City places multispace meters into operation

Despite some "kinks" the new multispace meters have been operating at Newark's Municipal Parking Lot behind the Galleria since Jan. 13. The problem with dollar bills, evident by a note on this day, has since been corrected.

New meters are the way of the future for Newarkers

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A high tech parking meter system now installed at the Municipal Parking lot behind the Galleria and future Charcoal Pit on Main Street could eventually be used throughout the downtown area.

"These are more aesthetically pleasing," said Maureen Roser, assistant director of planning for Newark. "We will be putting them in all the municipal lots and could decide to go to them on the street as well."

Called "multispace parking meters," the new machines, which cost approximately $33,000 to purchase and install in the first lot, have been in use since Jan. 13.

"We're still working the kinks out," said parking director Hank Ross as he stood in the bitter cold on Tuesday. "Meanwhile, we're out here to help until they're working 100 percent."

Persons parking at the lot must first note their space number, painted on the pavement at the top and bottom of each parking spot. Then, they go to one of the two machines on the central median in the lot and punch in their number and put in their money.

The meters take both coins and bills and register parking time in half-hour increments. The parking expiration time will appear in the window. Each machine, which records transactions entered at either meter, has instructions on the front.

When the transaction is complete, the meter will print out a receipt which also indicates when the time expires for their space.

"The driver can present the receipt at businesses on Main Street which validate parking," said Roser. "They will receive a token for free parking time in any city lot on their next trip."

Parking enforcement officers will ensure that the meters are being used by those parking in the lot.

"Approximately every half hour, the officers will go to the machines and put in a code which tells whether a space has been paid for or not," said Roser. "Then the officer can check the spaces and ticket cars parked in expired or non-paying spaces."

Roser said the machines will also be used with a parking debit card. "When we get it set up, the cards will be available for $20 each at the parking office," she said. "They will only work in these machines - they aren't bank cards."

Roser said when the Charcoal Pit opens and the University of Delaware winter session is over, the city may need a third machine in the lot. "We'll monitor the situation for awhile to see if people get backed-up at the present machines, especially between classes."

The expanded lot is also getting new signage, lighting and landscaping. "We're hoping for the lighting by the end of the week," said Roser on Tuesday. "The landscaping is coming as soon as the weather permits."

City staff will erect signs throughout the lot

Brookside could go bankrupt

Meeting on Feb. 1 to explain crisis

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The maintenance association for the community of Brookside in Newark is trying to avert bankruptcy by appeals to the community's residents.

"We are facing a financial crisis," said association treasurer Betty Daniels. "Our only hope is a referendum to increase the annual dues."

On Feb. 1 at 7:30 p.m., the association is holding a public meeting in the community center to explain the need for the referendum. "We will have legislators, as well as the accountant for the community, here to explain what will happen if we go bankrupt," said Daniels.

Rose Yannes, president of Brookside Community Inc., said the association is responsible for 42 acres of parkland, including ballfields. "We do the landscaping, grass cutting and tree trimming on all the open space in Brookside, as well as maintain

Newark man disappeared seven years ago

A Newark man missing for over six years has finally been accounted for, according to police.

A news report at the time stated Paul G. Guarino, 35, disappeared on Jan. 19, 1993. On Aug. 8, 1999, children found skeletal remains which have now been identified as Guarino's in a heavily wooded and overgrown lot next to the Amtrak rail line on Old South Chapel Street. Newark Police used clothing, a handgun and other property found at the scene to determine his identity. Using DNA analysis, the medical examiner's office confirmed the identity and determined the cause of death to be a single gunshot wound. Police

Troopers injured in two-state, high speed car chase

Special from the Cecil Whig

A high-speed police chase on Route 40 that injured two Maryland state troopers and damaged two police cars ended Sunday with the Delaware driver's arrest.

Eric S. Darling, 22, of Felton, allegedly led police on a 19-mile police chase that started in New Castle County and ended near North East, Md., police said.

At 9:17 a.m. on Jan. 16, Darling was driving a 1986 Jeep Cherokee on Route 1 near Route 13 when Delaware State Police attempted to pull him over for an alleged traffic violation. But he continued on Route 1, took the Route 40 exit and headed for Elkton.

Maryland State Police picked up the pursuit on Route 40 at Whitehall Road as the vehicle continued westbound at about 75 m.p.h., police said. The vehicle failed to stop for traffic signals and passed other vehicles unsafely.

A Maryland Trooper deploying "stop sticks" on Route 40, east of Marley Road when Darling allegedly tried to run him over, ran out of the way and wasn't hurt.

Maryland troopers drove their police cars to the front and right side of Darling's vehicle.

Another trooper moved to the left side to block the suspect from making a U-turn. Darling then allegedly deliberately struck two of the police cars which together with Darling's car crossed the median and eastbound lanes ending up at the bottom of a ditch across from Town and Country Terrace Mobile Home Park.

The suspect fled on foot through a dense underbrush but was apprehended by a trooper. A helicopter from the Delaware State Police aided in the pursuit.

One trooper injured his left knee, and a second had several minor cuts to his face and hands caused by the dense underbrush. Darling complained of shortness of breath and minor scratches. All three were treated and released from Union Hospital in Elkton.

One of the two police cars damaged in the pursuit can't be driven, police said.

Darling was charged in Maryland with first-degree assault, three counts of second-degree assault, possession of marijuana, DWI and other traffic charges.

He was wanted in Delaware for outstanding felony charges and Delaware Police will charge him with traffic violations, also.

Guarino was well known in Newark located the gun under the body and believe the wound was self-inflicted.

A member of Glasgow High School's first graduating class of 1976, Guarino had moved back to Newark in Spring 1992 after living on the West Coast. The Kells Avenue resident said he had been a part-owner of a Los Angeles food business which provided catering services to people in the film industry.

In a feature story published in the Newark Post in November 1992, Guarino was operating a hot dog vending business on Main Street with partner Tony Triboletti in front of Wilmington Trust. Triboletti, who had been friends with Guarino for over 17 years, told reporters after the disappearance that he "did not believe his pal was suicidal."

Guarino's roommate at the time told investigators that Guarino left their rental in mid-afternoon and never returned. Guarino reportedly left behind more than $1,500 he had received in a recent sale of his Harley Davidson motorcycle, along with his house keys, his wallet and the keys to the fuel tank of his 1988 white Suzuki Samurai. The car was found parked near Pep Boys at the College Square Shopping Center on Feb. 1, 1993.

Police at the time said a 9-mm handgun and the box it was stored in were missing from Guarino's residence. Several terrain searches near the shopping center and Guarino's home failed to locate him or any other evidence in 1993.

Guarino's friend of 22 years, Matt Mondel, told reporters that he didn't think his friend had committed suicide. Mondel said Guarino would have done it more publicly, if at all. "He had a flare for the dramatic," said Mondel in 1994.

According to Mondel, Guarino, whom he had known since high school, attended Salisbury State University in Maryland on a wrestling scholarship, but left school after a neck injury in an accident.

His family offered a reward for information but nothing ever was reported until last summer's discovery.

Man charged in Internet sex case

New Castle County police arrested a Newark man for sexual solicitation of a child after he allegedly solicited sex via the Internet from an undercover police officer who posed as a 14-year-old female. New Castle County Police received information from a citizen in Texas about a possible sexual predator who was soliciting sex from young girls on the Internet.

The undercover officer opened an account posing as a 14-year-old female and made contact with the suspect who immediately inquired about the officer's age. A short time later, the suspect began engaging in sexually explicit chat with the supposed 14-year-old. Over a period of several weeks, the suspect suggested several times that he and the undercover officer should meet to engage in sexual activity.

