The Student Council has approved of the new constitution. By a unanimous vote at Monday night's meeting the senators rejected the REVIEW Plan, approved the original system for representation, passed the long-worked-on document on to the student body.

The fate of the constitution will be decided in a mass meeting in Mitchell Hall during College Hour period on February 4.

The REVIEW Plan, suggested in an editorial last week recommended a 10-man council, four men from the Senior class, three men from the Junior class, two men from the Sophomore class, one from the Freshman class. All of these men could be elected at large.

"Not fair to the Non-Frats," said Fraternity men Ryan, Lattin, Groves, Lipstein.

"It's a fine idea said the Non-Frats at first, but 'too risky,' they said later when the fraternity opposition grew to violent proportions.

The plan which was adopted allows for a 14-man council, a junior and senior from each frat and two juniors and seniors from the non-frat group.

The approved constitution has been under construction since the beginning of the year in the hands of a constitution committee.

When Charley Brown, chairman of the committee, introduced the Show-Down

When we proposed our plan last week for a 10-man Student Council elected at large we were anxious to find out what the objections would be to it.

We thought that we were giving everybody a chance for representation if they had enough interest to want representation.

We thought that we were giving the poor persecuted non-fraternity man a better chance than he had ever had at Delaware before.

We estranged ourselves with the fraternity faction because we dared oppose their powerful combination of representation.

Then we waited. And here is how we were criticised.

The fraternity men claimed that their big objection to our plan was the fact that the non-fraternity men might not gain any representation at all. We were quite surprised when we heard this. It seemed rather strange that they should suddenly become concerned about the welfare of a group which they had been fighting up until now. Possibly the fraternity faction is actually sincere in this criticism. If so, we admire their putting principles above politics. But this sounds more to us like the frat men fear not that the non-frat won't have any representation, but that they themselves might come out on the short end of hotly contested elections. For the "dangerous" part of our plan is that it works from both ends.

The reaction of the non-fraternity men was none the less amusing. It seems that they too were afraid of our plan. After howling for two years about fair representation in the Council they proceeded to approve the new council as offered in the proposed constitution. On Monday night the new Constitution of the Student Council was put to a vote of the Council and was unanimously approved by the Council (this included the non-fraternity men—the men who either didn't have the brains to see that they were getting "hosed" or didn't have the convictions to oppose it).

When we first proposed our plan it was the common assumption that we were working solely for the non-fraternity men; that we were biased in our review of the situation. Well, these developments should show the real nature of the whole affair.

Our plan was offered with the hope that both factions would be willing to take a chance—to back up all of this big talk about being so "vitally interested" in everything and hence deserving so much representation. Well, it was rejected by both sides. If that is the opinion of the student body—so be it. However we positively refuse to have anything more to do with "constructive criticism" etc., concerning the system of representation in the new Council. Our little experience with this question has shown us that it is nothing but a lot of big talk with nothing to back it up. We gave both sides their chance and they were afraid to take it.

The way the situation shapes up now the fraternities are perfectly within their rights when they claim greater representation. They put their plan up in the new constitution and the non-frat men objected. We proposed a plan to satisfy both sides and both sides protested. But with all of the protesting that the non-fraternity men have been doing, we are still waiting for their plan or some sort of system to solve the problem.

Turn Out

On Tuesday, February 1st, the proposed new constitution which has recently been unanimously approved by the Student Council, will be submitted to the entire student body for ratification. The meeting will be held during the regular College Hour period at Mitchell Hall.

This College Hour will be perhaps the most important meeting held this semester. For years the student body has been clamoring for an effective set of rules concerning the government of their organizations. Finally, after much investigation and effort, the rules were drawn up and are now ready for presentation to the student body.

We urge every student in college to turn out and vote his choice for the new constitution. What is decided by this student referendum will have far-reaching consequences for the future government of the student body.

To Mr. Lattin, President of the Student Council, and to the members of the constitution committee we extend our sincere congratulations for the fine work which they have done upon the compilation of this Constitution.

On Other Campuses . . .

