Rain can't dampen spirit

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Rain may have put a damper on some of the festivities, but it certainly didn't do anything to water down the spirit of the annual Blue-Gold All-Star Football game.

You've probably heard it a million times already, but let me reiterate that the Blue-Gold game is much more than a football game.

Valania

It's a six-month long series of events that the Delaware Foundation Reaching Citizens with cognitive disabilities uses to raise money and awareness. The football game is just the most visible of those events.

For those of you that aren't aware, a basic explanation is that the Blue-Gold game matches football players, cheerleaders, band members and other ambassadors with 'buddies.' There generally are a host of opportunities for buddies and students to get together from January through the game in June.

It's not for everyone. Sometimes 18-year-olds just aren't prepared for everything that's involved. However, for those willing to take the leap, it can be one of the most rewarding experiences of their young lives.

The weather certainly played a big part in keeping the attendance below 5,000 — well below what it has been over the last 15 years. Many years, attendance has

Newarker wins national award for volunteer work

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

Vincenza Carrieri-Russo, a University of Delaware junior who co-founded a non-profit group that collects books and distributes them to schools, libraries, community gathering spots and U.S. soldiers serving in Iraq, received one of five national Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis Awards for public service during a gala dinner on Tuesday, June 20, at historic Union Station in Washington, D.C.

Carrieri-Russo, who was introduced by U.S. Sen. Thomas Carper (D-Del.), received a standing ovation from a gathering of more than 400 regional Jefferson Award winners, their family members and government officials after her name was announced in a brief video presentation.

Carrieri-Russo, a 22-year-old English major from Newark whose ambition is to become a broadcast journalist, was selected from five local Jefferson Award winners to represent the Delaware region during the three-day national award ceremonies, which began with meetings with government officials and a black tie welcome dinner on Monday, June 19.

"I didn't expect to be the one to be chosen, especially after hearing all of the powerful stories at the [welcome] dinner," Carrieri-Russo said. "It really touched my heart. I was crying. I turned to my parents after the dinner

Christina District had 343 more people in classrooms than state will pay for

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Tuesday night's special session of the Christina District school board was one of the ugliest in recent memory. An overflow crowd of teachers, paraprofessionals and other employees came early and stayed late to watch heads roll.

Once again, exact information was in short supply, apparently because the district has little control over its current financial picture. School superintendent Lillian Lowery tried repeatedly to convey this fact to those in attendance. "The General Assembly approved a $20 million line-of-credit," Lowery said, referring to monies loaned to cover a district deficit announced by the state Office of Management and Budget in May. "They also mandated a Financial Recovery Team that oversees everything we spend

Verizon franchise approved

Competition, says company, will lower prices

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

By a unanimous vote at Monday's meeting, the Newark City Council authorized Verizon to provide television services to Newark residents, many who are served now by Comcast cable services.

The added competition, said Denise Reidy, video franchise manager for Verizon, should benefit Newark residents by lowering prices and improving program content and customer services.

SWAT called to Bear motel

A stolen gun and car investigation led to a SWAT deployment at the Fairwinds Motel on Route 40 in Bear on Saturday, June 24, said the New Castle County Police.

Police said a resident of the 5600 block of Byron Court in the Village of Canterbury found his handgun and vehicle missing from his home around 10:19 a.m. Saturday. Officers learned Andre Shelton, 33, had the handgun. Police tracked Shelton to Room 7 of the Fairwinds Motel on Route 40 and contacted him via a loudspeaker.

Police said two people left the hotel room at that time and told police Shelton was in the room but refused to surrender.

New Castle County Police and Delaware State Police shut down Route 40 and evacuated surrounding homes and businesses for safety reasons. New Castle County Police SWAT was deployed and tried to contact Shelton, but was unable, said police.

Police said SWAT dispensed tear gas into the room, and shortly after Shelton surrendered without incident. The handgun was recovered, but the vehicle, a 1996 white Cadillac Deville, is still missing, said police.

Police said Shelton was charged with receiving stolen property, possession of a deadly weapon by a person prohibited and resisting arrest.

A 48-year-old Madison Drive resident kept his neighbors awake on Thursday, June 22, at 12:59 a.m. with an unwanted fireworks show. Newark police received several complaints about the noise, including one caller who mistook the fireworks as gunshots. Police issued James F. # Area construction projects in full swing

City's building department kept busy with permits, inspections

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The bulldozers are buzzing; the hammers humming. As the days of summer heat up, signs of demolition and construction can be seen throughout the Newark area.

On Main Street, bulldozers worked through the week at the site of the former Stone Balloon, clearing out debris left by the building's demolition. Construction on Washington House, 54 upscale condominiums planned for the site, is to begin in July.

The demolition of several rental homes on Amstel Avenue made way for construction to start on the first phase of the Amstel Square project, which the city council approved in March.

"Everything is pretty much on schedule," said owner Tim Thompson. Builders, he said, are hoping to break ground in the first weeks of July on two, townhouse-style apartment buildings. Each brick building will have eight apartments.

This first phase, he said, should take about a year to complete. "We won't get serious about the second phase (which includes the renovation of the Trap restaurant) until we see how the first phase goes," said Thompson.

Progress has been made on two new housing developments in Newark: Laura's Glen along Capitol Trail and Historic Phillips Mill along Nottingham Road. Both sites have been cleared, and construction appears to be in the beginning stages.

Raymond Becker, a developer of the Phillips Mill project, said the site has been sold to builder P.J. Bale, who is beginning to rehab several historical buildings on the site. A gristmill, mill owner's house, stone frame barn and the Thomas Phillips home will be adapted for residential use. A row of new townhouses will be built on the site after construction finishes on the existing buildings.

All of these construction projects have kept at least one city department busy. But, according to Newark's Building Director Thomas J. Sciulli, "I actually like it that way."

It's a challenging time of year for the city's building department, said Sciulli, because of the influx of applications for building permits. Everything from the installation of a new shed to the demolition of the Stone Balloon must go before the department for approval.

Sciulli said the summer season is particularly busy in Newark because it's a college town. "Everything is on the fast track from June to August," he said. "Everybody wants their permits and inspections, yesterday."

