You can make a difference, UD grads told

by Cathy Thomas

CBS television journalist Ed Bradley told University of Delaware graduates Sunday to remember their past as they move to the future.

"Looking at the past helps us keep the present in focus," said Bradley during commencement ceremonies.

Fair weather prevailed Sunday while 2,880 graduates received degrees in Delaware Stadium ceremonies.

The day of celebration included traditional shenanigans, such as beach balls tossed among the graduates.

Message airplanes flew over the stadium during the ceremony congratulating the graduates. One message announced "Students no more! Congratulations Nursing 1989."

Bradley, who is best known as co-editor of CBS television's "60 Minutes," started his speech by saying that University President E.A. Trabant had asked him if he brought his 60-minute stopwatch along.

"He reminded me this is Sunday morning, and I should not talk for 60 minutes," said Bradley.

Bradley chose the year when many of the graduates were born — 1967 — to underscore the importance of remembering history.

It was in 1967 that this country saw an increase in protests of the Vietnam War, Bradley said.

"If in the years to come, one of you graduates face a decision that involves a commitment of armed forces...Remember Vietnam," he said, adding later, "If you are lucky, you are a generation that will not face war."

More than half of the graduating class are women, the daughters of the women's movement, Bradley said.

"Women today have achieved the status of equality, but not the reality of equal pay," he said.

Bradley also talked about the call for democracy in China. The pictures from China, he said, show images of people standing up to a government, asking for democracy and pleading for freedom.

"They want the freedoms that we in this country take for granted," said Bradley.

He told the students that the future is "like a corridor into which we can see only with the light coming from behind."

Concluding his speech, Bradley read a letter from an unidentified Delaware student who had volunteered for the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program in Newark. The student wrote to Bradley, telling that his experience had taught him that one person can make a difference.

"If that is what you have learned at this university," said Bradley, "you have a solid education."

DuPont still seeks source of TCE

by Cathy Thomas

Environmental officials are still trying to determine the source of a suspected cancer-causing chemical found in a water well at the DuPont Company's Glasgow site.

Trichloroethene (TCE) was found earlier this year in one of three wells serving the site, which is located on Del. 896 south of Newark.

TCE is a common degreaser and solvent that was widely used ten years ago.

A plan to locate the source of the TCE was reviewed last week by Delaware Department of Natural Resources officials.

"We feel like the problem is in the area adjacent to the well," said Jim Payne, Glasgow site manager. "That's the area we are focusing on."

The TCE contamination was discovered when the company was conducting baseline tests to determine sewer charges.

The TCE was present in the one well at concentrations up to 74 parts per billion (ppb). Under the Safe Drinking Water Act, the maximum contaminant level for TCE is 5 ppb.

Payne said they have found fragments of 8 to 10 storage drums in the area next to the well. They have also found an old license plate dated 1967.

Payne said the drums will be analyzed to determine if they once held TCE.

"There doesn't seem to be much hope for that," he said. "They're in such fragmented condition."

The company will also drill investigative wells in the area of the contaminated well, testing for the chemical.

Two suffer burns in Morningside blaze

Two people were injured in a house fire north of Newark early Tuesday morning.

Kamlesh Batra, 44, and Udit Batra, 18, both suffered first and second degree burns in the 3:30 a.m. fire.

The victims are among seven Batra family members who reside in the house at 32 Farmingdale Lane in Morningside, near the intersection of Paper Mill and Polly Drummond Hill roads.

The family was asleep when the fire started, and were probably spared more serious injury by a smoke detector.

"The whole family was asleep," said Russell Staats, state deputy fire marshal. "They were awakened when they heard the smoke alarm."

Volunteers from Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company of Newark fought the blaze, which was confined to one room.

The fire caused heavy smoke and heat damage throughout the house.

"The fire occurred in the recreational room on the first floor on top of a table and spread to a curtain," Staats said.

The exact cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Newark Nite Saturday

Newarkers will gather Saturday night for a Main Street block party.

The fourth annual Newark Nite will get under way at 6 p.m. and continue through the evening.

The event, which has been growing each year, offers Newarkers a chance to meet old friends.

"That's what seems to be the most fun about Newark Nite," said Marguerite Ashley, economic development coordinator for the Newark Business Association. "If you've lived here for a few years, you can't go five minutes without seeing someone you know."

Newark Nite is aimed at getting people to visit the central business district for the entertainment with the idea that they will later return to shop.

Although officials hope the event will create good feelings about Main Street, Ashley said it is not a highly commercial event.

"It's a neighborhood party rather than a hard sales event," she said. "We want to present people with a good time on Main Street."

New to the celebration this year is a food court to be located in the 100 block of East Main Street. People will be able to choose from a variety of cuisine to eat outdoors.

The evening's entertainment will be highlighted by a performance by the Annapolis, Md. band Mama Jama. The band's sound incorporates Latin, Caribbean and contemporary African influences.

Class of 1989 prepares to step into a world of possibilities

by Nancy Turner

With at least a dozen school years behind them and "freedom" waiting just across the commencement stage, spring is an exciting time for high school seniors.

They are getting a lot of slaps on the backs from well-wishers saying, "This is the best time of your life!"

But is it? When you are 17 and the world is your oyster, what do you need to be happy?

During recent interviews, the senior class presidents from the five high schools in the Newark area talked about what causes happiness.

While each student was honored to have been elected to the office of class president, their happiest moments hinged on personal achievement.

They unanimously chose their parents as having the greatest and most positive impact on their lives but they had second choice mentors, as well.

When asked what made their high school outstanding, each student reported that, regardless of their school's size, teachers and students shared strong friendships. They most valued "not feeling like a number."

Here are some of their thoughts, presented in the manner of a high school yearbook:

Asked, when you are finally on your own, what will you need to be happy, Mims replied, "I am happy when I have people around to care about, people who I know care about me. I don't think I'll need much money, just the basic necessities."

Dislikes are "vegetables," but in general "I try not to think about the negative."

Newarks of the world unite in Jersey

by Cathy Thomas

Newarks of the world will unite next week during a three-day celebration in Newark, N.J. City Councilman Olan Thomas will represent this Newark in the "Newarks of the World Reunion" June 9-11.

"Many of the cities are much larger than Newark (Delaware)," said Thomas. "Some are smaller."

Population is not the only thing contrasting the cities. Pronunciation is also varied.

Here, the accent is on the second syllable — newARK. To help facilitate pronunciation, the A is sometimes capitalized.

The host of the reunion, Newark, N.J. emphasizes the first syllable — NEWark.

