College Editors to Meet in Newark

Delaware Men Bring Next Conference Here

The Seventh Semi-Annual Conference of the Inter-Collegiate Newspaper Association of the Middle Atlantic States will be held at the University of Delaware, as a result of the efforts of W. D. Smith and W. F. P. Jacobs. The conference date has not been definitely announced, but will be held between the first and fifteenth of May, 1922. It is the hope of the local student editors to secure several prominent journalists of the East to address the twenty delegates representing fourteen college papers. Richard Slocum, editor of the Swarthmore "Phoenix" will preside at the meeting, which covers two days of discussion of the purpose and possibilities of the college newspaper. During the conference last week, expressions for moves to secure "Bob" Maxwell, of the Public Ledger staff, and E. A. Van Valkenburg, editor of the Philadelphia North American, were heard.

Narrow Escape from Death; Auto Smashed by Train

Joseph Hill and several occupants of his car narrowly escaped death when an express train crashed into the automobile at Elkton Road and the Northeast Road, in Elkton, Saturday evening. None of the persons were injured, but the car was scattered in shreds of mangled steel about the crossing. The accident occurred while the owner was returning to his home after a Sunday motor trip. Good fortune alone saved the men who were tossed into the road and got off with a few slight scratches.

Four Horsemen at Elkton

The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, which has played to record houses in the Eastern cities, has been secured by the Elkton Opera House for Friday and Saturday of this week. Several Newarkers are planning to witness the performance.

NEW BUILDING FOR COLLEGE CAMPUS

A $40,000 Fraternity House to be Erected in the Spring

At a dignified Saturday evening in the home of the local chapter of the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity the building committee presented complete plans for the proposed new home to be erected on the campus of the University of Delaware next year. About seventy-five members of the active and alumni chapters attended the dinner.

The plans drawn under the supervision of Day & Klauder, supervising architects of the University, call for a fire proof, three story building costing $40,000, and built in keeping with the style of the new buildings on the campus. The basement will be divided into a meeting room, a billiard room and a serving room. On the first floor there will be a lounge room, a library and several study rooms. The second floor will contain sleeping quarters, study and dressing rooms. The third floor, which will run only about one-third the length of the building, will be devoted entirely to sleeping quarters. The building will be connected directly with the University heating and water systems, arrangements having been made to avoid the necessity for a separate heating system.

William M. Francis, chairman of the committee, announced that the building as planned is equal to the best fraternity houses in the country and will be a structure of which the members of the fraternity, students of the University and citizens of the state will be proud.

New Century Club to Have Rummage Sale

A rummage sale will be held in the New Century Club Building on Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons and evenings of next week. The proceeds are for the benefit of the building fund. If persons having rummage will kindly call either 40 or 216 it will be collected from the various places.

E. N. Vallandigham Writes Book on Peninsula

To Give Spirit of People and Institutions

J. B. Lippincott Company, of Philadelphia, will publish next fall an illustrated volume on Delaware and the Eastern Shore by E. N. Vallandigham. The book is not to be an attempt at a history of the Peninsula, though it will contain historical matter. Nor is it intended to advertise persons, places or business activities, though it will deal with topics closely related to all these matters. It is intended first of all to present as nearly as may be the spirit and tradition of the Peninsula, to picture the people historically, as they are today, as they may possibly be in the future. There will be chapters dealing broadly with history, geography, topography, climate, the great tidal waters and their tributaries, the basic industries of both land and waters, Mason and Dixon Line, the Welsh Tract and the Labodist Community, Bohemia Manor, voyages on the Chesapeake and its rivers, the Island Communities, Ships and Shipping, yachting, hunting and fishing, Education, the humors of politics but not the asperities of politics, Wilmington, the country towns and other communities, family history and tradition with anecdotic illustration, the churches and the spread of various denominations over the Peninsula, communications and the developments resulting from the use of motor vehicles on land and water, from improved highways, the better organization of business, and the quickened spirit of a modernized people.

The author hopes not only to make such a book as will attract local interest but also such as shall make strangers understand why the inhabitants love their little land. To this end the distinctive beauty of the hill country about Newark, the quieter regions southward of the forests and tidal waters that lend charm to lower Kent, Sussex and Eastern Shore clear down to Cape Charles will be treated, as the author hopes, in such fashion, as to interest and convince the reader.

About 50 pictures will be used to liven the text and these will be selected from 150 to 200 photographs taken in all parts of the Peninsula and upon its waters.

The book will have about 300 pages and will probably retail for $5.00. There will be a decorative, symbolic cover design to be drawn by E. S. Holloway whose boyhood was passed in Newark.

Plan Educational Exhibit

Final arrangements have been made to hold an educational exhibit at Dover, November 10, 11 and 12, at the time of the meeting of the State Teachers' Association. Miss Jenkins of the State Department office, has been put in charge of arranging the exhibit.

State Director for Vocational Education, Mr. R. W. Heim, is co-operating to the end that the vocational work carried on in the State will also be shown. The agricultural exhibit from the departments of the sixteen different high schools will be under the direction of Mr. L. C. Armstrong, State Supervisor for Agriculture; the Home Economics from the twenty-three high schools under Miss Jennie R. Bear, State Supervisor for Home Economics, and the Trade and Industrial exhibit under Mr. A. B. Anderson, State Supervisor for Trades and Industries.

Mackey Goes to Buffalo

Frank Mackey who recently accepted the offer of Superintendent of the large Paper Fibre Plant just being completed by J. H. Spalding & Son near Buffalo, left Monday for his new post.

This is one of the five largest plants in the country, and the call to Newark is quite a compliment to young Mackey. He learned the business at the American Vulcanized Plant here. His experience and thorough knowledge of the process of manufacture of paper for fibre purposes has given him a national position in this line. Friends gave him a big send-off and unless homesickness attacks him, he is headed for big things.

SUPPORT THE LIBRARY

"All that mankind has done, thought, gained or been--it is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of books."

"All the known world, excepting only savage nations, is governed by books."

"The true University of these days is a collection of books."

"Churches reflect the morals of a community; Industries, the business; Schools, the intellectual life; and the Library reflects them all."

Saulsbury in Arms Conference

Former Senator Named on Advisory Board

Former Senator Willard Saulsbury of Delaware who was President pro tem of the Senate during the war was appointed yesterday by the President as a member of the Advisory Board to the American Delegation to the Arms Conference. There are twenty-one members of the Board, most of them chosen by virtue of position and experience in questions likely to be presented. Such men as Hoover of the Cabinet, Pershing of the Army, Gompers of Labor, Roosevelt of the Navy are represented. There will be four women members representing various sections and interests. It is interesting to note that many of those appointed are especially familiar with Eastern problems. Yet at the same time, the President has seemingly selected the Board as representing not only the various sections and interests but also the various schools of thought as reflected in public sentiment.

