

THIS EVENT STARTED THE WORLD WAR

This authentic and uncensored photograph shows the arrest of two Bosnian students, Gavril Princip and one Cambrinovic, immediately after they had shot and killed the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary, and his wife, on June 28, 1914, to avenge the seizure of Bosnia by Austria-Hungary, as the royal pair rode through the streets of Sarajevo, and is one of more than 500 photographs taken from official archives of various governments, journalistic files and private collections, which will be printed in chronological sequence as a photographic history of "The First World War" in "The Evening Bulletin of Philadelphia," beginning Thursday, January 11, 1934.

Laurence Stallings, participant observer and student of the history of the World War, and a playwright, critic and picture editor of long experience and distinguished attainments, spent over three years in examination of more than ten thousand photographs of the World War.

These remarkable photographs will bring back memories to all members of the American Expeditionary Force, and those of us who were directly and indirectly touched by the war and to everyone they will reveal with startling grimness the destruction of war. "School," the well known organ of educators, in its issue of August 3, 1933, said: "If every child in America could pore over this volume, there would remain little doubt in their minds as to the folly of war, and the long horror it brings to men, women and children."

Nearly 20 years have passed since the outbreak of the great World War, which lasted from 1914 to 1918, and involved practically all the nations of Europe as well as Canada and the United States.

8,998,771 "known dead" were the total casualties of the battles which raged over these four years and which in intensity exceeded anything known in history.

6,295,512 soldiers were seriously wounded and 14,002,039 were otherwise wounded while 5,983,600 soldiers were taken prisoners or reported missing.

The United States mobilized 4,355,000 soldiers for the World War of which 126,000 were killed, 234,300 wounded and 4,500 taken prisoners.

The indirect and direct costs of the conflict were 337,946,179,657 dollars. The figures presented in this summary are both incomprehensible and appalling, yet even these do not take into account the effect of the war on life, human vitality, economic well being, ethics, morality, or other phases of human relationships and activities which were disorganized and injured.

The costs to the United States in war loans to the allied countries were 11,565,093,855 dollars, while the costs of the army and navy and other governmental functions was 32,608,854,340 or a total of 44,173,948,225 dollars.

"The First World War is the history of each nation, each battlefield, each phase of the war brought to Bulletin readers in such forceful manner through their wise selection and layout by Mr. Stallings. They are extraordinarily moving and compelling in their telling of the story of a war-mad world and will give the future generations a bald-faced reckoning of the costs of war.

The Evening Bulletin of Philadelphia is to be congratulated on placing before its readers this stupendous collection of photographs which in an extremely interesting manner present a fair and impartial history of the war.

Publishing of this collection of photographs begins in the Evening Bulletin of Philadelphia on Thursday, January 11th.

Below are a few expressions of opinion from some who have seen this collection of photographs.

A Grand Job

"The First World War is a grand job of work. The camera can't romanticize war, and Stallings wouldn't and doesn't, and that's an ideal combination. Even the bitterest pacifistic diatribes against war have defeated their own purpose by building in a romantic factor when that was the last thing the authors meant to do. The First World War proves, literally and graphically, that war is a somewhat less romantic enterprise than the assembling of Ford parts."

The American Legion Weekly A Most Remarkable Production

"Truly The First World War is a most remarkable production, and I trust will be found in thousands upon thousands of our public libraries and schools where the youth of today may obtain through the eye the most vivid of impressions of the horrors, the cruelties and barbarities of war."

Nicholas Murray Butler Epochal and Epic

"The First World War is epochal and epic. It is a confession of mankind's greatest mistake. The pictures are more stimulative of thought than any war book of printed words ever was or could be. Let it be found in every American home, accessible to the children, and the first world war will be the last."

Rev. Charles Francis Potter More Potently Than Words

"More potently than words these pictures cannot help but impress the public with the utter horror and devastating symbols of a world event which failed to produce one iota of lasting good save the unforgettable sacrifice of life and manifestation of virtue on the part of our soldiers."

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin Will Attract Much Interest

"Stallings has grouped his 513 uncensored pictures of the war in a most skillful manner. I am sure they would attract much interest if reproduced in The Bulletin."

Hon. J. Hampton Moore, Mayor, City of Philadelphia Most Realistic Visualization

"The First World War is the most realistic visualization of events during war time that I have ever seen. It leaves nothing to the imagination and conveys in a most convincing manner the awful truth of warfare."

"The captions are excellent, rather cryptic but very descriptive, and the highest praise is none too good for the editor."

"The wealth of material that has been written about the World War is most eloquently illustrated by these pictures. The selection and the continuity form a running story and literally and graphically they produce a romance beyond description."

"It is a monumental work that I hope will some day be in every household, because its force is most eloquent in teaching a lesson and pointing out a moral. Its effect is more far reaching than all the propaganda and peace conference the world has yet encountered."

Harry S. McDevitt, President Judge Court of Common Pleas No. 1, Philadelphia

Especially Welcome to Any Italian

"Such photographs which depict so vividly the horrors of war are especially welcome to any Italian, the head of whose government, His Excellency Benito Mussolini, was the first to subscribe wholeheartedly in Geneva to the disarmament proposals of the President of the United States, and who repeatedly said that he would be willing to reduce the Italian army to ten thousand men if the other European continental nations were ready to do the same."

P. Margotti, Royal Consul General of Italy at Philadelphia

Education That Is Indispensable
"Stallings has taken a terrific wallop at the mind that countenances the war system. To see his pictures is to undergo part of the education that is indispensable to a termination of that system which should be held a cardinal sin by humanity. Before it masters it it should be condemned by an intelligent civilization. I wish to commend The Bulletin not only for the publication of these pictures, but that it has sensed the mission of a mind for peace that it suggests such a publication for that end."

Rev. Dr. Ivan Murray Rose, Pastor, First Baptist Church, Philadelphia

A Great Public Service
"After viewing the scenes depicted in the photographic history of The First World War and the profound impression which the pictures leave on the mind, I feel that The Evening

Bulletin would be rendering a great public service by publishing these actual scenes, in order to bring home to the coming generations a realization of the utter futility, the untold agony, distress, and concurrent and continued misery and suffering following in the path of war; which ought to make it apparent to peoples, governments and rulers that a more sane and peaceful method must be found to settle the differences between nations than by a resort to arms.
"Only by educating the youth of the land to the horrors and sufferings which are inherent in all wars may we hope to avoid such conflicts in the future."