Once they're past explaining which Newark they're from, Thomas said he expects to discuss problems and issues facing the cities.

"We'll be talking about what the various Newarks do," he said. "It looks very interesting." This reunion of Newarks is the second, the first having taken place in Newark, California last year.

According to Newark, N.J. Mayor Sharpe James, the reunion will draw public officials from at least a dozen Newarks, including the "mother city" of Newark-on-Trent, England.

"Letters were sent to all the Newarks we could find, and we have a few people coming to the reunion who were not in California, including representatives of Newarks in Michigan, Ohio, Delaware, Illinois and possibly South Africa," said James.

The reunion will coincide with the New Jersey city's annual Portuguese Day celebration and parade. The visiting Newarks will be represented on a float in the parade.

The Newarkers will also be treated to a round of parties, events and visits to New Jersey landmarks.

Kirk students reverse peer pressure

Peer pressure is often blamed when teenagers start using alcohol or drugs.

That peer pressure is being reversed through a recently-formed student group at Kirk Middle School.

Students Against Substance Abuse (SASA) are offering teenagers an alternative to drugs and alcohol.

"We want students to know we're the first choice to having fun," said Stephanie Tansley, a SASA member. "You can have fun just being yourself."

The group was recognized this week through a Delaware Senate resolution. Students were presented with the resolution during ceremonies yesterday at Legislative Hall in Dover.

Although SASA encourages teenagers to stay away from drugs and alcohol, it also offers help to those already in trouble.

The students have established a fund for those students who require treatment for substance abuse but do not have the funds to pay for it.

A walkathon earlier this month raised $1,100 for the fund, and the students are planning a garage sale, bake sale and car wash Saturday, June 3 at Kirk Middle.

The idea for SASA was originated last fall when members of the Kirk PTA expressed the need for an organization to funnel students away from drugs and alcohol.

Marge Tansley, Stephanie's mother and the incoming PTA president, said parents discussed the proposal with students and soon realized the group had to be student-generated.

"The students said nothing was reaching them because nothing was geared to them," said Tansley. "Students have a better chance of reaching students than adults do."

SASA now has 37 members, according to Tansley. She said all students are welcome to join the group.

"They're not all honor roll

students," she said. "Anybody can belong."

The only criteria for the members is that they meet after school.

Tansley said the formation of the group has been a learning experience for both the students and the adults.

"The students have learned that each person can be respected," said Tansley.

For the parents, she said, they have learned that teenagers can set the example for each other.

"It's not just another group," said Tansley. "It's the next step."

"It's taking the time to care, setting an example and giving them another choice."

Eagles, ospreys faring well

□ Delaware's bald eagle and osprey populations are both up from last year, according to statistics compiled by the state Division of Fish and Wildlife's Nongame and Endangered Species Program.

Eight eaglets were banded in the state in recent weeks, the highest number since record-keeping was started in the mid-1960s.

"The increase reflects a national trend for these endangered birds," said endangered species coordinator Janis Thomas. "We're very excited."

Previously, the most eaglets fledged in one year was five.

There are 61 active osprey nests in the Inland Bays as compared to 45 last year. Most have three eggs. The success of the nests will be determined later.

Police seek communication system upgrade

by Cathy Thomas

Communication is a critical aspect of the Newark Police Department's ability to function, according to Chief William Hogan.

"Police can't be everywhere and see everything," said Hogan. "Citizens have to rely on good communication."

It is because communication is so important that Hogan has developed a plan to upgrade the department's communication system.

That plan calls for computer-aided dispatch, a new 911 system and new radio equipment.

The first part of the plan — computer-aided dispatch — will be presented to Newark City Council later this month for consideration.

The new computer dispatch system will allow the department to go to a paperless process.

"The computer will tell the dispatcher how many (cars) are available," said Hogan. "It will track officers in and out of service."

The computer-aided dispatch may represent quite a financial investment for the city, but Hogan said it will be a "quantum leap" over what the department is now using. The exact cost of the system won't be known until bids are submitted from suppliers.

The computer will store information about each call, interfacing with the department's record system.

"From a management point of view, I will be able to analyze in greater detail our activity," said Hogan.

The system will also aid the department in the investigation of crimes, according to Hogan. An officer will be able to quickly retrieve information that may assist in a criminal investigation.

Hogan hopes the new computer will be in place by the end of this year.

Dispatchers, who have only used manual record-keeping, will have to be trained on the new computers. Hogan said the system will be user-friendly.

"It will have a lot of help indexes, those kind of things," he said.

An enhanced 911 telephone system should be in place by early 1990. Newark was selected as one of six answering points for the statewide system.

The system will enable Newark residents to dial 911 and connect with the city police. Such calls now go to the Regional Communications Center and are then transferred to the city police.

Until the new system goes in place, Hogan asks residents to continue dialing 366-7111 for emergency calls.

The department is also in need of new radio equipment, according to Hogan. "Our system, internally, needs to be upgraded," he said.

However, Hogan said any changes to the radio room will be delayed until a determination is made on a new police building.

Currently, the city is seeking a consultant to assess the department's facility needs. Hogan said if a new building is needed, radio equipment should be installed in that facility.

The improved communications system should help the police serve the public, according to Hogan.

"I think it will help us process calls for service more quickly," he said. "It will improve efficiency."

Guard's Trivits retires

Major Gen. Oscar E. Trivits has retired from the Delaware National Guard after a career that spanned four decades.

Trivits, of Newark, stepped down effective May 31.

Trivits began his military career at the University of Delaware, where he served as a cadet in the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC).

He was appointed a second lieutenant in the Delaware National Guard in December 1957, and since has held a significant number of military command assignments in the state Guard.

During Trivits' career, he commanded the 1st Automatic Weapons Battalion, the 198th Artillery and the 198th Signal Battalion, and was deputy commander of the 261st Signal Command.

Finally, as acting assistant adjutant general, Trivits commanded all Delaware Army National Guard troops.

Oscar Trivits.

In June 1983, Trivits was appointed chief of staff for the Delaware Guard and one year later he was named assistant adjutant general.

Trivits holds bachelor of science and master of business administration degrees from the University of Delaware.

He is retired from his civilian position as deputy regional health administrator with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Trivits was heavily honored during weekend retirement ceremonies at state Guard headquarters.

Six students face charges after youth injured during party

by Cathy Thomas

Six University of Delaware students face charges stemming from a party at which an 18-year-old Stafford, Va. youth was injured, Newark Police said this week.

