Angered Black Students React to Assault

By JACK ANDERSON

Racial tension on campus and in the community was the subject of a special meeting of over 100 black students at the Minority Center last Monday.

The meeting was prompted by an alleged assault of four black students by a group of white men on Delaware Avenue early Sunday morning, Nov. 18. Concern over the incident led black students to demand immediate unity to fight racial prejudice and call for protection against white harassment.

Miles Jones, president of the Black Student Union (BSU), said Monday's meeting had the highest attendance of any minority gathering in four years.

Raymond O. Eddy, dean of students, listened to students' grievances and offered his support at the Monday meeting.

Eddy proposed setting up a board of administrators to hear black students' concerns. He has also drafted a letter to the student body stating the university is against racial aggression in any form. (The letter appears on page 6.)

In the incident that touched off these concerns, three black women and one black man — all students — were harassed by white teenagers and threatened with a knife.

Newark police report that the four students were walking through the Gino's parking lot on Delaware Avenue shortly after midnight when the youths asked them for marijuana. When they refused, police said, the youths chased the students across Delaware Avenue.

One of the students, Joshua Brittingham, said, "The guy pulled a knife on one of the girls in the street. The cars, however, wouldn't stop for us. He (the youth) left the girl and chased after me."

"The guy with the knife was flinging it around in the air, yelling, 'Nigger, nigger,'" said Brittingham, vice president of the BSU.

A 17-year-old youth has been identified by police in connection with the incident, which "has opened up the past of the university in relation to black students," said Eddy.

At the meeting, the BSU discussed demands for increased funds for minority students, increased enrollment for black students and added protection for black students on campus. They made no formal demand to the administration, however, and Eddy said that he can only act as mediator between them and the administration.

Eddy plans to host the special board, which he says will probably be composed of representatives from all academic areas, as well as Residence Life, admissions and financial aid.

Eddy, however, believes this meeting between university and black students will fail unless the students address the meeting with specific requests.

"I urge the students to come with an outline of complaints or they will get a group of administrators who will just listen."

"Any racial behavior at the university will not be tolerated. This statement ought to apply to anyone connected with the university," Eddy said.

Tuition Hike Seen in Proposed 1981 Budget

By DEBORAH PETIT

DOVER — Both out-of-state tuition and state funding will increase if the state approves the university's projected budget request for fiscal year 1981.

At a public hearing held Wednesday with state budget officials, university spokesmen asked for $38.350 million in state allocations, up 12.8 percent from this year.

The total projected budget of $127.8 million, which includes all grants, bonds, state appropriations, tuition and other monetary endowments, exceeds last year's $116.8 million budget by 9.4 percent.

An out-of-state tuition increase of $150 per semester will be necessary to help offset inflationary pressures, even if the state approved the university's request, said Anthony Graziano, director of institutional research and financial planning.

Under the proposed budget, the university does not plan to raise in-state tuition. However, if state appropriations fall short of the requested levels, or remain constant with the amount given to the university for fiscal year 1980, in-state tuition may increase by $60 and out-of-state rates could jump by $225 per semester.

If in-state tuition does not increase, 1981 would mark the fourth year the university has maintained in-state tuition at a constant rate.

The largest increase requested at the budget hearing was for operations, which include salaries and wages. The university requested $26.6 million in state funds, up by $2.8 million over last year.

The university also asked for $55,000 in state funds to establish a gerontology research program.

To provide more financial aid for Delaware residents, the proposed budget requests another $250,000 in state funds. Of this sum, $50,000 would go toward an academic incentive program which would establish scholarships for Delaware high school graduates based on academic merit. Graziano said the program is important if the university is to provide financial incentive for incoming students and stay competitive with other out-of-state schools.

The other $200,000 would go toward the existing work-study program. There are currently 203 students eligible to receive this aid, Provost

Leon Campbell, said. Other areas in which there was an increased request for state funding included the Sea Grant Program, poultry and swine research, and the Pension Fund.

Under the capital budget requests, the university asked for $3.834 million to go toward building and renovations for the College of Engineering. The university also asked for aid in complying with handicapped guidelines, and to catch up on maintenance areas in which the university has previously absorbed all costs.

responsible for forming the minority center. "We've talked and talked to the university. Let's have no more damn meetings because nothing happens because of it."

Lewis Randolph, director of the Minority Center, told students to unite and fight for their rights rather than gather when specific incidents occur. By gathering together, Randolph said, black students will begin to receive their demands.

Child Abuse Program Tonight

A program on child abuse will be held starting at 6:30 tonight at the State Office Building, 820 French Street in the second floor auditorium.

The program will deal with how to spot child abuse and how to confront the parent.

It is part of the Delaware Nurse's Association membership drive.

The program is free to all membership prospects. There is a $2 fee for others and the public is welcome.

Exxon Backs UD Study Center

Exxon Corporation has granted $250,000 to the university's Center for the Study of Values — the largest grant the Center has received since its birth in 1977.

The Center is a research organization set up by the philosophy department to study ethical questions that accompany technological growth, according to Norman Bowie, director.

The grant, to be paid in bi-monthly installments beginning in June, will enable the Center to add expert researchers and philosophers in value studies to its current staff, according to Bowie.

The Center's staff will continue to confer with government officials, businessmen, and scholars to answer such questions as "How much are we, as a society, willing to trade off in terms of consumer safety, clean air, clean water to increase productivity?"

The Center offers a lecture series on ethical issues in the last quarter of the 20th century, had a business executive from Prudential Life Insurance in residence here last fall, but is primarily a "conference corporation," according to Bowie.

Bowie said the grant is "a statement of good faith" from Exxon, and that "what they (Exxon) want to see is getting this program off the ground."

Bowie said he hopes to work "very actively" with the Delaware business community and with state and national officials to plan conferences and seminars.

