Patrons, Patronesses Are Selected For Junior Promenade On March 8

Many Alumni To Be Present For Traditional Dance To Be Held In Gold Ball Room; Ted Baer's Music

Patrons and patronesses have been selected for the Junior Prom to be held March 8 at the Hotel DuPont. They are President and Mrs. Walter Hullihen, Dean and Mrs. George E. Dutton, Dean and Mrs. Charles McCue, Dean and Mrs. R. L. Spencer, Dean Winifred J. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hume, Major and Mrs. Dutton, Captain and Mrs. Sam W. Anderson, Captain and Mrs. Frank T. Cunningham, Professor and Mrs. Francis H. Squire, Professor and Mrs. Kermit W. Oberlin.

Tickets for the dance are available from any member of the committee. They are priced at $2.65 per couple. This is the lowest admission charge for a Prom in the history of the school and was made low so that as many students as possible will attend.

A large number of alumni have signified their intentions to be present on March 8. All indications point to a gala Delaware night.

In Ted Baer's music will be found all the requisites for enjoyable dancing. Any person particular songs can have Ted play them of a request is given to Garrett Hume any time before the Prom.

J. H. White To Lecture On China At College Hour

Talk To Be Illustrated With Photographs Taken During Eight Years In China

At next week's College Hour, Mr. J. Henry White will give an illustrated lecture on life in China with special emphasis on the cultural aspects of the Chinese civilization.

Mr. White, along with his brother, Herbert C. White, recently spent eight years exploring and studying China. While there, they visited the great monuments and places of artistic and architectural interest, taking nearly four thousand photographs.

Ever since their return, the White Brothers have been writing and lecturing on various aspects of Chinese life. They are now recognized as two of the foremost authorities on their subject.

Firmin Swinnen To Give Last Evening Recital

The organ recital to be given by Firmin Swinnen this Thursday evening in the last of this season's evening concerts. It will begin Swinnen's programs have been re-promptly at 8.00 p. m. No ticket is required for admission.

For the past three years, according to the program committee, Mr. Swinnen's programs have been receiving more favorable comment than any other programs.

Russo Appointed Chairman Senior Banquet Committee

John Russo has been appointed chairman of the Senior Banquet Committee by James Nichols, class president. Other members of the committee are John Tawes, Eldon Vosseller, Charles Pié, and Harry Wilson.

"Bite Your Lips And Sweat"

President Hullihen in his address before the Alumni said that he is "not surprised that the students blame poor results on their teachers. The members of the faculty all recall that they themselves as students entertained and sometimes expressed very similar opinions." We are, indeed, very gratified to learn that at least at some time or other they have had the initiative to protest against deficiencies of the present system of college education. As students they keenly felt the injustices which they were suffering because of indifferent, inadequate training. Now, however, that they are no longer the victims of mechanized education, they have assumed an air of complacency which is unjustifiable.

Then again the President says, "the faculty fears that in the main the trouble lies in the average student's attitude—in his failing to realize when he comes to college he comes as a man, to get an education, not to be given one."

We admit that the student attitude toward study and intellectual development is not what it should be. But why? The dogmatic defenders of the existing state of affairs place the burden of initiative upon the student. They assume that every student who comes to this University should have a natural enthusiasm and interest in his studies. They argue, as does the Wilmington "Morning News" that "the students themselves can remedy the situation. All they have to do is bite their lips and sweat." This idea is ridiculous. Even superior students need inspiration in their work to secure the full benefit which a college education should provide. The poor and mediocre students need even greater stimulation.

There is the old excuse that you can't pin a student down and force him to learn, that

M. M. Boring Interviews Graduating Engineers

Personnel Manager Of General Electric Co. Looks For Prospective Employees

Mr. M. M. Boring, personnel manager of General Electric Company, interviewed Senior students in Electrical and Mechanical Engineering on February 25, with the view of offering them employment in his organization.

