CFC replacement to be tested by DuPont

by Cathy Thomas

A Newark laboratory has been chosen as the site for testing of a potential replacement for chlorofluorocarbon (CFC), pending approval by state environmental officials.

As a member of a worldwide consortium of chemical producers, the DuPont Company has been selected to test dichlorotrifluoroethane, also known as HCFC 123, at its Stine-Haskell Lab on Elkton Road.

According to James Percy, site manager, the Stine-Haskell Lab was selected because of its ability to conduct the two-year test.

"There are only a few places that test can be done and Stine-Haskell is one of them," said Percy.

Chemical producers are hoping that HCFC 123 will be a safe replacement for CFC, which is suspected of damaging the upper ozone. The stability of CFC makes it safe for humans but also causes the environmental damage, according to Percy.

"You don't want something so stable, it breaks down the upper atmosphere," said Percy. "You also don't want is so unstable that it can't do the intended use or that it would break down the lower atmosphere."

HCFC 123 is a refrigerant and, like CFC, can be used as a blowing agent in the production of foam and insulation. If it is proved safe, HCFC 123 will replace CFC in insulation of refrigerators, foam coolers and cups and other products.

Because CFC is used to produce so many goods, Percy said it is important that they find a safe replacement.

"It's a massive change," he said. "Those kind of changes don't occur suddenly."

Percy estimates that some $135 billion worth of goods dependent on CFC is manufactured every year.

Because of the potential damage to the environment, the DuPont Company has pledged to phase out its use of CFC.

"It is our intention to basically get out of the business in the '90's," said Percy.

According to spokeswoman Kathy Forte, 14 chemical companies have joined the worldwide consortium. The companies have joined efforts to speed up tests on potential CFC replacements.

"By the CFC producers pulling their resources, it will only take about five years to complete the testing," said Forte.

Other companies are also interested in phasing out their dependence on CFC.

HCFC 123 is one of three, possibly four, chemicals to be tested as a replacement. The cost of the tests, expected to run as high as $8 million, will be shared by all the companies in the consortium.

Forte said while the testing results will be shared by the companies, development of the CFC replacement will be up to each individual company.

Already some testing has been conducted on HCFC 123, according to Percy.

As a part of their testing, Stine-Haskell will emit up to eight tons of the refrigerant a year into the air.

Percy said that may seem like a lot going into the air, but there will probably be less than .10 parts per million of the chemical in the air at the outside fence of the lab.

"There's going to be very low limits away from the site," he said.

Also, Percy said the levels of the chemical inside the lab will be kept low to ensure employee safety.

Soviet mayors visit

by David Woolman

Four Soviet mayors and the vice president of the largest youth exchange program in the world visited Newark Monday morning to help pave the way for Friendship '89, a high school student exchange program involving the United States and the Soviet Union.

Students from Newark and from a number of other cities in the United States will travel to the Soviet Union for three weeks during the summer of 1989 under the aegis of People to People International, a private non-profit organization which sponsors such exchanges.

Following the Americans' visit, Newark and 150 other communities in the United States will host 1,500 Soviet students.

The goal of the exchange is to increase understanding between the young people of both countries in the hopes of improving relations between the countries in the future. It is said to be the largest exchange of its kind ever between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"We want to know as much as possible about each other," said Natalia Korolkova, first vice president of Sputnik, the Soviet Union's youth exchange organization.

Korolkova, speaking through interpreter Evelina Karmorova before a sampling of students from Glasgow, Christiana and Newark high schools in the Newark High library, stressed it is vital that the young people of the two nations get to know each other.

For most of us, Thanksgiving is a time to offer praise for the everyday things in life — family, friends, food and shelter. For Mark Frye, pictured at Three Little Bakers, where he is manager, it is a time to reflect on the gift of life itself.

Mark Frye climbs his mountain

by Cathy Thomas

The city is still, hushed by the newly fallen snow of a late winter storm.

Police Officer Mark Frye patrols the Baltimore streets this cold, dark February morning. His next assignment is to return to the elementary school he checked a few hours earlier.

At 2 a.m., he pulls up behind the school building. He notices an older model Ford with the lights turned off parked next to the building.

"Kids," he thinks to himself. "Out on a night like this."

He shines a spotlight on the car. There is no movement.

Frye gets out of his patrol car and crunches through the snow. There are no license plates on the Ford, just a "Virginia is for Lovers" bumper sticker.

He walks to the front of the car to get the serial number. The driver's side window is rolled down. It is dark inside the car.

Snow covers the windshield, concealing the serial number so Frye begins brushing away the snow with his hand. He sees a movement on his right side.

"My reflection," he thinks as he turns to glance in the window. But it's not. It's a .45 caliber automatic handgun only six inches from his face.

"Turn around and keep your hand away from your gun," the voice in the dark states coolly.

Frye does as he is told. Then he hears movement from the back seat of the car. There were two people in the car.

The man from the backseat holds a gun against Frye's head as the other man takes his service revolver from the holster.

One of the men places the revolver against Frye's spine and cocks it.

Knowing he is going to get shot with his own gun, Frye twists to retrieve it.

The gun fires. The bullet slices into his back and comes out his stomach.

The force of the shot pushes Frye flat into the snow.

"Is he dead?"

One of the men kicks Frye's legs and checked for reaction.

"Yeah, he's dead."

The two men return to their car and disappear into the winter night. Frye is alive. But as he slips in and out of consciousness, he feels death nearby.

Today, Mark Frye, 31, lives near Newark. Paralyzed from the waist down on his right side, he has lived with pain every day since he was shot on Feb. 19, 1982. Crutches have replaced the muscles he lost in his right leg.

Although he was grateful to be alive when he came to in

A Newark laboratory is seeking state approval to emit a refrigerant from inhalation test chambers.

Officials at the DuPont Company's Stine-Haskell Laboratory have applied for a permit to emit up to eight tons a year of dichlorotrifluoroethane.

A public hearing on the matter is scheduled for 7 p.m. Dec. 1 in the Delaware Department of Natural Resources (DENREC) offices on Grantham Lane in New Castle.

DuPont is considering dichlorotrifluoroethane as a substitute for the chlorofluorocarbons which are suspected of depleting ozone.

Persons interested in speaking at the hearing should contact the DENREC Division of Air and Waste Management in Dover or New Castle.

Written statements should be addressed to: Air Resources Section, Division of Air and Waste Management, 89 Kings Highway, Dover, Del. 19901.

A Newark man was among officers promoted recently in the New Castle County Police department.

Stanley J. Yackoski, 50, of Pike Creek has been promoted from the rank of senior lieutenant to captain.

An 18-year veteran of the county police force, Yackoski has commanded a number of units. Most recently, he served as public information officer.

With the promotion, Yackoski becomes a patrol section commander.

A graduate of the FBI National Academy, Yackoski has also attended the University of Delaware and a number of police schools and seminars.

Santa Claus will arrive by helicopter at 10 a.m. Friday, Nov. 25 at the Newark Shopping Center. Upon arriving, and through the holiday season, Santa will be available at his special house for visits by children.

"European Integration 1992: Implications for American Business," a videoconference via satellite presented by the University of Delaware and the Center for International Trade Development, will be held 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 9. The videoconference will provide information on the European market. Cost is $40 per participant. For information, call Sue Clark in the University's FOCUS Program office, 451-1074.

State Rep. Richard Davis, R-Southeast Newark, has been appointed chairman of the American Legislative Exchange Council's national working group on state AIDS policy. Davis was one of 20 state legislators nationwide selected to serve on the bipartisan commission, which will design a model AIDS code for the states.

"This is not a position I would have sought, but it is a real honor to be asked to chair the working group," said Davis. "The political demands of AIDS on every member of our society demands that we address the problems head on."

Two kilos of cocaine valued at $200,000 were discovered by Delaware State Police during the search of a vehicle Wednesday, Nov. 16 on Interstate 95 near Newark.

The driver of the car, Thomas L. Baranowski, 40, of Branford, Conn., was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

Cpl. Robert J. Durnan stopped Baranowski for speeding and discovered the cocaine during inspection of the vehicle.

Following Baranowski's arrest, he was turned over to the federal Drug Enforcement Agency.

Delaware Crime Stoppers is looking for the man responsible for the burglary of a Wilmington home Sunday, May 8.

A man in his early 20s went to the door of a home in the 800 block of North Van Buren at 3 p.m. He asked the woman at the door for some ice.

She had closed the door, but found on her return from the kitchen that the man had entered the house and was standing in the bedroom with his pants down.

He chased her from the house, then began to run away. While fleeing, he ran into and cut his left forearm on a closet mirror. He fled west on 8th Street to Harrison and disappeared into an alley in the 1100 block of West 7th Street.

The man is described as a black male 5 feet 11 inches to 6 feet tall, 165 to 170 pounds, clean shaven with puffy eyes and a cut on the left forearm.

Persons with information should call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333 inside Delaware or 302-674-8226 outside Delaware.

MDphone installed at Christiana

The Medical Center of Delaware will be the first health care facility in the Northeast and the third in the country to install MDphone.

A lifesaving device, MDphone allows physicians to treat victims of cardiac rhythm disturbance via a standard telephone connection.

An agreement between the Medical Center and the developers of the device, MEDphone Corporation of Paramus, N.J., calls for installation of the MDphone system in the emergency services department of Christiana Hospital.

The device consists of the hospital base unit and a portable patient unit contained in a standard-sized briefcase.

Opening the patient case causes it to dial automatically into the base station, instantly establishing two-way communication and allowing the transmission of vital patient data.

If the patient is suffering from cardiac arrhythmia, the device allows physicians at Christiana Hospital to defibrillate, or deliver a shock, to reset the heart's natural timing mechanism and restore a normal rhythm.

It is the first device to facilitate this combination of communication, diagnosis and treatment via telephone.

"MDphone is the most advanced technology available for responding to the immediate needs of heart patients before they arrive in our emergency department," said Allen L. Johnson, president and chief executive officer of the Medical Center. "We pride ourselves on offering a wide range of state-of-the-art technology to meet all the health care needs of our community."

The MDphone will be operational at Christiana Hospital on a 24-hour basis.

"MDphone is the most advanced technology available for responding to the immediate needs of heart patients before they arrive in our emergency department."

"MDphone is the first device that can offer definitive intervention for even those patients who haven't been identified as high-risk, and we plan to work with the Medical Center to maximize services in this area," said S. Eric Wachtel, president of MEDphone Corporation.

"Our strategy is to work hand-in-hand with the Medical Center and the community, and to make the units available wherever there are significant numbers of people — office buildings and factories, for example."

MEDphone Corporation is currently researching other medical applications for this technology, including fetal and vital-sign monitoring.

Drought plan formally adopted

A drought management plan for the Christina River Basin, an area covering New Castle County and Chester County, Pa., has been formally adopted by the Delaware River Basin Commission.

The plan, which had earlier been incorporated into the drought management plans of both Pennsylvania and Delaware, addresses concerns shared by both counties during times when hydrologic conditions indicate a water shortage may exist within the basin.

The plan established drought criteria based on both ground and surface water conditions and recommends actions to be undertaken on a coordinated basis by both counties as conditions dictate.

While Delaware and Pennsylvania have respective management techniques for their portions of the Delaware River Basin, a recurrence of drought conditions during the 1980s, particularly this past summer, showed a need for the states to coordinate their actions.

In Delaware, the Christina River Basin Drought Management Plan covers all of the Christina River drainage area, all of New Castle County north of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal and the public water supply service areas adjoining the basin.

If the governors of Delaware and Pennsylvania declare a drought warning or drought emergency, a ban on non-essential use of water will be implemented within the Christina River Basin area.

In the case of a drought warning, the ban will be of a voluntary nature. The ban becomes mandatory if a drought emergency is declared.

A bi-state drought management plan will affect the Christina basin, including White Clay Creek (pictured).

$13.4 million budget proposed

Council to consider package Monday

Newark's proposed $13.4 million budget for 1989 will be reviewed Monday night during the regular city council meeting.

The public will have a chance to comment on the budget, which represents a 5.5 percent increase over the current budget.

There are no new tax increases in the budget despite the loss of federal and state revenue sharing funds.

City Finance Director Albert K. Martin said the city was able to avoid tax increases for the 1989 budget because of revenues from the high electrical usage this past summer.

