Tuition rate lowered

by Danny AllDusty

Editor and Chef

For the first time in its history, the University of Delaware has announced a tuition decrease for next semester.

"It was amazing," said University Honcho E. Z. Trombone, who said the funds for the decrease would come from parking tickets.

Trombone said the current tuition for Delaware residents will drop to $4.77, while out-of-state tuition will rise to $3,200 per semester.

"We don't have all the green we need right now," Trombone said, "but with the new aggressive policy on ticketing, we should be able to stick every student with at least $600 in tickets."

Trombone stressed that if the new plans work, tuition will decrease every year while the price of a parking sticker will rise to $5,700 by 1989.

In a related project, Trombone said the university plans to raise library fines an estimated 1,000,000,000,000 percent, bringing the average cost of an overdue book to $137,000 per day. University officials, however, doubt this will decrease the number of overdue books.

When asked about the move, a spokesman for the National Academy of Libraries said "Shhhh."

Students reactions to the tuition decrease were mixed:

"I don't really care what tuition costs," said Dan Sewer, (AS 98) "I just wish I could do something about these parking tickets."

No if, ands, but plenty of butts--On the 15th anniversary of nude week, students respond with a healthy dose of Spring fever recently.

He's GUMBY dammit--and he's the university's newest employee dammit. GUMBY will fill the positions of vice president for personnel and employee relations and head basketball coach. Look for him to attain new heights of plasticity in fulfilling his responsibilities in both spots. What the heck, it's the status quo.

Drinking age abolished

by Fairly Gorgeous

Exlax Editor

The Delaware Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (or debacle for short) abolished the state minimum drinking age today in a radical departure from the national trend.

Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD), Gays and Lesbians Against Drunk Driving (GLAD) and Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) were all outraged at the move. But Drivers Against Mad Mothers (DAMM) expressed great joy.

Bob Weaver, head of DAMM said, "We were all DAMM MADD, GLAD and SADD at the announcement."

Spokespersons for the other camps said, "We were MADD," "We were not GLAD," and "We were SADD."

A resounding cry of approval was heard echoing throughout campus upon release of the announcement.

Dean of Students Jim Crooks said, "I'm GLAD they abolished it now the frats don't have to rush dry--how ridiculous that was."

No tavern owners could be reached for comment, they were all celebrating.

Spring break cancelled Campus rodents said up for grabs

Unpack your bags and take out the books because Spring Break has been cancelled for the first time in university history.

In a surprise announcement yesterday, President E.Z. Trombone said that Spring Break has been found to be hazardous to the health and academic performance of students.

"Our studies have shown," he said, "that this tradition causes damage to brain cells, skin cells and the liver, just to name a few."

Nearly 100 percent of the student population rallied on the mall in front of Hullahen Hall in reaction to the decision. DUSC President Mary Pat-Mary Pat is promoting civil disobedience by encouraging students to carry out their vacation plans.

"The administratorss are foolish if they think they can abolish Spring Break," Mary Pat shouted to the uproarious crowd. "We students need a break and we're going to have one."

"I've been planning an awesome week of beer, babes in bikinis and beaches for months," said Tim McGravy (AS 86). "Those dudes up there aren't gonna take this dream away from me."

Trombone based his decision on the observations of several undercover faculty members who posed as students and spent a week in Ft. Lauderdale. Although they reported having a wonderful time, university medical officials detected sleeplessness, malnutrition, sun-poisoning, sexual fatigue and an outstandingly high blood-alcohol content.

"The condition in which these professors returned is highly unnatural and dangerous to the human body," said Dr. Rick Weber of the Health Center.

Other area schools have not followed the university's example. "We think Spring Break is a great tradition," said a spokesperson from the University of Pennsylvania. "Delaware's study is bogus."

In an interview yesterday, Trombone stated that his decision is for the good of the students and he will not reconsider.

An anonymous source in Hullahen Hall said that Trombone is now reviewing the pros and cons of summer break.

Newark Police are searching for a "sick and demented" university student who has been fondling small furry rodents, a police spokesman said.

The student attacked a ferret near the Rikki Tikki Tavi Memorial Sports Complex on Thursday. The animal was able to escape its assailant unharmed, police said.

During the attack, a witness snapped a picture which police said will help them to identify the student.

"We almost got him the other day sexually harassing a squirrel," the spokesman said. In the past three month, 14 incidents of rodent fondling have been reported, police said.

"This madness has to stop," the spokesman said.