A student at Lebanon Valley College is a member of a song writing team whose newest attempt "Married By the Moon," will be introduced shortly over the major networks, by Horace Heidt, Raymond Paige, Rudolph Friml, Jr., and Ray Keating.

Letters

To the Editor . . .

Dear Sir:

The Student Council has recently been the scene of a conflicting discussion between Fraternity and Non-Fraternity men concerning the new Constitution. The Frat men have approved the 10 Frat-4 Non-Frat plan for representation obviously because it gives the Fraternities a majority. The Non-Frats have centered their hopes in a plan printed in the REVIEW calling for a Council to be elected in the same manner as class officers. The reason for their action is the hope that they may be able to induce Non-Frat men to turn out at these elections and overwhelm the Frats. Since when have the Non-Frat men been able to elect a man to a class office without the help of Fraternities? As a Non-Frat Councilman I have opposed the REVIEW plan because to me it seems to threaten a Council which is all Fraternity. Just as we now must bargain to get a Non-Frat Secretary of a class, we would then have to bargain with Fraternities to get a Non-Frat Councilman. I think the men who have endorsed this plan have not considered this fact. The Non-Frat men are much in the same condition as China in the present War. They have men, but no organization. No organization is the same as only a few men. The Frat men have organization. Organization wins elections.

Certainly I approve of proportional representation, but there can be no proportional representation at Delaware College until Non-Frat men learn to muster their numbers.

On the other hand, I do not think the majority of Frat Councilmen has even been a serious handicap to Non-Frat interests. The Frats probably possess the overburden of good men. We want Student Government by good men whether they are Frat or Non-Frat.

If the Non-Frat men don't want the representation clause let them vote down the Constitution at Mitchell Hall, but don't let a plan go through which does not assure them of some representation.

I just finished Harry's column, and have become more strongly convinced than ever that I am (or should be, if I am to live up to my Christian ideals) one who "bab-bles of the middle road."

I am sure that this world was not meant to be Heaven and cannot be made such by man. There is greed, ruthlessness, and thoughtlessness existing here, and they will remain as long as many people retain the philosophy that they have but one life to live and they are going to get all they can out of it. This free choice in matters religious, etc., means that many will be determined to see no farther than the ends of their noses. But I'm letting my thoughts wander.

Any economic, social, or legal scheme that may be devised is going to be in danger of corruption and collapse because of that all-too-large amount of the aforementioned sins found in the very people who are to formulate and carry out these schemes. I'll do what I can to take the power from those whose greed are causing the collapse, but I don't feel inclined to go about changing systems and replacing them with others that can and will also be corrupted to whatever extent greed, etc. is present in those in power.

It would take a while for us to get used to the idea of being without most of our present luxuries, in case of an economic collapse, but I don't think we would be any worse off spiritually. My grandfather lived the greater part of his life without the "benefits" of General Motors, Hollywood, or N. B. C., but I am certain he led just as happy and just as worthwhile a life as any man of today. If we

We learned that every cow has a name. The cow we liked best is one Emory G. Frances. She's twelve years old now, born in 1925. "She should have died by now," the attendant said pithily, looking up from his pail. But there was Emory looking at us with her big brown eyes, giving her all for Miss Ort and the boys.

Purloined Showcase . . .

Nearly every man on the grounds was impressed into the service last Friday to help move the 15 ft. glass enclosed model of the campus. The model was transferred from Mitchell to Old College, where it is now out of the way.

The men grunted and tugged until they had it placed intact on an open truck in back of Mitchell. They relaxed a minute, and then climbed aboard to steady it during the trip. The truck drove very slowly up S. College Avenue.

Suddenly two Blue Keys darted around the wall. Pointing accusing fingers at the grounds force, they jogged alongside shrieking "Stop thief! Stop thief!"

Alarmed residents poked heads out of their windows, grinned, and paused in their occupations long enough to join in the chorus. "Stop thief! Stop thief!" echoed up S. College Avenue.

The grounds force smiled, tipped their hats mechanically, and the procession moved on, like a float in the Tournament of Roses Parade.

