Whereupon;

The Speaker of the House of Representatives rose and delivered the following address:

GENTLEMEN:—

I rise with pleasure to perform the last duty imposed upon me, as the presiding officer of this House; a duty, which will soon restore you after a long absence to your families and your homes, and which will happily close a protracted session, important to your constituents, from the momentous subjects which have received your consideration, and been decided by your wisdom.

Before I pronounce the solemn sine die, permit me to express my gratitude for the very favourable utterance of your opinions, conveyed to me in the resolution just adopted;—to have gained the approbation of my fellow members, unanimous and spontaneous, can but create feelings in my breast, more easy to conceive than express, and I should be lost to a proper sense of my duty, if I do not reciprocate the sentiments so generously awarded by you to me; if in the discharge of the duties assigned to me, I have realized your expectations, I owe it more to the liberal assistance offered by each and every one of you, than to any merit of my own.

And now, in taking leave of you, I cannot but experience the painful sensation, that for aught we know, it is the last time we shall have the pleasure of meeting here;—yet the pain is mitigated by the reflection, that whatever may be our future destinies, we are still under the guidance of that unerring Providence, that over-rules all things for our good, and to Him will my ardent prayers be addressed for his blessings upon us all.

I sincerely hope, Gentlemen, that the pleasing endearments of homes, and the warm congratulations of friendship will soon greet and cheer you; and that like myself, you will, in the midst of these enjoyments, occasionally revert with pleasure to the recollection of our deliberations and the scenes through which we have so lately passed.

May peace and happiness attend you.

In pursuance of the joint resolution of both Houses, I now adjourn this House, Sine Die.

ATTEST,

C. G. RIDGELY,

Clerk of the House of Representatives of the State of Delaware.
