Democrats John Carney, Bethany Hall-Long and Lisa Blunt Rochester swept the state elections on Tuesday, each overcoming their Republican challengers for decisive victories.

U.S. Rep. Carney bested Colin Bonini, a GOP state senator from the Dover area, to become Delaware's next governor by grabbing 58 percent of the vote over Bonini's 39 percent.

Carney got his start in politics as a staffer for then-Sen. Joe Biden. He then served as deputy chief administrative officer for New Castle County and as Delaware secretary of finance in Tom Carper's administration. He served two terms as lieutenant governor and was

DART institutes new Newark-to-Dover bus route

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

A new DART bus route from Newark to Dover is intended to help workers commuting between New Castle and Kent counties.

The new Route 302, which makes a stop at Amazon's distribution center in Middletown, began Monday.

Delaware Transit Corporation spokeswoman Julie Theyerl said the service marks the first Newark-to-Dover bus route since a similar route was disbanded a number of years ago.

Locally, the bus makes four rush-hour stops each day at the Newark Train Station, the park and ride lot at the corner of Routes 4 and 896 and Peoples Plaza. It then continues south, stopping in Middletown, Townsend, Smyrna and Dover.

The full route from Newark to Dover costs $7.80 per trip or $16.50 for a daily pass. Shorter trips are cheaper.

Departure times include: (Newark Train Station) 6 a.m. 7:55 a.m., 3 p.m. and 4:55 p.m.; (park and ride) 6:04 a.m., 7:59 a.m., 3:04 p.m. and 5 p.m.; (Peoples Plaza) 6:15 a.m., 8:11 a.m., 3:16 p.m. and 5:15 p.m.

The new route is the second one created by DART to accommodate Amazon workers. The first, which runs from Wilmington to Middletown, started last year.

"They had a big demand for transportation service," Theyerl said, noting that data about the company's workers showed the biggest demand is in Wilmington and the Route 13 corridor. "Newark and Dover were also big markets."

Integrity Staffing Solutions, which hires workers for Amazon, helped fund the original route's first year of service, and DART is currently in negotiations with the company to continue sharing the cost of the service, Theyerl said.

GPS stolen from car on Prospect Avenue

A resident living on Prospect Avenue is missing a GPS unit after someone stole it out of an unlocked car last week, police say.

According to Sgt. Gerald Bryda, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the theft occurred sometime between 12:30 p.m. Nov. 1 and 11:20 a.m. Nov. 2.

Bryda said the thief took a Garmin GPS worth $50 out of the victim's car, which police believe was left unlocked as there were no signs of forced entry. Bryda said there are no suspects or surveillance footage, but police are still investigating.

Picnic table stolen from resident's backyard

Someone stole a homemade picnic table from a backyard in the Christianstead neighborhood.

According to Newark Police spokesman Sgt. Gerald Bryda, the theft occurred sometime between noon and 4:30 p.m. Nov. 3 at a home in the unit block of Hidden Valley Drive.

Bryda said a neighbor told police she saw a box truck outside the home during the time of the theft and three or four men standing around the truck, although she didn't think it was suspicious at the time.

The table is estimated to be worth $100. Bryda said police are still investigating.

Laptop stolen from One Easton

A resident of One Easton apartments is missing his laptop after he left it unattended in a common area.

According to Sgt. Gerald Bryda, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the theft occurred sometime between 3 p.m. Oct. 29 and 1 a.m. Oct. 30 inside the apartment complex located behind the Newark Shopping Center.

Bryda said the victim didn't report the theft until Nov. 4, when he told police he left his MacBook Pro – worth $1,300 – unattended for several hours.

"It was initially thought a friend might have the laptop, but that was not the case," he said.

Bryda said there is no surveillance footage of the incident and police do not have any suspects at the this time, although the incident is still being investigated.

Martin Honda has proposed building a new service center at the corner of Marrows and Ogletown roads, land it currently uses to store vehicles.

Planning commission OKs car repair center on Marrows Road

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

Martin Honda may soon be opening a car repair facility on Marrows Road at the site of a former Shell gas station.

Last week, the planning commission voted unanimously to recommend city council approve the plan, which includes annexing and rezoning the property at the corner of Marrows and Ogletown roads and allowing the company to construct three new buildings for auto repair and service.

According to Planning Director Maureen Feeney Roser, each building will include first-floor service space and partial second-floor office/sales space. A three-story parking structure with 359 spaces is also proposed for the site.

Roser said Martin Honda is currently parking vehicles on the property, and there are existing service garage facilities there that will be demolished if the plan is approved by council.

Part of the 4.2-acre site lies outside the city, but the applicant wants it annexed into the city and rezoned to BC (general business) so it can be combined with the rest of the property, which is already zoned BC.

If the rezoning is approved, Roser said, the applicant will need a special-use permit from council in order to operate an auto repair and service center in a BC zoning district.

Martin Honda currently operates Honda, Mazda and Kia dealerships on Cleveland Avenue. The company's service center is behind the Honda dealership and will be relocated to Marrows Road if the plan is approved by the city.

Shawn Tucker, a lawyer representing the dealership, said the current repair facility would be demolished, and the site would be paved over to use for additional car storage.

The dealership buildings would remain unchanged, as will Martin's body shop on Cleveland Avenue.

