University officials cancel commencement

By DEAD CATTLE

In a move that university officials called a "compromise," the Faculty Senate yesterday decided to cancel graduation exercises because of the widespread dissatisfaction of the site and speaker choices.

President E.A. Trombone said yesterday that he was tired of having every one of his suggestions criticized.

"J— C—, there's just no pleasing the little punks. They're just like a bunch of kids. If they don't like the proposals I've chosen, I'm going to take my college and go home."

Dust president Men Leech said that his group had tried every possible way to meet the university officials halfway.

"They think their ideas and decisions are cut and dry. I mean, I realize that the students only pay their wages. But jeez, don't we deserve some consideration?"

Leech cited some of their alternative ideas for the commencement site and speaker.

"We figured that the site should be someplace that students are familiar with. We first thought of one of the dining halls, but we felt that the atmosphere would not be in keeping with the dignity of the ceremony."

Concerning the question of the speaker, Dust felt that the financial restrictions shouldn't interfere with the choice.

"There are loads of possible speakers, all able to fit into the budget," he said. "How about a popular janitor, or perhaps a distinguished U.S. Congressman from the state? The possibilities are endless."

He said that with student opinion poll the group might be able to reverse the administration's decision.

One university official said that even with a student poll to back them, there will be no changing their decision.

"We never release the results of those silly polls, anyway," he said.

DUST desires pornographic films

By BABA WOO,
KINKY CACA
and DEW EYES

The Delaware Undergraduate Student Titillators (DUST) voted unanimously Monday to insert pornographic films into the curriculum of all introductory English courses.

DUST President Men Leach passionately defended the decision, saying, "It raises consciousness. Students need to broaden their horizons."

After DUST member Froth Heyman took a poll at the Leer Park last fall, it was recommended by Professor S.B. Woah that the films be screened to meet "community standards."

"Although it may be hard to get quality acts like Linda Lovelace and Harry Reams, we hope the university will consider our position," explained DUST vice-president Brawny Sewers.

Interjecting that he would be prepared to fight for the proposal, lobbyist Loose Dodgers said the legislators in Dover "are excited about this proposition because they feel it will stimulate young minds."

Fraternity representative Raving Pain horned in, "This is a sticky situation, but my brothers will back you all the way."

Reached later at home, university administrator Too Harpey stressed that "DUST members have gone too far. Their arguments just won't stand up under scrutiny."

"We're not really concerned with the General Assembly's position," Harpey added. "DUST just better remember where they get their funding from."

In other non-business:

• DUST decided to initiate a letter-writing campaign urging all students with meal tickets to support the RSF's efforts and write their dining halls asking for egg salad to replace peanut butter.

• DUST decided to establish a higher quorum requirement so that there would never be enough members present to conduct any business.

Pagan's cuts sacrifice students' knowledge

By THE MACHO CHILD

The university will be forced to go without knowledge next year if President Pagan's proposed educational budget cuts are passed by Congress.

Pagan feels that knowledge is very "elastic" and has been the major cause of excessive government spending in the past. The proposal will affect all nationwide colleges and universities.

Assistant to the President Snarno Loser said in response to the proposal, "I think it is great. I've gone without knowledge for years. The kids will learn to adapt."

Because knowledge is so prevalent in academic atmospheres, Pagan's plan includes the activation of a No Knowledge Task Force, which will be funded from the expanded Department of Defense budget.

The force's duties will include the burning of all textbooks, the extermination of many of Delaware's engineering students (who are just too far gone for Pagan's guidelines) and the campus-wide endorsement of the Greek community.

President Pagan, in a formal statement before Congress, said, "Look at me. I've managed to become president of this great nation with a substantial lack of knowledge. In fact, my administration is a pretty stupid crowd themselves. If we can make it, the American youth of today can certainly make it."

The "I Need a Mind" and "Are You Crazy?" lobby groups have staged several protests on the White House lawn since the announcement of the proposal.

An administrator, who wished to remain anonymous, expressed interest in converting Morris Library into a "pleasure palace" since the structure will no longer have any use.

The Faculty Senate, however, has not expressed interest in this idea.

If the proposal is approved by Congress, the university will be totally without knowledge by the start of the fall semester.

Loss of UD geology building nobody's fault

By RAOUL DUCHESS

Newark may have gained a new sewer line, but the university has lost a building to the expansion.

Penny Hall, which formerly housed the geology department, was sucked into the sewer hole late last Saturday night.