Charles L. Brown, President Judge, Municipal Court of Philadelphia Will Serve a Good Purpose
"I think the publication of the pictures will serve a good purpose for unfortunately, we as a race have a way of forgetting and there is rising now a generation to whom all this is hearsay."
Elim A. E. Palmquist, D. D., Executive Secretary, Philadelphia Federation of Churches

Highlights From F. D. R.'s Address Before Congress

Arresting sentences from President Roosevelt's address to Congress:

"* * * Recovery means a reform of many old methods, a permanent readjustment of many of our ways of thinking and therefore of many of our social and economic arrangements."

"Civilization can not go back; civilization must not stand still. We have undertaken new methods. It is our task to perfect, to improve, to alter when necessary, but in all cases, to go forward."

"The overwhelming majority of our people seek a greater opportunity for humanity to prosper and find happiness."

"Child labor is abolished."

"The overwhelming majority of the banks, both national and State, which reopened last Spring, are in sound condition and have been brought within the protection of Federal insurance."

"Not only have several millions of our unemployed been restored to work, but industry is organizing itself with a greater understanding that reasonable profits can be earned while at the same time protection can be assured to guarantee to labor adequate pay and proper conditions of work."

"I continue in my conviction that industrial progress and prosperity can only be attained by bringing the purchasing power of that portion of our population which in one form or another is dependent upon agriculture up to a level which will restore a proper balance between every section of the country and every form of work."

"I cannot, unfortunately, present to you a picture of complete optimism regarding world affairs."

"We have, I hope, made it clear to our neighbors that we seek with them future avoidance of territorial expansion and of interference by one nation in the internal affairs of another."

"I have made it clear that the United States cannot take part in political arrangements in Europe but that we stand ready to cooperate at any time in practicable measures on a world basis looking to immediate reduction of armaments and the lowering of the barriers against commerce."

"We have been shocked by many notorious examples of injuries done our citizens by persons or groups who have been living off their neighbors by the use of methods either unethical or criminal."

"Self help and self control are the essence of the American tradition—not of necessity the form of that tradition, but its spirit."

"We have ploughed the furrow and planted the good seed; the hard beginning is over."

NEVER DIFFICULT TO SPEND FEDERAL FUNDS

Tremendous Figures Are Represented in These Allotments

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, public works administrator, has announced that one-half of the $3,300,000,000 fund appropriated by Congress to put the unemployed back to work has now been allotted.

Of the money so far ear-marked, $1,478,963,841 will be used on Federal projects. The remainder of the assigned funds, $174,627,569, has been allocated to non-Federal enterprises. These include municipal projects, such as street improvements, power plants, schools and other projects outside the scope of Federal activities.

Mr. Ickes says the remaining funds appropriated by Congress in this connection will be allotted before January 1.

Commenting on the agitation throughout the country for more speed in getting the public works program under way, Mr. Ickes says:—"Inspired agitation to knock off all shackles including safeguards written into the law by Congress, and to permit unregulated spending, under the guise of thus hurrying the re-employment program, will continue. I do not deem it the intent of Congress that any such unrestricted orgy of flinging millions of public dollars toward unknown destinations be tolerated."

Secretary Ickes reports that since he was appointed as public works administrator, 3500 Federal projects have been approved, while non-Federal enterprises approved totaled 177.

The aim, of course, is to make it so you'll have to explain to your great-grand-children what they used to mean by "bootlegger."

GOVERNOR BUCK'S NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE

"Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before." What a fine concept of life and how rational the philosophy of its statement. On the threshold of the New Year, let each Delawarean apply that philosophy to his own life.

Let us forget old failures, bygone mistakes, futile purposes, barren efforts and reach forward into the New Year with hope. Let us forget the things we have left undone and the things we ought not to have done, the trivial, the foolish, the untrue, the insincere, the commonplace, the selfish, the ill-timed, the ignoble things, and let us tread the path of the New Year with courage and faith and honor, kindly, fearless and unashamed.

It is my firm belief that 1934 will add greatly to our material comfort; that gloom and depression will pass away; and that to hundreds of men and women will come the joyous realization that they again have work and are no longer dependent upon others. And so to all the people of Delaware I wish health and happiness in fullest measure through the coming year. May joy and gladness shine along the pathway of each one of us and may that desire that each of us has cherished now for so many years find fulfillment in 1934.

C. D. BUCK, Governor.

How to Reduce Heating Costs

by JOHN BARCLAY, Heating Expert

In a recent letter Mr. R. F. S. of Scarsdale N. Y. asks: "What is the most important thing to look for when the furnace has a good fire in it but the rooms are not warm enough?"

There is one "thing" that will always account for such a condition, but there are at least thirty "things" that may be wrong in a case like this. Some of these things may be quickly and easily remedied by a man who is handy around the house; others require more specialized skill. Some of the faults may be easily located, while others may pass unnoticed unless the man seeking them is familiar with heating systems.

It is because of the importance of quickly locating faulty conditions, and promptly correcting them, that I so frequently urge my readers to ask their coal dealers, plumbers or heating contractors to send a qualified engineer or service man to look over their heating plants and make recommendations for the necessary repairs or readjustments.

Sometimes we find the Check Damper in the wrong place; or the Turn Damper handle may have slipped, giving a false position of the damper; or the regulator may be improperly adjusted; or there may be an excessive amount of fly ash in the smoke-pipe or on the boiler surfaces; or the radiators may be improperly pitched; or the draft may be impeded. Perhaps a loose bolt, or rusty joint may be the cause of wasted heat. All of these things can be quickly adjusted by a competent service man.

Again I suggest, as strongly as I can, that you consult your local "Furnace Doctor" at least once a year — you'll get better heat and you'll save fuel.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Mr. K.—Usually noise in radiators is caused by water being picked up by the steam causing what is known as "water hammer." Water hammer is usually caused by improper pitch of the steam lines. I suggest that this be checked and rectified.

