of Elkton, died at her home about noon on Sunday following a stroke of paralysis while attending Sunday School in the Elkton Methodist Episcopal Church where she had come to substitute as teacher. She left her home about 9:40 Sunday morning in apparently good health, and shortly after arriving at the church she was seen leaving the room and before anyone could realize her condition, Mrs. Dean fell to the floor in the hall in an unconscious condition. She was carried into an adjoining room. Dr. Herbert Bates was immediately summoned and gave restoratives and for a moment she seemed to realize something was wrong but relapsed into a stupor. She was later removed to her home in the hospital ambulance, where Drs. Branton and Bates gave her every attention, but without regaining consciousness, she expired about 12 o'clock.

Mrs. Dean was a daughter of the late Amos and Matilda Pierson, and was a life-long resident of Elkton. She was about 63 years of age. Always active in church work and ever interested in charitable and public welfare, she was well known to everybody in this community and very popular. Since childhood she was a member of Elkton Methodist Episcopal Church, and a valued member of the choir, the Willing Workers and other organizations of the church.

Mrs. Dean is survived, besides her husband, by three sisters, Mrs. Mary Biddle, wife of George C. Biddle; Mrs. Ella Witworth, wife of C. Wilmer Witworth; Miss Helen Pierson, and one brother, Charles E. Pierson, all of Elkton.

Funeral services will be held this Wednesday, afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at her late home, in charge of Rev. W. G. Harris. Interment will be in the Elkton Cemetery.

In 1926 depositors in these clubs accumulated over $400,000,000.

"They used the instalment plan, but with two distinct differences—

- (1) Instead of paying interest on their money, they received interest.
- (2) Instead of buying at premium prices they went with cash in hand and got bargain benefits.

It is a safe estimate that these people got at least 10 or 15 per cent. more for their money than those who ride while they pay."

The Shadow Men

The great men of earth are the shadow men, who, having lived and died, now live again and forever through their undying thoughts. Thus living, though their footfalls are heard no more, their voices are louder than the thunder, and unceasing as the flow of tides or air.—Henry Ward Beecher.

WHAT HAVE YOU READ?

What does the average person know about the literature of the world? Is it true that most of us limit our reading to the newspaper, a weekly or monthly magazine, and to a few of the more sensational of present-day novels? Have some of us never heard of the more famous works of German, French, Russian, Italian, Spanish, Greek, Polish, Persian, or Belgian writers? Is it true that we may not even be familiar with the best in American and English literature?

It is with the view of making it possible for each individual interested to answer the above questions truthfully that the test below has been compiled. There is a list of fifty books selected from various countries and ages—books of which everyone should hear although he has not read one-quarter of them. Anyone who is a college graduate should be able to identify 35 of these books. One who did not go to college should know 20. A college freshman should recognize 20; a sophomore 25; a junior 30; a senior 35; a professor, other than an English teacher, should know 40; and a professor of English 45 at least. The above scores are all minimum. If the score runs below the one set, the answer to the questions in the preceding paragraph is “Yes”.

The Test

In the left-hand column is a list of titles of 50 books. In the right-hand column is a list of 50 authors. To test one's acquaintance with the literature of the world, one matches each book with its author by putting its number before the author's name.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

The Newark Post, Newark, Delaware.

Gentlemen:

The article appearing in The Post of December 22, 1926, under caption of "More Old Papers" is indeed very interesting, especially that portion telling of laying tracks on the ice in the Susquehanna River between Perryville and Havre de Grace and the opinions of the Editor of the Bel Air, Md. Weekly written years ago, because on the wall of my office hangs a picture of this memorable event in the early days of railroading.

The Newark Post and Mrs. Lavina Ely have my thanks for the opportunity of collecting another valuable relic of the early days of railroading in this section of the country.

Very truly yours, G. M. Phipps.

Editor Newark Post, Newark, Delaware.