Night of January 16' Old Stuff Says Review's Reviewing O'Malley

Ayn Rand's The Night of January 16th is only noteworthy because it revives a theatrical novelty first employed about a decade ago in The Trial of Mary Dugan. The novelty consists of a jury selected from the audience to decide the fate of the defendant.

The play is a three act version of the life and death of Ivar Kreuger told as a trial. If the defendant (the magnate's secretary-mistress) is acquitted by the audience jury, the judge berates the jury for a bad decision. If convicted, the defense asks for a new trial and the judge grants it. Last night Karen Andre was acquitted.

It was all something like a game we used to play to while away time during primary school recess periods. The game was called I Accuse. One boy tells of seeing a murder committed and accuses his victim of the crime. The victim immediately proves his innocence by implicating someone else! This used to be a lot of fun in class recess, but it seems rather stupid in a theatre.

may give away the plot, it is not a very valuable gift and it may serve to show why the game was more fun when played in primary school recess than in Mitchell Hall.

During the long-drawn courtroom scene it is established by testimony that swindler Bjorn Faulkner established his secretary-mistress Karen Andre in a penthouse. After the crash he trades his one remaining asset, himself, in marriage for a $25,000,000 loan from his bride's father. On January 16th (that makes Sunday some sort of an anniversary, doesn't it?) a body dropped from Karen Andre's penthouse to the street.

The D.A. called the smashed-up body Faulkner's, and pointed his finger at Karen, whereupon each witness started establishing his innocence by indicting others! And so the hot-potato of guilt was passed around and round until 10.30 when the audience jury returned its verdict.

There was good acting by Templayers Peter Greenberg, Francis Jennings, Sidney Wolfson, Florence Rothman, Hazel Menkin, and John Ritsko. And if we assume that he did not select the play, a credit line should be given to Paul E. Randall, who directed a rather swellegant production of a rather smellegant play.

The Templayers have an able director and some good actors. If some of the actors learned to walk, and if the producer used a little discrimination in play-selection, Mitchell Hall might charge fifty cents and draw a crowd of students.

Until then we cannot blame the undergraduate who glances at the poster, looks at the admission price, and walks disgustedly away, grunting physiological monosyllables.

Smoke-Talkers Smoke And Talk On American Humor In Lounge

By Tyrone O'Malley

The smoke-talkers smoked and talked again in the lounge of Old College last Tuesday evening. Subject was American Humor.

We didn't think as much of the three talks by Humanists Swenehart, Stutman, Kreshtool respectively on General American Humor, Humor in the Drama, and the New Yorker respectively. They took too long.

After that Herb Warburton started the general discussion. That was only right since Herb was chairman of the affair. Cooch, Bruno, Humphreys, Baker, Dr. Rees, Dr. Able, Dannenberg, Stutman, Warburton, Dr. Sypherd, Swenehart, Kreshtool all got into the discussion.

Most contested question of the evening was on the importance or unimportance of the New Yorker as a medium of American humor. Cooch led the argument against the magazine, encouraged by Dr. Sypherd, who said he didn't enjoy reading professional humorists. Kreshtool and Stutman teamed up to defend the magazine, and for a while it looked like a good argument.

Bud Warner wanted to say something about Barney Google as a representative of American humor, but he said afterward that he didn't get a chance because Stutman and Swenehart and Kreshtool were hogging the floor all the time.

Things adjourned around eight o'clock due to the fact that Warburton apparently had a date.

Bruno was unable all evening to swing the discussion over to Verdi and Italian Opera.

Hens Drop Second Straight Encounter; Capt. Carey Stars For Vanquished

The University of Delaware basketball team journeyed over to Swarthmore last Wednesday night and absorbed a 49-41 beating at the hands of the Swarthmore College team.

Swarthmore jumped off to an early lead of 5-0 and lead throughout the contest except at one point. The score at halftime was 29-20.

Lew Carey tied with Eberle of the Swarthmore outfit in total points scored with a total of sixteen. Earl Sheats and Jack Kerns also played good games for Delaware.

