City offers to help storm-stricken S.C.

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

The City of Newark may lend a helping hand to Charleston, S.C., which was devastated last week by Hurricane Hugo.

City staff members are now reviewing possible aid that could be sent to the hurricane-ravaged community.

"We were blessed by not getting hit by Hugo here," said Councilman Allen E. Smith at Monday night's council meeting.

"I think this might be a good opportunity for the City of Newark to do something."

Smith suggested city staff determine if there are surplus plumbing and electrical supplies that could be sent to Charleston to help that historic coastal city rebuild.

He said Newark might even consider providing financial aid to Charleston.

"If we can do anything at all, we should," said Councilman Edwin D. Miller.

Council member Louise Brothers expressed concern over sending city tax dollars as aid to Charleston.

"I think the thought is good," said Brothers, "but I don't want to give them any money."

City staff will report back to council on the feasibility of sending aid to Charleston.

Also Monday night, council approved the purchase of $5,500 worth of new Christmas decorations for downtown Newark.

Ten trees along East Main Street will be lit with miniature white lights. The lights will remain on the trees year around.

New banners will be purchased to dress up the main entrances to the city. Banners which were purchased last year for Main Street will be placed lower on poles this year to make them more visible.

Christmas trees will also be placed on Main Street between Academy Street and South College Avenue. City officials hope to encourage local service and garden clubs to decorate the trees.

The cost of the decorations was questioned by some council members, but Councilman Olan Thomas said the city should have a nice Christmas display or not do anything.

"Do it so it's a proper display," said Thomas. "I think it should be impressive, not something that's mediocre."

The clarity of a city parking ordinance was questioned Monday night when a landlord asked council why his tenants could only purchase two city parking permits.

The ordinance, approved by council in July, stipulated that only two permits will be issued to each single family home-turned-rental unit.

Parking permits are required in various residential districts in Newark. The ordinance limits the number of permits available to rented dwellings and does not

Toll break eyed

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

Drivers of heavy trucks are not the only people guilty of exiting Interstate 95 in Newark to avoid the toll booth at the Maryland-Delaware state line.

Based on traffic congestion on Del. 896, officials have long suspected that many commuters have been following the same practice.

Limiting truck traffic on Elkton Road and Del. 896 has kept many trucks on the interstate highway. But what to do about those commuters?

A new plan by state officials will offer a financial incentive to motorists who stay on I-95.

The Delaware Turnpike Authority has announced the implementation of a new toll rate schedule to offer discount tickets to regular commuters effective Oct. 1.

The plan comes at the urging of Newark City Councilman Harold F. Godwin and State Rep. Steven H. Amick, R-Newark.

"I think this plan is a piece of the pie," said Godwin. "It's certainly not the whole pie I've asked for."

Under the plan, commuters can purchase a book of 40 tickets for $20, which represents a 50 percent discount off the regular toll of $1 per trip. The book of tickets is valid for 30 days from the date of purchase.

Godwin discussed the problem of traffic congestion in south Newark during a council meeting several months ago.

At that time, he suggested that the Delaware Department of Transportation allow Newarkers to pass through the state line toll booth without paying the fee.

"I'd like to see them be able to use I-95 from the Elkton exit without any cost," said Godwin.

Amick agrees, saying local people should be able to pass through the booth without paying the toll.

Commuter tickets are now on sale at the Newark Toll Plaza. Commuters can call 368-6860 for more information.

Whizzing along on the merry-go-round, a young girl enjoys the Delaware Saengerbund's annual Oktoberfest held Friday through Sunday and featuring a visit by the West German ambassador. Thousands attended the event, held on the German-American organization's grounds near Newark.

State drug symposium opens Friday

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

William Bennett, director of the national effort to combat drug abuse, will not attend Delaware's drug symposium to be held in Newark this weekend.

Symposium organizers invited Bennett, hoping that he would come to Delaware to explain the recently announced federal drug strategy.

As of press time, State Rep. Steven H. Amick, R-Newark, was unsure whether Bennett would send a representative of his office to attend the two-day meeting.

State Attorney General Charles M. Oberly III will serve as the keynote speaker for the symposium, to be held Friday and Saturday at Clayton Hall on the University of Delaware campus.

"I would hope that the government sector...will be able to tap into the resources we have in Delaware to learn what we can," said Amick.

Amick called for the symposium after more than 50 bills dealing with the state's drug problem were presented in the last session of the Delaware General Assembly.

Many of those bills concerned criminal prosecution. Amick is hoping that the symposium will raise consciousness in the areas of education, treatment and prevention.

Although he had earlier hoped that the House might go into special session after the symposium to consider drug legislation, Amick said he doesn't expect that to happen now.

"I think it's unlikely the House will come into special session unless the Senate does," said Amick.

An earlier-scheduled special session of the Delaware Senate was cancelled because financial legislation was not ready for consideration.

Lt. Governor Dale Wolf will address the statewide approach to the drug problem during a speech before symposium attendees Saturday morning.

Amick said about 200 people will attend the symposium.

City cracks down on crowded houses

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

The crowding of University of Delaware students in rental properties near campus has been a prevalent problem since classes started earlier this month.

During the first few weeks of the fall semester, city code enforcement officers have issued 10 summonses due to overcrowded conditions.

"I honestly don't think the problem is any worse than it's been before," said Junie L. Mayle, city building director, "we've just been out aggressively looking for it."

Mayle said code enforcement officers have been checking rental properties in the city, looking for the telltale signs of overcrowding — trash piles and crowded parking conditions.

"They draw attention to themselves," said Mayle.

Not only are officers checking for the obvious signs of overcrowding, they also are visiting properties where overcrowding has been a continual problem.

"Some of these are landlords we've had problems with in the past," said Mayle.

Under current city code, no more than four (and in certain circumstance, three) unrelated persons can live in a single residence.

Mayle said landlords who allow overcrowding can be fined up to $500 and lose their rental permit for up to a year.

"We don't try to revoke the rental permit if we don't think the landlord knew about it (overcrowding)," he said.

Students who knowingly overcrowd a rental property can also be fined up to $500, according to Mayle.

Although he believes the increased number of summonses this year is due to increased enforcement, Mayle admits that overcrowding seems to be an increasing problem.

For Newark's Frye, a rewarding climb

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

After spending months in training, even traveling to California to practice on Mt. Lyell in Yosemite National Park, Mark Frye left his home near Newark last month to climb Mt. Rainier in Washington State.

What was to be the realization of a dream took an interesting turn, changing his plans and creating new mountain climbing experiences.

A former Baltimore police officer, Frye is paralyzed on the right side from a gunshot wound to the back. An avid mountain climber before the shooting, Frye now climbs mountains on crutches.

On Sunday, Aug. 20, Frye arrived at Mt. Rainier. He and his two climbing partners, Phil Williams and Alan Lekan, both of Newark, spent the day in Rainier Mountaineering School — a requirement before climbing the mountain.

Frye had been dreaming of this trip for years.

Standing on the mountain, he knew the dream was within his grasp.

Officials with Rainier Mountaineering were not so sure. When Frye finished mountaineering school that day, Rainier Mountaineering officials informed him he would not be able to climb the mountain without a private guide, and they could not supply him with the guide.

Larry Nielsen, one of the world's best known mountain climbers, was among the teachers at Rainier Mountain. He offered to be Frye's guide.

Rainier Mountaineering officials refused to allow Nielsen to serve as the guide.

"It just seemed like this dream of mine was coming to a quick, shattering halt," said Frye. "It's tough to accept defeat when you're not allowed to go on the field."

Nielsen sensed Frye's determination to make this trip a success. Knowing Frye would not climb Rainier on this trip, Nielsen offered to serve as a guide on any other mountain he wanted to climb.

Frye and his climbing partners chose Mt. Baker, located near the Canadian border and known as the "Queen Jewel of the Pacific Northwest."

Mark Frye and party climb Mt. Baker.

"It looked like it would be a pretty formidable challenge. It's covered in glaciers, snow and ice from 6,000 feet on up," said Frye. "Just because it was a substitute, it was no real substitute as far as difficulty."

What Frye had thought would be a trip up Mt. Rainier had turned into an opportunity to climb with Nielsen, a man who has climbed mountains all over the world including Mt. Everest.

Nielsen made arrangements to meet Frye and his partners at a gas station not far from Mt. Baker on Tuesday morning.

As they waited at the gas station, Frye spotted Nielsen coming down the road in his black pickup. Although he had never seen Nielsen's car before, Frye knew it was him because of the yellow license plate with green letters, spelling out the word "EVEREST."

When they arrived at the Mt. Baker ranger station, they were advised of bad weather conditions on the mountain. Despite the bad weather, the men climbed 6,000 feet to the base of the glacier. They would make camp for the night before beginning their climb through the snow and ice to the glacier.

"We were right at the tree line," said Frye. "Another 100 feet or so, there was glacier."

The next morning, weather on the mountain was beautiful and the men began their climb about 7 a.m.

Ahead of them were deep crevasses. "We could see that some were pretty narrow across, but 100 feet deep," said Frye.

With the help of Nielsen, Frye crossed one crevasse and then climbed a 40-foot ice face.

Then the weather worsened. "For the next two to three hours, it became almost dark," said Frye. "Had it been just Phil, Alan, and I, we would have turned around. The conditions were that bad."

Nielsen checked with Frye periodically, to make sure he wanted to continue the climb. Frye gave his the thumbs up sign.

About an hour before the summit, the men stopped to rest and eat lunch.

"We hovered under this big rock to eat lunch — or to try to,"

Train rams car, man hurt

A 77-year-old New Jersey man was injured Monday when the car he was driving was hit by a train near Farm Lane and Old South Chapel Street, city police said.

Walter Fuester of Haddon Township, N.J. is receiving treatment at Christiana Hospital, where he was listed in the intensive care unit Wednesday morning.

According to police, Fuester was traveling west on Farm Lane when he approached the railroad crossing that is not controlled by warning lights of a mechanical barrier. As Fuester crossed the tracks, his car was struck by an Amtrak train and pushed 500 feet along the tracks, police said.

Cash seized on I-95

Delaware State Police seized $13,000 Thursday during a traffic stop on Interstate 95 near the service area.

Troopers stopped a northbound vehicle driven by a 28-year-old Bronx, N.Y. resident for speeding about 12:30 p.m.

The trooper noticed that the driver and two passengers appeared nervous. He received permission to conduct a search, and the cash was located on one of the passengers.

The money and individuals were taken to state police headquarters, where a dog alerted police to the scent of drugs on the money.

The money was seized and the individuals were released.