Dipping: pros and cons Office fun or UD tragedy

by Tim Black and Weirder Dialer

Connubial Editors

Dipping in the office is on the rise according to the results of a recent Newsleak Magazine poll.

"Dipping is an integral part of the 9 to 5 routine," said Administrative Affairs Director Ima Romper from her room. "I just can't imagine life without it."

The poll showed that nine out of 10 in the office 'dip', and eight out of those nine plan to dip again.

Six of those nine, or four of those eight, which amounts to 5.2 of the original 10 with an error margin of plus or minus three percent, are married, have dipped and proclaim emphatically that they do not feel guilty about it.

Not all view this trend positively however. I. C. Humper, president of Dipper's Anonymous decried "it." "Flaunting is fun, but filled with flatulence."

Humper claimed her group wants to eliminate dipping from the American way of life. "We fear it is becoming a nationwide trend," she said, "much like the hula-hoop or Mickey Mouse ears were two decades ago."

The couple (whose photograph accompanies this story) advocate daily dipping as prescribed by the Dipping for Health Manual published biweekly from the editors of Time/Life.

"I'm 100 percent more productive in the office after a good dip," said daily dipper Joanie "Happy Days" Cunningham. "It alleviates all of my pent up sexual frustration and lets me forget about everyday personnel pressures."

Rocola and Cunningham dip

Bandit dipper Chachie Rocola, who has a reputation of dipping without warning, just beams from ear to ear when he discusses a good dip.

"I remember a red head I dipped a couple of times," said Rocola, unable to wipe the ---eating grin off his face. "I was a new man for weeks and weeks."

"That's just the thing that really really upsets us," exclaimed Humper.

"My favorite dip," says Cunningham with tears of joy welling in her deep Bambi-like green eyes, "was back in August 1983."

"April 84 was the best ever," said the confirmed dipper who calls the young one her favorite April fool.

As Rocola left for the gym, he said he would continue to dip, dip, dip regardless of the Humper dip.

...police beatings

Police have warned small animals to stay indoors or walk in pairs after dark until the crazed attacker is apprehended.

In other matters, a Main Street bank conducted business operations without incident, according to high FBI sources.

Elated bank officials could be seen hugging, imbibing and counting money collected from bounced student check penalties, officials said.

Local police forces have doubled duty personnel in an attempt to thwart potential robbers and gain O.T. pay.

The Student Center was stolen early Friday morning and all that remained in its place was the wrought-iron chicken which was donated by the class of 1964, according to University Police.

Security guards locked the building at 12:30 a.m. This was the last time it was seen. When dining hall workers arrived for the breakfast shift at 5:30 a.m., they discovered the vacant space.

University Police found the chicken while investigating the scene of the crime. A note was attached: "We know how valuable this is to you, so we decided not to take it."

Domino Sicilian, associate director of student life, was unavailable for comment. According to University Police, he was reportedly working late and was probably stolen along with the building.

Police have no leads on the crime, and are unsure whether it was a university prank or an outside job.

The university is offering a reward for the safe return of the Student Center and Sicilian, although it is not as generous as the sum posted for the return of the chicken last month.

Anyone with information on the whereabouts of the building please contact University Police.

Police are searching for this alleged rodent fondler. The ghastly series of crimes has outraged the community and led to doubts of local rodent fidelity.

UD declares: use your fingers

by Shelly Legweak
Staff Infection

No more silverware for students eating in the dining halls is the official word from Associate Director of Food Service Raymond Silverstone.

"Unfortunately we must raise board rates 50 percent this year," said Silverstone. "We have made many budget cuts to keep the rate-hike to a minimal level."

The first step in trimming the food service budget was to eliminate the "checkers" who sit at the exits. "The purpose of the checkers was to prevent students from walking off with trays, dishes, and flatware," Silverstone explained. "The checkers could not frisk each student and so over the years we have had fewer utensils at the end of each semester."

"We decided that since the checkers were ineffective," he said, "we would fire them all."

Firing the checkers will save food service an estimated $4,000 each year, but this is not enough to accommodate the losses in theft. "What was not stolen was carried off by roaches, which left dining halls with no utensils," Silverstone said.

The board, therefore, decided to eliminate flatware, plates and trays. "Students will be provided with one paper plate per week," Silverstone said. "Students are animals anyway and they probably will not even notice the changes."