Playhouse to Reopen

The Playhouse, Wilmington, which has been closed for several weeks, will re-open on November 14 under the management of Earl G. Finney.

Three of the best known stars on the American stage are booked. The first production, on the night of the 14th, will be William Gillette in a new play, "The Rainmaker." This piece was written by Mr. Gillette. After a three-day stand here it will proceed to New York.

Following this piece, Elsie Janis is booked to appear in her new musical revue, "The New Attack." This production will also remain for three days.

Ethel Barymore will be the next star to appear, coming here for a three-day stay, beginning November 21. Her starring vehicle is "Del-classe," now playing at the Hollis Theatre, Boston.

Manager Finney intends to follow these sterling productions with others headed by stars of equal magnitude.

Prominent speakers have been secured and an excellent program arranged. An appeal has been made through the Jurisdiction to have a good attendance thereby aiding in perpetuating the memory of this great American and Mason.

Sypherd Called to California

To Deliver Course of Lectures on Bible

Both interesting and noteworthy in connection with the issuance of "The English Bible" by Dr. Sypherd is his call to the University of California as lecturer at the Summer School next Summer. He has been invited to deliver a course of lectures on "Literary study of the Bible," and also a course on "English in Business Practice." Complimentary as it is to Dr. Sypherd, it will add to the prestige of the local institution. One gets an idea of the scope of the work by last year's catalogue. There were over 200 members in the Summer School Faculty, with an enrollment of 4009 students, 2044 being teachers. Forty-four states and twenty-one foreign countries were represented last year. The session continues for six weeks.

Trades and Industry Schools New Supervisor Arrives

Mr. A. B. Anderson, formerly State Supervisor for Trades and Industries of New Mexico, who has been appointed State Supervisor for Trades and Industries in Delaware, has arrived in Delaware to take up his duties which will begin November 1st. Mr. Anderson succeeds Mr. Benj. W. Johnson, who resigned several months ago to accept a Teacher Training position in the University of California, Berkeley, California.

State Director Heim is holding conferences daily with Mr. Anderson in order to go over the work carried on in Delaware thus far.

New Residents Move Into Homes

James Hastings of the Home Drug Store and Manager Geddes of the Delaware Ledger are moving into the houses on Kells Avenue just completed by Wollaston.

Contractor Griffin is coming along nicely with the Chapman home on Welsh Lane.

No New Money for Xmas

In response to a letter as to the possibility of securing new coin for distribution during the Christmas season, the U. S. Treasury Department has issued the following letter:

"You are informed that it is the uniform policy of the Treasury not to furnish new coin of any denomination so long as the supply of circulated coin with the mints and Federal Reserve banks is sufficient to meet commercial demands, in view of the fact that the demand for new coin is based on sentiment rather than utility."

"It is not probable, therefore, that there will be an distribution of new coin from the mints for holiday purposes."

Appeal to Delaware School Auxiliary

Board of Education Handicapped for Room and Equipment

That conditions at the Public Schools are bad is seriously admitted by all who are familiar with them. But business depression prevented the sale of bonds last spring and the idea of building was abandoned for the time. By this delay, the time of the offer of the School Auxiliary Association to supplement the amount raised expired.

But this school year found conditions still worse. The Board was forced to make provisions for additional pupils and as a make-shift have done remarkably well. But the Board realizes that this relief is only temporary. So at the last meeting, the Superintendent was instructed to write Director Odell of the School Auxiliary to ask if the offer would under favorable circumstances be renewed.

It is probable that a reply will be made by the time of the next regular meeting.

Parent-Teachers to Meet

The Alpha Unit of the Delaware State Parent-Teacher Association will hold its regular meeting in the High School Building on Thursday evening, November 3rd, at 8 o'clock. There will be an election of officers.

After the Lodge closed those present partook of a repast, which they all seemed to enjoy to their utmost ability.

Report of New Century Club

The New Century Club held its regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon. It was one of the largest of the year and the program one of the most enjoyable.

Miss Rohr's interpretation of "Spreading the News," one of Lady Gregory's plays, was a delight to the audience. A musical program followed in charge of Miss Duffy, chairman of music. Mr. Johnson Rowan sang, "Tell Me Little Gypsy," Miss Harriet Wilson in costume, was the ideal Gypsy fortune teller. "Legend of the Rose," from the Follies, was sung by Mrs. J. Pearce Cann. Miss Rebecca Cann, daughter of Mrs. J. Pearce Cann, gave some very graceful dancing in the chorus given by the Choral Society.

The usual social hour followed at which tea and cake was served.

Building Association Makes Report

Interesting Financial Statement

At the meeting of the Newark Building and Loan Association held last evening at the Newark Trust Company, 322 shares Series No. 29 were declared matured. The value was $64,400, of which $43,710 was paid in cash and a balance of $20,690 of cancelled obligations.

This Association without ostentation or flurry is responsible for much of the growth and development of Newark. Not general known, but this organization is 54 years old and is the second largest Building and Loan Association in the State. In its business and loans, the record is remarkable. A Banker and Building and Loan man from down State, an authority on the history of Delaware finances, was heard recently to say that the record of the local Association was "unique and its record could not be surpassed."

Speed Artists Being Watched

According to confidential information, from an authorized source, Newark's speedboys in their fast automobiles are warned to beware. For a "Vigilance Committee" for the suppression of speeders who are endangering the lives of the citizens has been organized. This "subrosa" organization requires its members to report the license number of the speeding automobiles. The offending driver will be warned at his first offense, and prosecuted upon the second violation of the traffic regulations. This organization was not known to have existed until recently, but it is understood that several cases of first warnings have been made.

THE GREATEST SOLDIER SINCE NAPOLEON VISITS AMERICA

Foch Sees Doughboys at Home

Marshal Foch is here. America is giving her welcome to "the greatest Frenchman since Lafayette and the greatest soldier since Napoleon." It was a deep and true appreciation of the soldier who led the Allied Armies to victory in 1918 that inspired the rousing greetings in New York and Washington last week. It is a new appreciation of the man that makes us increase our tribute to so great and welcome guest, for we find that like most truly great men, he is simple, and human, and approachable. Says one editor, "In 1918 he won the war. In 1921 he wins the hearts of the American people."

From a writer who got close to him and heard him talk to friends in Washington comes the following:

Those who are fortunate to get near him to look into his eyes and feel the clasp of his hand, recognize in him an overwhelming spiritual force. A man who has achieved the most materialistic thing the world has accomplished since Charles Martel—the preservation of human liberty at the cannon's mouth, through stress of pain and labor, through sacrifice of blood and wealth, brought to that stupendous task a mind as spiritual as Joan of Arc's. In his way of living he is as temperate as a priest. He rises at 7, works like a horse, sleeps like a child. At 70 he is just arrived at the prime of life.