The plan now moves to city council for consideration.

UD announces project to digitize old Newark Post issues

Papers will be included in nationwide Library of Congress database

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Old newspapers provide a treasure trove of information about a town's history, and thanks to a new project by the University of Delaware Library, historians, genealogists and members of the general public will soon have an easier way to access archived copies of the Newark Post.

Library officials announced this week they have received a grant to digitize decades-old copies of the newspaper, which was founded in 1910 by Everett C. Johnson.

The papers will become part of the Library of Congress' Chronicling America project, which already contains more than 11 million pages from hundreds of newspapers around the country.

Molly Olney-Zide, interim head of UD's Center for Digital Collections, said her team will focus first on the years 1910-1922. A possible second phase could include issues published from 1923-1963.

The library already owns most issues of the Post on microfilm. Over the next year, library staffers will send the microfilm to a third-party company to be duplicated and digitized and will then proof the digital files before forwarding them to the Library of Congress.

The files should be online by the end of 2017, Olney-Zide said. The library is also digitizing issues of the Middletown Transcript and two defunct newspapers, the Wilmington Daily Gazette and the Delaware Republican.

Digitized pages, which will be fully search-

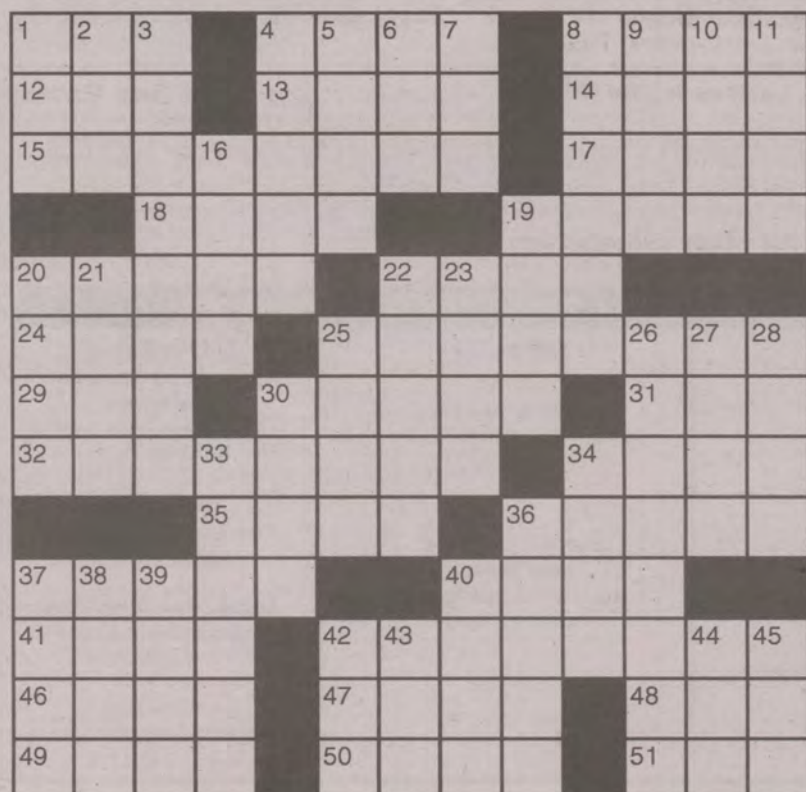

This October 1913 issue of the Newark Post is among hundreds that will be digitized by the University of Delaware for inclusion in a Library of Congress project. Lead stories in this issue included Newark Trust Company opening a new bank, a 12-year-old girl suffering fatal burns after tripping while carrying an oil lamp and the Newark Cannery processing 950 tons of tomatoes.

able, will be available at chroniclingamerica.loc.gov as well as <http://udspace.udel.edu/handle/19716/9949>. Both are free and accessible to the public.

The UDSpace site already contains downloadable PDFs of many back issues of the Post; however Olney-Zide noted that the association with the Chronicling America project will make the pages more accessible to researchers across the country as well as increase the amount of pages available.

Newark Rotary Club members spent Saturday morning at Newark Shopping Center collecting supplies for the Newark Empowerment Center.

Rotary members 'Stuff the Bus' for Newarkers in need

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

With the help of dozens of community members, the Newark Rotary Club stuffed a school bus with donations for Newarkers in need on Saturday.

The big yellow bus was parked at the front of Newark Shopping Center, and Rotary members spent the morning accepting donations of coats, blankets, toiletries and nonperishable food.

The club spread the word ahead of time by reaching out to various community groups, but some of the donations came from shoppers who saw the event and then went to one of the stores in the shopping center to purchase items to donate, club member Renee O'Leary noted. Volunteers offered free coffee and snacks as a way to draw attention.

"You can't buy the feeling in your head and in your heart," O'Leary said.

One of those donors was Jerica Hall, who saw the bus and then went across the parking lot to Goodwill to buy clothing to contribute. Her four young children helped her drop off the donations.

"It sets that foundation that it's not just about yourself," Hall said. "You've got to think about others."

The donations will go to the Newark Empowerment Center, which is housed at Newark United Methodist Church on Main Street. On weekday afternoons, it provides meals and hygiene kits to anyone who needs them and also organizes the Code Purple shelters during the winter.