Keith Johnson suffered burns on 50 percent of his body May 13 when he came in contact with a 12,000 volt electric line.

According to police, Johnson hit the line after he climbed on a rail car of a slow-moving train near South Chapel Street.

Johnson was transferred to a hospital in Virginia after receiving treatment at the Chester-Crozer Medical Center in Pennsylvania.

According to Newark Police Capt. Charles Coffey, Johnson was attending a party when the accident occurred.

Charles Hodgson of East Park Place has been charged with maintaining a disorderly premise and providing alcohol to a person prohibited.

Five other students, who lived at the same residence, have been charged with maintaining a disorderly premise. They include Brian Gill of King of Prussia, Pa.; Alan Rafkind of Matawan, N.J.; David Mench of Newark; Warren Ruggiero of Glen Rock, N.J.; and James Tuerff of Piscataway, N.J.

According to Coffey, the students are also under investigation by the Delaware Alcohol Beverage Control Commission and the city building department.

The Commission is investigating the unlicensed selling of alcoholic beverages. Coffey said the investigation that followed the accident turned up a sign at the residence indicating those attending the party would be charged for the beer they drank.

The city building department is investigating a violation of city code stemming from the number of people living in the house. According to city code, no more than four unrelated persons can live in one dwelling.

Police consider theft charge

□ A teenager may face theft charges after allegedly stealing money from the victim of a May 14 train accident, according to Newark Police.

The youth, 16, whose identity was not released, was walking with Charles Gibson, 27, along railroad tracks near the intersection of Capitol Train and Woodlawn Avenue when Gibson was struck and killed.

Gibson was walking his two rot-tweiler dogs near the railroad overpass when a train approached. The dogs had wandered onto the tracks and in an apparent attempt to save them, Gibson was struck by the train.

"After Gibson got hit, (the teenager) either knew or went through Gibson's pockets," said Newark Police Capt. Charles Coffey.

Coffey said the teenager is believed to have taken $350 from Gibson's pockets.

New Castle County Police later arrested the teenager on drug charges. Coffey said the theft was discovered when county officers were questioning the youth.

According to Newark Police Lt. Alex Von Koch, the actual filing of theft charges may depend on the outcome of a drug rehabilitation program for the teenager.

Library offers reading programs

□ Two summer reading programs for children will be offered by the Newark Free Library.

The Read-Together program for children ages 3-6 will be held June 19 through Aug. 12. Certificates and prizes will be given to children who have at least 10 library books read to them during the course of the program.

The Catch the Dela Bug program for children in grades one through five also will be held June 19 through Aug. 12. Certificates and prizes will be given to children who read at least 10 library books.

Registration for both programs will be held June 19-24 at the library, 750 Library Avenue.

Dela Bug, the state's reading mascot, will kick off the summer programs with a guest appearance at the library at 1 p.m. Monday, June 19.

For details, call the library at 731-7550.

Newarkers named to state boards

□ Governor Michael N. Castle has appointed several Newarkers to state boards and commissions.

Ann Keffala, of Golfview Drive, will serve a three-year term on the Delaware Institute of Dental Education and Research.

Virginia T. Baker, of Cherokee Drive, has been appointed to a three-year term on the Council on Parks.

Robin L. Elliott, of Fleming Street, will serve on the Authority on Radiation Protection.

Timothy F. Brooks, of Apple Road, will fill a three-year term on the Council on Mental Retardation.

Pump station work delayed

The city's Milford Crossroads pump station will be finished in July, about six months later than anticipated.

The reason for the delay centered on a water pump which was not delivered on time to the construction site off of Del. 72 north of the city.

"There was a backlog at the factory," said Joseph Dombrowski, city water director, "and there's very few materials being stored at the warehouse."

Also contributing to the delay were delivery problems between the manufacturer and the supplier.

Even with the delay, the $750,000 pump station will be ready for use in plenty of time.

The idea for the pump station was first conceived nearly ten years ago when city officials first anticipated growth north of the community.

"We were just waiting for sufficient demand to justify the cost," said Dombrowski.

With several new housing and commercial developments planned north of the city, increased water demand is expected during the next few years.

The new pump station will pump 1,500 gallons of water a minute if necessary. The typical demand will require 400 gallons a minute.

Four pumps will be installed in the station. The pumps will go into service as the demand warrants, according to Dombrowski.

"As pressure drops, the bigger pumps will click on," he said.

Currently, those developments north of the city are supplied by the Possum Park pump station. After the new station is on line, the old pump station will sit idle unless needed in an emergency.

Water pressure and supply problems surfaced last summer in Chapel Hill and West Meadow. A second pump was installed in the Possum Park pump station to help meet the water demand.

TCE

Private wells in the vicinity of the contaminated well have been tested and show no signs of the contaminant.

The City of Newark has one well about 500 yards from the contaminated DuPont well. The city's well has also tested and found clear of the chemical.

Payne said the company has not shut down the contaminated well because the water can be used in some production processes at the plant. There is also a concern that if the well is shut down, the contaminant might travel to another well.

"As long as we run our well, we are continuing to pull the contaminant from the ground," said Payne.

An air stripper and activated charcoal filtration system will be installed to clean the TCE from the contaminated well. Payne said they hope to have the equipment in place by August.

"In the interim period, we have put source filters on our cafeteria water," he said.

Employees have been drinking bottled water as a precaution, even though no other wells have shown the contamination.

"Our employees have been very understanding," said Payne. "We are keeping them up-to-date as to what's going on."

Payne said they hope to know within 30 days whether the old drums are the source of the TCE contamination.

NITE

Following a fashion show, local dance groups will perform throughout the evening. Local bartender and juggler Mike Hoffman will show off his juggling ability.

Children will find special entertainment for themselves on the Academy lawn at Main and Academy streets. Storytelling and crafts are planned for the event.

NEWS

NEWS FILE

Counties seek sharing of funds

□ The Delaware Association of Counties believes the state should share portions of the 2 percent transfer tax and the manufactured housing tax with municipalities and the New Castle, Kent and Sussex county governments.

The counties collect the transfer tax for the state but receive only a nominal fee for the service, according to the association.

The transfer tax is generated by new development within the cities and counties, which bear the cost of providing services to the new development, but benefits only the state.

For fiscal year 1989, the total projected transfer tax collections in New Castle County will be about $29 million. The county will retain only a one percent collector's fee.

In a motion passed unanimously during a recent meeting, the association urged the state to recognize that municipalities and counties absorb the majority of new development costs and services and to share a portion of the tax revenues.

