Women's College
Newark, Delaware
Spring Term, 1938

Dean Winifred J. Robinson
Women's College
Newark, Delaware

Dear Dean Robinson:

It is with deep regret that we hear that at the end of this term you are resigning your position. You have been Dean of Women's College since its opening in 1914. The College has changed much since that time. Yet, we feel sure that you have forgotten very little about the College as it was then or about those who once were students here.

It would hardly be likely that after working earnestly and whole-heartedly so many years for the College that you ever could forget it. However, we hope that this book, which is our farewell gift to you, will help make your memories more alive and tangible. We have tried to make this issue of the BLUE AND GOLD more than just a record of Junior and Senior activities. Instead of formal pictures and wordy paragraphs, we have substituted informal pictures and short phrases, which, in our opinion, express the daily life of the College and the personalities of the students. Just as this book is a record of the whole College so, the work of making it was done not by the Staff alone but by the entire Student Body. Therefore, we, in the name of the students, dedicate this book to you with deep affection and great respect.

Sincerely,
THE STAFF.

Dr. WINIFRED J. ROBINSON

Dean of Women's College

A college president should have four qualities—scholarship, dignity, tact and a sense of humor. President Hullihen has them all. His record and degrees prove his scholarship. His appearance and manner have dignity. The way he almost persuades each entering class that they have the nicest looking girls he has ever seen is proof of his tact. As for his sense of humor—at a Thanksgiving Dinner, everybody bowed in silent prayer—and President Hullihen said "Ten."

It seems that wherever there is a faculty there are also tests—an unending variety and number of tests. There are weekly tests, monthly tests, semi-annual tests; quizzes and reviews; short tests and long tests; essay tests, fill-in tests, true-false tests and identification tests. With such a choice there should be some kind which would suit each student, but never yet have we heard of one. There's always something wrong with a test. It's either too long or too short, too general or too specific, too hard and (even sometimes) too easy.

About the only test that would completely please everybody, is no test at all. However, for once we have turned the tables. This time we know the answers and it's the professors who'll have to do the guessing. On the following pages is a Test for Teachers. To be in character and just to make it harder, the questions have no relevancy to the particular pictures above them. The only instructions are—identify the following professors.

SENIORS

College? It promised friendship, adventure, scholarship, romance to eighty-three eager Freshman who began turbulent college careers in September, 1934 with a memorable Freshman week, green aprons, and pertinent advice from Big Sisters. However, definite activities such as the election of Libby MacFarland as our class president and preparing for those horrible first exams soon overwhelmed that feeling of vague confusion. The Freshman Formal with Kay Castle as chairman, our competitive play, TOY HEART, and our lovely representatives in May Court as climaxes in our progress in social affairs and drama.

September, 1935. The first delightful problem of our second year was: how can we best show those poor Freshmen that we Sophomores love them? The answer was: Enhance their natural beauty by depriving them of make-up (well, Miss Osborne said that a rest from cosmetics would do anyone's complexion good), and by insisting upon their donning significantly green bibs. Then came Stunt Night with several dyed-in-the-wool judges in a mock court scene. Next, Esther Rayne, chairman, selected the Kennett Square Country Club as the scene of the Senior-Sophomore Luncheon. Delicious food, lovely weather, and entertaining company contributed to its success. Also '35-'36 was a significant year in sports—we carried away the honors in hockey, soccer, basketball, and swimming.

September, 1936. By this time, we were able to express our progress in having Little Sisters of our own, in selecting College rings, and in sponsoring the Junior Prom. Eleanor Samuel, chairman of the last delightful affair, secured the popular orchestra of Alex Bartha for rhythms, and diaries and cigarette cases for favors. Oh, night divine!

September, 1937. Seniors at last! To studious co-eds, this classification meant practice teaching, interviews, oral exams; to the more socially ambitious, participation in class activities, diamonds on one's hand; to the artistic, progress in drama, music, art, or sports. However, to all, it meant a realization that "intellect alone ain't all!"

JUNIORS

The Juniors entered W. C. D. in 1935. We can look back over three years of work and fun. It seems that we've always been a part of Women's College and the affairs of our Freshman year seem far remote. Nevertheless, we did have trying times in getting through Freshman Week, Stunt Night and the wearing of our green bibs and name cards. The Freshman Formal—our first big exclusive affair—was the big event. Zoe Griffith was our class president, and she led us through a very successful year.