New Rates, Hours For City Parking

The Newark Parking Authority is experimenting with new rates and hours at its two downtown lots.

Effective Nov. 12, the hours of operation have been extended and the rates reduced. The lots — located behind the Wilmington Savings Society branch and behind Abbott's Shoe Store — are now open from 7:30 a.m. until 2 a.m., Monday through Saturday. Rates range from a minimum of 15 cents for 30 minutes to $1.50 for all day parking until 8:30 p.m.

Parking from 8:30 p.m. until 2 a.m. will cost 25 cents under the new program, and overnight parking $1.50. Attendants will be on duty at both lots during operating hours.

Merchants' validation stamps, given with a $1.50 minimum purchase will permit free use of the lots while shopping at most downtown stores.

Anita Puglisi, chairwoman of the parking authority, explained that the changes are on a trial basis and will be evaluated early next year. She said that the new rates and hours are designed to increase use of the city lots.

Puglisi indicated that "One of the main reasons for reducing the rates is for people doing things at night, and who are mostly students," she said.

Puglisi said there are plans for more parking along Main Street. The parking authority is eyeing potential sites for another lot behind the 100 block of East Main Street. The lot will be built with federal community development funds provided by New Castle County, she said.

The History Department Provides A Look At

The Crisis in the MIDDLE EAST

Professor Harold Rhode, a noted middle east authority, recently returned from the Arab world, will examine the problem of modernization and crisis in the Islamic world today in the light of the past.

What is the meaning of the present turmoil in Iran?

Can we understand the Arab-Israeli hatred?

How have Western ideas and technology changed and challenged the traditions of the Islamic world?

These and Other Urgent questions will be examined in their historical dimension.

Crowded Classes Can Close to Non-Majors

A RUMOR...

There's more to the spring course catalog than meets the eye.

In some departments, preference is given to certain students, in certain cases and for certain courses. Some of the exceptions are listed in the course catalog, but many aren't.

That means that if the physical optics class an English major signs up for is too crowded, preference will be given to physics majors when the class roster is made up. Or the chemistry major enrolling in an intercultural communications course will be out in the cold if that class is swamped with communication majors.

The computer doesn't have the only say in who gets what course.

Among the department spokesmen The Review was able to contact, some said they give preference to majors when class enrollments get tight. Others, like philosophy and engineering, seem to have few problems with over-registration for classes and don't have to deal with the dilemma.

Among those departments that do give their majors the edge are English, physics, accounting, economics, business, music, nursing and communication.

Reasons for the limitations vary. The College of Nursing, for instance said it can't afford to give out hard-to-get clinic experience to non-majors, and the music department can't afford one-to-one music instruction for everybody.

But in the College of Business & Economics, it's a matter of overcrowded conditions.

Penn Tested Drugs On Inmates

The Army and the University of Pennsylvania used 320 Holmesburg Prison inmates in secret chemical warfare experiments between 1964 and 1968, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Penn researchers administered increasing amounts of mind-control drugs to the prisoners to find a minimum dose able to psychologically incapacitate half of a given population, the Inquirer reported.

The leaders in the Penn testing, Drs. Albert M. Kligman and Herbert W. Coplean, said they had a "perfect safety record," although several prisoners had extreme reactions to the mind-control drugs.

Oil Used in Blood Substitute

A blood substitute using crude-oil as its base is being developed in the U.S., according to the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Spokesmen estimate the U.S. may be producing it commercially in five years. Other foreign countries have already used it to save lives, reported the Bulletin.

One strong point of the compound, the Bulletin said, is that it dissolves and transports oxygen better than plasma, saline solution or dextran, which are the normal blood substitutes.

Another plus is blood type makes no difference, since artificial blood may be accepted by any blood type, said the Bulletin.

Inflation Cuts Christmas Spirit

Retailers are afraid that their Christmas sales will drop this year, due to the rise in borrowing costs and inflation, reported the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Retail sales were down 1.7 percent in October, which is the worst drop since March of 1975, the Bulletin reported.

Much of the drop was due to the 8.2 percent fall in auto sales, yet New York's Citibank estimates that sales were off 1 percent without auto sales.

"Many people have just plain run out of savings," said Michael K. Evans, of Evans Economics Inc., in Washington. He expects Christmas sales to fall from 2 to 3 percent from last year.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?" Psalms 2:1 and Acts 4:25

The dread foes of Man are not belligerent circumstances, but the riotous passions — the leopard of incontinence, the lion of violence, the wolf of avarice. Incontinence means lack of restraint, especially und... indulgence of sexual passions; licentiousness, etc. Great nations and empires of history as a result of this sin have rotted from within, decayed, perished. Is not our great land in danger of the same curse, "Chastity is driven away as an enemy by all men, like a snake." Is not the "lion of violence" and the "wolf of avarice" back of and the cause of riots, strikes, etc. It is said that a wolf is hungrier after food than before.

A man may foretell as plainly as can be what will become of us, if we grow indifferent and lukewarm in repressing evil. Make it a shame to see men bold in profaneness, and God will bless you. Be confident that our liberty and prosperity depend upon reformation — if not what difference is there between a man and a beast?

"Beware of making laws in the face of God — telling The Almighty you will meet all His Dispensations, and stay things, whether He will, or no.

"God will curse me, if I put personal interests above duty." — Oliver Cromwell. (Consider this last statement, remembering Pontius Pilate: "Suffered under Pontius Pilate" because of conflict of interest.)

"Devoutly thankful ought we to be for the gift of great and good men. They are God's noblest work — for nothing should the people of God more devoutly pray than that their great men may be good men. (If we had been doing that during the past few decades do you reckon we would today have a Supreme Court such as is, one that has taken away from our schools and children God's Book. The Bible, and The Lord's Prayer, I think not. Or, we would have such men in authority over us that let them get by with it, I think not.) One honest statesman — one great, sanctified, devout, Christian man in the Senate or Cabinet of a nation, or at its head — is worth more to a nation than all the riches of El Dorado, and is a surer defense than all her armies and navies."