Youth Week applications

positive impact on your life? She said, "My coach, JoAnn Sydnor, taught me to set goals and priorities in my life. I admire her strong personality."

What do you think about the lyrics of the popular song "Don't Worry, Be Happy"?

"I'm a waitress and I was at work and being bombarded with customers when I first heard the song. It sounded great to me at the time, but the song isn't really me. I work hard and I'm anxious until I'm sure that everything is taken care of. When I worry, I worry."

Kristi Taylor of Caravel Academy will attend Marshall University in West Virginia after graduation and hopes to major in education. Her parents are John and Carol Taylor.

Asked, when you are finally on your own, what will you need to be happy, Taylor replied, "I'm going away to college so I have to have a radio. I can't live without music."

Likes include "the fact that we can protest and express our views in this country."

Dislikes include "the fact that there are people with children who work as hard as they can and still lose their homes."

Asked who has had a positive impact on your life, Taylor said, "When I try my hardest and sometimes things don't work out right, I have a friend, Gill, who reminds me that I'm not a quitter."

What do you think about the lyrics of the popular song "Don't Worry, Be Happy"?

"I basically agree with it. It's good to relax and try not to take life so seriously sometimes."

Holly Taylor of Christiana High School will be a pre-medical student at Lebanon Valley College this fall. She is the daughter of Betty Eileen Taylor of Newark.

Asked, when you are finally on your own, what will you need to be happy, she said, "I'll need friends and a little money, but I will still need encouragement from my mom."

As to likes, she said, "There are great opportunities in our world. If you have the drive, you can be anything you want to be."

Dislikes include racism and sexism.

Other than your parents, who has had a positive impact on your life?

"My grandfather from Pennsylvania is known as 'The Great Lecturer.' When he talks to me about school, he tells me that nobody will do it for me. No matter what he says about anything, he is about 99 percent right."

What do you think about the lyrics of the popular song "Don't Worry, Be Happy"?

"Everybody worries and I don't think you can just stop worrying, but being happy is the most important thing. If you're not happy, you have nothing."

Jeff Teeven of St. Mark's High School will attend Boston College and plans to study business. He is the son of Robert and Mary Jane Teeven of Newark.

Dislikes include "the suppression of other cultures and races due to their differences which people aren't used to, can't recognize, or deal with."

Other than your parents, who has had a positive impact on your life?

"My older brother, Bob, has always been around for me. We're like best friends. I talk about my career with him. We'll probably be in business together someday."

What do you think about the lyrics of the popular song "Don't Worry, Be Happy"?

"I agree with them totally. If you think about it, things can always be worse than they really are so we should try to look on the bright side. Don't hang your head. Look up. There's sure to be something bright coming."

Heather Tumlin of Newark High School plans to attend Abilene Christian University in Texas to prepare for a career in aquatic physical therapy. She is the daughter of Tom and Judy Tumlin of Newark.

She, too, was asked, when you are finally on your own, what will you need to be happy?

Tumlin reponed, "I hope I have a husband or a group of friends that I can depend on and love. I'll need to feel good about myself. I don't want to be stressed out about money, just have enough for my family to be comfortable."

As to likes, she said, "Freedom, I can't imagine living in a country without it."

She dislikes prejudice and hypocrisy.

Other than your parents, who has had a positive impact on your life?

Newark produces video yearbook

by Nancy Turner

Newark High School has had its own television station, WNHS, since 1970, but this year, in addition to regularly scheduled programming, telecommunications instructor Mark Freidly and 50 of his students fast-forwarded into producing the school's first video yearbook.

This isn't the first time a high school has channeled into the video yearbook trend. A few schools have shot their own film footage and employed the services of commercial video production companies who edited, dubbed-in pop music and narration, and generally put all the pieces together.

But when the WNHS video yearbook is completed in August, Newark High School will certainly be the first public school in our area to independently produce and market an entire project in-house.

For a mere $19.95, students can purchase the NHS Video Yearbook that includes triumphs and "bloopers" from every major sporting event of the year, information on clubs and organizations, social highlights like the prom, athletic team initiations, commencement exercises and candid footage of "the real Newark High."

While the video yearbook is in no way intended to replace the written yearbook, if it is a success the Krawen staff and WNHS video team may agree to offer discount incentives to students who purchase both.

The NHS telecommunications department is unrivaled in Delaware, providing students with an opportunity to learn every facet of broadcasting, i.e., how to stand in front of a camera as well as how to stand behind one.

Participants meet daily in two consecutive class periods, with their entire course of credited study spanning as many as four years. They rotate through various studio positions during the school year and for experience.

For fun and a change of pace, mobile crews occasionally tape in remote locations like Philadelphia or Baltimore's Inner Harbor or provide coverage for field trips and distant sporting events.

"This course gives us on-hands experience and prepares us to actually do something. It's not a regular class that just tells us the basics and fundamentals of a given field. We actually get to perform them while we learn them," said John Rhoads, operations manager.

The four-room NHS telecommunications department has a state of the art assortment of sound equipment, television monitors and Panasonic 5000 microchip cameras included in its inventory, not to mention a room size collection of over 100 autographed glossies of news

AT A GLANCE

Each year, one Newark High School Telecommunications student is awarded the prestigious Tele Award for best exhibiting the WNHS motto "focusing on excellence" through hard work and outstanding program contributions.

The 1989 WNHS Tele recipient, Scott Shaw, was recognized May 25 at a year-end banquet held at the University of Delaware's Blue and Gold Club. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Shaw of Newark.

The fourth year telecommunications student served as the chief station engineer this year and plans to major in broadcasting at The University of Delaware next year.

"When I found out what was involved and actually started doing production of my own and could see what I could do with the opportunities available here (NHS)," said Shaw, "I got very interested."

"Putting a whole production together is hard at first, but once you learn the pattern, the rhythm, and get your instincts going, it's exciting and easy."

and screen personalities, just for encouragement.

Over the past two years, WNHS has received two program improvement grants from state and local government and has more recently benefited from the production and sale of brief commercial spots, which air during "The Morning Show."

"The Morning Show" is a daily in-house school news and variety program that starts at 7:30 a.m. and is enjoyed by the 1,300 student population during their homeroom classes.

"I'm pretty proud of the fact that we are a money making station," said Telecommunications instructor Mark Freidly who graduated from NHS in 1979 and is, himself, a product of the 19 year old telecommunications department.