He has come to America to see in their homely walks of life the splendid men from the farms and factories of America who made the soldiers of Pershing's magnificent army, an army of which Foch is as proud as he is of his own flesh and blood for men who wore the khaki of Uncle Sam 3,000 miles away from home were Foch's boys, Marshal Foch feels that in the very blood of his veins. There is no doubt of this in the minds of those who were so fortunate as to have seen him at the crisis of the war in the midst of Americans.

At the convention of the American Legion at the convention of the American Legion at Kansas City and may also act as advisor to the French delegation at the Arms Conference in Washington. Meanwhile he wants to visit Yale, Harvard, and Princeton, and see the big games. At Yale a degree of doctor of laws will be conferred upon him at a special ceremony.

AMERICA'S MAKING

Lane's Idea Being Carried Out

The contributions of every race of people who have had anything to do with the development of America through the 300 years of its history, have been woven into one of the world's greatest historic exhibits. The idea was that of the late Franklin K. Lane, and it has been worked out by 32 racial groups and all the educational interests in New York City. During this week and next, the visitor to New York will have the opportunity to learn in a few hours, or to review in that time, the history of America in all its significant developments.

Exhibits are arranged throughout the building of the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, by pictures, models and living figures; by pageant, tableaux, historic objects, telling the story of America's growth in government, art, science, industry, education, and social life. The great hall of the armory by reconstructed interior design and decoration, is arranged as a vast temple, with vaulted roof, stately pillars and altar fires. Liberty, Opportunity, Toleration, and Co-operation; Strength, Protection, Achievement, and Victorious Search for Knowledge, are the themes of the symbolic decoration.

In chronological order, according to the time of migration, the space in the temple is divided into sections for the exhibits of the 32 racial groups which have had a significant part in the development of this country.

England will illustrate her contributions to the town meeting and fundamentals of law by curious silhouettes, celebrated old Knickerbocker families have loaned their family relics for the Dutch exhibition which shows a sitting room in New Amsterdam with a view of old New York through the window. The Welsh will show their part in opening the tin, coal, and iron mines of Pennsylvania, while the Scotch, who rejoice in claiming Carnegie and Edison, will not hide the lights of their other distinguished kinsmen under a bushel. The Hispanic stall will illustrate the growth of trade between the American and Spanish explorations in the Southwest. The Irish are using a miniature mountain and lake upon which to show their achievements and prowess, and the French will revel in a brilliant representation of New Orleans for their part.

And so the exhibition continues, with the Greeks enterprisingly illustrating their sponge fisheries with a real tank and diver, the Czechoslovaks showing pearl fisheries and pottery making, the Danes presiding over the dairy and the Icelanders sturdy explorers. The Syrians will be gay in the midst of Turkish delight, pistachio nuts, kimonas, shawls, and embroideries, and the Italians share their pride between objects of art and subway laborers.

Thousands of people will take part in the various exhibits, pageants, and historic presentations. Distinguished visitors from many of the countries, whose emigrants to America will display their achievements, are expected to attend the exhibition. Some of these are delegates to the Arms Conference at Washington.

As a wonderful and practical form of education and as a demonstration and stimulus for a United America, those who have seen the preliminary exhibits, believe that "America's Making" will far outdistance even the dreams of so gifted a friend of aliens as Franklin K. Lane.

Flags of the Nations Invited to the Arms Conference Will Greet Our Distinguished Foreign Guests

To greet the foreign visitor during the Arms Conference, with the flag of his country displayed on both public and private buildings, will be an act of courtesy which communities along the line of travel of these guests can well display. As many of the distinguished foreigners will travel through the Eastern part of the United States, they will have a glimpse at least of Delaware, passing through Wilmington and Newark—coming and going between the larger cities. Whether they are seen or not by our guests, we can fly flags in their honor, and help to stimulate an active interest in all that pertains to the Conference of Nations at Washington for Limitation of Armaments.

New Federal Aid to Increase Farm Markets

One of the purposes of the recent Act of Congress to expand the powers of the War Finance Corporation was financing the export of surplus farm products. Our farmers raise more wheat, corn, cotton, beef, ham, and other foods than the American people can consume. They must therefore sell these things abroad. Just now, however, the foreign buyers have no ready money. The American farmer cannot wait six months to be paid, hence a deadlock. This has been the situation since the war. During the war, this country bought much of the farmer's surplus products for feeding our own army, and the balance of exported farm products were in demand by the countries which paid for them at once out of money raised or borrowed for the purpose.

Since the foreign countries have no money now for this purpose, and their buyers can not pay cash, American agricultural interests, through their representatives in Congress, urged that the Federal government become the banker, in effect, to advance to American farmers the sale-price of crops sold abroad, and collect this amount later from the foreign buyers, when they are able to pay. The argument is that Uncle Sam can afford to be out of the money, while the farmers can't, and the foreign buyer is dependable if he can only have time to sell enough of the wheat or cotton to pay the cost of the consignment.

The bill passed Congress and the War Finance Corporation has a large balance in the Treasury to be used if needed, for agricultural credits. Opposition to the measure was raised on the ground that the Federal government should not aid some classes of citizens and not others. If the farmer's exports could be financed, why not miner's and manufacturer's. There was opposition also to having the Federal government "mix in business" that should be private enterprise. The farmers' interests answered that they suffered most from conditions of trade resulting from the war—and that the moving of agricultural products aided all other business. Private concerns could not be induced to act as bankers for marketing crops abroad. Herbert Hoover and others are still urging the development of private facilities for financing the foreign trade of American farmers. Meanwhile the experiment of Federal financing will be tried, and the farmer is the gainer in having two groups of interests at work in his behalf.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR SPEAKS TO STUDENTS

Urges Americans to Understand and Watch Policies of Other Nations

Saying that the voters were the real rulers in a democratic country, the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, who recently spoke in North Carolina, made a strong plea for better understanding of international problems by the people. He was addressing the Scottish Society of America at the Flora McDonald College for Women, where he made a strong appeal to the students. He said the colleges were the guardians of civilization and the makers of stable world peace.

No nation can stand alone, declared the Ambassador, because the welfare of one involves the welfare of the other; the price of peace between great nations today is eternal vigilance over the policies adopted by these nations; and vigilance can only be maintained by educating the people to the understanding of these policies. He added that the United States and Great Britain are bound by ties of trade, by ties of blood, and by ties of thought, and these governments cannot get away from international relations.

Sir Auckland Geddes expects that much good will come from the Armament Conference which will bring many nations into closer understanding with America.