Miss H. A. S., Buffalo — No doubt there is some condition of air circulation causing this trouble. From the information given it is difficult to say just what the trouble is. The register on the second floor will have a tendency to draw all the heat as it passes more chimney affect. We suggest that this be shut off in the basement and not upstairs.

If the leaders to the front rooms are going through a cold section of the cellar, they should be insulated in order to keep in the heat. If the leaders are being taken out of the top of the heater above the place where cold air enters, there may be stratification and only cold air being forced to the front rooms.

More information from you in the form of a sketch showing approximate locations of cold air box and pipes from the heater will help to solve this problem. If there is a cold air box which takes the air from outside, it should be sealed off and all air for heating be taken from the basement or first floor rooms.

(If you have any heating problems address John Barclay, Room 1814, 120 Broadway, New York City. He will be glad to reply in a personal letter.)

—OUR MOTTO

JANUARY 4, 1934

The President's Message

President Roosevelt's address to Congress yesterday at the opening of the regular session gives assurance to the people that the chief executive elected by them to battle with the depression is as keenly and robustly active in their behalf today as on the day he took office. That he will fight it through vigorously but calmly and with the best wisdom he can gain from experience and the minds of honest thinkers for the public good, is clear in the whole tone and in the detail of his statement. His program is well started and has done much good. It has defects, but these are admitted and are to be adjusted as rapidly as conditions permit. The essential for the success of this or any program in so great a crisis of our civilization is that Congress and the people and all their representatives in national and local public office, sink partisanship and selfishness and give the program every chance and support to bring recovery.

The most heartening thing in the President's attitude toward the great problem of recovery is not in any detail but in the daily evidence that a simple and sound principle underlies all his thinking and all his acts: a recognition that the heart of the problem lies in improving human relationships, and his steadfast devotion to that end.

In regard to persons we know that one of the elements of greatness is simplicity. So too is simplicity and utter sincerity the underlying spring of action in all great effort to improve human relations for the common good. Any program which pretends to deal with the present economic disaster into which our industrial civilization has led us, must be complicated in operation, requiring consideration of vast and overlapping fields of endeavor and of stupendous masses of detail; but what is the present problem itself except the need to improve human relationships?

And if, of our own free will, a majority of us should determine to make our relation to our fellows sufficiently unselfish to help them to a fair means of livelihood and opportunity for happiness, even though it means giving up time, partisanship, money or unreasonable profits, or only speaking out or otherwise showing support for such a relationship,—the labor, the cost and the time required to bring recovery would be unbelievably diminished.

The President has a right to ask all this of every citizen, for if enough of us do not rise to it, all of us are sunk with all our petty failures into the down-grade of what might have been a great American people and civilization. The emergency is greater than the War. Whether we like the particular recovery program or not, it is what we have, and at least we have it, after an aching void of hopelessness, and the upgrade is started. Those who are experts and extremely wise may criticize—the more the better, for that is helpful; but for the great body of us who are not experts, the line of action is clear, and it happens also to be the best personal, political and economic policy—that is, support for the President in this crisis as we gave support to the President during the War, irrespective of party and of selfish interest.

The New Era

Shortly after the article "The Hunt for the Elephant," by Mr. Blythe, in the December 30, 1933, issue of "The Saturday Evening Post," and the finding of the keeper of such pachyderm in the person of J. Bennett Gordon, a man well known to Delawareans because of his activities in Delaware during the war, comes the announcement of Senator Hastings' appointment as the head of a committee of nine to conduct the campaign for election of Republican Senators this coming fall.

From the remarks made by Senator McNary on making the appointments and the article by Mr. Blythe it is obvious that a strong united front in every city, town, village, and farm must be made if the G. O. P. is going to fatten the elephant and again have him trumpet his blasts over the land. But it is likewise clear from "The Saturday Evening Post" article that the old leaders are through and simply clinging to the illusion that they are the party's leaders, unaware that the great mass of the voters have deserted them.

New blood and new leadership, organized and prepared to assume the burdens of constructive criticism, so indispensable to our party system of government, is being brought forth. Over a century ago the same fate caught the Federalists as is now catching the "Old Guard."

We are in the midst of a new era in American government and we must realize it. The people have not lost the right to question and are beginning to analyze. Soon they will again have their opportunity to voice their opinion at the polls. But they need guidance, truthful guidance and fair open leadership. The Republican party must build anew, from the bottom up, on strong concrete foundations, in accordance with well formulated plans, with steel, brick, mortar and lumber gathered throughout the land from the best in the country.

As recently said in the Chicago Tribune: "The American government is one by parties. One party is in administration, the other is in opposition. Criticism is protected. It is one of the checks. Freedom of opinion is part of the citizen's birthright. He is not seditious in using it."

Only by beginning now, criticising fairly and constructively, and building anew from the bottom can Republicanism be re-established.

A spirit of liberalism is abroad in our country and house-cleaning is the order of the day.

It is not too early or too late to begin in State and Country.

New Road Map

The 1934 official road map of Delaware, issued by the State Highway Department, is, in our judgment, an excellent piece of work. It shows plainly the various types of road bed of all our improved roads, and shows also many more points of direction in the surrounding states than the previous maps. This map will be of great service and interest both to tourists coming into Delaware and to our own citizens. And to the latter it will bring pride and pleasure as well, in the progressiveness of our Delaware road system and the new sections of the State we can now explore on the type of improved road suitable to the section and the traffic.

One clear-cut reform in the State is needed to make that pleasure perfect: the banishment of sign boards and of those stations and booths that are ugly and unneeded, from the roadsides where they now are, and the certain prevention of their appearance upon any of the new roads; and by the motorist a concern that he leave no scrap of litter when he picnics in view of ocean, lake, or stream, or in the lovely woodland and farm environment of his favorite roads.

What Men Live By

Soothing as a poultice of sweet herbs must be Governor Buck's New Year's proclamation to those leaders of his party and members of the Legislature whose lack of true social conscience prevented the adoption of a State employment program at the recent special session. If they adopt the philosophy the Governor advises for all of us, they will forget "the things they have left undone, and the things they ought not to have done," and face the New Year "with courage and faith and honor, kindly, fearless and unashamed"! Courage for what? Faith in what? And if we are not ashamed of our failings, what code of honor do we live by? What can stir us to better ways?