"Our grants are going to run out soon, so to gain financing for the program, we are getting commercial sponsorship for The Morning Show," said Freidly. "We would like to find a major Delaware corporate sponsor for our station, but selling advertising is okay though because that's the way television works in the real world."

EDUCATION

1989 Salzburg Fellows named

Delaware's Abrams, Meyer participate in Austrian seminar series

Two University of Delaware professors, Dr. Burton A. Abrams and Dr. William H. Meyer, have been named 1989 Salzburg Fellows.

Abrams, professor of economics, and Meyer, assistant professor of political science, were selected to attend Austria's noted Salzburg Seminar, one of the world's foremost centers for intellectual exchange.

The Salzburg Seminar is committed to the examination of contemporary affairs, and its alumni list reads like a who's who of world affairs.

Between 40 and 50 fellows are selected for the 10 programs offered each year. They spend approximately two weeks in discussion of a specific concern.

Faculty members and discussion leaders are recognized worldwide as experts in their fields.

Meyer, who is currently in Salzburg, is attending a session entitled, "Human Rights Across Cultures and Political Systems."

Abrams will attend "The New Revolution: The USSR in Transition" in late summer.

Also the recipient of a summer research grant from the University for a project entitled "Direct Foreign Investment and Human Rights," Meyer plans to combine that research with the knowledge he gains at Salzburg for the first two chapters of a book on human rights.

Abrams, who previously served as a Fulbright Scholar in China, is interested in the economic reforms of China and the contrast of that country's relative success to the current economic changes in the Soviet Union.

He plans to use his Salzburg experience to write a series of articles or a short book on the reforms in socialist countries that will point to the virtues of free market economies.

Each year, the Office of the University President sponsors fellows to participate in the seminar to encourage internationalization at the University of Delaware.

Since 1982, 15 fellows have attended the seminar.

"The University is one of very few universities in the United States associated with the Salzburg Seminar," said Dr. William Boyer, who chaired the fellowship selection committee.

"We are fortunate to have this association. Those who attend are usually mid-career and are considered to have potential for high achievement."

"The program not only enriches the person selected personally, but enriches that person's students and the University as well."

BUSINESS

Nonantum Mills
work begins

Construction is under way at Nonantum Mills, a 210-house development off Old Paper Mill Road in Newark.

Nonantum Mills, situated on rolling hills, will feature colonial and contemporary houses, some with Victorian flair. The houses will have four bedrooms, two and one-half baths and two-car garages.

The first 10 houses will be completed by the end of September.

Nonantum Mills is being built by The Handler Corporation, Baldini Inc. and Chapel Woods Management Company, and represented by B. Gary Scott Realtors.

For information on the development, call Amy Lapenta at 999-9999.

Ad Facts
analysis reports

Ad Facts, a Newark company designed to provide a complete overview of competitors' promotional campaigns, can now provide color overheads and graphs for a more comprehensive look at advertising activities.

"Our advanced computer system gives us the ability to enter the information found in our research and provides graphs and charts for an immediate overview of the statistics on competitors' spend levels over time, media schedule and publicity column inch count," said Rita Lukowski, president of Ad Facts.

The company provides these graphs and charts as part of its competitors analysis report.

The service is provided to a diverse group of clients, including advertising agencies, marketing directors, new companies looking for a market niche and established companies interested in furthering the salability of their products.

"If you don't take a look at what your competitors are doing, you can waste money on promotions that blend in rather than stand out," said Lukowski.

Ad Facts is located in Suite 103 West of the Robscott Building, 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd. For information, call 453-8630.

Hunter's Ridge
info center

An information center has opened at Hunter's Ridge, a new residential housing development under construction on Polly Drummond Hill Road in northeastern Newark.

Hunter's Ridge homes, which start below $200,000, are being built by the Neal family developers. The Neals also constructed Meadowdale.

Information center hours are noon to 5 p.m. most days of the week, and by appointment Tuesdays and Thursdays.

State Chamber
'Market Delaware'

The Delaware State Chamber of Commerce will hold its third business-to-business exposition, "Market Delaware '89," June 13-14 at the former Bradlees location in the Concord Mall on U.S. 202.

The trade show has attracted 140 exhibitors, and will feature a "New Orleans Mix and Market" 5-7 p.m. Tuesday, June 13 and motivational lectures by Dr. Denis Waitley at 1 and 3 p.m. Wednesday, June 14. Seating at the lectures will be by advance reservation only.

Admission to both the show and mix and market are free upon presentation of a business card. Show hours are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. both days.

Step forward for fledgling Games

Last year, when we kicked off the First State Games, we knew we had a good concept — an olympic-style competition for amateur athletes of all ages and abilities. But we did not anticipate just how enthusiastic Delawareans would be about the games.

Happily, I can report that the turnout shattered even our greatest expectations. Not only did we have more than 1,300 participants in fifteen sports, but we had thousands of enthusiastic spectators as well.

Now, we plan to do it again — bigger and better.

We'll include all of the sports we had last year, including some true olympic events like track and field and swimming, and others which are popular here in Delaware, such as bowling, roller skating, and

STATESIDE

by Gov. Michael N. Castle

softball. Three new sports will be added this year — powerlifting, wrestling and water skiing.

Our goal is to expand the field of athletes from thirteen hundred to two thousand.

All those who competed last year seemed to genuinely enjoy the games and the chance to participate in athletic competition. We all enjoy the Olympic games, but they are only for a few world-class athletes. Through the First State Games, all Delawareans have the opportunity to "go for the gold."

This year's opening ceremonies, including a torch run and parade of athletes, begin Friday evening, July 28, at Newark High School. The competitions will be held Saturday and Sunday at various locations, with closing ceremonies set for Sunday night following the ice show at the University of Delaware. The yachting competition will be held the following weekend in Rehoboth.

The response — both from the sports and business communities — has been tremendous. Coaches have been out spreading the word about the games and spending many hours of their time setting up events. Local businesses have come through with some very important sponsorships.

Most notable, however, has been the spirit of competition displayed by the athletes. They are setting a fine example of sportsmanship and the importance of physical fitness for all of us.

For more information on the games, please call Executive Director Eric Conrad at 454-1000. I look forward to another year of exciting competition and fun.

Reducing national deficit

Warmer weather and longer days mean the beginning of the tourist season in Washington. Spring has sprung in the nation's capital. Everywhere you look the flowers and trees are showing their colors.

Washington is always a popular place for Delawareans to visit. Day trips and weekend excursions are easy by car, bus, or train. But it helps to plan ahead. There are a lot of things to see — most of them free. Here are a few tips on what to do.