Martin cautions, however, that 1989 may be the last year the city can avoid a tax increase.

The proposed operating budget of $11.2 million is an increase of 9.7 percent over the current year.

Most of the operating budget, nearly $8 million, is allocated to employee costs. A new employee will be added in the city parks department. Also a new dispatcher will be hired for the police department to continue efforts to get more uniformed officers on the street.

The proposed general fund capital budget for the city amounts to $700,000.

The largest allocation in the capital budget is $235,000 for new electric lines and extensions. $75,000 has been set aside for a new police facility as was in this year's budget.

Not part of the general fund capital budget are those projects funding by capital reserve, bond and federal forfeited funds.

Emmaus House is expanding

Shelter for the homeless

by Cathy Thomas

There's now more room at the inn.

The Emmaus House, an emergency housing shelter in Newark, found itself turning away families in the past because they had no room for them. That situation has changed with the recent renovation of the facility.

"The renovation included an addition which increased the size by 75 percent," said Penny Haines, Emmaus program manager. "We can now serve five families."

Haines said the renovation also increased the size of the dining room and kitchen in the house.

Dale Gravatt, Emmaus House executive director, said they wanted to be able to house more families without becoming an institution. They wanted to maintain a family atmosphere in the house.

"We're very satisfied with what happened," said Gravatt.

The Emmaus House, 34 Continental Dr., assists homeless adults and families by providing up to 30 days of shelter, as well as counseling and other services to help them obtain permanent housing.

"It is primarily for families with children," said Haines. "It is for people who are willing and able to work."

Haines said it is a "pretty tough program and not everybody can make it."

Because of the demand for emergency housing, Haines said they still expect to turn away some families because they do not have enough room.

Emmaus House, operated by the Newark Housing Ministry, opened in 1985 with nine beds.

The renovation was funded by several private and public agencies.

Newark youth boosts Val's needy family fund

David Hill

Leslie Hill of Newark thinks of her son, David, as a typical 12-year-old.

"He's all boy," said Hill. "He likes skateboarding and BMX bicycling."

That's why she was surprised when he decided to give away $400 he won in a raffle.

"His first reaction was to buy 10 Nintendo games," said Hill. "He was kind of hanging from the rafters in excitement."

David bought the raffle tickets from the Capitol Trail Junior Football League.

"A friend of his came to the house selling raffle tickets," said Hill. "David bought two tickets."

A few weeks later, Hill said they received a call telling them that David had won second prize, which was $400.

Like all youngsters, Hill said her son's reaction was to buy something for himself first.

"He has a wish list a mile long," said Hill.

But Hill said a half hour after learning about the prize, David decided he wanted to buy one Nintendo game and give the rest of the money away.

David chose Val's Needy Family Fund. The fund, coordinated by Val Nardo and volunteers, puts together food baskets and delivers them to the needy every holiday season.

Hill said the whole family —

David's father, Ron, and sister, Carrie, a University of Delaware student — are very proud of David's decision.

"You just don't expect something like that," said Hill. "When something like that does happen, it feels good."

The annual Val's Needy Family Fund drive is underway, and Nardo said his organization is working in cooperation with the Greater Newark Welfare Committee to gather food and funds to brighten the holiday season for needy families in the community.

SOVIETS

"Only when we understand each other can we make the great effort to make this peace better in the future," she said.

Korolkova said that the students reminded her of her own son, the implication being that the similarities between the young people of both nations would be the key to the success of the program.

"If you put together American and Soviet students, you wouldn't notice the difference," said Korolkova. "The cultures are different, but the kids, their attitudes and their spirits are very much alike."

Arnold Candray, national program director of Friendship '89, explained that Newark helped complete the cross section of American communities assembled for the exchange.

"It was one of 210 cities that was chosen because of the demographics of the community. We're attempting to get a blend of cities across the United States," he said.

"I'm delighted that our students will have the opportunity to be part of what I consider to be a really historic event that has the long range possibility of improving international relations," said Dr. Michael Walls, superintendent of the Christina School District of which Christina, Glasgow and Newark high schools are a part.

The four Soviet mayors represented cities that will take part in the exchange. They are: Vladimir Kuzin of Vladimir, Gennady Zorenko of Rostov on Down, Ivan Malanchuk of Chernovtsky and Stanislav Kobiakov of Belgorod.

They came to Newark as part of a group of 17 mayors who are visiting American cities that are taking part in the exchange.

The mayors exchanged gifts with the students — sweatshirts, caps, scarves and mugs from the students; pins, postcards and a Matrioska, the famous doll within a doll within a doll, from the Soviets.

The group as a whole makes up one of the largest groups of Soviet officials ever to visit the United States. Their tour started out in Washington D.C., where they met with U.S. government officials, and attended a conference with mayors of many of the American cities participating in the exchange.

They also went to Laurel Race Course, where they presented a horse racing prize known as the Peristroika Purse.

Newark was brief stop on a tour of a number of the cities that will host the exchange.

"It's more a matter of establishing rapport than exchanging information," said Newark Mayor William Redd, who attended the conference. "We talked a lot, understood very little, and smiled a lot."

CFC

Primarily, the test will consist of exposing rats to HCFC 123 and testing their reaction. Analysis of the test results is expected to take a year.

Percy is optimistic about the potential of HCFC 123.

"It looks like an extremely safe material," he said. "You don't want to run this kind of test without having a fix that it will be a fairly good product."

State-of-art communications system used by New Castle County police

by Cathy Thomas

The New Castle County Police department has become somewhat of a pioneer in the field of police dispatch.

An Automatic Vehicle Location System (AVL) has been installed to assist dispatchers in determining the exact location of police, fire and ambulance vehicles.

The state-of-the-art communications system is one of the largest and most complex ever installed by the Motorola Company.

"The technology is relatively new," said J. William Bell, chief of the police emergency communications division. "We feel New Castle County serves as a model for the rest of the county."

The two primary advantages of the new system will be increased officer safety and improved service to the public.

The new system features computer screens at each of the dispatching locations. By entering the proper code into the computer, dispatchers can look at part or all of the county to determine where emergency vehicles are located.

"I think it's great," said Sheila Sullivan, dispatching supervisor. "As it was, we just had to guess where are units (cars) are."

The system is only partially operational now, but officials hope to have the system completely in place by early December.

Sullivan said the new system should also make the job of the dispatchers a little easier.

"People call on the phone and they're hysterical," said Sullivan. "The want to know where the officer is."

With AVL, Sullivan said they will be able to look on the screen to determine the officer's location and give the caller an estimated time of arrival.

Sullivan, who is married to a police officer, said some people believe the system is designed to make sure officers aren't hanging out at donut shops.

"That's not what it's for," she said. "It's to make sure they aren't hurt."

David J. Roberts, deputy chief of the emergency communications division, said by monitoring the location of officers, they will be able to send the closest officer to an emergency or get help to an officer in trouble.

The system relies on the federal government's existing network of LORAN-C transmitters. Transmitters are placed in each of the cars and signals are picked up at communication headquarters, via four towers placed throughout the county.

An officer has an emergency button on the floorboard of his car and a remote emergency button on this clothing. When the emergency button is hit, the number of his car will begin flashing red on the dispatcher's computer screen.

Sullivan said that design is particularly helpful in identifying officers in trouble.

"Sometimes officers have been assaulted," said Sullivan. "You hear them screaming for help and they haven't been able to get their unit number out."

In the past, Sullivan said they have relied on recognizing the officer's voice in those types of situations.

The AVL system, which cost $582,000, has been on the market for about three years, according to Motorola spokesman Richard D. Riggs. Only a few other police departments across the country have similar systems, all much smaller than New Castle County's system.

"I think you'll see a lot of national interest in this system," said Riggs.

The system has been described as "user-friendly," said Riggs.

"It will take the dispatchers a couple of days of steady use to get used to it," he said.

The system is designed so that upgrades can be made later.

Building facade loans available

Revitalization is goal

by Cathy Thomas

The more attractive a business, the more business it attracts, according to Maureen Roser, Newark city associate planner.

Roser oversees the city's Facade Improvement Program, which provides no-interest loans to business owners who want to improve the appearance of their properties.

"We think not only will it help business, it will revitalize the neighborhood," said Roser. "We think it's a nice way to improve the city as well as the economic climate."

The loans are limited to $2,000, according to Roser. The money must be used for facade rehabilitation, such as painting, door and window replacement, new siding and trim treatment.

Because federal dollars are used for the loans, there are some eligibility requirements. The business must be in the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) area, which includes the older parts of the city. Most of the city is in the targeted area.

Because the loans are limited to $2,000, there is not a lot of paperwork with the projects, according to Roser.

"Essentially, all a business person has to do is apply...and supply at least two quotes on the cost of the project," she said.

Roser said application approval has come within two days in some cases.

The loans are secured with liens and become due when title of the property is transferred. Monthly repayment terms may also be a part of the loan.

If a tenant wants to improve a landlord's property, Roser said the liens will then be secured against some other piece of property owned by the tenant.

"What we have done is opened it up so that if you own any piece of property, we'll lien that," she said.

Further information on the loan program can be obtained by contacting Roser in the city planning department.

While major changes are not possible with these small loans, Roser said the improvements can make a difference.

"They are small improvements, but they really do help the appearance of the business and give a facelift to the area."

Sculptor Molly Sanger Carpenter works on the Constitutional Compass Rose, commissioned in honor of the state bicentennial. The 12-foot bronze disk will be dedicated Dec. 7 in Dover.

FRYE

that Baltimore hospital, grateful to be given another chance to see his children grow, Frye knew he had a long road to recovery. He wanted to enjoy his life and his family as he had before.

One of the joys of his life had been mountain climbing. In that aspect of his life and others, he has made it home.

On crutches, he climbed the Old Rag Mountain in the Shenandoah National Park of Virginia earlier this fall.

It was in September on a return trip from a doctor's visit in North Carolina that Frye went through Shenandoah National Park.

"I saw the mountains that I used to climb," said Frye. "I thought, 'I wonder if it's not possible for me to climb on crutches?'"

Climbing mountains was far from his mind after he had been shot.

At first, the paralysis was not severe and he was able to walk. He worked for two more years in the Baltimore Police detective division.

However, he was not able to walk without pain. He decided to accept a job with the DuPont Company and return to Delaware to live near his parents and other family members.

But recovery did not come with the move. A series of operations did little to ease the pain and movement became almost impossible.

It wasn't until January 1988 that a doctor at Duke University in Durham, N.C. discovered bullet fragments in Frye's spine. Because the bullet exited through his stomach, doctors who performed the first operation were unaware of the fragments inside his body.

"They were just trying to save my life at that point," said Frye. "Whether I could walk or not was immaterial."

The doctors at Duke University performed a specialized surgery on Frye, putting to sleep the nerves which were causing him so much pain. He will probably never walk again.

"It's the difference between being able to function and not being able to function," said Frye. "I'm not one of those people who likes to be at home and do nothing."

Frye began mountain climbing when he was 16 years old. At first, he climbed mountains in Pennsylvania, and later the Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia.

"After I lost the use of the leg, I figured that (mountain climbing), along with all the other things I do with my leg, were gone," said Frye.

When he saw the Old Rag Mountain, he knew he had to try a climb on crutches. He contacted a friend who had been his climbing partner before he was shot.

"He said, 'It's probably crazy, but we'll give it a shot, if you're willing to try,'" said Frye.

On Sept. 23, Frye and his partner went to Shenandoah National Park and camped at the base of the mountain.

"It rained, so we had to change the way we were going to go and that increased the risk," said Frye. "It made the rocks a little more slippery and the rain shortened our schedule."

Frye would have to go six miles on his crutches in one day. Three miles up the mountain and three miles down the mountain. At every moment he had to be aware of where his crutches were placed.

"There's a point of no return," said Frye. "If you fall, you could break something or injure yourself pretty severely."

It took him three hours to get to the top of the mountain.

"When we were climbing up the last part of the mountain, my partner said to me, 'you've come home to your mountain now,'" said Frye.

"What he meant was I had come back to doing something I had done before."

Mark Frye scans the Shenandoah Valley from atop his mountain.

The reward was waiting for Frye when he reached the summit.

"To look out and see the Shenandoah Valley and all the mountains around me and to realize that I sat on Skyline Drive three weeks before and it was just a dream," said Frye. "Now it was reality."