Mr. Boring stated that during the past few years, he himself had not been on our campus, but had been obliged to send one of his subordinates here. Very few graduates of the University of Delaware have been selected by the General Electric Company since the beginning of the depression. With the aim of finding out why no Delaware men have been employed by General Electric Company, Mr. Boring decided to come here himself this year.

The visitor said that while he is interested in both Electrical and Mechanical Engineering graduates, he is more particularly in—

French Club Receives New Members At Dinner

Mme. Malécot Speaks In Kent Hall On History Of Dancing Through The Ages

French Club formal dinner for the reception of new members was held Thursday, February 21 in Kent Hall. After dinner coffee was served in the Hilarium. The program of the evening was a short dance recital and a talk on the History of Dancing through the ages by Madame Malécot, of Wilmington. She said that dancing was a movement of all peoples. The Greeks and Romans were among the first to indulge in rhythmic movements of the body. Like other arts and learning, dancing declined during the middle ages only to become important again in the Renaissance. The courts became interested in the dance and since then there has been a growing interest in the ballet and in the modern interpretative dance. Mme. Malécot did four dances in costume.

Ex-Trustee, Samuel Derby Dies At Woodside Home

On Board For 26 Years; Was Very Active In Grange And Other Organization Affairs

Samuel H. Derby, an ex-member of the University of Delaware Board of Trustees, died Tuesday morning, February 26, at his home in Woodside. Mr. Derby was appointed to the Board of Trustees in 1905 and served in this responsible office until 1931, at which time he resigned. For fifteen years he was chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, taking an active part in the direction of this branch of the University.

The deceased was active in other agricultural affairs and served as Master of the Subordinate and Delaware State Granges. He operated a farm canning factory and ran his own farm, devoted exclusively of late to growing apples, up until the time of his death.

Faculty Holds Coming Play In Deep Mystery

Janitor Reveals Faculty Held Meeting On Matter; "Mrs. Bumpstead Lee" Is Vehicle

ROBERT BARAB

The more wide-awake readers of THE REVIEW probably noticed a rather obscure item in last week's issue to the effect that a faculty play was rumored about the campus. Your reporter was given the task of running down the rumor and obtaining all the real dope.

From all my running hither and yon, practically the only thing I have been able to determine with any degree of accuracy is that the whole matter is being kept under a veil of mystery.

That a meeting of a large number of the faculty members was held, I am quite certain. According to the janitor at Mitchell Hall, a group of dignified professors last Monday afternoon held a meeting and conducted tryouts, during which I have heard, some very promising material was uncovered.

Probably, if the play is to be given, it will be sponsored by the Business Women's Club of Newark. This organization has been urging the faculty to give a play for some time for the benefit of the town library. It is my personal opinion, as well as that of several people better qualified to express one that such a presentation would secure

What We Want

By George M. Records

Among the people of the State, among the student body, and the faculty of the University, it is generally believed that we are against the faculty or that the faults of the faculty are beyond correction. We wish to correct this belief. We are only criticizing the faculty as the first means to the real end. The great disharmony which prevails in our University is caused by the administration.

There are three major groups on our campus: the administration, the faculty, and the student body. Each of these groups should be working for the same goal—education. Today each group is working toward the wrong goal. The students are off on a tangent. The faculty are not interested in teaching, as they are not employed as teachers, nor do they love their jobs if they don't teach, and it becomes a matter of self-preservation with them—teach and take a personal interest in the students and lose your job—build for personal fame and get in a vicious click of non-educators and keep your jobs; and the administration is off on a tangent—believing that, so many beautiful buildings, so much personal fame, and adhering to 1850 standards will develop a

Footlights Director Has Had Interesting Amateur And Professional Career

Bill Lawrence, Who Also Plays Male Lead in "Family Upstairs" Has Been Professional And Played In Stock

The most interesting personality in "The Family Upstairs," the play being presented by the Footlights Club in Mitchell Hall on Thursday evening, March 8, is Bill Lawrence, who is directing and acting the male lead in the play at the same time.