On an average day, between 20 and 40 people visit the center. Each year, the center serves approximately 800 different people who need supplies, help paying rent or assistance finding other resources.

"Anything that helps fill that need is a real plus for them," director Marc Marcus said.

Nathan Millman, president of the Newark Rotary Club, said he hopes the Stuff the Bus fundraiser becomes an annual event.

"The best thing is we've had three people who have used the Newark Empowerment Center stop by and tell us their stories," Millman said. "That's the touching part. It makes it all worth it."

Christina Zampitella, one of the Rotary members volunteering Saturday, said she can identify with the people who will receive the donated supplies.

"Some of us grew up receiving support like this," Zampitella said. "Having it come full circle is so rewarding."

Out of the Past

Editor's note: Volunteers at the Pencader Heritage Museum have been digitizing old Newark City Council meeting minutes. They share excerpts with Newark Post readers in a weekly column.

April 1929: The Red Men's Fraternal Home finally paid its assessment for curbs and gutters; no mention of sewer assessment payment. Delaware Ledger Company was reminded to repair the pavement in front of their building on South College.

The roof and rain gutters on town hall were in bad shape, so bids were sought for tin roofing and for asbestos shingles. Mr. Ferguson's houses fronting on Academy Street sidewalks had faulty gutters, allowing water to fall on passersby, and he was instructed that they must be repaired. A fire hydrant was needed at the extreme east end of Main Street.

May-June 1929: Changes to 1929 property assessments had Dennison Motors on Haines Street raised from $1,000 to $1,500 and Diamond Ice Company's poolroom lowered from $2,000 to $1,000. The tax rate was kept at $1.10 per $100 of assessed property value.

Officer Wideman's motorcycle was damaged in an accident. The cost of 140 feet of curb on Kent Way was $140.

A referendum was authorized to obtain citizens' permission to borrow $65,000 to pay off an old note and spend the rest on street improvements. Dr. Mawes was told to remove cleats when driving his tractor on improved streets.

Eight drums of calcium chloride were ordered. Asbestos shingles for town hall roof cost $440. An extra man for street work was hired at 40 cents an hour.

Council donated $10 to the permanent memorial fund. (This may have been to memorialize World War I veterans.) A town map was donated to the high school.

See the original minutes at Pencader Heritage Museum, 2029 Sunset Lake Rd. (Rt. 72 south of Newark.) Regularly open first and third Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Other times by appointment. Contact the website pencaderheritage.org or call 302-737-5792 for an appointment. Family friendly, handicapped accessible and always free.

Frustrated voters lament lack of options

By SARAH GIBSON
Special to the Post

As the sun rose Tuesday morning, Newark voters were already standing in line at their local polling locations, ready to cast their ballots. Bundled up in coats, scarves and hats, they trudged into buildings across the city, hoping their political voices would make a difference.

Candidates and voters reported strong turnout throughout the area.

Outside Newark High School, Sarah Barsky, 35, said she planned to vote for Hillary Clinton.

"I'm not entirely sure that I think she's best, but I think she's better than our [other] choice," Barsky said. "I think she has the experience, I think she has the credentials and I think she has at least some solid plan to help see us to the future. Not sure about our other candidate."

Barsky said a small part of her was influenced by the fact that Clinton is a woman.

"It's just exciting to have someone that's running that I think has a really strong chance of winning and is a woman that could potentially be in the White House," Barsky said.

sky said. "Trying to put everything else aside, politics and everything else, I think it's exciting for our country to have a woman possibly as president."

Ken Grant, 47, voted for Gary Johnson, the Libertarian candidate for president, and Lisa Blunt Rochester, the Democratic candidate for House of Representatives. Grant worked as the communications director of the Republican Party of Delaware from 2001 to 2006.

"I used to work for the Republican Party, but quite frankly I could not bring myself to vote for Donald Trump," Grant said. "If I felt like it was close, I would have actually voted for Secretary Clinton instead, but I believe we need more activity in the third parties and they need more exposure, so one little vote, there it is."

He decided to vote for Blunt Rochester for Congress because he's known her for years, including when she served as the secretary of labor for Delaware.

"I've always been impressed by her, I've always liked her policies and I think she would make an excellent representative in Congress," Grant said.

"I'm so tired of voting for the least evil, but it's what we have to do."

Shawn Fitzpatrick
Newark voter

George Miller, 74, and Amy Earls, 60, both voted exclusively for Democratic candidates.

"Because Trump's such an hole," Miller said.

"He's scary."

"Can you say something printable, dear?" Earls interjected. "The Republicans have already hurt the country, and it's just going to get worse."

Both supported Rochester for the congressional election.

"I really like Lisa Blunt Rochester because she's the first black and the first woman to represent Delaware in Congress, that would be great," Earls said.

Shawn Fitzpatrick, 48, was disillusioned with the names on the ballot.

"I wish this [sticker] said, 'I vomited,' because none of the choices were appealing and there wasn't a single good candidate at the top of the ballot," he said. "The more interesting stuff locally ended up being skewed by personal knowledge of people that were running."

Voters head into the polling place at Downes Elementary School on Tuesday morning.

Fitzpatrick still showed up to cast his vote for Hillary Clinton, despite his disappointment.

"I ended up pulling the lever for Clinton, because she was the least vomit-worthy, the least evil," he said. "I'm so tired of voting for the least evil, but it's what we have to do."