On Jan. 12, at 8 p.m., the suspect arranged a meeting with the undercover officer, believing he was a 14-year-old female, at a predetermined place on Christiana Road, near Court 11. The suspect responded to the location after soliciting sex from the officer. Police arrested Scott Anthony Roberts, 25, of the Buckingham Place Apartments at the scene without incident.

Graffiti arrest made

Newark Police concluded a three-week investigation into graffiti incidents with the arrest of Brian J. Durkee of Newark. He is charged with 49 counts of criminal mischief to property belonging to 17 victims at businesses and properties on Main Street and Elkton Road, including those belonging to the city of Newark and the state of Delaware. The graffiti investigation is continuing.

Two men charged in robbery incident

Newark Police arrested Ronald O. Miller, 20, and Elijah McDaniel II, 21, both of Newark, after victims of a robbery reported the suspects were back in the area. The two were taken into custody without incident in the 100 block of Madison Drive. They are charged with robbery, burglary, possession of a deadly weapon during the commission of a felony, criminal mischief, conspiracy, assault, aggravated menacing and resisting arrest.

advising people about the new multispace system. "We will also have signs warning drivers they can enter and exit on Delaware Avenue, but can only enter from Main Street," Roser said. "People might get confused now that there isn't a booth where they pay to exit."

Roser said the meters are used around the world, especially in Europe, and came highly recommended by officials in the city of Lewes, Del.

"They don't use the tokens in Lewes, as we are doing, but otherwise they are just the same," Roser explained. "They are very low maintenance."

When a part in the machine wears out or malfunctions, it can be removed and a new one installed instantly. "The replacement parts come in components," said Ross.

The meter machines also are "highly secure," according to Ross and Roser. "They retest themselves every five minutes to make sure they are operating correctly," said Ross. "And no one can get the money out — not even me."

Roser explained that the meters' payments go into a locked box which is removed unopened and taken to another location for counting.

"We are considering taking it directly to the bank for counting," said Roser. "We have to decide how to handle the tokens, though."

CALEA and Newark Police welcome public comment

A team of assessors from the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies Inc. (CALEA), arrived this week to examine policies and procedures in the Newark Police Department.

According to Police Chief Gerald T. Conway Jr., this review is being conducted during the department's renewal of its original accreditation earned three years ago.

As part of the on-site process, the public is invited to offer comments at a public information session on Tuesday, Jan. 25, at 7 p.m. in the Newark Police headquarters, 220 Elkton Road, Newark.

Individuals who cannot attend this meeting can provide comments to the CALEA assessors by calling 366-7119 on Tuesday, Jan. 25, between 1 and 5 p.m.

All comments are limited to 10 minutes and must address the CALEA standards. A copy of the standards are available at the police department.

Persons may also send written comments to: Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies Inc., 10306 Eaton Place, Suite 320, Fairfax, Va., 22030-2201. For more information, call 800-368-3757.

Crosswalk plan to be discussed by City Council

Following a review of various matters involving the Newark Traffic Relief Committee and a downtown Newark crosswalk, Newark's Mayor Hal Godwin said this week he does not believe that group has exceeded their authority.

"I was concerned that they were setting policy in traffic matters instead of simply reporting to council as they are supposed to do," said Godwin.

At the city council meeting on Jan. 10, both council and city staff members expressed concerns about possible confusion when more than one group was studying and recommending traffic changes in Newark.

Godwin said he checked with the city staff and others about the situation and found that the NTRC has been acting as directed by the mayor and council. (See Guest Opinion, page 7, this issue).

"However, there are still questions about the crosswalk, so we are having a public meeting in council on Feb. 28 to review the recommendations," he said.

According to Godwin, council will receive recommendations from both the Downtown Newark Partnership and the NTRC to discuss at that meeting. "Members of the public are also welcome to present their views," he said. "But council will make the final decision and talk to DelDOT."

Osborne decides to run for another City Council term

Frank Osborne, who came out of retirement to run successfully for city council in Newark's 5th District in 1998, has decided to run again.

"I've enjoyed my service on council these past two years," said Osborne, who was previously a city councilmember in the 1st District from 1968 to 1972. "I've already decided I want to run again."

Osborne said he believes council has a lot of good things going on. "I'd like to see some things through, like the water situation for one," he said this week. "I'm very proud of Newark and what we've been doing."

In addition to the usual city council duties, Osborne recently became Newark's first councilmember to go to Dover to lobby the Delaware General Assembly for Newark issues. "I'm really the only (councilmember) free during the day to do it right now," he said. "I will spend whatever time I have to there and work with other lobbyists."

Rick Armitage, lobbyist and director of government relations for the University of Delaware, already volunteered to introduce Osborne to the legislative rounds.

As of Wednesday, no other persons had filed to run in the April 4 city election. The seats in District 3 and 6, presently held by Karl Kalbacher and Gerald J. Grant Jr. respectively, are also up for election.

Delaware school reform receives bad grades

Delaware's decade-long effort at classroom accountability is nothing more than "lip service," according to a nationwide report which was widely dismissed by members of the Carper administration and the state teachers union.

The report, by the politically conservative Thomas B. Fordham Foundation, ranks Delaware's education standards as mediocre. The group, however, raised the grade it gave Delaware from D-plus last year to C-plus this year.

Acting Secretary of Education Valerie Woodruff called the Fordham report "annoying" because it didn't review what was happening in the classroom.

"It's a review of paper," she said. "They look at what's in writing. It's certainly got to be more than paper."

The report came just days before the issue of education reform was again taken up in the General Assembly, which reconvened last week. The state senate almost immediately approved a compromise version of the bill. However, state representatives called for public hearings this week and did not expect to take legislative action until March.

In its report, Washington-based Fordham gave only five states credit for combining solid academic standards with strong accountability. Those states were Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, California and Texas.

Arizona, Massachusetts and South Dakota were recognized as having good standards in place, but weak systems to hold teachers, students and others to those standards.

Delaware ranked with Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, Ohio, New Hampshire, Utah and Wisconsin as "going through the motions" of reforming education, the report claims.

Chester E. Finn Jr., Fordham president and a former Reagan administration education adviser, said most states have not even successfully completed the first step in embracing standards and accountability in the schools.

Delaware lawmakers adopted stricter learning standards for students three years ago, and in 1998, Carper signed into law consequences for those pupils who fail to meet those standards.

However, last year's debate over a teacher accountability bill prompted the state to postpone student accountability measures.

The Fordham report got a flunking grade from the Delaware State Education Association, the union of public school teachers.

"I don't think it's worth the papers it's written on," said Pam Nichols, spokeswoman for the union. "To say that we have little or no accountability is absurd. Talk to any of the hundreds of parents who came out to the hearings last fall and tell them we have no accountability and they'd be horrified."

Highway Safety officials release results of statewide seatbelt survey

The Del. Office of Highway Safety released the results of its recent statewide seatbelt survey of drivers and front seat passengers to determine how many are buckling up. Statistics reveal that 36 percent of Delawareans surveyed are still not using seatbelts.

The survey was conducted at 80 locations throughout Delaware. Results determined the overall seatbelt usage rate for Delaware to be 64 percent. Sussex County showed great improvement over 1998's figures with a usage rate of 67 percent, Kent County's rate is 64 percent and New Castle County came in below the statewide average at 63 percent.

While the new statewide rate is an increase of two percentage points from the previous year, highway safety officials say that is not enough.

"We still have far too many people dying on our roadways because they are not taking time to buckle up," said Tricia Roberts, director of the Office of Highway Safety.

Delaware's new usage rate also falls far below the national average of 69 percent. And while the number of fatalities and fatal crashes in the First State continued to fall, the number of people who were not buckled up when they were killed in a car crash is skyrocketing.

