DELAWARE DAY TO BE OBSERVED IN STATE

Today Marks The 153rd Anniversary Of Ratification Of Constitution

Today is Delaware Day by statute and proclamation of Governor McMullen. Today the people of Delaware are called upon to display State and National flags and to observe the ratification of the Federal Constitution by the State of Delaware by celebrating the occasion in all State schools, churches and civic organizations.

On December 7, 1787, one hundred and fifty years ago, a convention of representatives from each county met in Dover and without one dissenting vote ratified the Constitution of the United States as proposed before the Continental Congress.

The 1940 observance of Delaware Day will be general throughout the State in keeping with programs outlined by a special Delaware Day Commission appointed by the Governor headed by H. H. Holloway, superintendent of the State Board of Education, and consisting of the Rev. J. Francis Tucker and the Rev. John L. Johnson. Miss Ruth Jones is secretary to the commission.

Governor McMullen's Proclamation is printed herewith:

WHEREAS, by resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Delaware, the Governor is authorized and directed to issue a proclamation in connection with the proper observance and celebration of Delaware Day; and

WHEREAS, we have just cause to be proud of the part our State has played in the foundation and preservation of the Union, particularly in the ratification of the Federal Constitution on December 7, 1787, since which time Delaware has been known as "The First in the Union."

AND, THEREFORE, I, Richard C. McMullen, by virtue of the authority vested in me, do hereby designate Saturday, December 7, 1940, as DELAWARE DAY and bring to the attention of our citizens the honor bestowed upon us by our forefathers. I respectfully urge the observance of this day by the display of the flags of the State and Nation, and ask that suitable exercises be held in our schools, churches and civic organizations in commemoration of this historic event.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I, Richard C. McMullen, Governor of the State of Delaware, have caused the Great Seal of this State to be hereunto affixed and this my hand and the seal of the State have thereto been set on the twenty-ninth day of November, one thousand nine hundred and forty, of the Independence of the United States of America, the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth.

RICHARD C. McMULLEN,
By the Governor
JOSHIAH MARVEL, JR.,

Meet Santa Claus at JACKSON'S SATURDAY December 7th

The Story of Billy and Ruth
America's Toy Stylists

SANTA CLAUS slowly paced up and down his comfortable study in his toy work shop at the North Pole. His hands were clasped behind his back and his brow furrowed. He was considering a grave problem.

His favorite toy general, an old, old man, but still straight as a ramrod, stood at attention at one corner of the fireplace. This general had been in charge of Santa's toy army for the last century. "General," Santa said, as he paused in his stride, "You and I have talked over many things for the last hundred years. I have asked you to leave your barracks tonight, because something has been troubling me for quite a long time."

"Santa, if I can be of any service to you, just give me my orders and I will fight to the last man," He saluted smartly.

"Oh, it is nothing like that, General, although I am well aware of your loyalty. It is just this. Here it is 1927 already. The last three hundred years just seem to have slipped away. I have been toiling in the workshop, scurrying in the packing room and then feverishly lashing my reindeer so as to deliver all toys by Christmas eve."

"Well, Santa," rumbled the old General, "Who is there to say your job has not been well done?"

"Only myself," Santa replied promptly. "Only I know what we have needed to complete our organization."

"What in the world can that be?" the General asked in astonishment. "Your shops are known to every boy and girl in the whole world. Tens of thousands of gnomes cheerfully work day and night to turn out the millions and millions of toys. You are the symbol of Christmas giving. You represent the cheer, the good humor, the gladness in the hearts of all men. What can you possibly need to complete an already perfect picture?"