Sciulli said his staff of eight inspectors and several support personnel have been up to the challenge. "We're trying to meet the needs of the community," he said, noting that the city's four building inspectors have been working split shifts to meet contractors' demands.

"Do-it-yourself'ers and other residents provide another challenge in the summer months. "This time of year," said Sciulli, "everybody thinks about getting a pool and a deck." He reminded residents that building permits are required for the installation of all pools, decks and sheds. Residents must apply for the permit at the office and include with the application a copy of the plot plan, he said. For more information, call 366-7075.

No new funds for charter schools

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

State Representative Deborah D. Hudson (R-Fairthorne) was disappointed that strong grassroots support among charter school parents and administrators did not lead to legislation providing additional funding for Delaware's charter schools this year. Together with its amendments, House Bill 422 sponsored by Hudson is currently stalled in committee.

"Our public charter school students are being short-changed and the inequities will continue to at least next year," Hudson said. "I am committed to this issue and will come back again with the same position that public charter students in Delaware should be treated no differently than traditional students."

In its original form, the Bill would have allocated $750 per child in state funding for charter schools. A proposed amendment to the legislation was offered in order to allocate the funding more efficiently by having the $750 per child appropriated through the state's operating budget instead of the Bond Bill.

According to the study released by the Delaware Charter Schools Network and the National Alliance for Public Charter Schools, there are dramatic disparities between funding received by regular district schools compared to charter schools. By law, char-

New stop sign along Beverly Road approved by council

Resident hopes four-way stop will reduce accidents

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

In her time living on the corner of Beverly and Sunset roads, Dr. Julie Wilgen has seen her fair share of accidents and near-misses.

She's seen three accidents where cars have landed in her yard, damaging flower beds and sometimes hitting utility poles. In one accident, a driver was injured and taken to the hospital.

"I have seen near misses with children, and more than one pet killed at that intersection," she told the Newark City Council Monday.

The problem, said Wilgen, is the lack of a stop sign. While all other intersections on Beverly Road are controlled by four-way stop signs, the one at Sunset Road has just three stop signs.

"People assume it's a four-way stop," said Wilgen, and then those people pull their cars out into the road and get hit.

Hopefully that will change, as the council Monday approved the installation of a stop sign on Beverly Road at the Sunset Road intersection. The city's Traffic Committee reviewed and approved the change in May.

Councilman Jerry Clifton, who supported the new sign, encouraged the city to be more proactive in resolving dangerous intersections. "Why do we have to wait until there is a (personal injury) accident to take care of this," he asked.

In other council news:

- The council approved up to $200,000 for an expansion of the Kershaw electrical substation on Paper Mill Road. The expansion is necessary to ensure adequate backup to the existing units at the substation, which are at 90 percent capacity, and to provide for additional load associated with new services. Council selected Quad 3 firm to design, construct and test the project.

- The council introduced an ordinance to increase electric rates and establish green energy fees. A public hearing and vote on the ordinance will be held at the July 10 meeting.

Students fill pages and announcements with lively commentary

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A Verizon Foundation grant for $19,500 let students at Downes Elementary School learn how to be print and broadcast journalists. "If you give a group of motivated people technology," commented William R. Allan, president of Verizon Delaware, "this is what they can do with it."

Using new laptop computers with wireless Internet connections and a variety of software, the young journalists learned to search online for weather forecasts and other information. Then they wrote news copy and designed and laid out school newsletters, newspapers and magazines. "The second and third graders printed their issues," said teacher Jo Ann Deshon, "and distributed them with great excitement."

In a remarkably able performance, a group of fourth-grade writers, producers and an announcer presented a lively broadcast of each day's news and schedule from the school's main office. Following the Pledge of Allegiance and the weather report, the announcer launched into reminders and others news about the school day. "We will have early dismissal on Friday, June 16, the last day of school," said announcer Vanessa Marionelli a week before the event. "Please remind your parents – you know how forgetful they can be."

Notice about meetings being held and a class picnic in Barksdale Park, "Have a great time, everyone," were followed by the "Today in History" segment. "In 1692, there was a massive earthquake; in 1955, the LUX radio station signed off permanently."

Without any assistance from school staff, the producers watched the time and pointed to items on the sheet held by the announcer as she progressed. Within a few minutes, Marionelli wound up her broadcast with a crisply professional, "That's the scoop for today, June 7th."

Principal Denise Schwartz said the computers are allowing students to develop skills with e-mail and the Internet, word processing and graphics, and spreadsheets and databases. "It's awesome to watch...students go on computers and research a subject or fact by themselves," Schwartz said. "These children are going to go on to greater things as a result of the use of this technology."

A cart on wheels takes the wireless computers from classroom to classroom for work sessions in each grade. Schwartz said the school librarian trained the teachers on the care of the laptops. "On the first day, we found one of the wires had been cut, just from closing the door on it," Schwartz recalled.

Students also use their new computers to review – and in some cases, teach – math and science concepts and skills. "This partnership with Downes Elementary is helping Verizon carry out its mission to build more literate and vibrant communities," Allan said.

Schwartz noted that the MBNA Foundation also provided funding for computers. "We were able to get 17 computers through Verizon, and MBNA gave us funds for the rest – we didn't even have to write a grant for it," Schwartz said.

First International Night at Bayard

BAYARD School in the Christina District had its first International Night in May. More than 200 parents, students, and friends came to see 42 classrooms with displays about countries researched by students in grades 1-6.

Each classroom had a different country to research. Some students chose a classmate's country like Nigeria, fifth-grader Matthias Ojo's homeland. Other classes chose countries where their teachers were born or had visited. Students explored foreign culture, geography, music, dance, clothing, and food.

Another fifth-grader, Simone Howie, learned about the Forbidden City in China. "It was fun learning and working with others to put this project together," Howie said.

Parents helped students cook traditional fare at the event and students also performed traditional dances and wore native clothing.

"It was an exciting evening seeing all the work that the students put into this project," said Tim Werbrich, a fifth-grade teacher and coordinator of International Night. "It made our world seem a little smaller."