The U.S. Capitol, where Congress works, is Washington's most impressive attraction. The building is open daily from 9:00 a.m. Tours originating in the Capitol rotunda are conducted throughout the day until 3:45 p.m. Passes to get into the House and Senate galleries are available from my office, 131 Cannon House Office Building, which is right next door to the Capitol.

The Library of Congress, the world's largest library, is located across the street from the Capitol at First Street and and Independence Avenue. Open daily, tours are conducted Monday to Friday every hour from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Phone: (202) 707-5458.

CAPITOL COMMENTS

U.S. Rep. Tom Carper

The Supreme Court building is open Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and public lectures are available in the courtroom every hour on the half hour until 3:30 p.m. when the Court is not in session. Phone: (202) 479-3000.

The Washington Monument, the Jefferson Memorial, and the Lincoln Memorial are open from 8:00 a.m. until midnight from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

The Kennedy Center For the Performing Arts has regular tours conducted daily from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. Visitors should go to the Tour Lounge, Parking Level A. Tours leave every fifteen minutes and last about forty minutes. Phone: (202) 254-3774.

The National Archives, located just off the Mall at 7th and Constitution, is the home of the original Declaration of Independence and U.S. Constitution. It is open daily from 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. until Labor Day. Phone: (202) 523-3183.

The Smithsonian Institution, made up of eleven different museums including the Air and Space Museum, the National Galleries of Art, as well as the National Museums of American Arts, American History and Natural History are open daily from 10:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. with extended summer hours. Call (202) 357-2700 for information about a specific museum.

Tours of the White House, located at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, are available Tuesday through Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to noon. Tickets must be obtained at the Visitors Waiting Area on the Ellipse the day of the tour from 8:00 a.m. to noon. My office will supply tickets for congressional tours whenever possible, but we need at least four weeks notice.

STEER THIS WAY

By Barry Williams

Can you "read" the smoke coming out of your car's tailpipe? White smoke when starting up on a cold morning is probably water vapor. If it continues, check for a cracked engine block or cylinder head. Black smoke indicates too-rich fuel mixture; blue smoke means you're burning oil; and light gray smoke means you may be burning transmission fluid.

Flat tire? If the tread is 1/4 inch or less, repair it. Otherwise, it's smarter to replace the tire.

Don't try to use an ordinary infant carrier or a car bed instead of a safety seat. It just won't do the job.

You can check an air filter by holding it up to the light, but it's easier to replace it once a year — more often in dusty areas.

Overfilling the gas tank is not only uneconomical, it can damage performance. Too much gasoline in the tank creates more pressure against the overflow valve than it can handle, so that raw gasoline enters the system, causing rough running and lower gas mileage.

Donovan homer lifts St. Mark's past Indian River

by David Woolman

DAGSBORO — After a rather frustrating five innings, Mike Donovan led off the sixth inning for the St. Mark's High School baseball team and hit a 3-2 fastball over the Indian River stadium fence, over the pine trees around the field and into some adjoining farmland.

The solo home run tied the game, and the Spartans went on to defeat the host Indians 7-4 in the second round of the state baseball tournament.

St. Mark's is the only Newark area team left in the tournament field, Caravel Academy and Newark High School having fallen in the first round. (See sports section.)

"He (pitcher Rob Murray) had a fast curveball," said Donovan. You couldn't tell it was coming. We kept lunging at it."

Patience, learned over five innings, was the key.

"I was waiting for the fastball. I told (teammate Gary Lynch) before I got up to bat that I was going to hit a home run today."

The Spartans took the lead in the first inning when Donovan singled in Mike Smyth, who led off the game with a double. They took a 2-0 lead in the third when Smyth singled, stole second, moved to third on a single to left field by Chris Milyo (who went four for four) and scored when Indian River leftfielder Matt Schrider misplayed the ball.

In the bottom halves of the innings Mike Oller (4-0) retired the first eight batters in order before number nine batter Jud Steele hit the first pitch he saw over the fence. Indian River scored two more runs in the inning on a Heath Hall triple, which knocked in John Powell and Kevin Cordrey, and took a 3-2 lead.

Oller would give up only one other hit in his five innings of pitching.

With one out in the seventh and the score tied, Milyo hit a double, Brian Wallace walked and Donovan singled to load the bases. Kevin Lazarski, hitless on the day after ripping three hard balls right at fielders, came up to bat.

"I was pretty nervous," said

Lazarski. "I just tried to put it in play."

He hit one on the ground up the middle to score Milyo and Wallace and give the Spartans a 5-3 lead. Rich Waddington singled to reload the bases, and Mike McFarland singled to drive in Donovan. Smyth walked to force in another run, and the Spartans had a 7-3 lead.

After Oller walked the leadoff batter in the sixth, short relief specialist Tom Neylon came in to get the Spartans out of the inning unscathed. Given a four run lead to work with in the seventh, he retired the first two batters before giving up a homerun to Lenny Whitman. He struck out Jud Steele to end the game.

"We try to believe we have a lot of ways to win baseball games," said coach Tom Lemon. "Once Michael hit that solo home run and got us tied, I thought we had a chance to win."

"We pride ourselves on being a complete team. Today we found a way to win it with some good pitching and clutch hitting."

St. Mark's plays in a semifinal round game today.

THE NEWARK POST GUIDE TO NEWARK NIGHT
SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1989

Danish artists discover Main Street USA

Main Street USA, featuring Newark's own version of the classic American downtown district, will be featured in an exhibition of paintings and prints to be displayed this summer in Denmark.

The artists, who, incidentally, created the downtown scene found on the cover of this supplement, are Merete Thejll and Bengt Pettersson.

Thejll and Pettersson came to Newark last summer, visiting their son Peter Thejll, a graduate student at the University of Delaware.

While here, they found inspiration in our little town, according to Newark Post reporter Nancy Turner, who discovered them hard at work one afternoon.

The artists created about 60 Newark paintings and prints, their work detailing the candid beauty of Chapel Street, Old College, roadside wildflowers, Main Street, townspeople and even the freshness of clean laundry drying on clothes lines.

"When we go to town from Kimber-ton," Merete said, "we take our bikes on this little path near Pathmark. It is beautiful there because of the field and the wildflowers. Then we cross the street onto Wyoming and we pass where the school buses are parked. It is all just paradise to me. There is such peace."

Both Merete and Bengt were drawn to Main Street by Peter's glowing descriptions. "When we got to Newark," said Merete, "one of the first things he said to me was 'there is a place here, called Main Street, which is happy and light, and everything I thought America would be like.' It is easy to be glad here."