"My dear, dear friend," Santa Claus answered, as he affectionately placed his arm across the shoulders of the fine old General, "My dear General, we need the enthusiasm, the sparkle, the taste, the actual hidden desires of a young boy and a young girl. Surely, I am not an old man. I have scarcely been at my task for ten centuries. I am vigorous and hearty, but, General," and Santa smiled, "Do you ever read the business papers of America? If so, you may have noticed the repeated use of the word 'angle.' We read of the 'Feminine angle' or the 'Style angle.' I guess it is high time we thought of the 'Modern Child Angle.' What with the Earth people's Golden Age of Invention—Radio, Aeroplanes, Submarines, oh, hundreds of things. Let us face the music, General. Just between us, can we keep right up to date? Are we making too many Noah's Arks? Do we really need forty-two million drums? Are music boxes as thrilling to boys and girls as they were twenty-five years ago? A boy and a girl must answer these questions. Let us use a good earthly word, 'Stylist.' It has a nice, pleasant sound, too. 'Stylist,' meaning those who set or make the styles in toys for America's girls and boys. These stylists will design and suggest toys that will have greatest play value for children of all ages. Then, these stylists will tell the children all about them. We need two stylists . . . one girl and one boy."

The General actually quailed under this assault of words. Santa was a cheerful man of deeds, not of words. This torrent took the gallant soldier by surprise.

"Why, Santa, you have taken the shells right out of my guns. I do not know what to say. You may be entirely right. Perhaps only you are qualified to recognize the need of young children to help prepare your collection of toys. But how do you propose to go about selecting the two children?"

"That shall be your task," Santa smilingly replied. "I direct you to scour the Americas to find the proper boy and the proper girl. They must be alert, of good family and conscientious, but above all, they must represent the average boy and girl. Take a hundred regiments of men to assist you. Give each man a subconscious thought reader, so that he can question a child in his sleep without disturbing it. Give each man a Santa Claus chimney pass, so that he can use my usual method of entry into a home. This is January, 1927. I expect the two children you will select out of the ten million you will interview, on June first. Goodbye, General, and good luck." Santa shook hands with the soldier, the General saluted, and he hurried away to carry out his orders.

The search led everywhere, into palatial homes and into humble rooms, in cities and in hamlets, on the West Coast and in the Atlantic States. The Toy General carefully classified children into ten separate groups. Then, finally, after an exhaustive campaign, all were eliminated except twenty-five pairs of children. The General himself then took these children in hand and after many, many nights of comparisons, he made his final selection.

The boy's name was Billy and the girl's was Ruth.

It was high noon on June first, that Billy and Ruth, well bundled up in furs for it is cold at the North Pole, even in Summer, were swiftly driven over the clouds behind Santa's own reindeer to Santa Claus' workshop.

They were tingling with excitement, because, although they had seen his image in many stores, they had never spoken to Santa himself.

They were given a fine Christmas dinner, because Santa Claus serves Christmas dinners every day and they were then ushered into the study.

"How do you do, Billy? How do you do, Ruth?" Santa made them feel at home immediately.

"Hello, Santa Claus. It's funny coming to see you. You usually come to see us," Billy blurted out.

"Yes, Santa," Ruth chimed in, "Seeing you in June instead of in December is a little creepy."

Santa laughed his hearty laugh. "You are going to pick out the toys that we are going to make. We want you to say to yourself, Billy, 'If I were one year old, what would I like? If I were three years old, what would I want? At five, what could Santa give me to please me most?' and on up to the oldest boy.

You are to do the same thing, Ruth, for girls. Then, after we have made a model of each toy, you can pick out the colors and change it in any way you want. After each toy has been finished, you can put a picture of it in a book so that boys and girls may be sure of knowing just what we have done up here. Call it the 'Billy and Ruth Book.' After all your hard work, it may well bear your names."

"However, I only desire to try this experiment on a handful of children for the first year. Let us limit ourselves to one hundred thousand books. If this works out well, if your choices please other children, then in 1928 we can expand it to two hundred and fifty thousand Billy and Ruth Books. We will go slowly year by year and in a few years I will permit you to make your selections for several million boys and girls."

Billy and Ruth set to work at once. There was no time to lose. They picked out dolls and carriages, trains and magic sets. They selected automobiles and coaster wagons, chemistry sets and games, airplanes and boats. They put a stripe here, they decided on an organdie dress for that doll. They insisted on a chrome finish for a train set. They toiled. It was fun, but it was also hard work and at last all was ready. They then presented their finished work for Santa's inspection.

"Now, Billy and Ruth, this is what you want and this is what you will have. I will not make one single change." He then called the head gnome photographer and told him to make pictures of everything and to put the pictures in the Billy and Ruth Book. And that is how the Billy and Ruth Book came into being.