"The students that compete for these scholarships have dedicated themselves to achieving a high standard of academic excellence," said Donna Myers, program administrator for Delaware Higher Education Commission. "There is a great deal of pride felt during the review process when you realize how committed these young people are to their education and communities."

Daniel Strouse, Newark High School, and Elizabeth Torres, Delcastle Technical High School, were among 1,572 high school seniors from around the country receiving a $1,000 scholarship as part of the Burger King Scholars Program.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, in the first decade of the 21st century as many as two million qualified high school graduates from low and moderate income families will not attend college because of financial barriers. "Too many qualified students are missing out on the opportunity to achieve a higher education because of financial constraints," said

Steven M. Lewis, co-chairman of the Burger King/McLamore Foundation. "This is our chance to make a difference in the lives of those promising young scholars."

Since 2000, the Burger King/McLamore Foundation has awarded more than $10 million in scholarships to students. Graduating seniors throughout the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada are eligible for the scholarships. Students are selected based on their grade point average, work experience, financial need, co-curricular activities and community service.

Scholarship funds come directly from company-owned and franchise Burger King® restaurants throughout the country. For more information and scholarship applications in 2006, visit www.burgerking.com/bkscholars or call 305-378-3186.

Video violence and the Bible

By MARVIN H. HUMMEL

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

While the mothers were schmoozing in front of the broccoli and cauliflower bins, their children were having their own cola klatsch near me at the mushroom bin. The kids were "tweeners," representatives of that age group the advertising industry loves to exploit so much!

They were unanimously bemoaning their mothers' "dragging them along" to the grocery store to buy food. After exhausting that topic, two of them added a new complaint: they were being forced to attend daily Vacation Bible School. This announcement was met with a universal groan, expressions of profound sympathy and suggestions that this bordered on child abuse.

Adjectives poured forth about this imminent religious training: "lame," "totally boring," "dumb," "stupid" and "dull" were the favorites. Then the Bible as a topic was dismissed and the tweeners turned to a "hot" new topic — video games!

While they couldn't agree on the best game, the kids were obviously aficionados of the genre. Their criteria for excellence consisted of violence and plenty of it — armed robbery, murder, dismemberment, wars, kidnappings and general mayhem. "Awesome," "bad!," "amazing," and "really, truly EVIL!" (Bad, of course, is good, as is evil.)

Their mothers approached, and the cola klatsch was over; as the kids disbanded and started to follow their various mothers to the frozen foods, dairy and pet foods, one last over-the-shoulder shot was fired: "Well, have a nice time at daily Vacation Bible School!"

The mother asked, "What was that all about? Why can't you kids get along for five minutes?" The cars and the mini-caravans went their separate ways, perchance to meet again at the cash register. I moved on to the baby carrots and romaine lettuce.

The Bible — "Lame?" "Dull?" "Boring?" How could the tweeners possibly use those adjectives to describe the Bible?

Using the kids' stated criteria for "excellence," I did a quick, offhand survey of some of the goings-on in the Old Testament. Just a sampling, of course.

First, we had the original brothers Cain and Abel. God for some reason didn't like Cain's veggies and loved Abel's lamb as a sacrifice. (I looked pensively at the carrots and mushrooms in my cart.) Abel wouldn't lend his brother a lamb, so Cain killed him!

And there's always Jehu. He hated Jezebel the queen and had his buddies throw her out of the palace window, at which time Jehu ran over her with his chariot! Jezebel's blood spattered all over his horses and the wall. Then he let the dogs eat her — and by the time they finished munching, all that was left of Jezebel were her skull, feet and the palms of her hands! Violence!

Then there was Commander Sisera: his army had lost and he was trying to escape. A woman named Jael offered to hide him in her tent, but when he fell asleep, she took a hammer and drove a tent spike through his head and into the ground! In warm blood!

Did the kids like bloodbaths? How about the Passover? They liked sibling rivalry? What about Joseph and his brothers? Or Jacob stealing his brother Esau's inheritance? And if the tweeners liked "gruesome" as much as they claimed, how about King Ahaz? He made his son run into the fire and get burned alive. The kid was a pagan sacrifice!

Did the kids think their teachers were too fussy about "proper" pronunciation. In the Book of Judges, you had to pronounce the word "Shibboleth," and if you botched it, they cut off your head. (That's being a little too finicky!)

Did they like sassy loudmouths? (They gave considerable evidence of that during their cola klatsch.) How about Amos? A little nobody, he barged into a big religious celebration at Beth-el and told off the king and his rich friends — Amos really let them have it! Still, he might have made it out alive; but he called their bejeweled trophy-wives "cows." Were they fat? Or just utterly stupid? Or both! Good old Amos — he told it like it was!

I was nearing the checkout counter, so I tried to drop the subject. I told myself, "Forget all the biblical murders and despoilings and fratricides and patricides and the little pieces of Jezebel hanging from the dogs' teeth. Just put your stuff on the counter, pull out your Special Customer Card, write your check and get out of here!"

How did the tweeners make out in Daily Vacation Bible School? Did they get excited by all the terrific blood and gore and think of inventing a biblical video game? Or did they refuse to eat their vegetables and then claim they had religious sanction; and, when Mom had a fit, did they refer to the book of Genesis as their biblical proof? I'll never know!

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week, "Out of the Attic" continues a months-long series of photographs taken in the early 1950s of all buildings on Main Street in the downtown area. This treasure trove of nostalgia is borrowed from archives in the City of Newark municipal building. Few details were discovered with the color slides but it is believed the photos were made by Leo Laskaris in 1954. Readers who have a historic photo and would like to share it with other readers are invited to loan their photos for reprinting in this space. Special care will be taken. For information, call the Newark Post, weekdays, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 737-0724.

Reader identifies old home

James Eubanks of Newark identified the house pictured in the June 23 Newark Post as the home he lived in with his family until he was about 15 years old. Eubanks said his father and grandfather worked at the barbershop pictured on the first floor. His bedroom, he said, was right above the shop. Eubanks called the house, built in the 1700s, a "grand house" and said it even had a dumbwaiter.