Movie theater may open again

The abrupt closing of the Cinema Center in the Newark Shopping Center saddened people old and young who used to attend movies there.

"I feel really bad," said Bear resident Kathy Burr. "That's where I met my husband. He used to be the manager."

According to theater chain owners American Multi-Cinema Inc., the company decided not to renew its lease when it expired at the end of December. Instead, the company plans to focus on multiple screen complexes and advanced technology.

While it only had three screens, the Cinema Center was beloved for its intimacy and accessibility to Newarkers. "I went by and all the windows were empty," said Newark resident Martin Groundland. "I can't believe it - I went there a lot."

Groundland, a retired Christina School District principal, said he preferred

the smaller theater to the more congested megaplexes.

A man who did not want his name used said he purchased gift certificates for his parents at the theater in December. "I wondered why they kept telling me the certificates could be used worldwide," he said. "I bought a gift certificate for Saigon Vietnam restaurant, too, so my parents could have dinner and go to the movies there. They should have said they were closing."

Christine Schaff, vice president of marketing for First Washington Realty Trust Inc., current owners of the shopping center, said they are negotiating with another theater manager to operate at the site.

AMC has now closed all of its theaters in New Castle County except one in Stanton. The company operates two megaplexes in Delaware County, Pa.

Delaware school reform receives bad grades

Delaware's decade-long effort at classroom accountability is nothing more than "lip service," according to a nationwide report which was widely dismissed by members of the Carper administration and the state teachers union.

The report, by the politically conservative Thomas B. Fordham Foundation, ranks Delaware's education standards as mediocre. The group, however, raised the grade it gave Delaware from D-plus last year to C-plus this year.

Acting Secretary of Education Valerie Woodruff called the Fordham report "annoying" because it didn't review what was happening in the classroom.

"It's a review of paper," she said. "They look at what's in writing. It's certainly got to be more than paper."

The report came just days before the issue of education reform was again taken up in the General Assembly, which reconvened last week. The state senate almost immediately approved a compromise version of the bill. However, state representatives called for public hearings this week and did not expect to take legislative action until March.

In its report, Washington-based Fordham gave only five states credit for combining solid academic standards with strong accountability. Those states were Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, California and Texas.

Arizona, Massachusetts and South Dakota were recognized as having good standards in place, but weak systems to hold teachers, students and others to those standards.

Delaware ranked with Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, Ohio, New Hampshire, Utah and Wisconsin as "going through the motions" of reforming education, the report claims.

Chester E. Finn Jr., Fordham president and a former Reagan administration education adviser, said most states have not even successfully completed the first step in embracing standards and accountability in the schools.

Delaware lawmakers adopted stricter learning standards for students three years ago, and in 1998, Carper signed into law consequences for those pupils who fail to meet those standards.

However, last year's debate over a teacher accountability bill prompted the state to postpone student accountability measures.

The Fordham report got a flunking grade from the Delaware State Education Association, the union of public school teachers.

"I don't think it's worth the papers it's written on," said Pam Nichols, spokeswoman for the union. "To say that we have little or no accountability is absurd. Talk to any of the hundreds of parents who came out to the hearings last fall and tell them we have no accountability and they'd be horrified."

Highway Safety officials release results of statewide seatbelt survey

The Del. Office of Highway Safety released the results of its recent statewide seatbelt survey of drivers and front seat passengers to determine how many are buckling up. Statistics reveal that 36 percent of Delawareans surveyed are still not using seatbelts.

The survey was conducted at 80 locations throughout Delaware. Results determined the overall seatbelt usage rate for Delaware to be 64 percent. Sussex County showed great improvement over 1998's figures with a usage rate of 67 percent. Kent County's rate is 64 percent and New Castle County came in below the statewide average at 63 percent.

While the new statewide rate is an increase of two percentage points from the previous year, highway safety officials say that is not enough.

"We still have far too many people dying on our roadways because they are not taking time to buckle up," said Tricia Roberts, director of the Office of Highway Safety.

Delaware's new usage rate also falls far below the national average of 69 percent. And while the number of fatalities and fatal crashes in the First State continued to fall, the number of people who were not buckled up when they were killed in a car crash is skyrocketing.

Movie theater may open again

The abrupt closing of the Cinema Center in the Newark Shopping Center saddened people old and young who used to attend movies there.

"I feel really bad," said Bear resident Kathy Burr. "That's where I met my husband. He used to be the manager."

According to theater chain owners American Multi-Cinema Inc., the company decided not to renew its lease when it expired at the end of December. Instead, the company plans to focus on multiple screen complexes and advanced technology.

While it only had three screens, the Cinema Center was beloved for its intimacy and accessibility to Newarkers. "I went by and all the windows were empty," said Newark resident Martin Groundland. "I can't believe it - I went there a lot."

Groundland, a retired Christina School District principal, said he preferred

the smaller theater to the more congested megaplexes.

A man who did not want his name used said he purchased gift certificates for his parents at the theater in December. "I wondered why they kept telling me the certificates could be used worldwide," he said. "I bought a gift certificate for Saigon Vietnam restaurant, too, so my parents could have dinner and go to the movies there. They should have said they were closing."

Christine Schaff, vice president of marketing for First Washington Realty Trust Inc., current owners of the shopping center, said they are negotiating with another theater manager to operate at the site.

AMC has now closed all of its theaters in New Castle County except one in Stanton. The company operates two megaplexes in Delaware County, Pa.

Newark rookies begin 12-week field training

Newark's first group of rookie police officers to go through 12 weeks of field training are on their way.

According to Media Officer Mark Farrall, new officers Jay Conover, Scott Rieger and Kerry Reinbold all graduated from the police academy in December. "Two are from Pennsylvania and one is from Wilmington," said Farrall. "They are all in their 20s and all have college degrees in criminal justice."

As a result of a fatal railroad accident at the Deer Park intersection in July 1999, Newark Police Chief Gerald Conway announced that field training for new officers would be increased from eight to 12 weeks. The department also instituted other changes, including revised procedures to be used by all personnel in motor vehicle stops in hazardous locations.

A Delaware Attorney General investigation found there was insufficient evidence to file charges against the officers in that incident where a passenger died after a train struck the vehicle which stopped on the tracks.

Farrall said the new officers would be directly supervised while in field training. "They will still be supervised once off field training, but it will be informal," said Farrall.

The Newark Police Department now has 51 officers on a force currently authorized for 56. "We are in the final stages of the hiring process for the additional candidates," said Farrall. Those slots should be filled by the end of January.

Farrall said a new police academy starts in March and lasts six months. "Once we are at full complement, we plan to assign two veteran officers to Main Street," said Farrall. "The exact details are not worked out, but they will be assigned to nothing but Main Street during their patrols."

Businesses and community members have requested more patrols in the downtown area because of increased vandalism and disorderly conduct, especially on weekends.

Dues increase is association's only hope explained. "We also have to pay an accountant, a lawyer, court costs to collect dues, a secretary, and one fulltime and one part time maintenance worker."

The community residents who serve on the association's board of directors are all volunteers. "Some people think we get paid," Yannes said. "We don't - and it's a lot of work."

Daniels said the referendum is scheduled for 6 to 8 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 4, and 8 to 10 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 5, at the community center off Marrows Road. "We haven't had a dues increase for some time," Daniels explained. "The problem is, a lot of people don't pay their dues at all."

According to Yannes, the association publishes a list of the delinquent property owners in their monthly newsletter. "We take them to court and put liens against their property," she said, "but we still have to keep putting out the money whether they pay us or not."

Yannes said without a $10 increase to the $35 annual dues, the corporation will be defunct in a year. "There will be no board to enforce the deed restrictions in the community and no one will cut the grass or maintain the property," she said. "That will affect the properties adjacent to the open space."