Dear Sir:

The Delaware League of Women Voters is trying to bring to the notice of the citizens of Delaware a law, or rather the section of a law, enacted March 31st, 1919, which reads as follows:

"And no Candidate for State Senator or Representative in the General Assembly shall make any written pledge to give or withhold his vote on any proposed law or legislation nor shall any person seek to influence any such candidate in his attitude upon any proposed law or legislation by offer or promise of a vote or votes or of any support at any primary or election."

By means of this law the voters of Delaware are denied any assurance that the candidate for whom they cast their votes, will not vote exactly contrary to their wishes, when he is elected to the Assembly where he is supposed to represent them. By means of it, Delaware voters cannot lawfully impress their wishes upon their candidates for the General Assembly nor make the election of those candidates depend upon their promise to carry out the wishes of their district in the Legislature.

The "Encyclopedia of American Government" defines Representative Government thus:

"A Legislative Assembly composed of agents selected by, and acting in the name of, groups of voters"—And Delaware is the only State in the Union in which the "Groups of voters" are forbidden to intelligently select their "Agents" or expected to vote for a candidate with no assurance that he will "Act in their name" after election.

This law was brought before the Legislature of 1923 and again in 1925. Both times the effort to have it repealed met with defeat, principally because a large number of Delaware voters know nothing about it and therefore have never expressed their opinion or protest against it. If you will give space in your paper to this letter and by this means give publicity to the law among your many readers, the League of Women Voters feels that you will render a service to the cause of "Education in Citizenship," and sincerely thanks you for your courtesy.

Lavinia C. K. Roscoe, Executive Secretary Delaware League of Women Voters.

SMALL COLLEGE

The great enemy of the small college is that double process of growth which has proved so demoralizing to our higher education as a whole; growth in the subject matter for study and growth in numbers, wealth and equipment. Dartmouth is already far along the road that Princeton has traveled, for with her 2000 students and the Tuck, Thayer and Medical schools, she is half a university. Bowdoin, Williams, Amherst, Knox, Beloit, Grinnell and Reed remain true colleges—but some of them no longer small. Today Amherst has about 600 students, Williams 750, Grinnell 800. The colleges have an opportunity, by limiting enrollment under the rule, "intellectual capacity indispensable," eliminate mediocrity. There is the opportunity to try to integrate the field of liberal knowledge; to carry on teaching with less use of lectures and predigested food, more work done by the student himself; and to specialize, like the old Amherst and the present-day Antioch in some promising novelty of discipline.

No one can regard the immense amorphous universities scattered over the country, the enormous, unceasing expansion of Columbia and Harvard, Michigan, Illinois and California without misgivings. It is pleasant to turn from them to smaller, quieter institutions which may seek a qualitative rather than a quantitative ideal.—New York World.

ALL KINDS OF PEOPLE

The Woman Who Would Discipline

I am convinced that many of the punishments and faultfindings that children receive are due to a misunderstanding of their child natures, or an over-anxiety to stand well in some older person's regard. And, very often, it happens that the older person is irritable, selfish or undiscerning; and children should not be made to suffer for their shortcomings. It is an odd fact that, in our minds, we associate the word "discipline" with "children"; while I am sure that there is very frequently at least one grown person in a household who needs discipline.

A woman of my acquaintance once drove her only daughter away from home, because of a sad mistake the girl had made. There is no doubt in my mind that the girl's misfortune was due to a lack of such information as only her mother should have given her; but the mother thought that her daughter should, by instinct, be honorable. Then, when the girl needed her mother's love and protection more than she had ever needed them in her life, she was driven from home and died of a broken heart. Her mother was not thinking of reforming her child so much as she was the pride she must maintain before the eyes of her little world. We think so much of respectability that we often crush the ideals of the little ones in order to keep up a certain standard of life.

I know that we need to look at things—some things—from the child's level. Did you ever notice that when you were stooping or sitting and looking directly on a level with your child's eyes while he or she was talking to you that the appeal was stronger? Words took on a new meaning, and you understood childish language and childish ideals much better. It helps to stoop often; it is hard for little ones to "talk up" to people all of the time.