Grove of Elms Planted At Lincoln Memorial Will Honor Soldier Dead

It has been decided that the approach to the Lincoln Memorial, at Washington will be bordered by 700 American elms, each one a memorial for a soldier killed in the World War. It is understood that opportunity will be given to relatives of heroes of the war, who are interested in this project, to secure a tree to the memory of a soldier. The trees will cost about $10 and will bear a small plate with the dead hero's army number. In one of the rooms of the Lincoln Memorial, the record of all heroes, whose death is commemorated by a tree, will be kept as the Lincoln Memorial Roll of Honor.

Neighbors

Your telephone service is in the hands of your neighbors.

The men and women who build and operate the telephone lines are a part of this community. They are interested in business improvement and civic betterment because they know the telephone industry must prosper or decline as the community improves or retrogrades.

Like "the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker," the members of the Bell System Family serve a common need. They understand your telephone requirements and they have the training and the equipment necessary to give you the right kind of service.

Whether it be to put the people of this vicinity in touch with each other, or in communication with points from 35 to 3,500 miles distant, this organization is on the alert day and night.

ANOTHER DAD LETTER

October 31, 1921.

Dearest Dad:

I tried to write you Sunday afternoon, but it was impossible at that time. Most of the girls in our hall were in Betty's room having a song service. I kept at my writing for a moment or two, then gave up, took my comb and went in to join the orchestra which was composed of a mandolin, guitar and a tin cake box (empty by that time.)

We are all feeling lazy here after the excitement of Saturday. Saturday we celebrated the seventh anniversary of the college. This year was the nicest day of its kind that I've known. At two-thirty the whole college assembled by classes and marched to the spot on the campus which the Sophomores had chosen to plant their tree, an oak. Here, after the tree planting, Florence Phillips, the Junior President, presented the Freshmen with their color, the Red that had been left for them by the Seniors of last year. Just as the Sub-Captain of the Freshmen receive the color, a red sash, the whole Class of '25 let go their sashes which they had rolled in their hands. Then the yards of red fluttered about their white dresses, making a pretty picture.

Afterwards the exercises were continued at Wolf Hall. Mrs. Schermerhorn, the Second Vice-President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke. She is from Orange, New Jersey, and brought to our young college the story of an even younger one, the Women's College of New Jersey, opened in 1918. The thoughts she left with us were centered around three words, Faith, Hope and Charity. Let us have faith in ourselves and what we are doing, hope for the best in us all, and charity toward all.

After these exercises were over we rushed up to see the end of a football game between Washington College and Delaware. 'Twas a walk away for Delaware. From that time till seven-thirty I was in a mad scramble to finish my costume, press it, and dress for the dance. It's lots of fun to give a dance every now and then just to have the joy of entertaining, especially when the Social Committee can plan such a one as this was. The Armory never looked better either. This we owe to the High School boys who had given a party there Friday night, and had banked the big bare rafters with great branches of autumnal shaded leaves.

Our true All Saints Eve celebration came tonight in the dining room. The Dramatic Club had planned a Ghost Party, but as Dean Robinson said, even a Junior had to withdraw her plans when the Sophomores insisted they wanted to celebrate. And their celebration was a secret known only among themselves. We found the dining room looking like a picturesque corn field with shocks in all the corners, corn tassels waving from each table, and witches scattered here and there on the walls. All we needed was a moon for we had the black clouds (negro help) scurrying around. In a hushed air of expectancy a black draped coffin was brought in by the Sophs, accompanied by a weird funeral march, and a sonorous chant. This chant, a parody on "Friends, Romans, Countrymen," from Julius Caesar, was wailed out by Edna Cranston in a voice that would put Hamlet's ghost to shame. The substance of it was that the Freshmen were to come forward and place their bibs, the long worn and hated insignia, in the grave. A lusty shout went up from the "Babies," and a hasty exit of bibs followed. Then Dr. Hullahen, the Dean, the President of Students, the Presidents of the Classes all told us how well they thought the new idea of entertaining instead of tormenting the Freshmen had been carried out by the Class of '24. It really is a splendid idea and with a year or two in which to perfect it, it will be a thousand times better than the old institution of hazing was.

So far this sounds as if all we do here is play, but not at all. Just this morning we were set to serious thinking by former Professor Short. He spoke to us on the value of an education, and the subject, though old, was talked about in a new light. True to his former profession he gave us figures of all kinds, for instance that seventy-three percent of the people in a Who's Who of five years ago were college graduates. He had statistics too that proved the value in dollars and cents. The average earning capacity of a college graduate is six hundred dollars more per annum than that of a high school graduate. There are several successful business men like Henry Ford, who are now belittling the value of college training. Mr. Short says it is up to us to be able to confute their arguments. I only hope we will all be examples of that value, thus proving our point.

Yours,
ROSEMARY.FINDS SOLONS UNLEARNED*Professor Says Half of State Legislators Did Not Finish Grades

Less than half of the members of the State legislatures throughout the United States have had complete common school educations, declared Prof. Allen Johnson, of Yale, before the school of citizenship of the Connecticut League of Women Voters, held recently.

"Studies of State legislatures," he said, "show that on the average only 15 per cent of our representatives have had a college education, and, what is worse, not 50 per cent have enjoyed a full common school education. Farmers constitute one-third of our State legislatures, lawyers one-fourth and business men a fifth. Less than half have been in contact with the conditions which must be their chief concern in law-making."

Homing Pigeon Working for Uncle Sam

In both the Army and Navy air service, the carrier pigeon has been adopted as a regular messenger for Uncle Sam. The pigeons have their daily regime and go on trips and expeditions just as if they were "regulars." The meals, bath, exercise and training of the pigeons are all carefully planned and attended to. Several of them are taken on every trip, for when other means of sending for help fail, messages can be put into a small tube attached to the pigeon's leg, and away he goes straight back to the Army or Navy station which is home to him. No aviator can rival the pigeon's sense of direction and no invention of man has proved as dependable as the pigeon in many emergencies.

Air patrolmen in the U. S. Forest Conservation work also use the homing pigeon to carry back calls for more help when forest fires are discovered. The pigeons and the air pilots are great friends and no other mascot is needed when the gentle messenger goes along.

Notes for Autoists:Tags and Lights

License tags for 1922 will be issued commencing November 1, 1921. Automobile registration numbers held by the owners during the year 1921 will be issued for 1922 during the month of November, beginning December 1, automobile registrations will be issued to all applicants, but no special numbers granted. Automobileists are requested to make applications early in order to assist the Motor Vehicle Department and save any trouble that might be caused by delay in the mails. All applicants are required to present title certificate to the notary in making application for re-registration, as no car will be registered unless title number is given.

A list of approved lighting devices is being prepared by the Secretary of State as the law requires. The completion of this list is being delayed by the failure of many manufacturers to file the proper certificate.

Lenses approved at present include Alfeco, Bausch & Lomb, Benzer, Holophane, Liberty, Macbeth, McKee Type D, McKee Type L, Onlee, Patterson, Saferlite and Universal.

