City Council Concerned With State Plan To Extend Highway

Reported Plan Of State Highway Department To Connect Dual Highway To Main Street
Worries City Officials

Reported plans of the State Highway Department to extend the dual highway on Capital Trail until it meets East Main Street at the present junction of these streets is causing the local Planning Commission considerable concern.

In a letter to City Council, Harry C. Boden, chairman of the commission, pointed out to Council, "The Planning Commission feels that in the interest of planning, both for the present and the future welfare of the city, this junction should be made at a point east of the present junction, a sufficient distance away to permit the future junction with suitable by-pass highways."

It has been proposed by those concerned with the planning and development of Newark's future that a system of by-pass highways around the city both on the north and south be seriously considered in future plans. To bring the dual highway directly into Main Street, in their minds, would create an impossible traffic situation. Plans have been drawn and submitted to City Council showing these proposed routes around the city, but so far the State Highway Department has not altered its plan to connect the dual highway directly into Main Street.

City Council on Tuesday night passed a motion by Councilman Carl Rankin to appoint an individual to act as coordinator between City Council, J. P. Neide, city engineer, and the State Highway Department to see that the city's views on this matter are made clear before any further plans for this extension are made. Mayor Johnson announced that he will make the appointment in the near future.

Tomhave, chairman of the Lions Club committee which has sponsored the setting up of a lounge room in City Hall for members of Newark's Old Timers Club, climaxed the dedication of the new quarters Tuesday night when he presented to Frank Widdoes, spokesman for the Old Timers, the key to the new room.

Located in the basement of City Hall the room will furnish a place where these honored citizens of the community can gather together both in summer and winter to enjoy their favorite radio and television programs.

On behalf of the club, Mr. Widdoes thanked the Newark Lions Club and members of the Board of Trustees of the Old Academy Building for making the room possible and pointed out that "Every member of the Old Timers Club is deeply grateful to all concerned for the fine spirit that prompted such an endeavor."

Equipped with both a radio and television set, donated by an anonymous citizen of the community, the room is the result of extensive efforts on the part of the Newark Lions Club, especially the committee made up of Mr. Tomhave, Frank Fader, and William Gore.

In making the presentation, Mr. Tomhave pointed out that the Lions Club as a whole has been wholeheartedly behind the project but singled out for particular praise the work done by Mr. Fader.

Council Expresses Thanks For Fine Work Done During Critical Times

City Council on Tuesday night accepted the resignation of Carl S. Rankin as city engineer and upon his recommendation appointed J. Francis Neide to the post.

Mr. Rankin's resignation came as no surprise to members of Council as it was known that the councilman from the western district had planned to vacate the post at the earliest possible time. Mr. Rankin had served as city engineer for about eighteen months on a dollar-a-year basis.

Council passed a motion by Councilman Sam Diehl to express to Mr. Rankin the deep appreciation of that body for the excellent work he has done while holding the position during these critical times in the development of Newark.

In a brief report to the body, Mr. Rankin pointed out the many engineering problems which will face the city of Newark in the near future and recommended that there be little delay on the part of city officials in giving their due consideration. He also advised that Council bring before the citizens of Newark the exact nature of these problems of development so that those planning these developments as well as the city engineer can proceed with the least possible delay.

Mr. Neide, new city supervisor, has filled the post of city supervisor for about eighteen months and has worked closely with Mr. Rankin in that capacity.

Troop 103, led by Mrs. Joseph Crowe and Mrs. James Tyler, have made place mats and tray favors for Valentine's Day and Washington's Birthday to be presented to patients at Flower Hospital and the Red Men's Home.

All previous registration records have been voided and it will be necessary for all voters wishing to vote in any regular or special elections to be held in the city of Newark to register at this time. This registration will enable voters to take part in the regular city election scheduled for the second Tuesday in April.

At that time the voters of Newark will go to the polls to elect a mayor and three councilmen. Mayor Johnson's term of office will expire at that time along with that of Councilman Frank Durnall of the middle district; Carl Rankin, in the western district; and William Coverdale, in the eastern district.

New School Plans Will Be Submitted For State Approval

If No Delay Encountered
Bids May Be Sought
This Summer

Preliminary plans for the proposed 12-classroom elementary school to be erected on Capitol Trail will in the near future be submitted to the State Board of Education for approval, according to Wilmer E. Shue, district superintendent.

If there is no delay in the approval of the plans by that body then it is possible that the Newark Board of Education will be in a position to advertise for bids on the project sometime in mid-summer.