Children began to evince a new interest in Toys. They learned as they played. Perplexed parents were treated to a scientifically arranged toy book that simplified their toy problems. Storekeepers, far too busy with many other things to comb the markets, eagerly accepted the advice of Billy and Ruth.

Billy and Ruth, although they did not know it, joined the ranks of BIG BUSINESS.

And Santa Claus kept his promise. This year five million children will make their Christmas selections with Billy and Ruth in toy shops throughout the land.

In the meantime, they came upon the State officer in a radio car, and reported the incident to him. The officer returned with the boys to the corner where they had seen the man molesting the child, gave chase and fired at the man who escaped over a fence in the neighborhood running through the back yards of adjoining properties, and toward the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks. Several men in the community joined the hunt, but were unable to locate him Friday night. The child stated the man wanted her to go with him to buy some candy. Newark, Delaware, Thursday, December 5, 1940

SPEND IT WHERE YOU MADE IT

For about a year, now, we haven't written an editorial on "Shopping in Newark." But, with Christmas coming on and the peak buying season of the year at hand, we feel that a few words along these lines won't be amiss.

Approximately $42,000 in funds from the Christmas Clubs of Newark Banks has been received by more than the 1,000 weekly savers of Newark this week. We are among those who feel strongly that the majority of this money should be spent where it was earned — and that wasn't in Wilmington, Philadelphia or Baltimore. It was right here in good old Newark.

We beseech you, who were fortunate enough to receive your check this week, to consider well the merits of local merchants before you go off on an out-of-town Christmas shopping spree. Your local merchant is here every day in the year to serve you. He is appreciative of your patronage when you need some little thing that isn't worth driving fifteen or forty-five miles to purchase; he accommodates you by carrying all the merchandise his finances will permit. We think you owe it to him to spend every dollar you possibly can with him during the Christmas season.

Give the little fellow down on Main Street a break this year. Take your Christmas list to his store and buy every item on it you possible can from him. We believe you'll feel better for having done this and we are certain that it will be a forward step in the promotion of better relations and better business in our community.

Won't you think it over? Think, for a minute, what the local merchants mean to our community and what we would do without them. It would be a truly funny looking place without any stores along Main Street, wouldn't it? And, it is only by your patronage that they can survive.

THANKS TO GARDEN CLUB

Congratulations are due and herewith cordially extended to the Newark Garden Club for their proposal to sponsor a home lighting contest during the Christmas season.

We can think of no more worthy project during the Yuletide. Decorating of Newark homes has long been a custom hereabouts but we sincerely believe that such a contest will promote greater interest and more beautiful decorations and lighting effects. All of which will go a long way toward beautifying our community, fostering the Christmas spirit and offering townspeople an opportunity to ride around in their cars and view the competing residences during the holidays.

This is not the first time a contest of this nature has been proposed but it is the first time an organization has gotten squarely behind it and taken the responsibility for putting it over. We believe and hope that all home owners will cooperate with the Garden Club committee by decorating their homes in the full spirit of the contest and we further hope that this contest may prove to be an incentive to more home owners to decorate their residences this year.

TAGGING OUR BRAINS

In recent years there has been an ever increasing effort on the part of psychologists, psychiatrists, psychoanalysts, and what have you, to determine and classify the mental deficiencies of the well-known human race.

Some time ago a comprehensive survey of mental diseases by specialists in psychiatry and allied fields was undertaken. After nearly three years of labor, a new classification of such diseases has been published, the chief divisions of which are:

Amentia, neuroses, and psychoneuroses, schizophrenic neuroses, psychopathic constitution, affective and emotional psychoses, toxic psychoses, epileptic psychoses, organic brain disease psychoses, and other miscellaneous types. Which ought to catch nearly everybody on one count or another.

It is interesting to note in this connection that a mental diagnosis of the late Sigmund Freud, high priest of psychoanalysis and dream interpretation, revealed that he himself was a bit goofy, through "lack of inward integration."

Whether all these investigations in mental science and pseudo-science are doing us any practical good is a moot question. To a great extent, the conclusions reached by the so-called experts appear to be so much bunk, although some discoveries of value may have been made.