Insignia of Italians on dime protested

Somebody has started a story to the effect that the use of the fasces (a symbol of a magistrate's power in ancient Rome, but a symbol of fascism in modern Italy) and the Roman god of commerce, Mercury, on Uncle Sam's 10-cent piece mean that the Italian Fascist movement is gaining headway in the United States.

Scores of letters on the subject are being received by the Director of the Mint from all parts of the country.

Officials of the Treasury Department explained Monday that the design of the 10-cent piece was adopted fifteen years ago, before anybody in America had ever heard of fascism or suspected that the fasces appearing on the reverse side of the dime would be the emblem of the controlling force in Italy.

The design was executed by Adolph Weinman, now sculptor of the Fine Arts Commission.

Rush on for lifeguard at Price's Run pool

Contrasted with the Gilbert and Sullivan song, "A Policeman's Lot Is Not a Happy One," is the lot of a lifeguard, at the municipal swimming pools. Whether the lot of the lifeguard is a happy one is, of course, a matter of viewpoint.

While the lifeguard, as a rule, is a youth of sturdy figure and one which will command the attention and patronage of the manufacturer of bathing suits, still he has duties to perform other than rescuing small boys and maidens who

Verizon hopes to expand cable service through Delaware

► VERIZON, from 1

Reidy cited a January 2006 study by Bank of America that showed when Verizon introduced its new TV-service to a region, other cable providers responded with competitive measures. Customers who mentioned Verizon's service to other salespeople had their prices reduced, according to the study.

"Obviously, with more competition in the market, all residents will benefit," said Reidy.

But competition, according to Jeff Alexander, Comcast spokesman, is nothing new to this market or industry. "We aggressively compete on a daily basis for video, phone and Internet customers in Delaware," he said.

Competition comes in the form of satellite TV and various Internet service providers, he said. "Competition is not a new scenario for Comcast," said Alexander.

Verizon is hoping to expand its cable franchise throughout Delaware. Newark is the fifth municipality in Delaware to grant Verizon a cable franchise. Other towns include Bellefonte, Delaware City, Odessa and Townsend. The company has filed a franchise application with the Delaware Public Service Commission to serve unincorporated areas.

The service, which Verizon hopes to have up and running in Newark by 2007, will use a fiber-optic technology to connect individual homes and businesses, replacing the copper wires that connect customers to the Verizon network now.

Fiber-optic systems use strands of glass fiber and laser-generated pulses of light to transmit voice, data and video signals at high speeds. Verizon claims the network will have greater reliability and lower maintenance costs.

Already, some Newark residents have access to the service. Several Fairfield residents spoke in support of the franchise application at Monday's meeting, saying they appreciated the new services and competitive prices.

The city of Newark will benefit from the franchise agreement by receiving a complimentary government access channel, a grant of up to $20,000 to support the channel and five percent of annual gross revenues.

Comcast is in the process of launching a government access channel here. Alexander said

Channel 22 is nearing completion, but a few technical adjustments need to be made.

Reidy said, instead of providing a separate access channel, Verizon would work with the city and Comcast to ensure Verizon customers receive the same program content.

Federal bill may change franchise laws

A federal bill that was passed this month by the House of Representatives and is awaiting conference and committee resolution may change the role of municipalities in granting franchises.

Currently, cable companies negotiate local franchise agreements with local governments, as Verizon just did here in Newark. But some communications companies interested in expanding their video services would like to change that process.

If passed, the Communications Opportunity, Promotion and Enhancement (COPE) Act of 2006 would allow companies to seek a national franchise from the Federal Communications Commission. The national franchising system would take the place of the local franchises that currently exist.

venture beyond their depth in the pools and whose safety is their first duty.

The yen for a suntan among the fair sex is the latest worry of the lifeguard. Many young women who are compelled to remain in the city during the summer and cannot acquire the tan at the seaside resorts repair to the municipal pools for a daily swim and the resultant tan.

Not content, however, with the tan only extending to the shoulder lines of their bathing suits, many young women yearn for a tan that will cover the most of the upper portion of their bodies.

Two of these, Monday, patronized the Price's Run Pool. After disporting themselves in the pool for a time they waded ashore and loosing the straps over their shoulders, lay down on the bank to acquire a tan. They fell asleep, and apparently inadvertently their bathing suits slipped down until they reached the waist of the young women.

An amazed lifeguard discovered them and suffused with blushes and greatly embarrassed, he approached them and with a gentle push with his toes, prodded them into wakefulness. "If you want to bathe here," he said, "you will have to put on more clothes." Embarrassed in turn the young women hastily adjusted their bathing suits and made a quick trip to the locker rooms where they donned street attire and left.

swelled to over 10,000.

That's certainly what it should be for an event of this stature. The game has been recognized nationally as one of the best all-star games held anywhere.

Sure, there are more highly attended all-star football games in the country. But none has more impact on lives than the one held right here in Delaware.

There are events all over the state that allow people in all three counties to become involved. It really is an amazing event.

It's nearly impossible to find somebody that was involved in any aspect of Blue-Gold that didn't come away raving about the experience. Look how many coaches jump at the opportunity to coach again in the game. Look how many players come back to watch in their old jerseys.

DFRC executive director Tony Glenn and his entire staff cannot get enough appreciation for the work that they do.

It's a uniquely Delaware event and it's uniquely wonderful. A little rain couldn't possibly spoil that.

Cloverbuds thrive in summer camp

By DORIS BEHNKE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

THIS past week on the grounds surrounding Townsend Hall on South College Avenue in Newark, something big happened. In the larger scheme of things, what happened may have gone unnoticed — no seismograph registered, no trumpets sounded, no Geiger counter ticked — yet what took place will change lives. Children at the 4-H Cloverbuds week-long summer program discovered the three Cs: camping, camaraderie and commitment, while learning about themselves and the world around them.

Sponsored by Delaware 4-H, Cloverbuds is the pre-4-H group for 5- to 7-year-olds. If asked what they liked about the camp, most would agree on fun and new friends. However, they may differ about their favorite camp activity, which included viewing the galaxy and learning about planets and stars, taking part in food experiments that introduced basic chemistry, slipping down a water slide, netting and identifying insects and nature-related art projects.