"Every young man should strive by the best possible improvement of his talents and opportunities, to make himself a great and a good man. This is a true and noble ambition. A great and good man is the noblest work of God . . . strive then, my young friend, to fit yourself for the times in which you live."

God give us preachers, teachers, and students, that put "THE STUDY OF THEIR OWN HEARTS" above the study of their books. "Search the Scriptures" for it is the mirror by which God reveals to us our hearts; "For The Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1st Samuel 16:7.

"FOR ALL FLESH IS AS GRASS, AND ALL THE GLORY OF MAN AS THE FLOWER OF THE GRASS. THE GRASS WITHERETH AND THE FLOWER THEREOF FALLETH AWAY: BUT THE WORD OF THE LORD ENDURETH FOREVER. AND THIS IS THE WORD WHICH BY THE GOSPEL IS PREACHED UNTO YOU." — Peter 1:24, 25.

Calm of the Storm

If the true feelings and spirit of a person or group of people are made manifest only in the face of a crisis, then the university community by and large should be commended for its handling of the local backwash of the Iranian turmoil.

Last week federal officials declared that all Iranian students at the university possessed valid visas, and that no deportations would be necessary. The students and the Dean of Students office cooperated wholly with the authorities and each other. The administration trusted the students, a move that seems even more commendable in light of mass deportations and expulsions that have occurred in colleges in Maryland and South Carolina.

The student body, has for the most part, been quiet on the issue. Except for a few isolated and impotent displays, there has been little protest on either side of the issue. One could take this to be a sign of apathy, but it is hoped instead to represent a maturation on the part of the students.

Until the situation that has developed in Tehran is finally rectified, we would like to restate our hope that all members of the campus community will refrain from any sort of violent or inflammatory protest. Violence turns upon itself, and leaves nothing in its wake.

Eddy: UD Will Not Tolerate Racial Discrimination

Under the leadership of the Black Student Union a meeting was held in our Minority Center on Monday, November 19. I was asked to join that meeting. As a result of my spending approximately two hours with this concerned group of students I was asked to do two things:

1. To make available to the general University community a statement deplored "racial discrimination or aggression"; and

2. To facilitate a meeting with key University administrators with a small group of representative black students during which student concerns could be presented for consideration and possible action.

I welcome the opportunity to follow through on both requests.

When it comes to stating the position of the University of Delaware with regard to persons who would commit, aid or attempt to commit an act of racial discrimination or aggression, our position is direct and straightforward.

THE UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE CAN NEITHER TOLERATE NOR CONDONE ANY ACTIONS COMMITTED BY ANY MEMBER OR GUEST OF THE UNIVERSITY WHICH ARE RACIALLY

DISCRIMINATORY OR AGGRESSIVE. Reinforcement of this position can be found throughout public statements which the University community has made on the general topic of student rights and responsibilities. As examples:

Excerpt from the University's Code of Conduct:

"It is the obligation of each member of the University community to act so as to give fullest respect to the views and activities of fellow members of the University community; to proceed in all actions with thoughtfulness and openness; and, to treat every member of the University community in such a way as to acknowledge each person's humanity."

The Code goes on to state that acts of disruptive conduct such as violence or threat of violence or harassment committed by students at the University will be subject to action within the University Student Judicial System.

Excerpt from the University's Student Guide to Policies:

"Respect for the dignity and rights of other students is a basic tenet of the academic community. Hazing, the subjection of an individual to any form of humiliating treatment and the violation of the rights of other students, have no place in the university community."

The Student Guide to Policies generally holds members of the University community responsible for the actions of their guests while on the campus.

All members of the University community should evidence through their behavior a respect for the dignity and rights of all. Any student who fails to meet this

BSU: Spirit of "Jim Crow" May Live in Newark

Approximately four hundred Black students were brought to the Newark campus of the University of Delaware on November sixteenth and seventeenth through the Admission Department in hopes of influencing their decision as to which college they should attend. While on campus, the students were exposed to the various supportive services that exist for Minority (particularly Black) students. In addition, they toured the various academic departments and met with several department heads. In spite of, the overwhelming support on the part of the University and its Black student population for the program, the students and their parents would have been alarmed and shocked by the following activities and events that occurred on November seventeenth.

The behavior, that was displayed that evening, towards the Black student population, on and off campus, closely resembled the behavior of southern Whites towards Blacks in the United States around the turn of the century. The behavior that we are referring to included the Jim Crow enforcers, the KKK marches and the multiple attacks on Black people.

We draw this analogy due to the attack on four Black students, on the night of November seventeenth by approximately twenty White males on East Delaware Avenue. The origin of the incident was embedded in the harassment experienced by Black students, who were being called "nigger" by the group of White males. On the same evening a Black male student was attacked by three White Males in front of his off campus residence (Paper Mill Apartments). As a result of the latter attack, the Black male student was injured to the point whereby medical treatment was required. The two incidents were reported to the University of Delaware Security department, who in turn, informed the students that this was not their jurisdiction and referred them to the Newark City Police Department. Newark police apprehended one suspect, from incident number one, and released him from their custody immediately after the Black student left the Police Station. This behavior was perceived as being racist and gave rise to the calling of an emergency Black Student Union meeting.

At the meeting it was brought to the attention of the constituency of the Black Student Union that many isolated incidents of this type had occurred frequently within recent years.

The Black Student Union has declared that these incidents must be stopped. Therefore, the Union has asked representatives of the University to give the necessary support needed to protect us as citizens and students in this community. The University, in so many words, refused to provide the kind of support which was requested. So, we the Black Student Union have found it necessary to share our sentiments with the public:

We, the Black Student Union of the University of Delaware, at this time, find it appropriate and necessary to publicly state that we feel the University is insensitive and indifferent to the needs and aspirations of minorities. Furthermore, we feel the University is a perpetrator of institutional racism, in the form of social and academic polarization which is manifested through covert scapegoating of the minority community.