Getting to the top of the mountain was only part of Frye's climb. While most people believe going down is easier than climbing, for Frye it was much more difficult.

"Going up the hill, I can fall and fall right into the mountain," said Frye. "But now (going down), if I fell, I would fall down the mountain."

There was also the threat of severe weather. A thunderstorm rolled into the area. Lightning was a scare for Frye because of his aluminum crutches.

Frye and his climbing partner made it safely to the bottom of the mountain in two hours.

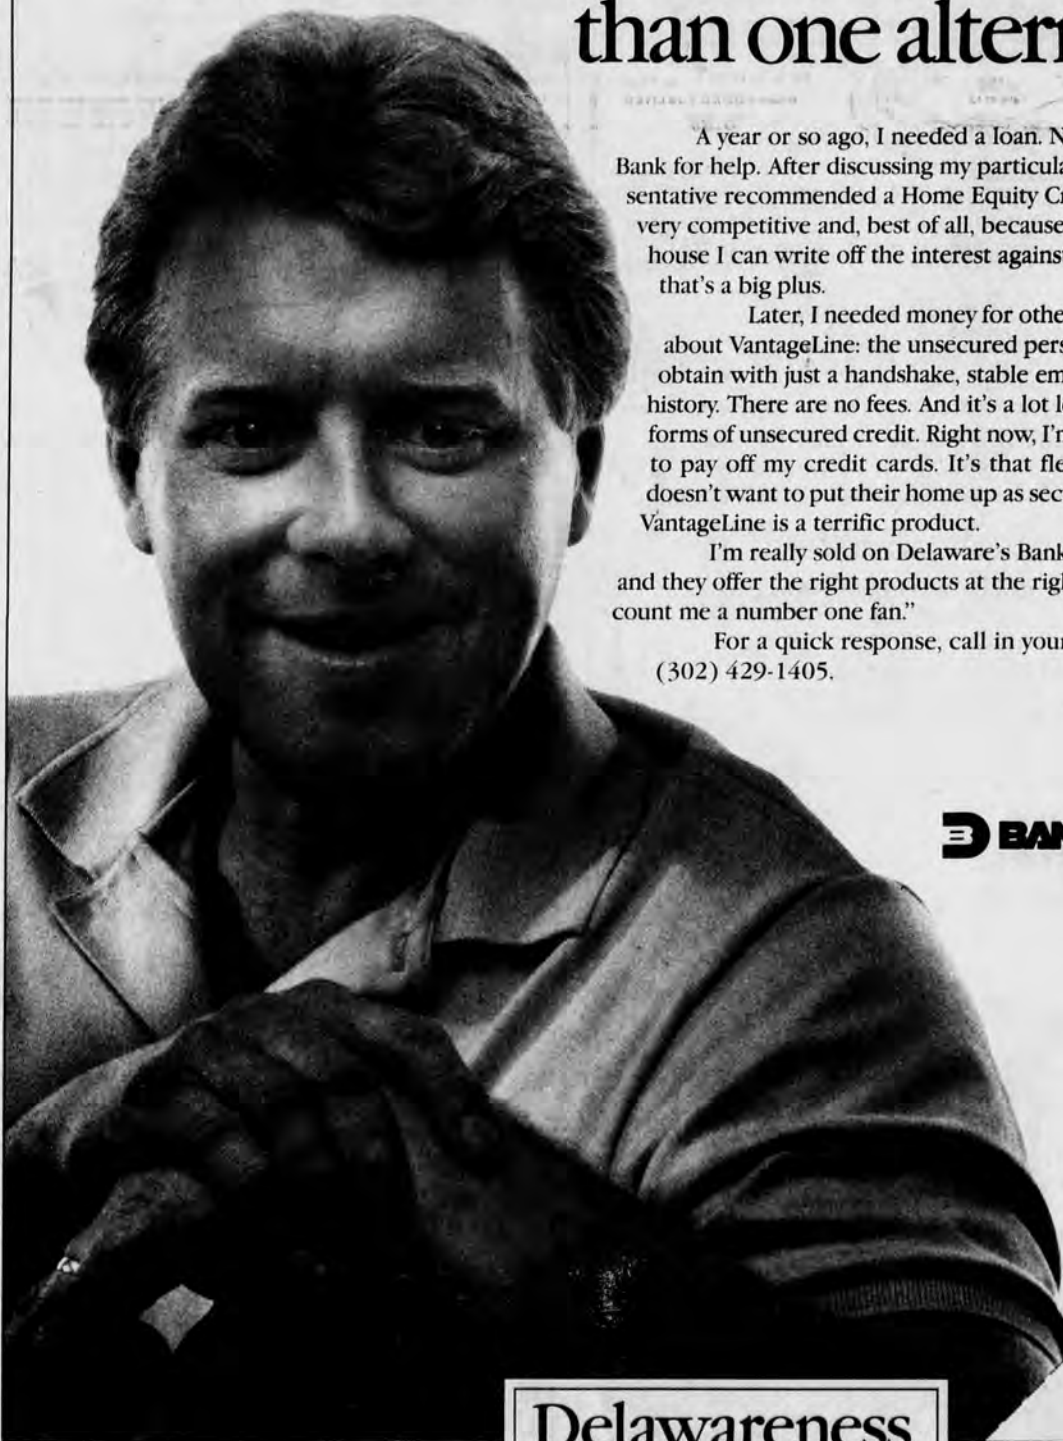

Climbing Old Rag Mountain is not the end of his adventures.

Frye is now planning a trip to Colorado to climb some of the 14,000 peaks in the Rocky Mountains. Later, he will climb Mt. Rainier, a glacier-covered mountain in Washington State.

"There's a lot of things that are possible no matter what your disability is, no matter what your age is, or sex or whatever," said Frye. "I have to continually tell myself that it is possible to do it, if I can just find a way."

"When I needed to borrow, Delaware's Bank offered me more than one alternative."

A year or so ago, I needed a loan. Naturally, I looked to Delaware's Bank for help. After discussing my particular needs, my branch representative recommended a Home Equity Credit Line. The interest rate was very competitive and, best of all, because the credit is secured by my house I can write off the interest against my income tax. These days, that's a big plus.

Later, I needed money for other reasons. That's when I learned about VantageLine: the unsecured personal line of credit you can obtain with just a handshake, stable employment and a good credit history. There are no fees. And it's a lot less expensive than many other forms of unsecured credit. Right now, I'm considering using VantageLine to pay off my credit cards. It's that flexible. So for someone who doesn't want to put their home up as security — or for people who rent — VantageLine is a terrific product.

I'm really sold on Delaware's Bank. They're friendly, they act fast, and they offer the right products at the right time. If this is Delaware, count me a number one fan."

Keene elected to post

Dr. William B. Keene of Windy Hills, Delaware superintendent of public instruction, has been elected president of the national Council of Chief State School Officers.

Keene was elected during the Council's annual meeting Nov. 11-14 in Indianapolis and will take office in November 1989.

The Council is made up of 56 superintendents and commissioners from each state, the District of Columbia and American territories. It serves as an advocate for public education and works with Congress, federal education officials and other major education-oriented organizations.

Keene, state superintendent since 1980, has been active in the council as a director and member of legislative, education, training and employment committees.

He also served on the Teacher in Space selection panel.

Minorities must be encouraged

Too few blacks enrolled in college preparatory courses, Burnette says

by Neil Thomas

Christina School District must devise a plan to encourage minority students to enter, and succeed in, the college preparatory course of study, according to Suzanne Burnette of the Christina Desegregation Advisory Committee.

Burnette said statistics on minority participation in Christina college prep courses are "grim."

One district high school offers 107 college prep classes, each of which has less than 10 percent black enrollment, Burnette told the Christina school board last week.

"Racially identifiable" classes begin in the third, fourth and fifth grades, she added.

A problem is that some schools are using Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS) scores as a criterion for admission to college prep classes, Burnette said.

Dr. Michael Walls, Christina superintendent, said that the CTBS should be used as a counseling device and not for placement, but acknowledged that it is being misused in some schools.

"It (CTBS) is not designed as a placement tool," Walls said. "Some parents have had to fight the system to get their children into college prep classes. Once in, the children have achieved. It is a problem we have to deal with and are aware of."

Cynthia Oates, school board member, said, "A mind is a terrible thing to waste. Every child who comes through this system has potential, and that potential can help the country grow. Every time we cut off that potential, we cut off an opportunity to help our country grow."

"It upsets me," she added, "that we have some people in our classrooms who do not encourage our kids to do their best. Every child can learn, some maybe slower than others, but they can learn."

Oates said teachers who discourage rather than encourage students, be those students black or white, are "assassinating our kids."

Board member George Evans said the "statistics are staggering," and called for a district report on the problem.

Disabilities can be overcome

Learning disabilities are a problem that can be overcome — even in post-secondary education. But they require increased recognition, better understanding and adaptable programs by educators.

That theme ran through two dozen seminars and peer sessions at Goldey-Beacom College's fourth annual Colloquium on Assisting Underprepared Students. The day-long colloquium drew educators from three states and speakers from institutions differing in size and scope from the University of Maryland and Penn State to the Community College of Philadelphia and DelTech.

"The climate is so different at each institution that there is no basic model," said Louis F. Tripoldi, of Clarion University of Pennsylvania. "There are only ideas."

And ideas were wide-ranging and sometimes daring at the colloquium, most of them centered on the notion that "learning disabled students" have average or above-average intelligence but are overwhelmed by any of a number of conditions.

Among suggestions to overcome such conditions were: computer-assisted instruction, tutorial services, experimental use of a lab in English as a second language to support a data processing course, alternative approaches to word problems in teaching mathematics, and teaching grammar through writing.

All such solutions, Widener University's Linda Baum told her audience, address "the basic problem — a breakdown in the processing of information." That is a problem that can often be solved, most participants agreed.

Christina studies interactive television

by Neill Thomas

Glasgow High School would like to offer German IV to its advanced foreign language students, but with an enrollment of just four the administration cannot justify the assignment of a teacher. Such is also the case at Christina and Newark high schools.

If only the students could be grouped there would be enough for a full class. Unfortunately, the logistics of schedules and transportation make it impossible to bring the students together. What to do?

According to Charles "Ed" Hockersmith of the Christina Board of Education, the answer may be in interactive television.

Through interactive television, a class in one Christina school can be broadcast live to other schools.

The broadcast classroom is set up much like a studio, with television cameras focused on the teacher and on his or her work area. Students in the remote schools can see, hear and respond to questions.

Hockersmith said many Midwestern states, with far-flung rural areas, have made good use of interactive television as an alternative means of delivering the educational product.

Currently, Dr. Harvey Stone of the University of Delaware is working on just such a project here. He hopes to complete a statewide network to make classes in Newark accessible to students in Kent and Sussex counties.

"I propose we ought to take a look at the use of television as an alternative delivery system for high-interest, low-enrollment classes," Hockersmith said.

Christina already has the talent and technology to produce interactive television, he added, noting that Newark High School has a "fully-equipped, broadcast-quality studio."

Dr. Michael Walls, Christina superintendent, said Hockersmith's idea is on the mark. "I absolutely agree," he said. "This is the education of the future, and we have the talent and the technology to do it."

Cressman earns presidential award

by Cathy Thomas

More should be done to attract students to the fields of science and mathematics, according to a Newark teacher, recently honored for her teaching abilities.

Georgia E. Cressman, who received the Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching, said more students need science and mathematics to understand future technologies.

"We're not quite at a near crisis," said Cressman. "We're going to face a real problem in 10 years."

Cressman, an eighth grade math teacher at Martin J. Gauger Middle School, said more scholarships should be offered to those students who want to major in science or math.

As well as a shortage of scientists and mathematicians in private industry, Cressman said schools districts having difficulty finding teachers for those subjects.

Part of that reason, she said, is that fewer women are entering teaching now. "That's depleting the pool of people that are going into math and science," said Cressman.

Cressman was among 104 science and math teachers singled out for special recognition because of their abilities in the classroom. She attended ceremonies in Washington, D.C. last month to accept the award and exchange professional information with other teachers and educational representatives.

The Presidential Award, granted to teachers who clearly demonstrate an ability to motivate all students toward excellence, is administered by the National Science Foundation.