Astropower plant concerns city officials

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

Newark city officials are concerned about possible hazardous emissions from a manufacturing plant proposed for construction on Wyoming Avenue.

City officials expressed concern because the facility would be located very close to the Girls Clubs of Delaware's Newark center, Newark High School and College Square shopping center.

However, officials of the company, Astropower Inc., say there is no cause for alarm.

"My concern is we place these type of industries in highly populated areas," said Fred Herald, city administrative assistant. "Accidents will happen."

The plant will produce solar cells, which are used in many locations around the world to produce energy from the sun's rays. They are not used in the United States and other industrialized nations because of the high cost in comparison to fossil fuels.

"I don't think there's reason for concern," said Cheryl Keith, manager of administration for Astropower. "I don't think we would be doing it (manufacturing solar cells) if there were."

Keith said gases will be stored at the new plant. Hydrogen and nitrogen gases have been used, she said, in the development of the solar cells.

"I guess anything can be hazardous if not used properly," she said.

Astropower currently leases a building on Lovett Avenue from the University of Delaware. The company's new building is being constructed through an agreement with the University.

Because the building will be located on University property, it need not go through the city's zoning process.

"The University is exempt from our zoning laws," said Herald, "but not from our building codes."

Herald said the plans for the building are now under review by a national building codes association.

Herald is also requesting that Astropower contact Delaware Department of Natural Resources officials to inform them of any gases that will be stored at the new plant.

Keith said the company has been producing the solar cells as a pilot project at their current location on Lovett Avenue without any problems.

"We don't have any particular concern with Astropower," said Herald. "I have a concern with highly populated areas."

"On our end, we have to cover all avenues to ensure for the safest possible operation."

Coast Day panel to discuss oil spill

The year 1989 may be remembered as the year of the oil spills.

In March, the Exxon Valdez spilled its cargo into Alaska's Prince William Sound.

Three months later, the Presidente Rivera ran aground in the Delaware River and spilled an estimated 300,000 gallons of heavy industrial heating oil.

"Such environmental disasters leave the public frustrated, many times with more questions than answers," said Dr. Carolyn A. Thoroughgood, dean of the University of Delaware Graduate College of Marine Studies and director of the University's Sea Grant College Program.

Thoroughgood said the college's Coast Day '89 festival, to be held Sunday, Oct. 1 on its Lewes campus, will examine the Delaware River oil spill through an environmental forum.

Entitled "Lessons Learned — The June Oil Spill on the Delaware," the forum will allow an airing of opinions and suggestions from a variety of perspectives.

It will be held 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Panelists include U.S. Rep. Thomas R. Carper; Edwin H. Clark, secretary of the Delaware Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control; Gary B. Patterson, executive director of the Delaware Petroleum Council; Capt. Lawrence A. Murdock of the U.S. Coast Guard; and Grace Pierce-Beck of the Delaware Audubon Society.

Moderating will be Robert W. Knecht, one of the new co-directors of the University's Center for the Study of Marine Policy.

"This forum is an opportunity to air different perspectives on the oil spill in a positive, constructive light," Knecht said. "We hope the exchange of ideas will help us all gain a better understanding of how disasters like the June spill occur, how clean-up actions are determined, and how such incidents can be prevented."

Coast Day will open at 11 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m. at the University's Marine Studies Complex on the Delaware Bay.

The event is designed to give the public a first-hand look at marine research under way at the University and to educate visitors about the wise use and protection of fragile marine ecosystems.

Theme of Coast Day '89 is "Our Seas: Stretched to the Limit?"

Activities include laboratory tours, lectures, videos, and seafood cooking demonstrations.

Parking is $1 per vehicle, and festival admission is free. For information, call 451-8083.

Study: Low-cost housing needed

The American dream of home ownership should become a reality for more people, according to a state housing agency report.

The Delaware Housing Needs Assessment, conducted by the Delaware State Housing Authority (DSHA) and a private consultant, identifies principal housing needs in the state.

"The needs assessment, a product of more than one year of intensive research, is a valuable tool for us to determine the appropriateness of our current priorities and to set additional priorities for the future," said Martha S. Harris, DSHA director. "The needs assessment will allow representatives from both the public and private sectors to identify where the state's housing needs are the greatest and will allow organizations like DSHA to best target limited resources to achieve the greatest good."

Principal points of the study are:

- There is a need to create lower cost home ownership opportunities for first-time homebuyers by expanding the availability of below-median priced homes.

- There is a need for a viable and sustainable lower-income rental housing production mechanism for families.

- There is a need for higher levels of downstate housing rehabilitation activity to reduce substandard and deteriorated housing conditions.

"This ability to prioritize is especially important," said Harris, "because of the widening gap between family incomes and housing costs both in Delaware and nationwide."

The assessment indicates that the affordability gap will continue based on local and national trends.

According to Harris, the assessment is Delaware's first comprehensive analysis of housing needs in the state.

Police file complaint

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

The New Castle County police union Monday filed a complaint with the Delaware Public Employees Relations Board charging "bad faith bargaining" on the part of the county administration in contract negotiations.

County police are seeking a new two-year contract to replace one that expired in March. The two sides have not been able to come to terms on wage issues.

The complaint is the third filed by the union since January, according to a statement issued by Peter J. Kotowski, president of Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) Lodge 5.

Kotowski said the most recent complaint stems from a contract mediation session Friday.

Kotowski said the county administration walked out of the session.

"The walk-out was not because of a disagreement over proposals, but because the county refused to continue negotiations by not supplying to the mediator its financial data to support its inability to pay," said Kotowski in a prepared statement. "The walk-out occurred at an orchestrated moment, after several hours of mediation, but just before the mediator could render his opinion."

David Williams, chief negotiator for the county, disagrees.

"It is not an accurate description of what happened Friday to say we walked out," said Williams. "The session had ended."

Williams said the mediator recommended the negotiations go to a state fact finder. The fact finder will review the case and issue an opinion within 45 days.

"Fact finding would be the last place we would want to be if we didn't feel so strongly that we had bargained in good faith," said Williams.

Kotowski said the union filed the first complaint against the county in January when the county did not come to the bargaining table to discuss a new contract.

The second complaint was filed in August, according to Kotowski, over the "county's formal offer to another labor union of parity with the FOP."

Designs to save natural areas

White Clay Creek considered

The growing movement to protect and preserve the nation's flowing streams, fragile woodlands, wildlife habitats and scenic vistas is expected to receive local impetus at a Dec. 9 conference at the University of Delaware.

"Design for a Living Valley" is the theme of the conference, which is co-sponsored by the White Clay Watershed Association (WCWA) and the University, whose main campus in Newark is almost entirely in the valley formed by the White Clay Creek and its tributaries.

The 70,000-acre watershed area stretches from above Chatham in Chester County, Pa., south to Churchman's Marsh and I-95 in New Castle County.

According to John A. Murray, a WCWA representative and conference chairperson, the program is intended for local citizens, community leaders, elected officials, business and industry representatives and others concerned about such conservation issues as water quality, the rapid disappearance of open space, inadequate protection of vulnerable woodlands and wetlands, indiscriminate development practices and the lack of "grass roots" involvement in formulating conservation policies and correcting deficiencies.

It is hoped the conference will result in establishment of a conservancy with its primary objective to facilitate planning and resolve environmental problems through cooperation by all sectors of the community, as well as through education, reinforced by research and dissemination of information, Murray said.

Russell W. Peterson, president emeritus of the National Audubon Society, and a world authority and leader in environmental matters, will be keynote speaker on the topic, "Each of Us Can Make a Difference." Peterson is widely known for designing and securing enactment of legislation protecting the state's fragile coastal areas during his term as Delaware's governor from 1969-73.

University President E. A. Trabant, who will introduce Peterson, will discuss ways in which the University might cooperate with the proposed conservancy.

Also scheduled is a panel of experts discussing broad issues, policy questions, problems and opportunities a fledgling conservancy might face. Participants will be Jean Hocker, executive director, Land Trust Exchange, Arlington, Va.; Joachim T. Tourbier, environmental consultant, Philadelphia; and Robert McKim, Delaware field representative, The Nature Conservancy. Moderator will be Robert D. Varrin, associate provost for research and director of the Water Resources Center at the University.

Practical suggestions for day-to-day conservancy operation will be offered in five different training and information workshops. Leaders will share their "know-how" in sessions ranging from budgeting and staffing to "grass roots" involvement.

They include Lorraine W. Fleming, manager of conservation and preservation, Delaware Nature Society; Dorothy Miller, chairperson, Coalition of Natural Stream Valleys; Bernard W. Sweeney, director of the Stroud Water Research Center, Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia; Richard Lighty, Director, Mt. Cuba Center; Rev. J. Cameron Yorkston, Director of Development at the Tatnall School; and David L. Ames, dean of the College of Urban Affairs and Public Policy at the University.

Murray said he believes a special feature of the proposed conservancy is the presence of the University in the watershed,

Former Delaware governor Russell W. Peterson will be on hand for a seminar on the White Clay and the potential this offers for the success of the new group.

Through its ongoing research, teaching and public service activities, as these might focus on environmental and quality-of-life issues in its own immediate geographical area, Murray said, the University may be able to make significant contributions in facilitating conservancy planning and in the positive solution and resolution of issues that would be considerably more difficult in watersheds without a public-service-oriented university.

"The University already is doing many of these things in its regular programs," Murray emphasized, adding, "A conservancy would provide a mechanism for broader public involvement in identifying local conservation issues that should be addressed and in finding resources to resolve them."

The conference fee of $15 for individuals or $25 for couples covers conference materials, a buffet luncheon and refreshment breaks. To register, send check (made payable to the University of Delaware) to Conferences and Centers, Clayton Hall, Newark, DE 19716. Registration deadline is Nov. 27.

Members of the planning committee for the Dec. 9 conservancy conference, in addition to Murray, are Ames, Audrey Helfman, senior management analyst, Jerome R. Lewis, director, Delaware Public Administration Institute, and Scott Hunter, a graduate student, all from the College of Urban Affairs and Public Policy, and Roland Roth, chairperson of the Department of Entomology and Applied Ecology, all at the University; Lawrence C. Aquadro, president, Forward Lands, Wilmington; Warren Davies, Wilmington Trail Club; Bernard Dworsky, executive director, New Castle County Water Resource Agency; Philip Kraus, president, Friends of the White Clay Preserve; Dorothy Miller, Bi-State Advisory Council, White Clay Preserve; and Sue Wells, Delaware Nature Society.

said Frye. "We held onto everything for dear life because we were afraid it would fall off and hopefully we wouldn't go with it."

Neilsen didn't let the climbers stay still for very long, possibly to keep them warm and moving, Frye believes. As they neared the summit at 11,000 feet, each step became an effort for Frye.