Due to protocol, we expect the University's administration and the University's community to adhere to the stipulations outlined in Dean Ray O. Eddy's letter to the University. If these stipulations are adhered to we may find it unnecessary to take any action, however, if we perceive in any way that these stipulations are not being adhered to we shall take appropriate action.

Student Union

Local Energy Savers Win Grant

By PAT MINARD

At work for the du Pont Co., they "design" and "engineer;" at home they just "tinker." But for John Guenthner and Wilbert Minor of Newark, it's the tinkering that paid off.

The men are two of nine Delaware recipients of Department of Energy (DOE) grants for energy-saving projects.

Guenthner's grant was awarded for his energy-efficient oil furnace and Minor's for his passive solar greenhouse design. They will use their grants to develop and evaluate their inventions.

"I was surprised that they (DOE representatives) were so enthusiastic about giving out the money ($4,500)," Guenthner said. "It's not a handout," he added. "I'm going to work on this project as though I were using my own money."

According to Guenthner, 90 percent of the oil furnaces in homes are oversized and are "guzzling fuel."

"We've got to help those people who are stuck with energy inefficient systems," he said.

His proposal is to install a two-stage heat recovery device in the flue of the oil furnace. The device will extract heat from the gases and transfer it back into the heating or hot water system.

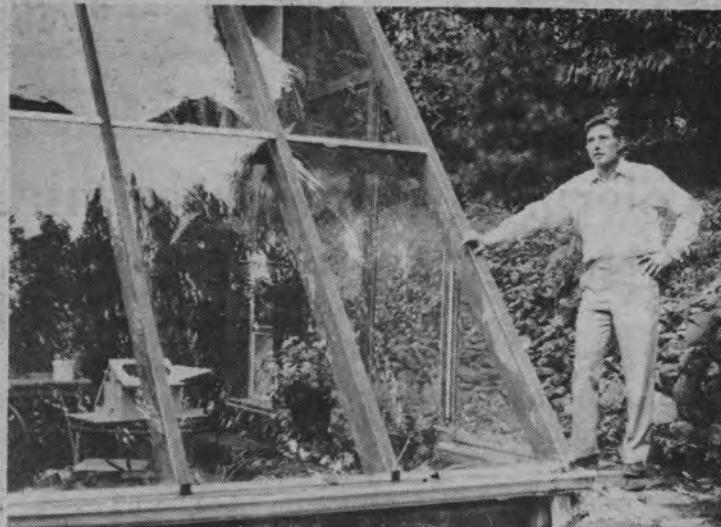

Minimal heat loss is also Minor's goal, but he's using solar energy in his experiment with a passive solar greenhouse.

Minor's A-shaped greenhouse is attached to the back of his home. One wall is composed of panes of Lucite. The opposite wall of darkly painted stucco and the dark flagstone floor absorb the sunlight entering through the windows.

The heat rises to the peak of the greenhouse where it is sucked into a duct and channeled into the house by a fan.

Minor is searching with his $3,000 grant for the most efficient means of absorbing the heat during the day and preventing its loss at night.

This semester the economics department "had to adopt a policy to limit courses to majors," said Department Chairman Lawrence Donally. The policy might continue into the spring if the department is still over-enrolled, he said. Otherwise, it would not be able to accommodate all the economics majors.

The accounting and business administration departments also restrict certain courses to majors, and indicate this in the catalog.

Other registration snags are scattered throughout departments. For instance, Computer Science 170 and 171 are limited to majors, but the catalog doesn't state this. The same goes for Geology 107 and 108. For complete lists of who's limited to what in all departments, students should look up courses in the university course catalog, contact their advisors or check in with department secretaries.

Normal university policy for registration gives first priority to seniors, followed by juniors in second and sophomores, in third place. Freshmen have the lowest priority in registration.

One way students might be able to avoid confusion during spring course registration is through an advisement program the Mortar Board is planning.

The group, an academic honor society, for seniors has distributed a list of its members' majors and phone numbers to faculty advisors in each department. Students with questions can contact them.

1980 Calendars: Spend the Year Any Way You Like

By DAVID S. FINE

A new decade filled with hopes and ominous notes like 1984. What better way to make a fresh start than with a brand new 1980 calendar?

The calendar — in show business parlance — has “arrived.” This year features a bigger and more varied selection of calendars. If your interests include dogs, cats, weightlifting, running or art history, among many others, a special calendar waits for you.

There are two basic types of calendars: wall calendars, which display an entire month and are designed for hanging; and desk or appointment calendars, which are smaller, book-like, and show a full week at a time.

Since calendars are universally useful and relatively inexpensive, they can be a perfect Christmas gift. Many calendars come in sealed boxes, ready for mailing.

The following are brief reviews of a few 1980 calendars. The figures in parentheses are the suggested retail prices, but you may find them for less. (The University Bookstore offers 10 percent off the listed price.) The calendars mentioned here are available from local bookstores, or by mail where indicated.

DESK CALENDARS

The Smithsonian Engagement Calendar ($5.95) presents each week with beautiful prints and photographs on the facing pages. All the art objects shown are from the various museums comprising the Smithsonian Institute.

For Hobbit fans, there's The J.R.R. Tolkien Desk Calendar ($6.95). The beginning of each month offers an illustration by the Brothers Hildebrandt depicting a memorable scene from the works of the master fantasist.

Jurate Kazickas and Lynn Sherr have produced a special tenth anniversary edition of The Women's Calendar ($4.95). This is, according to the introduction, “a calendar celebrating women's achievements.” Notes on the days describe interesting occurrences affecting women's history and record the birthdays of famous women.