"Like I was walking down Academy Street after pounding some Schlitz at Sam's and I heard this big slurping noise," said one student, who refused to be identified. "I didn't think anything of it until I saw the hole the next day."

The building is now located approximately 40 feet below the topsoil. According to members of the geology department, it will take ten years and $15 million to unearth the lost structure.

in the dirt

"Christ, that would be a hell of a find," mused one archaeological specialist. "But maybe we should just leave it there for future generations to dig up," he added, scratching his dandruff with his rock pick.

University president E.A. Trombone said that he has not heard of the incident. After being informed of the problem, he said, "Gosh, I was in Sam's too and I didn't hear a darn thing."

In a more sober tone, Trombone added that the disappearance of the geology building will give the university a chance to sink $20 million into still another useless facility.

Until that happens, the geology department will be housed in the as-yet-unfinished bookstore annex.

Pot sale legalized in Delaware

Review photo by Mee-chelle My Belle

By THE DAGSBORO WOMAN

The sale of marijuana was legalized in Delaware last week in a surprise move by the state legislature.

"I'm tired of all this back and forth, back and forth," a spokesman explained. "And selling paraphernalia is still illegal, so no one can complain," he added brightly.

The Post House Restaurant on Main Street in Newark was the first establishment to take advantage of the new law, changing its name to a more "trend-setting" Pot House.

"Hey, everybody smokes it anyway," the House's manager said in a recent interview. Clad in lavender velour running attire and Nike sneakers, he unself-consciously rolled himself a smoke. "This way we can all do it out in the open and make a few bucks on the side."

Waitresses and busboys are joyously redecorating the restaurant's interior to comply with the House's new image. Window boxes are being placed next to window booths and planted with marijuana seedlings so people can roll their own as part of a new "All You Can Manage" seafood and reefer combo.

Also in the works is a luncheon special — a dieter's plate of sliced fruit and cottage cheese, served on a bed of "grass," hinted the maitre d' with a sly wink.

"The seedlings can be picked to be used as garnishes instead of parsley," he offered.

Reaction from the state has been "sensational," according to the management. Customers have been flocking in to Newark from as far away as below the Canal.

Harrington Salami, food service director, has been looking into "borrowing" the idea from the Pot House. Rumor has it he plans to change the name of The Pub to The Joint.

Although food service spokesmen refuse to comment, Review sources swear to have seen two men in "It's better at the Student Center" tee shirts hanging out in front of Brown Lab, asking for "stems" and "caps" for mushroom soup.

Several university officials have also been seen dining at the now-fashionable Pot House. When asked his opinion of marijuana becoming more openly used at U.D., an official who preferred to remain anonymous replied, "Well, the kids seem to like it. Ayup. Want a jim, uh. I mean a jay?"

Defense department offers trip — a nice place to visit, but...

By THE MACHO CHILD

The United States Department of Defense is offering college students, preferably male, a discount spring break package to the adventurous nation of El Salvador.

Students interested in the deal will depart tonight from Dover Air Force Base and arrive in San Salvador, the nation's capital city, at 10 a.m. (Eastern Standard Time) tomorrow morning.

The vacation package is being offered as a way to increase student appeal for the armed forces, which "decreased ridiculously" after mandatory draft registration last summer, according to Army Colonel B.A. Moron, coordinator of the program.

University representative Raymond Giddy said he is confident that students "will dive at the opportunity to spend a fun-filled week in one of our country's potential battle grounds."

According to department of Defense estimates, 250,000 "anxious" students are expected to participate in the program throughout the nation.

The trip is being offered at a discount because the government feels "that this is what the young people of today need to get motivated," according to a tour pamphlet.

The price of the vacation was not mentioned in the pamphlet and Pentagon officials were not available for comment on the cost.

The vacation includes free camouflage clothing, Army "grub" and a chance to see live confrontation between "upstandable Latin America citizens" and the "radicals."

Students signed up for the vacation will also learn how to "napalm small, neutral villages, fire M-16 machine guns and play a mean game of Russian Roulette with .45 caliber pistols."

The finest dates in the picturesque city of San Salvador will be offered to those students participating in the program, courtesy of the United States Navy, who claim to know their "dames."

Moron said, "This should give the kids a chance to experience the realities of war."

Students participating in the program will be flown back to Dover on Saturday April 4.

The pamphlet emphasized the point that the students have the option of remaining in El Salvador, if they wish.

Fear and Loathing in Newark

By DEKEBA

A clean breeze doesn't mean much anymore in Newark. Not since Dhryslor and the university joined forces to take over the preppie porn racket. What were once prof-inhabited rows of decent homes have been torn down, and now saloons, gambling parlors and houses of no repute are crammed together as far as the eye can see.