We know no better description of the type of politician who has listened to his directors and failed us in our direst need, and of their directors, than the Governor's opening sentence: "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before." Pick out any party man who has helped to ditch a constructive program that would benefit the people, and watch him. You will find him indeed forgetting those things which are behind, but also reaching forth unto those things which are to come.

And since as a people we are notoriously short of memory about public questions, it is to be hoped that many of us have been changed by the depression, and will remember each experience in order to learn from it.

We understand the Governor's point of view. It is no easy nor pleasure-giving task to be in his office under the economic, civic, and political conditions that have developed in the past few years. We happen to know that Governor Buck did not seek the job, but was overborne in his objections by party leaders who have not lightened his burden as it has become more pressing. However, it is his burden, and he doubtless intended his message as a personal philosophy, seeking peace where there is no peace, and since he cannot have it himself unless the people have it, counseling a gentle and hopeful mood on our part. But such a philosophy is suited only to those upon whom the weight of conscience for past failures bears so heavily as to hamper vigorous action toward righting those failures, and even for the conscience-smitten the more negative and stand-pat virtues are of little avail without a spur to clear sight, hard thought, and effective action, all of which require that we remember the past and learn from it, in order to be intelligently useful in our personal lives and in our citizenship.

TEXT OF ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT TO THE SEVENTY-THIRD CONGRESS

the crisis which we experienced last March, nor the many measures which you and I undertook during the special session that we might initiate recovery and reform.

It is sufficient that I should speak in broad terms of the results of our common counsel.

The credit of the government has been fortified by drastic reduction in the cost of its permanent agencies through the economy act.

With the two-fold purpose of strengthening the whole financial structure and of arriving eventually at a medium of exchange which will have over the years less variable purchasing and debt paying power for our people than that of the past, I have used the authority granted me to purchase all American produced gold and silver and to buy additional gold in the world markets.

Careful investigation and constant study prove that in the matter of foreign exchange rates, certain of our sister nations find themselves so handicapped by internal and other conditions that they feel unable at this time to enter into stabilization discussions based on permanent and world-wide objectives.

The overwhelming majority of the banks, both national and State, which reopened last Spring, are in sound condition and have been brought within the protection of Federal insurance. In the case of those banks which were not permitted to reopen, nearly 600 million dollars of frozen deposits are being restored to the depositors through the assistance of the National Government.

Millions Put To Work

We have made great strides towards the objectives of the National Industrial Recovery Act, for not only have several millions of our unemployed been restored to work, but industry is organizing itself with a greater understanding that reasonable profits can be earned while at the same time protection can be assured to guarantee to labor adequate pay and proper conditions of work.

Child labor is abolished. Uniform standards of hours and wages apply today to 95 per cent of industrial employment within the field of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

We seek the definite end of preventing combinations in furtherance of monopoly and in restraint of trade, while at the same time we seek to prevent ruinous rivalries within industrial groups which in many cases resemble the gang wars of the underworld and in which the real victim in every case is the public itself.

Under the authority of this Congress, we have brought the component parts of each industry together around a common table, just as we have brought problems affecting labor to a common meeting ground.

Though the machinery, hurriedly devised, may need readjustment from time to time, nevertheless I think you will agree with me that we have created a permanent feature of our modernized industrial structure and that it will continue under the supervision but not the arbitrary dictation of government itself.

You recognized last Spring that the most serious part of the debt burden affected those who stood in danger of losing their farms and their homes. I am glad to tell you that refinancing in both of these cases is proceeding with good success and in all probability within the financial limits set by the Congress.

More Farm Buying Power

But agriculture had suffered from more than its debts. Actual experience with the operation of the Agricultural Adjustment Act leads to my belief that thus far the experiment of seeking a balance between production and consumption is succeeding and has made progress entirely in line with reasonable expectations towards the restoration of farm prices to parity.

I continue in my conviction that industrial progress and prosperity can only be attained by bringing the purchasing power of that portion of our population which in one form or another is dependent upon agriculture up to a level which will restore a proper balance between every section of the country and every form of work.

In this field, through carefully planned flood control, power development and land use policies, in the Tennessee Valley and in other great watersheds, we are seeking the elimination of waste, the removal of poor lands from agriculture and the encouragement of small local industries, thus furthering this principle of a better balanced national life.

We recognize the great ultimate cost of the application of this rounded policy to every part of the Union.

Today we are creating heavy obligations to start the work and because of the great unemployment needs of the moment, I look forward, however, to the time in the not distant future, when annual appropriations, wholly covered by current revenue, will enable the work to proceed with a national plan.

Such a national plan will, in a generation or two, return many times the money spent on it; more important, it will eliminate the use of inefficient tools, conserve and increase natural resources, prevent waste, and enable millions of our people to take better advantage of the opportunities which God has given our country.

Nations Fear Aggression

I cannot, unfortunately, present to you a picture of complete optimism regarding world affairs.

The delegation representing the United States has worked in close cooperation with the other American republics assembled at Montevideo to make that conference an outstanding success.

We have, I hope, made it clear to our neighbors that we seek with them future avoidance of territorial expansion and of interference by one nation in the internal affairs of another.

Furthermore, all of us are seeking the restoration of commerce in ways which will preclude the building up of large favorable trade balances by any one nation at the expense of trade debits on the part of other nations.

In other parts of the world, however, fear of immediate or future aggression and with this the spending of vast sums on armament, and the continued building up of defensive trade barriers, prevent any great progress in peace or trade agreements.

I have made it clear that the United States cannot take part in political arrangements in Europe but that we stand ready to cooperate at any time in practicable measures on a world basis looking to immediate reduction of armaments and the lowering of the barriers against commerce.

I expect to report to you later in regard to debts owed the government and people in this country by the governments and peoples of other countries. Several nations, acknowledging the debt, have paid in small part; other nations have failed to pay. One nation—Finland—has paid the installments due this country in full.

Raps "Shocking Practices"

Returning to home problems, we have been shocked by many notorious examples of injuries done our citizens by persons or groups who have been living off their neighbors by the use of methods either unethical or criminal.

In the first category—a field which does not involve violations of the letter of our laws—practices have been brought to light which have shocked those who believed that we were in the past generation raising the ethical standards of business.