Lawrence has had a very eventful career. After graduating from high school in 1927 he joined Irving Aaronson's Commanders, which were then a stage troupe. He remained with that organization, now one of the first rate orchestras in this country, for about six months.

Then, together with his brother, he entered into a busy career in vaudeville, radio and musical comedy. Their first professional engagement was on the stage of the Roxy Theater in New York City, where they stayed for two weeks.

In 1929 he came to the University of Delaware, where he is now a student in the physical education department. Since coming here Lawrence has been very active in his participation in dramatics. He has played many leading roles and is a campus favorite.

During the summer months his interest in dramatics does not wane. Last summer he played in dramatic stock at the Wagon Wheel Theater in Bridgewater, N. H. While there he played the same role in "The Family Upstairs" that he will portray in the Footlights production.

Because of the excellence of the direction and the unusually good play which the cast has to work upon, the Footlights Club is looking forward to its most successful play ever to be presented.

Other members of the experienced cast are Caroline Cobb, Vera McCall, Curtis Potts, Blair Ely, Kay Spencer, Marjorie Breuer, and Betty Manchester.

Alumni Hear Hullihen Answer Students' Charges

Fault Lies In Attitude Of Students, Declares President At Mid-Winter Reunion

In an address before the Alumni mid-winter Reunion on Saturday in Old College, Dr. Walter Hullihen claimed that the main trouble of the University lies in the attitude of the average student.

"I want to assure the Alumni who may have been disturbed by recent issues of the Review, which have indicated dissatisfaction on the part of some students with the conditions under which they are receiving their training here," said the president, "that such a state of mind on the part of students is a desirable rather than a regrettable situation. It means that the students concerned are really thinking about the meaning of education and are discovering that they are missing some of the values all education should contain. They are disturbed and properly concerned about this and, seeking an explanation, believe that the fault lies in poor and un—you can't pour knowledge down a student's throat. Maybe those instructors who have this idea believe in the old saying, "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." But have they ever thought that when the horse sees the water, a new thirst is often created and the horse will drink and drink? It is up to the instructor to lead the student to knowledge and to stimulate in him a thirst for this knowledge. This requires that the good instructor possess some abilities in salesmanship. It is up to him to sell his courses to the students by impressing upon them the importance and possibilities of the subjects he teaches. However, this would require a more active interest on the part of the faculty. It would demand too much of the time which they now devote to research work and to the securing of advanced degrees, which have nothing to do with improvement of their technique in teaching, but which the administration requires.

The idea that the student "comes to college as a man" is another illusion which seriously affects the students here, especially the freshmen. It would be an ideal situation to have the student come to college as a man. But we know the situation to be otherwise. Most students who come to college have lived at home all of their lives. They have been under the guidance and supervision of their parents. The new freedom which they experience upon their arrival at college confronts them with many problems. It is the lack of advice in solving these problems that results in the unnecessary failure of many a freshman.

To whom can a freshman in Delaware College go and feel free to discuss his personal problems? Some slipshod system of faculty advisors is provided for now. But most of the time these advisors are heads of departments and cannot efficiently perform their duties as advisors. On the other hand, freshmen are to an extent awe-stricken by heads of departments and fear to go to them for aid. As it is now, when a student is having trouble, no one cares; no one on the faculty takes the trouble to find out the student's particular difficulties. If a student is flunking English, the English professor does not bother to see if he is flunking anything else, or whether he has a good average in the rest of his studies. Such things are important and should receive attention.

The lack of money for a personnel bureau, which the administration has so often used as an excuse, would not forestall the establishing of a true, advisory system whereby each professor would be responsible for four or five underclassmen.

These advisors would take the initiative in acquainting themselves with the underclassmen assigned to them. They would write to their homes to learn about their personalities and temperaments. In other words the freshmen and the sophomores who needed them, would have some one to take a personal interest in them and guide them in the crucial part of their college career. By inaugurating such a system for the freshmen next year, this college would be making a great advance toward performing its rightful function.