"I was definitely going further than I'd ever been before, endurance-wise," he said.

Heavy water use will cost

Hoping to encourage customers to conserve water, Artesian Water Company officials Thursday announced possible changes in their rate structure.

Peter N. Johnson, Artesian senior vice president, said the company is considering an "inverted rate structure" in which customers who use more water will pay higher rates.

"I think the inverted rates, as such, will have the effect of making customers know water is not cheap anymore," said Johnson. "I think these recurring droughts in the Delaware Valley have shown us that water is not infinite."

An inverted rate plan structures rates in blocks. Rates increase proportionately with water usage.

Under the current rate structure, water users pay about $2 per 1,000 gallons. With the inverted rate structure, a heavy water user could pay as much as $3 per 1,000 gallons.

Although some customers will pay more for water, Johnson said the effect may be lower rates for the average customer.

In the meantime, Johnson said Artesian is still preparing a rate increase proposal for presentation to the Delaware Public Service Commission early next year. Customers may see their quarterly bills increase by $5 to $10.

The rate increase is being sought to help fund $8 million in capital improvements. The improvements, which include interconnections with other water systems, will increase Artesian's available water supply.

HELP

affect homeowners.

Apartment complexes were not included in the ordinance, since the building code already requires adequate off-street parking.

Not addressed either in the code or the new ordinance were two-unit apartment buildings constructed several years ago. Because the apartments were built similar to a single family residence, they provide little off-street parking. At the same time, they apparently do not come under the new ordinance because it was never a single family home.

City staff has been instructed to study the issue and determine how many rental structures may not fit into city parking ordinances or codes.

ing arrangements now to climb Mt. Rainier next year.

In the meantime, he experienced climbing Mt. Baker with one of the world's premiere climbers.

"That kind of smoothed some of the regrets I had," said Frye. "It was really unexpected."

"Nielsen is very positive. Within a few minutes, I felt like I knew this person all of my life."

'Nuclear Age' is discussed

Two noted authors, Jonathan Schell and Robert J. Lifton, and a former assistant secretary of defense, Richard N. Perle, will be among the distinguished speakers discussing "The Best of Times, the Worst of Times? Living in the Nuclear Age" this fall in the 1989 University Forum lecture series at the University of Delaware.

The nuclear age has borne both miraculous and harrowing fruits that have affected society politically, economically and physically. The University Forum will examine these effects by exploring topics ranging from nuclear weaponry, military strategy and deterrence to nuclear energy and the psychological and physiological ramifications of life in the nuclear age.

Lectures in the free public series will be held at 7:30 p.m., Mondays, in the Rodney Room of the Perkins Student Center.

On Oct. 2, Alvin Weinberg, distinguished fellow of the Institute of Energy Analysis, will speak on "A Second Nuclear Era: Nuclear Energy in a Greenhouse."

A member of the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering, Weinberg has received numerous honors, including the Atoms for Peace Award, the New York Academy of Science Award and the Enrico Fermi Award. He is author of "Reflections on Big Science" and co-editor of "The Nuclear Connection: A Reassessment of Nuclear Power and Nuclear Proliferation."

"Popular Images of the Atom and the Fear of Technological Risk" will be the subject of a talk Oct. 16 by Dorothy Nelkin, the Clare Boothe Luce Visiting Professor at New York University.

Nelkin, who has served on the board of directors of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is the author of several books, including "Controversy: The Politics of Technical Decisions," "Science as Intellectual Property" and "Selling Science: How the Press Covers Science and Technology."

On Oct. 23, "The Evolution of U.S.-Soviet Relations in the Nuclear Age" will be the subject of a talk by Robert C. Gray, associate professor and chairperson of the Department of Government at Franklin and Marshall College.

What happens when nuclear power plants wear out will be the subject of an Oct. 30 talk entitled "Breaking Up Is Hard to Do: Where Do We Go From Here." Speaking will be Cynthia Pollock Shea, a senior researcher with the Worldwatch Institute, which is an international research organization based in Washington, D.C.

Shea is the author of four Worldwatch papers, including "Decommissioning: Nuclear Power's Missing Link" and "Protecting Life on Earth: Steps to Save the Ozone Layer."

On Nov. 6, "Beyond Genocide—Towards Species Consciousness" will be discussed by Robert Jay Lifton, a founding member of the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, which was awarded a Nobel Peace Prize in 1986.

Richard N. Perle, who served as assistant secretary of defense for international security policy from 1981-87, will speak on "Reagan Retrospective: Safe at Last" on Nov. 13.

Concluding the series Nov. 20 will be a talk on "The Nuclear Predicament: The New Context" by Jonathan Schell, author of "The Fate of the Earth" and "The Abolition."

Formerly a staff writer for The New Yorker, he served as visiting lecturer at Princeton University during 1988-89.

Lt. Gov. Dale Wolf visits a classroom at Newark's Shue Middle School, discussing government and how it works. A lively question and answer session followed Wolf's presentation.

Sterck School boasts new sign

Students of the Margaret S. Sterck School on Chestnut Hill Road near Newark want you to know that they are deaf.

To let everyone know they are not ashamed about their hearing impairments, a new sign has been erected in front of the school.

The sign, which was dedicated during ceremonies Tuesday evening, proclaims Sterck as "Delaware's School for the Deaf."

"The official name of the school will remain the same," Dr. Eugene Thomure, director of the school, said during the dedication. "The new sign is our way of showing how proud we are of our students."

The sign, which has been in the design and planning stages for the past six months, was a project of the school's Parent-Teacher Association.

"What we're trying to emphasize to the kids is it's OK to be deaf," said Bill Papili, PTA president.

Papili said many people drive by the school, unaware that it is a school for the deaf. The brick sign with cedarwood letters will let everyone know about the school, he said.

Thomure said the sign is symbolic of the pride that students, teachers and parents have in themselves and the school.

"Being deaf is OK," said Thomure. "It should not mean a lack of pride or a lack of self-esteem."

U.S. Rep. Thomas Carper, who spoke at the sign dedication, said everyone is handicapped in some way.

"I was one of the shiest kids you'd ever want to meet," he said, smiling. "For a politician, that can be a real handicap."

The materials needed for the sign were donated, as was the labor for construction.

"It's just great because I know the community is behind us," Papili said of the donations.

Papili said the inspiration for the sign came at a conference he attended where he met doctors, lawyers and other professionals, all of whom are deaf.

"I was just overwhelmed. I know my son can do anything," said Papili, whose son is hearing impaired. "There are deaf people, and they're doing great."

Trustees form new committee

A new standing committee of the University of Delaware's Board of Trustees has been created to examine social and public policy issues with direct impact on the University and to provide policy direction to the University's advancement program.

The new Public Affairs and Advancement Committee is chaired by E. Norman Veasey, and members are trustees David B. Bolen, Werner C. Brown, Robert A. Fischer Jr., Catherine B. Flickinger, William M.W. Sharp and Sherman Townsend. In addition, the University Faculty Senate and the Delaware Undergraduate Student Congress (DUSC) each have been asked to assign two representatives to attend committee meetings.

Scheduled to meet for the first time this month, the committee is expected to examine such public affairs issues as University investments in firms that conduct business in South Africa, to review the University's mission and to evaluate any local, state or federal legislation that might affect the University. In the area of advancement, the committee is expected to help define priorities and set goals.

"Trustee involvement with the advancement efforts at the University has been a matter of high priority for some time, involving the chairman and the executive committee," Veasey said. "The creation of this committee reflects the importance of these efforts and of the need to address issues of public concern. I look forward to the interaction with my fellow trustees and the faculty and students in this new endeavor."

"The University is actively included in general advancement work intended to strengthen the presence of the University, its goals and objectives to the broader community of individuals, corporations and foundations," said G. Arno Loessner, vice president for advancement and University secretary.

"To date, these efforts have included priorities brought to the president by the faculty, as well as priorities brought to the University by those interested in supporting programs on campus."

"Clearly the University is moving in the direction of increasingly more significant advancement activities," he added. "This new committee will be most helpful in providing increased direct involvement of the trustees in formulating policy and supporting our advancement work."

Advancement projects completed recently include campaigns for the Ice Skating Science Development Center, the College of Agricultural Sciences Merit Scholars endowment, an Art Conservation endowment for graduate fellowships, the World War II Era Alumni Undergraduate Scholarship Endowment fund and the composites manufacturing laboratory.

Other projects actively underway include the chemistry, biochemistry and marine studies laboratory, the sports convocation center, the greenhouse laboratory, the University of Delaware Research Foundation, nursing scholarships, the Continuing Education-Academy of Lifelong Learning Building and scholarships in arts and humanities.

There will be music of the '70s, snacks, beverages and a ticket to the Homecoming game in which the Blue Hens will face Maine with kickoff at 1 p.m.

Cost is $22, and a $5 ticket is required for parking in the reunion area. University policy requires the parking lot to be cleared at game time. Tailgating will resume after the contest. At 6 p.m., a reunion dinner will be held in Clayton Hall. The $21 fee includes buffet dinner, formal presentation of the class gift, a directory of classmates' whereabouts and a pictorial look back at the class's college days.

The University of Delaware Alumni Association will sponsor a day trip to Hillwood, the Washington, D.C. home of the late Marjorie Merrivether Post, on Saturday, Oct. 21.

Hillwood consists of a 40-room mansion and gardens, situated on 25 acres. Considered the most representative example of Russian decorative art outside the Soviet Union, the estate is a reflection of Post's lifestyle and an era of bygone elegance. Fee is $55. Buses will depart from the Wilcastle Center on

Pennsylvania Avenue in Wilmington and from the University's Hollingsworth parking lot on North College Avenue in Newark.

Burnside joins UD faculty

Dr. Joan Burnside has joined the faculty of the University of Delaware Department of Animal Science as assistant professor of molecular endocrinology. Burnside comes to Delaware from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at Harvard Medical School in Boston, where she was a research associate in the division of molecular genetics.

In her current research, Burnside uses recombinant DNA technology to study growth regulation in chickens.

Plant science faculty additions

Dr. Masoud Ghodrati, Dr. Chaim Aharoni and W. Gary Smith have joined the faculty of the University of Delaware Department of Plant Science.

Ghodrati is assistant professor of soil physics. He came to Delaware from the University of California at Riverside. Aharoni is distinguished visiting professor, and comes to Delaware from Technion, Israel Institute of Technology in Haifa.

Smith, a Newark native and University of Delaware alumnus, is assistant professor of landscape design and construction. He has taught at the University of Pennsylvania and served as research director of the West Philadelphia Landscape Plan and Greening Project.

