Doing things differently. Finding common ground to get results for Delaware.

Dear Friend,

It's not easy to get things done in Washington. In the short time I've been there, I've worked hard with both Democrats and Republicans to make progress for working families.

When a budget proposed by the Administration cut funding to Delaware's child advocacy centers, I worked across party lines to restore the funding.

When Washington couldn't agree on the best ways to jumpstart our economy, I put together more than 20 job fairs across Delaware connecting ready-to-work job seekers with ready-to-hire employers.

When rules related to the new health care law threatened Delaware's volunteer fire companies, I worked with leaders in both parties to restore common sense and preserve this critical service for our communities.

In next Tuesday's election, I ask for your vote so I can continue working hard for Delaware's families.

Sincerely,

GETTING DELAWAREANS BACK TO WORK

Hosting 21 job fairs for Delawareans with more to come.

Senator Chris Coons has hosted 21 jobs fairs across the state since taking office, connecting thousands of Delawareans to employers ready to hire.

Fueling small businesses and start-ups to help drive our economy.

Chris knows that most new jobs in the U.S. are created by small businesses, so he's led efforts to extend research and development tax credits to start-ups and small businesses. He also supported efforts to assist veterans interested in becoming job creators as franchise owners.

Promoting a modern manufacturing future in Delaware and across the nation.

Chris spent eight years working for a leading Delaware manufacturing company and regularly visited manufacturers throughout the state. He took these insights to Washington and led the Manufacturing Jobs for America initiative to promote smart legislation that helps manufacturing companies create new opportunities – and new jobs – across our country.

CHRIS COONS

Doing things differently in Washington.

Keep Chris working for us.

Chris worked with a leading Delaware manufacturing company, where he helped the business expand. As our new Senator, Chris is doing things the Delaware way, listening to both parties and bringing people together to fix Washington's gridlock. He's delivering real results to Delaware's families by:

- Leading the effort in the Senate to help manufacturers grow and create jobs here.
- Working to make college and job training more accessible and affordable.
- Connecting thousands of Delawareans with employers through job fairs and workshops.
- Protecting seniors' hard-earned Medicare benefits.

Investing in and Growing America's 21st Century Workforce

As Delaware's new senator, Chris Coons has made 21st century jobs a top priority by fighting for:

- Support of entrepreneurship through providing tax incentives to start-ups and small businesses – which have been driving new job growth over the past five years.
- Investment in science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) education to ensure our future innovators and entrepreneurs have 21st century skills.
- Modernization of our infrastructure to provide high-quality construction and engineering jobs and more reliable transportation for everyone.
- Expansion of imports into Wilmington – by deepening the Delaware River to accommodate vessels and advocating for the Port of Wilmington around the world.
- Innovation in research and development to drive our long-term productivity and competitiveness.

Doing things differently in Washington.

Working hard for Delaware

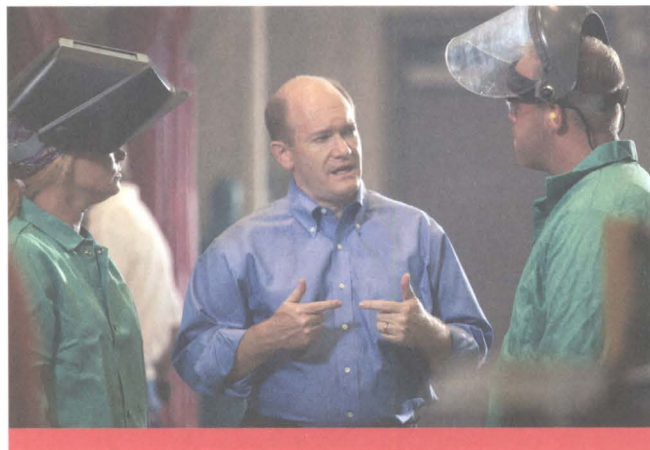

Since his election to the U.S. Senate, Chris Coons has:

- Created and led the Manufacturing Jobs for America initiative in the U.S. Senate, which focuses on enhancing and growing a 21st century workforce both here in Delaware and across the nation, as well as organized more than a dozen job fairs and skills workshops to help Delawareans find work.
- Introduced the American Dream Accounts Act, an innovative bipartisan bill to increase a student's access to college and job training opportunities.

There's still more work to be done.

We need independent-minded reformers like Senator Chris Coons working for Delaware in Washington. Moving forward, Chris will:

- Fight for common-sense solutions to expand job creation and economic opportunities for all Delawareans.
- Work to make education and job training more accessible and affordable.
