Spend the day in the city

By Katy Bowman kbowman@newarkpostonline.com

The city will host its first-ever Newark Day festival Saturday.

It will look a lot like Newark Nite which the city has put on every June since 1985 - except it will be held from from noon to 5 p.m.

Organizers are hoping the change of hours will deter the some of the crimes that have taken place at Newark Nite after the sun has gone down.

"Definitely it's going to be more of a family atmosphere that we strongly believe in," Mayor Vance Funk III told the Post last month. "We probably won't get the large crowds that we're used to, but 30,000 people on Main Street, that's a lot of people to begin with."

As always, Main Street will be closed to vehicular traffic during the event.

But perhaps even more valuable are the lessons her students have learned about compassion and understanding.

Hruz also coordinates her school's AVID program, part of a nationwide initiative focused on preparing students for college. One day, Jasmine Bradley, one of the students in Hruz's AVID class, asked her, "Do you know what today is?"

"Today is the anniversary of the day John Sullivan died," Bradley said.

Following Sullivan's death, the topic of bullying had become a hot topic among the staff and student body at the school, Hruz said.

"We talked about how we felt bad about John and how things were going to change (in regards to the bullying) and that lasted all of about five minutes," she said.

This year, the same group of students brought the program back, and called it "If You Really Knew Kirk 2."

Robbery suspect turns himself in

By Josh Shannon jshannon@cecilwhig.com

Delaware State Police Robbery Unit Detectives have arrested a Elkton man wanted for allegedly robbing two pharmacies during the week of May 20.

Christopher D. Dolbow, 30, turned himself in to detectives at Troop 2 in Glasgow Wednesday evening, May 23. He was arrested and charged with two counts of robbery in the first degree and arraigned at JP Court 2.

Police announced Wednesday that they had charged Dolbow, 30, who they described as homeless, in connection with incidents at two Walgreen's Pharmacies – one in Stanton and one just outside Newark - but they still had not yet located the suspect. After turning himself in, Dolbow failed to produce the $20,000 secured bail, and was committed to the Department of Corrections, said Delaware State Police Master Cpl. Jeffrey Hale.

The first robbery happened at approximately 4:35 p.m. Sunday, May 20, in the 500 block of Main Street in Stanton, Hale said. A man entered the store, acted like he was going to purchase an item and then demanded money from the register. He implied he was armed, but did not show a weapon, Hale said.

After receiving an undisclosed amount of cash, the man fled and was last seen running toward the back of the building. A few hours later, police found an abandoned maroon 1998 Ford

F-150 pick-up truck in the parking lot of the JP Morgan Chase Bank on Stanton-Ogletown Road, approximately two miles from the site of the robbery. The truck was registered to Dolbow, Hale said. "They ran the tags, found the name, ran his info and saw his photo," he said, noting that Dolbow's photo closely matched surveillance footage from the robbery, which police did not release.

Dolbow

The second robbery occurred at around 4:15 p.m. Monday,

May 21, in the 2600 block of Capital Trail near Newark.

In that incident, a man entered the pharmacy and told a clerk he wanted to buy cigarettes. As the clerk began to ring up his order, he demanded money and then reached across the counter and grabbed money from the register.

After a brief struggle with the clerk, he fled the store with an undisclosed amount of cash. Investigators connected that robbery to Dolbow as well, Hale said.

Cherry Hill man gets 55 years for wife's murder

A man accused of stabbing his wife to death inside their Cherry Hill home last Easter Sunday received a 55-year prison term on Tuesday after accepting a plea deal.

James Claude Winters, 41, fatally stabbed 39-year-old Marchal Elizabeth Adams about 10 p.m. on April 24, 2011 inside their secondfloor apartment in the 2100 block of Singerly Road, north of Elkton.

Prosecutors reported that Winters, who believed his wife was having an affair, stabbed Adams 70 times after lying in wait for her inside their home.

In the days before the slaying, Winters had made vague comments that Adams would "not be a problem much longer," Assistant State's Attorney Michael J. Halter said during Tuesday's hearing.

Cecil County Circuit Court Administrative Judge V. Michael Whelan imposed a maximum life sentence on Winters and then suspended all but 55 years of it.

Winters must serve 27 1/2 years in prison before he would be eligible for a parole hearing. He would be about 68 years old then.

O'Brien delivers Commencement address to Class of 2012

By Erin Quinn Special to the Post

Broadcast journalist Soledad O'Brien delivered the address at the University of Delaware's 163rd Commencement Saturday morning in Delaware Stadium, which was crowded with severalthousand Class of 2012 graduates, faculty, and family members.

O'Brien began her address by saying she would not give out advice. She said while growing up, her mother's only advice to her was that most people are idiots.