Delaware outscored Swarthmore from the charity stripe, 13 to 7 but Swarthmore had a tidy little advantage of 21 to 14 in shots from the field.

In the preliminary game, the Swarthmore J. V.'s defeated the Delaware J. V.'s by a score of 47-29. Bobby Good was the outstanding player for Delaware. "Gunner" Reed played his customary style of game, scoring no points.

"What will you have gents?" asked the bartender with a smile on his face.

"I'll take sarsaparilla" said the first.

"Make mine a coke," said the second.

He glanced inquiringly at the third member of the party.

"Make mine a glass of water. I have to do the driving."

WITH THE BLUE ★ AND GOLD ★

BY E. J. WILSON

It seems P. M. C. beat West Chester the other night by a score of 39-27 after Delaware had dropped a 60-29 decision to West Chester. Oh well, maybe we'll beat them in baseball.

Some people have crust. You probably read that little piece in the "Journal-Every Evening" about Tod Goodwin replacing Coach Clark as coach of the football team. Now, first of all Coach Clark will be here next year and as for Goodwin as coach—well, he may be a better football player but that's as far as it goes.

The guy who wrote the article said "he (Goodwin) has been mentioned, etc." If he is being mentioned, it's being done very, very quietly. So quietly in fact nobody at the University has heard anything about it.

It's very seldom that a sports writer will admit he was wrong. It's an especial rarity when I admit I'm wrong. So get ready for a shock! I was wrong last week about the eligibility part of the intramurals. The rest of it stands as written but it seems Joe did not know about the point in question and was only too glad to try and adjust it when it was pointed out. More power to the intramurals and its able supervisors!

Most people know "Eddie" Anderson. He's that tall, good-looking basketball player. In fact we think he's the best potential player on the Delaware squad. He shoots like Hank Luisetti (well—almost) and handles the ball like—well, you name it. We don't know what he lacks but the point is, he lacks something. We hope he finds it. If he does, watch his smoke.

It seems to be a fairly prevalent rumor among the athletes here that we will have a new gym or field house within two years. Take it for what it's worth.

Oh yeah, it seems Monihan's name is Monihan instead of Monaghan. We called Monihan Monaghan last week if you'll remember but it should have been Monihan. So if we speak of Monihan in the future, we'll Blue Hen Mermen To Oppose Lehigh Sat., Lafayette Mon.

Stern Competition Seen In Individual and Team Scoring At Home Opener

The Delaware swimming team is headed for a big assignment this week-end. They will take on in quick succession the strong swimming squads of Lehigh and Lafayette. The fact that the St. Joe's meet was cancelled leaves the Delaware mermen in a position where they have yet to demonstrate their true strength. True, against West Chester they did very well. This week-end they will have a chance to prove that they can do the same against better competition of the larger schools.

Individual events in the Lehigh meet should prove quite as close as the team scores figure to be. Washabaugh of Lehigh swims the 440-yard free style in such good time that he and Monihan should produce a very interesting race. A breast stroke artist by the name of Wells is also rated an excellent chance to upset State Champion "Sonny" Kenworthy. Lehigh has always had pretty good men in this event, last year they had Karl Jacob, who was quite a man at the breast stroke.

"Hymie" Swartz should have little trouble in the diving events, and Bob Lippincott should do well in the dashes.

As far as is known, Lafayette will also present a strong squad when they come down to Newark Monday night. Coach Bardo's prediction of a very close meet Saturday night may well be extended to Monday night's contest with Lafayette.

There won't be any REVIEW until after exams, so if you want to find out the results, you better go to the meets.

Voice: "Stevenoptski."

The requirements for entrance to the Zeta Zeta Sorority at the College of New Rochelle, according to the Tatler, are two conditions and a flunk. It would be the largest organization on campus after exams.

mean Monaghan of last week who spells his name Monihan. Why can't these athletes have names like Smith and Jones?

Paul Bruno and "Doc" Doherty were out in that miniature blizzard of last Tuesday surveying the—oops, we almost said it. But anyhow Paul was working on N. Y. A. This is the first recorded instance of a student really earning the money.