The artists have traveled to many different countries to sketch and paint. When asked what sets the Newark area apart from other cities, they both replied, "It is the light that is different."

They said, "Spain is absolutely dry and serious and the light is harsh and can make you feel a little danger sometimes. When you see Spain, you can better understand great painters like Picasso and Goya. The light there is sharp, etchy, and the dust is red."

The light of Liberia was described

Merete Thejll.

Bengt Pettersson.

as "very pale, dream-like, fragile, brief and unreal."

The artists said Newark's light "is clean and clear and not hard. The light here draws the images precisely. Seeing it helps us to understand Brandywine artists like Andrew Wyeth."

Newark Nite '89

The Annapolis-based band Mama Jama will be featured during Newark Nite '89, to be held Saturday, June 3.

Mama Jama, which means "mighty big jam" in Jamaican island idiom, performs a unique blend of music, incorporating New Orleans, Latin, Caribbean and contemporary African sounds.

The band has performed recently in the Annapolis Fine Arts Festival and the Festival of Nations in Washington, D.C.

According to a review in the Baltimore Sun, Mama Jama has a "reputation for top-quality, infectious danceable music."

During Newark Nite, Mama Jama will perform throughout the evening on a stage near the State Theater.

Newark Nite is a popular street festival now in its third year, a festival in which Main Street is turned into a pedestrian mall.

Besides Mama Jama, Newark Nite will feature an antique car show, a fashion show, dance studio exhibitions and a kids' craft corner and storyteller.

The craft corner will be located on the lawn of the Academy Building and will include craft activities sponsored by the Newark Center YWCA, Newark Day Nursery and the Newark branch of Girls Clubs of Delaware.

The Newark YWCA will host "knickknack necklaces" for preschools, the Newark Day Nursery "making magnets" for children three and older and the Girls Club a "friendship quilt" on which children can draw their own design on a quilt square.

Also on hand at the craft corner will be storyteller Clem Bowen.

Another feature for young people is the "Kid's Trivia Game" at 7:45 p.m. Children will be invited on stage to answer up to three fun trivia questions for prizes.

Working the length of Main Street will be juggler Mike Hoffman, who is also a bartender at the Deer Park Tavern.

Local dance groups will perform near the CVS Drug Store. Stage Lights Dance Studio will take the stage at 6:15 p.m., Elva's Dance Studio at 7, Jazzercise at 7:30 and the Ballet Studio at 8.

There will also be music by the Christiana High School Band, the Elkton, Md. High School Band, Celtic musicians, the For Fun Four barbershop quartet and classic rockers the North Street Four.

Newark Nite will begin at 6 p.m. and continue until 9:30. Free parking will be available in Newark Parking Rain date is Saturday, June 10.

Newark's downtown district features variety of

by Nancy Turner

Newark's Main Street has undergone many changes since 1758, when King George II of England granted the first charter allowing for a weekly market and semi-annual fairs in Newark center.

The charter described the village as "a piece of land ten miles west of New Castle, at the intersection of two very public roads, the one leading from New Castle to the crossroads in Chester County and the other leading from Kent and Sussex to New Garden," although the road we now call Main Street was without a name.

The important east-west thoroughway was recorded on a levy court map of 1763 as "Newark Street" and it was not until some time between 1821 and 1860 that Main Street acquired its present title. The pavement came later, in 1914.

Inhabited by early settlers of Welsh, English and Scots-Irish descent, there are no structures surviving in the commercial section of Main Street that were present prior to the American Revolution. However, there are few that attest to the town's steady economic growth as well as the social character of its residents for more than a century.

The historic Newark Academy, on the corner of East Main and Academy streets, was founded in 1764, first as a ministerial school for boys and later as a private school. It became Newark's second public high school in 1898.

The University of Delaware campus is filled with equally historic landmarks, such as Old College and Memorial Hall and the University has played a major role in preserving important older homes on Main Street.

One Main Street, now called Raub Hall, houses the University's Career Planning and Placement Offices. It was built about 1800 and in 1804 was the home of John Evans, a town cabinet maker and store owner. It also served as the home for two University presidents, Purnell (1870-1885) and Caldwell (1885-1888).

The University Applied Math Annex at 5 Main Street was built in 1863 by John Evan's son, George Gillespie Evans, using bricks manufactured in his nearby brickyard. The 2½ story residence with Italianate detailing is one of the few remaining examples of 19th century Victorian architecture on Main Street.

During the 1800s, some of the town's most impressive homes were located along West Main Street, on what was called "Quality Hill." A few are still very well preserved and illustrate a variety of grand domestic architectural styles.

The Curtis Mansion, 187 West Main, built in 1903 by A.A. Curtis of the prominent paper manufacturing family, is one of the largest. Built of stone that was quarried at Port Deposit, Md., the Richardsonian Romanesque structure features a wraparound porch with Doric column posts and a number of interesting embellishments. The residence is now owned by the University and houses French students.

In 1844, Belmont Hall was built for Thomas Blandy on approximately 40 acres of farmland. Blandy was an affluent Newarker who, in addition to owning a foundry near the Deer Park Hotel, was a substantial investor in the Chesapeake and Dover Canal Company.

The University purchased the home in 1950 for its president. Today, it houses the school's outstanding honor students and is the only remaining home on Main Street that was built during the 1840s.

Mercantile stores and small shops in the commercial area of town sold everything from millinery goods to fresh flour from nearby mills at the turn of the century.

In 1988, the shopping is still satisfying and from the west end, where the famous gargoyles perched on the former Rhodes' drug store scowl at passersby, to the east end, where the clerks of Newark Department Store still correspond with each other using pneumatic tubes, Main Street still holds many nostalgic points of interest for even the amateur historian.

Some of the downtown favorites are:

- The Bank of Newark Building at 102 East Main Street, across from the intersection of Main and Academy, which was built prior to 1850 and which housed the first offices of the National Bank of Newark.

- The Neo-Classical Wilmington Trust Bank building, located at 82 East Main Street and built in 1926 for the Farmer's Trust Company of Newark.

- The famous Victorian style green granite mansion that was built in 1882 at 94 Main Street for Newark Opera House owner David Caskey.

Main Street could usually provide residents and travelers with some form of dining or musical entertainment on Saturday night.

Caskey erected his opera house in 1885 at 95 East Main Street. Now the home of Sbarro Restaurant, the four-story rectangular building, constructed of brick laid in American common bond, was once the site of live theater and the town's first nickelodeon.