DOES THE FACULTY FEAR

THE ADMINISTRATION?

During the present agitation the faculty have been blamed for their deficiencies in training the students. But the irony of the whole situation is the faculty are aware of their failings. Five years ago the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors made a study of teaching conditions in this University. Five years ago they reported that teaching conditions here are in need of great improvement. They recommended several practical plans for the betterment of conditions. Among these recommendations was the combining of classes and facilities at the Men's College and Women's College. They suggested that some system of special attention for exceptional students be arranged. They also recommended the adoption of an "honors degree."

Neither of these recommendations have materialized because the faculty have not brought sufficient pressure to bear upon the administration to adopt their proposals. Today, five years after the suggestion for an "honors degree" was made we still hear promises of the establishment of such a distinction for meritorious students. If the faculty would insist upon the carrying out of their recommendations they would not have to "take the rap" for many of the things for which they are now being blamed.

THE NEW REGIME

With this issue of THE REVIEW the new editorial staff assumes its duties. We feel that we are taking over the reins at a most crucial moment. At the present time we are in the midst of student agitation for more capable instructors and a more personal interest on the part of the faculty in the students at the University. We wish to state at this time that we are in accord with our predecessor's movement to demand immediate improvement of the deplorable plight of the students at the University of Delaware.

Letters to the Editor

An Alumnus Speaks

Dear Editor:

More power to your arm.

I have attended four universities, among them the U. of D. Two things I find responsible for the trouble at the U. of D. First, the overlong assignments. I found them at least twice as long as in one of the outstanding universities I attended. Let the assignments be reduced to a reasonable length and many will not fail. Second, the mediocrity of the instruction. There are too many poor instructors at Delaware. Get rid of them and get a few outstanding men instead. Heads of departments at Delaware have only M. A.'s, and some heads know nothing about the thing they head up.

Ex-Delawarean.

Faculty Member

Expresses Views

To the Editor:

It does not seem to me to be beneath the dignity of a member of the faculty to consider carefully and respectfully such expressions of dissatisfaction with things that be as have recently appeared in your paper. The younger generation is entitled to respect, for it has a certain awful majesty lent to it by the fact that, with death as its ally, it is destined to prevail in any conflict of ideas with its elders. It is the younger generation, also, which will inherit the future, and particularly in view of the present gloomy prospects, it has a right to demand an accounting from those for whose mistakes and sins it will be made to suffer.

Nor need it be subversive of academic discipline for a faculty member to encourage the expression of student opinion by entering publicly into an exchange of views. The only sound discipline is one based upon mutual respect as well as authority, and a wise faculty will rely upon measures to retain student respect rather than upon measures of repression. It is essentially in the interest of discipline that I take it upon myself to make this communication, though I am personally much gratified at signs of the younger generation's asserting itself.

As a temporary member of the faculty fresh from experience elsewhere which lends some slight weight to my opinion, I should like to say that such association as I have had with other members of the faculty at this institution does not leave me with the impression that they are less capable or less progressive in their thought than elsewhere. My impression is rather to the contrary. If there are legitimate reasons for student dissatisfaction here at Delaware they are for the most part inherent in the established American system of college education and not products of peculiar intellectual deficiency in the Delaware faculty.

Whatever may seem to be the imperfections of instruction offered by that faculty, students should not assume that its members are wholly unconscious of, or indifferent toward, the defects of the present system. Those defects and possible means of remedy are being studied here as well as all over the United States. But the problems involved are not simple, and even those of us who are most urgent in our desire for radical change find them baffling. If student thought is alive enough to wish to enter into serious discussion of these problems, it is desirable that it should seek to comprehend them in all their aspects and not allow itself to remain dominated by any childish student-teacher antagonism. Obviously, the present occasion furnishes an excellent opportunity for faculty members to help students expand the capacity of their minds to deal with the difficult problems of living in this very complicated world—the very sort of thing for which the dissatisfied student clamors.