In addition, groups like the Brookside Bambinos and Brookside Soccer may not be able to use the playing fields. "I don't know what will happen," Yannes said. "Those groups have built storage sheds and helped maintain the fields for years."

Among the legislators invited to attend the public meeting are state senators Steven Amick (R-Newark West), and Anthony DeLuca (D-Varlano), and state representatives Stephanie Ulbrich (R-Newark South) and William Oberle (R-Beecher's Lot). County councilmember Karen Venezky is also expected to provide information.

Yannes said when Brookside first opened in 1953, the community also had its own police force. "Later, we paid New Castle County for extra patrols to drive through each day, but we even had to discontinue that, because we no longer have the funds."

Flu information available online

In response to the overwhelming demand for medical advice about the flu, KidsHealth.org has established "The Flu Center" at <http://www.kidshealth.org>, a web site where families can access the latest medical information for the prevention, treatment and debunking of myths about the flu virus.

With many nations experiencing the worst flu season in recent memory, and pediatricians' offices filled beyond capacity, parents are turning to the 24/7 availability of online health information at KidsHealth.org, the leading online source of health information for parents, kids and teens.

"With more than 8 million visitors a year, KidsHealth.org is already the first place parents turn for online kids health information," said Neil Izenberg, M.D., editor-in-chief. "As families struggle with the latest strain of the flu, KidsHealth.org provides timely, accurate and reliable information from the world's largest resource of pediatric expertise."

Visitors to the "Flu Center" will get expert medical advice like the top five ways to prevent a child from contracting flu: avoid crowds, if possible; wash your hands frequently; don't touch used tissues; avoid touching your face, ears, mouth or eyes; and wash common surfaces frequently.

In addition, visitors can get information on the warning signals a child might have the flu, ways to treat a child at home, and indicators when a child needs to see a doctor.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), during the weeks of December 19, 1999, through January 1, 2000, 35 states reported either widespread or regional outbreaks of the influenza virus, more commonly known as the "flu." Passed by person-to-person contact or through contact with a contaminated surface, children are among those most susceptible to contracting the illness. In addition, they can often develop gastrointestinal symptoms, such as nausea and vomiting, which are not common in adults.

KidsHealth.org is a project of The Nemours Foundation Center for Children's Health Media, which helps families make informed decisions about children's healthcare through high quality educational media. The Center is operated by The Nemours Foundation, the largest nonprofit organization devoted to the direct health care of children, and is unique for its creation of and commitment to children's health media.

All content on the site is reviewed extensively by pediatric generalists and specialists. For more information visit <http://www.kidshealth.org> or contact Madeleine Boyer at 651-6786 or Eric Hollreiser at 215-790-4371.

Newark Police want your honest opinion

On Tuesday, assessors from the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies Inc. (CALEA) will be in Newark to take public comment regarding the local police department's compliance with professional standards.

The Newark Police spent over two years preparing and presenting their original case to earn international accreditation from this respected organization. Now, CALEA assessors are back for the mandatory process required for continued accreditation.

Part of the process involves input from the citizens a police agency serves. Three years ago, Newark's city council chamber was packed with residents and representatives from community organizations who wanted to speak about how highly they regarded the police department and its officers.

Since that time, the department has committed itself to maintaining the more than 400 standards they met to earn accreditation, as well as preparing for renewal. As the police chief at that time noted, this is an ongoing process in which the work never ends.

Unfortunately, the process is overshadowed now by the tragic accident which occurred last July at the railroad crossing near the Deer Park Hotel in downtown Newark.

A lot of people made mistakes that night, starting with the driver who had been drinking and the passengers who rode with him. Surely no one who was thinking clearly would stop on railroad tracks — even briefly — for any reason, especially when he already had ignored a following police vehicle for some distance.

The police officers on the scene made mistakes. No one has denied that and the department has administered internal punishment of these officers.

But a review by the State Attorney General's office cleared the officers of any criminal wrong. This accident was a mistake, a terrible mistake that resulted in a man's death, but it was a mistake and mistakes happen no matter how careful people are.

The CALEA assessors will be amply aware of this incident, as well as all the details surrounding it and whether any of the necessary professional standards were lacking or unmet on this occasion. The current police chief has stated that additional procedures and training time were mandated for the department following the accident.

The accreditation was hard-earned in the first place, and we owe it to ourselves as a community to expect the best of those who literally work to preserve it. We also owe it to ourselves to be honest when mistakes are made.

The Newark Police as a department and as individual officers deserve the community's respect and continued support. We hope as many people as possible will take the opportunity to voice their opinions of the work these men and women do, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 52 weeks a year.

But we also hope those opinions will be formed first hand and not through unconfirmed gossip and second hand accounts.

The reputation of the city and the entire police force, not just the actions of individuals in one incident, are at stake here.

Private lands conservation: A challenge for the new century

By DAN GLICKMAN

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

At the beginning of the last century, under the leadership of President Theodore Roosevelt, the nation set aside certain natural treasures that deserved the unique protection of public ownership. That was the beginning of our system of national parks and forests, and eventually wildlife refuges, grasslands, seashores and wilderness areas.

Today, as we prepare for this new century, we must step up our commitment to the conservation of America's private lands.

Our farmers and ranchers have an enormous responsibility. They represent just two percent of the population. But in addition to providing a safe, abundant and affordable food supply, they are also responsible for the stewardship of about half of the American landscape.

For 65 years, since the other President Roosevelt — FDR — led us out of the dust-bowl, the federal government has helped farmers meet that responsibility. Farmers want to do the right thing by the land. And USDA has given them the tools and resources they need to keep their operations both economically and environmentally sustainable.

That partnership with farmers has allowed us to make major conservation gains over the years. But a recent analysis by the Department of Agriculture indicated that, today, many conservation challenges are mounting faster than we are solving them.

For example, from 1992 to 1997, development swallowed up almost 16 million acres of agricultural and forest land. That is twice the amount lost during the previous ten-year period. Nearly two billion tons of soil is eroding into waterways each year. Despite significant gains in erosion control during the past 15 years, there has been no improvement since 1995. And gross wetland losses on agricultural land have increased to 54,000 acres a year.

Part of the reason we are losing ground is inadequate federal dollars, and we at USDA continue to fight for adequate funding levels. But our commitment, as a society, to conservation has also slipped a bit since we have become more urbanized and increasingly disconnected from the land. To renew that commitment, we have to build partnerships and tap the power of grassroots activism. That was the idea behind the day-long Private Lands Conservation Summit that I convened in Ames, Iowa.

This public gathering brought together all stakeholders to examine conservation problems and discuss potential solutions. The strength of the summit was the broad cross-section of participants — farmers, Fortune 500 executives, academic scholars, elected officials and environmental advocates, all bringing their unique per-

Flames trap family In Main St. home

Newark's peaceful afternoon siesta was rudely broken Sunday afternoon last when local fireman, college students, and neighbors fought a stubborn partition fire in the Maxwell building on Main street, tenanted by A. Finkernagle, grover and fruit dealer.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hollobough and three infant children, who were occupying the second floor of the building, were rescued from possible suffocation in the dense smoke by prompt work on the part of neighbors and students.

Governor faces a tough year

Gov. Pierre S. duPont IV says a sales tax may be a possibility as he looks ahead toward the roughest year a Delaware governor could ever face.

The sales tax may be needed, duPont hints, to pay for the court ordered desegregation of New Castle County public schools. Desegregation, says duPont, is the state's "biggest challenge of the year."

If the state is forced to pay for the leveling up of salaries, a sales tax would have to be considered, duPont indicated. "Where on earth would we get it (the money)?" he asked.