She said that throughout her life, she'd been told that recent college graduates would worry about achieving goals, being successful, and finding a career. College graduates will be told they will fail at reaching their goals and that it is impossible to be successful doing something they love, she said.

But O'Brien warned the graduates against buying into all that negativity.

"Let's agree that we're going to ignore all the idiots today, she said.

O'Brien told stories about her parents' interracial relationship when it was still taboo in the U.S., her journalistic work with minorities living in America and her reports on disaster relief in Haiti.

As a college graduate, she said, she was concerned with the same things as the students seated in front of her, but O'Brien said she was asking the wrong questions about her future.

SPORTS

They can't all be stars, and it's OK

By Jon Buzby Special to the Post

It's at about this time of year when you start to hear the murmurs while sitting in the bleachers or standing along the outfield fence at local baseball and softball parks.

"Do you think he'll make the all-star team?"

"I hope my daughter makes it." 'It's all politics; only the coaches' kids make it.'

My guess is, the talk is more common among the parents than the kids, who are still focused on making the playoffs and winning a championship.

But it's inevitable that all-star season is coming, and with it will come lots of smiles ... and, sadly, some tears.

Unfortunately, not every kid can be an all-star. Some divisions, like Little League's majors, have roster limits. Only 12 kids can be on the team - no ifs ands or buts - even if the league president's kid would have been the 13th player. Many leagues have added additional all-star teams that compete in postseason tournaments, but there are still kids who get left off of them.

It's a life lesson for kids and parents, just not a fun one, for either party.

Sometime in June, the votes will be in, the phone calls made – and your son or daughter might not get one. What it means: He or she was not selected for the all-star team.

practices, games or team functions never happens - this sends a mesas your summer vacation begins. The bad news is that having your son or at such a young age. It also makes daughter shunned from an all-star team is hard to swallow -- often more so for the parents than the players themselves.

As parents, we all want our kids to be the best. Ask any parents and they'll tell you if they had their way, their children would get perfect grades, have the best manners, and excel in every sport or activity they participate in. That's just human nature.

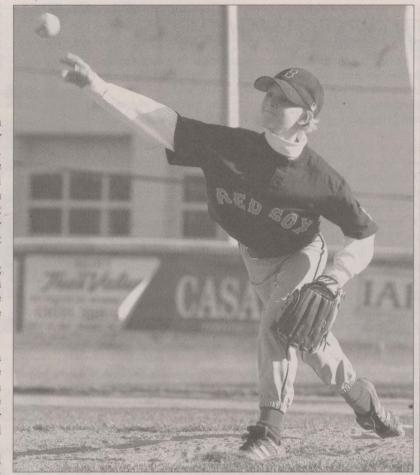

But it's also not realistic. So the sting we feel when our kids are let down in any facet of life radiates through us like no other feeling. And all-star teams are no different.

So what do we do as parents?

The first thing to do is not make a big deal about the all-star team before it is announced (like starting now, in the bleachers or along the fence). The more attention we pay to it, the bigger the disappointment will be for us and our children should they not make it.

Secondly, if you thought your child had a chance and ended up not making the team, it means he or she probably was on the fence come selection time. Remind your child about this, and even suggest that you go support the team to see just how good the players are and what level of skill he or she needs in order to make the team next year.

Lastly, never publicly blame league politics for the all-star selection decisions. Even if you truly believe a child was selected only because of a parent's role in the league — and The "good" news is no more I'm not naïve enough to think this sage to your child that isn't necessary you look like an excuse-making parent who nobody will want to be around. All-star selections can be the highlight of the season for a very select few. But for most players, they will have to face the reality that although they are good, they just aren't good enough. And that's OK.

Local high school baseball All-Stars

The Delaware Baseball Coaches Association released its All-State team last week. Four local players were first team selections.

Freshman southpaw Billy Phillips was one of three pitchers named to the first team. He is joined by teammate Calvin Scott, a sophomore designated hitter. Also on the first team are junior third baseman Tyler Novak of Hodgson and junior Jake Fraley (outfield) of Red Lion Christian.

Concord junior pitcher Chuck Brooks was named state Player of the Year.

St. Mark's wins state baseball title

Mother Nature hovered around Frawley Stadium in the form of scary dark clouds throughout Tuesday night's Delaware Interscholastic Athletic Association Baseball State Tournament title game.

And just when it looked like she might strike with a downpour in favor of Milford when the Bucs held a one-run lead in the fifth inning, it was St. Mark's freshman pitcher Billy Phillips who struck lightning first. And not with his first team All-State left arm, but rather his bat.

Phillips' line-drive single in the bottom of the fifth inning scored Nicholas Trimarco to break open a tie ballgame and give the Spartans a lead they would never relinquish on their way to a 4-3 win.