Cars crawl slowly down the congested streets, and the combination of fumes and smog is sickening.

"Wanna go see the mud wrestling at the Amazon Club tonight?" a whisky-rattled voice asked next to me.

I had no choice. It was either that or hanging out in front of the local branch office of the National Enquirer, scribbling insulting epithets.

The Amazon Club (formerly Sam's), is a small, turgid, twisted conglomeration of cruel plastic and gratuitous plywood panelling. The two mud wrestlers were already in a terrestrial, putrid swirl but rose when a bell rang to signal the end of the match. They were huge hulks of brutal womanhood covered in filth and glaring threateningly at the hooting spectators. Fear and loathing is a deadly, spine-wrenching combination, but I could feel it crawling up my heels as I caught the stare of one of the barbarian wrestlers.

I retreated to the bar and ordered a shot of tequila. "Don't remember me, do ya?" I looked over the blurry rim of my shot and saw a pair of bloodshot eyes peering up at me from beneath a pair of dark sunglasses. I did remember him. When last seen, Newark Man (the well-known rascal with a rap sheet of reckless driving as long as Chapel Street), was shattering helpless 7-11 plate glass storefronts and taking telephone poles unawares.

As a reporter it had been my misfortune to be assigned the Newark Man beat. My printed accounts of his misdeeds spread his notoriety out of the ordinary and embarrassed him publicly. He's never been the same since.

I found a persistent voice insisting I get the hell out of the Amazon. I tried to oblige my now-screaming conscience but Newark Man clutched the hem of my jacket and gave me a tremulous grin. "I got me an appearance on the Merv Griffin show," the fiend hissed. "I owe it all to you."

I watched the sun creep over the Whiz Bang Gang red-light area. A speckled haze shone on the suburban shovelheads as they trudged off to work. I looked at my bottle of Jose Cuervo. No story this time, but a fine buzz indeed.

Gonzo journalism here, reality on its way out

By RAOUL DUCHESS

Dr. Punter Rompson renowned author and journalist, has retired from his post as governor of American Samoa in order to teach a seminar at the university.

"It's just something I've always wanted to do," Rompson said. "I lectured here in 1976 and I loved the little place."

Rompson's seminar will be titled "Drugs and the Samoan Economy," and will be offered as part of the journalism curriculum.

When asked about the relevance of his course, Rompson said, "Of course it's relevant. That's how Ed Muskie would have wanted it."

"I was just like an, uh, an innocent bystander," Rompson snorted, wiping the white powder from his upper lip. "But like I've seen a lot of illicit, uh, substances change hands down there, and it's my belief that drugs are very important to Samoa. You know, like they should be for everybody."

on the way

Rompson appointed a Minister of Powerful Chemicals to investigate the situation, and his statistics form the basics of the course. Rompson refused to release the findings, however.

"Only the people who cough up the coke, er, cough up the cash will be allowed to know," he said.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2:1 and Acts 4:25

This 2nd Psalm, of God's Book of Messages to man, asks this question and then answers it by saying the heathen rage to get rid of God's Commandments. It appears our nation, in fact our world has just about succeeded in getting rid of them! Several places the Bible says at times the people of God fell so low that they were "worse than the heathen!"

A number of times in recent years have seen news items telling of other nations, whose government and people were considered pagans by the more enlightened nations, refusing to let some movie films produced in this country be shown in their land as being too immoral and debasing for their folks to see! "WORSE THAN THE HEATHEN!" Speaking by some of His Prophets God said: "SHALL I NOT BE AVENGED ON SUCH A NATION AS THIS?"

The man in hell fire Christ told about in Luke 16th chapter pleaded that his five brothers still alive on earth be warned lest they come where he was! He was told the way for them to stay out of hell was "Hear Moses and the Prophets . . . If they hear not Moses and the Prophets neither would they be persuaded though one rose from the dead!" One did rise from the dead, the Lord Jesus Christ, for the salvation of believers. He kept the Commandments perfectly for us, paid our penalty for disobedience, rose from the dead and engaged Himself to write God's Law in our hearts by His Holy Spirit.

We see and hear of many who speak much of His resurrection, His Ascension, and even of His coming again in power and glory with His Holy Angels, and yet reject, neglect, or pay but little attention to the Ten Words delivered to Moses by God Himself, and proclaimed by His Prophets down through the ages.