Nigg heads UD disaster center

The Disaster Research Center at the University of Delaware has named a new director and research director.

Joanne Nigg will become director of the center in January 1990, replacing Dr. Enrico L. Quarantelli, co-founder and current director. Kathleen J. Tierney joined the center in September as research director. "Since its inception, the Disaster Research Center has been at the forefront of important sociological research," Helen Gouldner, dean of the College of Arts and Science, said when announcing the appointments. "The exemplary qualifications of Joanne Nigg and Kathleen Tierney ensure the center's continued success."

Established within the University Department of Sociology in 1985, the Disaster Research Center was the first center for quick-response disaster studies in the United States. Center researchers study sociological and behavioral responses to disasters, both natural and man-made.

As director, Nigg will be responsible for the overall operation of the center. Tierney's responsibilities include the day-to-day operation of the center's research program.

Joanne Nigg.

In addition to their work at the center, both will teach in the Department of Sociology, Nigg as a professor and Tierney as an associate professor.

"We look forward to continued outstanding research from the Disaster Research Center under the guidance of the two new directors," said Frank Scarpitti, chairperson of the Sociology Department. "We also look forward to the contributions they'll make as faculty members."

Nigg is currently director of the Office of Hazard Studies at Arizona State University. She received her doctorate from Kathleen J. Tierney.

UCLA, and is particularly interested in policy development for environmental problems.

Nigg's most recent book, "The Politics of Earthquake Prediction," was published by Princeton University Press. An earlier book, "Waiting for Disaster," was published by the University of California Press in 1986.

Nigg is a director of the Earthquake Engineering Research Institute and a member of the Scientific Advisory Committee on the National Center for Earthquake Engineering Research at the State University of New York-Buffalo. She also served on the joint Mexico-U.S. panel on the Mexican earthquake convened by the National Academy of Sciences, and is secretary of the Research Committee on Disasters of the International Sociological Association.

In 1986, Nigg was honored with an Outstanding Research Award by the College of Public Affairs, Arizona State University. She is currently completing a National Science Foundation project on business disruption and recovery.

Tierney joined the center in September as research director. She comes to the University from the School of Social Ecology at the University of California, Irvine, and from the Institute of Safety and Systems Management, University of Southern California.

She has had research appointments at the Institute of Social Science Research, UCLA, and with the California Seismic Safety Commission.

The co-founders of the center, Quarantelli and Dr. Russell R. Dynes, will remain on the center staff as research professors. They have just initiated a three-year cooperative project between China and the United States on earthquake mitigation and preparedness planning.

Graham, and a whole lot of Bill Cosby."

The conference, sponsored by a host of Delaware teachers' organization and the Catholic Diocese of Wilmington, will open Thursday morning.

Thursday and Friday are in-service days for teachers in the Diocese of Wilmington, and Friday is an in-service day for Delaware public school teachers.

The opening address will be by Sister Clare Fitzgerald, director of the Catholic School Leadership Program at Boston College.

She will discuss "The Mission and Meaning of the Catholic School As We Move Into the 21st Century."

"When my best friend got pregnant, I told her not to make the same mistake I did."

"I knew exactly how she felt when she found out she was pregnant. She thought it could never happen to her. She was really scared and confused. I knew I could help her because the same thing had happened to me. I remember people telling me I should get an abortion - that it was the easiest thing to do. I was just so scared of everybody finding out that I was pregnant. I never stopped to really find out what all my options were. I never stopped to consider how an abortion might hit me emotionally. I felt so bad when I found out I was pregnant. I thought nothing could feel worse, but after my abortion, I felt like I didn't deserve to live. Since then I've learned that there are people and groups who can help you when you're pregnant, scared, and confused. Now I know that if I had information and help during that time, I wouldn't have had to make decisions without knowing all the choices. So, I told my best friend not to make the same mistake I did. Even though she was scared, I told her to take time to understand more about her pregnancy and make a careful decision. Life is just too important. It's the best advice I've ever given a friend."

Newarkers support choice, knock slots

Abortion is an issue which generates passionate feelings on both sides, and national polls show the country to be divided almost down the middle between pro-life and pro-choice.

But in the annual Newark Community Day poll conducted by State Sen. James Neal, nearly three-quarters of the people who cast ballots believe abortions should be legal in Delaware.

Neal said 834 people — the highest vote count in 11 years — answered the question "should abortions be legal in Delaware?"

A total of 612 voters, or 74 percent, answered "yes, it should be the choice of the woman." Another 60, or 7 percent, answered "yes, except after the 20th week of pregnancy."

Only 62 voters, or 7 percent, believe abortion should be illegal in Delaware under all circumstances.

Forty-four voters, or 5 percent, believe abortion should be illegal except when the life of the mother is in danger, and 53, or 6 percent, believe abortion should be illegal except in cases of rape, incest or danger to the mother's life.

Three voters had no opinion.

Poll participants were also asked whether or not they support a Constitutional amendment to prohibit flag burning. A total of 260 voters (32 percent) favor such an amendment while 547 voters (68 percent) do not support such an amendment.

Another key question concerned the drug issue. Poll participants were asked what direction government should take to curb drug abuse.

The majority believe government should "spend more to do more" or redirect current spending to the cause. A total of 255 (36 percent) want government to redirect spending and 252 (36 percent) want government to spend more on the problem.

Twenty-four voters (3 percent) believe current government efforts are sufficient and 40 (6 percent) think the government should worry about other problems.

Seventy-five voters (11 percent) believe government should legalize most drugs and 62 (9 percent) believe it should legalize marijuana.

On a state issue, the majority of people participating believe Delaware should not permit slot machines to be operated at its four horse race tracks.

A total of 515 (69 percent) voted against slot machines, while 232 (31 percent) voted in favor of the gambling devices.

Neal's last poll question asked participants where or not they expected their economic situation to improve, worsen or stay about the same in the next year.

The majority, 427 (53 percent) believe their situation will remain about the same, 310 (38 percent) believe they will be better off and 70 (9 percent) believe they will be worse off.

While the poll is not scientific, Neal says it provides a good forum through which to communicate with his constituents and serves as a means by which to promote discussion of important issues facing government today.

Protecting the nation's coasts

Of all the important environmental issues facing our nation in the decade to come, none is more important than coastal development. The decisions we make in the Congress and in state capitals of coastal states like Delaware over the next few years will have a profound impact on the direction we take in managing our coastal areas. What lies in the balance may well be the survivability of many of these finite resources.

Last week I unveiled an initiative to reform the nation's flood insurance program. For years the federal government has inadvertently encouraged the building of new properties along the coast which could sustain heavy damage during hurricanes or coastal storms. How? By providing cut-rate flood insurance premiums that do not reflect the risks associated with building too close to the waterfront. The flood insurance program should give communities and their residents incentives to make economically and environmentally sound choices that will allow reasonable development but protect the environment.

If a hurricane like Hugo hits

CAPITOL COMMENTS

U.S. Rep. Tom Carper

the coast of Florida, North Carolina, or Delaware with full force, the costs in lost lives, destroyed property, and ravaged natural resources could be staggering. Prospects of a multi-billion dollar storm are very real. If not from Hugo, then from some future storm.

The flood insurance program faces the prospects of $3 to $4 billion in flood damage claims in a bad year. With just half a billion dollars in reserve, and only 13 percent of flood plain properties insured, the flood insurance program is ill-equipped to deal with disasters of this scale.

Who will pay when the big ones hit? In addition to the personal tragedies, the American taxpayer would face billions of dollars in unpaid insurance claims because so few people pay premiums into the current fund. A significant number of homeowners without insurance will simply walk away from the disaster, leaving their lenders to take the loss.

My legislation is designed to increase participation in the flood insurance program and require homeowners and communities to take substantial steps to ensure that their property is adequately protected against the threat of storms and floods. In certain high-risk areas — notably coastal high-hazard areas — and in instances where structures have suffered significant damage, the bill provides funds for the demolition or relocation of structures, and to help communities acquire flood-prone properties for recreational or other non-development purposes. By avoiding high-risk development, insurance rates can remain low.

The bill would also establish a revolving loan fund to provide low-interest loans for modifications to homes subject to repetitive damages to reduce the likelihood of additional claims. Should homeowners choose not to make those modifications, they would be subject to increased flood insurance payments to reflect the obvious risk they face.

We should also take steps to establish erosion setbacks so that building that does take place is set far enough from the water's edge to ensure that the structures will not end up in the drink. Setbacks don't only save lives and property, they preserve the quality of our beaches.

By the year 2000, over 75 percent of our population will live within 50 miles of our coasts. The time for coast-crowding development which risks lives, property and the environment is past. Flood insurance reform will establish a balance between development needs and the environmental capacities.

POSTBOX

Police harassing University students

To the Editor:

Where are Newark's finest between midnight and 6 a.m.? No longer are they asleep behind the bowling alley. Now you can find them harassing our University of Delaware students who live at Paper Mill Apartments.

We send our kids to the University to better themselves. They do not always have dormitory space for everyone, so the kids have to rent nearby apartments that are very expensive.

To cut the expenses, students have to share with two or three other students and try to make ends meet.

Not everyone has the same school schedule or works at the same job, and several cars are needed.

If the kids come home any later than 10 p.m. on any night of the week, there is a slim chance of finding any place to park.

The one thing they are sure to find is a ticket or their car towed the next morning. There just is not sufficient parking for the number of residents who live there.

Not only do the parents pay for tuition, a place to live and food, but now they have to pay Goodchild's $65 and the Newark Police $10-to-$35 every time our kids want to get some sleep so they can get up for an 8 a.m. class.

Maybe instead of our kids trying to come home at night to study and sleep, they should hang out on Main Street with the rest of the druggies and dirtbags that control that area since there is no police control there.

It seems they're more concerned with bringing in revenue for the city than actually doing some kind of good by giving the owners of the apartments fines and feeds for insufficient parking.

Fine them, not us!

Historical Society plans open house

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

Those Newarkers who think they know their community may be in for a surprise if they visit the Newark Train Station.

"You don't have to go back 100 years for things to be drastically different in Newark," said Bob Thomas, representing the Newark Historical Society, during a recent tour of the organization's new headquarters in the station. "The city really changed after the turnpike was built in 1963."

People will get a hint of Newark's past if they tour a new display at the recently-renovated railroad station, just off South College Avenue.

The Historical Society will host a grand opening of its display 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 30. After the opening, people can tour the station and view the display 6:30-8 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

"We do hope to expand the hours," said Thomas, "possibly to include the afternoon."

Visitors to the station will be able to get information about the display from an attendant on duty. There is no cost to the visitors.