We didn't see the Swarthmore game but we understand the game was a pretty good one. There's no doubt the team's improving but I fear it's up to the swimming team to keep up any winning streaks.

Some people are awful touchy. All we did was wake Phil Reed up twice while writing this column to get information and he burned up. Silly boy.

Bull About Bull

Every cow at the University dairy has to be named. This is kind of tough.

A little baby bull was born at the University farm eight days ago. The boys down there have all run out of names for their cows, so they called on us boys that write the REVIEW.

"You fellows are pretty good authorities on bull," they said. So we all got together and named him Quality O'Malley. (The Quality part wasn't our idea. That's the name of the little bull's old man).

Sportography

By WALTER T. SMITH

Last year after one of the early games in which Delaware got trounced, the coach of the opponents made the statement that "Roberts is one of the best small-college-backs in the country." We heartily endorse that statement.

A graduate of Newark High, Dick Roberts was the outstanding player of the football and baseball teams at that school. Later he was a member of Beacom's undefeated football team. He also participated in baseball, being a very good catcher.

Upon his arrival as a student at Delaware, Dick won a varsity position almost immediately on the football and baseball teams. Last year, his junior year, he was captain of the baseball team. This year he was captain of the football team. Although the Blue Hens had a poor season, Dick was the bright spot in several otherwise colorless games. His greatest efforts were in the Drexel game.

Of course, Dick will be catcher on Delaware's baseball team this year. If his work behind the bat is as good this year as it has been in the past, Delaware will have no catching problem.

Blue Hen Quintet Drops Contest To Strong Opponents

Teachers Hold Blue and Gold To Twenty-nine Points; Second Loss

Last Tuesday night, the basketball team of West Chester State Teacher's College defeated Delaware by the score of 60-29.

As far as Delaware rooters were concerned, the game was pretty bad. West Chester completely outplayed the Blue Hens in every department of the game. The only Delaware man to penetrate the West Chester defense with any degree of consistency was Lew Carey. Lew had a total of eleven points for the evening.

Delaware was definitely "off" its usual form and the game cannot be taken as an accurate criterion of what the team will do in the present campaign.

Delaware's chief difficulty seemed to be in keeping up the fast pace of the home club. The floor of Taylor Gymnasium is not adapted to the "fast" style of play and tends to slow up any club so that when they hit a larger floor, they are lost.

Women Cause Revolution In Review As Harry Stutman Refurnishes Office

By Nebuchadnezzar O'Malley

A revolution broke out in the REVIEW office last Monday. Women, as usual, were responsible.

It all began when Harry Stutman, the volatile little feature writer, noticed how bare and un-

As the rebels were patting each pose we want to throw a party some time?" he cried. "Suppose Mary O'Malley or Colonel Ashbridge's new secretary should entertain them? Suppose Mrs. Roosevelt comes in?" Then he was struck by an idea. Or maybe it was a brick: "Let's bring in the piano from the Student Activities room!" "No piano," grunted Bill Wells from behind his desk.

Maybe Stutman didn't hear him. So rallying his supporters with the battle-cry "Byamby," he set out for the piano.

Everything went well until they reached the doors of the REVIEW room. Finding them locked, Harry and his staff held a council of war. And the ablest lock-picker picked the lock.

Then the revolution started. Men who formerly were friends now were pitted in struggle which yielded no quarter. For the Wells-Kreshtool-Wilson faction stopped completely the charge of the grand piano.

The rebels called for reserves, and Richardson joined them. The piano rolled into the room with a roar of victory. toward universal good citizenship, others backs; Al, the janitor in Old College walked in. "Well, I see you moved the piano in," he said. "When are you going to move it out?"

"I don't know," said the fiery little rebel. "When do we have to take it out?"

"Anytime before Mr. Grubb sees it suits me."

The piano went back.

When asked if he had a statement for the press Comrade Stutman replied, "Our revolution has been temporarily checked. But the Hour will come."

Swenheart, second in command, could not be reached.