Steve Beard, 64, stood outside the Newark Free Library to represent Democratic state representative candidate John Kowalko. Beard respected the Delaware rule that all non-voters remain 50 feet away from the voting building, passively wearing his Kowalko t-shirt and politely greeting voters as they exited the building.

"I have to say that I'm voting against somebody, to keep somebody out of office, more than I'm voting for somebody," Beard said. "I'm not enthusiastic about Hillary Clinton. But Donald Trump, I never liked, even before he was a candidate."

Nick Valdes, a 23-year-old Ph.D. candidate at the University of Delaware, voted Democrat all the way down the ticket. As a material science student, Valdes voted for Hillary Clinton because she supports renewable energy.

"Also, the [Democratic candidate for] governor seems to be supporting environmental efforts, so I approve that as well," Valdes said.

Elizabeth Grant, 27, planned to vote Democrat straight down her ballot ticket. She used to work in the state legislature in Dover.

"I'm gonna go straight 'D' today," she said. "I was initially a Bernie Sanders supporter, because he just sounds like a real person when he's talking. I would have preferred him, but I'm fine voting for Hillary."

Newark cop's state Senate bid falls short

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

James Spadola, a corporal in the Newark Police Department, fell short in his bid for a state Senate seat Tuesday.

Longtime incumbent Harris McDowell won 56 percent of the vote, while Spadola won 44 percent. The District 1 seat represents parts of Wilmington, Bellefonte and Claymont.

"Our team lost the election but won the process," Spadola said Tuesday night. "We had a great time challenging ourselves."

Spadola, best known in Newark for his "Hug A Cop" video that gained widespread attention last year, acknowledged early on that he was in for a tough fight going against an entrenched incumbent and running as a Republican in a district that heavily leans Democratic.

Republicans make up only 20 percent of registered voters in the district.

"To peel away 44 percent of the vote, we should all be very proud of ourselves," he said.

He congratulated McDowell on running a clean campaign but lamented the substantial advantage incumbents have in local politics, calling it a "disservice to democracy."

"Once you're in, it's a snowball that keeps rolling downhill," he said.

Spadola will return to his job at the police department but said he plans to stay involved with politics in his district and hopes to again run for office.

"I'm not going anywhere, that's for sure," he said.

Ramone, Osienski and Kowalko retain state house seats

By GRACE MCKENNA
Special to the Post

Three Newark-area state representatives — Republican Michael Ramone and Democrats Ed Osienski and John Kowalko — retained their seats with ease on Tuesday.

In District 21, Ramone won a fifth term with 82 percent of the vote, compared to Green Party candidate David McCorquodale's 18 percent.

"The biggest thing I try to do is to be accessible," Ramone said Tuesday night. "People come to my bi-weekly coffee hours, to my house or my business for questions. They come when they need me."

He attributed the win to staying focused on his constituency and ensuring that he was never distracted from their needs.

"If you lose sight of your constituency by trying to do other things, then the people start to ask you why you weren't there when they needed you," Ramone said.

In District 24, Osienski defeated newcomer Timothy Conrad 69 percent to 31 percent to earn a fourth term.

"I'm totally happy and grateful that the district came out and voted that 70 percent today and honored my representation," Osienski said.

As for the future, he plans to continue as he has already done, listening to the people who have chosen him.

"I will continue to represent them with my best ability," Osienski said. "Today I worked at the polls and greeted voters. I'm there for them and I return their calls, so I really do believe that attention to their issues and concerns is the reason for the overwhelming response today."

Conrad did not return a call seeking comment.

Kowalko won a sixth term with 69 percent of the vote. Newcomer Michael Nagorski took 31 percent.

Kowalko said he is happy to know that statewide results turned out well for Democrats and he hopes that by having two more years, he can achieve some of his more long-term goals.

"We need a fair taxation system and we have to have government transparency," he said. "With government transparency, we need corporate LLC transparency. We need to know the identity of the corporate owner and not be in a place of guessing."

Nagorski said that even though he entered the race late, people were showing some concern with their current representative, which influenced his campaign.

"With more time and more money, I believe I would have done better," he said, adding that he may run for office again.

He hopes to continue to influence his community from where he is, hoping to better education, which he said comes up no matter who is elected.

"I will help small business in Delaware and I will help better education," said Nagorski. "You don't have to be an elected figure to better the community."

5th-graders: Trump, Clinton could learn a few things about civility

Brader student council candidate: 'We were more courteous'

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Sometimes, it takes kids to show how things should be done.

As fourth and fifth-graders at Brader Elementary School stood up in front of their peers to give their student council campaign speeches Nov. 3, there were plenty of promises, exclamations of school pride and applause lines.

However, there was one thing noticeably missing: the negativity that has plagued the national elections this year. That, teacher Glenda Flowers said, was exactly as it was planned.

"We wanted them to understand how an election should be run," Flowers said, noting that the presidential election has been a hot topic in the classroom this fall.

The message was not lost on the students, all of whom focused their speeches on what they would do if elected, not on their opponents' shortcomings.

Brader presidential candidate Annie Loy said she has one piece of advice for Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump: "Stop yelling at each other."

Her classmate and presidential opponent Cheyanne Sutton agreed.

"We were more courteous," she said. "They're just always arguing with each other."