Realizing that there are many other standard lenses entitled to approval which are carried by many Delaware cars and that it would work a hardship on the owners of these cars to compel the substitution of another lighting device, enforcement of this section of the law will be delayed for a reasonable length of time.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

"That season has come when, alike in pursuance of a devout people's time-honored custom and in grateful recognition of favoring national fortunes, it is proper that the President should summon the nation to a day of devotion, of thanksgiving for blessings bestowed, and of prayer for guidance in modes of life that may deserve continuance of divine favor.

"Foremost among our blessings is the return of peace, and the approach to normal ways again. The year has brought us again into relations of amity with all nations, after a long period of struggle and turbulence. In thankfulness, therefore, we may well unite in the hope that Providence will vouchsafe approval to the things we have done, the aims which have guided us, the aspirations which have inspired us. We shall be prospered as we shall deserve prosperity, seeking not alone for the material things, but for those of the spirit as well; earnestly trying to help others; asking, before all else, the privilege of service. As we render thanks anew for the exaltation which came to us, we may fittingly petition that moderation and wisdom shall be granted to rest upon all who are in authority, in the tasks they must discharge. Their hands will be steadied, their purposes strengthened, in answer to our prayers.

"Ours has been a favored nation in the bounty which God has bestowed upon it. The great trial of humanity, though indeed we bore our part as well as we were able, left us comparatively little scarred. It is for us to recognize that we have been thus favored, and when we gather at our altars to offer up thanks, we will do well to pledge, in humanity and all sincerity, our purpose to prove deserving. We have been raised up and preserved in national power and consequence, as part of a plan whose wisdom we cannot question. Thus believing, we can do no less than hold our nation the willing instrument of the Providence which has so wonderfully favored us. Opportunity for very great service awaits us if we shall prove equal to it. Let our prayers be raised, for direction in the right paths. Under God, our responsibility is great; to our own first, to all men afterward; to all mankind in God's own justice.

"Now, therefore, I, Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November, to be observed by the people as a day of thanksgiving, devotion and prayer; urging that at their hearthstones and their altars they will give thanks for all that has been rendered unto them, and will pray for a continuance of the divine fortune which has been showered so generously upon this nation."

Support the Library

While there are no complete returns, the Library Drive seems to be meeting with success. The campaign will continue through this week and those in charge feel encouraged at the response being made.

It would be an interesting study in Social Science to see what section or profession of the town responds most liberally. Naturally one would suppose that those who used books most, knew and appreciated their value, would be the ones most enthusiastic in the building up of a public library. That really those who needed the library least would support it most. There are many residents of Newark, perhaps our greatest readers, who do not belong to the library. They either buy or secure elsewhere their reading. But that in no way excludes them from participation in the drive. To them should come the greatest appeal. To those who know books and love them, comes the greatest responsibility in making available reading for those not yet so appreciative of their beauty and worth. So to those who do not need nor desire the benefits of membership, an appeal is made for funds to better equip the library for those who have no other access.

Former Newark Boy Makes Name for Himself As Art Director to Philadelphia Publisher

Edward S. Holloway, whom many Newarkers remember as a boy and youth, has made a place of interest and importance for himself with the Publishing House of J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. Mr. Holloway came to Newark very young, when his father, the Rev. Charles H. Holloway, became Professor of Languages and Mathematics at Newark Academy. The son left Newark early to undertake a business life, but being attracted by Art, studied two or three years of nights at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, and developed into a Landscape and Marine painter and exhibited his work in many galleries. Being also a lover of books he began designing book covers for the Lippincotts, and eventually became Art Director for this Company, a post that he still holds. He also often makes arrangements with authors for the issuing of their books through the Lippincotts, and plans and superintends the preparation of some of the handsomest publications of the House. As an authority on interior decoration he became joint author with H. D. Eberlein and Abbot McClure of an elaborate book entitled "The Practical Book of Interior Decoration," with 300 illustrations. The book has been widely sold not only in America, but in England, Australia, and Japan. Mr. Holloway is a contributor to "The House Beautiful" and to "Good Furniture." He is now finishing a volume on the furnishing of small premises to be published next year by the Lippincotts. He continues painting and regards that as a permanent and especially congenial part of his life work. Mr. Holloway's father is living at the age of 90.

MORE ROADS IN PROSPECT

Congress Solving Unemployment Problem

The action of the House of Representatives at Washington yesterday in adopting the conference report on the federal aid roads bills means the revival of road construction in Delaware. The adoption of the conference report means that $365,625 will soon be available for road construction in the State.

As agreed upon in conference and approved without a recorded vote the road bill appropriates $75,000,000 from the treasury to be matched by a like sum from the several states. Of this amount $25,000,000 will become available January 1 next.

The conference report said: "It was deemed wise on account of the unemployment situation throughout the country and the fact that it is a favorable time to secure contracts for the construction of roads at greatly reduced costs."

Wilmington Invites Suburban Shoppers

Wilmington merchants will inaugurate, under the auspices of the Mercantile Section of the Chamber of Commerce, a series of Suburban Shopping Days, commencing with the initial event Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 7, 8 and 9. All over the Delmarva Peninsula the purchasing public has learned to anticipate and take advantage of the semi-annual Dollar Days which are held under the same auspices, and these events have received the justly-deserved confidence and patronage of the people within a hundred miles of Wilmington.

In establishing the Suburban Shopping Days, they will observe them as regular events, though at what intervals has not been decided, but they are solely for the purpose of inducing the rural purchaser to visit that city when shopping, instead of going to Philadelphia or Baltimore. Wilmington merchants can and do offer their customers equally as good merchandise as may be found anywhere, and at prices that will compare favorably with any in effect elsewhere.

Wilmington merchants do not desire to open competition with rural merchants, but they do desire to become acquainted with the people of the rural communities, and to have them make their purchases on the slogan, "If You Cannot Buy It At Home, Buy It In Wilmington."

L. Irving Handy Improving

Newark friends will be glad to hear reports that L. Irving Handy, former resident of this town, who is undergoing treatment at Johns Hopkins, is improving.

Thinks Griffith is His Uncle

Ira Griffith, driver of a passenger bus between Newark and Wilmington, believes that he is a nephew of the William L. Griffith, now living in the west, who recently, through a friend, wrote to officials in Wilmington, asking for information as to his relatives.

Ira Griffith's father, John Griffith, lives in Kent county, near Five Points. His brother, William, went west about 35 years ago and it is said his relatives have not heard from him since.

In the letter recently received, William L. Griffith is described as 68 years of age and that he was born near Five Points and left there in 1884, going west. The letter speaks of a brother, John Griffith, who it is thought is Ira Griffith's father. The Griffith in the west is said to have amassed considerable property.

Ira Griffith, according to Wilmington press reports, conferred with J. Pearce Cann, attorney, yesterday, who will make an investigation to learn if William L. Griffith is a brother of Ira Griffith's father.