Said Bill Wells: "I have no statement for the press. You can quote me on that."

epistle for its final reading, he remarked that the "question of representation" was "still in doubt." Then he read the REVIEW Plan of the elected-at-large council. Non-frats George Baker and Paul Bruno stood up for it. Baker pointed out the "financial basis" for computing membership (referring to the Student Activities fee) and mentioned Duke University as a similar successful small council. Then the fraternity men started a bombardment. Tom Ryan from Theta Chi complained that cliques would be formed under the new plan. President Lattin said that the Non-frats were defeating their own purpose. Another Sigma Nu, Ralph Groves, observed that the smallest group (the seniors) were receiving the greatest control over the spending of money.

Sigma Tau Phi president, council parliamentarian, politician-deluxe Sigmund Lipstein believed that the REVIEW Plan would work if Delaware were "an ideal college." "Dirtier politics than we have ever seen" would be witnessed if the REVIEW Plan were adopted, announced modest Siggie.

Non-frat Bruno faced the wrath of fraternity disapproval and told Lipstein that he (Lipstein) was wrong. "Our whole system is based on representation according to taxation." Bruno has a habit of straying from the point, and he digressed further here to suggest that the outgoing president vote instead of all the graduating seniors in the council elections.

Lipstein came back to say that the REVIEW Plan was a gamble.

Richard Elliott, a black sheep of the non-frats, started the non-frat opposition to the REVIEW Plan when asked for his views by President Lattin.

Non-frat Robert Wilson followed up by opposing the REVIEW Plan on the basis that fraternities could dominate the elections to an even greater extent than at present. "We would have the rottenness of class elections instead of the petty politics of non-frat campaigns," he said. He advocated the original Constitution plan.

Then George Baker, like Cornwallis, surrendered as he said, "My arguments are only theoretical."

Lipstein smelled the victory and made the motion that the constitution be read. The constitution was read. Only a trifling discussion arose over something called referendum. When the vote was taken there were no nays.

As a Tobacco Auctioneer

Veteran Jim Edwards tells why tobacco experts prefer Luckies 2 to 1...

"I recently sold 489,000 pounds of tobacco in one 6½ hour day," says Mr. J. N. Edwards of Farmville, North Carolina.

"There was a buyer, naturally, for every one of those 489,000 pounds... But there was as much difference between the best grades and the inferior, as between a pretty girl and a homely one.

"At auction after auction, I've seen Lucky Strike go after the prettiest lots of tobacco. It's no wonder Luckies taste so good. I've smoked them since 1917.

"And another thing... even after yelling out tobacco bids all during a seven hour day, Luckies are still just as easy as ever on my throat."

Only Lucky Strike offers you the finest tobacco plus the throat-protection of the exclusive process "It's Toasted". This process takes out certain irritants found in all tobacco—even the finest.

Men who know tobacco from A to Z—experts like Mr. Edwards—are surely good judges of cigarettes... Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all the other cigarettes combined.

Debaters Argue With Swarthmore

The University of Delaware debating team journeyed to Philadelphia last Monday to argue against the Swarthmore team in the studio of station WIP. Delaware's team, represented by Clarence Taylor and Norman Browning, defended the negative side of the question: "Resolved: That the Government Should Own and Operate All Public Utilities." There was no decision.

Kermit Gordon and Michael Marsh, members of the Swarthmore team, took the affirmative side, and based their arguments upon the excellent record of the T. V. A. project and the unfair practices that have been used by the utility companies in recent years.

The debating team will meet Temple University at Philadelphia, January 28. The debate will be broadcast over station WIP at 3.15.

Freshman Debate In Mitchell Hall

Represented by Russell Willard and Michael Poppitti, the Freshman debating team met the Freshman team from Swarthmore at a Freshman College Hour in Mitchell Hall last Tuesday. The Delaware men argued affirmatively on the question: "Resolved—Private Institutions of Education should be abolished." Dr. George H. Ryden presided.

For the negative side, Philip Wood and Stephen Lax argued that privately owned institutions are financially better off, and consequently are able to spend more time on the individual.