A close analysis would probably reveal that all of us are a little cracked, either habitually or occasionally. In fact, as someone has said, "crazy people are just like other people, only more so." And if, as some contend, crazy people are the happiest, why worry? But perhaps it is more fun to be nutty with a fancy psychosis.

Allen Rafkin and Frank Denham of Chicago, aged 11 and 12, respectively, didn't intend to wait for the draft to catch them. Equipped with trench helmets, knapsacks and canteens of milk, they were on their way "to join the Canadian army" when picked up in Michigan and returned to their homes.

In order to "make up to some extent" deficiencies in his education, Paul Mellon, 33, son of the late multi-millionaire, Andrew Mellon, will attend St. John's College at Annapolis, Md., this fall. He is already a graduate of Yale and of Clare College, Cambridge, England.

SLEEP ON IT LAURA GRAY

I'd heard that my friend, Alice Wilson, was "wonderful" in dealing with children, but I'd never had a chance to see her with them until she came to stay with us. I had just taken on the job of step-mother to three young children and was feeling like an inexperienced workman in a powerhouse. But I had a passionate desire to make a success of the venture.

"Getting the youngsters to bed is one of my hardest tasks," I said to her. "They seem to be particularly conscious of all their troubles at that hour."

"Let me see them to bed," ventured our visitor, who had played mother to her own brothers and sisters for years.

"Gladly," I agreed, "but just for once."

She smiled understandingly. I took a book into the living room, but could not concentrate, for how could I help listening?

There were the usual objections: "I don't want to go to bed!" "It isn't eight o'clock yet!" "Just let me finish this!"

I heard Alice's quiet voice in answer, but not the words.

Then Bobby's strident voice was lifted above the noise of the running bath water. "I'm not going to that school again. The teacher's mean. She kept me in—when it was Bert who threw the ink-ball!"

My temper was ruffled. Surely that matter should be looked into, and our boy have justice! Or, if he were telling a lie, he should be punished. I listened, breathless, for Alice's answer. But she began to sing. At the end of the gay little ballad, the child's voice piped up, "I don't have to go to that school, do I?"

"We'll see in the morning, Bobby," came the pleasant voice, and another song mingled with splashing, giggles and chuckles.

Then seven-year-old Mary was heard from. "I don't want to take music lessons any more, cause Fred Smith pushed me down and hurt my knee," she complained. "Look."

Just as I thought, That Smith boy was far too big and rough to be with little children. I'd better explain to Alice. I rose to interfere, but stopped at the door.

Alice's soothing voice was saying, "Let's not think about that now. This lovely cool ointment will make the knee better."

I went back and sat down, but was not satisfied. Such slipshod ways of dealing with problems were not right. By and by my friend came into the room. "The children want to say good night to you," she said, smiling.

As I arose to go, I determined to answer their questions, or at least to inquire into them—show my interest. But when I felt the happy, peaceful atmosphere of the children's room, I, too, decided to wait until morning.

Back in the living room, I asked, "Don't you think that such worries as Bobby's and Mary's should have some attention?"

"Yes," she answered, "but problems have a way of getting solved during sleep. In the morning a better solution often presents itself than could be reached the night before."

"The way students arrive at answers to difficult questions in mathematics, I suppose," I said half-teasingly.

"Just so," my friend agreed. "I learned long ago that it is best to 'sleep on it' before making important decisions about anything."

Weekly Sermon

Text—Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures.—Matthew 22:29.

My great grandmother thought that tomatoes were poison. But nowadays tomatoes are both a delicacy and a food. Why were they formerly forbidden? Merely because they were misrepresented.

It is thus with the Bible. Rid the Bible of its misrepresentations and tens of thousands would see in it the way of personal salvation.

Men try punning about the creation of the earth in seven days. But manifestly it is a misrepresentation of the Bible account. The Bible says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Where can one find seven days in that statement? It is immediately followed with: "The earth was (became) without form and void." Of course the punner does not search the Scriptures. If he did he would see that this earth was once wrecked and afterward was restored, and he would be ashamed of ever mentioning that the Bible claimed it was made in seven days.