Doughboy Pluck

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was talking at a dinner upon doughboy pluck. "A doughboy," he said, "got shot in the hand near Chateau Thierry. The surgeon who treated the wound, thinking to put some soothing lotion on it, said to an orderly: 'Run into the next room and fetch me that phial on the shelf.' 'No ye don't, doc' said the doughboy, firmly, as he lit a fresh cigarette. 'If this hand's got to come off, I insist on your usin' a knife or a hatchet.'"

What It Means To Be a Hollander

In view of Holland's taking part in the Arms Conference, and sending a delegation to this country, an article in the Outlook for October 20th, by Edward W. Bok, is particularly interesting. Mr. Bok introduces his article with an anecdote of Theodore Roosevelt:

A friend asked Theodore Roosevelt if he knew a certain man with whom he was to be associated in large business transactions.

"Very well," answered Colonel Roosevelt.

"Can I depend upon him?" asked the friend.

"Depend upon him?" echoed the Colonel. "You certainly can. He's a Hollander. Do you know what that means?"

Colonel Roosevelt's remark recurred to me many times last summer while traveling through the Netherlands.

We quote a few of the incidents which Mr. Bok relates from his own experience:

I asked the hotel portier to change a bank note of large dimensions. "Certainly," he replied; he would send the change to my room. Shortly a boy appeared bearing a tray heaped with bills and silver, the boy having his palm on the pile to prevent the bills from being blown away. The money must have felt good to the touch of a poor boy!

"Is that not rather a risky manner of sending money to guests?" I asked the portier afterwards.

"Why do you think so, sir? What could happen to it?" he asked in perfect astonishment, I took the veil of silence.

"I owe you for six hours. I think," I said to the driver of a victoria.

"Less one-half hour spent in harnessing, sir," was the quick response.

On the station at Basle, upon entering Switzerland, we assembled some ten pieces of luggage and wondered what we should do with it while we went into the station for breakfast.

"Shall I look after these for you?" asked a station porter as he approached our party. The tourist conductor with our party looked the man over and asked, "You are a Hollander?"

"I am, sir," answered the man in Dutch.

"You will not leave this baggage?" he was asked.

"No, sir; I will be here with the baggage when you return," was his answer.

I reminded our conductor of the value of the contents of the luggage.

"I know," he replied; "but this man is a Hollander," and then, curiously enough, he asked the question of Colonel Roosevelt—"Do you know what that means? It means absolute honesty. He will do exactly as he says."

"I have traveled now for over thirty years," said our conductor at the breakfast table. "I have been in every country in the world except the United States, and not only once, but twenty, thirty, forty times. I know the peoples of Egypt, of Asia, of Arabia, as I know those of every European country. And I say this to you: I would trust the native of no other country in the world as I would a Hollander."

"That is a high tribute," I remarked.

"The absolute truth," was his answer, "and every experienced traveler will tell you the same."

Miss Davis Gives

Hallowe'en Party

Little Miss Agnes Davis entertained her friends at a Hallowe'en party in the garage adjacent to her home on Welsh Lane, last Saturday evening.

The garage was tastefully decorated with seasonal trimmings, the first floor being devoted to games while the second floor was used for dancing. Costumes of the guests varied from the most outlandish to the most beautiful, and the group had great fun guessing the masquerader's identity. Among those present were: Misses Agnes Frazer, Catherine Townsend, Leslie Blackwell, Louise Hulihan, Dorothy Blockson, Elma Robinson, Agnes Davis. Mrs. Davis chaperoned the party.

High School Hallowe'en Party

The annual High School Hallowe'en party was held on Friday evening, October 28. The party this year was different from the other parties for dancing was not the only thing on the program. In fact very little time was spent in dancing, for there were many other entertainments for the guests. The Army was very prettily decorated with autumn leaves, pumpkins and corn. It looked like a typical Hallowe'en.

There were costumes of all kinds and sizes in the crowd. The evening started with a grand march. During the march the judges decided which were the best costumes. The prizes were given out accordingly. Barclay Armstrong, who was dressed as a darky, received the prize for the best boy's costume, and Lydia Townsend, as a colonial lady, received the girl's prize.

Then the program began. Each class had to give some little skit. The first was by the seniors who gave the "Dancing Babies." After this the freshmen gave their shadow pictures. This was very interesting. The idea was to guess what the shadow represented. For some reason the sophomores had no play. The junior play was just scenes from "Jig." Alvin Kakeland was "Father," Sara Peterson was "Maggie," Lydia Young, the daughter, and Lewis Greene, the lover. This skit was very good and carried off first prize. Perhaps the funniest skit of all was "Romeo and Juliet." Floyd Hubert was Juliet and Wilkins Cooch was Romeo. The antics of these two almost sent the audience into convulsions. Six boys from the junior and senior classes gave a miniature minstrel show. It received second prize.

The refreshments were then served. They consisted of cakes and cider. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and dancing. Everyone was sure that they had had a better time this year than ever before. The Army had rung with laughter the whole evening for there was always something funny going on. It was almost 12 o'clock when the party broke up.

Delaware to Receive Marshall Portrait

Mrs. George W. Marshall, wife of Dr. George W. Marshall, has written President Hulihan that she is going to present a portrait of Dr. Marshall to the University.

Dr. Marshall was graduated from Delaware College in 1874 in the first class to be graduated after the reopening of the College. He received his A. B. degree and also his M. A. degree at Delaware College. In 1876 the degree of M. D. was conferred on him at Jefferson College.

Dr. Marshall was an important and influential member of the Board of Trustees and was a member of the original board until the State took over the College in 1913. He served as a Trustee from 1885 to 1915. He was also a member of the Committee on Instruction and Discipline for many years and took a very active part in developing the educational policies of the College. Three of his sons were graduated from Delaware College and a fourth studied here for two years. Dr. Marshall died in 1915 at the age of sixty.

Weary Willie slouched into the pawnshop. "How much will you give me for this overcoat?" he asked, producing a faded but neatly mended garment. Isaac looked at it critically. "Four dollars," he said. "Why," cried Weary Willie, "that coat's worth ten dollars if it's worth a penny!" "I wouldn't give you ten dollars for two like that," sniffed Isaac. "Four dollars or nothing." "Are you sure that's all it's worth?" asked Weary Willie. "Four dollars," repeated Isaac. "Well, here's yer four dollars," said Weary Willie. "This overcoat was hangin' outside yer shop, and I was wonderin' how much it was really worth."