The Running Calendar ($6.95) is the latest bit of commercial exploitation by self-proclaimed running guru James F. Fixx. The calendar — with photos, drawings, race dates, commentaries and special spaces for keeping tabs on your daily runs, could be useful. By attempting to over-organize, however, Fixx risks ruining much of the sport's appeal.

The Dieter's Guide to Weight Loss During Sex ($4.95) may be the year's most unique calendar. Richard Smith gives us, as a promotional display proclaims, “The hilarious last word on diets, sex and desk diaries.” A very clever project, indeed, and one that must be seen to be appreciated.

The War Resisters League has been producing calendars promoting nonviolence since 1956. Their 1980 Peace Calendar is available for $3.50 from the War Resisters League, 339 Lafayette St., New York, NY 10012.

New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art has produced what is probably the year's most beautiful calendar. It is entitled Magic Kingdom and features enlarged details from a 16th century manuscript of Persian history. Detailed captions accompany each of the 56 plates. Available for $4.75 plus $1.75 shipping charges from the museum, Box 255, Gracie Station, New York, NY 10161.

WALL CALENDARS

The Audobon Society Calendar ($6.95) features spectacular photographs of birds in various settings. Like all wall calendars, each month has a different picture accompanying the days.

The Sierra Club Calendars ($5.96) are a collection of five calendars (one is the desk variety) featuring color photographs of natural scenery and wildlife. This year's collection includes a children's edition on insects, complete with educational diagrams and descriptions. Proceeds from the sales of these calendars benefit one of the oldest and most active conservation groups.

In Newark's Streets And Skies Roberts Moves His Military Gear

By JAY GREENE

The pilot pointed out Philadelphia on the horizon. It looked like some fallen building blocks, barely visible in the haze.

Wilmington was just before it, and 1600 feet below, the Chesapeake-Delaware Canal crossed our round trip course to Summit Aviation at right angles.

The air was clear and cold. Invisible wind currents buffeted the small Air Force L-19 Birddog.

However, there was no need to worry. Steve Roberts could fly before he could drive. At 14, he helped his cousin, Waldo Lovett, at his Newark airport in return for airplane rides. “You know Waldo,” said Roberts. “He's the one who tows the banner at (university) football games. He's 76 now.”

With the help of Lovett, Roberts had his student flying permit in 1958. He took lessons at Atlantic Aviation Inc., receiving his private license in 1960, his commercial and multi-engine licenses in 1962. He was in the Air National Guard from 1962 to 1969 and earned Captain's stripes.

Roberts, 38, owns 30 military vehicles — the largest collection on the East Coast.

Perhaps you have traveled Cleveland Avenue and seen an olive green military truck parked in front of his home, where he lives with his parents.

Maybe you have seen the same Kaiser M-715, 1 1/4 ton, military personnel and cargo carrier parked on Main Street in front of the Newark Newsstand. Roberts works there part-time.

He said the average person can't appreciate the expense and scarcity of military vehicles. The four-wheel-drive military vehicle is very expensive, and parts are hard to find.

Roberts bought the M-715 with a blown engine in Lakehurst, N.J., through military disposal.

Searching through a handful of keys, he unlocked a hangar at Summit. “This is my World War II room,” Roberts said. In 1939, the government was taking bids from Fort Holabird in Baltimore for a 1/4 ton reconnaissance vehicle. Three major auto companies, Ford, Willys Co., and American Bantam Co., vied for this very lucrative contract, according to Roberts.

He has Ford's proposal, the G.P. (general purpose) vehicle. It has the 1939 Ford tractor engine and transmission “straight off the assembly line.”

He pointed from one model to the next, explaining design improvements since 1940. A 1951 Korean war jeep had a frame and rigid axles. Now they have unibody construction and independent suspension, so they don't get hung up on logs and in ditches as easily, he said.

Roberts has a very rare 1942 Ford GPA, an amphibious jeep. “Almost all went to Russia through Lend-Lease,” he says. He plans to restore it for parades or military simulation movies. “Some lunatic will come along and offer me all kinds of money for it, and, well, I just can't keep it,” he said with a big grin.

“There is a 1945 Dodge Command car that the big Mucky-Mucks like Patton rode around in. This six-ton armored car will do 70 mph.”

Stepping over spare parts and whistling the “Wild Wild West” theme song, he pointed to the second fully-equipped

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2:1 and Acts 4:25

The dread foes of Man are not belligerent circumstances, but the riotous passions — the leopard of incontinence, the lion of violence, the wolf of avarice. Incontinence means lack of restraint, especially undue indulgence of sexual passions; licentiousness, etc. Great nations and empires of history as a result of this sin have rotted from within, decayed, perished. Is not our great land in danger of the same curse, "Chastity is driven away as an enemy by all men, like a snake." Is not the "lion of violence" and the "wolf of avarice" back of and the cause of riots, strikes, etc. It is said that a wolf is hungrier after food than before.

A man may foretell as plainly as can be what will become of us, if we grow indifferent and lukewarm in repressing evil. Make it a shame to see men bold in profaneness, and God will bless you. Be confident that our liberty and prosperity depend upon reformation — if not what difference is there between a man and a beast?

"Beware of making laws in the face of God — telling The Almighty you will meet all His dispensations, and stay things, whether He will, or no."

"God will curse me, if I put personal interests above duty." — Oliver Cromwell. (Consider this last statement, remembering Pontius Pilate: "Suffered under Pontius Pilate" because of conflict of interest.)

"Devoutly thankful ought we to be for the gift of great and good men. They are God's noblest work — for nothing should the people of God more devoutly pray than that their great men may be good men. (If we had been doing that during the past few decades do you reckon we would today have a Supreme Court such as is, one that has taken away from our schools and children God's Book, The Bible, and The Lord's Prayer, I think not. Or, we would have such men in authority over us that let them get by with it, I think not.) One honest statesman — one great, sanctified, devout Christian man in the Senate or Cabinet of a nation, or at its head — is worth more to a nation than all the riches of El Dorado, and is a surer defense than all her armies and navies."

