NEW CANNERY IN OPERATION

PURE FOOD PLANT THE BOAST OF OWNER—
NEW PATENTS IN USE

By the latter part of this week the new cannery near the old Depot will be in full operation, as it will then be at the height of the tomato season. Tomatoes have been received for some days and the plant has been in operation at times, but only for a short time in the mornings and then not to the full capacity.

This cannery was built and is owned by Harry A. Gilbert, who two years ago operated a plant in Newark. Mr. Gilbert has a wide experience in the cannery business and has erected a plant on the site of the old match factory which it is claimed by many who have seen it, to be the most modern and complete tomato cannery in Delaware. In the erection of the buildings the cement floor of the old match factory was utilized as the floor of the cannery.

The main building is 50 by 200 feet, and there is a wing running off from the main building which is 50 by 60 feet. The sanitary arrangements are excellent, and Mr. Gilbert boasts that he is ready at any time for the Pure Food people to inspect his plant. The most important and improved machinery used in the cooking of the tomatoes, was invented by Mr. Wright himself, on which he has a patent. The tomatoes, after being received in the ordinary baskets, are taken out and placed in one of the Wright system sealers, in wire baskets. This sealer was patented by Mr. Gilbert and a Mr. Wright, and they now have 100 of them in operation. After the tomatoes are thoroughly sealed they are placed on a table and pared. They are in buckets however, and never come in contact with the table.

Then they are taken to another table and placed in sanitary cans and the lids are put on these cans by what is known as a sanitary machine without the use of any acid or solder.

It is after the tomatoes are in these cans and the lids on, that they are cooked. The cans are placed in a large vat 80 feet long. This cooking vat is another of Mr. Gilbert's inventions, and it is looked on as the most improved method in the cannery business. There is a chain in this vat which runs slowly and carries the cans through the boiling water that the vat contains. They are placed in one end and in 40 minutes come out the other end of the 80 foot vat cooked and all ready for the labels to be placed on them and to be packed in cases.

Much of the space in the building is used for packing the cans in the cases and storing the latter until ready to be shipped. Up until this time but about 4000 cases have been packed, but it is expected that the season's pack will be about 25,000 cases. Mr. Gilbert contracted for 300 acres of tomatoes. If the frost holds off, tomatoes will probably be received until the middle of next month.

There are about 100 persons employed at the cannery at this time. Most of these are foreigners, and come from Baltimore. They live in shacks near the cannery. There are a few local people employed. Mr. Gilbert, with a number of men who he brought here with him and who have charge of the various departments, have erected a small house adjoining the cannery, where they live during the canning season.

Accident near Paper Mill

John Jordan, of near Milford Cross Roads, was badly injured last Friday night when he was thrown from a carriage at the south end of the covered bridge near the Curtis Brothers' paper mill and fell into the American Vulcanized Fibre Company's race, about 15 feet below. A carriage in which he was riding struck the guard at the end of the bridge and the stop was so sudden that Mr. Jordan was thrown over the wall. His head was so badly cut that several stitches were necessary. John Russell, of near North East, who was also in the carriage, it being his team, was thrown out but fell in the road and was not injured. The carriage was damaged and the horse broke loose and ran away.

EDUCATIONAL DISCUSSION

A DEFENSE OF THE CLASSICS BY TAMAR HIRSHENSON

As often as anyone has broached the subject of education, he has been confronted with the question of its definition. From the number we have gathered since very early days, it would seem that few have faltered before the task. Needless here to repeat even a few. But what is interesting to note is that a thing so broad, so complex, so varying as education shows an underlying fundamental resemblance in system and ideals diametrically opposed in detail. There is throughout the characteristic feeling, for which, I think, few would dissent, that education must be a preparation for life. But when does education end and life begin? Is it not beautifully true that they begin and end simultaneously?

Nevertheless, there is a distinct difference between "school-days" and school-work, and life work. This difference is what we call education. What it ought to be is our problem. It is the problem of the race. It was the problem of the leisurely Greek, the Roman warrior, the feudal knight, the English gentleman. To-day it is the problem of the workman and workwoman.

This introduction may perhaps seem to lead to a plea for a purely industrial school, and no doubt those who uphold a material, work-a-day, physical system of education will point to history as a justification. The Greek prepared for philosophy, poetry, and politics; the Roman for the rostra and the field; the chieftain for sword and lady; why shall we prepare for work and business? But our life is more than trade. It must contain not only our own contribution to its improvement, but the best that has been contributed in every age. Evolution does not mean mere change; it means progression, a geometric progression, may it means the ever-increasing sum of a geometric progression. It is our privilege to enjoy and to augment an heritage accumulated since ages. If we know not how to lengthen life, we can still broaden it.