A New Lincoln Story

A recent visitor to an old lady in Springfield, Ill., who knew Lincoln well, was told this story of the great President:

On one of his flatboat trips down the Ohio River, Lincoln found the other boatmen with him to be a rough, drinking lot. They planned to go ashore and "celebrate" at the first town approached, and urged young Abe to go with them. Lincoln refused to be induced to join them, in spite of taunts and gibes. They called him "fussy" and "preacher" and other epithets, but he smiled, saying he was responsible with them for the cargo, which belonged to another man. The men went ashore and spent the night in the saloon, while Lincoln watched the raft. In the morning the men came aboard, rolling before them a barrel of whisky. Young Lincoln then said, "You call me a 'sissy' and a 'mollycoddle,' but I'll stump you to lift up the keg and drink from the bung hole." They couldn't very well back out, and so each one tried to lift the keg to his mouth, but in vain. Then the young giant, Lincoln, grasped the keg by either rim and slowly muscled it up to his knees, then to his chest, and then with a mighty shove up over his head until the bung hole was above his mouth. He didn't drink a drop, but with a mighty heave tossed the keg overboard.

"PEAK" YEAR FIGURES APT TO CAUSE WRONG PUBLIC CONCLUSIONS

Comparisons of Today's Con- ditions with Abnormal War Conditions Unfair

Figures dealing with industrial activities in this country are apt to be misleading and to give a more pessimistic impression of manufacturing conditions than is justified. This is because most all comparisons are made with conditions as they existed in 1920 or 1919, at which time the industrial world was at the flood tide of activity.

An example of this misinterpretation is as follows: During the war there was scarcely an industry in the United States but what greatly increased its capacity. A considerable percentage of them doubled and tripled their capacity. The increased capacity which they then created in order to meet the war-time demands, still exists. When it is stated, then, that a certain industry today is only working 60% of its capacity, it should be kept in mind that this is 60% of its war-time capacity. It is using 60% of its war facilities, instead of 60% of its pre-war facilities.

This means that in comparison with its output prior to the war it is now running nearly normal. To illustrate: If a plant increased its capacity 50% during the war, its present capacity is 150% as compared with 100% in pre-war years. Therefore, if this plant today is running 60% capacity, it is running 60% of its present facilities which is equivalent to 90% of its pre-war facilities; so that such a plant compared with pre-war days is really running only 10% below normal.

An apt illustration of this is furnished by the present situation in the steel industry. Market reports show that the steel industry is running only 30 per cent capacity. This means about 17,500,000 tons a year on the basis of the present capacity of 52,500,000 tons a year. But in 1914 the capacity of the steel industry was only about 35,000,000 tons. During the war the capacity of the steel industry was increased 50 per cent,—or to the figures named above. The present output of the steel industry, 17,500,000 tons a year, while only one-third of its present capacity, is one-half of its pre-war capacity. And, in point of fact, the pre-war capacity was seldom utilized 100 per cent. In 1912 and '13 the production was only 30,000,000 tons, while the best previous year,—1910,—showed production of only 25,000,000 tons. These figures illustrate the necessity, in order to ascertain how present production compares with normal conditions, of comparing present production with production prior to the war instead of production during the war, and also of comparing present production with capacity production in pre-war times, rather than comparing it with capacity facilities which now exist.

The same principle applies to other industrial and commercial data. The people are apt to forget in reading statistics which show a tremendous slump as compared with last year and the year before that last year and the year before were "peak" years in the commercial and industrial world. An example of this is furnished by the recent statement of our foreign trade, which showed a great decline from the years of 1920 and 1919, but when compared with trade in 1912 or 1913, which were normal pre-war years, the difference is not so striking. In point of fact, the trade reports show that our exports to Germany for the current fiscal year are greater than they were in the year 1914.

It would not be true or fair to state that there has not been a decline in wages, foreign trade and industrial output, but in studying this decline one must remember that too pessimistic a conclusion can be reached by comparing data of today with data of the abnormal years of 1919 and 1920. To get a fair appreciation of the real status of the country, comparisons should be made with the normal times which existed prior to 1914.

A Word of Caution Against Arms Propaganda

President Harding has issued a warning to the American people to be on their guard against propaganda that would lead them to expect the impossible of the approaching conference to discuss limitation of armaments. The President's warning is communicated to the public through a letter he wrote to Miss Ella L. Freed, of Brooklyn, New York, which the White House gave out for publication. Some time ago Miss Freed wrote to President Harding about disarmament. The President replied, correcting her views as to what could be effected. Miss Freed wrote again for further elucidation of the President's views, which the President furnished. His letter, which was made public at the White House, follows:

"My Dear Miss Freed: Your letter, among others which came to me, suggests a widespread misapprehension as to the aims of the conference on limitation of armaments. In my letter of Oct. 5, I said to you:

"I think I ought to correct your impression about the expectation of universal disarmament. It is very erroneous even to suggest that we can get a reasonable limitation we shall think that great things have been accomplished."

"You replied that my letter seemed to bring a message of hopelessness to those seeking universal disarmament and asked me to explain reasonable limitation.

"By reasonable limitation I mean something practicable that there is a chance to accomplish rather than an ideal to attain. We are dealing with actualities; merely trying to do the best possible under world conditions now existing.

"Universal disarmament will be beyond hope of realization; even its desirability at this time might well be questioned. Thousands of years of history recording the wars and controversies of mankind suggest that human nature would require revolutionary organization to make universal disarmament possible. A consideration of the present state of the world must, I think, enforce the conclusion that this is not a hopeful time to undertake that kind of revolution.

"On the other hand, a world with the horrors of the recent experience seared into the mind, and staggering under the load of debt and armaments, has generously justified our hope for a favorable attitude toward the practical effort, the sincere beginning, that we are attempting. The fine spirit in which leading nations have received the invitation to meet and consider these things is altogether encouraging.

"To undertake the impossible and fail might leave our last state worse than our first. The attitude of the nations warrants confidence that we will not fail, but rather that substantial results will be accomplished, calculated to lessen the armament burden, and to reduce the danger of armed conflict. I feel that in such an effort we are entitled to the support of all people who would be glad—as I can assure you I would—to see still more accomplished if possible.

"Most sincerely yours,
"WARREN G. HARDING."

Why the Paintings by the Old Masters Last

Many persons think that the paintings by the old masters owe their permanency in some degree to secret processes now lost. As a matter of fact, however, it appears that the old masters used only those few colors of which the permanency was well established, and that they avoided mixing colors known to have a bad chemical effect on one another.

It is interesting to note the scientific methods of detecting later-day copies. Zinc white, where flake white would have been used, protoplasmic remains in the cells of the wood used for the picture, and the transparency of the bitumen in the shadows are proofs that a picture is not a genuine antique. In respect to deterioration, there may be mentioned the bad effects of smoke and gas fumes; and either light or darkness may bleach a picture. Some pictures that have been kept in the dark can be restored by placing them in bright sunlight.—Illustrated World.