Meals will be easier to eat with the innovative food service plans, which will be implemented next fall. The new meals will include a rice platter three evenings a week with either baked or boiled potatoes one evening, and a pasta platter (minus messy sauce) highlighting the week.

"Dinner will be the only meal served and it will be easier for the students to eat," said Silverstone.

The salad bar will also be reorganized, according to Silverstone. It will include grass clippings and scallions fresh from the university's lawns along with an assortment of "fingered" food.

Students will be able to choose from two new meal contracts next semester. The first will include the food previously stated and for an extra $200, vinegar and oil salad dressing will be added to the plan.

"Food service administrators decided that because tuition rates will be lowered," Silverstone said, "this was their chance to make more money."

IF YOU SEE NEWS HAPPENING CALL THE REVIEW

The Joke's On You

Okay, we did it again.

Once again, to mark the passing of April Fool's Day, the editorial staff of The Review has assembled to produce a preponderance of the most tasteless, ludicrous and ridiculous jabs at everyone who deserves to be laughed at, including ourselves. All in good hearty jest, of course.

The factors that produce this parody issue range from spring fever (since none of us are very good at baseball) to just plain deadline fatigue. Face it, we're just as sick of producing the same slab of seriousness every week as you are of reading about how much isn't happening in Newark. So when the issue of an April Fool's parody edition came up in a recent staff meeting, those whose names are contorted below voted resoundingly to cut loose and yuk it up.

After all, as a particularly erudite professor recently pointed out, "Sacred cows make the best hamburger." The names, of course, have been changed to protect us from the libel lawyers, but any resemblance in this issue to actual persons, living or dead, is a darn shame (and purely satirically intentional).

And what if the content of this comic collaboration should offend our gentle readers? Fooey on you. If you can't take a joke, don't read a joke. The most vicious satire has, after all, been aimed directly at the creators of this newspaper. The administrators and other university folk who have unwittingly become targets of this grand jest, genteel as they are, have valiantly withstood this lampooning annually. We just couldn't disappoint them this year.

And so, with awesome respect for this annual tradition and while under the influence of Old Milwaukee, the staff got together to laugh at the world.

But fear not. When we return from Spring Break, The Review will shift back to serious mode (somewhat, anyway) to once again report what's happening at the university. The news content will be up after break anyway, as the university saves all its news for release while we're on vacation.

Cheers go to our photo staff, who scavaged through endless files of film to gather or create the silliest pictures ever taken for Review purposes, and for all those who wrote simply to make people laugh. Humor is a justifiable end, even if the means to achieve it are tasteless.

So relax, read and enjoy. If in doubt, don't take anything in this issue with a large measure of seriousness. We certainly didn't.

letters unwelcome

The Review discourages letters from just about anybody. After all, pushy, arrogant left-wing elitist sensationalist media pigs like us don't take criticism anyway. We're sick of it. We've got enough critical letters to last a millenium. We don't need yours. Everybody's on our case, and for once, we're not taking it. So save your Crayolas. If you have to write somebody, put it in a bottle and heave it at high tide, OK?

Dear Crabby

Dear Crabby,

I'm leaving for Ft. Lauderdale at 3:00 p.m. today and my girlfriend doesn't know. She expects me to spend break with her and her family doing stupid things like visiting relatives, playing Trivial Pursuit and watching the reruns of "What's My Line."

I already have reservations, and if I tell her I'm going to Florida, she'll break up with me. I don't want to lose her because she is a chemical engineering major and I know one day I can live off her earnings.

I want to go to Florida because all I hear about is the beautiful blondes who are looking for love. What should I do?

--A horny boyfriend

Dear Horny,

Bag the wench and go to Florida. After all, you only live once and you've got to grab all the gusto you can get. While you are at it, bring back some gusto for Dear Crabby.

Dear Crabby,

My girlfriend and I have been going out for six months and have recently begun pitching woo (no, not the lieutenant governor). She told me that she was on the pill, but unfortunately I didn't know she meant Tylenol.

Now I face the prospect of fatherhood, and I can't take that responsibility. What should I do?

--A desperate father-to-be

Dear Desperate,

I know someone who wants to unload reservations to Ft. Lauderdale, and since you've decided to be a whimpering coward, I suggest you take them. As they say, "Life sucks and then you die." Next time try celibacy.

Dear Crabby,

I have been a cook in an East Campus dining hall for 15 years, but that's not my problem. Lately my conscience has been bothering me. I have leprosy and AIDS, and nobody knows.