"It's an all-volunteer project," said Thomas.

The display will vary from time to time, with the first exhibit based on the theme of public service.

"All these things relate to public service in Newark," said Thomas, referring to items in glass cases.

The public service theme was chosen to honor the city. The city renovated the 1877 railroad station, which was considered a prestigious commuter station.

One case is dedicated to the Newark Police Department. A 1962 tan uniform hangs inside a case beside leg irons and handcuffs that were used in the 1880s.

The various hats and badges worn by police over the years are on display. There is also a police shield that was put on police cars.

"It was the first shield used on marked police cars in 1965," said Thomas. "Before that, they had regular cars that they put radios in."

Aetna Hose, Hook, and Ladder Co. is honored for its 100 years of service to the community. The volunteer fire company formed in 1888 after a destroyed the Dean Woolen Mill on White Clay Creek on Christmas Day, 1986.

"That put about 50 percent of Newark's work force out of work," said Thomas. "It destroyed the economy of the town."

A picture of the mill is on display as are two other buildings destroyed in spectacular fires. The Thomas Wallpaper Company on North College Avenue was destroyed by fire in 1918 and the Newark

Robert Thomas of the Newark Historical Society is excited about the upcoming open house.

Lumber Company building on Main Street burned in 1954 after a plane crashed into it.

The city's water and electric departments are featured in the display. In 1972, the city hired Rex Gilmore to become the first director of the city water department, creating separate water and electric departments.

"They used to be one department," said Thomas. "It was called the Water and Light Department."

Visitors to the train station can view water and electric meters from 1910. There is also a picture of the building that housed the city's water works.

"That's the original water works on East Main Street," said Thomas. "It's now the Newark Senior Center."

There will also be information available at the train station about the Newark Historical Society, which has been in existence for the past eight years.

With the changes on Main Street, Thomas said they have been able to save some signs of the old businesses. The Deluxe Luncheonette sign hangs on the wall in the train station.

"Bob Teeven donated that to us," said Thomas. "We didn't know he had that."

Pictures depicting Newark in time gone by hang in the train station. A picture of the State Theater, formerly on East Main Street, shows that James Stewart and Rosiland Russell were starring in a movie being shown at the theatre in 1952.

Thomas said the Historical Society hopes to rotate displays periodically.

"This public service theme has brought out a lot of things with the city," said Thomas. "We'd like to stick with the themes, but we will have mixed exhibits as well."

Organizing the historic display has been a massive job underway for several months. Thoms said volunteers, particularly Bill Zagar of Newark, have been very helpful.

"He's been very instrumental in putting this together for us," said Thomas.

Zagar, according to Thomas, is a University of Delaware employee with an interest in preserving Newark's past.

Thomas said the display at the train station can be viewed by appointment. Many children's groups have already expressed an interest in seeing the display.

"I think it is very important for these materials to be made available," said Thomas. "It doesn't take long for things like this to be forgotten in time."

BLUEPRINTS FOR THE 90's

More than ever, you need a health care plan that's national in scope, but local in design.

For today's Americans, life is seldom at a standstill. We always seem to be on the move: leaving town on business, for vacation, or in search of new adventures or opportunities.

Whether you travel around the world or just around town, you need a health care plan that will cover you — where you live and wherever life takes you.

And that's what Blue Cross Blue Shield does best.

Because we're part of the national Blue Cross Blue Shield system, you know you'll get the coverage you need, wherever you go.

And, because we're a local company, our people live and work here. We understand the unique needs that Delawareans have, so we design our health care plans especially to meet them. And we give you the kind of hometown service only a long-time neighbor can give.

Isn't it nice to know that the health care plan that stretches clear across America starts right here in your back yard?

Colonial crafts revival

by Nancy Turner

Of the Post staff

Beginning with the early settlers, who made necessities like soap, cloth, candles, and preserves, domestic crafts reflect an evolution of American creative talent and ingenuity.

Today, having outlived the Industrial Revolution, cottage industries flourish as consumers learn to appreciate things that are truly "handmade."

Domestic craft goods come in and out of vogue according to changing tastes. The hot crafts 15 years ago were decoupage and embroidery. Then knitting re-emerged in popularity, along with dried flower arranging and basket weaving. For the past 10 years, counted cross stitch has reigned supreme.

Thanks to the Chadds Ford Historical Society, sponsor of the recent Chadds Ford Days festival, and other organizations like it, we can step back in time and enjoy a look at the early American forerunners of modern day crafts.

While primitive crafts bring great recreational pleasure to those persons interested in their preservation, their beginnings were almost always utilitarian.

Reproduction primitive hooked rugs are very popular in country home decorating these days and like the originals, they feature simple pictures of sheep, chicken, flowers, horses: whatever could be seen through a Revolutionary American window.

According to Bettina Maraldo of Mendenhall, Pa., an expert in hooked rug restoration, the first ones in America were used as bed rugs. When burlap was introduced for grain sacks in 1825, rug makers, not wanting to throw anything away, began making the backing for wool hearth rugs out of the used sacks.

The Industrial Revolution brought with it new methods for cutting narrow strips of wool which, over the years, helped refine the process and enabling the incorporation of complex shading and oriental designs.

The primitive designs are now being beautifully reproduced. Prices vary among crafters, but new small hearth rugs start at about $200.

Among the "newest" decorative items to the garden this year are bee skeps. Marie Stotler of Malburn,

Pa., a skep maker, explained, "A skep is a colonial beehive that was used before the invention of the wooden box beehive in about 1850."

Woven from rye, the original dome shaped hive dates back to ancient Egypt, where they were made with criss-crossed sticks inside to support the honeycomb.

Bee keepers no longer recommend using skeps for gathering honey, warning that they are easily penetrated by moths and rodents. Available from American crafters, Yugoslavia also exports decorative skeps.

The "scratch" preparation of food at home, it may be argued, is fast becoming a lost art. When we think of old fashioned homemade food

Cheers to sunny sadists

San Francisco is the birthplace of the recently formed Cheerful People Club which was established by a twice-divorced ophthalmologist. Relax, this isn't a column about donning rose-colored glasses and hunting for pearls in the mud. Instead, it's my list of people who deserve to be charter Cheerful People.

The first dates back to my college days. Labelling herself the Coed from Keokuck, she was the joyful person who flung open the study room door the night before finals and burred. "Be happy, the sun is setting, the moon is rising, our tummies are full of nutritious food, and we are in our appointed places." Since we were intelligent people who knew the consequences for first degree murder, we stayed in our seats.

Remember Typhoid Mary? We had Happy Hannah. In small doses, she wasn't totally dreadful because she served as an antidote to the despair that most college students periodically subject themselves to. In doses longer than 7 minutes, however, she was torture.

Of course we wanted frivolity in our lives, but we were terrified that her disease might be contagious; we knew, right down to our toe nails, that our usual feelings of miserable, worthless insecurity were greatly preferable to her mindless rapture. While the logic may seem elliptical, remember we were college students sheltered from the real world.

Happy Hannah went through guardian angels the way a toddler goes through diapers. Imagine the heavenly protection Hannah required when she burst into the bathroom on a drizzly November morning and chortled to droopy-faced teeth brushers, "Hi De Ho Ho, Let's get going. It is the first day of the rest of your lives." It took platoons of angels wrapping their wings around her when she followed up with, "It takes less effort to think the most profound thought, than it does to brush your teeth."

Graduating from the grind of college was a relief, leaving Hannah behind was ecstasy. Then I went to work in a bank in Buffalo where the head of the department — the next candidate for the San Francisco group — assembled his staff for weekly "Cheerful Earfuls." You'd think my years with Happy Hannah would've immunized me to Jolly Jeffery; instead, I was sensitized — much like too many bee stings turn an outdoors person into someone who is terrified to leave her house in the summer. I lasted less than a year.

Two others deserve membership. Merry Matilda was a fellow church member who told me — when I had two in diapers, a third on the way, and only dreamed of an uninterrupted night's sleep — that these were the best years of my life and that nothing so marvelous would ever happen again.

Howard to sing at UD

Peter Howard.

Peter Howard, noted Broadway conductor and arranger, composer and pianist, will present his solo show at 12:10 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 5 in Bacchus Theatre of the Perkins Student Center on the University of Delaware campus in Newark.

The performance is free and open to the public. Lunch reservations may be made by calling 451-2626.

As conductor for the forthcoming musical, "Annie 2 or Miss Hannigan's Revenge," Howard has started rehearsals for this "Annie" sequel, which stars Dorothy Loudon. He most recently conducted "The Mikado" and "The Pajama Game" at the Lincoln Center.

At his Bacchus show, he will play and sing as well as relate stories about some of the musicals with which he has been involved, including "Hello, Dolly," "My Fair Lady," "Barnum," "The Sound of Music,"

'My Fair Lady' to open Oct. 4

Lerner and Loewe's classical musical "My Fair Lady" will open the University of Delaware's 1989-90 Friends of the Performing Arts series in October.

Performances are scheduled at 8 p.m., Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 4-5, in Mitchell Hall on the University's Newark campus.

Tickets — at $20 for the general public, $16 for senior citizens 62 and older and U.D. faculty and staff, and $8 for full-time students — are now on sale at the Mitchell Hall box office, telephone 451-2204. The box office is open from noon-5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and until 9 p.m. on performance days.

This production of "My Fair Lady" is produced by New York's Jerry Kravatt Entertainment Co., which presented "A Chorus Line" in the University's 1986 Friends of the Performing Arts series.

Adapted from George Bernard

Shaw's "Pygmalion," this version tells its tale of Henry Higgins and his speech student Eliza Doolittle with such now classic songs as "I Could Have Danced All Night," "On the Street Where You Live," "Wouldn't It Be Lovely," "The Rain in Spain" and "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face."

When it opened on Broadway in 1956, "My Fair Lady" bowled over audiences and critics alike.

In addition to "My Fair Lady," the 1989-90 Friends of the Performing Arts series will feature the Paul Taylor Dance Company, Tuesday, Nov. 7; the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, Thursday, Feb. 8; pianist John Browning, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 23-24; and "A Soldier's Play," Saturday and Sunday, March 10-11.

A Civil War encampment featuring the 61st New York Volunteers will be part of the Hagley Museum Family Day festival this Saturday.

Hagley: Blast from the past

An exciting fall season is in store for area residents who visit the Hagley Museum and Library located on the banks of the Brandywine now through November. Hagley is the site of the original du Pont powder mills and estate of the founder of the company, E. I. du Pont.

Things get under way this Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. as Hagley holds its third annual Family Day. This is an opportunity to enjoy new and traditional blue grass music, rug hooking, weaving and spinning. There will also be wheelbarrow races, toy making, carriage and hay rides and a jaunt in a steam car.