The carper laughs at Psalm 34:20: "He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken," and he mentions the broken limbs and arms of thousands, including those of the godly. But his claim is a misrepresentation of the Bible. Had he observed that the first chapter of Hebrews quoted ten times from the Old Testament to establish the deity of Jesus, he would begin to notice how often Christ was set forth beforehand in the Psalms. He could have referred to the account of our Lord's crucifixion in the Gospel of John and read that, although the limbs of the two thieves were broken by the soldiers, Jesus' limbs were not broken. No, this is not a pledge that the bones of devout men shall not be broken, but a prophecy that our Lord's bones would not be broken, and even Roman soldiers were not allowed to nullify that Scripture.

Frequently we hear an attempt at Scripture quoting which runs, "The kingdom of heaven is within you." Men have built up great arguments of this misrepresentation. This passage should be translated, "among," or "in the midst of you." All one needs to do is to notice that our Lord was speaking to a group of Pharisees and he will readily conclude that Jesus did not mean that the kingdom was inside of them. But He did say that the kingdom was among them, for He Himself, who alone could bring it, establish and perpetuate it, stood in their midst.

Faith rests on, "Thus saith the Lord." We do well, therefore, to search the Scriptures, for in them we find the way of salvation and life.

Flashes By Fletcher's Ghost

WELL, WILLIE WENT AND DONE it! Yes sir, our Bill, affectionately known as "Flash", went off the deep end Friday afternoon and got himself married. To a mighty fine girl too, from all we hear. That Townsend girl it was—you remember Dottie Townsend, of course, who used to live down on Kent Way for so many years. Comes from one of the oldest and finest families in town too. We think Willie did right well by himself when Dottie said "yes"—not that she got any the worst of the bargain, mind you, for Willie is a right pert youngster himself. They'd been going together now for night onto three, four years, we hear, and seems like it was just one of those things you expect but still are a little bit surprised when it happens.

THINGS AIN'T JUST THE SAME around the office this week with Willie away. Yep, we sure do miss him. Miss his throaty rhythm in the composing room, too, for there ain't another of the boys can hold a candle to Willie when it comes to hittin' the high notes. He's always happy, that Willie is. All the time singing something or other that don't make sense nowadays. Lately he's been harping on that "There's a Man Who Comes to Our House" thing and it's so darn old all the rest of us have forgotten the words to it.

ANYWAY, WILLIE AND DOTIE are married. Went off somewhere down south on their honeymoon. We hear, although Willie wouldn't tell us at all where he was aiming to go—just didn't want to be bothered with telegrams and such, we reckon. But shucks, we wouldn't have sent him one anyway. Why, heck, he'll be back here before you can say "scat" and then we can tell him right face to face how all-fired happy we are for him and his bride.

THEY'RE GOING RIGHT TO housekeeping, we hear, when they get home. Right up in one of them pent houses in Handloff's new apartment building. Doing things up in fine style, that Willie of ours is. We was just thinking what a fine thing it would be if some of the boys got together when he gets back and gives him a real, old fashioned chivaree. We know that ain't the right way to spell it but you know what we mean. That's where a bunch of the fellers goes to call on the groom and takes him for sort of a ride. Course sometimes it does end up with him on the horny side of a old rail or fence post but, shucks, it's all in fun and we only get married once anyway—that is, most of us do.

WILLIE'LL BE GETTING HOME along Friday or Saturday night, we imagine, and Saturday night is one of the best nights for a chivaree we ever heard of. Bet Willie'd be right glad to see the boys if they came to welcome him and Dottie home too. Fact is, we can't think of anything that'd make the pair of them any happier.

WE TRIED OUR DURNDREST TO get Willie to wire us a detailed account of his honeymoon so we could print it in his column this week and, do you know, that onery cuss wouldn't do it. So, now here we are having to write something for him and we know he'll be plumb pleased with what he sees here—when he sees it. Course he'd a been too modest to ever suggest such a thing himself. That's why we do it for him.