They call for stringent preventive or regulatory measures. I am speaking of those individuals who have evaded the spirit and purpose of our tax laws, of those high officials of banks or corporations who have grown rich at the expense of their stockholders or the public, of those reckless speculators with their own or other people's money whose operations have injured the values of the farmers' crops and the savings of the poor.

In the other category, crimes of organized banditry, cold-blooded shooting, lynching and kidnaping have threatened our security.

These violations of ethics and these violations of law call on the strong arm of government for their immediate suppression; they call also on the country for an aroused public opinion.

The adoption of the 21st amendment should give material aid to the elimination of those new forms of crime which came from illegal traffic in liquor.

Danger In Direct Relief

I shall continue to regard it as my duty to use whatever means may be necessary to supplement State, local and private agencies for the relief of suffering caused by unemployment.

With respect to this question, I have recognized the dangers inherent in the direct giving of relief and have sought the means

M., and especially if the weather was bad.

NEED CREDIT STATEMENT TO OBTAIN FEDERAL LOAN

Delaware farmers who wish to borrow money from the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, Maryland, either for farm mortgages or agricultural production purposes must include a credit statement with their loan applications, advises Ed Willis, Jr., New Castle County Agricultural Agent, Newark. Many commercial banks today are also requiring prospective farmer borrowers to file credit statements. A credit statement shows a farmer's assets, liabilities, and present worth, based upon normal and fair values. The statement should show investments and obligations the farmer may have in addition to those pertaining to this farm. Examples of them should include life insurance and building and loan shares, and endorsements of notes or other paper. "A fair credit statement," says Mr. Willis, "involves an inventory of land, buildings, livestock, machinery, equipment, crops on hand for sale, feeds, and other supplies, all of which may be listed at their fair value and totaled. Also include a list of mortgages, notes in bank, and other debts. "On many farms the best single record a farmer could keep would be an annual inventory, which can be made up quickly about the first of the year. In addition to showing the farmer his exact financial position, an inventory is especially worthwhile in case of fire losses. "Delaware County Agricultural Agents have farm inventory and farm account books in their offices and will be glad to show any farmer how to take an inventory and make out a credit statement."

SOCRATES

Socrates was the noblest Greek teacher. Many people made fun of him because of his bald head and homely face. He used to go about the streets of Athens, talking with those he met and asking questions which led them to think what he thought. He taught them the truth of wisdom and to know wrong and do right.

Socrates had many enemies because what he taught was contrary to some of the religious beliefs of the Athenians. In later years he was accused of corrupting the youth of Athens and tried for his life. Before the court which tried him he said, "Men of Athens I honor and love you, but I shall obey God rather than you." The court declared him guilty and he was condemned to die. After he was condemned to die he said, "Be of good cheer about death, and know this of a truth, that no evil can happen to a good man either in this life or after death." Socrates and the later philosophers Plato and Aristotle, were the greatest men of ancient Greece.

NEVER AGAIN

One day last week I was sledding down a big hill. I saw a car coming toward me. It was too late to stop the sled and the man in the car couldn't see me. The car looked bigger and heavier as it came nearer. I tried to think of some way to get out of its way. When the car was almost upon me I rolled off the sled. Then I heard a crash. I looked around quickly enough to see the sled broken into pieces. That was a lesson to me. Never again shall I go up on that big, dangerous hill to coast.

STATE EGG SHOW STARTS JANUARY 10

Within the past few days all poultrymen in the state have been mailed premium lists for the state egg show, which will be held in the Grange Hall in Milford on January 10, 11 and 12, under the auspices of the Delaware State Poultry Association in cooperation with the extension service of the University of Delaware, the state department of vocational education and the State Board of Agriculture.

Those poultrymen, however, who have failed to receive their copies of this premium list are requested to get in touch with H. S. Palmer, secretary of the show, Newark, Delaware, or with any one of the county agents or vocational agriculture instructors who have been supplied with several copies of this premium list.

An entry in this show will consist of one dozen eggs, and there will be six classes of eggs to be judged for exterior quality only. These six classes include large white, medium white, pullet white, large brown, medium brown and pullet brown.

In each class the premium offered are $8 for first prize, $6 for second, $4 for third, $2 for fourth, $1 for fifth, and 50 cents for sixth award. No entry fees will be charged the exhibitors, but all eggs exhibited will become the property of the State Poultry Association and will be sold for table use. Exhibits may be brought to the show building on Wednesday morning, January 10, without previous notice to the secretary.

The program which has been arranged in connection with this egg show includes a lecture at 7.30 on Wednesday evening by A. E. Jones of New Jersey, on the organization and operation of egg auctions. Following this talk motion pictures of the last two annual state poultry tours will be shown by H. R. Baker, poultry pathologist of the State Board of Agriculture. At 2 o'clock on Thursday afternoon Joe Kielbaha and his troupe of entertainers will appear on the program, and at 1.30 on Friday afternoon there will be a 4-H egg judging contest in charge of A. D. Cobb, assistant director of the Delaware extension service.

As an added feature of this egg show, an educational exhibit is being planned by the Bureau of Markets of the State Board of Agriculture in cooperation with the state department of vocational education which will be of interest to all egg producers.

HIGHWAY WORK TO PROVIDE WINTER JOBS FOR UNEMPLOYED

Utilization of the far-flung maintenance organization as part of the forty-eight State highway departments is planned by the Administration as part of the program to provide employment through the winter for the many unemployed now on relief rolls it was announced today.

In a recent telegram to all State highway departments, Thos. H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture, outlined a tentative setup by which relief labor will be furnished and paid by the Federal Relief Administration up to 65 per cent of the total expenditure. The remaining 35 per cent will be from Federal funds supplied to the State highway departments, and this money will be used to pay for supervision, supplies, material and equipment.

Maintenance supervisors of the various State highway departments, under the plan outlined by MacDonald, will prepare, with the aid of county officials, a list of six, or eight highway maintenance projects in each county or district where serious unemployment exists. Each of these projects will provide for a $5,000 expenditure. Additional projects are contemplated in populous or needy counties.

Twelve classes of work are listed for immediate undertaking; grading and draining roads and streets largely by hand labor; widening shoulders; widening inside curves and flattening slopes; laying tile underdrains; cobble gutters; fencing right of way; dry masonry guard walls; surfacing and resurfacing with local materials or with materials supplied from other than relief funds; roadside clean-up and selective cutting of brush and trees; footpaths of local materials on outlying streets and suburban roads; clean-up of streets and trimming trees; production of road and maintenance material.