"Every young man should strive by the best possible improvement of his talents and opportunities, to make himself a great and a good man. This is a true and noble ambition. A great and good man is the noblest work of God . . . strive then, my young friend, to fit yourself for the times in which you live."

God give us preachers, teachers, and students, that put "THE STUDY OF THEIR OWN HEARTS" above the study of their books. "Search the scriptures" for it is the mirror by which God reveals to us our hearts; "For The Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1st Samuel 16:7.

"FOR ALL FLESH IS AS GRASS, AND ALL THE GLORY OF MAN AS THE FLOWER OF THE GRASS. THE GRASS WITHERETH AND THE FLOWER THEREOF FALLETH AWAY: BUT THE WORD OF THE LORD ENDURETH FOREVER. AND THIS IS THE WORD WHICH BY THE GOSPEL IS PREACHED UNTO YOU." — Peter 1:24, 25.

Weightlifters will get turned on by Arnold Schwarzenegger ($4.95). This calendar contains photographs of the world's most famous body builder, along with descriptions and demonstrative pictures of two exercises each month.

The National Lampoon 10th Anniversary Calendar ($5.95) is a boring production which could only interest diehard Lampoon fans. It features 14 of the best covers from the magazine's first decade. Yawn...

Another calendar in the less-than-fascinating category is The Official Mork and Mindy ($5.95). A real "pop" offering, it contains still shots of significant show scenes. The calendar corresponds with the fall of the television show from clever comedy to normal, situation stupidity.

If skiing is your sport, get Skiing '80 ($5.95). Eric Schweikardt has assembled great color shots of professional and recreational skiers that will make you yearn for the slopes.

The Sesame Street Calendar ($3.50) is one of the expectation should be referred to the University Student Judicial System and/or to the off-campus courts.

With regard to the second request which the Black Student Union made of me, to set a meeting with key University administrators, I will move ahead to make contact with key University administrators toward the end of establishing a time, date year's best for the kids in your life. Each month has a cartoon drawing of The Muppets at play, and all Muppet birthdays are listed by date.

Dogs Say the Darndest Things ($3.50) gives you cutesy pictures of dressed-up dogs with appropriate "quotations" which are supposed to be funny. Die-hard canine lovers might go for it. Doggone! It's 1980 ($4.50) is much better and benefits the Humane Society. This calendar also contains color photographs of different dogs, but with actual quotes about them from famous writers like Charles Schulz and Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Cat lovers are not excluded from the calendar market by any means. Kittens Are Love ($3.00) contains beautiful pictures of cats and kittens in typical feline poses. The Kliban Cat Calendar ($4.95) is the third edition of the article that spawned an empire, now including everything from waste baskets to bed sheets. Although Kliban's drawings are still funny, his work is so prolific that staring at a calendar for 12 months may be difficult.

and location for a meeting as soon as I have received a general agenda outlining the areas of concern.

In closing, I would urge each member of the University community to reflect in their own life and through their actions an outward appreciation for the dignity and rights of all members of the University community.

WILDERNESS WAYS

Christofano: Blindness No Barrier

By MARY MILOS

As he leaned back in his chair, 24-year-old university student Robert Christofano tried to express what it's like to be legally blind.

"Well, you see the building. I see five bricks if I'm close enough to make out what's going on," he said as he lit another cigarette.

Christofano's blindness is the result of a hereditary genetic condition called retinitis pigmentosa. The first stage results in loss of night vision. The second stage is loss of color and acuity in any remaining sight, and the third is loss of sight altogether.

Christofano explained that he is in the second stage now, adding, "It could stop progressing where it is, or slow down, but it will never get better."

"What you've got to keep in mind here is that there is a distinction between legal blindness and total blindness," he explained.

"Legal blindness is described as visual acuity of 20/200 or less best corrected vision in each eye, or visual field restriction of 20 degrees or less."

Christofano can see with an accuracy of 20/50 at 14 inches. But he has no night vision.

Describing his situation as a "paradox," Christofano chuckled. "Light hurts my eyes, but I can't see in the dark."

His condition was diagnosed when he was 17, but deterioration of Christofano's sight rapidly increased this past year. He went from playing frisbee in Rodney Square to not being able to walk without the aid of a cane over the course of one summer.

After realizing he could no longer work at his job as a steelworker because of his visual problem, Bob decided to enroll at the university.

Over the summer, he completed a 12-week intensive training program which taught him to get around on his own. The program taught skills such as walking with a cane, crossing a street by listening for parallel traffic, and listening for walls.

"You can't actually 'hear' a wall. What you can hear is the sound stops when it comes to a wall, as opposed to going on and on when there is none," Christofano said.

After completing the program, he became eligible for several forms of aid and was able to enroll full-time at the University.

Getting around on campus is not too difficult for Christofano anymore. He has memorized placements of streets, buildings, stairs, and other possible obstructions. He also knows the number of steps in each flight of stairs.

The same approach Christofano uses for getting around campus, he uses for eating in the dining hall. He knows where everything is kept, usually. Sometimes though, things get moved around. All in all, "Eating is not as easy as it looks," he said.

Christofano attends classes regularly, and tape records all lectures. Then he replays the tapes, and types out notes in his room.

He can read with the aid of a machine he has in his room that enlarges the print and shows it on a closed circuit television screen. Some professors allow him to take exams on the machine, and others give them to him orally.

"Have you ever thought of what it would be like to take a multiple choice test orally?" he asked. In answer to his own question he said, "Could you repeat the question please?"

Christofano said he is not excluded from any aspect of campus life that he could think of. "The faculty is very understanding," he said. The only real problem he feels he has is the attitude of his fellow students towards him.