Sounds like any summer camp, you say. Yet what makes 4-H camps atypical is that they represent just a small part of a greater program of youth development and life-skill lessons. What kids experience in 4-H prepares them to become responsible citizens who will continue to contribute to society long after their 4-H days are over. In fact, it is common for former 4-Hers to credit 4-H

Young cadets crack the case

36 teens attend Newark Police Department youth academy

By SARAH SHERMAN

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

THE crime scene has been sketched and the evidence has been examined. Now, cadets with the Newark Police Department have one thing left to do: pinpoint the criminal.

"Excuse me, sir," says one cadet to "Elkton," a homeless man who camps out near the crime scene and refuses to give his real name. "What's that on your shoe? It looks like blood."

"It's jelly, man," says Elkton. "I had a peanut butter and jelly sandwich."

"Where'd you get the sandwich?" demands the cadet.

"The VFW. They gave it to me," Elkton tells him, calmly.

"Uh, are there any more left? I'm kinda hungry."

Clearly, this conversation was not a typical exercise in law enforcement training. For the fourth consecutive year, the Newark Police Department hosted its Youth Police Academy June 19 to 23. Thirty-six kids, ages 12 to 17, worked with law enforcement officers and civilian employees for five days to learn the realities of those who "protect and serve" through live demonstrations and hands-on activities.

Cadets spent their first day in a classroom setting learning about evidence collection, equipment, discipline and physical fitness. The next day, cadets put their knowledge to the test when the organizers set up a mock crime scene, complete with evidence, suspects to interview and photos from the scene. Suspects, like the program's coordinators and other staff members, were volunteers from the law enforcement community.

Corporal Dave Young plays the role of the victim's best friend as the red squad digs for information about the crime.

Cadets also visited a shooting range to work with the police department's entire arsenal of equipment, learned defensive tactics, made mock car stops, traveled to Washington, D.C. and Virginia, and tackled a challenge course at Camp Saginaw in Oxford, Pa.

"We want to make these kids better citizens through education, fitness, and discipline," said Officer Frank Besaw, who took the lead in physical fitness training. "We don't just emphasize cops — there's paramedics, the fire department, and civilian employees, too. We try to show them the reality of how things take place, and we want them to know that you can't work by yourself — this includes a community."

Other staffers agreed, expressing the importance of learning to play different roles within a team.

But while the cadets learned plenty of valuable lessons, volunteers were sure to remember that these were kids just looking for a way to enjoy the summer. "While it sounds tough, this is not a boot camp. It's fun for them," said Lieutenant Thomas LeMin.

Master Corporal Ed Thomas agreed. "We have kids that come back because they like it so much. They bring friends and tell others

Newark's 'best kept secret' displays world's minerals

UD museum is a cool find

for hot days

THE Mineral Museum of Newark, aka, the Irénée du Pont Mineral Exhibit at University of Delaware, is a vibrant rainbow journey around the world. Better yet, it's free. But first, you must find the museum.

I found it, by accident, surfing Yahoo.com for "tourist attractions in the Newark area." That was the easy part. Then, I had to find the physical museum.

I stopped at a couple of UD offices along Academy Street, asking, "Do you know where..." No one did. Two helpful secretaries tried finding it in the UD directory. At last, I was directed to the UD Geological Survey, and they pointed me in the right direction.

"We get that all the time," said Kimberly Hanson, the museum's interim assistant curator, of the museum being a difficult find. "It's the best kept secret in Newark."

The Mineral Museum is located at 112-Penny Hall, 301 Academy St., next to the Perkins Student Center and UD Public Safety. It's part of UD's museum network, along with the University Gallery and the Paul R. Jones Collection.

The Mineral Museum's exhibit of 550 specimens is part of a larger collection donated to the University by Irénée du Pont, and several other donors, for the sake of research and instruction by the geology department.

DuPont bought the mineral collection in 1919 from Tiffany in New York City. Between 1919 and 1929, he searched for additional specimens. When he died in 1963, his collection went to the university, where the minerals were first stored at the library. In 1970, the exhibit room in Penny Hall was finished, and the collection moved from the library to the museum space within the geology department. The core of the university's collection is duPont's original collection, but the university has been adding to the collection ever since.

The best minerals are kept in glass cases on permanent display. The geology department uses the rest of the collection for "Intro to Rocks" classes. Pieces have been loaned to researchers around the world. For example, a doctor in the Netherlands requested a look at a one mineral the museum housed.

The museum is "just" one room, but there are innumerable minerals, separated by type — sulfates and chromates, phosphates, arsenates and vanadates, calcites, halides, borates, quartz and more.

The stones on display have spectacular colors. One of the first specimens I saw was an incredible piece of gold. Hanson said the piece was called Seaweed Gold. I had to laugh. It did look like a piece of seafood. Also there is a startling piece of copper that originally belonged to the Baroness who was the patroness of Florence Nightingale.

One section displays minerals of Pennsylvania and the Delmarva Peninsula. Pieces include the Goethite, named after the German philosopher Goethe, that was found by a UD student on a field trip to Iron Hill. The Goethite is an example of the iron ore that gave Iron Hill its name.

The Mineral Museum has the Delaware State Mineral, Sillimanite. A beautiful stone, it looks like the side of a mountain sliced open. Sillimanite forms in geological conditions of high temperatures and high pressure. Delaware's Sillimanite can be found only in New Castle County, in places such as Brandywine Springs State Park, where this particular specimen was formed.

Each mineral at the UD Mineral Museum is labeled and lists the country, city, state, mine and/or park, where the rock came from, along with the person who donated the mineral to the exhibition.

To do the exhibit justice, take time to look at each mineral and see where in the world it came from to rest in Newark. The museum is well worth the trip — around the world, without leaving your hometown.

Hours vary by semester. For info, call 831-8242 or visit www.museums.udel.edu/mineral.

4-H leaders standout

► OUTLOOK, from 8

with influencing important life decisions surrounding career, family and community awareness.