I am not at all tolerant of the child who argues against every injunction and reasons away every correction; but sometimes the language strikes home and, if fairness and honesty, we must acknowledge it. A friend from town was one coming to spend the afternoon with me and told me that she wished to stroll through the woods. I to the Little One that we should be glad to have her go, but that she must not talk so much as she had done on a former occasion and must not interrupt conversation between my friend and myself. We had our walk when we were alone that evening the child asked me how she had behaved. I was obliged to tell her she had not done well at all. She had often interrupted, I told her (although in my heart I knew that the deights and surprises of the wood had made her forget. But I was "disciplining." She looked into my face frownsly and respectfully. "It was just this way," she said, "Miss W— would say something to you; then she answered her; then she would say something else. Now when was I to do it if I did not interrupt?"

Now this was illuminating, wasn't it? I should have permitted the child to accompany us, or should have allowed her decently a share in the conversation. So we planned how we would try to do the next time; and I was only thankful that she was so ready to forgive my thoughtlessness.

Local Banks are Loaning on Bonus Security

Both the Newark Trust and Safe Deposit Company, and the Farmers Trust Company and making loans to clients of their institutions on the Government Bonuses to Veterans as security.

These bonus policies were open for discount on January 1, and there has been dissatisfaction among ex-service men because banks have refused loans on this paper. The reason for this has been that banks refuse this, as they would refuse any other security where the bearer is unknown to them.

ers in the state. He is a grower of early potatoes, rhubarb and asparagus.

One of the immediate problems confronting the Farm Bureau is legislative measures, affecting the farmer, to be brought before the current session of the Legislature. At the last Legislature, the Farm Bureau, in co-operation with other interested bodies, were successful in having passed the "Filled Milk Bill," preventing adulteration; the "Ice Cream Bill," requiring a higher percentage of butter fat in ice cream. They were also instrumental in having a bill passed legislating against butter substitutes.

One of the most vital legislative measures that the Bureau is working on now is that of tax rates. They will attempt to achieve a rate for farmers that will make their rates more inportion to those enjoyed by urban taxpayers.

Another work they are checking is a vicee committee to check the depredations of chicken thieves. Such a commee has worked very successfully in Jersey.

The piece of business accomplished the meeting was a vote of thanks to the Farmers Trust Company for the hospitality and courtesy.

Beside the solicitors, there were present the meeting, County Agent R. O. Casman; the officers of the Bureau: C. Milliken, president; George Burge, vice-president; H. Walls Cooke, secretary-treasurer, and following guests: Howard B. Hane, Ed. Willim, Sr., president of the County Farm Bureau; John Roe, member of the executive committee County Farm Bureau.

Solicitors present were:

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

We quote from "The Christian Advocate," from an article entitled "Methodist Worship in New York City One Hundred Years Ago": "Let us suppose it is about the year 1826. The Methodist meeting-houses were perfectly plain, perhaps a little gloomy in aspect, by reason of the dark-colored stucco with which their stone walls were coated. The interior walls were kept neat by the frequent use of lime and brush. The woodwork of the pulpit and gallery fronts and supporting columns were also white. . . . The floor was uncarpeted, sometimes sanded; on the altar and pulpit stairs there was generally a plain carpet. Light was furnished by lamps in which sperm oil was burned. . . . The middle aisle, if there was one, or a partition half way between the two aisles, was a dividing line over which neither sex dared trespass. If in the course of the services a man ignorantly or intentionally seated himself on the women's side, the sexton or one of the trustees would go to him even in the middle of the sermon and ask him to go to his proper place."

MUSIC FIGHTS CRIME

That music is the greatest deterrent to crime, is the opinion voiced by the dean of the college of music of New York University, who wrote: "If we were to organize a band or orchestra in every public school, high school, college, university, boys' or girls' club, or place an instrument into the hands of every boy or girl at an age when understanding and appreciation become evident so that the child's mind is aroused sufficiently to make him want to excel in the instrument which he likes best, I believe that we would have, in from ten to fifteen years, from 50 to 75 per cent less dope fiends, criminals and gamblers in the United States."