911 dials uncertainty for police

While expressing their strong support for the concept of a universal emergency telephone number in New Castle County, police departments in Wilmington and Newark are voicing reservations about the county's plans for implementing its 911 emergency telephone system.

"I can't think of anybody in Newark who opposes the idea of 911," said Mayor William Redd.

"The theory is sound, but the implementation leaves me cold."

Residents gripe over UD garage

Construction of the University of Delaware's parking garage is almost finished, but controversy surrounding the project has resurfaced.

Orchard Avenue residents believe the garage exit that empties onto Delaware Avenue is not what university officials promised it would be.

University administrators presented their plans for the 600-space parking garage, tentatively scheduled to open Feb. 6, to Newark City Council in September 1993.

Although many Newarkers were in attendance to oppose the project, there was really nothing city council members could do to stop it.

If the state is forced to pay for the leveling up of salaries, a sales tax would have to be considered, duPont indicated. "Where on earth would we get it (the money)?" he asked.

911 dials uncertainty for police

While expressing their strong support for the concept of a universal emergency telephone number in New Castle County, police departments in Wilmington and Newark are voicing reservations about the county's plans for implementing its 911 emergency telephone system.

"I can't think of anybody in Newark who opposes the idea of 911," said Mayor William Redd.

"The theory is sound, but the implementation leaves me cold."

Residents gripe over UD garage

Construction of the University of Delaware's parking garage is almost finished, but controversy surrounding the project has resurfaced.

Orchard Avenue residents believe the garage exit that empties onto Delaware Avenue is not what university officials promised it would be.

University administrators presented their plans for the 600-space parking garage, tentatively scheduled to open Feb. 6, to Newark City Council in September 1993.

Although many Newarkers were in attendance to oppose the project, there was really nothing city council members could do to stop it.

Three-story building to go up on State Theater land?

The property where the State Theater once stood, across from Treats on Main Street, will be home to a three-story brick building, presuming Newark City Council okays a small subdivision.

GUEST OPINION

Downtown crosswalk will be reviewed by all concerned

By MAYOR HAL GODWIN

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

On Feb. 28, Newark's city council will decide how pedestrians will cross Main Street between Rainbow Records and the new Charcoal Pit. This crosswalk has helped New Yorkers and visitors alike cross our busy Main Street for many years. People simply step up to the edge of the street, automobiles stop, pedestrians walk across fairly well without incident.

In 1999, city council sent a resolution to DelDOT requesting all pedestrian crossings in Newark be standardized to end confusion for pedestrians and motorists. Based on this request, DelDOT changed this Main Street crossing to operate in tune with our new Monarch Traffic Computer Control System by holding pedestrians on the curb until automobile traffic can be stopped to allow safe crossing for pedestrians.

This change of operation inconvenienced and upset many people who complained to City Hall. The city manager's office called DelDOT and insisted the crosswalk be reverted back to its former operation until this change could be considered further. DelDOT complied and our Main Street pedestrians were returned to their former convenience.

On Nov. 10, 1999, a meeting was convened of DelDOT officials, city officials, and the Newark Traffic Relief Committee chairman in my office to discuss this crosswalk. Coincidentally, I passed through my office that day to pick up some papers related to another issue and found these folks in my office.

They asked me what I thought about the Main Street crosswalk. Gene Donaldson from DelDOT explained that he could not guarantee the Monarch Computer System to operate optimally if it does not control all pedestrian crosswalks. I replied "you folks can work this issue out" and I left.

At the last city council meeting on Jan. 10, we discussed how the City should communicate with DelDOT concerning traffic policy versus operational matters. I replied that I was vaguely familiar with some problems and would try to resolve this issue this week.

On Jan. 13, the Downtown Newark Partnership met and decided to request City Council to consider leaving this crosswalk as it is and not to accept the DelDOT and Newark Traffic Relief Committee's recommendations.

In closing, let me say that the Newark Traffic Relief Committee is doing a fine job of addressing traffic issues just as I have asked.

This issue of the crosswalk on Main Street has gained so much more public concern that we will have a public hearing on Feb. 28 so that all folks in Newark concerned about this crosswalk can give their input before council makes a final decision on the operation of this important crosswalk in the center of our city.

spective and particular expertise to the table. It was a very productive meeting, which I hope will be the beginning of a national dialogue on private conservation issues.

I am committed to working with Iowa Governor Tom Wilsack to report to President Clinton on the outcome of the Summit. We will recommend concrete steps to bring these conservation issues to the attention of all the nation's governors and to begin a collaborative effort that will yield meaningful and lasting solutions.

It has to begin with all Americans recognizing their responsibility to the environment. Our treatment of our natural resources, is after all our legacy. Our grandchildren and their grandchildren will either live with the consequences of our neglect or reap the benefits of our stewardship.

We know how to meet the conservation challenges of this new millennium. We have the tools to do it. We have the most state-of-the-art environmental technologies at our disposal. We're familiar with all the best practices.

Now, we have to marshal the resources and forge the new partnerships to make it happen. And most of all, we have to muster the will to do what we know is the right thing.

Fathering your adolescent

While there is doubt whether adolescence is as stressful for youth as we once thought, there is considerable evidence that it is a difficult time for parents. In fact, research on life satisfaction showed that the lowest levels of well-being were reported by parents of adolescents, especially fathers.

By Maria Pippidis

Some of the reasons given for the difficulties of parenting an adolescent include loss of control over the adolescent and fear for the adolescent's safety due to increased independence. The primary reasons cited for parental stress include the adolescent's push for freedom, failure to follow parental advice, and deviant behavior.

A 1996 Gallup Poll indicated that more than 90 percent of the respondents agreed that "fathers make unique contributions to their children's behavior." So, Dads, don't give up!

Fathering an adolescent may feel like you're losing control over your teen's behavior. Trying to counter that loss of control by constraining him/her more may drive the teen away. Instead, focus on controlling your behavior and making adjustments in your fathering skills. As a father, there are many ways you can strengthen your relationship with your adolescent. One of most important ways to connect with your adolescent is to understand the teen's world. Adolescence is a time of change and transition, in almost every aspect of life. These include their social lives, psychological change, physical and sexual maturation, as well as their reasoning and thinking abilities.

Parental support is a fundamental contribution you can make to your adolescent's development. The greater the parent's support, the greater the adolescent's social competence (self-esteem, moral behavior, academic achievement). Support can be shown in several ways, such as physical affection, companionship, and sustained contact.

Spans generations with music

If any of the Urban Wombats' youthful trio were nervous last Saturday, it didn't show as they took command of a local stage performing both original and cover music with cool confidence and composed humor.

Lounging on bean bag chairs that lay in front of a ground-level stage, a group of teens soaked in the melodies of songs performed by the band with the unusual name at the Unitarian Universalist Church on Willa Road in Newark.

"We want to make this informal," announced vocalist and guitar and piano player James Cleare as the concert began. "We want to interact with the audience and keep it sentimental."

In storyteller fashion, the three members of the band, Cleare, 17, Heather Robb, 16, and James Smith, 16, performed, all the while keeping the mood light and relaxed.

The band wasn't performing for just a few good friends. Behind the bean bag loungers was a packed house of more than 75 people.

The concert, which was sponsored by the church's youth group, was put on to benefit an adopted family that receives support from Newark's Unitarian Church. Proceeds from the concert's ticket and refreshment sales are to be used to supply a family of six with necessities.

Harvey Manchester, director of religious education at the church, described the concert as a way to bring people together.

"Part of the reason for this concert is to give people across generational lines the opportunity to be together," Manchester said.

In the audience were people ranging in age from infant to beyond 60; and the Urban Wombats found a way to cover the gamut.