The demands and commands of Christ for discipleship are indeed severe: Forsake all for Me! And — a Christianity that fails to present and insist upon its members meeting the commands and demands to "count the cost" of discipleship might be likened to a "Bargain Basement Christianity." One goes "down" into the bargain basement to get something "cheaper."

The modernist cloak of Christianity is so worn out that many are going about in near or total nakedness. Revelation 16:16 tells of the battle of Armageddon. In the verse just previous, the 15th, Christ speaks this warning:

"Behold, I come as a thief, Blessed is he that watcheth, AND KEEPETH HIS GARMENTS; LEST HE WALK NAKED, AND THEY SEE HIS SHAME!"

Byrneout backs bongers

Governor Byrneout okayed heroin and marijuana use and abuse for all New Jersey residents yesterday.

The law, which is known as the Delerium Protection Act, calls for the creation of a review board which will determine what areas of New Jersey need a fix most, and to protect the existing deleria in Newark and Jersey City.

A spokesman for KNJSO (Keep New Jersey Strung Out) said the heroin and marijuana will be supplied free by the Republican Party.

World ends: Newark unharmed

The world came to a grinding halt today in an event of unpredicted disaster. Huge cracks opened in the earth's surface all across the globe, hurling multitudes of uncountable people to their horrible, grisly, and nasty deaths.

Newark was not affected by the accident, prompting a shaken but relieved resident to exclaim, "Boy that was close."

Life discovered in New Jersey

NASA scientists have discovered life in New Jersey, according to information gathered by a probe sent there last year. NASA's report depicts New Jersey as a land of "vast stretches of highways and diners, with large chemical clouds hovering in the atmosphere above."

Only small, crude forms of life have been found to date, but preliminary studies indicate it is "very possible" that larger, more intelligent forms of life do exist in the Garden State.

Pagan's beans cut from budget

The $25 billion gap between President Donald Pagan's proposed budget and the Congressional budget estimate was finally eliminated when the president agreed to make two extensive cuts in White House expenses.

In a tearful announcement, Pagan said that he had finally agreed to cutting $15 billion in wardrobe expenses for his first lady, Fancy Pagan, and $10 billion originally allocated for red, white, and blue jelly beans.

"While I feel that the wardrobe budget may have been a bit excessive," Pagan said sobbing, "I don't see why I can't have my jelly beans."

The joke's on you

Many readers probably picked up a copy of our highly esteemed tabloid (often called "The Rag" by its many admirers) today and said, "What the hell is going on here?" We don't blame you.

Of course, none of the stories you have read are true, and the names have been changed to protect the idio...er, innocent. Any connections to real persons living or dead is for satirical purposes only. But why, you ask. What possessed the editors to put together an entirely bogus issue?

Well, there's no sense in beating around the proverbial bush. Let's face it, this newspaper is boring. BORING! Do you really think we like printing 16 pages of folderol twice a week, knowing full well that its primary uses are lining trash cans, bird cages, wrapping fish, and in the case of the Classified Ads, giving students something interesting to do during that boring one o'clock lecture? Well, we'll tell you -- we don't. We don't like it one iota. And, we bet, neither do you.

So, as a public service to our readers (both of you), we decided to let loose some laughter on this, All Fool's Day. What the hay, we figured, nothing ever happens the week before Spring Break. No major news ever presents itself when everyone is thinking about Florida. Besides, the administration always breaks the big stuff while we're on vacation. Any vacation will do -- Christmas, Thanksgiving, the summer, even the weekend between Winter Session and Spring Semester. But never when we can use it.

Nothing is going on in the way of entertainment, either, Newark will be even duller than usual over Spring Break, unless your idea of fun is sitting in the Queer Park with a handful of townies who look like they just walked off the set of "Deliverance."

But if it really bothers you, if we seem to be the most irresponsible young people since the sixties, look at it this way. You don't have to read this. We're not holding a gun to your head. You can just pretend we didn't publish an issue today.

Or better still, treat it like a regular issue of the Review -- read the personals and throw it away.

We bet you already did.

A serious statement, maybe

To the Editor:

As a concerned student at this university, I feel the time has come to speak up. The intolerable situation has gone on long enough. Never in all my years in institutions of higher learning have I seen such irresponsible, degrading and inappropriate behavior as this type of thing.

If the students and administrators at this university don't care any more about this reprehensible situation, why then I say, let's let them know how we feel, and withhold our tuition payments. Unite!

A Sad Ending

I was talking to my dear wife Glynda at the breakfast table the other day. Well, I was talking. Glynda was reading The Washington Post and chuckling like a fool at that overrated Art Buckenwald.