New this year will be a "Punch and Judy" show performed by Tuckers' Tales Puppet Theater. That will happen at 3 p.m. on the Hagley property at the restored worker's community, Blacksmith Hill.

The photograph which Jill Loftus of Hagley let me share with you today shows one of the highlights of this coming Saturday, the Civil War encampment, with soldiers provided by the 61st New York Volunteer Infantry. They will take time out from their "military" duties to challenge the Hagley "Up-the-Creekers" to a 19th century baseball game under

THE ARTS

Phil Toman

1845 Knickerbocker Rules.

On the weekend of Oct. 7, 8 and 9, an Irish Stew cooking demonstration will take place on Blacksmith Hill. From 1 to 4 p.m. each day that weekend you can learn all the fine points of cooking an Irish stew on a woodstove. Don't be after turning your nose up at this one, me lads and lasses, 'tis a fine thing to know.

Sure and if you do have to miss it, Hagley's Jill Loftus tells me that the demonstrations will be repeated on Oct. 21 and 22.

Two photo exhibits open in the Henry Clay gallery at Hagley on Saturday, Oct. 21, at 9:30 a.m. "Early Flight: 1900-1911" will be an exhibit of 56 original Wright Brothers photographs which document their experiments in early flight and provide an intimate view of their work and travels.

At the same time "Images of Invention and Industry: A Celebration of 150 Years of Photography" will open. This exhibit will compliment the Wright Brothers' exhibit with images from Hagley's extensive photographic collections. The photos range from early Daguerreotypes of the 1840s to modern color works with many different styles and subjects.

In conjunction with the Wright Brothers' exhibit, Hagley will hold a one day conference on Saturday, Oct. 21, entitled "The Airplane and the Camera: Images and Reality of Early Flight." It will feature speakers to give differing perspectives on the Wright Brothers. Insight will be given to the brothers' careers, their work as inventors and photographers and into their home lives.

Cooking was an important part of early America, and I am glad it still is. On Oct. 23, there will be another 19th century woodstove cookery workshop on the grounds. This one will be held in the kitchen of the restored Gibbons House of the worker's community.

More excitement for those of us who enjoy eating will occur at Hagley on Oct. 28 and 30. On both those days from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Gibbons House there will be a mid-day dinner served using 19th century recipes. For this one, reservations are required.

All this is upcoming at Hagley Museum and Library. If you have never visited this fascinating place, make this the fall that you do. For more information, admission prices, reservations, etc., you may call Hagley at (302) 658-2400. You may also write them at P.O. Box 3630, Wilmington, DE 19807.

Go, learn and enjoy!

The Delaware Singers in preparation for their 1989-90 season.

Delaware Singers begin ambitious undertaking

The Delaware Singers, in its fifth year, has received funding to undertake its most ambitious project to date — a two-month series of educational programs in addition to its regular concert schedule.

The educational programs are known as Gateway Choralfest '89, and are being funded through a $15,000 grant from the Christina Gateway joint venture of the Linpro Company and Delle Donne & Associates.

Purpose of the programs are to increase community understanding of choral music by offering a series of community outreach opportunities.

"In European countries, choristers are highly acknowledged and can make a living at their profession," said Xavier DeCaire, president of The Delaware Singers board.

"In the United States, the choral craft is not as widely recognized."

The Delaware Singers is a member of Chorus America, an association of professional vocal ensembles. That membership enables the organization to work with internationally respected choruses to bring national recognition for choral singing.

The $15,000 grant will support Gateway Choralfest '89, a student scholarship, fees for a Pro-Am Chorus consisting of The Delaware Singers and selected high school students, and use of an office building in Wilmington for rehearsals and administrative space.

The Pro-Am Chorus will rehearse through Nov. 18 in preparation for the season opening concert of The Delaware Singers.

That concert, entitled "An Exaltation of Glorias," will be held Nov. 19 and will feature masterworks by Rutter, Washburn, Sprague and Vittoria. Tickets cost $8 to $10.

The concert will be preceded by a festival of wine and music Nov. 17 at Three Christina Centre. Cost is $35 per person.

Dr. Alice Parker, an internationally recognized composer, arranger and conductor, will work with students and professionals during workshops Oct. 13-15.

For more information on The Delaware Singers or Gateway Choralfest '89, call 652-2977.

The Delaware Singers was founded by music educators Jean Scalessa and Dr. Peter McCarthy, professor of music at the University of Delaware.

Biennial '89 to open

The Delaware Art Museum will present Biennial '89, a juried exhibition of works by artists from an eight-county region, from Oct. 6 through Nov. 26.

The exhibition, organized by the museum, will feature 84 original works by area artists in a variety of media including painting, sculpture, photography, fiber, wood, metal and paper.

John Perreault of New York, art critic and writer, was guest juror for Biennial '89.

Perreault writes regularly for The Village Voices, and his works appear in Art in America, Artforum and Arts magazines.

He is the former director of the Newhouse Center for Contemporary Art and former curator of the Everson Museum of Art.

Exhibition prize winners are Lanny Bergner and Jeanne

Jaffe, both of Philadelphia, Jasper Brinton of Phoenixville, Pa., and Renee Foulks of Media, Pa.

Bergner entered a mixed media work entitled "Un-Plum" and Brinton a walnut furniture piece entitled "Most Chair."

Jaffe entered a paper sculpture, "Gardener Series — Kneeling Figure," and Foulks an oil on linen, "Entombment: Fitful Sleep."

Other artists represented in the exhibition include fiber artist Arlinka Blair and photographer Catherine Gruver, both of Wilmington, and Jim Ippolito of Lewes.

Unreserved, free guided tours of Biennial '89 will be held at 2 and 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 24. They will be led by senior docent Bobbie Tomases.

Artist panels will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesdays, Oct. 17 and 31 and Nov. 14. Moderator Jenine Culligan, Biennial '89 curator, will discuss art with three artists on each of the three panels. The discussions are free and open to the public.

Biennial '89 combines for the first time the museum's two juried biennial shows, the Delaware Exhibition and the Contemporary Crafts Exhibition.

The Delaware Exhibition was first held in 1912 and grew to include regional photography, painting, graphics, collage and sculpture.

The Contemporary Crafts Exhibition was first presented in 1957.

The Biennial is co-sponsored by the Bank of Delaware and Provident National Bank, affiliates of PNC Financial Corp.

Delaware Art Museum is located at 2301 Kentmere Parkway, Wilmington. For information, call 571-9590.

It's time to bring in plants

With the approach of cold weather, it is time to consider bringing your houseplants back inside for the winter.

Before bringing them in, however, Margaret Moor, Delaware State College extension agent, suggests that you check them carefully for pests.

She offers the following descriptions of common pests as well as some guidelines for pest control.

Aphids are small white or green to black insects, with six legs and a pair of antennae projecting from their head. They can be either winged or wingless.

Some appear powdery or woolly because of a waxy covering on their bodies.

These common pests can be found clustered on the underside of plant leaves or on young, tender leaves and stems or flower buds.

One sign of a possible aphid infestation is the presence of ants on the plants. The ants are attracted by the sweet sticky liquid called "honeydew" excreted by aphids.

According to Moor, "aphids reduce plant vigor, cause distorted and curled leaves, malformed flowers and hardened buds."

A variety of insecticides can be used to control a severe infestation on many plants, but Moor suggests that for isolated infestations, the home gardener hand pick or wash off aphids with an alcohol-dipped swab. "Be careful not to saturate plant tissue with alcohol," she cautions.

Other common houseplant pests include caterpillars and cutworms that are the larvae of butterflies and moths. These exist in a wide variety of sizes and colors. Many are fuzzy and covered with dense hair.

The damage these larvae cause to plants varies, Moor says. Some caterpillars feed openly on leaves and/or flowers, others bore into flower buds, tie several leaves together, or roll leaves.

Some caterpillars and cutworms simply cut off young plants altogether at the soil level. One indication of the presence of caterpillars or cutworms is dark fecal pellets left on or under the plant.

To control these pests, Moor says handpicking is best if only a few plants and pests involved. If this isn't practical, dip or spray plants with an insecticide.

To control cutworms in the soil, drench the soil surface with an insecticide labeled for this use on houseplants.

Yet another common pest is the mealybug. Mealybugs are small, soft-bodied insects that resemble little pieces of cotton. They can be found on stems and leaves, especially on the under-surface.

To control mealybugs on a limited number of plants, handpick the bugs, wash plants with a forceful stream of water or wipe with an alcohol swab. There are also commercial insecticides that will control mealybugs.

"Please remember," Moor emphasizes, "to correctly identify the pest before treating any plant. In addition, read and reread all labels when using an insecticide. Most pesticide sprays are recommended for outdoor application. Follow all label directions."

Extension offers Heart Healthy classes

University of Delaware Cooperative Extension is again offering Heart Healthy courses around the state.

"The Healthy course emphasizes cooking techniques and foods that are known to aid healthy hearts," says Dr. Sue Snider, Extension food and nutrition specialist.

The course was originally designed for heart patients and their families, Snider says. But she adds that the classes are also useful for those with high blood cholesterol levels or anyone who wants to learn healthy cooking techniques before a problem develops.

Heart healthy classes, available in Delaware since 1984, are taught by county Extension agents who have been trained by Snider in the scientific and technical aspects of the subject.

In New Castle County, the series will be offered on Wednesday Oct. 11, 18 and 25 from 7:30 to 9 p.m., and on Thursdays Oct. 12, 19 and 26 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Both series will be held in the county Extension office, 039 Townsend Hall, on South College Avenue in Newark, across from the Chrysler plant.

new Castle County classes cost $7.50 per person or $10 per couple. For information on scholarships call 451-1239.

To register send a check payable to the University of Delaware with your name, address and daytime phone number to: New Castle County Extension Office, University of Delaware, 039 Townsend Hall, Newark, Del. 19717-1303.

Pastors plan abortion protest

The fifth annual Pastors Protest Against Abortion will be held Saturday morning, Sept. 30 in front of Christiana Hospital.

The two-hour protest, which will begin at 10 a.m., is sponsored by the New Castle County chapter of the Christian Action Council.

Phil Hibbard, president of the county chapter, said the council is a national evangelical pro-life organization.

He said a large number of demonstrators are expected to attend the rally, which is part of a nationwide protest at hundreds of hospitals.

"As much as it is appreciated that the Christiana Hospital does provide excellent care in the majority of health areas," Hibbard said, "it is strongly believed that their policy of doing abortions is not in keeping with their general policy of healing and preserving life."

According to council statistics, Christiana Hospital performed 929 abortions during 1988.