One of the pint-size politicians said his adult counterparts at the national level should act their age.

"They're being 5-year-olds," Harry Scheinberg said, noting that he ran for Brader's vice president position because he admires Vice President Joe Biden.

Brader Elementary School student Rileyann Curtis gives her student council campaign speech.

He ran on a platform of ending bullying and creating activities more inclusive of the special-needs students in the Delaware Autism Program and REACH program who attend Brader.

"They're Tigers just like us," he said, referencing the school's mascot.

He also promised, if elected, to advocate for replacing the school's water fountains.

"They're smelly and not very appropriate," he said.

Several of the other students also touched on respect and ending bullying.

"My goal is to inspire everyone around me to be a better person," Haley Roca said as she campaigned for student council treasurer.

Damya Wright told her classmates they can count on her to be a "super president."

"I will make sure all students are respected and treated with kindness," she said.

Other students found creative ways to stand out.

Ryan Rapport went to the podium and popped a balloon.

"Now I have your attention," he noted.

He added that, if elected, he will be accessible to his constituents.

"I like to wear bright colors, so you'll know where to find me," he said.

Yohan Djan started his speech with some tough love for his classmates.

"Lots of students in this school have been hard on the teachers," he said, prompting laughter among the faculty.

"Some have been saying they're too mean or too strict. But to be honest, sometimes it's you. Give them respect, and they'll give you respect."

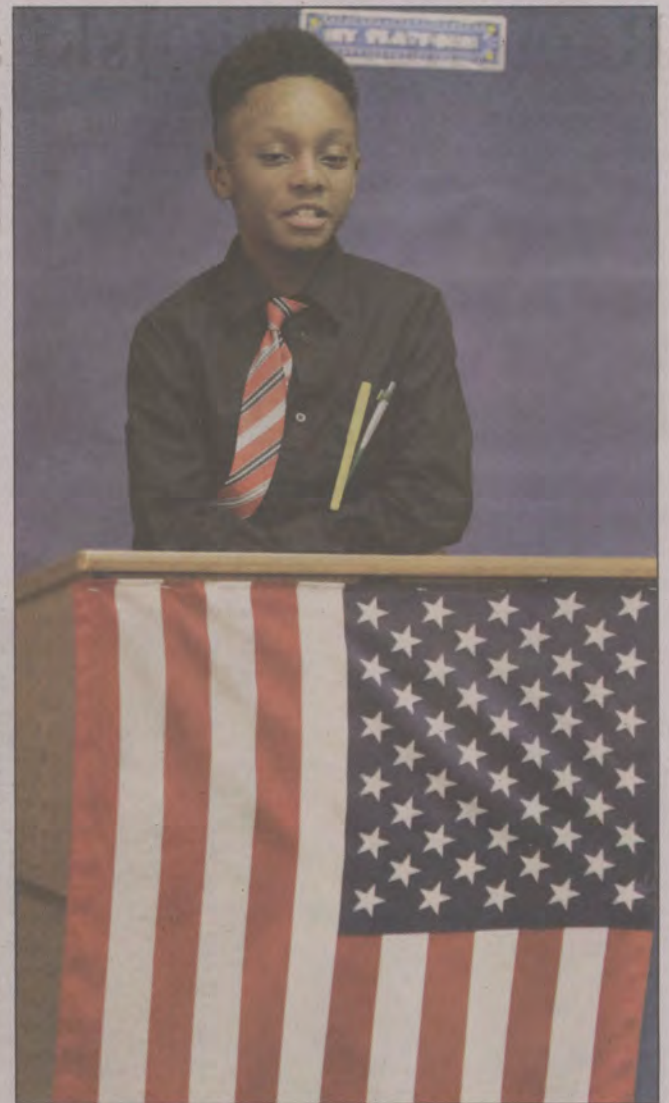

The fifth-grader noted he was a prankster "back in my childhood."

"That doesn't mean you can't trust me now," he said.

Principal Jeanette Ganc said Brader has held student council elections in the past, but she decided to rekindle the tradition as a tie-in with lessons about the national election. Teachers have been emphasizing what it means to live in a democracy and instructing students in the proper way to debate.

The students have been abuzz over the school council elections, Ganc added.

"They're just really excited," she said. "This is real-life learning."

Matt Meyer gives his victory speech at the Hilton DoubleTree hotel in Wilmington on Tuesday, shortly after being elected New Castle County executive.

Meyer wins county executive seat by landslide

By KARIE SIMMONS
ksimmons@chespub.com

Wilmington attorney and political newcomer Matt Meyer slid comfortably into the New Castle County executive seat Tuesday, beating his Republican opponent Mark Blake by 67 to 33 percent of the vote.

Meyer will replace three-term incumbent Tom Gordon, whom he defeated in the primary election.

On Tuesday night, Meyer credited his win to hard work and a solid campaign team. He thanked his supporters throughout the county during a Democratic watch party at the Hilton DoubleTree hotel in Wilmington.

"There were people out there knocking on doors that were not even old enough to vote," he said.

Meyer said that when he first announced he was running for county executive, people told him it was too difficult to unseat an incumbent and they didn't think he could do it. He said he has been hearing "you can't do it" since he was 23 years old with dreams of becoming an entrepreneur, but he didn't listen.