State maintenance supervisors in each county will assign experienced men as foremen on individual projects. The work is not to be confined to State highway systems. "The resourcefulness of the State highway departments should enable employment progressively to be given to hundreds of thousands of men before the end of the month," the telegraphic appeal states. Action on the program and financing will follow immediately upon submission of State highway department lists of projects so that actual work may be started without delay.

"This is a big order," the telegram says, "but on the other hand the State highway departments are the outstanding agencies of Government controlling closely-knit and disciplined organizations sufficiently dispersed to insure reasonable success to this emergency effort."

"It is an opportunity for constructive effort that must be carried through to successful completion." Responses received immediately by telegraph from all 48 State highway departments show that projects will be submitted and begun immediately.

DELAWARE HIGHWAY TO CONNECT ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC OCEANS

Delaware is at present building the last link in a very important United States Highway that when completed, will connect the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. At present U. S. Route 50 starts from San Francisco in California and runs to Annapolis, Md. From that point a ferry connects with Matapeake, Md., where a continuous highway runs east to Milton in lower Delaware.

At this point an 18-foot concrete road is now being constructed which will connect with the Milford-Rehoboth Beach road, which when completed will provide the last link in the direct route from one ocean to another and which will probably be finally designated by the United States Engineers as the continuation and end of Route 50, its final terminus being the Atlantic Ocean at Rehoboth Beach.

The only State road in Delaware that is completely closed to travel is the concrete road between Bacons and Whitesville in Sussex County, where a bridge has been washed out. Bids will be received November 15 for the rebuilding of this bridge and including all others washed out in Sussex County where temporary bridges are now being used.

Because of the large number of visitors and those who wish to enjoy surf fishing, a large fenced parking space has been built by the State Highway Department at the Indian River Inlet on the newly opened ocean boulevard between Rehoboth Beach and Bethany Beach. Many motorists inspected the new road last Sunday.

Economy Act Is Fair To Vets

The American Veterans Association, after an investigation of the economy act, reports that "no actual hardship has been meted out to the war-disabled veterans," according to an Associated Press dispatch.

The organization has concerned itself, since the passage of the act by Congress, with the problems of veterans whose disabilities can be traced directly to war service.

The Association made public Monday the results of a questionnaire it sent to various government departments. The replies disclosed, the report said, that totally disabled veterans, who received excluding insurance, less than the average earnings of labor before the passage of the economy act, are receiving under the act, despite reductions, proportionately more than the recent earnings of labor.

Full data concerning the partly disabled veterans was not yet available, the report said.

The information on the totally disabled was given in reply to a question asking the amount they are receiving under the act and the amount they received previous to its passage, and requesting a comparison with the average earnings of labor.

The reply adds, "That the relationship of the average annual earnings to the amount of compensation received for total disability under the prior laws was less favorable than the relationship shown between the average earnings in effect at the time of the enactment of the economy act to the payment of pension under the recent legislation. When the receipt of insurance benefits is taken into consideration the present comparison is even more favorable."

New Antidote For Poison

An antidote for poisonous bichloride of mercury has been discovered by Dr. S. M. Rosenthal of the United States National Institute of Health, Science Service says. It has already been used successfully to treat a victim of bichloride of mercury poisoning. Cautious government scientists point out that the antidote is still in the experimental stage. However, results with animals poisoned by bichloride have been very good and the successful result with the first human case is considered very encouraging. The new antidote, said to be the first known for bichloride of mercury, is formaldehyde-sulfoxylate. It is given to the victim by mouth and injected into his veins simultaneously.

"I'M NO ANGEL"

"Keep your figure by eating" is the advice which Mae West, latest sex-appeal champion of the screen, whose new Paramount Picture, "I'm No Angel," comes on January 5 and 6 to the State Theatre, offers to all women who are tired of a restricted diet.

"Exercise will keep the figure curved and feminine," says Mae, "but food is essential for vitality. And in the long run, it's the vitality that counts."

Miss West's celebrated figure, which has set the fashion on two continents, is kept alluringly curvaceous by nine or ten hours sleep every night, exercising, fresh air and sunshine. She drinks a quart of milk a day, eats creamed food and potatoes and plenty of butter.

The well proportioned curves of Paramount's blond charmer play a particularly important role in "I'm No Angel" because they are encased in tights in keeping with her role of Tira, the diamond-decked circus siren, who charms men and lions, falls in love with a socially prominent club-

HOW TO HELP YOUR CHILD SUCCEED IN SCHOOL

Arrange the breakfast and lunch hours so that there is no rushing at home or to school.

Encourage punctuality and regular attendance, not permitting trifles to interfere.

See that the children are dressed simply, neatly, modestly and suitably in accordance with the weather.

Insist upon children under fourteen having at least ten hours' sleep.

Find out how much time should be devoted to home work, and see that it is done.

Provide a quiet place for home study, with good light and ventilation. Prevent interruptions as far as possible.

Show an interest in the children's school work, athletics and other activities.

Visit the classroom during American Education Week, and at other times, for a better understanding of conditions.

Do not criticize the teachers or school at all within the children's hearing. Always hear both sides of every question and ask the teacher about it.

Instill in the children habits of obedience and respect for authority.

Picture the school as a happy, desirable place, rather than as one children should dread.

Keep in mind that the school offers unlimited opportunities to those who take advantage of them, parents as well as pupils.

Plan to meet other parents in the school. It will help you understand your children better. Mothers should arouse the interest of fathers in the school activities and get their cooperation. If there is a parent-teacher association in your children's school, join it. If there is none, why not form one? Intelligent cooperation brings splendid results to all. MORE JOBS, HIGHER PAY UNDER CODE APPROVAL

Washington—Approval of 8 more codes brings the total number that have been signed by the President to 168, of which 35 have been during December. A rare exception during the depression has been the domestic freight forwarding industry, which increased employment 55 per cent from 1929 to July 1933, since which time under the Blue Eagle, workers have increased 18.4 per cent and pay rolls 14.7 per cent. The approved code consolidates these gains. Under the non-ferrous foundry code annual increase in pay rolls of $7,500,000 is anticipated, and about $250,000 under the code of the waxed-paper industry.