When simple minds encounter a social problem of great magnitude, their tendency is to put their faith in some one panacea. That is because their attention is so much focused upon evils to be abolished that they cannot foresee evils which will be created by change. College men should be capable of getting beyond this and seeing that the essence of most such problems lies in the difficulty of attaining simultaneously several indispensable but largely incompatible objectives.

Two such objectives in education are: (1) abbreviation of the process of acquiring the tools of thought, which are facts, ideas, and stereotyped intellectual skills, and (2) development of the capacity to think, or to use those tools effectively for ulterior human purposes. I submit as propositions deserving profound reflection, first, that without the attainment of each of these objectives in high degree civilization could not carry on, and second, that a process of education highly efficient in attaining the one cannot, under inescapable existing conditions, be made highly effective in attaining the other. Hence the compromises that exist.

Since the present tendency is to rebel against mere acquisition of knowledge, I will close with an illustration of its importance.

Capacity to think and understand is peculiarly dependent upon one's vocabulary, which is a stock of conceptions represented by words. One of the most serious difficulties with which the college instructor today has to contend is the deficiency of student vocabularies. In former times the almost universal study of Greek and Latin in our secondary schools and colleges had the effect of opening wide to the student the meaning of the great mass of terms in the English language derived from Greek and Latin. Such terms as "propaedeutics," "eschatology," and

Reader's Budget

By Theodore Berman.

A few years ago a book was written in Great Britain that aroused the ire of the censors. It was the "Well of Loneliness," by Radcliffe Hall. For years the book was banned by the English authorities. Finally an American publisher published it. At once it was acclaimed as a great work, and the censors finally allowed it to be printed in Great Britain. The theme of this work is the intricate character of an invert. The deep, repulsive feeling of the world toward these unfortunate creatures is well displayed by Hall. One who is not accustomed to deep reading should not attempt to read this book. However, after reading it, you will enjoy it all the more by reflecting and concentrating on its unusual theme. The greatness of this book lies in the way the author has expressed the unusual emotions of the characters.

Many students of history will enjoy "Omar Khayyam," a biography, by Harold Lamb, a great Historian who has written books about the Crusades, and about the lives of the Mongols—particularly Ghenghis Khan. The author had very little material to work on, because of the sparsity of written history that has been recorded on the subject by our Historians. Omar Khayyam was a great astronomer and mathematician. He was still alive in 1115 and is buried at Nispar. In Europe, he was chiefly known for his work on Algebra until Fitzgerald translated the Rubaiyat, a great poem expressing the fact that the chief difference between Hedonism (the doctrine that pleasure is the chief end of life) and with western as well as eastern Pessimism is the absence of melancholy in Hedonism.

Basketeers Beat P. M. C. To Gain Revenge For Early Season Defeat

O'Connell Leads Blue Hen Scorers With 14 Points, Thompson Gets 12; Jay Vees Win

On Monday night Coach "Doc" Doherty's Blue and Gold Quintet took their second straight victory in three days by defeating the Pennsylvania Military College by a 46-40 score on the local court.

Although P. M. C. was able to defeat the Blue Hens in their previous engagement by a 40-29 score, since the Dickinson game the Delaware squad has a new spirit which practically makes them undefeatable.

Irish O'Connell and Ed Thompson did most of the scoring for the Blue and Gold Cagers. O'Connell had 14 points while Ed Thompson had 12. Weaver, the P. M. C. center, had 18 points to top both teams in scoring.

In the preliminary game the Delaware Jay Vees trounced the P. M. C. Reserves 44-18. Lou Carey was high score with 16 points.