"Do you remember Lincoln's story about the little steamer with the big whistle? Every time they tooted the whistle it blew off so much steam that the boat stopped running. That's the trouble with lots of people today. If they would only use their energy to drive the paddle wheel of opportunity instead of eternally blowing the whistle of discontent they would find themselves going up the stream of success so danged fast that the barnacles of failure wouldn't have a chance in the world to hook onto their little craft."

Delaware's Next Game With Army, Jan. 12

Blue And Gold Pointing For Struggle With Cadets

After a rest of ten days, Coach Forstburg's cage squad is back at strenuous practice, getting in trim for their next game with the Army, at West Point, January 12.

Despite a defeat in their last game, the Blue and Gold Squad is confident of showing the Cadets something in the way of fire-works not included in the ordnance courses. This will be the fourth game on the schedule. Delaware took fast games from Philadelphia Textile and Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, and then dropped a sizzler to George Washington by one tally.

While on the trip to West Point, Delaware will stop to take on Pratt Institute in Brooklyn. The next home game will be on January 25 with St. John's.

High School Points For New Castle

Coach Malin is sanguine of victory in the second D. I. A. A. basket ball game in which the High School will engage New Castle, here in the Armory, Friday night. There will be two games, the girls playing at 7 o'clock and the boys at 8 o'clock.

The High School dropped their first game with Caesar Rodney, but Morris was the only veteran performer in the line-up on that occasion. On Friday night, Captain Jaquette, who has recovered from football injuries, will be in his old position as roving guard, and Riley will return to the fold in center position. The rest of the first string line-up will be: Mayer, guard; Morris and Williamson, forwards. In addition to this, Mr. Malin has a strong string of substitutes in Johnson, center; Doordan and Eubanks, forwards; and Holloway and Whitman, guards.

GIRLS START A GROVE

Girl Scouts planted 100 pine trees in Brand Park, Glendale, Calif., to be known as the Girl Scout Grove. The Girl Scouts' executive, Mrs. Anna L. La Grange, reported the planting to the American Tree Association at Washington which will send anyone tree planting suggestions.

Delaware's First Tank Meet On Saturday

Blue And Gold Swimmers To Meet Swarthmore In Swarthmore Tank

Coach Nobis, of the University of Delaware Swimming Team, is confident of a hard won victory in their initial meet of the season with Swarthmore College, at Swarthmore this Saturday.

Last year, Delaware's first season in swimming competition, they opened with Swarthmore and the Quakers splashed them in the face 49-13. However, with the additions to this year's team, the Blue and Gold are rated on a par with the Quaker swimmers.

With Reybold, Reese and Nobis, veterans, and the acquisition of Alexander Taylor, a member of last year's Wilmington High championship team, the Blue and Gold are odds on favorites in the relay. They lost it last year by less than a foot. Boyer, Russo and Rose are expected to make matters more than interesting for Swarthmore ariel artists in the diving event.

Reese and either Lattomus or Maier will compete in the 50-yard event. Last year Reese lost by a hair to Shoemaker, who will oppose him again this year.

Taylor will swim the 440 and has been getting in trim by swimming in Florida during the Christmas vacation.

Nobis and Boyer, Jones or Hare will oppose Lendahl, Swarthmore breast-stroke star in the 200. Reybold and Nobis will combine to outpace Stabler in the 150-yard backstroke. Maier and Lattomus will do the honors for Delaware in the Century.

BEST WAY TO WATER

A good general rule to follow for winter plants is to watch the soil at the top of the pot. When it is thoroughly dried out, water the plant, says Nature Magazine. When watering, add enough to saturate the entire mass of soil. Do not just wet the top and trust to luck that the soil in the bottom will get wet enough. One can usually be assured that the entire mass of soil is soaked when water runs out of the bottom of the pot.

SIGMA NU TO PLAY MILFORD TOMORROW

Tomorrow evening at Milford, the basket ball team of the Delaware College Chapter of Sigma Nu will engage the basket shooters of the Milford Community House in a game. The "Snakes" will enter in the struggle with such stars as the Hill brothers (blood) and "Ace" Taylor, famed guard at Beacom College last year. The Sigma Nu tentative line-up is: Hill and Hill, forwards; Pusey, center; Shaw and Taylor guards. A number of the loyal Bro. are expected to be in the rooting section.