WILLIE TRIED TO GET A GUEST columnist to pinch hit for him while he was gone but seems like he had worked all them to death during the past year and they wouldn't none of them help him out. That is none of them but us and, heck, we always did like Willie, that's why we're trying to fix things up nice for him when he gets back. We're even going to have his desk cleared off while he's away. We've even made a deal with Henry Mote to bring a truck over here and haul off the stuff that Willie's been accumulating on top of his desk for the past three years. Makes quite a pile, too, you bet. Know Willie'll appreciate that. He's always been a'going to clean that desk off but seems like he never has a week when there ain't something else pressin' to do.

YOU KNOW WILLIE'S A FUNNY feller. The other day he told us they was going to have a shower when they got in their new apartment. Well, we was like to do the right thing so we asked him what kind of a shower, so we could send a present, and you could have knocked us down with a feather when he said it was some kind of a new fangled adjustable gadget that squirts water in the bath tub.

WILLIE ALWAYS WRITES ABOUT sports in this column of his and we know he will be disappointed if we don't say something about football seen in as how the season has just ended and everybody is speculating on the various "bowl" games throughout the country on New Year's day. So, here we go out on a limb.

Rose Bowl—Stanford over Nebraska; Sugar Bowl—Tennessee over Boston College; Cotton Bowl—Texas A. & M. over Fordham; Orange Bowl—Mississippi over Lafayette (contingent, of course, on Lafayette being invited).

BANQUET FOR N. H. S. GRID TEAM WEDNESDAY

Informal Affair To Honor Yellow Jacket Squad; 16 Win Letters

Thirty nine members of the Newark High School 1940 Yellow Jacket football squad will be honored at the fifth annual football banquet in the high school auditorium at six o'clock Wednesday evening, Coach William K. Gillespie announced yesterday.

In keeping with the annual custom, the entire squad that finished its season with a 20-0 win over Conrad High School and polished off all other competition in the State except P. S. duPont, and a number of invited guests will write finis to a season that ended in a blaze of glory after a rather dismal outlook at the opening of practice.

Dinner, prepared and served by a committee of mothers of boys on the squad, will be served the more than seventy-five gridders and guests present.

Always strictly informal, Newark High School football banquets are eagerly looked forward to by both players and invited guests as they present a splendid occasion for a social meeting with team members and coaches.

Short talks will be made at the banquet by W. D. Kelleher, William D. Murray, U. of D. athletic director; Flucie Stewart, assistant athletic director and C. E. Douglass, superintendent of Newark's Public Schools.

J. Fenton Daugherty, president of the U. of D. Athletic Council will make the presentation of football letters to the following sixteen men who earned their "N" this year: Kenneth Barnes, William Balling, James Duffy, Franklin Dunn, Raymond Ewing, Harvey Gregg, James Kelley, Berry Wiggins, captain, Albert Aiken, Paul Cochran, Robert Davis, Francis Hill, Mortin McAllister, Elwood Moody, Joe Moore and Eugene Robinson.

Robert Doordan and Jack Levis, assistant varsity managers, Charles Weidman, midge manager, and Robert McCormick, midge coach, will be among the honored guests present. All male high school faculty and board of education members have also been invited to attend.

BLUE HEN FIVE WORKS ON BALL HANDLING

Drills on fundamentals have constituted the main part of practice sessions for the Delaware basketball candidates to date. Coach Flucie Stewart has emphasized the necessity of fast, clean ball handling, and importance of deception.

Coach Stewart has as the basis of his offense, the fast break. Once the opponent has missed a shot it is up to the other team to get that ball down floor without delay. This is quite a change from the system of Steve Grenda, who relied on "set plays," rather than speed. Because of this change in systems, it has been necessary for the new Hen mentor to instill fundamentals of the game into his players before advancing further.

On two occasions this week, the varsity squad was divided into two units, "Blues," and "Golds", and short scrimmage sessions were held. Although the boys looked awkward on occasions, Coach Stewart seemed pleased. He reminded them that they wouldn't expect to master a new technique immediately, and everyday would bring noticeable improvement.