A purely manual and practical education fails to do that. After a certain degree, it becomes a spiritual, an educational and a financial loss. Such a scheme does not take into account the fact that a difference exists and ought to exist between the school and the world. We have not the right to spend millions of dollars and the energies of the most intelligent and best trained members of the community to rear a race of mere uneducated, unskilled, and unlettered. Any healthy, intelligent boy will learn more of a trade in three months work at a shop than in one year at school, and the girl who has copied a thousand recipes cannot vie with the one who has prepared more than three plain meals a day for one year. What we want to teach our boys and girls is not to make a table or chair a term, but to learn what work is and to respect it and love it; to be willing to learn carpentry and farming and dish-washing after graduating; to have a general conception of the scope and possibilities of modern industry and science to be independent and self-reliant. But the actual information, whether practical or not, we may acquire in school, in very slight, indeed.

There is more than this, much more. As vital as the life within the shop, is the life without, the time spent with the family and friends, most of whom do not probably understand the details of the shop work. To live happily, nobly, spiritually, socially, there must be something in common between all, outside the tool-chest. The power of the individual to meet his fellows in such spirit, is what we are wont to call culture. It is the thing without which the soul will always stick to the chimney-sweeper, it is the sine qua non of a higher congenial society.

That such culture is necessary and salutary to social as well as individual interests, no one denies. The question is how best to attain it. It is readily agreed, even among the dissenters of classicism, that literature, language, and pure science, are the most prolific sources of inspiration and the best means for culture, tolerance, and humanity.

Our forefathers sought these qualities in a careful study of literature based on a thorough knowledge of the classics. But to attain them, in what may seem at first a more economical way, many fastidists and industrialists urge the study of modern languages to the exclusion of the ancient. We have found too much joy and inspiration in German and French not to speak of a desire to make these languages more familiar in our country, without the greatest interest and enthusiasm. The scientific, the industrial, and the literary man alike, cannot but find profit, practically and intellectually, from a knowledge of the modern tongues. Most students of the classics would gladly see a more extended study of them. What we fear and what we object to, is discarding the ancient languages in their favor.

When we remember the influence of Greek and Roman literature and civilization on our own, it will be easy, indeed, to understand their importance.

There is no poet of modern tongues who has not drunk deep from the sparkling fountains of Greek lore and Greek verse. Well known names of our divinest songsters who found a nepenthe and at the same time a dynamic spiritual stimulant in the Elysian of the Muses,

If we want to understand our own poets, if we want them to become a part of ourselves, we must love and understand what they loved so well. Every image, every illusion, every suggestion inspired from the classics, becomes to the reader familiar with the sources, a magic "Sesame" to gates revealing untold beauties and wonders.

What is true in literature is equally true in history—political, social, intellectual. We cannot get an idea of the continuity and importance of historical development without going as far back as intelligible records will carry us. We cannot realize how great are our own duties and responsibilities without knowing what our forefathers did. We cannot profit from their experiences, we cannot view the present in the proper perspective nor the future in the right light, without a familiar conception of the past. A course in history alone, indispensable as it is, cannot suffice. We must have a heart to heart talk, a spiritual transfusion. Not many of us have yet reached the stage when we find no inspiration in the living accounts of ancient heroisms, in Socrates or Epicurus, no joy and exultation in Homer, and Aeschylus, and Virgil and Horace.

To say that all this literature may be found in translations, is to misunderstand it entirely. Aside from philological arguments, which men of science will surely appreciate in their work, from the fact that they breathe life into our language and make mere words a source of intellectual pleasure, their intrinsic value is incalculable. Ours is not merely like the treasure of the fable, that could not be found buried in the soil, but only in the telling of it. It is much more.

To turn the soil, and plow, and pull the weeds, is a source of profit in itself, to which the field of classic education beautifully responds. But it hides also a concrete, a real treasure, with wonderful powers of expansion and inspiration. The sublime tragedies of Hellas have not yet been supplanted, the purity, the perfection of her lyrics are yet unequalled, the simplicity and power of Homeric verse that sways and fills and fires like a musical symphony, still remains unmatched.