"How can you, Glynda?" I cried. "After all I've done for you, you read that second rate joke-swiper."

"But dear, she whined, "we've always subscribed to The Post, and he is the highest paid columnist around, and besides, no one carries your column anymore."

"What?!" I couldn't believe it. It seemed like just yesterday I was second runner up in the "Promising Satire Writer Contest." (actually, it was 22 years ago). "Somebody must still be carrying me. I get a check in the mail every month," I said.

"I'm sorry, dear," said Glynda, my dear wife. "Those have been my way of keeping us afloat. I've been...I've been selling myself to other writers. I had to do something, we were near starvation. And they were so nice; Tom Wicket, Willy Satire, Rike Moyko, Rex Reeder..."

That last name did it (I couldn't control myself). I pulled off my necktie and wrapped it around her neck and pulled it..."

But cereally folks, what about our prizes

To the Editor:

The Rodney Dining Hall personnel have made a fatal mistake. They have limited breakfast cereal selection to a mere three varieties.

One can easily see the possibility of scandal in this new arrangement. Prizes from cereals like Cap'n Crunch and Cheerios are now being withheld from cold cereal enthusiasts. These prizes have been paid for and belong to students. Many a morning had formerly been brightened by the fortunate discovery of a Cap'n Crunch games book or plastic toy.

But even more distressing is the lack of cereal selection.

Some students, like myself, have found it very difficult to take exams without the aid of a favorite cereal, in my case, Cap'n Crunch. Must we forego a favorite cereal if it is a necessary academic tool? I think not. I appeal to the staff of the dining hall to remedy this situation immediately.

Traveler from the future views earthlings

To the Editor,

I am a visitor from the future and have been observing your time period. You and your people do things very strangely. Where I come from there is no money, we pay for services rendered in bed. There are no cars, we just float around on a high all the time. As for food, we eat pre-digested swamp gas. We solved the energy crisis and un-employment by putting a poor unfortunatke under every hood.

In my time period there are no police, just the will of the people: if you want something you just take it. Oh, after the Holocaust we stopped bothering with pollution control, because none of the mutants breathe as you know it anyway.

Education consists of merely learning how to survive the garbage disposal and not becoming an instant plastered poster as a result of some mutant giant wall walker.

Our average lifetime is six-months and in that time we have gone through adolescence, become a ravaged adult, and died in the glorious muck this god-forsaken planet offers. Our society (Ha!) will probably not last another year, but what the He--!

So, good luck for the future (snicker, snicker) and remember a stitch in time saves mine.

Jagger speaks frankly on rock 'n' roll circus

By REGINALD WHITBY

Sick and tired of having to cover their usual trifling little feature stories, The Review features staff decided recently to set their sights on something really big.

They decided to interview Mick Jagger.

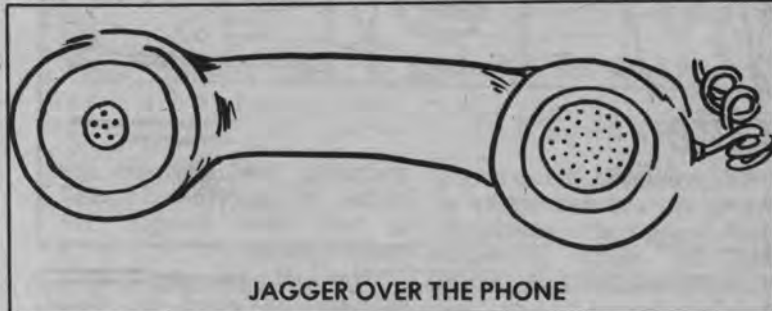

RING RING. RING. (CLICK)

Jagger: "Hello? A & J Deli. Can I help ya?"

THE REVIEW: "Mr. Jagger?"

Jagger: "Who?"

THE REVIEW: "Mr. Mick Jagger? Of the Rolling Stones?"

JAGGER OVER THE PHONE

"Why not?" intrepid all-American features editor Scott Manners said, a visionary light glowing in his eyes, "why not?"

The research began. No Jagger in the student directory. No Jagger in the Wilmington phone book. Undaunted by this slight setback, the staff put their efforts together to come up with a lead.

A reliable source in New York City reported someone named M. Jagger buying a pastrami on rye with a side of cole slaw in a delicatessen somewhere in Manhattan.

It was then an easy task to track down the deli. "A & J Deli we deliver," the phone listing said. The Review put a call through, and the conversation went like this:

Is this you?"