Their songlist included popular ballads of Sarah McLachlan and Ben Fold's Five, in addition to the cool tunes of Dave Matthews and back to the 70's music like Space Cowboy by the Steve Miller Band.

Considering their ages, the accomplishments of the group are impressive.

Not only was the group able to memorize and rehearse many cover songs for their two-hour performance, but they also wrote, produced and performed their own music and lyrics for the show.

Oh yes...they also recorded a nine-track CD, featuring original music, at Target Studios in Elkton, Md.

"It was pretty cool wearing those headphones and recording the music," said Smith with his hands on his ears.

Smith, who attends Kennett High School, plays the guitar, vocalizes and plays the cello.

Originally, Cleare and Smith spent a lot of time developing their musical talent together, but after hearing Robb's voice in a performance at Tatnall School, where both Cleare and Robb attend, Cleare said he had to ask her if she would start singing with them.

Since August the band has been rehearsing as often as they can at Cleare's house.

Almost 100 people packed the room to listen to the Urban Wombats benefit concert last Saturday night.

According to Karen Barker, Robb's mother, the group would practice all the time if their parents let them.

"They get together once or twice a week and on vacations and holidays," she said.

"They would do it more often, but they've got homework to do."

Putting aside being a proud parent, Barker admitted, "It's a lot of work doing all of this on this scale and the fact that they have the where-with-all to practice, write and get themselves out there is impressive."

Showing off their diversity, Cleare and Smith also performed a jazz and an acoustic guitar duel which led them to fiercely plucking their strings at high speed.

As for the story behind the name Urban Wombats, none of the three were willing to divulge any information.

Wearing memories on her sleeve earns awards

A beautiful cape that reflects memories of a rural Georgia landscape is winning awards for Belinda T. Orzada of Newark, assistant professor of consumer studies at the University of Delaware.

The cape won the Best of Fiber/Wearable Art award for its creator at the International Textile and Apparel Association (ITAA) 1999 Design Competition. The winning entry was entitled "Southern Living: Country Roads Cape."

Orzada, who grew up in southern Georgia, said her goal was to interpret the agricultural landscape of south Georgia using fiber as the artistic medium. "I seek to express the feeling, of driving down a country road surrounded by the elements of Southern culture I remember so fondly," she said, "but am distanced from in my suburban life."

Some of the items depicted on the cape are a dirt road, corn, watermelon, pumpkin, cemetery, pond with cypress tree, a barn and tractor.

The hip-length cape with an asymmetrical neckline is embellished with hand and machine embroidery, applique and picture smocking.

Some of the challenges of the project, Orzada said, were determining the proportion and scale of the fields and other items, selecting agricultural products best representative of the region and using the appropriate embellishment techniques to portray each.

At the competition in Santa Fe, N.M., innovative fashions and wearable art created by ITAA members and their students were featured in both mounted and live model exhibitions, and more than 100 designs by faculty, graduate students and undergraduate students were on display.

In the annual juried, two-stage design competition entries are submitted with slides and design descriptions.

Finalists are selected and must submit their garments for review by a second panel of judges. Designs undergo a second round of judging prior to the exhibition, and winners are announced at the conclusion of the show.

Orzada's specialty is apparel design, and her research is related to two- and three- dimensional special visualization for design students in the field.

She received her bachelor's degree in clothing and textiles from the University of Georgia, her master's in apparel design from Louisiana State University and her doctorate in apparel design from Florida State University.

She won the best fashion design award at the 1997 ITAA Design Competition. Her articles have been published in the International Journal of Clothing Science and Technology and Textile, Chemists and Colorists.

A University of Delaware professor's design for her award-winning cape reflects her memories of rural Georgia.

Phil Toman is taking a sabbatical from The Arts. The Newark Post's longtime arts editor will be returning at a future date with his columns on the art scene in the tri-state area.

Fathers can't give up on kids also be aware of events that are out of the routine - recitals, big games, tough classes, romances, breakups, fears, hopes, and dreams. It may be challenging to balance work with fathering roles. If you can't be physically present at your teen's event, give him or her a call before and after just to let your teen know he's/she's on your mind.

While there is usually room for a well-timed lecture, your adolescent needs you to just listen. Quite often, adolescents don't need answers or advice, and they don't need you to think about what you'll say next while they are talking. Adolescents are comforted by knowing you're there to listen.

Seek first to understand, whether you're resolving a conflict, offering comfort and counsel, or just talking at the dinner table. Let them know you value their opinion, even if it is different from yours.

Attentive listening leads to understanding, a key to the relationship between a father and his child. Listening helps you better understand your role as a father and more importantly, expresses your unconditional love for your child.

Adolescence is a puzzling time for fathers and their teenagers. It might sometimes seem easier to just give up. But don't do it. Right now your teenager needs your love and acceptance more than ever before.

Croy comments on basic training

Airman Jacqueline Croy joined the Air Force in the Air Force Recruiting Office in Newark. She is a graduate of Glasgow High School in June 1999. Comments from Airman Croy: "Air Force Basic Military Training was an experience I'll never forget. You're not alone when you go through it. You have around 50 other people from all over the world to lean on, to encourage, and to learn from. By the time the six weeks were over, I was almost sad to leave it behind. Goodbyes are hard. In conclusion, even if you're leaving a wonderful supportive family, the one you gain while you're away is ten times in size and understands you. They understand you because they're going through the exact same thing." Pictured are Airman Croy (on left) and Airman Snyder (on right)

Boys and girls swim teams keep improving

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

Glasgow's girls and boys swimming and diving teams are still a notch below powerhouses such as McKean and Newark, but the Dragons continued to show they're no pushovers in last week's sweep of visiting William Penn.

Glasgow's boys team swamped the Colonials 98-49 to improve to 2-2 in conference meets and 6-3 overall. The Dragons are trying to finish with a fourth consecutive season above .500. Prior to that, they hadn't had a winning season since 1978.

The Dragons' girls team upped its record to 2-2, 4-5, by winning 95-82.

Top performers for the boys team have been seniors Alex Schupp and Ben Toole, junior Rob Poore and sophomore Mike Ruggiano.

Helping the Dragons this season has been its weight in numbers, rather than superstars, said boys coach Phil Deweese.

Deweese, who is back coaching swimming after being Glasgow's first girls coach from 1973-77, said he's pleased with his team's season and its main goal is to finish with a winning record.

"My boys have done an excellent job this year," Deweese said. "They lost a number of people from last year. I don't think these guys were expecting to do as well as they're doing."

"They've reacted well to a new coach and are working hard. We had two meets where in the last event - we beat Caesar Rodney and St. Andrew's - in the

Two of the state's best high school wrestling teams go head-to-head on Saturday when St. Mark's hosts William Penn in a nonconference match.

The two teams will square off following the junior varsity match, which begins at 1 p.m.

St. Mark's beat William Penn 26-21 during the regular season last year and 31-25 in the semifinals of the Delaware Dual Meet Championships.

St. Mark's, which has won the Division I dual meet title the past three years and four of the past five, has beaten William Penn (the 1993, '94 and '96 champs) three consecutive years in the regular season.

The Colonials swept the Spartans in two meetings in '96.

Both teams are coming off impressive showings last weekend at the 25-team Hammond Invitational Tournament in Columbia, Md.

St. Mark's, ranked first in Delaware, won four weight classes to finish first with 269 points. Bobby Shaw (103 pounds), Pat Atkinson (119), Matt McConnell (125) and Andrew Donofrio each won titles for the Spartans.

William Penn's Joe Ferrara, who was also named the tournament's Outstanding Wrestler, won the title at 135, while teammate James Fromal won at 145 to help the third-ranked Colonials finish with 226 points.