Jeff Ziemba went three for four and scored two runs for the Spartans. Trimarco was three for four with two RBIs.

The victory gave No. 2-seeded St. Mark's (19-3) its state best 12th baseball title, while No. 13-seeded Milford (15-7) fell short of winning the school's first.

Out of the Attic

This week's Out of the Attic item is a photograph from circa 1905 of Pusey Pemberton's cow, which kept company with two horses and some chickens in the deep yard behind 52 to 54 E. Main St. on the north side of the street.

Pigs also lived nearby. It was said that such animals brought "country smells' to the dirt roads of downtown Newark. A number of other barns and animal pens were behind other houses along the street.

By this time, the rural village of Newark was changing: some non-residential or farm buildings along Main Street (formerly named Newark Street) included the Deer Park Hotel, the Presbyterian Church. the Odd Fellows Hall, the Methodist Church, the Bank of Newark building, the public school, the Newark Opera House, the Academy Building, the Washington House Hotel, the Exchange Building and St. John the Baptist Catholic Church.

Keep your waistline in check this summer

By Katie Daly-Jones Extension Educator

Memorial Day kicked off the summer season this week, and we all know what that means: cookouts, parties, and vacations with family and friends are on the horizon. But Memorial Day is not the only holiday we will be celebrating this summer. In addition to the Fourth of July and Labor Day, summer brings a whole host of "unofficial" celebrations.

Between the graduation parties, baptisms, weddings, and spur-of-the-moment barbecues, how do we keep our waistbands from expanding while still enjoying the fun? Here are a few tips for surviving the many celebrations of summer:

Bring a Healthy Dish

If the host asks you to bring along a dish, make it healthy. Fruit and vegetables are at their peak this time of year and make a wonderful side dish. Challenge yourself and try something new, such as a pomegranate fruit salad or nice earthly beet salad.

Eat What You Like

have a small serving of it. If partygoers.

you are not crazy about taco salad, then keep it off your plate. Often we feel compelled to try a bit of everything whether we like to eat it or not. Just try a little bit of the foods you really like.

Drink More

Thirst can often be mistaken for hunger, so we eat when what our body really needs is some fluid. Carry a reusable water bottle with you and fill it up throughout the day to consume eight to 10 glasses of water a day. Water will stave off hunger and make you feel full faster, which can save you from consuming those extra calories you don't need, and it's keeps you hydrated and healthy on those hot summer days.

Celebrate the Event

Remember why you are at the party. Whether it is to celebrate the accomplishments of a graduate, or just to enjoy the company of your neighbors, keep the focus on the event itself and not the food. Spend time catching up with friends and start a friendly game of volleyball or kickball. It will feel great to get some If you love pasta salad, then exercise and interact with other

Savor Each Bite

Heed your mother's advice: slow down and chew. Enjoy each bite of your meal and take your time while you are eating. It can take our stomachs a complete 10 minutes to let our brains know that we are full, which is why we sometimes continue to eat and then feel overstuffed. Give yourself some time, and stop eating when you feel full.

While summer brings some great food with it, it also brings some great weather. Get out and enjoy the longer days and warm sunshine. It's a great time of year to talk a walk after dinner and make a visit to the playground. Then you can enjoy that ice cream cone when you get home!

PAID ADVERTISEMENT nual Coin S pens to Public

BY DAVID MORGAN STAFF WRITER

This year the annual International Coin Collectors Association will open it's doors to the general public. The five day coin show is a unique opportunity for anyone that has coins, whether it's a single coin or an entire collection. They can meet with and sell directly to the International Coin Collectors Association. Admission is free and there is no obligation to sell. The types of coins the collectors are looking for include silver dollars, half dollars, quarters and dimes dated 1964 and before. Actually, the half dollars can date all the way to 1970. The government used silver to make most U.S. coinage until 1965 when they started using cheaper clad. Silver coins made before 1965 are made with 90 percent silver and are worth many times their face value because of today's high silver market. Recently, silver has been trading for about $28 per oz. Five years ago, silver was just over $4 per oz. This dramatic If those early coins are in good conincrease has raised the price of these silver coins dramatically. Therefore, people that have these coins are selling them to take advantage of the record high prices. During this five day event, those who have coins they wish to sell will be able to do just that.

This show isn't just for silver coins either. They are also interested in gold coins, paper currency, nickels and pennies too. The United States government started minting coins in 1792 dition, they can be worth big money. For instance, a 1792 silver dollar could be worth as much as $20,000 if it's the right one. Compare that to a common wheat back penny from the 1960'sstill collectible but only worth a few cents. Old paper currency can be worth a lot too. A common silver certificate is only worth a couple of bucks but an 1890's $20 bill in excellent condition could be worth thousands.