Blue Hen Passers Win Over Dickinson, 43-42

Pennock Saves Game With Three Points In Final Period

Tom Pennock's last minute three points enabled Doc Doherty's Blue Hen Five to set down the strong Dickinson College quintet by the close score of 43-42 in Taylor gym on last Saturday night. It was the third victory of this season for Delaware.

With the score 42-40 in favor of the visitors in the closing minutes of the game, Tom Pennock made a field goal to tie the score and then made a free toss to bring home a well earned victory.

The game was probably the best one of the season for the Blue and Gold Cagers, who played the entire game without a single substitution. At the half way mark the Hens were out in front of a 21-13 margin.

Charlie Pié and Irish O'Connell with 14 points each led the Blue Hen quintet in scoring while Kintzing, the giant Dickinson center, took the high scoring honors for both teams with a total of 16.

In the preliminary game the Beacom College Five nosed out the Delaware Jay Vees by the close score of 30-27. Once again Lou Carey was high scorer. Lou had a total of 14 points.

WITH THE BLUE AND GOLD

BALDY ADAMS

Congratulations to another basketball team. May be the same players, but a new spirit. Three weeks ago I didn't believe the Blue Hens would cop another game this season. The Washington College game furthered this conviction as only five field goals were scored by Delaware in one of the poorest, most uninteresting games I have ever witnessed. I didn't see the West Chester or Dickinson games, but I understand the new spirit began to show in the first of these.

There never was a more surprised person than I when I heard the Dickinson score. Next to Army this is probably the best team on the season's schedule and while the victory cannot atone for the losses it does put the team in a better light.

The P. M. C. game topped them all. If the team had played all their games as they did Monday night there is not one team with the exception of Army that would have defeated them. Pennock was in every play, O'Connell played his usual scrappy game, Prettyman was going to hold his man down regardless, Pié was tricky, and Ed Thompson was in his glory. If the team plays the remainder of the games as well as this, I'll change my predictions—they will win every remaining game.

Ed Bardo has turned out another successful tank team. The defeats over Lehigh, Rider and Carnegie Tech, show the ability of the team. Every record is in danger at the meets. Congratulations to that record breaking relay team, Lawrence, DuRoss, Croes, and Carey. They deserve plenty of credit.

The little-known-of fencing team swings into action again this week with trips to Lehigh and Temple. I wonder what success they can hope for minus Captain Ridgely, who so far has won half the matches in each meet. We are back of you, anyway, team, and best of luck.

Interfraternity basketball standing has not changed since last week. Sigma Nu and Sigma Phi Epsilon meet Thursday in the crucial battle of the first half. Should Sigma Nu win, there will be a triple tie between Theta Chi, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Sigma Nu for first place. Only time will tell.

Coach Neil Stahley says that the track squad will get underway during the next week or so. Distance men are needed for the Blue and Gold team. Much material is expected from the Freshman class. Olaf Drozdow will be very useful in the shot-put. He should break the standing record if he is all that his past records say he is.

Baseball will also get underway in a week or so. The Blue Hens should put out a good squad on the diamond this year because many of last year's squad are still in school. A pitching staff is what is needed most of all.

Western Maryland has appointed a Coach for next year and he is not Neil Stahley as was expected by most people. It is now more than likely that Stahley will still be at Delaware next season, as least we all hope so.

Cagers Encounter Mt. St. Mary's Tonight

Washington College Here Saturday; Swimmers Have Away Meets Thursday and Friday

Tonight the rejuvenated Blue and Gold quintet will travel to Emmitsburg, Pa., to play the strong Mt. St. Mary's Five. The game will be a hard one for Delaware squad, but because of the improvement made by the Hens during the past week they should come out on top.

Although the Pennsylvania Cagers defeated Washington College, who defeated the Hens a week or so ago, Delaware has a greatly improved squad and they should be able to come out victorious.

On Saturday night Washington College will be the visiting team here at Taylor gym and will help the Blue Hens bring to a close their basketball season. The game should turn out in a victory for "Doc Doherty's" five.