No. 2 Hodgson, meanwhile, finished second with 234.5 points helped by champions Mike Welch (130), Ryan Smith (152) and Derrick Davis (171).

"We wrestled pretty well down there," said St. Mark's Coach Steve Bastianelli. "Overall, it was a pretty tough tournament with some good wrestlers. It was a grueling situation."

At the Hammond, Shaw beat a nationally-ranked wrestler to win his title, Atkinson and McConnell defeated Maryland state champs, while Donofrio bested a fourth-place Maryland finisher.

The Spartan Nick Meyer was second at 275, Geoff Ashton was third at 189, and Jeff Grieder (165) and Ryan Williams (215) each took fourth. In addition, Tyler Bastianelli was fifth (145) and Ryan Ball (112) and Chris Collins (130) took sixth.

Jordan Sianni of Hodgson, meanwhile, finished second at 112

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

MAURICE ROGERS - CHRISTIANA

It was a game crucial to the futures of both Christiana High and host William Penn when the two teams met in a Blue Hen Conference Flight A boys basketball game last Friday.

A victory for defending state champion William Penn would keep its unbeaten conference mark intact and abreast of Alexis I. du Pont. Wins also are important at the end of the year in not only determining berths in postseason play, but if a team even makes it.

Christiana, meanwhile, was coming off a victory over Newark after a huge defeat to AI. A win would improve the Vikings' conference record to 3-1, tying them with the Colonials.

In a jam-packed gym, the pressure was palpable as the opening tip-off started the two teams on what would end up as highly entertaining game.

And although William Penn came away with a hard-earned 67-62 victory, Christiana senior guard Maurice Rogers was simply superb, sinking six three-point shots en route to finishing with a game-high 28 points.

The Colonials, whose only loss last season was to the Vikings, are relying this season on speed and experience with only two players in their lineup six feet tall or more.

Christiana, meanwhile, boasts 6-4 players Byron Green and Greg Brown in its front court. The game before, Brown had played a powerful inside game and finished with 21 points. Against William Penn, however, the two had trouble getting consistent access inside. Green managed 16 points and Brown five.

Enter Rogers to solve that problem. His first three-point shot gave the Vikings a 5-4 lead.

Rogers began the second quarter with a jumper, then sank all three free throws after being fouled on a three-point attempt to give the Vikings an 18-12 lead.

Rogers added two more three-pointers in the quarter to help the Vikings trail by one point at halftime.

With William Penn threatening to run away in the third quarter, Rogers sank three consecutive three-pointers to pull his team within 39-37.

He followed that with a jumper and a three-point play seconds before the end of the quarter after being fouled on a layup.

The Colonials were finally able to shut Rogers down in the fourth quarter.

"Right now, Maurice is our best shooter from the outside," said Christiana Coach Ron Hollis. "This was one of those nights where he felt good, it was falling for him and we gave it to him and he made things happen for us."

"I don't know how many threes he had, but I know he made a bunch to keep us in the game."

Christiana boys fall to Penn

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The battle for supremacy in boys Blue Hen Conference Flight A supremacy continued in earnest last Friday when defending state champion William Penn hosted Christiana.

Despite losing two key starters - Player of the Year Steve Smith and Andre Gibson - who were both six feet, five inches tall - William Penn marches on with a smaller but speedy lineup.

Against Christiana, senior Bruce Davis led the way with 20 points, while junior Devin Smith, the team's tallest player at 6-4, added 16 in a 67-62 victory.

The Colonials, who improved to 4-0 in conference play and 7-2 overall, faced further conferences tests this week against McKean (Jan. 19) and perhaps its toughest Flight A foe - Alexis I. du Pont on the road Friday night (Jan. 21).

They will do it basically using a five-guard system. Although Smith is one of only two players on the roster six feet or more, three of the five starters are seniors and the Colonials still possess quickness in abundance and the smothering defensive pressure that is the trademark of coach Steve Johnson's teams.

"We know what we want to do, it's just going to take time to make the transition," said William Penn senior guard Brock Donovan when asked if the team has become comfortable yet in life after Steve Smith.

"We're playing decent right now, but we're definitely not playing our best. We're hoping to be playing our best by the end of the year; come tournament time."

"We've got to learn how to play different styles at different times. Learn when to slow it down and when to speed it up."

"We're struggling a little bit, but we're working on getting better," Johnson said. "We want to win these games, but the key is to getting better."

"We were real thin tonight without (senior) Von Homer (out with the flu) and Devin's hurt a little bit, so we had to try some things a little different. Some people had to play a lot of minutes tonight."

"We have some kids who can play and there's times when we need to be patient and there's times when we don't need as much patience. I have a lot of faith in the players, and they have to have confidence in their ability to make those decisions."

The bottom line, Johnson said, is how his team is playing by the state tournament.

"We're not trying to be the best team we can be in January," Johnson said. "We're trying to be the best team we can be in March."

Christiana, meanwhile is trying to improve on its tendency to reach the state tournament, but stumble in the early rounds. The Vikings have made it to the semifinals only twice since the tournament began in 1967. They made it to the semifinals in 1994 and lost to Caesar Rodney 54-53. Prior to that, Christiana's best showing was a 61-56 loss to now-defunct De La Warr High in the 1970 championship game.

The Vikings, 6-4, 2-2 after the William Penn game, are off until Jan. 21 when they play McKean, host Brandywine the next day, then play visiting Glasgow (Jan. 25) as part of a girls and boys varsity double-header.

Christiana led William Penn 13-12 after the first quarter, but William Penn held a 29-28 lead at halftime.

Christiana's Maurice Rogers, who finished with 28 points for the game, finished with 14 points for the half. After sinking one three-point shot in the first quarter, Rogers converted three foul shots after being fouled on a three-point attempt, and also sank two other three-point shots in the second quarter.

Teammate Byron Greene netted eight in the first half, while Davis paced William Penn with 11.

Smith nailed a three-point shot to begin the third quarter, helping the Colonials outscore the Vikings 10-3 to lead 39-31. But Rogers converted two consecutive three-pointers and Green hit a jumper after one by Smith to make it 41-39.

Although William Penn pulled ahead 49-39 helped by two three-pointers from Smith and Jamaar Manlove, Rogers scored five points to help the Vikings pull within 51-48 at the end of the quarter.

Early in the fourth quarter, Christiana's Birlon Gist sank one of two free throws to tie the game at 53. William Penn's Shane Hairston then converted a three-point shot and after Christiana's Greg Brown sank one foul shot, Donovan made his first three-point shot of the game to make it 59-54.

Virgil Rush then sank a jumper to make it 59-56, but William Penn converted eight of nine free throws in the final two minutes to ice the victory.

"Flight A is going to be tough," said Christiana Coach Ron Hollis. "I just hope we can bounce back from this one along with the (huge) loss to AI and to give them a run for the conference championship."

Hollis cited the lack of his team challenging William Penn's Smith down low - in order to draw fouls - as a factor in the loss.

Yellowjacket boys knocked off by St. Mark's

By JOE NYE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The opponent was different but the style and outcome were the same as St. Mark's used its "tall ball" to thwart Newark 40-34 Saturday on the Yellowjackets' home court.

The Spartans (7-5) used 17 points and eight blocks from six foot, eight inch tall center Eugene Young and 15 points from Justin Miller to hold off the young, aggressive Yellowjackets.

Newark (4-7) was paced by senior co-captain Donny Caldwell, who had 13 points despite early foul trouble.

St. Mark's' beefy front line of Young, 6-5 Josh Radulski and 6-4 Jerry Denney lends itself to a slow, grinding style that attempts to use its height to wear down its opponents. That proved to be too much for Newark, whose speed and trapping defense could not make up for their height disadvantage.

vantage.