One thing that makes 4-H stand out among other youth groups is the 4-H leaders — also known as mentors, cheerleaders and friends. These volunteers are vital to the success of 4-H. Jumping in with both feet, these leaders demonstrate a commitment that sends a powerful message to our young people. It says I am in your corner, I am concerned about you and I am committed to your personal success. With that type of solid support, inhibitions are lost, confidence is found and anything is possible!

There is no one kind of 4-H leader. They are women, men, young, old, business people, teachers, scientists, homemakers and college professors. They come from cities, suburbs and farms. Each leader brings unique perspectives, individual interests and talents that keep 4-H growing with the times while remaining grounded in tradition. Whether a person's specialty is sewing, computers, public speaking, photography, astronomy, animal sciences, engineering, sheep rearing, wildlife conservation or entrepreneurship, the experiences of 4-H leaders naturally broaden the scope of 4-H activities and the lives of the kids they touch.

When asked why they give of themselves and their time so generously, these volunteers will say their greatest reward is in the faces of 4-Hers. Leaders say they witness many metamorphoses as the shy and timid become leaders in their own right — increasingly self-confident, enlightened, inspired and enthusiastic.

If you have a talent you would like to share and time to give to tomorrow's leaders, consider becoming a 4-H project leader. Contact check out the opportunities on the Web at

"I also think it's good for police officers to give back. The kids have a role model this way. The extra effort and time we put in is worth it," he said.

Volunteer who overcame disability helps others

► HONORED, from 1

and said, "There is absolutely no way that I'm going to be picked." Everyone here deserves this award as much as I do."

Her voice choking with emotion, Carrieri-Russo revealed that at the age of five, she overcame a mysterious and potentially fatal illness that left her with a learning disability that only her family and close friends have known about.

"I overcame the disability with perseverance and determination. It took many, many years, and I still have to work even harder in school; I have to read things twice, three times, four times," she said. "Now I feel gifted that I am able to help others and hopefully stamp out illiteracy in my lifetime."

Fighting back tears and pausing for more applause, Carrieri-Russo paid tribute to her parents, Vincenzo and Johanna, her sister, Margherita and her brothers, Italo and Vincenzo Jinny, all of whom attended the awards dinner.

"Thank you, mom and dad," she said. "You two are the ones that made me who I am today. Everything I've learned. You've taught me to strive for the best, to set goals and achieve them. I will never forget what you have done for me. I am so happy you are here to support me today."

Newark Mayor Vance Funk III, who joined the Carrieri-Russo family at the event, said the national honor reflects the spirit of volunteerism that has grown in Newark. Carrieri-Russo was one of the City of Newark's five nominees for the Jefferson Award.

"For the past two years, volunteerism has increased to an incredible level among the university students," Funk said. "It's fitting that a university student like Vincenza Carrieri-Russo receives the national honor, which she richly deserves."

The Jefferson Awards program, established by newspapers, radio and television stations in 1972, honors individuals for their contributions to public and community service. The Wilmington News Journal sponsors the program in the Delaware region.

Carrieri-Russo and Susan McNeill, a 1986 UD graduate who runs her own public relations business in Pike Creek, conjured up the idea for Success Won't Wait three years ago. Carrieri-Russo was teaching McNeill's daughter dance, and McNeill would always bring books to read to her son.

The project began with a basket of children's books she collected to put in the dance studio. Success Won't Wait has mushroomed into a major effort to encourage literacy and reading with books distributed to schools, doctors' offices, community centers, learning centers and residential libraries.

With help from volunteers and local businesses, Success Won't Wait has collected more than 30,000 books for children, as well as for adults, including 1,000 for troops in Iraq, 2,000 for penal institutions and 1,000 to replace books lost by the Hockessin Library during Hurricane Isabel.

With support from Marianne Green, assistant director of UD's Bank of America Career Services Center, Carrieri-Russo organized a book drive on campus last fall that netted 2,000 more volumes for the project.

DE insurance commissioner ready to answer storm-related questions

In wake of the heavy rain-fall and flooding in Delaware earlier this week, Insurance Commissioner Matt Denn said his office is ready to answer questions and assist with insurance problems. Residents should call 1-800-282-8611 for help.

Questions that came into the office Monday morning, said Denn, included what damages would be covered by standard homeowners and auto insurance.

Many Delaware residents have learned from their insurance companies that the homeowner insurance policy does not cover flood damage, said Denn.

Homeowners must have a separate flood insurance policy, most of which come from the federal government, to be covered.

Unlike with homes, auto insurance often covers flood damage, but only if the policyholder has a comprehensive coverage. Comprehensive coverage is not mandatory in Delaware, but is often required by banks as a condition of obtaining an auto loan.

"We constantly try to get the word out about the need for a separate flood insurance policy for people's homes. This week-end's storms are an unfortunate reminder that floods can do serious and expensive damage and many people are not covered for it," said Denn.

For more information about federal flood insurance, visit www.floodsmart.gov or call 1-888-379-9531.

Charters not given capitol funding from state

ter schools do not receive capitol funding from the state.

Using data from the 2002-2003 school year, the Delaware District and Charter Revenue Analysis conducted by Aspire Consulting of Washington, D.C., determined that regular district schools received $7,477 per student while Delaware's 13 charter schools received 33 percent less with only $4,929 per student. For a copy of the full report, visit PublicCharters.org.

"Funding of $750 per student doesn't completely resolve the disparity," Hudson said. "But charter schools have always done more with less and we believe this number is about right."

State Senator David P. Sokola (D-Newark), a co-sponsor of the Bill, said everyone should be concerned about the classroom effects of the current funding disparity. "Now that our revenue estimates have been increased by more than $100 million," Sokola said last week, "we can afford the roughly $5 million required by this legislation."

According to House spokesperson Stephanie Mantegna, students and staff supporting the bill came from: Campus Community School; MOT Charter School; Providence Creek Academy; Marion T. Academy; Sussex Academy of Arts and Sciences; Delaware Military Academy; Academy of Dover; Thomas Edison Charter School; Eastside Charter School; Newark Charter School; and Pencader Charter School.