Coach Ed Bardo's tank squad will be busy this week-end. On Thursday night they swim against Washington College, while on Friday night they will meet John Hopkins at Baltimore.

Competitive Swimming

All classes at Women's College are now interested in competitive swimming. There will be practice at 4:10, Wednesday.

The first five words are correctly accented on the second syllable. Quintuplets is pronounced with the first syllable accented and the u of the second syllable pronounced as you.

What They Say

The present trend on the world of sports is toward lighter games. Strenuous games like football, basketball, etc., seem to hold their own, but there is a noticeable increase in interest in games like ping pong, tennis, golf. Do you think that the physical education program in our schools should emphasize these lighter games?

Senior—"Not everyone is equipped to play stellar football nor has everyone the desire to do it. I agree that there are great 'drives' or desires pushing the star to brilliant performance, but these drives are not compelling in all of us. Harper's February issue has a fine article on the trend of sport that statistically proves how the trend of the sport-minded public is going. Billiards, golf, tennis, quoits, marbles, riding and other individual sports are receiving national attention; there must be something in it. The incentives or drives in golf and tennis are as strong as those in football, I think. The ideal physical education program would teach activities that will be of value to the individual man when he is less lithe and agile."

Junior—"Games like handball and tennis should be included in our physical education program. These games combine recreation and vigorous exercise; one need not play them with the dead seriousness characteristic of football and basketball. There is more enjoyment and satisfaction for the individual player."

Sophomore—"I like handball and badminton and get a big kick out of playing them, but I am not very good at any of the varsity sports. I would enjoy physical education much more if there were games of the nature of handball in the program. The three outstanding advantages of these games are:

1. There is opportunity for more players.
2. The equipment is inexpensive when compared to football.
3. These sports can be used in later life."

Freshman—"I would enjoy playing and learning these lighter games very much. I should like to see them as part of the physical education program."

W. C. D. Sophomores Win In Basketball, 18-14

The Sophomores and Freshmen met in a battle for the basketball championship. The title was won last year by the present Sophomores, and they were anxious to hold it this year. The Freshmen had high hopes of claiming it for themselves, for they had some lively players. The Freshmen swung into a lead from the starting whistle and carried the score 4-0 in their favor. The Sophomore captain, Sipple, called time out for her team and gave them a little pep talk. From then on the game was anyone's. It was fast and exciting. The half ended with the Freshmen still leading, 14-12. In the third quarter the Sophomores picked up two more points, and the score was tied at the end of the third quarter, 14-14. The fourth quarter was even faster, if possible, than the other three, but it gave the Sophomores two more baskets and the title to the championship for their second year. Although the Freshmen lost, they had a fast, fighting team and made everyone anxious as to what the outcome would be.

Alumni Hear Hullihen Answer Students' Charges

inspired teaching. In some degree they are right but the faculty fears that in the main the trouble lies in the average student's attitude—in his failing to realize that when he comes to college that he comes as a man, to get an education and not to be given one.

"The difference in point of view is a clear-cut and significant one, but the formulation and expression of their opinions by the students is likely to be helpful to both groups."

"The faculty is glad to know that this group of thoughtful students is studying the educational problem and it is not surprised that they blame poor results on their teachers."

The rest of Dr. Hullihen's address dealt with the discussion of Alumni-Alma Mater connections, and gave hearty approbation to the plan for Alumni inspection from time to time of classes. He also approved a proposed investigation of how useful a personnel office would be for the University.

The Alumni committees of inspection will make periodic visits to the University, attend classes and laboratory sessions, and make recommendations based on their findings to the administration for the improving of the teaching methods they see employed.

Dr. Hullihen's address was read by Dr. C. W. Clash, the president having been forced to go to Washington. It was followed by a talk by Coach Neil Stahley, who spoke in place of Dick Harlow, who was unable to attend. Coach Stahley praised the fine spirit of his athletes. "Wherever I may go," he said, "I can never expect to find a better group of boys."