As Sophomores we had Helen Gardes for President the first semester and Sue Wooton the second. Our big events that year were the Tea Dance in March and the Senior-Sophomore Luncheon at Strath-Haven Inn in April.

This year has been the biggest and best yet. First of all we were "big sisters" and gave a tea for our "little sisters." Then came the Junior Prom. It was a complete success with Peg Hogan as chairman, Louise Stayton heading the receiving line and May Eustace leading the grand march. Soon after the Prom, we got our class rings, and then—if it was possible—we felt more a part of Women's College.

SOPHOMORES

The Class of 1940 was born September 19, 1936. Young and naive; ignorant and bewildered were we. All during Freshman Week we babies toddled around and clutched each other for friendly support. During this period friendships started and "bumpy" feelings of strangeness disappeared.

The Sophomores who were very concerned about us advised that our legs be warmly clad in black cotton stockings. Little by little we grew—from Founders' Day to Stunt Night; from the Sophomore Tea to our entertainment at an E52 play.

There came a sophisticated moment in our lives—the Freshman Formal. Blanche Lee, her committee, and the class officers; Betty Jane Brown, Pauline Piunti; Kay Rosenthal and Sylvia Phelps made those four hours of music and dancing full of memories.

By the end of the spring semester we had added "a few cubits to our stature if not worries to our minds. No longer were we babies, but "youths informed" in the ways of college.

The one thing we don't like about college-classes . . . but there are cuts . . . three precious ones for the Freshmen . . . writer's cramp . . . that sinking feeling when you can't answer a question . . . letting work slide . . . cramming for tests . . . that hopeful feeling when the professor's late . . . that let-down when he comes in one minute before the ten minute deadline . . . feeling sure you don't know anything before you take a test . . . being quite sure of it when you're finished.

Pickett's charge at Gettysburg was nothing compared with the charge on the charging desk when a class of thirty people or so all try to get one reserved book. Over this desk go books on reserve, books for reports, books for term papers—and once in a very great while—books we enjoy reading.

Since they've gone and changed the Post Office about, getting mail is an arduous task. You've got to go to all the trouble of opening your mailbox in order to see if you've got any mail! (It might be a conspiracy to make us exercise more). Incidentally, proofs of hope eternal in the human breast are the girls who look in their boxes a dozen times a day (the mail's only put out three times). They don't expect any mail and they don't get any (except notices from the office). But they keep hoping. Some of them are getting desperate though, and if they don't get any mail soon, they're going to start writing to themselves.

FRESHMEN

October 9, 1937, the class of 1941 received colors. Jean Pratt, captain of the Freshman Class, accepting the colors from Louise Stayton, the Junior president, pledged the class to carry on the traditions of the Women's College and to seek to uphold its honor. The sub-captain of the class, Edith Counahan, received the spade, the symbol of the ideals of the college, from the president of the Sophomore class, Pauline Piunti.

The first evidence of talent among the freshmen was shown when Mina Press received the leading role in a one-act play of the first Playbill production of the year. Edith Counahan and Helen Adams also appeared on the program. The outstanding event of the dramatic season was "Mrs. Moonlight," in which Edith Counahan enacted the title role. Helen Adams, the Freshman representative to the Student Council, also appeared in a major role.

The Freshman Competitive Play was directed by Mina Press under the sponsorship of Jane Trent, a member of the Sophomore class. The climax of the year for the Freshmen was the Freshman Formal. This ended the year's activities for the Freshmen.

Some think that college is the place for pleasure,
But no, not I, but, no, not I;
Some others tread a slower, slower measure,
For wisdom cry, for wisdom cry;
But I, I like to trip to classes early
To greet my profs, to greet my profs,
And smile because I love them all so dearly
And hate rebuffs, and hate rebuffs.

Cheer up, cheer up, there's a chance for you;
I can't midflop more than one or two.
I cry, I cry, I sigh, I sigh, I try
I try, and try for A
But my marks all come from work
No matter what you say!

The walk to the library in the spring is very nice, but in the winter it's a little like an expedition into the farthest Antarctic. The space between Science and the Library is called No Man's Land but the Library definitely is not. For this is where East meets West or, to be more precise, W. C. D. and Delaware College. Really, a better name for the Library would be the Student's Union.