What is especially unfortunate about the preachers of new systems is that they appear to consider the appreciation and influence of such qualities not worth the cultivation—to think that those who have most at heart the welfare of children and society should desire to rear a nation of tradesmen, each to find in his own only and unable to find relaxation in branches which interest others, would be a sad thought, indeed. We feel, instinctively almost, that such is far from being the case. The real reason which prompts them to discard subjects of culture maintained by commercialism, is not because they despise culture, but because they believe that these subjects do not attain the end they ought to serve. They see boys and girls studying Latin for four years and many of them unable at the end of that time to read a sight passage with ease. Lovers of the classics also see this and are troubled by it. But they are looking for a remedy. The trouble with Latin and Greek is not with them, but with us. The trouble is not with the aim, but with the method. What we want is a new, rational way of teaching language, so that we may acquire it well, after a reasonable length of time.

Intellectual acquisitions, however, are very seldom easily gotten. We forget that it takes us every day for eight years to learn merely how to spell in our own tongue. We forget likewise that many of those who study French or German four years in High School, know very little more about it than others know of Latin, and no one mentions the fact that well educated are those who, a few years after graduation, are able to repeat a single trigonometric formula or write graphically a simple chemical reaction.

This is not the place for proving the efficiency, nevertheless, of these, seemingly, volatile studies. We do not plan to discard what opens, nourishes, and trains the mind and character. Far be it from those who advocate the extended study of the classics to restrict education to Latin and Greek. Such an attitude would alone suffice to condemn the system. What we seek is a Montessori method of learning Latin as we have found one for learning spelling. What we claim is that ancient culture and classic lore have a distinct and almost unique role in certain stages of the school curriculum. This does not in any way conflict with a House of Childhood, a Little Mothers' Settlement, a School of Mothercraft, or cooking and manual training in the public schools.

Classicism is not opposed to modernism. It is, and ought to be, a reinforcement and an addition to it. Literature and culture ought to be in all ages an integral and indispensable part of our lives. But it ought to be more so in our age than in any other. Because materialism and commercialism play so important a role in our civilization—a thing for which we are all, including advocates of the classics, duly thankful; because the struggle for existence is great and absorbing; the whirl and rush and nervous strain of competitive work, telling; the division of labor so highly specialized that few and far apart are those whose interests are identical, do we need in school deep and thorough training in the things that lie outside the conflict and the labor; in the things that make us tolerant, congenial, open-minded; that supply relaxation and recreation to the mind and the body; that make life fuller and richer and less self-centered; and above all, in the things that make us congenial and sympathetic.

Sympathy—the power to think, to suffer, to rejoice, to yield, together with others—we need that in addition to many things, and above many things. How many social, political, and individual evils would be averted, how much good created, if we could develop fully and wisely the gift of sympathy. That it can be awakened and increased through literature and art, who will deny? Poets and painters are the Vestal Virgins who keep alive the eternal warmth of the human heart. We want to hear them speak and understand them. But we cannot do so to the fullest extent if we know nothing of the rich fountains of antiquity that were such a prolific source of inspiration to them, and still will be to all those who are not too royal to learn.

State Fair Proves a Success

The first Delaware State Fair which came to a close last Friday, has gone on record as greatest of its kind ever held within the limit of the little Diamond State. On Thursday, the big day at the fair, the attendance approached 25,000, the largest in any one day at the previous county fairs being 16,000. Lower Delaware and all parts of the Peninsula as well as Pennsylvania and New Jersey, were largely represented in the crowd. The officials, from the president down, are all well pleased with the showing made, and without a doubt the attractions of next year will surpass all previous along this line. The directors of the Association and Miss Keim, the Secretary, have earned the laurel of congratulation.

The premium lists were the largest ever offered the public and they accomplished their aim by bringing out the finest collection of exhibits ever displayed by the Association.

The new grandstand and improved track brought together the best show horses in the country, making this feature of the fair a great success. The new grandstand which had been believed by many to be too large for the demand, was filled early on Thursday, the box office displaying the sign "Standing Room Only," for a greater part of the day. The greatest interest centered in the races, and those who came to see a thrilling and close contests, returned all gratified with the pleasures of the day. The rest tent provided by the Evening Journal was appreciated by the crowds who wished to escape for a short time from the noise and heat of the fair grounds.