He: Darling, I shall be miserable all the while I am away from you.
She: If I could only be sure of that it would make me so happy.

"MAKING MANNERS"

Theodora Brownfield
"Mary Betty has such nice manners. I wish my children would behave like her when we go out to dine!" How often we hear a mother comment thus on some little girl who is "conspicuous" for her ladylike ways.

Indeed, manners are to be valued as much in children as in grown people. These very little ones are later to be the grown people, and if their manners are to become a part of their everyday life, these graces and little courtesies must be encouraged to grow up with them, so that they will reach perfection in later years.

I have in mind a mother who has made a special point of good manners in bringing up her six-year-old daughter. This does not mean that she wants this little one to have an affected society suavity, but that she wants her to reflect the charm and refinement of the household. The mother demands company manners every day in the week. She serves the dinner each night in the dining-room rather than amid the informality of the breakfast room or kitchen nook, although she does her own work and it means extra household tasks.

This may seem a trivial step in manner-making but children respond more quickly to example and surroundings than they do to preaching and instructions. Dinner in the dining-room, in this case, means that extra pains are taken to have the meal pleasant and attractive, and everyone is expected to help maintain this atmosphere. The mother may still wear her house dress but it is sure to be spick and span and the little six-year-old is dressed late in the afternoon after her nap, ready for the evening meal. Her manners are practiced with the rest of the family and she learns that politeness is not to be put on when going out to dine or having company but is to be worn on all occasions.

Children usually do not intend to be rude but the very novelty of a situation sometimes embarrasses and so surprises them that they do not know what to do. Consequently "acting smart" is their refuge and too often it appears at the table! A little home practice would save all this humiliation for both mother and child.

Eating in the dining-room is just one means of teaching children that certain conventions help to make things go pleasantly and that good breeding makes people welcome. As mothers train their children, so will they reflect that training as they go out into the world and when they meet praise because of their conduct and manners, they will be grateful to her for the trouble she has taken.

"I am hoping that I shall live to see the day when there will be a kindergarten in every public school in our state. While the kindergarten is particularly worthwhile to all children it is especially helpful to the only child in a family. This child before going to a kindergarten has not had contacts with other children, neither has he learned how to conduct himself in a group. The kindergarten helps him to adjust himself to his fellow playmates, helps him to overcome his timidity or his self-assertiveness, or if he is badly spoiled helps him to become a normal child."—Adah Hess, Illinois Supervisor of Home Economics Education.

Meat and Beans

Many people believe that beans, such as the navy, lima and other kinds of dried beans, are substitutes for meat from the standpoint of their nutritive values.

Fresh Water Makes Oysters Look Fat

The oyster, when transferred from sea water, where it normally grows, to water free from salt, at first has a tendency to absorb comparatively large quantities of fresh water, swell up, and look fatter and smoother than it actually is.

With a view to protecting oyster consumers a conference was recently held at the Department of Agriculture at which it was agreed that any process of washing or of floating before shucking, which results in the incorporation of excess water, will bring the product within the prohibition of the Federal food and drugs act, says the department.

ONE DELAWARE CAR IN EVERY 1,056, KILLS

According to a statement issued by the Committee on Traffic Accident Statistics of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, of which Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce is chairman, one automobile fatality for each 1,056 registered cars, is the record for the State of Delaware in 1925.

The total number of deaths in Delaware from automobile accidents in that year is given as 38, and the number of registered automobiles, as reported by the Bureau of Roads, was 40,140. Fatalities do not include deaths in which automobiles are involved but which are charged against heavier vehicles such as steam railroads or electric railways.

In the whole United States there was a fatality to every 923 cars. Delaware, with one death per 1,056 cars, makes a better showing than the country.

In deaths per 100,000 cars, or upon that basis, Delaware has a record of 95, as compared with 108 for the country. Here, too, the showing is good.