In Kenya, Meyer started Ecosandals, a footwear business that has sold environmentally-friendly footwear to customers in 17 countries for over two decades. He also created VituMob, a company that sells American products online, shipped from Wilmington, to customers in East Africa.

Meyer said Tuesday he is proud to have proved those naysayers wrong by becoming county executive.

"Tonight we celebrate, tomorrow morning we wake up and get to work," he said.

expected by many to be in line for the governor's seat. However, he lost to Jack Markell in the 2008 Democratic primary.

Two years later, he was elected to Delaware's lone seat in the U.S. House of Representatives, where he is currently in his third term.

Carney said Tuesday at the Democratic watch party at the Hilton DoubleTree hotel in Wilmington that many people came up to him throughout his campaign, shook his hand and called him "governor."

"It was a bit irritating," he joked.

He said he was confident he would win the seat, but he wasn't as sure as some of his supporters who seemed to jump the gun.

"But now I'm up here and I'm smiling," he said, giving the crowd a thumbs up.

He credited his win Tuesday to voters understanding the direction of the First State's future.

"Delaware has to reinvent itself," Carney said, adding that the state's economy needs to shift to more startups and small businesses instead of relying on large corporations. "People kind of get that, and our message is we're going to lead the state through that transition."

Carney has said his main priority as governor will be to deal with Delaware's looming budget crunch, in which the state could be facing a deficit of up to $300 million.

He also wants to focus on improving education in the state. He supports the recommendation of the Wilmington Education Advisory Committee to remove the Christina School District from the city of Wilmington but said he does not necessarily agree with its recommendations for how to redistribute the students.

Bethany Hall-Long and Lisa Blunt Rochester hug after overcoming their GOP challengers in Tuesday's election.

Bonini conceded to Carney from Dover, where Republican voters and candidates watched the results roll in at the official GOP watch party at a Grotto Pizza.

Bonini said the state currently faces extraordinary problems and although he ran an uphill battle against Carney, he is proud of his team's dedication throughout the process.

"When this campaign started, it was a coronation," he said. "We took it from a coronation to an election."

Hall-Long, a state senator who represents southern Newark and Middletown, easily won the race for lieutenant governor by securing 59 percent of the vote over Republican La Mar Gunn, a financial adviser, who earned 41 percent.

Hall-Long thanked her opponent Tuesday for making her a better candidate and a better person and also thanked everyone who voted for her, specifically mentioning teachers, union workers, minorities and women.

"I am successful because of you," she said. "It is our victory. It is not my victory."

Blunt Rochester beat Republican Hans Reigle 56 to 41 percent to secure Delaware's only seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. She will replace Carney when he takes over as governor in January.

During her victory speech Tuesday, she relished in the fact that she is not only the state's first congresswoman, but also the first African American from Delaware to go to Washington.

"This is what history looks like," she said. "This is what coming together looks like."

Blunt Rochester is best known as a former state secretary of labor but before that, she served as deputy secretary of the state Department of Health and Social Services. She became the state's personnel director in 2001 and later CEO of the Metropolitan Wilmington Urban League.

She vowed to represent everyone in her new role, no matter where they live, their race, gender or socioeconomic background.

"We have a saying and it's when Lisa goes to Washington, we all go to Washington," she said.

Reigle, an Air Force veteran and former mayor of Wyoming, Del., blamed his loss Tuesday on voters in the northern part of the state, which traditionally leans more Democratic.

"It's that blue wall in New Castle County," Reigle said.

In Dover, as local Republicans conceded to their Democratic counterparts throughout the night, the crowd at the GOP watch party turned its full attention to the national race. Supporters cheered at each increase in Donald Trump's electoral votes.

Dover resident Sam Chick, 30, is a loyal republican who supported Trump. However, he still feels like Washington will be corrupt either way.

"Either way, it doesn't matter because there is still a lot of criminals up on top," Chick said. "This year is exciting, though. We can't deny that."

again for four more years," Sokola said Tuesday night.

Sokola said he expected a tight race.

"We were pretty sure it was going to be a close race, and this is the third really close race I've had," Sokola said. "It's my ninth race, but three of them were under five points. Sometimes it's better to be lucky than good, I guess."

Party leaders on both sides of the aisle saw it as a key race, and Gov. Jack Markell spent time campaigning with Sokola in front of Downes Elementary School on Tuesday.

"I'm not on the ballot, but he is," Markell told voters, pointing to Sokola.

Earlier in the day, Chapman greeted voters with former Rep. Mike Castle, who has campaigned with her throughout this election season.

Sokola attributed his victory to his record of service to the district, in addition to hard work.

"I focused on things that the residents in the district always told me were important — open space, education, safety — and we feel like that was a winning message, and I think the voters did too," he said.

Now that he will remain in office, Sokola wants to improve Delaware's education system.

He gave a shout-out to a longtime state Senate colleague who narrowly lost her seat to Republican newcomer Anthony Delcollo.

"I want to go give Patti Blevins a hug, because that was a devastating loss and she's always been very important to me," Sokola said. "We were both first elected in 1990 together, and I feel very bad for her loss."

Chapman gathered with supporters at a private party and did not return phone calls seeking comment.