As an awardee, Cressman received a $7,500 grant for the mathematics program at her school. No decision has been made on how the money will be spent.

Promoting peace among the young

If the relationship between any two nations could benefit from an infusion of goodwill, it is that between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The two superpowers have been involved in a hot-and-cold war since before the end of World War II and, given the nuclear capabilities of each, that unfortunate relationship has kept the entire world on edge.

Lately, there has been movement toward a less heated give and take.

That normalization is being manifested locally through Friendship '89, an exchange program which will send Newark students to the Soviet Union and bring Soviet students here.

There is no better place to begin the process of healing than with the young of both nations. They are more open to new ideas, to seeing things in new ways. They carry less of the emotional baggage of the last four decades.

Someday these young people will pick up the mantle as leaders themselves, and it can only benefit the nation for them to have built a foundation of friendship and trust.

The United States and the Soviet Union will never be bosom buddies. There are simply too many fundamental differences in the ways we see the world.

However, it cannot but help for such exchanges to offer young people fresh insight into those differences and to create an atmosphere in which understanding replaces blind hatred.

Friendship '89 is a valuable program. This holiday we can offer thanks for the people who had the vision to create such an exchange.

Let C'tina parents have full hearing

Christina School District is redrawing the boundaries of its schools to accommodate the opening of two new buildings and to address problems involving racial and socio-economic diversity in existing schools.

Simply put, with two new schools it becomes necessary to shift students to fill the facilities.

And, under court-ordered desegregation, it is both a legal and moral necessity to ensure a fair mix of students in all Christina schools.

On top of that, the district is trying to revise its school feeder patterns to establish a more logical sequence from elementary to middle to high school.

In other words, students from A, B and C elementary schools will attend D middle school and E high school.

The changes will affect nearly all Christina students and thus are stirring a great deal of controversy.

A key element of concern seems to be that the school district is acting with undo haste.

There would appear to be a grain of truth in that concern.

Although it would hold up district plans, Christina officials should give serious consideration to holding more than one public hearing (that one is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 1 at Kirk Middle School).

An additional hearing or two would enable district residents to air their grievances and perhaps participate more in the refinement of redistricting options.

Redistricting is an important issue to Christina's caring parents. It should not be enacted with undo haste.

Kennedy: The nation lost a friend

On Nov. 14, 1963, President John F. Kennedy visited Newark to dedicate Interstate 95 at the Delaware-Maryland state line.

President Kennedy arrived by helicopter and was joined in the ceremony by Delaware Gov. Elbert Carvel, Maryland Gov. Millard Tawes and 5,000 onlookers.

The president was in high spirits as he dedicated the $100 million project linking the Delaware Turnpike and Maryland's Northeast Expressway.

He cited the enormous highway needs the northeastern United States would face in the next four decades, and said the new road was a symbol of state and federal cooperation.

"It may be only a few years before the entire stretch from Boston to Washington will be on gigantic urban complex," Kennedy said, prophetically.

With such growth would come needs, he added. Housing for new residents. Schools for the children. Hospitals for the infirm. Water for all.

John F. Kennedy left Newark, never to return.

Just eight days after the visit, he was struck down by an assassin's bullet. The nation was stunned. Shocked. Saddened. And never quite the same again.

It has become cliché, but nearly everyone alive that day can probably remember where

by Neil Thomas

he or she was at the time of the news of the president's death.

I was in the third grade at Medill Elementary School in Newark.

No one told us what happened, but we knew something was up. The teachers wore grim looks as they quietly and quickly herded us to the cafeteria.

As we sat, several hundred children huddled and expectant, the principal told us the news.

There was not only a deep sense of loss, I recall, but a deep sense of fear. The president had been killed and the nation was leaderless in this, the cold war era.

Every few weeks we were drilled in civil defense procedures in case of Soviet attack, filing into the hallways and covering our heads.

I felt a great sense of relief when we were put onto our buses and I arrived home.

I'm not sure where I saw the pictures, on television or in a magazine, but I don't think I will ever forget the sight of the flag-draped coffin borne by caisson, the riderless horse, the lone boot in the stirrup, young John saluting his fallen father.

Four years ago, I had the good fortune to meet a man who had been very close to John F. Kennedy and I was impressed by his utter respect and devotion.

His name is J. Frank Yeager, and he is superintendent of public schools in Owensboro, Ky. But during the early 1960s, Yeager was a member of the U.S. Secret Service.

Yeager was first assigned to protect Rose Kennedy, but in 1962 was transferred to duty in the White House.

Yeager traveled with Kennedy on trips to two dozen nations and nearly every city in America. He was there in Germany to hear Kennedy proclaim "Ich bin ein Berliner." He was there during the Cuban missile crisis. He was there when Kennedy ordered federal troops to keep peace during the enrollment of the University of Mississippi's first black student.

As an agent, Yeager "literally lived with the president" and fondly recalled one incident when he was posted on the first floor of the White House. He noticed the elevator light on and wondered who could be awake and on the move at 2 o'clock in the morning. It was Kennedy himself, dressed in a robe, to give Yeager a snapshot from the presidential trip to Ireland.

It was an exhilarating time for Yeager, what with the travel, the high-level politics and the fresh vision of a charismatic young leader. "It was like being on top of the world," Yeager said.

But excitement turned to tragedy when Kennedy was shot to death in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Yeager was in Austin, making preparations for the president's next scheduled stop, when he got the news. And orders to return to Washington for reassignment to the new president, Lyndon B. Johnson.

The airplane taking agents back to the capital was filled with "grown, worldly men in a state of shock," Yeager said. "There was hardly a dry eye. Not only had we lost a president, we'd lost a friend." As had the nation.

Truly 'We, the People'

To the Editor:

"We, the People" elected George Bush as our new U.S. president. Some people are happy, some are sad and disappointed and some may not even care. But for all of us it is a comfort that "we, the people" did the choosing, not a central committee or military rulers. That is how it is done in most other countries.

Historians say that Mr. Bush is the only sitting vice president in more than 100 years to be elected president. I think that Ronald Reagan's legacy has a lot to do with this.

Mr. Reagan has been the only president since John F. Kennedy who has improved the U.S. posture in the world. The U.S. posture was declining and took several sharp dives during the Nixon and Carter eras. Nixon gave us Watergate, and Carter the Ayatollah and the hostage crisis. Nixon made America look like a cheat and Carter made it look weak.

Mr. Reagan has made America more respectable and credible in the world. He also made Americans feel good about themselves.

The office of U.S. president is the most important office in the world. A U.S. president must look and act presidential. He must be personable, communicative, humorous, honest, bold, confident, decisive, proud and relaxed. He must understand the U.S. role in the world and enjoy his enormous power and prestige. He must be a cheerleader with a global vision. He does not need to be a competent administrator. He can surround himself with competent administrators.

Mr. Reagan looked presidential. His work will be remembered. Let's hope that Mr. Bush will follow in the same path.

Glad Rivera exposed evil

To the Editor:

I am glad that Geraldo Rivera exposed the horrible evils of Satan worship on a top-rated prime time television show. There were some great lessons for all of us. Some of them were:

- Monitor your children by being part of their lives.
- Satan lies, destroys and cannot be trusted or toyed with.
- Some heavy metal musicians are leading many down the road of evil.
- Only Jesus Christ can provide us a way out of evil.

However, there is a subtler evil pervading our nation that leads down the very same road, overlapping and paralleling. It is the often disguised worship of the occult, an indirect worship of Satan. We see it everywhere under such labels as New Age, horoscopes, tarot cards, ouija boards, crystals, astral projection, parapsychology, TM, ESP, palm reading and much more.

All are examples of many trying to control his own destiny without God. These practices are strongly condemned by God throughout the Bible.

One example is Deuteronomy 18-19: "Let no one be found among you who sacrifices your son or daughter in the fire, or practices divination (astrology, palm reading, tarot cards), interpreting omens (crystals, ouija), practices sorcery (New Age healing, parapsychology), witchcraft, casting spells, is a medium or spiritualist, or consults the dead (astral projection, seances, TM)."

Also, there are many verses that condemn idol worship.

Notice, however, each of these practices, many of which people say are harmless, are listed along with sacrificing you son or daughter. Obviously, God does feel they are all very serious.

No scientific name or claim can cover up the inherent evil of these practices. Evil is evil, and we must avoid it at all costs. We must not be fooled by labels.

OPINION

This Thanksgiving, the Bidens truly have been blessed

Every week, I send a message to Delawareans through the local press, usually focusing on an issue of public concern that is being considered in the Senate.

This week, I would like to offer a more personal note in the context of our Thanksgiving holiday.

I have a special feeling about this Thanksgiving. It is not only a time for giving thanks, but for reflection — reflection about our family, state and country.

In many ways, I was particularly fortunate this past year. I had the opportunity for almost seven months to reflect upon my life, my country and what that means to me. It is an opportunity few people ever get.

I came away from my own personal experience, as I have said often, unscathed, but not ungrateful, and even more optimistic about our ability to make a better world for ourselves and our children.

In many ways this past year was the best year of my life. Although I was made painfully aware of my own vulnerability, my faith in God and the power of prayer was reinforced.

My experience has had an interesting affect. Instead of making me feel that there is a great urgency about what I must do with my life and what my country must achieve, I now feel confident that with the right application of hard work,

by U.S. Senator Joseph Biden

creativity and commitment our future holds more hope than ever.

As with many people who have faced the kind of challenge I have had this year, I've gained strength and confidence from confronting a problem and dealing with it, rather than lamenting the difficulties it presented.

When my family sits down to dinner this Thursday, we all will look around the table, aware of our good fortune, happy to be together, thankful for the warmth of friends and community and grateful for the privileges granted us by being citizens of this great country.

The trials and fears of earlier in the year will seem both far away and right there with us. What we went through seems distant, because we all feel optimistic, solidly healthy and happy to have the experiences of the year behind us. But the experience still is very much a part of us — quite simply, everything we do from now on is built on the rare blessing of a second chance.

I've always believed God gives everyone at least one solid chance to make a contribution and it's up to the individual to seize that opportunity. But seldom does somebody get two chances. I thank God for giving me a second chance.

I've tried to put in words some of my feelings, but in the end I have come to realize that my gratitude this Thanksgiving is beyond expression. I hope I can live up to the gift of a second chance, and to the other countless blessings of my life that seem, especially this holiday, to shine like new.

On a very personal note, I sincerely want you all to know what your prayers and support meant to me earlier this year — when I needed it most — and what it will always mean.

To you and your family from all of the Bidens, Happy Thanksgiving.

Hens win, earn NCAA playoff bid

by David Woolman

As this up and down regular season ends, let it be said that the University of Delaware football team had control over its destiny and succeeded in making the NCAA Division I-AA tournament.

The Hens sped out to a 35-0 lead after three quarters to put away Boston University 38-18 in front of a crowd of 14,202 at Delaware Stadium and become co-champions of the Yankee Conference.

The University of Massachusetts defeated New Hampshire 64-42 to finish 6-2 and share the Yankee Conference crown with Delaware. Since Delaware (6-2, 7-4) defeated UMass during the season, the Blue Hens receive the conference's automatic tournament bid.

Delaware will play at fifth-ranked Furman University in Greenville, S.C. 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Delaware's defense rendered BU's vaunted run and shoot offense ineffective, and provided the opportunities for the first two scores.

Defensive end John Levelis recovered a fumble in the first quarter to give Delaware the ball on the BU 33 yard line. Six plays later, quarterback Dave Sierer ran in from a yard out for a touchdown. Don O'Brien kicked the extra point to give the Hens a 7-0 lead with 11:07 remaining.

On Boston's third play from scrimmage, strong safety Bryan Bossard intercepted a Jim Schuman pass and ran 48 yards for a touchdown. It was Bossard's first touchdown at Delaware, and one that he'll remember fondly oneday, maybe.

"I have to check the films to see what I did," said Bossard, who plans to assist Dave Scott with the Glasgow High School football team next year. "I think somebody tipped it. Someone had my leg and pulled away. I looked, just saw the goal line, and took off."

Although the Terriers did manage 361 yards passing, the game was a triumph for the Delaware secondary which has had its problems the last two games. Apparently, it went according to plan.

"Our game plan was to stop the long pass," said Bossard. "They were beating people by throwing a lot of bombs."