A LETTER TO THE PUBLIC

To the press of the State, advertising agencies and all those individuals and groups who so generously assisted us in trying to raise our 1934 budget through the sale of Christmas seals...

While the sale of seals was considerably less than in former years and far short of our goal, we have been encouraged during the past several days by the fact that a number of friends not only purchased their Christmas seals but have sent in extra contributions...

Very sincerely, Mrs. Frank G. Tallman, Chairman. CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE COMMITTEE.

TEETH AND HAIR

By Samuel M. Fink, D. D. S.

HAIR LIP AND CLEFT-PALATE

These abnormal conditions affecting the lips and roof of the mouth are generally hereditary deformities and are usually present at birth.

Hair lip is termed as notched or split lip. By cleft-palate I mean a congenital fissure of the hard and soft palates of the mouth...

The upper lip is commonly affected more so than the lower one. This split notch or so-called fissure may divide the lip in one or more places and may be deep or shallow.

The condition on the lip in most cases is associated with a cleft in the roof of the mouth. It is often an inherited condition, but other things may cause it as well...

This abnormal condition should be corrected very early in life and the best means is accomplished through surgery, otherwise this deformity, if continued, will affect the speech, the position and amount of teeth, the function of the facial muscles and harmony of the face.

P. S.—All Dental questions will be answered in this column by addressing Dr. Samuel M. Fink, Dentist, 162 West Main Street, Elkton, Maryland.

Inter-State Asks For Quick Strike Settlement

Requests That All Parties Arbitrate to Relieve Farmers' Hardships

The Inter-State Milk Producers' Association again made definite appeals to all parties concerned in the milk drivers' strike to settle their difficulties.

Hundreds of producers, both members and non-members of the Inter-State, have been made innocent sufferers through losing their markets when dealers closed receiving stations and shut off milk they couldn't move in the city.

Telegrams were dispatched from Inter-State offices on Saturday to local and national union officials, to the Philadelphia Milk Exchange and to leading Philadelphia milk distributors again calling their attention to the serious situation among the farmers.

The telegram follows: "The Inter-State Milk Producers' Association is gravely concerned over increasingly serious situation due to milk drivers' strike stop. We have no sufficient facts upon which to judge merits of controversy. However producers must be considered stop. We urgently request both parties to accept arbitration forthwith thereby ending turmoil in which producers are innocent sufferers."

The Delaware Safety Council declares that to the average motorist a skid is a skid but avoiding skidding is often a matter of appreciating the fact that there are five distinct kinds.

The braking skid is the most common. Next, and often a combination with the first, is the steering skid. The driver steers so carelessly or incompetently as to cause the back of the car to skid round to the front.

A power skid results when too much engine speed is applied to the car, the wheels spinning round without traction. Then, there is a traction skid which results when tires are too smooth or when roads are icy or oily.

A skid often overlooked is that produced by misalignment of the front wheels. Many cars that owners consider skidders could be made safe and comfortable through a half-hour's careful adjustment of the front wheel toe-in.

There are laws other than man-made laws which govern driving at this time of the year. Their requirements are far more rigid than any on the statute books and a penalty for violating them is often death—swift and sudden death. From this penalty there is no appeal.

When rain or snow is in the air and roads are covered with ice or frost, these conditions simply shout "Slow Down." There is usually no policeman on hand to make you obey but instead there is a ditch or a tree or a telegraph pole that will not only slow you down in a hurry but also pronounce immediate sentence upon you for violation of the weather laws.

Think it over, Mr. Motorist. Defy the weather laws and you are at the mercy of the elements.

PLAN NOW FOR HEALTHY PULLETS

By W. B. Krueck, Formerly Professor Animal Husbandry Purdue University

A very successful poultryman made the following statement, "The success of a poultryman is determined largely by his ability to grow thrifty, healthy, vigorous, and efficient producing pullets."

There is a lot of truth in this statement when properly analyzed. If pullets are not thrifty and healthy, the percentage of mortality during the year's production is going to be high.

If the pullets are not thrifty and healthy, those that die can not produce efficiently.

Have you realized every time a hen dies in your poultry flock she raises the cost of producing your dozen eggs? In some cases the cost per dozen has been as high as four to seven cents from mortality in laying flocks.

This cost can only be reduced by producing thrifty, healthy pullets with greater vigor and greater vitality. Clean ground seems to be a very important factor in producing these kind of pullets.

If pullets can be grown upon good blue grass sod they will be growing under what seems to be the most desirable conditions. Good blue grass sod seems to act as a wire floor and maintains vigor and vitality and eliminates diseases.

If the brooder houses on this sod can be moved whenever the sod becomes badly worn around them, even though they are not moved very far, it will help to fight low vitality and mortality in poultry flocks.

This is particularly an opportune time for the farmer and poultryman to give thought to a definite plan of range rotation for the growing of his pullets. With the desire, on the part of the United States Department of Agriculture, to reduce corn and wheat acreage, many farmers are wondering what they can do with these idle acres.

Sitting down now and planning their rotation in such a way that it will involve some good blue grass sod lots for the growing of thrifty, healthy pullets would be very desirable. At the present time the farmer is not busily engaged in field work and he can have plenty of time to map out a program upon his farm for the future production of thrifty, healthy, vigorous and profitable pullets.

The use of fruit juices for treating various illnesses has been recommended in many instances. Most persons are agreed that taking fruit juices may be of some benefit in colds and other infections.

Fruits are alkaline-ash forming and also supply various vitamins and minerals. They do not supply sufficient heat value so that they may make up the greater part of a person's diet. However, such fruits as figs, dates, bananas and pineapples may often supply more than one-half of the food requirement of an individual.

Most persons enjoy fruits not only because of their sugar but because of the presence of weak acids in them which give the fruits flavor. Fruits contain little salt, but are rich in vitamins. Tomatoes especially offer a valuable addition to the diet because of the vitamins that they contain.

The juices squeezed out of the larger fruits are poor in vitamins, because the vitamins are found chiefly in the seeds and outer covering. However, tomatoes and oranges are an exception to this rule. The juices of These fruits contain most of their vitamins. Sugars contained in fruit juices, according to Carl H. von Noorden, of Berlin, Germany, are quickly used by the body for supplying energy to the muscles.