Newark Charter celebrates first Division 1 signing

By JON BUZBY

jonbuzby@hotmail.com

Newark Charter celebrated the school's first-ever Division 1 signing on Wednesday when Jude McGough inked her NCAA National Letter of Intent to play softball at the University of North Carolina Charlotte.

"The coaches were both very nice when I went for my unofficial visit and then when I went back, the girls were very inviting," McGough, who had offers from several other schools, said. "I wanted to go to school in North Carolina and the team bonding is great there, so I liked that."

McGough began playing softball in fifth grade at Canal Little League and went on to play on several travel teams before landing with the Cobras, where she currently plays shortstop on their 18U Gold team.

McGough, an honorable mention All-State selection last year when she batted .475, leads off and plays shortstop for the Patriots, but isn't sure where she'll play in college.

"They recruit a lot of shortstops because they're the most athletic players on the field," explained McGough, who plans to major in exercise science. "They can put me anywhere, and I'll be OK with that."

McGough is a standout student and very involved in the community. She has maintained a 4.2 GPA while taking AP and honors classes, is a member of the National Honor Society, volunteers for the Food Bank of Delaware, and is also the manager of Newark Charter's Special Olympics Unified flag football team.

"As I coach, I stress the importance of being a well-rounded student-athlete," head coach Jessica Calderone said. "Having a player like Jude who is not only successful on the field, but also in the classroom and in the community, I could not be any prouder. Jude has worked extremely hard to get where she is today, and I have no doubt that she will go on to do great things."

Newark Charter earns first tournament win

Newark Charter celebrated the school's first ever state tournament win in any sport when the 18th-seeded Patriots' volleyball team defeated 15th-seeded Polytech 3-1 on Nov. 4.

"Our team was honored to have the first tournament win in school history," head coach Jessica Weller said. "It's always great to win in tournament play, but it is extra special when you know it is the first for your school. These athletes have accomplished something special for our school that will always be remembered and I'm proud that I was able to be a part of that accomplishment."

Newark Charter's season ended Saturday when the Patriots fell 3-1 in the second round to second-seeded Archmere. The Patriots finished 9-8 on the season.

"It has been an exciting season, and we played a tough schedule this year," Weller said. "Game in and game out, we played against some of the best teams and playing at that top level of competition forced us to learn how to play smart and consistent. In the second round of the state tournament, we came out against the second-seeded Archmere believing that we can play with the best and we proved that."

Local schools in soccer tournament

Newark Charter's soccer team captured the Diamond State Conference crown and a 12-2-1 record earned the Patriots a fourth seed in the DIAA Division II Soccer State Tournament. The Patriots, appearing in the tournament for the first time, play Saturday at 7 p.m. at Caravel Academy and face the winner of the No. 12 St. Georges (8-5-2) vs. No. 5 Archmere (10-5) game.

"We are excited about the opportunity to compete in the state soccer championships," Newark Charter athletic director Greg Shivery said. "Our student athletes and coaching staff have worked very hard this year to earn this chance."

Sixth-seeded Newark High (10-2-3) plays No. 3 Charter of Wilmington (12-2-1) in the Div. 1 tournament on Saturday at 1 p.m. at Tower Hill.

Glasgow football seeking perfection

Glasgow dominated Dickinson High 52-6 to set up an opportunity to go undefeated in the regular season. However, standing between the Dragons and perfection is the No. 2 team in the state, St. George's (8-1). The Hawks' lone loss this season was in Week 1 to William Penn (8-1), a Division 1 powerhouse that had to score on its last possession to secure the victory.

"Our coaches and players have been taking the season one week at a time," head coach Shannon Riley said. "We will have the same focus this week. Even though we know we have qualified for the playoffs, this game is all we are focused on. ... We also know winning this game gives us the conference title and a top-two seed. We want to play at home in front of our fans in the quarterfinals and semifinals."

The veteran players share in Riley's urgency to win the final game.

"I have to encourage my teammates [this week at practice] and make sure they realize the importance of having home games in the playoffs," said senior Ja'Saan Cunningham, who had a 60-yard touchdown run against Dickinson.

The Dragons are trying to become the first Glasgow team to go 10-0 in the regular season. The 1989 state championship team was 9-0 heading into the playoffs. Glasgow will appear in the post-season for the first time since 2007 when Riley led them to a first-round win over Newark.

Out of the Attic

Ogletown one-room school house

This week's Out of the Attic item is a 1938 photo showing the entire student body of a one-room school in rural Ogletown known as Ogletown School District No. 42.

The photo was submitted by Alice Morrison Clabaugh, who is pictured second from the right. Her brother, the late G. Willard Morrison, is sixth from the left. Other families represented are the Gabor, Reed, Dean, Tyndall, DeRose, Geesaman, Lynam, Outten, Hawthorne, Viet, Kozlowski and Jochen families.

According to Clabaugh, one teacher taught all six grades. Teachers remembered are Miss E. R. Palmer and Mrs. Ackerly. A former teacher was Miss Jennie E. Smith for whom a local school is named. She arrived daily by rail from the Pennsylvania Railroad Station in Newark to Ruthby Station near Ogletown.

The school building, which still stands today, was located on Ruthby Road, now known as Red Mill Road, near present-day Ogletown Baptist Church.