Financially, as well as in the way of enthusiasm engendered in the fair to be held next year and in succeeding years, the one recently closed is a decided advance over any heretofore held. It has generally been conceded to be the cleverest, best conducted and most comprehensive fair in this part of the country, and this record should crowd all future efforts of the local fair association with the best possible support.

Oxford Fall Fair

The 3rd anniversary Fall Fair held by the Oxford Agricultural Association is scheduled for September 18, 19 and 20, and the management declares the prospect brighter than ever. The town lies within the proper circuit for a fine line of horses, and the request for entries has met with a hearty response. It is reported virtually all the regular drivers and a number of new ones, some from a considerable distance, will be on hand during the fair.

While gambling is absolutely prohibited there will be many interesting features along the midway. The exhibition features will be similar to former years, with the exception of a great number of organization displays.

Miss Witherspoon and Miss Wyatt of Philadelphia, will attend the fair, their purpose being the dissemination of publicity in regard to the Suffrage movement. Their promised appearance is creating a great deal of interest.

The Privileges of Leap Year

Authentic records as to the origin of Leap Year privileges for women are few, says the Chicago News. Here is one from Walsh's "Courtship and Marriage," 1881—

"Albeit it is now become a part of the common law, in regard to social relation of life, that as often as any biennial year do return the ladies have the sole privilege during the time is continuance of making love unto the men, which they may do either by words or looks as to them seemeth proper; and, moreover, no man will be entitled to the benefit of charge who doth in anywise treat her proposal with slight or contumely."

Whether I be the grandest genius on earth in a single thing, and that single thing earthly, or the poor peasant who, behind his plow, whistles for want of thought, I strongly suspect it will be all one when I pass to the competitive examination poster! On the other side of the grave a Raphael's occupation may be going as well as a plowman's.

—Babes in the Wood.

Under the Open Sky

Nature is in herself a perpetual invitation to come into the open; the woods are an untiring resource; the mountains and sea companionable. To count among one's friends, birds and flowers and trees is surely worth while; for to come upon a new flower is then in the nature of an agreeable event, and a chance meeting with a bird may lend a pleasant flavor to the day. —Stanton Davis Kirkham.

To dwell beneath them; in their shade the deer feed, and feared not the arrow's deadly aim. Nor trees was felled, in all that world of woods, save by the heavy tooth, or wind, or rush of floods. —Bryant.

One of the few things that we may know in life is this, that it is impossible for man to know anything absolutely. —Jordan.

Wisdom is knowing what to do next; virtue is doing it. —Jordan.

Therefore am I still a lover of the meadows and the woods and mountains; and of all that we behold from this green earth; of all the mighty world of eye and ear—both of what they half create, and what perceive; well pleased to recognize in Nature and the language of the sense the anchor of my purest thoughts, the Muse, the guide, the guardian of my heart, and soul, of all my moral being. —Wordsworth.

"Whoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

"Let the ends thou aims't at, be thy country's, thy God's and Truth."

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

"Good Roads, Flowers, Parks, Better Schools, Trees, Pure Water, Fresh Air, Sunshine, and work for Everybody—this to me, is religion."

BUSINESS BOOMING

Each day brings news of the fallibility of old political axioms. Past experience, in the realm of politics, is getting to be a very poor instructor. Conservatives who rely implicitly on her teachings fail to explain daily events in the business world. Political history teaches us that the year of National elections makes poor showing in the business world. Election year is one always feared by the little business man. He is unable to withstand the slump of uncertainty and probable change of economic policy.

But this year, with more conflict of opinion than since the '60's, there has appeared no sign of lack of confidence. Instead of this, reports from all over the country show promise of not only continued but increasing prosperity. Railroad orders can always be taken as barometer of business activity. They are placing large orders with the steel operators and outlining plans of extensive improvements. Orders, urging shippers to aid in preventing car shortage, have been issued. The only fear expressed by the railroads is of a car famine and their inability to guarantee transportation for the enormous crops that are in prospect. The Steel Mills are reporting heavy orders. And whatever we may think or say about the steel combinations during the heat of campaigns, their operation measures, in great degree, the business activities of the whole country.

Not only are the reports from the large businesses encouraging but in every line of industry we hear satisfaction expressed. Only two months before election, and the whole business world is increasing capacity and turning out rush orders. Those who cry of the high cost of living are gradually recognizing the truth of old "Jim Hill's" epigram "the cost of men living". There is work today for every man who is "on to his job" at better wages than ever before.