Jagger: (pretending confusion) "What?"

THE REVIEW: "Mr. Jagger, is it true what they say about Keith Richards and all those drugs?"

Jagger: (his hand over the mouthpiece) "Sol, what is this?" (Unintelligible reply) "Hey, what do you want? Don't give me a hard time."

THE REVIEW: "Seriously, Mick. What about Bianca, hmm? Aren't you just a teeny bit jealous—her going out to discos and being in People Magazine and all?"

CLICK.

While this interview was momentous enough, The Review staff decided to stop at nothing to bring their readers the whole story. We went on the road to follow up the tantalizing leads Jagger had offered us.

Jumping from the back of the truck we had hitchhiked to New York in, we immediately spotted a thin man in a rather stylish suit, trying his best to hide his true identity. When confronted, Jagger denied all knowledge of himself:

Jagger: "What? Who are you people?"

THE REVIEW: "When we spoke to you at the A & J Deli, Mr. Jagger, you seemed about to answer our questions when we were cut off. I believe you were about to tell us about Bianca?"

Jagger: "Bianca who? What is this, anyway?"

THE REVIEW: "Okay, what about Altamont? Truthfully, weren't you just a bit upset by it?"

JAGGER ON STREET

Jagger: "Get out of my way. Who the hell do you think you are, anyway?"

We had to admit, this story wasn't going to be easy. The notoriously reclusive Jagger had adopted an uncanny disguise that made him look like an ordinary New York executive. Still, we knew we had to bring back a story for the April 27 issue.

We waited at the door of a famous Central Park hotel where Jagger was rumored to have stayed once in 1971. Our efforts were rewarded when, suddenly, Jagger walked past us, this time disguised as a common 250-pound drug addict. What follows is an exclusive Review interview with Jagger about life with the World's Greatest Rock and Roll Band:

THE REVIEW: "After all these years, how do you feel about life in rock and roll?"

Jagger: "Life in wha—?"

THE REVIEW: "Life in the wild excitement of rock and roll."

Jagger: "Life? Well, life is okay, why?"

THE REVIEW: "How do you really feel about your fellow band members? I mean, isn't Charlie Watts just a little boring for the rest of you guys?"

Jagger: (running a hand through his deceptively blonde hair) "What? I don't know what you're saying... what?"

THE REVIEW: "Who does

most of the writing, really?"

Jagger: "Writing what? Who are you?"

THE REVIEW: "The Review, the student newspaper serving the University of Delaware."

Jagger: "Delaware? That a state?"

THE REVIEW: "Yes it is, Mr. Jagger, right below Pennsylvania."

Jagger: (walking away shaking his head) "Wild. Really wild."

We rushed back to our offices, stopping only once along the Jersey turnpike to get lunch and scribble notes, and brought this incredible

By LES MODERATE

My Life Story.....The Anonymous memoirs of a man that never existed.

Actually, I can't remember the first part too good. I recall a vague sense of uneasiness with it all. I can remember sitting on the kitchen floor with these dumb blue pajamas on with lots of lint, holding these dumb plastic keys, and looking at the copper tiles above the stove.

What was I doing? I have no idea, but that sticks with me. I remember the breakfast nook quite well.

And then there was kindergarten. We did things sitting in a circle on the floor alot. Did we have chairs? I have no idea.

Soon I got the hang of school, and I was passing my classes with flying colors. Of course, I had run-ins with the usual high school types, and I learned to keep to myself a lot, if I didn't want to be stuffed inside of a locker until recess. Those were happy times.

Then came the drugs. Truckloads of 'em. Soon my mind had turned into a melting popsicle on a wooden stick. I was a mess.

Then I met her. She was everything to me. She was the air I breathed, the fire in my soul. She was a dog.

I met Fluffy while waiting for a bus. She was the most sensual creature I had ever met. We were instantly enchanted with each other. We would run through the parks chasing beggars. She turned my life around.

No longer did I hang out in pinball arcades, awaiting "the man" so I could score some dope. I had an unlimited supply of the drug of life-love.

Now, falling in love with a stray mutt may sound strange to you. No one understood us. People would shake their heads when we passed them, hand in paw. It didn't matter to us. Fluffy and I knew what we had was real.

Now I had something to live for. Fluffy would be at my door everyday, wagging her tail in anticipation of a day of fun. When she barked, she meant it. Never in my wildest dreams did I ever imagine something so genuine.

Then came that fateful day.

A note lay on my doorstep. How can I forget those life-stopping words?