When individuals have certain infections they have a loss of appetite. In such cases well-cooled fruit juices and sweet cider may serve to stimulate the appetite. A person confined to bed may often be given a quart of cider a day, which will supply him with about one-quarter of his total food requirement. These fruit juices also seem to have a beneficial effect on the action of the intestines.

But in order to get the best results the fruit juices should be taken early in the morning on an empty stomach. They also seem to have a good effect on the action of the kidneys, especially in persons who have fever, who are inclined to perspire a great deal. Fruit juices, by increasing the action of the kidneys, help to quickly get rid of waste products, and weakening sweats are then quickly stopped.

Fruit juices are good foods at any time and seem to be especially helpful in the treatment of certain diseases.—Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, former president American Public Health Association.

Wheat Farmers to Receive U. S. Cash Next Week

Over $38,575.00 will be distributed to 495 New Castle county farmer operators and land owners next week by Edward W. Cooch, Treasurer of the New Castle County Wheat Control Association. This money represents the initial payment of 20 cents per bushel being paid to the farmers who signed a contract with the Federal Government to reduce their wheat acreage for 1934 in an effort to bring better prices to the farmers of the entire county.

The 495 checks will be distributed at meetings to be held by Mr. Cooch, Eugene H. Shallcross, president of the organization, and County Agent Ed Willim, Jr., at five places in the county in the next few days.

The dates and places are as follows: Friday, January 5, County Agent's Office, 209 Wolf Hall, Newark, from 7.30 to 9.00 p. m.

Saturday, January 6, St. Georges, at the Trust Company, from 8.30 to 11.00 a. m. At Middletown Fire Hall from 12.01 to 3.00 p. m., and Townsend W. C. Money's Office, 3.30 to 5.00 p. m.

Monday and Tuesday, January 8 and 9, Wilmington at Mr. Cooch's Office, 600 Equitable Building, on Market street from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

It will be necessary that each man who gets a check sign a receipt for it, stated Mr. Cooch. For this reason the checks cannot be mailed to each grower.

Ivy Castle Holds Christmas Party

Last Saturday night, December 30, Ivy Castle, No. 23, Knights of Golden Eagle, held a Christmas party. The object of the party was to promote a better and more active fraternal spirit among the members. Each member was requested to bring a package containing some small gift, no name being on the package, by so doing each member present received a gift. Plenty of laughs and a jolly good time resulted.

There was also an initiation. Next Saturday night, January 6, there will be another initiation.

A. D. COBB, ASSISTANT DIRECTOR, MAKES REPORT ON EXTENSION WORK

The best record ever made by the corps of extension workers of the University of Delaware, whose efforts annually bring greater happiness and wealth into the rural sections of the State, is revealed in the report of the assistant director, Alexander D. Cobb, submitted to the Federal government, in cooperation with which the agents operate.

In spite of unfavorable conditions imposed by financial stringency and the most severe storm in years, these agricultural experts, capably guided, for the most part, by Mr. Cobb, have forged ahead and achieved definite results. At one period in the year's work covered in the report the agents spent sixteen and eighteen hours a day in spreading modern methods and Federal "agricultural propaganda" in every hamlet in Delaware. In some cases less than a handful of farmers attended their meetings and in others there were hundreds.

Dean C. A. McCue, of the Agricultural School of the University, is director of extension, but especially in connection with the wheat production campaign was he forced, by other duties, to leave much of the work to his assistant. Mr. Cobb visited all portions of the State, and went to Chicago in pursuance of his duties, and personally supervised the work which is bringing Delaware farmers a Federal bonus of approximately $125,000.

Cobb Kept Busy

He handled the publicity attendant upon the wheat reduction campaign, at the same time carrying on the regular work connected with publicity for the 4-H Club Short Course, State Corn and Poultry Shows, National 4-H Club Camp, National 4-H Radio Programs, 4-H Club Exhibits and Outlook material.

During the year the assistant director spent 124 days in the field and 176 in the office. This number of days in the field is about 30 per cent greater than for the preceding year; 26 of the field days were spent at five out-of-State conferences.

The following statistical summary included in the report shows the activities of all the agents for the year: 4-H Club agents worked in 49 and county agents in 36 communities. Of 425 volunteer leaders 250 were under the county agents; 1923 boys and girls were enrolled in 133 clubs; 4-H agents made 1862, and county agents, 1820 farm and home visits, totaling 3682 calls as contrasted with 2570 for the preceding year. There was an increase in the number of calls made at the offices of the agents of about 45 per cent. Three-fourths of these visits were to the county agents. Members of both staffs spent a total of 452 days in the office and 1312 in the field.

Much Propaganda Issued

One hundred of the 292 news articles prepared were by the 4-H workers. The 6618 personal letters written by the six agents were almost a thousand more than in 1932; 265 circular letters were prepared in the 267 working days. County agents, distributing 56,726 bulletins to the 1132 by the 4-H agents, were largely responsible for the increase of 36,664 over the year 1933. The 1185 meetings held exceeded the total for 1932 by more than 20 per cent; 7156 more, or 33,323 persons, attended the meetings of both groups.

For a three months period beginning in July the county agents devoted their time almost exclusively to the wheat program, making a fine record in this enterprise; 691 signers were obtained in the State and practically all the wheat growing farmers were brought in line to give the crop curtailment campaign their moral support. A typical example of the type of work the agricultural scientists are doing is found in the following extract from Mr. Cobb's report, dealing with corn: "Agents report 3,780 bushels of corn treated with mercuric rust to control rot and other seed borne diseases. Continued use of this type of treatment by farmers indicates that the quality and quantity of the corn grown is improved by this treatment. All costs of production records were abandoned because of storm (August) damage."

This enviable record was made in the face of expected Federal limitations and economies which, it was expected at the beginning of the year, might cost some of the agents their jobs.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my dear son, Ledon E. Harrigan, who passed away January 5, 1933.

The blow was hard,
The loss severe,
To part with one
I loved so dear.

The trail was bitter,
I cannot complain,
But hope in Heaven
To meet again.

Heartbroken Mother.