Estimated to cost a total of approximately $435,000, for both land and building, the new school will be a one-story structure of concrete block with brick veneer. In addition to the 12 classrooms, the building will include administrative offices, cafeteria, library, health room, and a bus waiting room which will also serve as an indoor play court.

Once the preliminary plans are approved by the State Board of Education, architect E. William Martin will put them into final form to be presented to the State Program Building Board for final approval before bids are solicited.

New London Avenue Elementary School To Receive TV Set

Students Win Set In Contest
Sponsored By American
Store Here

New London Avenue Elementary School will be presented with a new television set on Monday to be used in connection with the visual aid education program at the school.

The set, a table model Philco, will be presented to school officials by representatives of the local American Store and Philco dealers.

Students have won the set in a contest sponsored by the local American Store. In this contest the students are required to collect and turn in to store officials $125,000 worth of sales tapes from American stores either here in Newark or elsewhere. Last spring the Newark High School students completed their collection of the tapes and were presented with a set which is now being used in that school.

Newark school officials heartily endorse the use of TV sets as a part of the visual education program, in which the local schools are prominent, since statistics reveal that the visual programs are eight times more effective than simply audio ones. More and more educational programs are being beamed at school students.

Display Of African Negro Art Opens At University Gallery

An exhibition of African Negro art is being shown in the Art Gallery at the University of Delaware at Newark. This collection of original sculpture, from the Segy Gallery in New York, represents the work of the outstanding art-producing tribes of West Africa. The Africans considered carvings, masks, statues, and utensils produced in wood, ivory and brass, necessary to their religious ceremonies dealing with secret society initiations, burials, ancestor worship, and magical rituals. Masks are an outstanding expression of African art. They usually represent a human face with certain features exaggerated, an animal head, or a combination of the two. Among the interesting ones in this exhibit are an elephant head representing the totem animal of the tribe, an ancestor cult mask combining horns with the human face, a Bapende helmet type mask with an elaborate headdress, a handle mask used in initiation ceremonies and a miniature one carved in ivory.

The carved statues, as well, functioned as an integral part of tribal ceremonies. One particularly handsome piece is a chieftain's stove, the pedestal of which is a kneeling figure.

There are also carved boxes, goblets, bracelets, a bronze armband from Benin and a piece of woven raffia cloth.

The exhibition will be open during library hours through Feb. 21.

Students of homerooms 8-4 and 8-3 were in charge of the entertainment at the assembly program at the local school on Wednesday, and under the direction of Mrs. Katharine Bonney and Walter Matt, presented a dramatic skit, "A Rocket Tour."

In the skit the students described the building of a rocket ship and described the sights one would probably encounter on a rocket tour.

Members of the chorus which provided music and dancing for the program were: Geraldine Warner, Phyllis Dancy, Phyllis Hovary, Phyllis Manning, Mable Smith, Susan Gore, Joan Porter, Sam Perry, Bobby Folk, Virginia Lee Moore, and George Arthur. Capitol Trail News

Marjorie M. Bishop, Correspondent
Phone 6318

Now that old Mr. Ground Hog has gone back into his hole again, we can settle down to our usual routine. Whether or not he saw his shadow isn't going to worry most of us. In fact we are inclined to suspect that six more weeks of winter-like weather would be the normal thing to expect.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Johnston and son, Martin, of Millford Cross Roads, motored to Baltimore last Sunday.

Mrs. Miller Darrell, Capitol Trail, has returned home after an extended visit with her daughter in Carney's Point, New Jersey.

We regret to report that Mr. Amos Catlett is critically ill at his home on Polly Drummond Road.

Mrs. Alice Appleby of Harmony Road, who has been confined for some time in the Wilmington General Hospital, is considerably improved.

White Clay Creek Presbyterian Church Dr. and Mrs. Robert Mason of Newark were guests of the Young Adult Fellowship at the regular monthly meeting on Tuesday of this week. Dr. and Mrs. Mason showed very interesting slides of their trip to Europe last summer.

The program was arranged by Willard Johnston and Raymond Benson.

Mrs. Howard Bradley will be luncheon hostess to the members of the Women's Missionary Society on Thursday, February 14, at 12 noon. The regular meeting will follow the luncheon. Mite Box offerings will be received at this time.

The society voted at its January meeting to change the meeting day from the second Thursday of each month to the second Tuesday, beginning with the month of March.

This action was taken to conform with the plan of the Newark Council of Church Women, urging all church women's meetings in this area to be held on Tuesdays.