Rowlf,

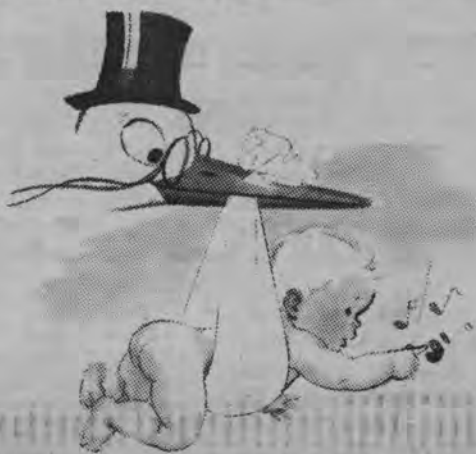

Bark, Bark, growl, woof woof. Bow-wow, arf! Yip, yip, yow, yow, woof, woof, woof.

Fluffy

Yes, It was true. Fluffy had run off with an advertising executive to the Bahamas. I was heartbroken.

Now, of course, I'm nothing but a piece of street trash on a windy, lonely street. I still think of Fluffy sometimes. I remember her joyful bark, her shiny coat, and that icky stuff that would gather in the corners of her eyes.

I suppose this is just another hard luck story in the game of life. I'm a loser, I admit it. I'll never amount to anything, but Fluffy, if you're out there, I want you to know that my love was true.

exclusive Review story to you, our readers.

Upon examining the artist's rendering printed with this article, noted Stones expert Tom Lowry said, "That doesn't look like Mick Jagger to me."

We circulated the drawing among various passers-by at the Scrounge, all remarkably with the same reaction— "Doesn't really look much like Mick Jagger."

We attribute this lack of resemblance to the uncanny disguise Jagger adopted. (Although one passer-by did speculate that perhaps the person we interviewed wasn't in fact Mick Jagger. We dismiss that story.)

"Now let 'em say there's nothing to read in this paper!" dedicated features editor Scott Manners said, "Let's just see them say we're boring now!"

Review battles copy shortage; writer turns this absurd story in

By SPEED RACER

Some theater troupe from around here gave a truly (damn, need a good adjective) flawless (good enough) performance of a play that was quite a big deal on Broadway a couple of years ago (I think).

Presented in that old building that sits right in front of the Habitrail, (You know the one) the show elicited (what is this? A psych paper?) laughter from a lively (In Newark?) audience.

Soon after I made this momentous critical appraisal of the amusement displayed (cheap verb) by the crowd, a large man dressed in a uniform reminiscent of the military asked to see my ticket.

"Can I see your ticket," he asked.

"Ticket, you say?" I replied.

"Exactly, jerk. Where's your ticket?" he said indignantly.

I attempted to explain to the neo-Nazi usher that I was an accredited member of the Press. (That's right, capitalize IT) That was when I found myself being bodily removed from the scene of a production that I never wanted to see in the first place. You should have seen how they treated the photographer.

plays and art and stuff

Fleeing the tyranny of the world of modern drama, the photographer and I quickly made our way to a nearby art gallery, desperate for copy.

As I jotted down the French name of the gallery, the photographer produced a slip of paper to insure a "high" degree of esoteric insight in our coverage of such an aesthetic event.

Noticably staggered, we strolled up the gallery's steps only to find it closed for the season. And we thought art was a full-time job.

Inhaling more chemical motivation, the photographer and I decided that the best way to pursue the arts would surely be in sneakers.

You see that's just what I'm talking about anyway. I can toss in such an incongruous absurdity as the last paragraph and it doesn't even matter because nobody reads the Features section anyway. No. I'm serious. My mother used to read it, but last week I asked her if she read my movie review, and she said she agreed with everything I said about De Niro's acting. The thing is I didn't review "Raging Bull." And everybody wonders why I drink so much.

NCAA tournament predictions

By SMELLY SHOES

Well its finally down to the final four in the NCAA basketball tournament, I offer a few comments on the tourney.

First, I pick Virginia to win because I've got a few bucks riding on the Cavaliers, and if they don't win my wallet will start screaming.

I take Indiana to come in fourth in the tournament because I don't think any of the other teams will come in fourth. Besides that I think Indiana is the fourth best team out of the four teams.

I take North Carolina to come in third in the tournament, because they have really colorful uniforms that should help them to come in third. Besides that Dean Smith is probably the third best coach in the tournament.

I'll take the LSU Wildcats as the runnerup team because the Cats are wild, but they are not wild and crazy, and it is that elusive crazy element that should lift Virginia to victory.