Memorial Collection in Honor of Theodore Roosevelt

The national desire to preserve and protect the heritage of ideals left to the American people by Theodore Roosevelt, which has found expression in the creation of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, is bearing fruit. We do not remember that the contemporaries of any great man have ever made so devoted and concerted an attempt to preserve his works, both material and spiritual, for the benefit of posterity. In the case of Lincoln the burden of the burden was borne by John Hay and John George Nicolay, but even individuals such as Hay and Nicolay were denied the resources for research which are available for the Roosevelt Memorial Association.

As part of its work the Association is attempting to gather together a complete library of everything Roosevelt wrote, or that was written about him, designed to include as many original documents and manuscripts as it is able to secure. It has sent out to friends of Theodore Roosevelt an appeal which has already brought valuable collections of clippings, cartoons, and newspaper files under the guardianship of the Association. Mrs.

Roosevelt has herself contributed the manuscript of the speech delivered by Mr. Roosevelt in Milwaukee in 1912 just after he had been shot by a would be assassin. This manuscript was pierced by the bullet which wounded Mr. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt has also given the original manuscript of Roosevelt's Spanish War diary.

If this should reach the eye of any friends of Colonel Roosevelt who have not received the appeal of the Memorial Association, we trust that, if they are in possession of any material relating to Roosevelt, they will communicate with the Secretary of that Association, Mr. Hermann Hagedorn, 1 Madison Avenue, New York City. The Association not only desires gifts, but it also desires to locate and record the existence of all material which may be useful to future historians.—Outlook.

LENDING LIBRARY

We hold that there is no cheaper form of worthwhile amusement than an evening spent with a good novel at a cost of three cents, the price we charge per day for books from our lending library. Compare this with the $1.50 to $2.50 which an evening at the theatre costs, then stop on your way home some evening and give our plan a trial. We try to keep our library up-to-date by adding all new fiction on the day of publication.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS

Our Children's Department is our particular pride and we have made every effort to stock only such books as we know to be worth-while. You will find beautifully illustrated editions of the old favorites as well as the best of the new books for young people, all carefully selected both as to text and illustration. We are always glad to help select books to suit the individual child.

POETRY AND DRAMA

Would you like the latest book of poems by Macfieid or Amy Lowell or the newest volume of plays by O'Neill? Let us show you our poetry and drama shelves and you will be sure to find much that will interest you. Our Drama Department is not as complete as we would like it but is growing steadily. We have recently added a number of new collections of one-act plays.

GIFT BOOKS

No other gift has the permanency, the desirability, the personal touch of a well-chosen book. What could give more lasting pleasure than a beautiful volume of poems or essays, an exquisite work on Art or an enthralling tale of travel and adventure? DELAWARE WINS AGAINDefeats Marylanders on Frazer Field*Crowds Witness Games

The football team of the University of Delaware triumphed over Washington College's eleven by the humiliating score of 47-0, on Frazer Field, last Saturday. In a game replete with exciting plays on the part of Delaware, the local team rolled up a score which they could have easily increased by thirty points had Coach Derby let his warriors loose against the Chestertown lads. For the Delaware team, Jack Williams featured with line plunging and intercepting forward passes. Williams was responsible for the final touchdown when he nabbed a Washington pass and ran thirty-five yards for the score.

Delaware used her entire second string substitutes during the second and third quarters of the game. Even with the scrubs in the game, the local goal-line was never in danger. The second string continued the march started by the big "Yellowjacket" varsity. During these periods, "Doc" Steele, the local half-back, starred, tearing loose for a forty yard run for a touchdown, and repeated a few minutes later, only to be called back for a penalty on Delaware. For Washington, Rourke played the best game. Upon this man the bulk of the visitors' tackling fell. Twice this man was knocked out during the third period. But he was up and fighting again. His playing seemed largely responsible for the holding of Delaware when she was held.

The real feature of Saturday's game, the thrill of thrills was brought to Delaware's followers, when the varsity took the field again in the fourth quarter. Derby had removed his first string men at the end of the first period. Of course this was the thing to do. But it's been a long time since a Delaware coach could afford to do such a thing. That's what was responsible for the thrill that came later. To know that the best team in the University could rest while the Reserves played, and then trot out on the field to administer the final blow of a superior squad, produced the shiver along many a spine. This one act, above the brilliant playing of Jackson, the improved passing of Rothrock, or the stone wall defense of Delaware's line, meant more to the crowd.

The team showed to good advantage before about 800 school boys from Wilmington High School, who came here in auto trucks as the guests of the athletic council. The cheering of the local contingent was mightily increased by these deep throated huskies.

Numerous penalties were imposed during the game, the local eleven being the main offenders. However, none of them were for a serious violation, but resulted from the eagerness of the Blue and Gold to score. The first touchdown came as a result of straight football. During the final period, the team had instructions to attempt the aerial game, and in this department, a great improvement was noted.

The next opponent for the Blue and Gold team will be the Western Maryland team on Frazer Field, Saturday afternoon.

NEWARK TO HAVE TEA ROOM AND GIFT SHOPTo Open November 15 on Site of Hoffman's Shop

Under the management of Miss Jones, sister of Reverend Edgar Jones, Rector of the Episcopal Church, a tea room will be opened in the building now occupied by Louis Hoffman.

Work will begin on the place next Tuesday. It is not known at the present time just what changes will be made on the interior, but the present interior will be razed and a new one constructed. Miss Jones believes the site to be an excellent one for such a business and she is very optimistic over the probability of its success. It will be open for business on or about November 15, unless material ordered for construction is delayed.

Of special interest to students and residents of Newark is the proposed name of the establishment, "The Blue Hen." Miss Jones thinks it a novel idea for the Blue Hen's Chicks to quench their thirst in the Blue Hen's Tea Room.

In conjunction with the tea room, Miss Jones is opening a "Gift Shop" in which those articles, better known to women than to men, will be available for purchase.

Miss Jones is experienced in the management of tea shops, having recently operated with success The Green Bables Tea Shop, in the vicinity of Narragansett, Rhode Island.

Listen, Parents: If the children see you always spending and never saving, can you blame them if they get the idea that life is one grand carnival of gleeful indulgence? Now take them by the hand and let them see you make your next savings deposit. Let them look around the bank and get used to the place. Your way, not My way, in building a home

Express Your Own Ideas

Have you ever had an idea that you wanted built into a room or a house—something individual, a sort of a part of yourself—and have the contractor or carpenter say, "It can't be done," "why that's a foolish notion," "what do you want it that way for" or "why don't you do it this way?"

Have you ever had that experience and realized how it took the pleasure out of the whole thing?

In building a house, this is serious. A home, at its best, is expressive of the owner, not of the contractor.

Realizing that, I have always tried to catch the idea of the man who was employing me and do the job HIS way, not MY way.

The result is a satisfied customer, and often a new idea that appeals to all who see it.

Let us talk over your building plans.