The "Gold" squad, and presumably the first team, was made up of Captain Bill Gerow, Benny Crecenzi, Freddy Mitchell, George Barlow and Luke Selby. Barlow and Selby play a double pivot and the other three endeavor to work the ball into them. This does away with the conventional guards, forwards, and centers. In their place, the terms, pivot men, and floor men, are used. Selby and Barlow, because of their height, play the pivot positions. Selby stands around six foot six, while Barlow reaches to six foot four. In case more height is needed, Carley Douglass, local boy, may be inserted. He stands six foot seven.

The Blues, second team, is made up of Carly Douglass, Bob Papy, Howard Jarvis, Cas Blaess, and Conrad Sadowski. Sadowski made a late appearance due to a football injury received early

DIAPER DAN HITS FOUR WINNERS

Diaper Dan, Jr., boy prognosticator of the Newark Post during the recently conducted Football Forecaster's Contest, fared better than average on his weekly predictions although he did have a rough trip of it last week when he hit only four of the scores correct.

Pinning his faith on Army, Tulane, Oregon State, U. C. L. A., Washington State and Texas Christian proved to be the little man's undoing and all would have been lost had not Boston College, Stanford, Duke and Tennessee upheld his prestige by downing their opponents.

He wound up the season on the right side of the ledger, though, with fifty-seven winners and thirty-three losers out of the ninety predictions made for a better than 600 percent batting average. Not bad for a youngster.

40 N. H. S. HOPEFULS REPORT FOR NET DRILLS

Locals Court Season Opens With Conrad Here Dec. 17

Basketball practice for the 1940-41 season was inaugurated last week at the high school, when a squad of 40 boys reported for the first "call". Twenty boys survived the two "cuts" to make up the varsity and junior varsity teams.

Alfred Stiltz, Angelo Cotaldi, and Bill Bellman are lost from the varsity squad of last year. Charles Weidman, Robert Sheaffer, Joe Moore, and Kenneth Barnes are the lettermen remaining for this year to form the nucleus for the squad. James Duffy, a transfer from Darby High School should prove to be a valuable addition to the squad. His work to-date has been exceptionally good.

Duffy has been teamed with Barnes and Weidman at the forwards and Moore and Aiken at the guards. However, this line-up has been changed many times in an effort to find the best combination. Morrow and Slack have also worked at the forward positions with Balling, Kelly, Sheaffer at the guards. "Bob" McCormick and Lefty Riley have been alternating at the pivot post.

Other members of the squad are: Lynn Preston, Albert Thorpe, Don Huston, Mark McAllister, Wally Dunsmore, Ottavio Cotaldi, Earl Henderson, Harry Gray, George Schaen, Wayne Polari, Clifford Lee, and Andrew Walp. The schedule opens with Claymont at home on the night of December 17. The remainder of the schedule is as follows:

Dec. 19 — A. I. duPont, away; Jan. 3 — Conrad, here; Jan. 10 — P. S. duPont, here; Jan. 13 — A. U. OF D. MEN SELECT ALL OPPONENT' ELEVEN

Lebanon Valley, Ursinus And Sho' Men Win Three Places

Although the season officially ended with the Lebanon Valley game Thanksgiving Day, football remains a subject of considerable interest at the University of Delaware. Latest evidence of this was the selection of an all-opponent team submitted by the coaches and players.

Lebanon Valley, Ursinus, and Washington College each placed three men on the first eleven, while P. M. C. and Dickinson supplied the other two. The second team was slightly dominated by P. M. C. which held three positions, Hampden-Sydney and Johns Hopkins rated two each, while Lebanon Valley, Dickinson, Washington College and Ursinus placed one apiece.

Closest in the balloting was the fight for center between Alex Rakow, of Lebanon Valley, and Al Dudderer, of Washington College. The Washington College captain finally eking out a narrow victory, Nick Biscotte, 195 pound end for Ursinus, had the distinction of receiving practically a unanimous vote for the right end position. In the backfield the heaviest vote went to Lew Yerkes, Washington College, and Paul Augustine of Ursinus. Augustine is the boy who pitched strikes as Ursinus beat the Blue Hens, 25-0.

INTRAMURAL PROGRAM OBJECTIVES AT U. OF D.