Clabaugh wrote the following remembrances: "On the front of the school was an ante-room which held our bucket of drinking water, galoshes and boots. A row of hooks held our coats, hats, dipper and tin cups. The school had thick stone walls and was heated by a wood/coal stove, which stood in the middle of the room. One very cold winter day, the teacher made potato soup on top of the stove. It was certainly appreciated.

"Periodically the school was visited by a music teacher, Mrs. Heck, who played records on our hand-wound victrola. The outside recreation remembered is Dodge Ball, Ante-Ante Over and You're It. The building behind the students was a coal shed and according to family folklore, the building on the left was at one time a horse stable, as many pupils traveled by horseback from neighboring farms. Of course, we had two little necessary buildings behind the school, one for girls and one for boys on the other side.

"Also, in regard to the picture above, one of the boys had trapped an opossum which he brought to school. Later in the day, the teacher let us go outside while the opossum was released. As you can see, it got as far away from us as possible."

Middletown spoils senior night for Newark

Buzz from the Hive

An insider's look at Yellowjacket football

By JON BUZBY

jonbuzby@hotmail.com

It was senior night last Friday at Newark High, and 15 Yellowjackets traipsed across the field to rounds of applause for their efforts during careers that spanned anywhere from one to four seasons.

However, Newark's hopes of a major upset over the undefeated Cavaliers were dashed early as Middletown put points on the board first and took advantage of a high-scoring third quarter to come away with a 55-18 victory.

Despite the loss, head coach Barry Zehnder was proud not only of his team's effort on game night, but their approach the week leading up to the game.

"The coaching staff challenged the entire team to 'find out about themselves' this week," Zehnder said. "We avoided all the talk about upsetting Middletown because we felt if we took that approach then it was creating a mentality that we couldn't beat Middletown and therefore already were defeated."

Despite the numbers on the scoreboard, what won't show up on the stat sheet is the effort the Yellowjackets displayed, Zehnder said.

"We told them whatever the scoreboard read at the end of the night, just make sure you controlled the only thing you can truly control — your effort and your passion," he explained. "Everybody in the stands on Friday night knows that they accomplished that. When you read the score it won't reflect that, but we told the team to hold their heads up because they stood in the face of a very good team and gave them everything they had to give."

Zehnder also continued to see the progress he is looking for in terms of mental execution.

"We have had our struggles over the season with things like penalties, missed assignments, lack of focus and even lack of effort," he pointed out. "We had only a couple penalties Friday night and most were aggressive penalties and the other things we have been trying to eliminate did not cost us the game like they have earlier this year."

NEWARK POST PHOTO BY DAVID MELLON

Michael Sharpe had two receptions for 79 yards and an impressive touchdown when he leaped between two defenders — one who was called for pass interference on the play — and came down with the ball and scampered 48 yards into the end zone.

Newark trailed 21-12 at the half, but Middletown put up 27 points in the third quarter to put the game out of reach.

"They made more plays in the second half and that is a credit to them," Zehnder said. "I am proud that we stood toe-to-toe with a team that many favor to win the state title for a large portion of the game and kept fighting. Nobody other than the players and coaches in The Hive thought we would be able to do that. Earlier in the season, I don't know if our players would have believed they could. That's a huge positive."

"The way we played in the first half was our best effort of our season," he added.

Scoring against the best

Newark did manage to put points on the scoreboard against a Cavalier defense that many observers consider to be the best in the state. Middletown came into the game having pitched four shutouts and giving up more than two touchdowns in a game just once, a 42-24 win over Salesianum.

"Anytime you are able to put points up on a tough defense that means a lot of players were doing their job," Zehnder said.

Daquan Woods carried the ball 29 times for 209 yards behind the lead blocking of Alex Pollard and Michael Earl. Zehnder also pointed out that Tyreek Booker, Avian Curbison, Jacob Lafferty, Josh Spence and Luke Marcheski "had their best game of the year."

Michael Sharpe had two receptions for 79 yards and an impressive touchdown when he leaped between two defenders — one who was called for pass interference on the play — and came down with the ball and scampered 48 yards into the end zone. Sharpe also scored on a 97-yard kickoff return as he continued to impress in his first season of competitive football.

"This makes me feel extremely confident and also showed me that I can play with the best of them," Sharpe said.

Senior class special

Senior night gave Zehnder an opportunity to reflect on his first season as head coach at Newark.

"The first senior class for a coach will always be memorable," he said. "When kids do things like Gavin Lafferty coming in as a tight end and being asked to play center, and becoming a 10-game starter there and getting better each week. Mike Sharpe playing football for the first time and becoming a player teams have to prepare for. Dequan Woods running hard for 200-plus yards on Middletown, something that never happens [against Middletown]. I just wish Andrew DelPercio's senior year would have been injury-free, so he could have a better memory of his last season."

Newark traveled to A.I. duPont Thursday night. That game ended after press time.

Local Testing Area

Hearing tests are given for the purpose of selection and adjustment of hearing instruments. Results are not to be used for medical or severity of impairment. Early detection is important.

*Risk free offer, the aids must be returned within 30 days of delivery if not completely satisfied and 100% of purchase price will be refunded. Supplies may vary per office. Hearing aids do not restore natural hearing. Individual experiences vary depending on severity of loss, accuracy of evaluation, proper fit and ability to adapt to amplification. ©2012 Hearing Services, LLC