I'm a widow supporting five crippled children, and there's a baby on the way. So far no one has been harmed by my diseases (I think). Should I tell my boss?

--An Infected Cook

Dear Infected,

No. The life of a student isn't worth getting worried about. Your leprosy and AIDS can't be any more harmful than cheesy spinach squares.

Dear Crabby,

I am 21-year-old junior. I'm on the rugby team, I have a 3.6 GPA, people tell me I have a great personality, and I'm not bad looking. My problem is that I can't seem to get a girlfriend and I can't understand why. Could it be because I have two heads?

--Looking for sympathy

Dear Looking,

Brilliant deduction, Sherlock. No sense in losing your head over this, or maybe that's what you need (ha ha). But as they say, two heads are better than one (ha ha). Seriously, though, take one guillotine and call me in the morning.

What a day. There we were, sailing in steerage and what does Mother do? Complain that I haven't washed behind my ears lately.

"Ye'll never grow up to be a clean lad, ifin ye don't warsh behindin yer ares," she said in that soft Irish voice of hers.

"Jiminy crickets, Mum," I exclaimed as I slapped my straw hat against my breeches.

My father, trying to fix a small leak in the boat with a handkerchief, just looked over and said, "Listen to your mum, lad."

Our family has been one big happy one since we boarded our ship the S.S. Jelly Fish in Ireland. We are headed for America. The Land of Dreams and Hopes.

One of my younger brothers is teasing one of my sisters by holding her over the side of the boat. She was telling one of her stupid jokes when were eating our cabbage soup and potatos and instead of going "Nyark, nyark, nyark" like he normally does, he decided to reduce our family by one.

It is a hot day down here in steerage, but at least the room was ready like Father said it would be....

We bought a new car today. Father and Mother went for broke and bought a Model T for $500. Our first big family trip will be to the city of Newark where I will be attending school this fall.

On the ride down, Mother kept telling me how to drive the car.

"Slow down and keep your eyes on the road."

"If you would just leave the driving to me, we'll be fine."

"Don't talk back to me and stop changing the radio. Leave it on one station or I'll pick the station."

Great. If I hear "We Are the World" one more time, I will go crazy.

On the ride down to Newark, we were tied up in traffic on Interstate 1.

"This is your fault," she cried as we came to a screeching halt just outside the Philadelphia city limits. "If I miss my weekly quilting bee, you can walk home next time."

That's my mom--Mother of the Year.

I plan to take a couple of courses in journalism at school and I hope to write for the school paper...

Here the article ends. Apparently, Gaywho was thrown from his vehicle after hitting a pot hole that had not been filled. History records his only comment as being "Dat dang ding dust ahh jummed in ahh mie ahh wae ahh."

TIRED OF ALL THE BS

ReviewIdiot-in-chief Danny All Dusty, is driven out of town by staff members, university officials and enraged readers as a result of his announcement that The Review will convert to a daily.

"We've given all we can," said Marginal Error Loss Gaywho, "but he expects even more." "All Dusty pictures himself as an 18th century slave owner," Gaywho said, "but he's only human and we proved it."

"We've been thinking about this since Winter Session," said Exlax Editor Fairly Gorgeous, "but we had to find the right moment."

According to Gorgeous, the right moment occurred after All Dusty covered the death of Konstantin Cherneko. "All of a sudden," Gorgeous said, "he pictured himself as the supreme ruler and attempted to turn The Review into a communist regime."

All Dusty ran unopposed for Idiot-in-Chief in December after the departure of former Idiot-in-Chief Kant Worry.

"He figured since he ran unopposed," said Crappy Editor Keg Badyear, "he had nothing to worry about." However, the staff had something else in mind," said Badyear.

"It all started," said Creatures Editor Earnest Hemingway, "with his trip to Montreal for a Shotokan Karate Convention in February. He must have taken some mind-altering drugs," Hemingway said, "because I've seen some strange reactions, but this was something else."

All Dusty was rumored to have walked around the room using karate moves on any editors who were late for deadline.

"I was two minutes late," said Nerds Editor Tim Black, "and he kicked me in the crotch and throw me out a second story window."

All Dusty is currently working as a union buster for the KGB under Russian President Mikhail Gorbachev.

DUSC brought Under Control

by Lois Lane
Staff Reporter

DUSC changed its name to Derelicts Under Student Control at their meeting Monday, according to President Mary Pat Christie.

"We kept the initials for convenience," Christie said, "but the name is now more representative of what we stand for."