"You pretty much saw what we are," said St. Mark's Coach Lee Sibley. "We play very solid defense, but the game got ratty at the end and that's not our game."

Ironically, the two best players on the court were the tallest, Young, and the shortest, the 5-8 Caldwell, whose speed off the dribble continually kept the Spartans heads on a swivel searching for the diminutive point guard.

It was Caldwell who opened the scoring by stripping Miller at half court and going in for a lay-up and after Terry Alls hit a jumper, the Yellowjackets had a 4-0 lead.

Young then hit his first basket of the game and gave a taste of things to come as he recorded back-to-back blocks before Miller paid back Caldwell for his earlier steal, stripping the Newark playmaker and taking it in for a lay-up to knot the game at 4-4.

After Caldwell and Radulski traded three pointers from the left side, the Yellowjackets went on a 6-0 run using baskets by Caldwell, Alls and James Hodges to open their largest lead of the game at 13-7, early in the second quarter.

With the Newark crowd sensing an upset, the Spartans stormed back and used a 13-0 run of their own starting with a Young put-back of a Radulski miss, a Miller three pointer and a basket from Denney, to give St. Mark's the lead, 14-13.

After another jumper from Miller hit nothing but the net, Young continued to show his dominance by grabbing his own rebound and putting it back in, blocking two more inside shots by Newark and then completing the run with a soft 10-foot turnaround jumper in the lane to put the Spartans up 20-13.

"Our style is to slow it down, but they were pushing it, which is their style," said Young. "They were playing behind me and I took advantage of it."

The Jackets showed their competitive spirit by halting the Spartans' run with two late baskets at the end of the half by Alls, who finished with eight points, and went into the locker room at halftime down only 20-17.

The two teams exchanged scores early in the second half, but when Newark's Brandon Haman, an All-State defensive back, outjumped the taller Spartans for a tip-in, the Yellowjackets pulled to within 23-22.

Young and Miller then answered with baskets to boost the St. Mark's lead back up to five before Caldwell hit a jumper at the end of the quarter.

Young opened the fourth quarter with a nice up and under move, but Caldwell continued his defensive magic by stealing another pass and converting on a lay-up to bring the Jackets to within three.

After a Radulski three, Newark got a key basket from Kevin Lemar, a 6-6 center who came off the bench to hold Young in check for awhile. But the senior center came right back with another move inside, and after two free throws by Miller, the Spartans had their biggest lead of the game at 36-28 with four minutes remaining.

The Spartans managed to hold on to the lead over the waning minutes.

final relay. So that's made a big difference. We're currently ranked eighth in the state and hopefully we can hang on to it."

In addition, the Dragons seem to have a budding star on their roster in freshman diver Tony Duong, who has won the event in three of the four meets he's competed in.

Helping Duong against William Penn was the fact that his only competition was a fellow teammate, but for someone who only began competing this season, his future seems bright.

Diving coach Rick Robson, who instructs all the divers in the Christina School District - Glasgow, Newark and Christiana - said Duong's experience as a gymnast has helped him learn to dive so quickly.

"He's a very good diver as a beginning freshman," said Robson, whose son, Eric, was a four-time Delaware high school champion and is now diving for Indiana University.

"He has a background in gymnastics which anybody can recognize from the way he can flip and twist. He would probably qualify as a competitor in the (gymnastic) Junior Nationals. He's very close to having the qualifying score already."

"(Gymnastics) is a little bit of a help. It's different," said Duong, whose 120-point score against William Penn was a career-high.

"If he sticks with it, he's going to be up there with the best in the state in a couple years," Dewese said.

"As a matter of fact, our two divers weren't even ready to dive for the first couple weeks because they weren't able to do enough dives to compete. And (Duong's) come that far that quickly. Another year or two he's going to be among the top five in the state."

Glasgow's girls team, meanwhile, is trying to recapture the glory years of 1994 to '97, when it won 49 consecutive dual meets and won the Blue Hen once title the past two seasons.

Glasgow girls coach Dave Kohan cited the efforts of three-time state champion Stephanie Raezer, Megan McCullin, and Jill Walker, all seniors, and juniors Erin Young, Caitlin Rash and Lauren Moran as the primary reasons for his team's success.

"We're starting from scratch," Kohan said. "We only have four seniors. It's a different group of kids, but I've been pleased with them from day one. We're starting to get on a little winning streak here and they work really hard."

"The kids see the (49-win streak and conference champ) banners, but they know this is all new faces. Those people up there were all once new faces, too."

"We're building for the future and we're just trying to stay competitive without falling off the bottom."

and Marc Rispoli was third at 140.

For William Penn, Ray Callaway (165) and Luke Fresconi (215) finished third, Harry Kettner (130) and Shemarr Thompson (140) finished fourth, and Ken Krygier (103), Stoney Graves (152) and Mark Haman (171) were fifth.

"I think the Maryland guys weren't real happy that the Delaware teams there were the three top teams," said Bastianelli.

As for Saturday's match, Bastianelli said the most important thing for him at this point of the season is that his team is improving.

"We think we're moving along pretty good," Bastianelli said. "We certainly have a ways to go. We don't think we've wrestled as well as we could have."

"It's going to be a real interesting match. It's a match that you want to do well in, but it's not the one that counts. It's not the one that people are going to remember."

"You have to take it at the same time it's a big match and a big rivalry and I'm sure the kids will be fired up for it. I'm just looking at it as how we're doing out there."

William Penn, which brings a 6-0 dual meet record to St. Mark's, should have two-time state champion Gregg Quailes healthy in time for the match.

Quailes, a senior who wrestles at 119, sustained a severely strained ankle last Thursday during practice that kept him out of the Hammond, said Colonials coach Jack Holloway.

A defending Blue Hen Conference champ, Quailes won the 103-pound state title two years ago and 112 last season.

PUBLIC WORKSHOPDNREC*STATEWIDE ACCESS MANAGEMENT POLICY
& CLASSIFICATION MAPS

Auditorium
February 1, 2000
5:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.

The Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) is announcing the release of the Statewide Access Management Policy (Policy) and Statewide Classifications Maps (Classification Maps) for public review. The Department will also hold a public hearing on these items prior to adopting them in their final form.

The Policy, developed in accordance with Delaware Code, Title 17, Chapter 146(a), provides a combination of regulatory and administrative actions that will help determine how and where connections are made between land developments and the transportation system. The Classification Maps show how the Policy will be applied to individual state-maintained roadways.

The public hearing will be held on February 1, 2000 at the DNREC Auditorium, 89 Kings Highway, Dover. DelDOT staff and court stenographer will be available starting at 5 p.m. to provide background information and take statements for the record. The formal auditorium portion of the hearing will start at 7 p.m. with a short presentation by DelDOT staff and testimony from the public taken immediately after. Written comments on the Policy and Classification Maps will be taken through February 21, 2000 and may be submitted along with questions or other written material, by mail to the Office of External Affairs, DelDOT, P.O. Box 778, Dover, DE 19903 or by telephone at 1-800-652-5600.

After receipt of comments at the hearing as well as receipt of any written comments on or before February 21, 2000, the Department will issue a final regulation adopting the Policy and Classification Maps, in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act (29 Delaware Code, Chapter 101 et. seq.)

For more information on the public hearing, or to receive advance copies of the Policy or Classifications Maps beginning after January 1, 2000, please contact Mr. Joseph Cantalupo at (302)760-2121.

In accordance with Subsection 8409, Chapter 84, Title 29 of the Delaware Code, our public meetings are designed to ensure that the public has ample opportunity to participate in the transportation planning process. If requested in advance, DelDOT will make available the services of an interpreter for the hearing impaired. If an interpreter is desired, please make the request by phone or mail a week in advance through the office of External Affairs as noted above.