"If they can't hit the big play, they come back to the short patterns, and our linebackers did a good job covering the short patterns. It was a total team effort in the secondary. That's one thing we haven't done in the last couple of games."

"I knew it was going to be really hard," said Hen linebacker Eric Ringoen, who intercepted a pass to become the team's interception leader with four. The St. Mark's product becomes the first linebacker to lead a Delaware team in interceptions. "I had to cover the under patterns. We put two hawks (strong side linebackers, whose responsibilities generally include covering ends or slotbacks in passing situations) in there, Jim Borkowski and David Ochs, and they put me in the middle to try and get better pass coverage. It worked really well."

"Our defense played exceptionally well," said coach Tubby Raymond. "I thought that what (defensive back coach Bob) Sabol and (defensive coordinator Ed) Maley put together was outstanding, in light of the prolific aspect of the run and shoot offense."

The Hens drove 83 and 79 yards for second quarter touchdowns, scored on a 22-yard pass from Sierer to James Anderson, and a Sierer one yard run. O'Brien's two extra points gave Delaware a 28-0 lead going into halftime.

"From an offensive standpoint, it became apparent that we were not going to be able to drive the ball inside, so we took what they gave us, which was the outside and the passing game," said Raymond. "Sierer (16-25, 181 yards) threw the ball very well and controlled the ballgame very well. We got a great effort out of James Anderson (whose availability to play was questionable due to an ankle injury, and had three receptions, 60 yards, one touchdown) again."

The Hens scored another touchdown on a drive set up by Ringoen's interception, with Gil Knight capping the 20 yard drive with a one yard run for the score. O'Brien's extra point made it 35-0 with 2:51 remaining in the third quarter. O'Brien kicked a field goal in the final quarter in a return to his earlier season form.

BU failed to menace, driving for two touchdowns in the fourth

Spartan spikers third in state

by David Woolman

Well, at least Dave Stover gets to keep his beard.

After St. Mark's High's 15-11, 15-11 victory over Concord in the state tournament quarterfinals Tuesday, Spartan coach Stover revealed that if his team won the state tournament, the players could cut off his beard.

Fortunately for Stover's facial hair, but unfortunately for the team, Archmere edged out the game Spartans 11-15, 15-11, 16-14 in Thursday's semifinals.

St. Mark's won third place in the tournament, defeating Newark 16-14, 11-15, 15-9 in the consolation match Saturday.

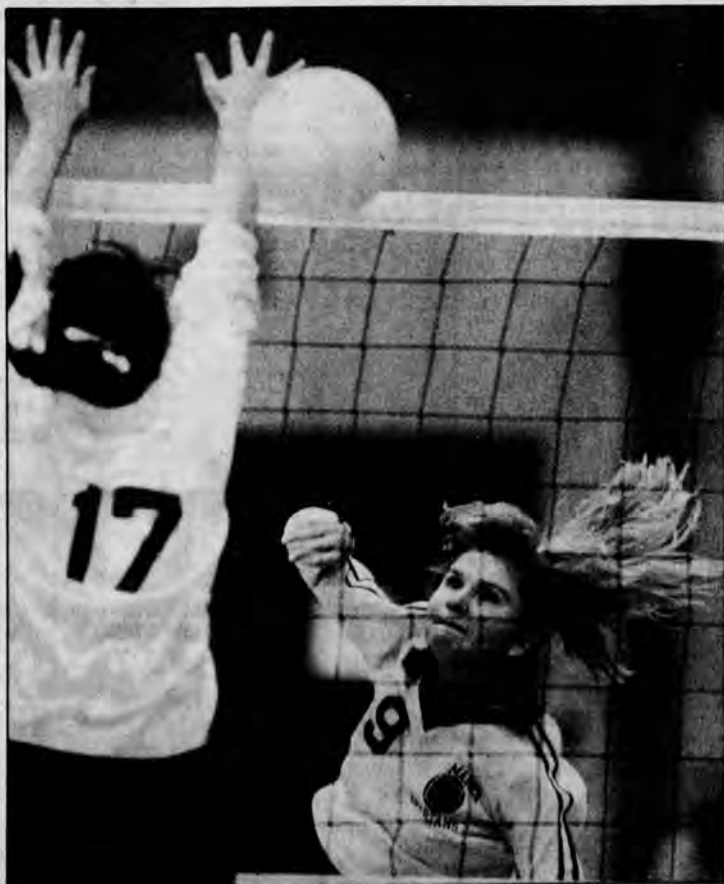

The Spartans were shockingly effective Tuesday, playing their finest match of the year in putting away Blue Hen Conference Flight A co-champion Concord in two games.

"If we don't play this well next time, we're in trouble," warned Stover after the match.

Prophetically, St. Mark's didn't look quite as sharp against the Auks Thursday, but remained in the match of Catholic powers that Stover jokingly called "the Holy Wars" to the very end, coming back from a 14-9 deficit in the final game to tie the score. Ultimately, it was the curse of St. Mark's, bad serving, that did the Spartans in.

"Lesser teams, when it was 14-9, would have bagged it," said Stover. "They fought back and tied it up."

Newark to face Sallies

Playoff Saturday

by David Woolman

It was vintage Newark High School football. Vintage 1988, that is.

This time it was Ted Raftovich pulling down a fourth quarter pass and rumbling into the end zone for a 67-yard touchdown, in one play tripling the Yellow-jackets' offensive yardage for the night and providing the 'Jackets with their winning, and only, score.

Newark found a way to win, again, 6-3 over A.I. duPont Friday night at Hoffman Stadium.

The victory makes Newark the Blue Hen Conference Flight A co-champion, sharing the title with William Penn. The 'Jackets get the Flight A tournament berth by virtue of their victory over William Penn last week.

In the tournament's opening game, Newark will face Salesianum at 10 a.m. Saturday at William Penn High.

How ugly was the victory over A.I. duPont?

Newark was held to negative yardage on the ground. They made four first downs, one on a penalty.

Quarterback Bill DiIenno, who gained more than 230 yards on the ground just two weeks ago run for minus 25 yards Friday evening. DiIenno was 4 for 11 passing, for 115 yards and two interceptions. A.I. outgained Newark 168-110.

"A.I. totally outplayed us today," said coach Butch Simpson. "It wasn't any surprise. It's that classic situation. They have nothing to lose. They've had a disappointing season (2-4-1, 2-7-1) and they're a good group of football players, seniors, wanting to go out on a high note."

"It was also expected that, no matter how much we tried to prevent it, we probably were not going to have the same type of enthusiasm necessary to play a quality group of football players under those situations. We spent

Tower Hill tops Christiana for title

by Neil Thomas

It was a clash of titans. Undeclared, top-seeded Tower Hill against undefeated Blue Hen Conference champion Christiana High for the state high school soccer title.

And as so often happens in such titanic athletic contests, Saturday's game, played before 1,600 rain-soaked fans at Newark's Hoffman Stadium, was decided not on a classic thrust but on a simple mistake.

Just 17 seconds into the second half the Christiana defense was unable to clear a ball from the goal mouth and Tower Hill captain Tony Vattilana drove the ball past Viking goal keeper Mark Puican.

That 1-0 lead that would stand the test of a furious second half by Christiana and give Tower Hill the state championship.

"It was a mistake," said Christiana coach John Kendall of the Vattilana goal. "Our defenseman hit the ball with his left foot and shanked it."

The ball went spinning toward the goal, with Vattilana in hot pursuit. Puican, who has had an outstanding season, had no chance to stop the shot.

For Christiana, the loss was frustrating in that the team carried play much of the first half and, save for those fateful 17 seconds, nearly all of the second half.

"We had some tough chances," said Kendall. "It was just tough going."

The Vikings got off to a quick start, taking the opening kick outside and deep into the Tower Hill defense. From the corner, senior Pat Ward lifted a centering pass directly across the Hillers' goal mouth and the ball sailed just six inches over the head of a leaping Dave Wellborn.

That attack set the pattern for the day, as Christiana moved the ball down the wings to take advantage of Ward's speed and to avoid Tower Hill's strong center-field players — Vattilana and David Amato.

Tower Hill settled down and, using a razor-sharp passing game, began pressuring the Christiana goal.

quarter, and scoring a final touchdown on a blocked punt with eight seconds remaining in the game.

Raymond felt very strongly about the character of the team, which he feels came out after the fans and the press had all written off Delaware for the year.

"After our first two losses, I made a comment to them that if they were to come back now and demonstrate soem real character and demonstrate some commitment and win, that the rewards would be far greater than if they just came right out and did it the first time."

"I'm a little bit tired to be exuberant, but maybe three or four o'clock in the morning I'll realize that this football team that everybody just cast aside after two losses has won the Yankee Conference championship," Raymond said.

our emotions the past two weeks.

"The only thing that breaks down the scenario is that we found a way to win. That's been a little bit about this team. It hasn't always been pretty, but let's face it: there are people with better personnel than us, and our personnel keeps getting eliminated. Someone has to step in every week."

Newark hasn't had a contact practice in weeks — they can't afford to. Still, cornerback Steve Fierro broke a leg in practice this week, necessitating a personnel shuffle that put Chuck Jones out there as outside linebacker, and he came through with a key interception.

A.I. drove into scoring range on their first two drives but fumbled the first time and missed a field goal the second. Newark didn't threaten until the last drive of the half, which began on their 49 yard line.

Dilenno completed a 21-yard pass to Ted Raftovich, and then proceeded to lose ten yards on a running play and a procedure penalty. Dilenno scrambled for ten yards, just missed completing a pass to Raftovich, and then hit Mike Gerhart for a 20-yard reception on fourth and ten.

This put the 'Jackets on the nine yard line with seconds remaining in the half. On first and goal, Dilenno's pass was tipped and intercepted by Dan Williams, and the half ended scoreless.

Midway through the third quarter, A.I. recovered a fumble on their own 46 yardline and drove deep into Newark territory. A holding penalty killed the drive on the 18 yard line, and Bob Bishop kicked a field goal that just barely went the 35 yards necessary to give A.I. a 3-0 lead with 1:43 remaining in the quarter.

The Tigers took their first drive of the final quarter into Newark territory, but the Yellowjackets held them on downs, and took over on their own 28 yard line. Steve Thompson ran the ball off tackle for five yards, and on the next play Dilenno threw the touchdown pass to Raftovich.

"We were open deep all night," said Raftovich. "Bill just didn't have enough time. At the end, the offensive line really sucked it up, and Bill had the time."

Dave Gwinn's point after attempt was blocked, and Newark led 6-3 with 7:15 remaining in the game. On the third play of A.I.'s subsequent drive, Chuck Jones intercepted a pass to all but assure the 'Jackets of victory.

"I didn't know whether to come up on the quarterback or not," said Jones, who moved to left outside linebacker to replace Dave Simms, who moved to cornerback to replace Fierro. "Coach told me to cover the flats first, so that's what I did."

A.I. would get the ball one final time with 2:50 remaining, but Raftovich intercepted a pass to end the final threat.

"We knew that there was going to be a letdown in intensity," said Raftovich. "We knew we had to come out and execute, and that's what we didn't do in the beginning."

"There was a lot of frustration. It was just a matter of everyone on the team playing as one, and we did. We sucked it up — we knew it was the most important game."

"That's the spirit of Newark High," said Jones. "Coach tells us to pick people up when people are down or hurt. We did it all year and we have the Flight A championship. I'm just happy to be part of it."

NBRL finds home

The Newark Babe Ruth League has found a new home on Old Baltimore Pike.

According to Babe Ruth officer Jack Scannell, the league recently signed a 99-year lease with the United Auto Workers to rent 10 acre parcel of land behind the UAW local headquarters building for $1 a year.

Two baseball fields and a softball field will be built on the land. The UAW local asked Newark Babe Ruth to build the softball field for their use, and the league plans to comply.

The land is undeveloped, and the league is in the process of raising funds so it can build fields in time for the spring season.

Winner Ford, the league's former landlord, has agreed to help the league reach corporate sponsors to help defray the high costs of construction.

"Our goal is to have lights, the whole thing," says Scannell, who says offers for materials, heavy equipment and experienced construction work are also being sought. Corporate sponsors, and private contributors of materials and funds can call Scannell at 366-8471.

Tigers stop Newark

by David Woolman

It's a lot to ask to beat the A.I. duPont High School volleyball team three times in one year. Newark, in its most important game of the year, found that it's impossible when not your best.