The farmer, in some sections, is still grumbling. He has not yet realized that he is getting better prices than ever before. If the price of wheat goes below a dollar, he grumbles over that, failing to recognize the advance in other products.

The farmers, in this section, can sell everything we raise at better prices than ever before. They are learning to raise more and better crops, too. We are, it is true, embarrassed by the help question. But the mere fact that help is scarce is indicative that prices are going to hold up.

Instead of allowing this question to blind us to all other good things we are enjoying, we must tackle it as separate and apart.

This and other details demand our attention but we need have no fear of slump in the business world to which we sell our products.

PEOPLES' COLUMN

THE NEWARK SCHOOL

Mr. Editor: I live on my own farm in White Clay Creek Hundred, pay taxes, yet have this question of education to meet.

My local district school is not far enough advanced to meet the needs of my two oldest sons. It is impossible for me to send these boys to school until after my harvesting is done. I am, however, informed that it will be impossible for them to enter the Newark High School at that time.

Again, that should I be compelled to take them from the school in the spring I have to pay twenty cents a day for every day they are absent.

I can readily see how there could be reason in the first item on account of the school being overcrowded—except that to my opinion, Delaware boys should always have precedence.

The twenty cents penalty for non-attendance is a new one on me. Can you set me straight? I write for this information through the paper in order that others in similar predicament may benefit by it.

I would suggest that any new rulings put in effect by the School Board be printed in our local papers.

Dear Editor:

The boys of X. will be received into our schools at any time of the year, if they are prepared to enter any of the grades above the sixth, and the State will pay for their tuition provided they enter before the quota of New Castle County is full. We are only allowed a certain number of outside pupils and when that number is reached the State will not pay for others.

The penalty of twenty cents a day for absence has been withdrawn by the Board. No pupil is received from outside the State until all Delaware pupils applying are accommodated. The quota of pupils allowed this County is still unfilled and we will receive outside pupils that are prepared until we receive word from the State Treasurer that we can accept no more under the State law.

Yours truly,

Joel S. Gillilan, Secy.

NEED FOR BANYANS

The following editorial from the Delaware Ledger has been called to our attention with request for comment:

"It is remarkable how some people can grow and flourish as the Banyan tree, yet if the secret were known there would be nothing remarkable about it."

The Banyan, according to authorities, is celebrated for sending down new stems from its spreading branches, and, supporting those branches itself makes a living colanade of great extent. Banyans have been known to have as many as sixty-eight of these stems. Colonel Sykes mentions such a one which "constituted a grove capable of affording shade to 20,000 men."—that is ten times the population of Newark.

Milton in describing this wonderful Banyan said it offers a

"pillared shade walks between; There oft the Indian herdsman, shunning heat, Shelters in cool, and tends his pasturing herds."

Southey is even more generous in his recognition and praise, and those people whose institutions grow and flourish receive from him this compliment:

"It was a goodly sight to see that venerable tree, For o'er the lawn, irregularly spread, Fifty straight columns propt its lofty head;

And many a long depending shoot Seeking to strike its root, Straight like a plummet grew towards the ground.

Beneath was smooth and fair to sight, Nor weeds nor briars deformed the natural floor.

And through the leafy cope which bowed it o'er Came gleams of chequer'd light, So like a temple did it seem.

He goes on further to say that pious hearts have the impulse of prayers of thankfulness for its existence.

Banyan trees, Banyan men and Banyan institutions are what Newark needs. The secret of their growth to our interpretation is energy, work while the other fellow sleeps—and energy some more. This is an honest and honorable recipe for growth and success. So far as the institution called the NEWARK POST is concerned it is the one we use continually in our daily business. Whatever degree of success we have had is based on that theory. To our own mind and experience, that is the secret of the success of most men and institutions. Our support and business have come from those recognizing this, who base their opinion on the ability of our workmen to "deliver the goods" "on time" and "as ordered," a "little better than the other fellow can."

That's deserving of respect and we have won it from people worth while.

Tomato Crop not Promising

Indications are that the tomato crop which, until a few weeks ago, promised to be unusually fine, will be a disappointment to growers alike. Blight has attacked the plants and many fields look as though fire had run through them, all the foliage being dead and only bare stalks standing, with fruit exposed to the sun. These conditions are reported to be general throughout the peninsula. It is impossible for fruit to mature perfectly on plants stripped of foliage, and the predictions are freely made by growers that there will be less than half a crop. Next week is expected to be the busiest of the season at the canneries. All fruit fit for canning will be gathered from many patches by the middle of September and it is predicted that some of the canning houses will be closed soon thereafter.