Along with the new DUSC name, they elected a new elections committee chairman. President Ronald Reagan was forced to step down due to his inability to deal with budget deficients. Replacing him will be former Alpha Tau Omega President David ToMorrow.

"My experience with the Judicial Board and Newark zoning codes," he said, "makes me more than qualified for the position."

Seniors and juniors can look forward to a social on the president's lawn in May. Seniors will be sporting their new senior slogan t-shirts "We're graduating, You're not!" at the social.

In an interview before the meeting, however, university President E.Z. Trombone said seniors may not graduate in June as planned.

"Due to financial and scheduling problems, graduation might have to be postponed until August 30," Trombone said. "Sorry about that."

A resolution to form a new organization was also reviewed by the derelict members. The Blue Chicken Roadrunners Club, formerly the North Campus Running Club, collided with Wylie E. for DUSC approval and is now a registered organization. (Beep! Beep!)

Said Christie, "Expect to see these roadrunners run on the road all day."

Also running through campus at the end of April will be Delaware's friendly neighborhood congressman, Tom Casper. He will speak on the disappearing financial aid.

GOODBYE TO YOU

New service puts an end to walking

Earnest Hemingway
Creatures Editor

University President E.Z. Trombone was the first human being to use the newest form of inter-campus transportation--The Cannonball Express.

Director of Transportation and Dean of Students Slim "Orville Wright" Snooks said, "We ruined seven second-string Blue Hen football players before we got the kinks worked out--too much gunpowder and it's teeth, hair and eyeballs. Phewww, I'm talking grody to-the-max."

"Just plug in the right coordinates," grinned the eyebrowless Snooks (a condition resulting from a powder flash, he explained), "and BOOM, we'll get you within a hundred yards of any given point on campus."

Snook's flight crew is composed of volunteers from the university's DB-ROTC (Drop Bombs Right on Them Communists). Rumor has it that during slack time they intend to shoot left wing students at "them damn pinkos demonstratin' on Main Street."

Trombone's test flight was almost snag free. As he waited for the firehouse's hook and ladder truck he shouted a jubilant message from high atop Memorial Hall. "Slim said within a hundred yards and, afterall, I was going to Hullihen."

"The beauty of this system is the cost," said the slightly singed university pundit. "I probably won't have to raise tuition more than $500 to $5000 per student, in order to pay for it."

Newly elected lieutenant governor and university professor, B.O. Poo, said, "This could be a huge breakthrough. I'm going to mention this to Governor Hassle--I call him Mike--as a means of circumventing the summer traffic crunch in Lower Delaware. Gunpowder is a lot cheaper than gas."

Snooks whooped with glee when he heard Poo's statement. Swinging a wickedly blazing firebrand overhead he stomped stray sparks and gleefully screamed, "ALLLLLL AB000AARD."

Benny Mayhew: A legend in his own mind

Staff infection by Sharing McCrudy

by Mot Tnarg
Creatures Editor

Popular English comedian Benny Mayhew brings his wit, charm and stories about his family to the Undergrowth this Tuesday at 8:00 p.m.

Mayhew, known for his biting Swiftian satire, has been entertaining crowds ever since he burst onto the scene at the famous Bucks County bar, "Get Drunk and Die."

His act includes a look at campus security, zackly breath and a visit to Captain Bob's neighborhood.

"These college kids, just love me," said Mayhew. "If it weren't for comedy," he said, "I'd probably have to go into journalism."

Mayhew's television show, "The Life and Times of Benny Mayhew," first appeared in 1982 on public television and has since been syndicated in over 52 countries, including New Jersey.

Mayhew said that television has been a big factor in his success, but he prefers the stage. "There's nothing like livecomedy," he said.

Mayhew first appeared at the university in 1982 and the university entertainment committee has been trying to get him to return ever since.

"He was such a hit," said a spokesman for the committee, "that students have been calling everyday to see if he will ever come back."

One student, Ima Twit, said that Mayhew's first appearance was the best entertainment the university has offered in four years. "I joined his fan club," Twit said, "right after that first appearance."

Opening for Mayhew will be Newark's newest up-and-coming rock band, The Zacklies, whose first album, Scum Bag, has quickly moved up the charts.

There is no cover for the show. In fact, Mayhew will pay you to attend.

"Let's face it," Mayhew said, "fame doesn't last forever."