The statement concludes with the disturbing announcement that the number of auto fatalities is increasing rapidly.

"THE NIGHT CRY"

On Wednesday, January 12, the Newark Theatre will present "The Night Cry," a thrilling tale of Rin-Tin-Tin, a courageous, powerful and loyal dog in the sheep raising section of lower California. Rin-Tin-Tin is wrongly accused of killing sheep and finally tracks down the murderer, a fearsome vulture, and in a terrific fight, rescues his master's baby from the bird and then kills the vulture. There is human intrigue as well and Rin-Tin-Tin narrowly escapes with his life. He is supported by John Harron and June Marlowe.

"There is always a secure position at extra pay for him who will do more than his part."

SOME LESSONS FROM THE EGG RECORDS FOR THE YEAR 1925-1926

Two hundred and fifteen poultrymen took the calendar and began keeping records in November 1925. One hundred and eighteen kept the records for the full year ending October 31, 1926. As shown on the summary sheet, the average year's production per bird on these 118 farms was 141 eggs for pullets, 124 eggs for hens, and 120 eggs for mixed flocks.

According to the U. S. census report the average production per hen on all farms in Delaware for 1924 was 56 eggs.

For Best Results Hens and Pullets Should be Kept Separate

Of the 60,000 birds that were entered in the Farm Egg Laying Contest November 1, 1925, 50,000 were kept in flocks of hens and pullets separated, while 10,000 were kept in mixed flocks, hens and pullets running together. Reports from these 60,000 birds show that for the three months, November, December, and January, when egg prices are highest, the flocks where hens and pullets were kept separate averaged 30.6 eggs per pullet and 13.2 eggs per hen, or 24.4 eggs per bird, as compared to 19.2 eggs per bird where hens and pullets were mixed together.

As shown above the flocks where hens and pullets were kept separate averaged for the year 141 eggs per pullet and 124 eggs per hen as compared with 120 eggs per birds where pullets and hens ran together.

The important thing is to keep hens and pullets separate while the pullets are growing and for the first four or five months after they are housed for the winter. Pullets are timid and if mixed with the old birds they are fought away from the feed hoppers and drinking fountains, and thus fail to get sufficient food. For this same reason, it is best when housing the birds in the fall to divide the pullets into early and late maturing groups, and the hens into groups according to their state of molt or production.

When spring comes and all the birds are in production they need about the same feed and give satisfactory results, until molting begins, if mixed together.

The Leading Flocks for the Year Letters have been sent to the nine flocks making the highest record in their respective classes, to secure information about the way these flocks were fed, managed, etc. When this material reaches the office it will be summarized and a copy sent to each record keeper.

DEL-MAR-VA EASTERN SHORE NOTES

Henry A. Wise, noted New York attorney, one of the leading members of the American bar, senior member of the firm of Wise, Whitney and Parker, and owner of the historic Wise mansion and estate at Kiptopeke, Va., has accepted the chairmanship of the Del-Mar-Va Takes Inventory Congress, to be held under direction of the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association, at Salisbury, Md., early in February.

Mr. Wise is one of the most prominent figures on the Eastern Shore, being a grandson of former Governor Wise, the only Governor ever elected from the Eastern Shore of Virginia, and with his family history on the Peninsula going back more than 300 years. The present Wise estate is located at the most southern tip of the Peninsula and is one of the historic show places in Northampton County. Many prominent persons, including the late President Grover Cleveland, have been entertained at the Wise home.

Mr. Wise is a nationally prominent figure in connection with his law practice. The late Alton B. Parker, Democratic candidate for the Presidency, was Mr. Wise's law partner.

Announcement of Mr. Wise's acceptance was received by letter at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Del-Mar-Va Association, Monday afternoon, when plans for the Congress were discussed.

The question of suitable dates was taken up and also definite decision made as to the most suitable place for the gathering. It was agreed that February 9th and 10th would be satisfactory if suitable arrangements can be made to secure the Salisbury Armory and hotel accommodations.