BASE BALL NEWS GAMES OF THE WEEK

The Newark Tri-County League Club by losing a game to Northeast, the tail-enders, on Saturday, lost the last chance of remaining in the race for the pennant. The game was played at Northeast and the score was 5 to 3. The scores of the other Tri-County League games played on Saturday were Elk Mills, 2; Elkton, 1; Oxford, 7; Port Deposit, 5; Aberdeen, 6; Havre de Grace, 0. The standing of the clubs in the league follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Port Deposit	17	9	.654
Oxford	15	10	.600
Newark	14	11	.560
Havre de Grace	14	12	.538
Aberdeen	14	12	.538
Elkton	12	14	.462
Elk Mills	9	16	.360
Northeast	6	19	.240

MURRAY WAS HIT HARD

While Murray was hit hard in the game at Northeast on Saturday, the support that he received was not the kind that encourages good work in the box. It should have been a Newark victory as the leads had the tailenders 5 to 1 up until the fifth inning. Newark then, however, went to pieces and Northeast scored enough runs in the fifth and sixth innings to win. The score follows:

ONLY TWO MORE SCHEDULED GAMES

There remains but two more scheduled games and both of them will be played on the home grounds. Next Saturday Northeast will be here and the season ends September 28th, with Elkton as the attraction. Newark will probably have to win both of these games to retain third place.

Oxford now has an excellent chance of at least tying Port Deposit in the league race. The Quaker boys are going at a fast clip just now and there seems to be no pitchers in the league who can stop their batting streak. Oxford's defeat of the leaders on Saturday was a clean cut victory as they outplayed Port Deposit at every point. Taylor who has been touted as the best pitcher in the league looked just like all the other pitchers to Oxford, so they hit him all over the field.

The two teams meet again next Saturday, and this game will be played at Oxford, the leaders may get another set back. In case Oxford should win again next Saturday, they will then be nearly on even terms with Port Deposit. The only difference will be that Port Deposit has played one more game than Oxford. In case Oxford has a chance to either tie or beat Port Deposit out after the regular schedule is played, there remains a postponed game between Newark and Oxford that will be played off. This would be done to give the latter the opportunity of playing the same number of games as Port Deposit has played, so it is possible that the game which will decide the pennant winner will yet be played on the Newark grounds, even though the locals are not the club that has the chance.

SCHEDULE NEXT SATURDAY

The schedule for next Saturday is: Northeast at Newark; Port Deposit at Oxford; Aberdeen at Havre de Grace, and Elk Mills at Elkton. The schedule for September 28th, the last scheduled games follows: Elkton at Newark; Port Deposit at Elk Mills; Havre de Grace at Northeast, and Oxford at Aberdeen.

NEWARK FIELD CLUB LOST

The Newark Field Club of the Penn-Mar League made desperate efforts to capture the game with Applton on the local grounds last Saturday, but failed as the visitors won 7 to 2. Manager Campbell used 17 men in the game, but he could not stop the Applton boys, as they both outfielded and out-batted the locals. Crowe, who started to pitch for Newark, was latted out of the box in the third inning, and Lovett, who relieved him was hit hard during the latter part of the game. Willis pitched a steady game for Applton. The score follows:

Live Boards of Trade

The Boards of Trade in the lower counties are becoming active and making every possible effort to locate industries in their respective towns. There is an effort on foot to install a shirt factory at Milford and one at Greenwood. The Greenwood people have been assured of the plant if they will guarantee 30 operators, and they report they will be easily able to secure the desired amount of help.

Old Ironsides

In the quiet cabin of the old frigate Constitution a little group of naval officers gathered on the evening of August 19th, and in silence drank a toast to the ship, to Capt. Isaac Hull, who commanded her in her famous battle with the Guerriere, and to the crew. It was the only ceremony that marked the one hundredth anniversary of the event that turned the tide of the War of 1812, but its very simplicity made it impressive.

Sailed for Europe Tuesday

Former Congressman L. Irving Handy and Mrs. Handy sailed from Baltimore Tuesday on the North German Lloyd line for a trip to Europe. They take a slow steamer for the ocean trip with the hope that the sea air will greatly benefit Mr. Handy, who has been ill for two weeks with a nervous breakdown. He has been under treatment and at the advice of his physician he takes the trip at this time. After a short sojourn in Europe, during which he will visit some places that he did not have the opportunity to see during his other trips abroad, he will return by the American Line and reach home before election.