Bu Fant throws hat into ring

Former Delaware Gov. Pieheir bu Fant IX announced today that he will run for president in 1988. Bu Fant held a news conference at the Fear Park in Newark to announce his candidacy.

Bu Fant also introduced his running mate, Review Managing Editor Loss Gaywho, to a crowd of over a dozen people.

Bu Fant was confident that the ticket would win approval from party leaders.

"I got to say that we have the best ticket. I know my wife will vote for us and I'm sure Loss' parents will too, once he stops writing about them," bu Fant said. "So, that's what, three guaranteed votes? Heck, another five or ten and we'll have Delaware locked up."

Bu Fant went on to stress that he was counting on Gaywho to swing the young vote.

"I'm sure the kids will vote for him. He's one of them. They can relate to him. Just the other day, I had to tell him to take out the garbage five times," bu Fant said with a smile.

Gaywho summed up his feelings by saying, "Gee, this is the first time I've ever been to the Park without being thrown out. It really is a nice place. I'll have to eat here one time."

Bu Fant and Gaywho then left the Fear Park and headed for their next speaking engagement, a luncheon in their honor at the Scrodney Dining Hall.

around town

If you're planning to leave town for Spring Break, you may want to rearrange your travel arrangements so that you can catch all the action in Newark this weekend.

Of course, the most exciting event will be the free U2 concert at the Main Street Cabinet. Tickets are still available, and with an opening act like Tina Turner, this is quite surprising. If you haven't got tickets for the sold-out Spectrum shows, don't be left out on the Unforgettable Fire tour.

Saturday afternoon should prove interesting if you're into debates. The Student Center has two of them. In the Rudeney Room, President Ronald Reagan will be slugging it out in a verbal brawl with his wife, Nancy. Topics for discussion will include credit card shopping and bathroom etiquette.

In the Pat Ewing Room, Lionel Richie and Bob Geldoff will be discussing their involvements in the Ethiopian Relief Campaign. Richie will maintain that his venture was purely social and in no way commercial, while Geldoff plans to question why the Pepsi slogan, "It's the choice we're making," is included in the lyrics of "We Are the World."

Saturday night has Junior Kevin Houang opening for the Police at the Fear Park. Asked why the Police chose the D.P. to end their long hiatus, lead singer Sting replied, "Why, to work with Kevin, of course. We just couldn't pass up the chance."

If you're looking for a party, stop by President E.Z. Trombone's house for a "Sacramento" party, featuring live performances by Frankie Goes to Hollywood and The Village People.

And to welcome everyone back, the office of the president will sponsor the "World Series of Rock and Roll" on Easter Sunday on the Mall. Among groups scheduled to appear are the Rolling Stones, the Kinks, Bruce Springsteen, the Who, David Bowie, Eric Clapton, Van Halen and Barry Manilow.

Said a spokesman for Manilow, "He's ahh soo ahh excited dat ahh he ahh can't da hardly ahh wait to ahh get dere."

Swaydzee takes licking, watch keeps ticking

Earnest Hemingway

Creatures Editor

In every lifetime there comes a moment of truth which requires every shred of will and determination a person can summon and more.

John Cameron Swaydzee's last hurrah was a heroic example of a man facing life's challenges.

A giant in the advertising world, Swaydzee is best remembered for his watch commercials in which he was often heard to say: "Dimex, it takes a licking and keeps on ticking."

This morning, with an $11 Dimex strapped firmly to the top of a fluorescent orange crash helmet Swaydzee entered Memorial Hospital minutes before it was destroyed by demolition experts. When last seen he was stuffing dynamite in his vest pocket.

The gutsy senior citizen was rapidly emptying a Jack Daniels bottle which he said he intended to use in making a Molotov cocktail. "Just one more sip and I'll have 'er," he said.

Swaydzee and the Dimex undoubtedly took a tremendous licking. The question is are they still ticking?

Doctors, using a sophisticated listening device, have detected what they believe is the grinding gears and ticking of a cheap watch, but no heartbeat. Alas, this could truly have been Swaydzee's last hurrah.

Mickey Mouse, whose cheesy face has adorned numerous wrists, was on the scene when Swaydzee entered the hospital. "John just wasn't satisfied strapping watches on motorboat propellers and skis," squeaked the sobbing rodent. "He was determined to take it to the limit to test his and the Dimex's metal."

"Well," Mickey said, "I think John's warranty has expired."

A spokesman for Dimex said, "John always knew this could happen, but it never stopped him. He just kept right on devising grueling tests for our products. We intend to dig until we find him. Anyway we have to get a picture of the watch. He would have wanted it that way," he concluded.

