

be quite different from S.B. 465. Failure of this bill to become law does not foreclose the General Assembly's revisiting this issue next session. Enactment of the bill, on the other hand, is not readily open to reversal.

Independent of the fact that S.B. 465 interferes with reaching a negotiated settlement of on-going litigation, the bill suffers from imprecise drafting that expands the application of the legislation far beyond that necessary to effect the outcome intended by taxpayer. For example, the purpose of the bill was to exclude from the gross receipts tax exchanges of like commodities occurring for the convenience of the businesses and their customers. In fact, however, the bill extends the exemption to barter. Under S.B. 465, if a manufacturer sold its finished products to a distributor for money, the sale would be subject to the gross receipts tax, but if it traded the finished product for a raw materials, there would be no tax. Aside from the fact that the difference in outcomes is unjustified, it could result in a change in marketplace behavior and an unintended erosion in the wholesaler tax base.

Last, the bill's effective date is stated to be July 1, 1996. This is vague. Is it intended that the exemption be effective only for transactions occurring on or after July 1, 1996? Or does it de-authorize the State, as of July 1, 1996, from assessing tax on the transactions exempted by this bill? The problem with the effective date as contained in the bill is that it is impossible to determine the intent and thus, particularly as litigation is already on-going with regard to this issue, it potentially and, in some instances, unassessed.

For all the foregoing reasons, I am returning S.B. 465 to you without my signature.

Sincerely,

(Signed)

Thomas R. Carper