The demonstration will include a program and the presentation of a petition bearing more than 10,000 signatures which requests that the Medical Center of Delaware discontinue abortions.

Although many Newark area pastors are expected to participate in the demonstration, opinions on the abortion issue vary among pastors just as they vary among citizens in the public at large.

Earlier this year several New Castle County pastors banded together to form a pro-choice organization.

Saengerbund to give thanks

A traditional Bavarian Erntedankfest, or harvest thanksgiving celebration, will be hosted by the Delaware Saengerbund at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 1 in Zion Lutheran Church, Lancaster Avenue, Wilmington.

The ecumenical service will be conducted by the Rev. Curtis Leins, pastor of Zion, and the Rev. Russell Perkins, pastor of St. Polycarp's Roman Catholic Church of Smyrna.

The chorus of the Saengerbund, which means "singing society," and the Johannes Brass ensemble will be featured in the musical segments, which include the beloved hymn "Nun Danket Alle Gott," known to English-speaking worshippers as "Now Thank We All Our God."

Hilde Cox, chairperson of the Saengerbund's cultural affairs, was born in Bavaria. She describes the annual event as "a melodic celebration of gratitude for the many blessings made manifest at the beginning of the beautiful autumn season."

Cox emphasizes that all faiths may participate in Sunday's replication of the fest, which has been held for centuries in the picturesque German state.

Following the service, all participants are invited to refreshments at the Saengerbund clubhouse at 49 Salem Church Road near Newark.

The Delaware Saengerbund, which last weekend held its annual Oktoberfest celebration, was founded in 1853 and is one of the nation's oldest ethnic organizations. Today it has more than 800 members.

Vergantino, Knight spark Hen victory

by Steve Canaday

Of the Post staff

Coach Tubby Raymond's University of Delaware Blue Hens came from behind on a wet and blustery Saturday afternoon to overturn the West Chester Golden Rams 41-21 in their '89 home opener.

Twenty unanswered third quarter points lifted the Hens to a convincing victory and a 3-0 start in this still-young season.

The offense relied heavily on the run for the third week in a row, but freshman quarterback Bill Vergantino showed that he is quite capable of moving the team through the air as well.

Leading the ground game was left halfback, Gil Knight. It was Knight's 57-yard breakaway that set up Delaware's first touchdown, and the senior back had a hand in the first three Blue Hen touchdowns.

He scored the second Delaware touchdown on a six-yard run through the middle of the West Chester line, and set up the third Hen score with a 39-yard breakaway to the Golden Ram one yard line.

Knight finished with 151 yards on only 19 carries across the water-logged Delaware Stadium.

Vergantino's 12 of 17, 152-yard passing performance complemented the hard-running Knight very well.

The Hens young quarterback looked like a tested veteran on Saturday. He threw well from the pocket, but more impressive was his ability to find his receiver on the run. More often than not, that receiver was tight end John Yergey.

Yergey had a personal career-best afternoon with nine receptions for 86 yards and a touchdown. Under the soggy conditions, the big tight end made a steady target for the young quarterback.

"Vergantino knows where (Yergey) is," Raymond said. "And John has been responding well by catching everything (Vergantino) throws to him, which in turn reinforces the focus."

Raymond was pleased with his young signal caller's ability to throw on the run.

"He threw the ball moving around better. Throwing on the run works better to augment our option game," he explained.

The Hen quarterback threw for three touchdowns, and ran for a fourth. He did not throw an interception Saturday, and has yet to throw one this year.

In addition to Yergey's touchdown grab, scoring receptions were made by split end Darrin Ferrell and fullback Daryl Brantley.

"I'm pleased with the outcome of the game," Raymond said. "We had to make a very significant adjustment in our offensive game plan because of the field conditions, and Gil Knight responded very well to that."

"Defensively, I thought we were a little tight. But when you look at the numbers, you find the defense played rather well."

Hampshire QB may play against Hens

by Steve Canaday

Of the Post staff

The University of New Hampshire Wildcats will invade Delaware Stadium this Saturday to take on the 3-0 Fighting Blue Hens. That's a certainty. What isn't so certain is who will be calling the signals for the 'Cats.

Mark Carr, the Wildcats' number one pre-season quarterback, has yet to see action this year. He has been sidelined by a bout of mononucleosis since the beginning of the season. He might be ready to return by this weekend, but hasn't had a chance to work with the offensive line or the receiving corps for three weeks.

Sophomore Matt Griffin, the back-up quarterback, was pressed into action when Carr

Glasgow tops Elkton, 14-6

by Steve Canaday

Of the Post staff

Glasgow High School, undefeated and ranked among the top ten high school football teams in Delaware, had to come up with several big plays to stave off a winless but determined Elkton team 14-6 on Monday night.

"I think we learned some lessons tonight," Glasgow head coach Dave Scott said after the game. "One lesson that we learned is that our defense can win a ballgame."

The Dragons, who looked sharp and disciplined in their opening win over Dickinson, came out flat against the Golden Elks.

Coming off the emotional 8-7 win over Dickinson may have left the Dragons somewhat uninspired for the Elkton game. This coming weekend's game against Delaware's top-ranked Dover High could not have made it easy for the Dragons to concentrate on the Elks.

Scott accepted much of the blame for the team's blase performance.

"As a coaching staff, I don't think we did a really good job. I don't think we prepared the kids mentally. I don't think we got Dover out of our minds enough."

"Elkton is a high school football team," Scott explained, "and every time you play high school football, the other team is good enough to beat you."

Elkton almost did just that.

On Elkton's first possession of the game, a bad snap and subsequent fumble gave the Dragons the ball on Elkton's 15-yard line. But Glasgow couldn't move the ball and ended up coming away empty-handed.

"You've got to put those early turnovers in," Scott said afterwards. "If we put them in, it turns into a rout. But we didn't do it." When Glasgow regained possession, again it was deep in Elkton territory partly due to Dave Pullen's 17-yard punt return, and partly due to an Elkton personal foul on the play.

This series belonged to Pat Williams, Glasgow's slashing tailback. Williams rushed five consecutive times directly into the Elkton defensive line. On the fifth carry, a two-yard burst, he went in for the games first score. The two-point conversion pass from Michael Balantine to Jason Gross was complete, and Glasgow led 8-0.

Gwinn kick lifts Newark

by Steve Canaday

Of the Post staff

Newark High School's Dave Gwinn, who coach Butch Simpson called "a crippled field goal kicker," hit a third quarter 26-yard field goal Saturday night to lift the host Yellowjackets over a tenacious Cape Henlopen team, 3-0.

"We actually came into this game hoping we wouldn't have to use (Gwinn)," Simpson said after the game. "He's had a severely strained pelvic area and hip, that he got on the first day of practice running the mile."

"I have some trouble planting my foot," Gwinn said of his injury. "Rob (Callahan) did a good job holding the ball tonight."

Gwinn wasn't the only Yellowjacket in poor health. Regular starting fullback Kenny Crawford had the flu and saw limited action. Mike Gerhart, a would-be starter at halfback, sustained injuries in Newark's opener against Caesar Rodney and wasn't able to play against Cape. B.J. Bias, starting in Gerhart's slot, left the game early in the second half with an injury to his hand, possibly a fractured wrist.

"(The victory) is a tribute to our little bit of depth at running back," Simpson said.

Lacrosse camp is announced

Interest in lacrosse is growing throughout Greater Newark.

Several high school teams, include Newark and St. Mark's, field club lacrosse teams and more and more young people can be found flicking lacrosse balls back and forth in area parks.

The surge in interest in due in part to the efforts of University of Delaware men's lacrosse coach Bob Shillinglaw, who has yet another promotional venture on the horizon.

Shillinglaw has announced the formation of the Cecil County Lacrosse Association, to be sponsored by the Cecil County YMCA.

The association will host a lacrosse camp 1-3 p.m. Sundays, Oct. 8, 15, 22 and 29 at Elkton High School.

Shillinglaw said purpose of the camp is to introduce players to the game to lacrosse, teaching them the rules and holding drills, lectures and scrimmages.

There will be age group instruction for youths 6-10, 11-14, and 15 and older.

The instructors form a Who's Who of the lacrosse world, featuring coaches Don Zimmerman of Johns Hopkins, Tony Seamen of the University of Pennsylvania, Dave Cottle of Loyola, Terry Corcoran of Washington College and Bill Tierney of Princeton University.

Fee is $25, and the first 50 campers who enroll will receive a free lacrosse stick. Registration deadline is Oct. 2. For details, contact the Cecil County YMCA at (301) 398-2333.

The association will sponsor a lacrosse league in the spring of 1989, and each fall camp participant will receive a $5 discount towards the spring league.

For Christiana, errors have meant the difference in two losses.

Turnovers topple Christiana

by Steve Canaday

Of the Post staff

"A coach's nightmare." That's how Christiana High School head football coach Bill Muehleisen described his team's 30-0 loss to Dover Saturday in Newark.

It was an understatement. The opening six minutes of the game proved to be a coach's worst dreams come true, as Muehleisen's Vikings simply could not hold onto the football.

The agonizing sequence went like this, so try to follow the bouncing ball:

- 0:05: Dover kicks off to Christiana, Vikings fumble.
- 0:10: Dover, returning favor, fumbles back to Christiana.

- 0:28: Christiana, not to be outdone, fumbles to Senators again on first play from scrimmage.

- 3:16: Senators score touchdown, PAT is blocked.

- 3:24: Dover kicks off to Vikings again.

- 4:50: Vikings fumble again, and this time the Senators run the fumble back for a second touchdown. PAT fails due to bad snap.

- 4:52: Dover kicks off again.
- 4:55: On next play Christiana fumbles again, this time in the end zone where Dover recovers for its third touchdown. Two-point conversion fails.

- 5:10: Dover kicks off again.
- 5:24: Christiana throws interception.

- 5:53: Senators score fourth touchdown. PAT blocked.

Four Christiana fumbles, one Dover fumble, one Christiana interception, four Dover touchdowns, two blocked extra point attempts, one bad snap on an extra point attempt, and one failed two-point conversion.

The scoreboard read Dover 24, Christiana 0. And there was still 6:07 left to play in the first quarter.

After that horrendous start, the Vikings finally remembered to take the ball with them on their offensive plays, and the game settled down as quickly as it had erupted.

Christiana's defense came out of shock to stop the Senators' powerful offense for the remaining three quarters. Dover scored a final touchdown about half way through the fourth quarter. True to form, they missed the conversion.

What happened to the Vikings?

"Without trying to take away anything from Dover in any manner at all," Muehleisen said, "we just gave them four quick touchdowns. The rest of the game, I thought, was pretty even."