Silly's wrasslers make Albino see red

Staff infection by Sharing McCurdy
RING AROUND THE ROSY....WE ALL FALL DOWN-- Coach Paul Silly (in the mask) catches Captain Low Albino after leaping off the top rope and goes on to lead his "Chicken Corps" over the WWF.

by Muhammad Alivere
Staff Infection

NEW YORK-- The recent incorporation of the rock and roll industry and the World Wide Wrestling Federation has now infiltrated the ranks of college wrestling.

It has been learned that while the East Coast Conference wrestling championships were being held at Hofstra University earlier this month, Delaware's wrestling team was nowhere on Long Island.

Where were they you ask?

Reliable sources at the National Enquirer report that certain Hen wrestlers, along with Head Coach Paul Silly, traveled not to Long Island, but to Madison Square Garden to participate in a (WWF) Wrestling Spectacular.

Calling himself Silly "The Kid" and his Fightin' Chicken Corps, Silly issued a challenge to the WWF, in particular, Captain Low Albino.

The always reliable Enquirer reported that Albino and Silly were teammates on the 1956 Muhlenberg College wrestling Team.

Albino and Silly were to wrestle to see who would represent Muhlenberg in the Middle Atlantic Wrestling Championships, but Albino had never beaten Silly in head to head competition.

So on the day of their match, Albino slipped a package of circular shaped Extra-strength Ex-Lax in Silly's Cocoa Puffs (which he eats before every match).

While Silly ended up spending the day on the throne instead of winning one, Albino wrestled in his place, but ended up being disqualified for using chloroform on his opponent.

Saturday night at the Garden, Silly decided to settle the score.

The feature matchup pitted the reigning WWF tag-team champions, Rowdy Roddy Piper and "Mr. Wonderful" Paul Orndorf, against Delaware's Dave "I Always Win by" DeFault and Tim "Downright and Dirty" Doherty.

It was a bloody and grueling match that saw all four men waging war in the center of the ring. DeFault seemed to be assured of a pin after applying his patented Fireman's Carry on Orndorf.

Just as the referee was about to signal a three count, Captain Low came barreling over the top rope, flying off the turnbuckle, hitting DeFault in the head with a chair.

Meanwhile, Doherty and Piper were slugging it out until Piper pulled a foreign object from his trunks and nailed Doherty on the forehead.

Doherty merely grinned, flicked the blood off his brow, and headbutted Piper, sending him sprawling through the ropes onto the concrete floor.

Silly then entered the melee, grabbed the chair from Albino and returned the favor.

Silly picked the dazed Albino up over his head, got him in an airplane spin, and body-slammed him down on top of Orndorf yelling, "I still got it."

The referee, not knowing what to do, counted to three, declared DeFault and Doherty the new tag-team champions, and Silly had his revenge.

Athletic Director Headgear Johnson announced yesterday that Silly will resign his duties at the university effective immediately to pursue a career as a backup singer for Cyndi Lauper.

Silly will be featured in a new Lauper song entitled, "Hens Just Want to Have Fun."

Captain Low, who has spent the last month in traction, in a New York City hospital, had this to say, "This thing ain't over, it ain't over by a longshot, nobody makes a fool out of Captain Low, but me."

The whole idea behind a filler is to make sure that there are not any blank spaces in the paper, because then we would look pretty dumb.

So, next time you see a little ad or clip about the March of Dimes or the American Heart Association, you'll know that's a filler.

Thank you.

New coach named

by South Paw

Assorted Spotes Editor

The nation-wide search for a new men's basketball coach to replace recently fired, Ron Sunny has ended and a 'proven whiner' has been found, according to reliable sources.

Again, in a move to avoid holding a press conference, the word was accidentally leaked-out that head football coach Stubby Ray was to be named as the new basketball coach.

"I don't know how the word got out," said Athletic Director Headgear Johnstone. "We try to do things professionally, but we can never get it right."

Headgear said that after sorting through an impressive list of applications, which included some big time 'proven whiners', he realized the best man for the job was "right here in Newark."

"The other applicants were definitely proven whiners, but none of them whined like Stubby," said Headgear.

"Stubby has been whining here for years," he continued. "He's familiar with our program, and he knows what to whine about."

Stubby said the promotion was the highlight of his career so far, and something he has been aiming for all of his life.