The Delaware Charter Schools Network is a non-profit association of Delaware's charter schools. For more information, visit Decharternetwork.org.

Great time to be a sports fan in the U.S.

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

What a great time to be a sports fan in Delaware or anywhere in the U.S. The Fourth of July holiday weekend is upon us, and if you are any type of sports fan, you'll have plenty to watch all weekend, and all summer long, either on television or in person. Think about it! Let's start with the World Cup. Whether you are a mild or avid fan, you may witness the best players in the world playing probably the most popular sport on the planet.

O.K. So the U.S. team got bounced out early, but at least they got there. With only four shots on goal in three games, they really need to work on their offense if they hope to contend next time around.

Tennis
Anyone? Wimbledon is getting started this week. Many of the top players in the world, including Roger Federer and Rafael Nadal, and Justine Henin-Hardenne and Maria Sharapova will be on hand, but the Americans should still do quite well.

Andre Agassi, who announced his retirement last week, will be a sentimental favorite, and Venus Williams will be tough to beat, especially if she's healthy.

Speaking of tennis, don't forget the Delaware Smash pros that play in Wilmington — or grab a racquet out of the garage, and visit a nearby park and work on your backhand. When you go to the park,

Blue grid stars top Gold 27-13

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Hodgson Tailback Derrell Smith scored a clinching touchdown with 3:25 left in the game to help the Blue All-Stars defeat the Gold squad 27-13 in the 51st Annual Blue-Gold All-Star held Saturday night at a rain-soaked Delaware Stadium. The crowd was held down due to a torrential downpour, which delayed the start of the game by about 30 minutes.

Smith, along with Howard half-back Kianti Miller, Salesianum's Nick Dominelli and St. Mark's Tim Widdoes helped the Blues amass 399 yards total offense on the night, including 285 yards on the ground. Blue head coach Bill Cole, from William Penn, said it was no accident his team ran for 206 yards in the second half, after committing several turnovers in the first two quarters. Newark's Scott Gardner picked off an errant pass to help thwart a Blue drive with just over two minutes left in the second quarter. Trailing 7-3 at the half, the Blue came out storming on the opening drive of the third quarter. The team went 58 yards in 11 plays, with Penn's Steve Alexander drilling a 28 yard field goal at the 10:12 mark. "We decided to do a little less passing and focus on doing the old-school, smash-mouth football, which, being from William Penn, I love," said Cole. "And when you can run the ball effectively like that, you can control the clock, and keep their offense off the field," said Cole. The Blue defense also took control of the second half, limiting the Gold to under 20 yards net offense after intermission. Gold's only touchdown of the second half came at 6:40 of the third quarter on a two-yard run by Middletown's Chuck Walker. The extra point kick attempt was no good.

UD shuffles athletic department

The University of Delaware Division of Intercollegiate Athletics and Recreation Services has announced a reorganization of administrative staff and responsibilities following the announced retirement of long-time Senior Associate Director of Athletics Mary Ann Hitchens.

The reorganization announcement was made by University of Delaware Director of Athletics Edgar N. Johnson (at right) following Hitchens' announcement in May that she would be retiring on June 30, 2006 after serving 38 years at the University, including 29 as an athletics administrator, the last eight in her current position.

The reorganization, which will take effect beginning July 1, will include two current administrative positions being retitled, the addition of three new administrative positions, and the elimination of Hitchens' position as well as those of a staff assistant and an operations specialist.

"Mary Ann Hitchens has had so many roles and responsibilities with the athletics program and did them all extremely well throughout her career," said Johnson. "Replacing her with one administrator would be impossible. It has always been our philosophy to promote from within when possible. We have many talented administrative staff

The Gold scored on a three-play, seven-yard drive off of a Blue turnover to take a 13-6 lead. The Blues then went on an 80-yard march, capped by Chris Lachette of Brandywine scoring on a one-yard plunge. There was a pass interference penalty on the two-point conversion. On the second try, the Gold stopped a run attempt to keep the lead at 13-12. After Alexander missed a 37-yard field goal attempt early in the fourth quarter, the Blue's offense began to dominate the game. At 10:32 Miller raced 36 yards for a touchdown, with Smith adding the two-point conversion, giving the Blues a 20-12 lead. Smith then capped off the night's scoring with his three-yard touchdown run, and Alexander's PAT made the score 27-13 in favor of the Blue. Cole said cutting down on turnovers was key to the Blue's taking over in the second half.

"In the locker room, I told them both sides have a lot of talent, but we had to minimize our mistakes and we had to control the ball," he said. For his efforts, Smith was named game MVP. Cape Henlopen's Tony Taylor was named the winner of the Blue Hen Touchdown Club's Outstanding Lineman Award. "Sure I wished we won," said Taylor, "But we were playing for the kids, so it's still a great feeling just to play in this game." Newark's Gardner added he would have loved to win his last high school game.

"I still had a great time playing in the game, and all week during camp. The Newark guys even had a chance to hang out with the guys from Middletown and other schools. Overall, I'd say it was definitely a great experience," he said. The Blue now leads the all-time series with 26 victories compared to 22 wins for the Gold, along with three ties.

members who can do the job and in whom I have great trust. It is my hope that the reorganization will be as seamless as possible."

Current Associate Director of Athletics and Recreation Services Kate Pohlig will have her title changed to associate director of recreation services and athletics and current Associate Director of Business and Finance Scott Eatough will have his title changed to associate director of business and external affairs.

Current Assistant Director of Athletics for Facilities and Compliance Susan Groff will assume the new position of associate director of athletics for Internal Affairs, and new managerial positions will be added in the areas of athletics accounting and NCAA compliance later in July.

Pohlig will continue to serve as the Carpenter Sports Building administrator and lead administrator for recreation services but will have added responsibilities as the program administrator for the UD men's and women's cross country and indoor and outdoor track and field programs.

Eatough will continue to oversee all business and budget operations, athletics marketing, and athletics season tickets, but will add responsibilities overseeing athletics media relations, in human resources and personnel, and as program administrator for the UD baseball and softball programs.