Intramural Activities Are Advantageous To Athletic Program

(Editor's note: Due to the length of this article, written by Jos. A. Shields, Physical Education Instructor, it will be concluded in next week's paper.)

The word "intramural" means "within the walls"; therefore, intramural athletics and athletic activity conducted within the school itself is contrasted with athletic contests played between two or more schools. There is no conflict between properly conducted programs of intramural and interscholastic athletics. In fact, they both are a part of the same program. One group of activities should be complementary to the other. Both have places in the school program; they may be both deferred educationally; and each offers opportunities not necessarily possessed by the other.

Intramural activities form the basis of all athletics. All students should have the opportunity to compete regardless of their degree of skill. It is their inherent right to play or give expression to themselves through the intramurals. Coupled with the Physical Ed. program of the school, intramurals should receive a great deal of attention from those in charge of the general program. Primarily, intramural competition is for the students themselves. Of course, this also is the major objective of interschool athletic competition, yet there are school, student spectator, and community interests which must be given consideration. The intramural program should be set up as that the boys themselves may play the games in which they are interested individually. They also should have the

Mr. Burnett had a perfect slate with ten winners although he missed the Army-Navy score by seven points, his prediction being 13-7. He came through with the correct winners in all ten games, however, and earned the title to the first cash award. His ballot came from Jackson's Hardware.

A Newark girl, Mabel C. Armstrong, 240 West Main Street, won second award of a $2.50 Letter of Credit also with ten winners, her score on the Army-Navy contest being 7-8. Her ballot came from Rhodes Drug Store.

Another ten game forecaster, Harold Moyer, 152 Penn St., Norristown, Pa., won third place and the $1.50 Letter of Credit. His prediction on the service classic being 21-14. Mr. Moyer's ballot was clipped from the Newark Post and mailed in.

In striking contest to the first three winners who picked all ten games correctly were ten other forecasters who called the Army-Navy score right on the dot, 14-0, but failed to win a prize. Fourteen selectors picked nine winners correctly with fourth place and $1.00 Letter of Credit going to Charles M. Gibbs, 32 Kells Avenue who secured his ballot from Seydel's Service Station. His prediction on the Army-Navy game was 13-0.

Leon H. Ryan, Jr., won fifth award and $1.00 Letter of Credit by picking nine winners and calling the Army-Navy score at 12-0. His ballot came from Neighbor's Pharmacy.

benefits and interests, activities, and sportsmanship opportunities which may be realized by the school student body as a whole. The important thing in the school program policy is to be certain that one activity does not crowd out the other. Each should have its proper degree of emphasis. The problem is to find and maintain this. In many institutions it is not a case of de-emphasizing interscholastic athletics but rather that of building up or giving proper emphasis, attention, and recognition to the intramural program. Make intramurals attractive and worthwhile and they will pay dividends in interests on the part of a great mass of students who merely want a chance to play.

As school men came to realize that interscholastics did not achieve all the possible objectives in athletic competition, the development of intramurals interesting to the students, and adapted to average facilities. They should not require elaborate equipment or prolonged conditioning. Team games as well as individual sports should be promoted and all should be physically wholesome.

opportunity to learn new games; and, as a result of having learned them, they will acquire new skills and new interests.

Interscholastic athletics, by their very nature, are more selective than intramurals. This is not an indictment against the former if all the facts are kept in mind. Under no circumstances should a school consider that its interscholastic athletic program is a legitimate substitute for intramurals. As stated previously, each serves different purposes and achieves different ends. Intramurals may be likened to the general courses in the curriculum which are required of all students. They must take part in them because, by so doing, students lay the ground work for other activities and interests—so it is with intramurals.

In addition to the above benefits which are the result of participation in general curriculum courses, intramurals give students the chance to play which is the most important consideration. To give the analogy further, interscholastics may be considered in the light of elective courses allowed in the school's curriculum. Certain students, very naturally, are more proficient in athletic activities than are other students. They should be allowed to continue their athletics by means of interschool competition. The entire athletic policy, therefore, very easily may be in complete harmony with general objectives of the school program. Intramurals provide the opportunity for play experiences for all. Interscholastics allow for selection and concentration of comparatively few as far as instruction is concerned but there are consequent