The Crops in Delaware

According to a bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, the condition of crops in Delaware on August 1st, as compared with the average for the past 10 years, was 108.1 per cent, the conditions having been decidedly favorable.

The indications throughout the United States are for total production of all cereals (133,614,000 tons) of about 29.3 per cent more than last year; 6.1 per cent more than in 1910, and 16.2 per cent more than in 1909. Potato prospects are more than 30 per cent more than last year, 14 per cent more than 1910, and 120 per cent more than in 1909. Hay estimated yield is about 31 per cent more than last year, and four per cent more than in 1910 and 1909.

The month of August, like July, was decidedly favorable for crop development in the United States, the opposite condition of all crops September 1st being about 15.5 per cent better than on September 1st last year, and 8.1 per cent better than the average on September of recent years.

A state issued by the Bureau of the Census, on August 20th, indicates that there were 1,346,925 women of voting age on April 15, 1910, in the six states where women may vote. Of these, California had 671,386; Colorado, 218,425; Idaho, 69,818; Utah, 85,729; Washington, 277,727; and Wyoming, 28,840.

O-Cedar Polish

A woman can live with a broom in her hand and still not be a good housekeeper. The dust settling on the furniture and window sills has always been a trying problem to the dainty housewife who wants things spick and span. Not only that but dust is the greatest germ carrier. Living on our dusty streets, this has become a serious problem. You all know how you swept yesterday and company came to-day and there you could write your name on the furniture.

And now here comes a remedy
O-CEDAR

Moisten a piece of cheese cloth and wipe off the furniture and the dust is absorbed. Nor does it injure the polish on the piano—it is a polish as well, absolutely GUARANTEED not to injure the highest mahogany finish.

It is in fact a wonder for it not only is a dust killer but a polish and germ killer. This may sound strange but a trial will convince the most particular.

For floors, an O-Cedar DUSTLESS MOP comes that beats electricity—it gives a tone to the floor like a new waxing—even on plain stained and varnished floors.

Again—for cleaning and polishing automobiles—it comes highly recommended.

Try it out—it's not expensive and a labor saver.

of the chief of these is the invention of the vacuum cleaner, to which may be added the plan of incinerating or burning all possible matter. By the combination of the two dust is rendered innocuous.
The old plan of household "dusting" was as uncleanly as it was dangerous. Next to the vacuum method, the best way to remove dust is to use a moist duster, to which the dust clings. Here again the stove should play its part in getting rid of the matter that the duster has gathered.
The scattering of moist tea-leaves on floors prior to brushing them is to be commended for the same reason that praise is given to the dampened duster.

These latter simple precautions; the vacuum cleaner and plenty of sunlight, will assuredly rob the dust of the home of the dangers with which it is constantly primed.

The New Parcels Post Law

The Parcel-post Law admits to the mails, as fourth-class matter, farm and factory produce not now admitted, and raises the weight limit from four to 11 pounds. On all such matter mailed at a post-office from which a rural delivery route starts, or at any point on such a route, or mailed in any city with a carrier system, for delivery on the rural route or within the carrier limits, the rate is five cents for the first pound, and one cent for each additional pound, making a maximum rate of 15 cents for an 11-pound package. For delivery beyond the carrier system or rural route, but within the first zone, the rates are higher, and continue to increase as the package goes from zone to zone, till a maximum rate of $1.32 is reached for delivery in the last or most remote zone. The law goes into effect on January 1, 1913.

The Bell System and Public Relations

The responsibilities of public service necessitate a careful, intelligent and courteous consideration of the public's requirements.
It is a matter of policy with every Bell Telephone Company to so study the needs and wishes of its patrons that the fullest measure of value shall be returned to every subscriber.

All of our employees have been trained to observe this requirement. Each lineman, installer, operator, adjuster—in fact, each employee who has occasion to meet the public face to face, or telephone to telephone, is filled with the spirit of straightforward, polite dealing.

We believe it is the best policy—the only policy that will spell success for the Company; and we appreciate, as should our every patron, that the public may not reasonably expect a thoroughly satisfactory service unless the Company may enjoy a measure of success which will permit of progressive and liberal conduct of the business.

If you have trouble of any sort with your telephone service, call on us; we are anxious to assist you in all matters. We want your co-operation in this and in return we promise our hearty good service.