"Basketball is the number one sport here (at Delaware), and I just consider myself lucky to be thought of as a whiner."

"Besides," continued Stubby, "The Review devotes year-round coverage to basketball."

Headgear said that he was happy to get someone with such whining experience as Stubby after his first choice decided not to accept the job.

The position was originally offered to ex-Laxers coach Paul (Not) Eastbound, who was quoted from his California home as saying, "From a distance, Delaware looks good."

However, after visiting the university, Eastbound said, "Up close— things did not look as good."

"I took one look at the Fieldhouse and asked, 'is that it?'" explained Eastbound. "Besides, I couldn't find a parking space, so I went back to California."

Stubby said he was glad the ex-Laxer coach turned down the job, which allowed him to install a new offense he's been working on.

"The wing-T made football a winning tradition here," said Stubby. "And I plan to use that same theory on the basketball court."

Stubby said he did not plan to make any changes other than the Wing-T and choosing a special basketball public relations man.

"I've decided to offer the job to Andy West," said Stubby. "He (West) doesn't know a lot about football, but he sure knows basketball."

West said he and Stubby could work well together because they've been 'whining' at each other since way back.

"Stubby's definitely the best man for the job," said West. "He's a 'proven whiner,' and he's taught me everything I know about whining."

Headgear said he was happy to see Stubby and West teaming up to bring the 'whining tradition' to Delaware basketball.

"I only wish I could have made the official announcement before the word leaked out."

From the Coroner

Death of a Mascot

As the university's athletic community tried to pull itself together after the bizarre, senseless, downright dasterly (if not downright silly) murder of its beloved cape-clad mascot, D-Man, a tragic story of mascot jealousy began to unfold.

The new mascot, still wearing his blue and yellow tights, had been found swinging by his cape from a Henhouse basket early yesterday morning. It was first thought that D-Man's cape had accidentally gotten caught on the rim when he went up for a slam dunk.

But an autopsy revealed incriminating beak marks and some blue feathers not to mention the fact that D-Man had a vertical leap of only three inches. The evidence led police directly to Delaware's oldest mascot, The Chicken.

"I'm glad I did it," squawked The Chicken as he was dragged into Newark Police Station. "He had no right to be out there. I was here first."

In an anonymous interview with a friend who was close to both mascots, the pieces of the tragic tale began to fit together.

Unknown to the public, the two mascots had become bitter rivals during football season, continually fighting for the spotlight. There was one particularly ugly incident when the marching band started screaming for The Chicken to dance but D-Man joined right in, stealing the show with an incredible John Belushi imitation.

In a fit of rage, The Chicken attacked D-Man, trying to strangle him. But the heavily alcohol-influenced crowd thought it was part of the show and cheered wildly.

The mascots' relations became even more strained during basketball season in the crowded Henhouse. The two finally confronted each other again when they both tried to start The Wave at opposite ends and collided at midcourt.

Ded Smith

"That was the last straw," said the friend. "It just couldn't go on like that."

It was then that D-Man secretly decided to accept an offer from the University of Sri Lanka to be their soccer mascot. But things went bad there right from the start.

"The first time the crowd saw him in his blue tights, they started belting him with beer bottles and a huge riot started," said the friend. "It lasted three days and they had to call out the army to end it."

"The next game he tried to start The Wave but they thought he was making an obscene gesture at the crowd," he continued. "That riot lasted a week."

It was the first time D-Man had been rejected and he quickly became disillusioned.

"He was depressed," said the friend. "He couldn't take it anymore. And when he had to put that 'S' on his cape, people kept thinking he was Superman and tried to stuff him in phone booths."

The facts are sketchy after that, but as far as police can tell, a despondant D-Man returned to Newark late Wednesday night where he ran into The Chicken in the Henhouse parking lot.

The two argued as The Chicken egged him on (sorry) and then pulled a gun out from under his feathers. But the bullet only winged D-Man (sorry again).

It was then that The Chicken resorted to his beak, bringing D-Man to a fowl end. (Yeah, I know, I know. It's corny, but somebody had to write it.)

UP, UP AND.....FORGET IT—Delaware's basketball star, Oscar Meyer, demonstrating that he's more than just an athlete, is shown here auditioning for the lead in a production of Peter Pan. He tried to impress the judges by leaping off the stands and flying across the stage. The judges were so astounded that they cancelled the rest of the auditions and gave Meyer the part on the spot. Unfortunately though, Meyer won't be released from the hospital until after the show's run is over.