The poor weather last week kept all the area teams inside and off the practice fields, and the Vikings were no exception.

"We had one practice outside last week, and I think basically we were just not ready to play the football game," Muehleisen said.

The Senators, considered one of the top teams in Delaware, were hungry for a victory after settling for an opening day tie with Salesianum last weekend.

Although the final score of 30-0 looks lopsided, the game, with the exception of the first six minutes, was not.

After Christiana's sloppy offensive and special teams' play

FOOTBALL

Newark — (0-0 in Blue Hen Conference Flight A, 2-0 overall) Defeated Cape Henlopen 3-0. See story.

Glasgow — (0-0 in BHC Flight A, 2-0 overall) Held off Elkton (Md.) on Monday night. See story.

Caravel — (2-0 overall) Shut down Interboro 20-0 behind strong offensive efforts by Derek Shaw and Macadoo Harrison-Dixon. Shaw picked up 117 yards on only 13 carries, while Harrison-Dixon passed for two touchdowns and rushed for 69 yards. Jerome Smith, Rich Zoeltch, and Mike Hawke had standout defensive performances.

St. Mark's — (2-1 overall) A 39-yard Sean Mahoney to John Ziemba touchdown, and a Bob Rush extra point was enough to beat McKean 7-6 on Monday. Mike Neylon sealed the win with a clutch fourth quarter interception on his own three-yard line. Kevin Lazarski led all rushers with 81 yards on eight carries for the Spartans.

Christiana — (0-0 in BHC Flight A, 1-2 overall) Blitzed by Dover 30-0. See story.

Hodgson — (1-2 overall) The Silver Eagles were soundly defeated 37-6 by a 3-0 Perryville (Md.) team that rushed for over 230 yards. Hodgson was only able to pick up 53 yards on the ground. Hodgson's only score came in the second quarter when Silver Eagles quarterback Burdon Tyson hit Nate Huggins on a 15-yard scoring pass.

staked the Senators to a 24-point lead, the defense proved for the third week in a row that it could stop a powerful offensive squad.

For the remainder of the game, the Vikings' defense held the Senators' attack in check. Dover's final touchdown, coming with 6:05 left in the game, was a direct result of another offensive turnover — the third of four Dover interceptions of Viking quarterback Buster Loper.

Standouts for the Vikings defensively were nose tackle Ricky Carrisquillo, linebacker Aaron Beres, and safety Jim Clark.

Carrisquillo, who has anchored the Vikings' defensive line all season, often seemed to single-handedly shut down the Senators' running game.

Beres was all over the field on Saturday as well. He had many key tackles from his line backer position, meeting and grounding the Dover backs in their own backfield on several occasions.

The loss dropped the Vikings to 1-2, but they have yet to play a Blue Hen Conference Flight A opponent. They will open conference play this Saturday with a 10:30 battle against William Penn on their home field.

GLASGOW

But yardage came tough for Williams. The Elkton linebackers keyed on the Dragons' chief offensive weapon all night.

Still trailing by eight, it looked as if the Elks would have a chance to knot it up. Elkton quarterback Kevin Tamson, who threw the ball well all night — often out of the shotgun formation — hit on three consecutive passes to move his team inside Glasgow's 30-yard line.

The Elks' first half scoring hopes were dashed when Glasgow's Tyrann Rice came up with a critical interception of a third down Tamson toss. The half expired with the score still Glasgow 8, Elkton 0.

Williams, the Dragons' top tailback, who had well over a hundred yards against Dickinson, could not seem to get it going against the Elks. At halftime he had only picked up 30 yards on 14 carries.

"It seemed like they were keying on me — coming right after me," Williams said of his first half performance. "In the beginning we wanted to feel them out, so we ran right at them."

"But in the second half I told the coach that I wanted to get them to the outside where I could beat them. So we started running the option and doing some pitches."

The Dragon's regular starting quarterback, Shawn Money, replaced Mike Balantine, who had started this game, after halftime. Balantine had held up well during his stint, especially under the relentless Elkton defensive pressure.

Money brought a whole new dimension into the game. He could run the option with Williams as his pitch back. No longer could the Elkton defensive backs key strictly on Williams.

Penalty flag after penalty flag littered the field in the second half. Both teams were hurt badly by mental breakdowns.

A Glasgow fumble was recovered by Elkton's Scott Williams in the third quarter on Glasgow's 25. Two plays later, Golden Elks back Dennis DiSabatino broke several tackles on route to a 20-yard touchdown.

On the two-point conversion attempt to tie, Tamson threw into his end zone under a lot of Glasgow pressure. His throw was complete to his teammate, Scott Williams, but unfortunately for Elkton, Williams lines up as a guard and is not an eligible receiver. The score after the loss of down stood 8-6 in favor of the home team Dragons.

Glasgow added a little assurance to their lead when Money connected on a beautiful up-and-out to his flanker, Rice. The pass play traveled 31 yards for a Glasgow touchdown and a 14-6 lead.

"I ran the out-and-up," Rice said after the game, "and he (the Elkton defender) bit on the out."

Elkton mounted one last drive to try to tie the Dragons. Aided by a third down pass interference call, Tamson led his troops down to Glasgow's 11-yard line. But a fourth and one pass play backfired on the Elks when Chris Kohan slipped through Elkton's offensive line and sacked Tamson for a 13 yard loss. Glasgow was able to run the rest of the clock out and preserve the victory.

NEWARK

Shane Riley, Fred Borchardt, Issac Jackson, and Larry Adams were the Newark backfield for most of the second half.

Cape Henlopen's offense certainly didn't help its own cause, either. Two drive-ending fumbles cost Cape a chance to build an early lead.

With 7:06 left in the first quarter, the Vikings had a first and ten on Newark's 35. But quarterback Thad Hudson botched the option pitch and Newark recovered to squelch the Vikings' first scoring threat.

Then, in the second period, at the 10:11 mark, Cape running back Anthony DiDomenicis fumbled on the 'Jacket 12-yard line after being hit hard by Newark tackle Jon Callens. B.J. Mahoney covered the loose ball for Newark.

"Jon made a real nice play," Mahoney said. "He stuck (DiDomenicis) and the ball popped loose and just fell right into my hands."

Mahoney, who his coach said has a knack for coming up with the football from his defensive end position, finished with one fumble recovery and one interception.

Cape moved deep into Newark territory twice in the first half, but both times they came up empty.

Newark sputtered offensively as well. A twelve play Yellow-jacket drive, highlighted by a 44-yard pass from Callahan to Mahoney, ended at Cape's one-half yard line when Crawford was stopped on a fourth and goal try from the 2-yard line.

Neither offense was able to execute well enough to score, and at the half the score remained 0-0.

In the third quarter, the game's only points came on Gwinn's fourth down field goal.

"We won tonight with a young guy who simply put it all together for one shot," Simpson said about his place kicker.

"We needed three points, so I just asked him to go out and do what he could...It was, 'Give me your one, the best one that you have tonight.' He did, and that about blew him out."

Cape Henlopen's defense played inspired football against a Newark team ranked second in the state.

"They really came to play tonight," Simpson said of the downstate opponents. "We didn't have any one thing that we could really do continually tonight with any success. We're lucky to get out of here with a 3-0 win. I felt we were out-played, but it says something about a team that doesn't play at its best and still is able to win, and we found a way to win."

Cape Henlopen interim coach Bob Andrus was pleased with the effort that his team gave.

"These kids are just outstanding, they really are," he said. "They're doing such a great job, and I'll tell you what, we'll play football with a lot of people this year."

Newark ended up with 225 total yards. Callahan completed five of nine passes for 100 yards, and Crawford managed to pick up 59 yards on six carries despite the flu. Cape Henlopen backs rushed for 146 yards.

went down with mono. He has performed admirably under the circumstances, but the passing game hasn't really been much of a weapon for the 'Cats so far in '89. Griffin has only completed 28 of 68 attempts so far this year, with three interceptions and no touchdowns.

The question is, when New Hampshire rolls into town this weekend, who will be calling the signals?

New Hampshire's head coach Bill Bowes has said that Carr could return this week.

"There's a possibility we'll have Mark Carr for some action this week," Bowes said Monday afternoon. "He did start practicing last week — started throwing the ball. He was sent to the doctor last Friday to see exactly where he is at this time. As of yet we haven't heard. It's going to be a day to day kind of thing."

When asked if it would be possible for Carr to start against the Hens, Bowes said, "I would say there's an outside chance." But he added cautiously, "We have to wait and see how he practices this week. We're not just going to put him in there."

Raymond is not one to overlook any team, and he knows that the Wildcats are a better team than their early 0-2 record indicates.

"You look at New Hampshire and you find that they've lost two ballgames. But they've lost to two of the best teams in the (Yankee) conference in Connecticut and Maine," Raymond said.

The Wildcats' ground game and their defense have Raymond convinced that it would be foolish to take them lightly.

"(Norm) Ford is an exceptional running back, and their defensive front is back almost intact. I think that when the dust clears, we might find that's one of the best two or three defensive fronts in the conference."

When asked about preparing for a team who's quarterback is a mystery, Raymond stressed that all the Yankee Conference games are tough to prepare for. He said that the 'Hens will not worry too much about which quarterback will lead New Hampshire. He feels that the two quarterbacks play similarly, and will prepare his team for whichever Wildcat quarterback takes the field on Saturday. Come watch the Hens try to improve their overall record to 4-0, and their Yankee Conference mark to 3-0, this Saturday at 1:00 in Delaware Stadium.

The Hens haven't opened with four wins since 1974, and have only won their first three conference games one other year, in 1986.

Blockbuster 'superstore'

Blockbuster Video has announced that its first "superstore" in Delaware will open in Newark's College Square shopping center.

By the end of the year, Blockbuster plans to open a second such facility in the new Depot Shopping Center on Kirkwood Highway at Newport Gap Pike.

"Just as the small corner grocery store gave way to the supermarket to meet consumer demand for more selection, Blockbuster Video superstores are responding to a similar situation by providing three to four times the selection of their closest Delaware competitors," said John J. Dellose Jr., treasurer of TFL Industries, the Delaware franchise corporation for Blockbuster Video.

Dellose said Blockbuster Video stores average 6,000 square feet of display area and carry about 10,000 tapes.

"We are a very family-oriented store," he added. "First off, that means no X-rated tapes. Our exclusive youth restricted viewing program helps parents control their children's exposure to inappropriate viewing material. In addition, our selection of quality children's videos is the largest in the state and we rent them at a reduced price."

The store will be open 10 a.m. to midnight seven days a week. Hours are augmented by a 24-hour Quik Drop rental return.