The Yellowjackets lost to the Tigers 15-6, 5-15, 15-9 in Thursday's state tournament semifinal match.

The 'Jackets defeated Sanford 15-7, 15-3 in Tuesday's quarterfinals.

"We didn't get to play as well as we could play, and I don't know why," said coach Barbara Jo Apichella. "I didn't see anything different on the other side of the net than the two times we beat them."

Newark's play was particularly perplexing in the first game, in which they missed six serves, received serve poorly and did not pass as well as they had in the past.

"We gave away too many serves, I know that," said Apichella. "That's been one of our strong points, but when you're pumped up...."

"I think it was just nerves," said setter Terryn Pedrotti (four service points, two aces). "Only Dianna (Rewa), Andria (Miller) and I have ever played in the states."

The 'Jackets were never in the first game, coming closest when Pedrotti killed a ball on her own serve to cut A.I.'s lead to 9-5. Kim Miller and Amanda Yelsh each served effectively for A.I., each knocking over seven points on the way to their 15-6 win.

Sue Thursby of St. Mark's bumps as Katie Lindsay (14) and Mia Pappas (5) look on.

Then Newark turned it around.

"I told them 'you haven't been working since August 19 to have it end like this,'" said Apichella. "Then they got out there."

The 'Jackets still missed serves, but played significantly improved defense, and passed much better, negating A.I.'s attack. Newark scratched out an early lead a point at a time before Rewa (10 kills, eight service points, four aces) served two aces in three points to give Newark an 8-1 lead. The 'Jackets continued to build their lead slowly, and finally won on another service ace by Rewa, on the third rotation.

The third game moved much quicker, with Newark taking a 6-5 lead on kills by Rewa and Nora Spielman (six service points, two aces, two kills) on Andria Miller's (10 kills, eight service points, four aces) serve. Tricia Leathers answered with a pair of service points and A.I. retook the lead 7-6.

Spielman came right back with three points, two on kills by Rewa, to give the 'Jackets a 9-7 lead. Amy Chase wasted no time, and served five points, with an ace and two kills by Ann Swingle, to give A.I. a 12-9 advantage.

A kill by Swingle on Pedrotti's serve gave A.I. back the serve, and kills by Yelsh and Miller brought the Tigers to game point. A spike by Jennifer Sternberg went long, and A.I. won the game 15-9.

"I guess after coming back from a big win (in the second game), we felt 'look how bad we beat them,' so it was hard to get it back," said Pedrotti. "We just played so well the second game, we said 'this isn't so bad,' and we let down mentally."

"It was just mental. They scored in strings, and that got people down."

"I can't be upset with them," said Apichella upon consideration. "I think they played their hearts out. I had eight kids that I just played the heck out of. The eight of them have just given me so much, they gave me everything they had, and just ran out of gas."

Though disappointed by losing in the semifinals again this year (last year they lost to Archmere), the 'Jackets could not help but be happy with the striking progress of their team over the season.

"People filled in the spots," said Pedrotti. "This was going to be a rebuilding year, and we were dominating teams. I thought it was a great season. It was better than I ever expected last year."

"I think we were the most improved team in Delaware, and if it sounds like bragging, I'm sorry," said Apichella. "To see us at the beginning of the year, and to see us now, there's just no comparison."

"As a coach, I have to be pleased about that. When all this disappears, I will be pleased about that."

VOLLEY

"We played well Tuesday, and I said we'd have to play as well tonight to win, and we didn't play as well."

"The edge was off. Emotionally, we were alright, but we didn't pass as well, and serving killed us."

St. Mark's seemed to have an advantage on passing early against Archmere, but did not open a significant lead before Allison Fry (nine service points) served two aces to give the Spartans a 7-4 lead. Points by Michelle O'Brien, Mia Pappas (six service points) and Jess Janicki (eight service points four aces) helped St. Mark's draw out to a 11-6 lead, before Katie Sahm served five points to tie the game at 11-11.

Katie Lindsay (nine service points, two aces, six kills) came right back with four service points, the last a kill by Sue Thursby (11 kills, five service points, three aces) to win the first game for St. Mark's 15-11.

Poor serving by the Spartans marred the second game — they missed eight. Still, midway through the game two kills by Lindsay on Janicki's serve gave St. Mark's a 7-5 lead.

Debbie Prince killed two balls on Debbie Mears' serve, and Mears served four points to give Archmere a 9-7 lead. The Auks couldn't shake St. Mark's until Mears served two aces to give them a 14-10 lead. A Nina Dastur kill gave Archmere the game 15-11.

Four aces on Sahm's service in the third game gave the Auks a 5-2 lead, which they lost when Janicki served three aces and Thursby killed a ball to make the score 6-5.

Sahm served two more aces on her next time up, which added to a Molly Lewis kill gave Archmere an 11-8 lead. Thursby killed a ball to make the score 11-9, but three more points from Allison DeMuzio brought Archmere to game point.

Julie Orpneck (eight kills) killed two balls, Monica Williams (four kills) put down one and Allison Fry served an ace in a five point run that tied up the score at 14-14. Melissa Pomeroy served for the Auks who got back to game point when Michelle O'Brien hit a ball out. Lindsay spiked the ball into the antenna, and Archmere won the match.

"The beginning of the third game, we played well," said Stover. "We were down 6-0, but then Jess had a good run serving, and it was nip and tuck the rest of the way. Allison served great down the stretch — her serving got us back in the game."

But as a whole, the team was less than satisfied with the performance.

"If in the second game, we passed well and served well, we would have beaten them," said Thursby.

Certainly a performance like that against Concord Tuesday night would have gone a long way towards placing the Spartans in the finals.

"All the girls did an outstanding job," said Stover after the Concord match. "They talked, they moved, they hustled."

"This was about the level of that Ursuline match. The only difference was we got the serves in tonight."

"We only missed three serves in two games. A lot of the games we lost this year, like the second Ursuline match, were because of missed serves. With consistent serving, we can play with anyone in the state."

"We've just got to keep playing on this level, and we'll do great," said Janicki after the game. Unfortunately, they didn't, but that could not overshadow the great improvements made by St. Mark's over the season.

"Nobody expected us to get anywhere this year, because we were rebuilding," said Thursby. "I think we came along real well."

"I told the kids at the beginning of the season that they could be one of the best teams in the history of St. Mark's," said Stover. "We're back where we are most years, in the final four."

Hillers oust Newark, 1-0

After difficult first half, Jackets make game of it

by David Woolman

The fog rolled in to Newark High's Hoffman Stadium last Wednesday evening. Then top-seeded Tower Hill rolled in, and the Newark soccer team looked to be in a fog as well.

The Yellowjackets' defense was as formless as the mist early on, but managed to hold the Hillers to one goal in the first half. Newark rallied in the second half to play Tower Hill evenly, but failed to score and lost the state tournament semifinal game 1-0.

"I think at first we were a little intimidated by them," said fullback Chris Ross. "Our middle was sagging, and they were dribbling up through the half. We had a nice talk at halftime, and laid it on the line."

The Yellowjackets seemed to have problems doing the simplest of things early, like clearing the ball or even just keeping it out of the crease. They were a bit lucky to keep the Hillers limited to one goal early.

"The whole defense was dead," said sweeper Davin Rudy. "We just came out flat. We weren't ready, and that killed us. If we had played the first half like we played the second half, it would have been an even game."

Despite the numerous opportunities Newark gave Tower Hill, the Hillers didn't score until 22:23 of the first half. Armin Afsar-Keshmiri took a shot from 30 yards out that got past Newark goalie Doug Rice on the near side for the goal.

The 'Jackets had few good chances early, and were forced to go into the second half without their normal offense, as Greg Lillie's injured hip rendered him ineffective, and the long season took its toll on Melvin Heath. Despite this, Newark rallied.

Fullback Steve Smith moved up to striker and played admirably. Smith nearly got a head on a free kick taken by Rudy early in the second half, just missing an excellent chance. A few minutes later, Smith had three steps on a breakaway and put the ball over the crossbar.

The 'Jackets continued to put pressure on the Tower Hill defense, and got chances late, but could not put the ball in. Two shots by the Hillers late hit the near post and the crossbar, and the game ended 1-0.

"We had to come," said Newark coach Charlie Blackwell of the pressure. "They were putting two of their lesser skilled players up there occupying four of our fullbacks. I was going to put a goalie-eligible player in. I was going to make Smith put a goalie shirt on and become a field player and move everybody up, but they got so confused with the injury (to Lillie)."

This year's Newark team was considered somewhat inferior to last year's squad, but for the whole season Blackwell maintained that this team would end up being better. The performance of his team in the tournament proved him right.

"We're a young team, but still, here we are 1-0 in the semifinals again to the state champion (Newark lost to eventual state champ St. Mark's 1-0 in the semis last year)," said Blackwell. "The idea is, they stick together better. They're starting to realize the leadership comes from themselves."

"I always thought last year's team was better until we got to this game," said Ross, who played a fine game, as did Keith Keomanikhoth and David Gregory. "Everybody picked us to do poorly, but I think we proved we can go deep down inside and bring it out. We'll be really good next year."

The 'Jackets lose only three starters — Rudy, Heath and Lillie — to graduation. With three sophomores and a freshman starter to bring back next year, this will not be the last year for Newark to make the semis for quite some time.

SOCCER

the 12-minute mark, the Hillers' Vattilana and Rick Bush got off several tough shots.

Thirty-one minutes into the half, Vattilana was left uncovered and slammed a shot toward Puican. It hit the crossbar and skipped out of bounds.

However, Tower Hill could not convert and the teams entered halftime 0-0.

After Vattilana's goal, the Christiana offense began to click and from the nine minute mark on carried the half.

The Vikings' best chance came 12 minutes into the half, with a host of players in the Tower Hill goal mouth fighting for the ball.

Out of the pack, the ball rolled across the front of the net and Christiana freshman Alex Minor had a clear run at it for what seemed a sure goal but was taken down with a move that would have brought two points in a wrestling match.

The play could have resulted in a direct penalty kick but there was no call. Despite repeated efforts by Ward, Tim Wiant, Larry Grine, Gary Estap and a now-hobbled Wellborn, the Vikings were unable to push the ball past Tower Hill keeper Doug Poskitt.

Despite the result, Kendall was proud of his team. "They've been with us four years," he said. "They've come a long way. They played this well last year, toward the end of the season, and kept it up."

Christiana reached the final game by defeating Mount Pleasant 1-0 in Thursday's semifinals.

The Vikings scored when Wellborn stole the ball outside the goal box, dribbled past a defender and shot from 10 yards out over the head of Green Knight goalie A.J. Farley.

"The ball came to (the defender) and he didn't wind up to clear it out," said Wellborn. "I could tell he was going to trap it, so I just crashed it and guessed where it was going. He hit it off his foot, I hit it off mine and I got right past him."

"We did well," said Kendall of the Mount Pleasant loss. "I knew we could play with them. Man for man, we've got a better team."

It was a thought he echoed following the final.

BUSINESS FILE

• Bradford E. Bugher, sales manager of ERA-Alden Bugher Associates Realtors of Newark, has been elected a director of the New Castle County Board of Realtors. Bugher will serve a three-year term. He has also been appointed to chair both the county board's multi-list committee and the 1989 Delaware Association of Realtors annual convention.

• NKS Distributors has announced that the new Michelob Dry beer from Anheuser-Busch is now being made available in Delaware. The beer is brewed to produce a less sweet taste that doesn't linger; brewers use the term "clean finished" to describe the flavor, aroma and fleeting aftertaste.

• Becket and Burke Catering has announced the opening of a New Castle County-based operation. Managing partners are Sean Becket, a graduate of Brandywine High School, and John Burke, both formerly with Marriott in Washington, D.C. "We saw a need in this area for quality catering — great food made from scratch and excellent service," said Becket. "We provide this at reasonable prices that the average business and party planner can afford." For details, call 475-5030.

• Nominations are being sought for the Josiah Marvel Cup, awarded annually by the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce to a state citizen who has performed exemplary service for the benefit of the state, community, society or fellow beings. Deadline for nominations is Dec. 1.

Delaware's financial health is improving

Delaware's financial health continued to improve in fiscal year 1988, according to the 1988 Fiscal Notebook.