A recent College Hour speaker, C. William Duncan, spoke to the Alumni on "Closeups of Famous People I Have Met." His speech concerned such eminent people as Franklin D. Roosevelt, John Garner, Babe Ruth, Wiley Post and others.

Speaking on "The College Man in the New Deal," Dr. Harlan G. Wells, professor of medicine at the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, stated: "Our colleges owe it to the nation to see that we have men trained along political and economic lines."

The reunion was concluded by an announcement of the slate from which officers for the ensuing year will be chosen.

Joseph McVey was toastmaster of the banquet. E. Parks Reese was chairman of the committee that arranged the reunion, which was attended by about 135 Alumni.

one of the best turn outs of any in Delaware's dramatic history.

As announced last week, the play selected is probably Harry J. Smith's Mrs. Bumstead Lee. This is the play in which Mrs. Fiske starred while on tour several years ago.

Seats for the Footlights' play, "The Family Upstairs," may be reserved at Mitchell Hall, beginning Thursday, February 28, from 4:15 to 5:30 p. m., until the date of the production. There is no extra charge for these reserved seats.

Letters to the Editor

"sesquipedalian" were about as obvious to him as "bluestone," "hindsight," or "long-winded." It is among such words of Greek and Latin derivative that are mainly to be found our terms of greatest precision and those which represent the more difficult concepts. Whatever the value of the things for which we have abandoned the study of Greek and Latin, the price we are paying in loss of power over the conceptions represented by words is thus a very serious one.

In attempting the revision of present educational methods the awkward problem is that of avoiding changes which entail further such losses greater than the accompanying gain.

Cordially yours,
Dallas D. Irvine,

Glee Club Reorganized

The recently reorganized Glee Club is now a well established campus group. It holds its meetings Monday afternoon in Old College from 4:15 to 5:30 p. m. The election of officers has not yet taken place, but for the present Thomas Gravell is the unofficial chairman of the organization and Thomas Maletesta pianist.

Although the club already has a membership of twenty, there is a need for more men. Professor Mylrea, the instructor of the group requests all students who aspire to sing to come out for the club. Tenors and basses are especially in demand.

President Hullihen, in an interview with Chairman Gravell, stated that he would like to see Delaware College have a noteworthy Glee Club and that the university would support such an organization.

What We Want

wonderful college—they forget that the important job is the administration of education. There is no control or real administration. Three groups of people are disinterested in the primary objective, education. Hundreds of barriers between these three groups exist. No attempts are hardly made to correct this situation. The students can't correct the trouble—Who can? A wide awake and alive administration! It does not take money. Some people only think in terms of "brick and mortar."

It has been recently said "the students too often fail to realize that they go to college to get an education and not to be given one." Even if this idea were true, and we as students realized it, we still believe that the college should offer as much possible aid, help, assistance, and guidance. We come here expecting to find friends and helpers and in place find some sort of superior beings who have no personal interest in us or our development. We merely become a number. No one cares if we come or go. Our University merely becomes a correspondence school where we do not have to mail our homework.

A few eminent men within our organization once stated in a report: "This is a report as to what we think might be done to improve teaching conditions in the University and thus enable us to offer as good an education as possible to the young men and the young women of the State of Delaware." Many recommendations, proposals, and suggestions have been made by a group of efficient men of our faculty since 1930. What

Old Newspaper Exhibit At Library, Tuesday, March 5

An interesting exhibit of old newspapers will go on display at the Library, Tuesday, March 5. These newspapers date from the early nineteenth century and give vivid picturesque accounts of early American business, customs, literature, politics, and religion.

Of particular interest will be the humorous advertisements, the scurrilous scathing editorials, fugitive-slave reward notices. The chief feature of the exhibit, however, will be the paper recounting the various phases of the Civil War and the class in American History, H 205, will find this material quite pertinent to their present studies.

This exhibit is under the supervision of Edward Davidson. It will extend over a two week period.