Groff will continue to serve as the Delaware Field House administrator and oversee operations, events, facilities, drug testing, and compliance, but will add responsibilities as Delaware's senior woman administrator (SWA), coordinate athletics position searches, oversee summer camps, and edit policies and procedures manuals. She will also serve as program administrator for the UD field hockey, men's and women's soccer, golf, women's lacrosse, and women's rowing programs.

Lots to do over this Fourth of July weekend

bring along a volleyball, soccer ball, basketball or perhaps a set of horseshoes to help get you in good shape. Don't forget golf! There are plenty of tournaments all summer long on the tube. And the state has plenty of public golf courses for everyone to enjoy on a beautiful summer afternoon, that is, whenever the rain stops. See what I mean? Baseball fans have the Phillies, Orioles and Blue Rocks to enjoy, and the Little Leaguers are just beginning their all-star season, hoping for a shot to get to Williamsport, Pa.

There are plenty of other things to do this summer like walking, hiking or bicycling. While you're at it, check out a local pool on a hot day, and work on your free-style or butterfly strokes. So it's great fun to watch sports on television, but let's plan to get outside in the fresh air and sunshine some more this summer. As for me, I'll be playing tennis and going for an occasional swim.

State treasurer issues check fraud advisory

Citizens warned against taking fake checks with treasurer's signature

Delaware State Treasurer Jack Markell, right, reminded Delaware businesses and consumers last week to remain especially vigilant in watching for fake checks bearing the signature of a state treasurer. A recent wave of fraudulent checks has been reported by residents and businesses in other states who are being paid for items with official-looking checks that have been forged with a state treasurer's signature.

"We've had numerous reports of people in Ohio and Minnesota whom counterfeiters have attempted to dupe into accepting fake 'official looking' checks from the State of Delaware for all sorts of items — even new cars," Markell said. "If you have an item for sale, and someone tries to pay you with a local or state government-issued check, be very, very cautious."

Many of the checks have been mailed from outside of the United States and while official looking with an imprint of the state seal and address, the checks often have the amount and payee information handwritten in.

"Generally, the only part of a state-issued check that is handwritten is the signature," Markell stated. "If you have a check and something just doesn't seem quite right, it's always prudent to either call the bank or agency that issued the check to verify its authenticity."

The Office of the State Treasurer has a number of safe-guards in place to prevent losses to the state in situations of attempted fraud, including a "positive pay" system which catches and kicks-out checks from clearing that are suspicious. "We also continue to promote the use of automated clearing house expenditures and purchasing cards to cut down on the use of checks for vendor payments to further reduce the incidence of fraud," Markell added.

Citizens who have questions may call the Delaware Attorney General's Office Fraud and Consumer Protection Division: 577-8600 or toll free 1-800-220-5424.

Financial recovery team watches every penny

Lowery added that the State Auditor's office is "auditing different processes" as well to decide if further financial missteps were made by Christina administrators.

The public and district employees (many making their opinions evident by calling out from the audience while the board attempted to work), brought conflicting concerns to the meeting.

A tech specialist wanted to know how that department would work with "five people doing what 28 were doing" prior to this week's proposed cuts. A Wilmington parent criticized the school board for allowing the state to gain a foothold in the district's daily operations. "Sure, the state is glad to come in here and fix Christina," said Margaret Crosby. "But we voted for you. This ain't the first time we been out of money. Get some backbone."

Crosby also alluded to another concern: how money is spent in district schools in the suburbs versus the city of Wilmington. "One thing [former school superintendent Joseph Wise] dealt with is the racial issue," Crosby commented.

Another teacher pleaded for Title I funding and the HOST (Helping One Child To Succeed) mentoring program to remain at Pulaski Intermediate School. "I'm a city teacher and I've always been a city teacher and I'm proud of it," she said. "Please don't take away our HOST program - remember the city."

A teacher from Keene Elementary School was "concerned about how decisions are being made," while numerous speakers criticized the board and the accounting firm of Alvarez and Marsal, helping to determine where district monies can be saved.

Even a board member voiced concerns about the losses in the technology department at that staff's "busiest time" of the year.

"The reality check," said Lowery in response to Cecilia Scherer's query, "is that these things were paid out of local funds and we don't have any. If the board wants to bring anything back, tell me where else to cut."

Lost in much of the acrimonious discussion, was one number presented more than once by Lowery. "The district added 343 [classroom] positions in the last two years," she stated. "While at the same time, the unit [student] numbers were falling. We have to get within the number of classroom staff set by the state. We're going to lose the extra resource teachers, HOST teachers and paraprofessionals who provided all kinds of extra enrichment and support in the schools."

With that in mind, the board approved Reductions in Force for an unspecified number of secretaries and specialists and announced a salary freeze at 2006 levels for all non-union employees. Lowery also stated that the district is asking union employees to forego salary increases for 2006-07. The district already announced that a salary freeze agreed to by administrators in 2005 will be extended. "Every employee group is going to be touched," she said.

But an impatiently listening audience never let Lowery or the board forget what they waited for more than three hours to hear: What about the administrators in the central office?

As one of the last items approved by the board late Tuesday night, a new Table of Organization showed that only 26 positions remained, down from a high of 61 on the Table published in August 2005.

According to boardmember John Mackenzie, cuts and attrition had already whittled the central office staff to 46 positions as of this week. Two positions on the new Table, assistant superintendent for instructional services and a director of budget and finance, remain vacant.

It was not clear whether Lowery's former staff would be leaving the district or reassigned to schools. But the members of the public, surrounding a newly named assistant superintendent, Edward Bosso, at close of the meeting didn't seem to care. Snatching copies of the new Table, they smiled as they walked from the meeting.

The 2007 budget, already in a hole of $27 million, could not be presented because the Financial Recovery Team is still trying to find more funding cuts in the neighborhood of $9.1 million. That budget is now promised for the next school board meeting on July 11.

In the meantime, the school board will allow the district to continue current spending past the end of the 2006 budget year on June 30. They reassured the public about this unusual step, however. "[No money] goes out of here without approval from the state's Financial Recovery Team," said board vice-president James Durr.

The 2006 Tax Warrant, also due before June 30, will be announced on July 11.