The Fiscal Notebook, recently released by the Delaware Department of Finance, is an annual publication which presents a review of the state's fiscal health.

According to information released by the Department of Finance, all the prime indicators of economic health — low unemployment, favorable credit ratings, low debt service to revenue ratios and health cash balances — point to a continued strong local economy.

Total non-agricultural employment increased by 5.4 percent during calendar year 1987, while the state's total unemployment rate remained at 3.2 percent, nearly half the national average of 6.2 percent.

While new incorporations may not have contributed to employment growth, the 7,600 new firms, which chose Delaware as their corporate home in fiscal 1988, contributed an additional $30 million to the state's general fund.

Now over 40 percent of the

New York Stock Exchange companies and over half the Fortune 500 companies are incorporated in Delaware.

Outstanding long term general obligation debt has declined 52 percent since 1978, when compared on an inflation adjusted basis. The state's per capita debt has decreased from $932 per person in 1978 to $405 per person in 1988.

The state's pension plan had a higher return on investments than was actuarially forecast. The funded ratio of the plan's assets to the total past service liability has increased from about 29 percent in 1978 to 91 percent in 1988.

"The information contained in the Fiscal Notebook confirms that Delaware's economy remains strong," said State Secretary of Finance Stephen T. Golding. "While we have systematically been able to reduce taxes, we have maintained many state services, and actually improved others — largely as a result of better budget and financial planning in recent years."

The state's fiscal year is from July 1 to June 30 every year.

How to save on federal income tax

by Steven V. Chantler

FINANCIAL DIRECTIONS

Remember when its adherents proclaimed that, if passed, the 1986 Tax Reform Act would mean a simpler return for individual taxpayers? Well, on the surface the 1988 return fulfills the promise. Prior to reform there were 11 different brackets, and anywhere from 11 percent to 50 percent of taxable income went to Uncle Sam. But this year's return will provide just two brackets, at 15 percent and 28 percent.

Simpler, right? Yet there's a tricky 5 percent surcharge that gets tacked on to taxable income above specifically defined levels — so you can end up in a 33 percent bracket. A major goal of year-end tax planning is to avoid the surcharge or at least reduce its bite.

Here are some moves that can help if you act before Dec. 31.

• Pay off your personal debt. In 1988, only 40 percent of interest paid on such personal credit as credit cards, car loans and student loans is deductible (it was 65 percent in 1987 and will be 20 percent in 1989). If you can't eliminate all of your personal debt, you should consider consolidating your debt with a line of credit or loan at an interest rate that is lower than what your credit cards offer.

• Maximize deductions. Before Dec. 31, you should consider paying all local real estate taxes owed from 1988. Also pay any estimated last-quarter income tax owed the state or city. Paying early gives you a 1988 deduction.

• Aggregate deductible expenses. This tried-and-true tax management technique takes on more importance now, because you have to reach specific levels before you can deduct certain expenses. Grouping unreimbursed employee business expenses, tax preparation and income production needs in one year may help you come out ahead.

• Beware of the "kiddie tax."

If you are a parent, you used to be able to invest for a child, and any earnings would be taxed at the child's rate. No more. Children under age 14 who have unearned income of more than $1,000 are taxed at the parents' marginal rate (not the child's rate). But children 14 and older are taxed at their own rates. Parents who want to invest for young children may want to consider investments such as growth mutual funds that pay small dividends or municipal bond funds with nontaxable income.

• Offset capital gains against capital losses. Beginning in 1988, net capital gains will be taxed at the same rates as ordinary income, so keeping a close eye on your portfolio as the year winds down can pay off next April 15. For example, if you have a net capital gain for the year, the IRS will tax it at your ordinary income rate — 33 percent or 28 percent.

Can you avoid it? Yes, it's still possible to offset capital gains 100 percent against capital losses. Each year you can use up to $3,000 of capital losses (after the offset against capital gains) to offset ordinary income, with infinite carryforward.

• Use passive losses to offset passive income. You can deduct passive losses against passive income from the same or another passive investment. For example, if you expect that your oil and gas limited partnership will generate passive losses in 1988, consider investing now in a passive income-producing product to offset your passive losses.

• Know your tax liability. Long before April 15, 1989, you should determine what you'll owe the IRS, given your current financial situation. By looking at your financial situation and consulting your tax adviser or accountant before year end, you'll still have some time to take steps to help reduce that liability.

Thanks: It's her turn to cook

Being in the weekly column business has forced me to think about time differently. I used to be one of those people who never looked more than a day or so ahead to see what the calendar had in store. After all, who wants to spend weeks anticipating a visit with the allergist or a trip to the veterinarian with a large-but-panic-stricken dog?

However, if I want to write suitable and insightful columns about seasonal events, I have to plan ahead because this column writing business requires lots of time to plan, draft, write, revise, rewrite, agonize, redraft, struggle, amend, revamp, clarify, suffer, refine and polish. Then it goes to the editor.

So here it is, only the end of October and already I am sitting at my word processor thinking about what I am thankful for because, in terms of column writing, Thanksgiving is right around the corner.

Well, what do I have to be thankful for?

What comes to mind first is my miraculous and wonderful word processor which rearranges my sentences, corrects my spelling and prints my prose with the push of a button. This was not a machine that I expected to appreciate because I was, you might have guessed, one of those people who was dragged kicking and screaming into the vanguard of 20th century technology.

An example will make my position clearer. I actively and vocally resisted getting a microwave oven and an electric garage door opener because I was convinced that both items were frivolous fripperies which would lead to the rapid downfall of the self-reliant, courageous attitude that has made American great. Now that I am the proud possessor of both appliances, let me make it perfectly clear that they are essential and, indeed, without them the very fabric of the American family and all the values for which it stands would collapse into a shapeless heap. (Does that sound like I have spent too much time listening to campaign rhetoric?)

And, speaking of campaigns, my next thing to be thankful for is the fact that by the time this column is published, Nov. 8 will have come and gone. Just think, we can now watch television and listen to the radio without being bombarded by commercials extolling the virtues and vices of presidential contenders, not to mention all the people running for offices in New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania.

And with matters political out of the way, it's time to move on to matters horticultural. I'm thankful that a few of the spring flowering bulbs I recently planted are still in the ground and not in the bellies of squirrels. I know this because I covered one area I planted with the flagstones that I have been meaning to use when I get around to building a walkway to my compost pile. Which, in turn, makes me thankful that I wasn't organized enough to get much past the planning stage of that flagstone walk. I do, of course, have to remember to remove the flagstones next spring if I want to see those bulbs bloom.

Which moves me on to matters physical. Thanks to my faithful attendance at a 7:15 a.m. aerobics class named the Morning Stars (although on Mondays it's called the Mourning Stars), I was able to walk like a normal person after digging dozens of holes in the heavy clay that masquerades as soil in my backyard.

I'm sure it comes as no surprise to any regular reader of this column that I am thankful for my new kitchen. I am thankful that it is done, I am thankful that it looks so wonderful and I am especially thankful that I still like Britany blue.

Finally, the thing that I am most thankful for is that this year it is my sister-in-law's turn to cook Thanksgiving dinner.

Giving

by Nancy Turner

Disease and famine had killed half the Pilgrim population between 1620 and 1621 at Plymouth. Still, when the remaining 51 shared the first Thanksgiving feast with Wampanoag Indian braves, they clasped their hands in prayer and praised the almighty God who had delivered them to the new land of freedom.

We have much to be thankful for this season. I'm thankful for so many things, but at the moment I can't help thinking about my Thanksgiving turnip greens.

They were a gift from a neighbor. Our neighbors share everything from their garden tillers to freshly cut flowers to secret fudge recipes, and if someone gets sick, they want to help. The aroma of this delicious "mess" of simmering greens has completely filled our home. It reminds me of how empty life would be if all neighbors "minded their own business."

My family is thankful because we have the kind of neighbors who take the time to cross their property lines and participate in friendship. And it has made all the difference.

Following are the Thanksgiving thoughts of some other Newarkers:

"When I was taking out the garbage last night, I thought how awful it would be if I were afraid to go outside my door after dark. It's something that so many people have to live with now because of drug abuse. We have three children who all live in big cities — Philadelphia, Washington and Los Angeles — and I worry about them. Newark is still a safe environment and I feel blessed to live here." Alice Hober, registered nurse.

"We're relatively new here and our family is still grateful for my being given the job of city manager. On the lighter side, I was a city manager in the north country, up around Rochester, N.Y. for six years before moving here and one of the blessings that I count is that Newark hasn't had any snow yet." Carl Luft, Newark city manager.

For Alice Hober, this holiday is a time to offer thanks for the fact that her hometown of Newark remains a safe place to live.

"I'm thankful for having my health, family and relatives. I always look forward to attending church services the night before Thanksgiving. This year, I'm looking forward to participating in the community church get-together at Ogletown Baptist Church and visiting my parents." Allen H. Streett, state environmental scientist.

"I am deeply thankful for being alive, hale and healthy; for having a wonderful family; for being able to look back on years of work that I loved; for the privilege of enjoying my dear friends, tried and true; for being an American; for my parents who set the pattern, and most of all, for being so richly blessed." Helen Parker, retired school teacher.

"I've always believed that Thanksgiving is a time when we reflect on our good fortunes and blessings. It's a time that we should share ourselves with others. This year, I will be spending my Thanksgiving, as I do every year, at the Emmanuel Dining Room, helping to serve. It reminds me of how fortunate we are and to be thankful." Gov. Michael N. Castle.

Thanks

"Being a pastor and believing that salvation is only through Jesus Christ and him alone, I'm very grateful that my entire family is Christian. I know that whenever I or any of them die, it is a great comfort to know that, one day, we'll all be gathered together in heaven. In this respect, a loss is not a loss, it is only a temporary absence." Rev. Curtiss Stuart, Faith Baptist Church.

"I'm thankful for my family sticking together this past year; for seeing some old friends again and meeting a special girl; for getting good grades in school; for being able to go to Hodgson and study commercial art; for getting a job at Allyson's restaurant; for not falling into alcohol and drug abuse, and for having the lord with me because I believe that none of this would have been possible without him. If I get to go to a rock concert in Philadelphia on Dec. 2, I'll just keep getting more thankful." Tyler LeVan, sophomore, Newark High School.

"There are many things to be thankful for, but there is no question of what takes precedence. For a long time, our thoughts have been focused on one of my son's friends, 23-year-old Jim "Hoody" Quill, a graduate of St. Mark's High. Hoody was diagnosed as having cancer five years ago. It was in remission until last year, when a routine check-up found leukemia. Chemotherapy for the leukemia was very difficult and resulted in a number of complications, but the good news is that his condition has stabilized and he has returned home. We believe that the power of prayer and his strong spirit had a lot to do with his improvement. It was a miracle. There is no doubt that our family's greatest blessing is that Hoody is home again." Louise Tabasso, Newark Free Library.

"We'll always be able to find something to be thankful for. I have a very supportive family. Most of all, I am thankful for my faith in God. He sustains me through anything I may have to do." Sue Lamblack, Newark city secretary.

Providing pets a safe holiday environment

by Nancy Turner

With a faint whimper and teetering posture, the puppy stood erect on two feet, hoping to capture a stray glance and a moment of pity from the intimate group that had gathered in the dining room for Thanksgiving dinner.

His belly was round and plump, but it was his big brown eyes that begged for the smallest morsel of food.

All morning, the huge turkey had basted in an enamel broiler. The aroma of its sizzling uices had been inescapable. The master had carved the tender breast meat an hour before, while the turkey's bronze skin was still crispy.

Finally it happened. From among the dozen guests, a red-haired boy slipped a meaty thigh bone beneath the table.

The puppy snatched his treat and devoured it in haste.

Now, the story could have ended after dessert with both man and beast content and finishing off the holiday in the warmth of a crackling fire.

But, unfortunately, Thanksgiving portraits like these, taken straight from a Norman Rockwell canvas, don't always have happy endings. Providing a pet with a turkey bone, meaty or not, can be dangerous.

"Owners do not always realize the harm they can cause their animals by giving them the wrong things to eat," says Dr. Arthur P. Mayer, Newark veterinarian. "Sometimes it becomes necessary to surgically remove a bone splinter that is lodged in an animal's intestine."