A very unique talk was given by Mr. Bishop at the meeting of the church Improvement Society held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Richards last Wednesday. With the aid of charts, Mr. Bishop traced the origin of the most common flowers and vegetables raised in our gardens.

Most of the flowers and all of the vegetables came from other countries originally: the gladiolus from Africa; geranium from Eurasia; forsythia from China; pansy from Europe; petunia from South America and zinnia from Mexico.

All of our beans came from Central America; potatoes from the Andes; lettuce from Asia Minor; carrots from Afghanistan and watermelon from Africa.

The February meeting of the session will be held at church on Wednesday, the 13th at 8 p.m.

Mrs. David Eastburn, Church Flower Chairman, announces that the Women's Missionary Society will have charge of the floral decorations this month. Next Sunday at 10 a.m. in the Sunday church school there are classes for all ages. It was announced last Sunday that the enrollment had increased to 132.

At the 11 a.m. church service the pastor will preach on "Keepers of the Gate."

The Sports Post

by Milt Roberts

Most athletes have had fun at one time or another pounding around on a clay court, hitting a tennis ball back and forth over a net. Some take it seriously and are disappointed when the ball does not go where they intend to hit it. A few can actually control the bouncing ball with great skill. Combine this skill with the touch of the artist and you have a tennis player.

Artistry in tennis? Like an artist the tennis player dedicates himself to his work; hour after hour of concentrated practice, striving for control, for power, for perfection.

In this stage of development the tennis player can be classified as a protegee. If he is fortunate enough to perfect his art, he becomes the matinee idol of center court society. Dressed in clean white shorts, handling clean white balls fresh from vacuum sealed cans, wiping the sweat from his brow with a clean white towel, turning to accept balls from the boys dutifully scurrying here and there behind his back retrieving shots from the audience.

The gallery eagerly awaits displays of temperment from the harassed artist, even though an atmosphere of formality frames the court and displays of temperment are not considered in good taste. Good sportsmanship is stressed very strongly but somehow temperment shows through, and it excites the audiences.

International significance lurks behind the scenes of tournament play. The tennis player, well aware that he represents his country, must guard against improper conduct both on and off court. Perhaps this extra element of pressure added to the pressure of the intense competition accounts for the unexpected rebelliousness exhibited from time to time.

Rebellion in the form of sit down strikes has dotted the scenes of tennis history. Dick Savitt's recent strike will be added to the list of those before him who have expressed their dissatisfaction by adopting this calm, but stubborn attitude of sitting it out.

A sit down strike isn't necessarily a flagrant example of bad sportsmanship. The tennis player is usually a highly sensitive individual and it's about the only method he has to register his dissatisfaction effectively. A bad call or an adverse ruling might result in the subsequent loss of two or three games before an emotional adjustment could be made. This sensitivity is an unmistakable sign of the artist.

If one appreciates moods in artistry many of the emotional displays exhibited on the tennis court can be understood.

Through the years, tennis players like Helen Wills Moody, Suzanne Lenglen, Helen Jacobs, Margaret Osborne Dupont, Fred Perry, Henri Cochet, Bill Tilden, Don Budge, Ellsworth Vines, Jack Kramer, and the young Frank Sedgman, have developed a physical art which can be fully appreciated if one attempts to do with a tennis ball and racquet what they have done. It's more than play, it's performance; it's more than skill, it's artistry.

Archmere Surprises Newark In Snapping Six-Game Win Streak

Archmere Takes Commanding Lead In First Period To Hand Yellowjackets Second Defeat In Eleven Contests

Archmere Academy outscored Newark's basketball team in only two of the four quarters of Tuesday night's game between the two clubs, but built enough advantage in these two to hand the Yellowjackets their second loss of the season, 65 to 55, and snap a six game winning streak which the boys had put together.

Newark could do nothing right in its opening period and the Archers jumped into a commanding lead, 24 to 8, although the losers settled down and played the winners during the remainder of the game. Newark scored the Archmere club by ten points in the second half.

Bunny Blaney paced the losers a defeat by hanging up a total of 23 points, garnering an eight field goal and five fouts. Al Sparks contributed ten points in the losing effort on three goals and four fouts.

Game scoring honors, however, went to Joe Matassino, Archmere center who tossed in ten field goals and five fouts for a total of 23 points.

It was the sixth victory in nine starts for the Archmere club and brought the Newark record to nine and two for the season.

Archmere junior varsity made its all-victorious evening by downing the Newark junior varsity, 37 to 23, in the preliminary contest.