Of course if none of these predictions are right, then I'm wrong.

...puckers

"We know that the ceiling is 10 feet high, the shot clock is broken, the candy machines don't work and that you can't hear the PA announcer—but I'm happy with the move," Allen said.

Hartlock, who will tend goal for the Flyers, was ecstatic with the day's events. "Great! Now I won't have to play every Friday night—It's my favorite drinking night."

Cross-country team runs across country

By RAOUL DUCHESS

The university cross-country team, missing since last November, has turned up in California.

According to captain Matt Belch, the team decided to take their name literally.

"There wasn't much left after the ECCs," Belch said. "So, we decided to run to Los Angeles."

The team ran the 2500-mile distance at a five-minute per mile pace, and finished in two weeks after making only two stops (one water, one bathroom).

"One thing's for sure," said team member Fat Gayhand, "it's a hell of a lot cheaper than Florida."

Since arriving in California, the harriers have been running in road races under assumed names. Belch finished third in the Los Angeles Marathon under the name "Bill Rodgers," while Chris "Chicken Man" Castanet won the Hollywood 10K using the name "Frank Shorter."

Delaware coach Boog Powell accompanied his team out West. While his men ran, Powell soaked up sun and suds at the hotel pool.

"Spring track looked like a waste," Powell said, slathering on the Coppertone. "We would've won the conference anyway, so this just makes it a little more exciting."

When asked for comment, athletic director Nevid Dalsen said, "We've got a cross-country team?"

NEW HEN QUARTERBACK A.E.I.O.U. TROMBONE struts his stuff during the first week of spring football. Trombone, a Tennessee-bred freshman is expected to take the starting job from last season's quarterback Sick Rully.

Review photo by Howdy-did-it

QB position filled Trombone to start

By SMELLY SHOES

After the gives and takes of last season's quarterback situation, head football coach Ray Tubmond seems to have found the man to do the job for the 1981 gridders... A.E.I.O.U. Trombone.

Trombone, a freshman from the backhills of Tennessee, is expected to take over the reins immediately from last season's quarterback Sick Rully.

Said Tubmond, "Trombone gives us the kind of stability we need at the top spot. He's extremely good at ducking things... er, tacklers, and he's got a certain administrative quality about him."

Of course getting Trombone to attend Delaware was a task in itself. After all, Trombone was considered the leading high school quarterback in the nation, what with completing three of four passes in his senior year, and leading his Ozark Mountain Daredevils to the state championship with a 5-5 record.

"We had to bend all sorts of rules to get him," said Tubmond. "Not only did we have to give him the largest house on campus, but he's also got the right to form his own committee on the field if he's not satisfied with the regular huddle."

When reached for comment about coming to Delaware in the fall, Trombone said, "No comment."

When reached a few minutes later, Trombone said, "I'm really looking forward to the athletic and academic opportunities presented at this higher institution of learning. Coach Tubmond has made me feel quite welcome. Besides that, me 'n my pa, use ta shoot bleu hen in them thar backhills, and shucks, eye'd like ta see whut its like ta be uh bleu hen."

Rifle team wipes out Army

By HOWDY-DID-IT

The Delaware Rifle team destroyed Army in a match last weekend, 586,567 to 12.

"It was a slaughter," said Shot in the Dark, the sophomore gunner who lead the attack. Dark picked up 100,296 points in his first assault.

Second year sniper I.

Shootem Young had an off day as he only connected on 439 shots.

"I couldn't believe how well they hide in those funny green uniforms with the trees growing out of the hats," Young said, "fortunately the rest of the team shot a good percentage while sustaining only minor injuries.

In an effort to boost his squad's chances at the Stanley Cup, Philadelphia Flyer General Manager Keith Allen yesterday signed five members of the Delaware Ice Hockey team to million dollar contracts.

"I've been keeping a close eye on these guys all year and there is no question that they can bring Lord Stanley's cup back to Philadelphia," said Allen, referring to his new signees, Elmer Gloux, Cat Monagragm, Key Hartlock, Skimmy Frown and Candle Stick.

Gloux, the star of the Hens' just completed season, received a 50-year, $98.456 million dollar contract. Monagragm, the former coach of the Hens, will be the new player-coach of the Flyers.

Monagragm, however, was stern in his negotiations. He demanded that the Flyers would have to play in the Delaware Ice Arena or he would not sign.

So, in another startling move, Allen also has announced that the Flyers will play in the 700-seat Ice Arena for the rest of the season.