"I'll go along with giving a dog one of those very large joint bones because it can't actually be eaten and they don't shatter like chicken or rib bones, but anything else is out of the question."

Although dogs love chocolate, Mayer says it has drug-like effects on them and can cause sickness when eaten in quantity.

"Different people have different opinions about pet food," Mayer says. "Some dog owners absolutely will not feed their dogs anything but dog food. On the other hand, I know that no matter what I say, there are some people who are going to feed their dogs steak."

"I don't see anything wrong with mixing a small amount of table scraps in with dry dog food. I think that is realistically what a lot of people do, but anytime you vary from a standard diet you run the risk of causing animal obesity."

Mayer adds that pet owners who rely solely on pet food must be sure of its quality. "They are not all created equal and do not all provide the vitamins necessary to keep an animal in peak condition."

To make your house safe for pets during the coming holidays, Mayer suggests:

- Secure electric cords and keep both tree lights and Christmas ornaments above the animal's reach.
- The bright flame of a burning candle will attract a young animal, so keep candles inaccessible.
- Kittens love tree ornaments and shiny tinsel. Because it is absolutely indigestible and can block feline intestines, veterinary treatment is often the only solution.
- Mistletoe may fetch a kiss, but if your pet gets hold of this highly toxic decoration the results could be tragic. Other toxic house plants and ornamental greens include: poinsettias, amaryllis, bittersweet, boxwood, elephant ear, English ivy, hemlock, holly, narcissus and yews.

If you suspect your pet has eaten a poisonous plant, call the veterinarian without delay. If you can't identify the plant, take a bit along with you to the veterinarian's office.

Turkey requires tender, loving care

Last minute chefs planning on popping a turkey into the microwave for a quick and easy holiday meal may need to think twice. Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware Extension food and nutrition specialist, says that although the microwave saves roasting time, it actually increases the amount of attention time needed from the cook.

"You can't just pop a turkey in the microwave and forget about it," she says. "Because microwave ovens often cook unevenly, you will probably need to rotate the roasting pan several times during cooking to ensure that all parts get done."

Snider also stresses the need to use a browning sauce when microwaving a turkey. "Without a browning sauce, you and your family may be disappointed in the appearance of the bird, even though it is fine to eat."

If you're all set to microwave your turkey and have your browning sauce in hand, Snider suggests checking your owner's manual to find out what size bird will fit in your oven, how long it should cook and at what power. According to the food specialist, turkeys up to 14 pounds may be microwaved.

Truss the drumsticks (if desired) with string or dental floss. Then brush the turkey with equal parts of browning sauce and oil or water.

"Every microwave oven is different," Snider says. "A cook gets to know how a particular oven cooks. But general guidelines can be followed for microwaving."

For turkeys under 10 pounds, Snider suggests microwaving breast side down in a baking dish, six minutes per pound on high. After half the cooking time has elapsed, pour off accumulated juices and save them for basting or gravy. Turn the turkey breast side up and microwave on medium high (roast) four to six minutes per pound. Rotate the roasting pan a quarter turn about every 10 minutes to ensure even cooking.

Larger turkeys should be cooked breast side down for three-fourths of the total cooking time. Divide the remaining time into thirds and cook the bird on each side and finally breast side up. As with the smaller birds, rotate the pan quarter turns about every ten minutes.

Baste the turkey occasionally during microwaving and check through the oven door for areas that might be cooking too fast. "Use very small pieces of foil to shield those areas, positioning the turkey so that the foil-covered parts are at least 1 inch from the sides of the oven. Leave the foil in place when rotating the bird. Small amounts of aluminum foil shouldn't cause arcing in microwaves, the specialist says.

"To make sure the bird is cooked evenly, take temperature readings with a temperature probe or a meat thermometer from several parts of the bird—including the thighs and breast," Snider suggests. "The temperature should reach

So why the wishbone?

So you've figured out that by washing all the grease off of the turkey's wishbone, tightening your grip and flicking your wrist upward at the right moment, you can successfully snap the largest portion of the well-baked bone and win the prized secret wish.

But who believes in superstitions anyway? After all, a wishbone is just a bone like any other, right?

Wrong. Researchers at Harvard University recently discovered that the wishbone — and all birds have them — serves a more important function than just making wishes come true for humans once "the goose is cooked."

Historically, it was believed the physiological purpose of wishbones was to hinge and connect birds' collar bones.

But recently, in a series of experiments in which small starlings were placed in a wind tunnel and given x-rays while in flight, Harvard scientists learned that wishbones also play an important role in helping birds breathe while airborne.

Their findings show that the main function of the wishbone is to act like a spring, bringing air in and out of the bird's air sacks while it moves its wings.

This may be a clue as to why certain birds are able to fly continuously for days on end without stopping to rest.

Nancy Turner

170 degrees Fahrenheit for breast meat and 174-180 degrees Fahrenheit for dark meat."

After microwaving, cover the turkey with foil and let stand 10-20 minutes. This allows the bird to finish cooking — the temperature will increase to about 180-185 degrees Fahrenheit during standing time — and makes carving easier.

Snider says "pop out" doneness indicators aren't reliable for microwaved birds but may be left in during cooking. She doesn't recommend microwaving a stuffed turkey since the stuffing will be done before the rest of the bird.

Additional information on turkey preparation is found in the free fact sheets "Let's Talk Turkey," "You Must Be Joking — Safe Turkey Shortcuts," and "Does Party — Giving Make You Phobic?" available from the county Extension office in Newark at 451-1239.

Focus on Comegys

by The Jared Company
Public Relations

It isn't surprising to find hard work as the secret behind the success of the 1984 Newspaper Photographer of the Year as judged in the Pictures of the Year contest.

Fred Comegys, a staff photographer for the Wilmington, Del., News-Journal, won the top newspaper photographer honor in the 42nd POY contest. It was surprising to many photojournalists across the country, as well as to the winner himself, that the award was earned with a portfolio exclusively composed of pictures taken within a 25-mile radius of Comegys' Wilmington, Del. home.

The Pictures of the Year contest is the largest competition in the country for photojournalists. Sponsored by the National Press Photographers Association and funded by an educational grant from Canon, U.S.A., the contest is conducted to recognize photojournalists for their skills and creativity in visual communication.

Winning is no small feat. With the best photojournalists from across the nation vying for the prestigious first-place award, the competition is keen. Many of these photojournalists work for large newspapers with a great deal of money budgeted to their photography departments. These budgets often include funds to send their staffers to cover glamorous assignments of a worldwide news interest and filled with obvious picture opportunities, such as the famine in Ethiopia.

Many of the entries are photojournalists from large metropolitan newspapers, where almost daily the staff photographers have an opportunity to shoot major national news happenings. And many of the photojournalists have the luxury of spending lots of time to make a strong picture, without the worry of an impending deadline.

Comegys had none of these obvious advantages in putting together his portfolio for the contest. A small daily newspaper photographer, he only had access to shoot pictures in his immediate circulation area. He constantly was fighting daily deadline pressure. And he constantly was searching for different ideas to make a routine photograph assignment into a special picture.

Obviously he was successful. The POY judges praised his portfolio as proof a good photographer did not have to travel extensively to make exciting photographs.

"Anyone can win just by working their own backyard," Comegys said. "It may be harder, but anything is possible."

Since earning the title, Comegys said the demands of speeches have cut into his shooting time. He also said he finds an increased respect from other photojournalists.

"People look up to you, thinking you're better than you are," Comegys said. "I see enough of my own mistakes to know that I'm not that good. But it proves anyone can win just by working your own backyard."

Comegys' photographs have appeared both at home and abroad in publications such as Life, Time, Newsweek, Sports Illustrated, Bunte and Stern in Germany, Audubon, The Sporting News and Forbes, among others. His awards are prestigious and numerous with National Newspaper Photographer of the Year, being the top honor.

THE ARTS

Loy, Schneider,
Stevens honored

Last week I wrote about two of the recipients of the 11th annual Kennedy Center Awards, Alvin Ailey and George Burns. Today, the topic is the other three — Myrna Loy, Alexander Schneider and Roger L. Stevens.

Myrna Loy was born in Raidersburg, Mont. on Aug. 2, 1905. In the Hollywood of the 1930s, she was cast as "the perfect wife." Before I get myself into trouble with any women readers, let me stress that's what Hollywood moguls said about 50 years ago!

Ms. Loy is best known for her work in "The Thin Man" series of films which kept her busy from 1934 to 1944. They are still standard fare in retrospective movie houses and on many a late show and are now plentiful in the video catalogs. In the series she was, in turn, witty, challenging, supportive and understanding of William Powell as her husband, Nick Charles, the famous detective.

Her career was not a meteoric one. She moved from studio to studio, working on her craft and taking voice lessons which were to make such a difference when talkies arrived. In 1936, when Ed Sullivan was still writing his "Voice of Broadway" column, he took a poll among his readers and Myrna Loy was named America's most popular female star.

Russian born violinist and conductor Alexander Schneider has dedicated his life to the nurturing of chamber music and musicians. Since moving to the United States in 1938 he has been a part of the famous Budapest Quartet. He also founded the Albeneri Trio and the Schneider Quartet. He helped to organize the Casals Festivals and has been a principal figure at the Marlboro Festival for many years.

In addition to all those activities, Mr. Schneider has been a member of the faculty at numerous leading schools of music. As a guest conductor he has appeared with prominent orchestras. He has been a champion of contemporary music, having premiered works by Babbitt, Boulez and Stravinsky.

The New School Concerts, which he also founded, have afforded several great New York debuts. Mr. Schneider also founded the New York String Orchestra Seminar, an annual Christmas event at Carnegie Hall and the Kennedy Center to aid in the professional training of young artists.

The fifth to be honored is Roger L. Stevens. As a major theatrical producer in London and New York, he produced some 250 plays including "West Side Story," "A Man for All Seasons," "Tea and Sympathy," "Deathtrap," "First

Monday in October" and "Mary, Mary."

In 1961, then President John F. Kennedy asked Stevens to help establish a national cultural center. Many years later JFK's efforts would be rewarded by having the center bear his name. Stevens was the chairman of the center's Board of Trustees until this year.

In addition to his work on behalf of the Kennedy Center, Stevens also served as President Johnson's Special Assistant on the Arts from 1964 to 1968, taking care of legislation which established the first National Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts, both of which he chaired from 1965 to 1969.

Well, there are the five recipients of the 11th annual Kennedy Center honors. The tradition continues. It is one of many reasons why every single American's breast should swell with pride when he or she sees the center on the banks of the Potomac. This is no temple to Mars, like so many in Washington. This is a temple to the arts of the greatest nation on earth. Go and enjoy it, it IS yours.

A very Happy Thanksgiving to each and every one of you. I hope you enjoy every minute of your holiday.

Crazy Planet Band
to perform Friday

Crazy Planet, for years among Newark's more popular bands with a repertoire of locally-inspired songs, has released its first LP record.

The record, entitled "Ride the Wind," features 12 original songs by band leader Vic Sadot.

A combination party and concert to celebrate the album, produced through the support of a host of local benefactors, will be held Friday evening, Nov. 25 at the Stone Balloon on Main Street.

Sadot and Crazy Planet funded most of the ambitious recording project through advance sales, which numbers more than 300.

Today, the album has been sent to most college and many commercial stations in the Mid-Atlantic, according to Sadot.

Sadot plans to send it to other select stations nationwide that offer progressive rock formats.

Locally, "Ride the Wind" has been getting air time on Crazy Planet's "home station," WXDR-FM at the University of Delaware.

The album features a variety of sounds, from rock and blues to reggae, country and Cajun. Some songs offer social commentary, and some are just for fun.

Opening the album is "Comeback Kids," Sadot's reverent look back at the champion Baltimore Orioles of his youth. The song was played before a game at Memorial Stadium this year, with Sadot and friends as special guests of the team.

"Volcano" addresses the issues of South African apartheid, while "Better Bible" targets television evangelists.

"The Frog Jog" gleefully tells of an old fiddler who can stir up swamp frogs to dance into a frenzy, and "Beer Muscles" mocks the macho man found at most every keg party.

"Belle Amie" is a playful Cajun love song which features Ed Gorski on accordion and Robera Greenspan on fiddle. Also on the album is a reggae love song, "Need to Know."

A special guest artist on the album is saxophonist Hank Carter of George Thorogood's Delaware Destroyers.