At first he had trouble meeting them. "Most people think I have the plague," he said, but added that the problem "just took care of itself in time."

When asked if he had any specific problems, he replied, "well, yeah, I do have some gripes. My professors tell lousy jokes, the food in the dining hall is terrible, I hate to shave, and I can't find a seat in the Deer Park sometimes on Thursday night if I go there late. And if I go early enough to find a seat, I get drunk."

Love On The Run
(6:15, 10:00)

Francois Truffaut's latest film is the final chapter in the Adventures of Antoine Doinel. Jean-Pierre Leaud plays Antoine as he did in THE 400 BLOWS, ANTOINE AND COLETTE, STOLEN KISSES and BED AND BOARD. We now find our hero amicably divorced from his wife and recently established as a novelist. Marie-France Pisier reappears as Colette, now a lawyer, formerly Antoine's heart throb from episode two. Also with Claude Jade.

Story of Adele H.

Francois Truffaut's film stars Isabelle Adjani as the younger daughter of Victor Hugo who runs away to Halifax to follow a young English officer with whom she had a brief affair on the Isle of Guernsey. A magnificent story of obsessive passion.

1970 jeep. "Two down and eighteen to go," he said. Roberts scouts the country for parts and wrecks of this model to fill an order of 20 for "a customer."

Next hangar. He slid open the long hangar door to reveal his favorite.

A shiny aluminum propeller set off a bright yellow North American T-6D Texas trainer built in 1942. He bought the plane in 1960 and has flown it over 1000 hours. It has a low wing and a nine-cylinder radial engine. He said it will do 240 mph.

For sightseeing and short trips to Wilmington or Philadelphia, Roberts prefers the agile and "cheap flying" L-19 Birddog, which is one of the most economical of his extensive and valued collection.

NEWS FLASH: Keeping in line with the American hostages in Iran, three Review workers were kidnapped and taken to Woodbury, New Jersey last Tuesday night. The three, Ken Mammarella, Tom Chorman and Matt Douthit, complained in the beginning of the kidnapping but were consoled with two six packs of Budweiser (yuk! headache). This reporter is happy to report that all three were returned safely that night to their residences in time for Turkey Day. P.S. Ken - did you get your paper in? Matt - what exactly did you see in a Tarzan movie? Tom - what did you tell your parents?

Kim, our love affair could last this long I lost a lot, but I feel strong You see, I must go away But my love for you will always stay Deep in my heart, through all the lies, Through all the pain. We lost a lot Yet had so much to gain You see, I will go away But my love for you will always stay You did more good than the world could ever know You taught me much, you made me high when I was low. People say it was a bad affair But you know how much I care Some say it was you, some say it was me, I just say my love is true I only wish our love affair could be for two and not for three.

If you want to hit the jackpot, then make next semester pay off! UNDECLARED ADVISEMENT, now through November 30. CASAC, 164 South College Ave., 738-1229.

The Delaware rifle team defeated Western Maryland in their first match of the 1979-80 season this past weekend, 1248-1088. Co-captain Mary Ann Nissley was the top shooter for Delaware with a score of 263. Bob Enos at 259, co-captain Jim Diefenderfer at 251, Steve Widen at 246 and freshman Doug Cassella at 229 rounded out the top five.

The team has a promising group of new shooters, providing the depth necessary to maintain Delaware's standard of excellence in rifle marksmanship. The team's next match will be Dec. 1 against Mt. St. Mary's...

Hen Boxing Club Not Down With the Count

Picture this: five boxers working out with a heavy bag, a speedbag and jump ropes in a gymnasium. A scene from a "Rocky" movie? Definitely not!

It's more like a scene of the Delaware boxing club practicing in the wrestling room of Carpenter Sports Building. The club, which has been in existence for two years, is not really comprised of five boxers but more like 20-25.

"We're a loosely organized club," said Greg Johnson, a member of the club. There is no strict regimen at practices, but workouts are set up daily. Members, such as John Scott and Mike Martin, help coach the other boxers by organizing boxing programs and helping with individual progress. The volunteer coach once the season starts after Christmas will be Jeff Howard. Howard is a former boxer from Wilmington, who won 22 professional fights.

The club is slowly gaining the attention of university students who are realizing the benefits of boxing as a conditioning sport. Many wrestlers find boxing an excellent way to get in shape before their season begins, while a few football players use the facilities to stay in shape before spring ball.

Johnson is trying to get more students involved with the club. He encourages them to drop by the wrestling room and work out as much as they like.

"You can get into it as much as you want," he said, "you don't have to fight or even spar, you can learn the basics and stay in shape."

There are three divisions in boxing. The sub-novice is for beginners who have not fought. The novice is for those who have had up to six fights, and the open division is for boxers who have been in more than six fights. "Therefore, anyone can fit in," Johnson said.

Because of the small number of members, the club does not enter any dual meets where it is necessary to have a boxer for each weight level. Instead, the club enters tournaments where a boxer is matched against another boxer according to how much each weighs. There may be between eight to fifteen schools and clubs represented at these tournaments.

Last year's club competed in five tournaments, all but one held at West Chester State College. For many of the club members it was the first time they had stepped into a ring. Some of the members fought national championship boxers at these tournaments.

This simple explanation offered by Johnson sums up his philosophy of the club. "We're out there to have a good time, but we're also serious about our work."

The club is currently applying for money from the university to acquire new equipment such as bags and gloves. The wrestling room's boxing facilities consist of one heavy bag and one speed bag as well as jump ropes.

If the university does provide the money, it would help buy better equipment that would be maintained by the club, Johnson said.

Currently the members have to provide a great deal of their own equipment, Johnson said. At last year's tournaments, the members had to go and buy matching shirts to look like a team. Some of the members exchanged shoes between fights.

"This year's club has plenty of potential," Johnson said. "A lot can be done, it's just a matter of getting people involved. If we had the equipment and the enthusiasm, we could produce champions," he concluded.

Blue Hens Dismantle Virginia Union, 58-28

By KEVIN TRESOLINI

The word out of Richmond and Virginia Union University last week was two-fold. First, that the Panthers' defense, tops in Division II in total, scoring, and rushing defense, was "immovable." As for their offense, none other than the Delaware Wing-T formation, according to Coach Willard Bailey had "a lower level of sophistication."

As the 11-1 Hens and a Delaware Stadium play-off record crowd of 14,357 found out Saturday, one out of two is just fine thank you.

Against a defense that had given up 36.9 yards rushing per game (Delaware exceeded that on their first drive), the Hens - first in Division II total and scoring offense - rushed for 352 of their 449 yard total. Fullback Bo Dennis led the way with 92 yards and the Hens had a 58-28 play-off quarterfinal win.

Mississippi College, a 35-15 winner over North Dakota, will bring a 10-2 squad to Newark Saturday for the semi-finals (12:50 p.m. kickoff). On the other side of the bracket, Youngstown State demolished South Dakota State 50-7, and will host Alabama A & M, a 27-7 winner over Morgan State.

"I don't think their defense had really been tested," said Delaware Head Coach Tubby Raymond after the Hens scored 44 more points than Virginia Union had given up in any 1979 ballgame. "They were exceptionally strong and quick, and they came at us a lot better than other teams."

"Our game plan is such that it's all inclusive. Scott (Brunner) continues to be an excellent option quarterback which gives our offense a whole new dimension. There's about five different things we can do and if some of it opens up, that's how we'll move the ball."

Though Brunner's passing game never really got untracked - he had several passes dropped - the team's running game was unstoppable as Delaware's offensive line blew away the visitors front four. Five Delaware runners gained over 40 yards, including Brunner, whose career high 40-yard option run set up Lou Mariani's touchdown, a seven-yard gallop that made it 31-13.

Virginia Union did grab an early lead on an NCAA play-off record 87-yard TD pass from Ricky Johnson to Kenny Brown. Wilbert Whaff's extra point try was wide and it was 6 to 3.

As for the Panthers' offense, it was indeed a primitive version of the one spawned here by Dave Nelson during the early fifties. Only several formations were featured. "We ran it like that maybe 20 years ago," said Raymond.

"They couldn't run the ball on us so they went to the pass," said linebacker Will Rutan, who, like defensive back Bobby Woods, nabbed two interceptions. "Their Wing-T was an old fashioned version. Ours is very sophisticated and it's much easier for our defense cause we see it in practice all week."

Delaware's defense adjusted quickly after the long pass. "They came out in a pro (passing) formation so we switched to a two-deep zone," said cornerback Mark Howard. "Up front they were tough, but they just couldn't run on us."

Two touchdown runs by Ed Wood, the second set up by a roughing the kicker penalty, put the Hens up 17-6. But Johnson again moved the Panthers with the pass. A 17-yard strike to Brown, and Johnson's 28-yard aerial to James Ferebee set up Nathan Fairley's three-yard touchdown burst.

But Brunner, Division II's leader in touchdown passes, tossed his 17th to tight end Jamie Young, covering 11 yards and giving Delaware a 24-13 halftime advantage.

Mariani's touchdown came on Delaware's second third period series. Four plays later, Mariani returned Julius White's punt for 75 yards, that, with Kennedy's extra point made it 38-13. It was Mariani's longest career punt return and first for a touchdown.

Panther linebacker Kevin Patterson later returned an interception 38 yards for a touchdown, but Brunner found Young again less than a minute into the fourth frame, with a five-yarder for 45-20 lead. Touchdown runs by Hugh Dougherty and Pete Gudzak and Virginia Union's last minute TD accounted for the final score.

Lady Cagers to Open, Six Veterans Return

By TINA QUILL

The opposition may have a tough time ruffling the feathers of the lady Hens basketball team this year.

The women's basketball season opens up Dec. 1 against Morgan State and they are ready with six returning letter winners. Co-captain Laurie Howard, a junior and a starter for the last two years, led the team statistically in scoring and rebounding. Also returning is senior co-cap. Sandy Hudson a forward.

Cheryl Gittings a junior forward who averaged six points a game last season along with senior guard Karen Johnson are also back for another season.

Maureen Donahue a sophomore and the best all around shooter, according to Head Coach Joyce Emory, Meg Felton who was injured all last season rounds out the returning varsity squad.

Cheryl Lissney injured last season and Jan Streetman who played J.V. along with freshmen hopefuls Lynne Price, Barbara Koch and Susan Jones complete the team.

Emory, in her second year, predicts the girls have a chance for a championship in Division II. "The team does play a lot of Division I teams, two out of three of the games before Christmas are against them. But even if we lose to these teams we still have a good chance for postseason play if we do well against our Division II opponents," she said.

A record of 5-11 last year should be improved this season. There is more depth and experience on the team this year, according to Emory, who pointed out that many games last year were lost by small margins.

Last year the team lacked outside scoring from the guards; the forwards scoring mostly from the inside. "This year," Emory said, "there is much more balanced scoring." One disadvantage however, is the lack of height on the team.

"The returning letter winners will be the backbone of the team," said Coach Emory. Led by 6-foot Laurie Howard they are a hard working group with a good attitude, she said. Another player to look for this season is Karen Johnson who has consistently improved her shooting, according to Emory.

The transfer of star player Stephanie Vanderslice to Villanova will not hurt the team in the long run according to Emory. "We will definitely miss her scoring — she averaged 15 points a game as a freshman — but the slack left from the loss of her rebounding is being picked up by Koch, Gittings and Streetman," said Emory.

The girls have had two scrimmages and Emory is still working different combinations. Her game plan varies with opponents, but she definitely plans on using more man to man defense this year.