In the early 1900s, the Opera House held a post office, bank and general store.

Before James S. Martin ordered the construction of the Deer Park Inn, 108 West Main Street was the site of the St. Patricks Inn, a small log structure that was among the earliest on Main Street.

The Deer Park Inn, after a number of expansions and renovations over the past century, is reminiscent of Greek Revival style architecture.

According to a 1983 city planning study, the Deer Park Hotel once served the town of Newark in a variety of ways. In addition to accommodating

Miss Chamberlain's School and the Deer Park Seminary, it provided Newark with a ballroom and an auditorium that was often used by traveling entertainers.

In 1911, an advertisement for the Hotel announced that it had steam heat, electric lights, baths, tonsorial parlors and fine livery. Today the building is used as a bar, restaurant and liquor store.

Another interesting building on East Main Street is the current home of Klondike Kate's Restaurant, owned by David Senza. The three-story rectangular brick and stucco building was erected in 1880, following the demolition of the Newark Hotel located on the same site.

According to a 1983 book written by James B. Owen for the Newark Historical Society, when the present building was first completed, it was known as "The Exchange" or "Center Building."

A Sanborn Insurance Survey Map shows this structure with a post office, a meat and oyster outlet, and a general store, although it has also housed a tobacco store, barber shop, tailor shop and a courtroom, complete with a jail cell that still remains in the restaurant's basement.

The Stone Balloon, built in 1836, was once a fine hotel called the Washington House.

In 1929, the State Theatre was a late arrival to the Main Street night life scene. The Neo-Classical facade features Ionic style brick pilasters and a neon marquee. According to the survey, "the theater served as a vaudeville roadhouse, completely equipped with a stage, orchestra pit and four dressing rooms, and maintained screens and projection machinery for showing motion pictures."

After howling on Saturday, Main Street offered Newarkers their choice of worship on Sunday. Interesting Ecclesiastical architecture includes St. John the Baptist Roman Catholic Church on the corner of Chapel Street, which was built in 1883 with Romanesque Revival styling, and is the first church built by and for Newark's Catholic community.

Other churches include Newark United Methodist Church and the Old First Presbyterian Church, which was constructed around the 1870s.

Now named Daugherty Hall, it is used by the University as a student canteen and lounge.

The Wilmington Daily Commercial wrote the following about the Gothic Revival construction of First Presbyterian Church in 1868: "The Presbyterians are erecting a splendid stone church 60 by 80 feet. The main room will be 20 feet high in the clear. The windows will contain colored glass. There will be a large window in the front of the building. It is being built of blue granite and native brown stone which are produced in Chestnut Hill. There will be a steeple 100 feet high. It is being erected in a substantial and ornamental style and will cost more than $20,000."

It was a grand church indeed, one that was built for a growing town.

In 1882, E.G. Handy and J.L. Vallandigham Jr. wrote in their tome "Newark, Delaware: Past and Present," "As for the future prospects of our little town...there are many speculations, some persons imagining that it may yet arise to the dignity of a large city. We hope not, for its chief charm is the contrast it presents to the stiff lines and formal ways of the city."

The many different faces of Newark's beloved

Although city maps indicate only one Main Street in Newark, there are many more in the minds of local citizens.

"There's the Main Street for those who were born here and grew up in Newark," said Roy H. Lopata, city planning director.

"And for people who moved here, the Main Street they know, and usually grow to like, is the one that was here when they came."

Despite the differing visions of Main Street, most Newarkers agree that there's something about the character of the downtown area that makes it nice to visit. Although many citizens have suggestions for improving Main Street, Lopata said those same citizens almost always have something positive to say about the downtown area.

"If you go to the mall in Evanston, Ill. or to the mall in Joplin, Mo., it's the same," said Lopata. "They have the same stores, the same food court, the same parking lot and relatively similar architectural style."

Lopata describes Main Street as having a special atmosphere that cannot be attributed to any particular aspect of the street. "Newark still retains a small town, almost old-fashioned type of Main Street — even with all the changes."

And changes there are.

Council recently approved Chapel Center on the northwest corner of Main and Chapel streets. The 25,000 square foot, brick building will house both office and retail business.

Chapel Center is a project of local developer Robert Teeven, who has also proposed the demolition of the State Theater to make way for an office building and a parking garage.

New retail space was just completed in the Newark Shopping Center lot.

And Rhodes Pharmacy went off business last fall, after years of operating in the same building.

While some of the changes occur with little notice, others garner much attention, such as the proposed demolition of the State Theater.

Lopata said it is often the native Newarkers, who are more accepting of change on Main Street.

"They've already seen change," he said. "As they grew up and changed themselves, the town they lived in was growing and changing, which is a natural healthy thing."

Lopata said when cities do not change and do not develop, they die.

The death of Newark's Main Street is not likely in the near future, according to Lopata.

"Main Street is like a cat with nine lives," he said. "Yes, there are vacant stores. There have always been vacant stores and there always will be."

Lopata said store vacancies are bound to occur in a commercial area, where people go in and out of business for various reasons.

The real estate market on Main Street appears good, he said. Rents are high, and there's interest in development and purchasing property.

"People are asking big bucks for Main Street property," said Lopata. "That tells you something. There aren't vacant boarded-up buildings that are being abandoned at giveaway prices."

He said many of the Main Street shop owners report brisk business. However, there are some stores that are marginal.

"We do the best we can to help them, but in the final analysis, the marketplace is going to decide if these businesses are going to survive."

How does Newark's downtown business district continue to thrive when other cities across the country have lost their central city business to the suburbs?

Lopata attributes two local factors contributing to the existence of Main Street: the University of Delaware and the diverse commercial and industrial base of the area.

"We have a blue collar, professional, para-professional, upper-income, student and university professional mix that's been with us for hundreds of years," said Lopata. "That means we have special opportunities from an economic standpoint. We also have special problems."

Those special problems have been addressed by a number of city programs that have been implemented over the years. They include the following:

- Newark Parking Authority — The authority was created to develop parking in the downtown area.

- Pedestrian crosswalk — Pedestrian traffic is considered crucial to downtown business. The crosswalk was installed nearly ten years ago to aid walkers attempting to cross the street.

- Tree planting — Trees were planted along Main Street several years to enhance the appearance of the street. City parks and recreation officials closely maintain the trees.

- Litter pickup — Trash barrels were placed along Main Street to encourage proper disposal of the trash. Business owners are also encouraged to clean the sidewalk in front of stores.

- Cruising and noise enforcement — Special ordinances have been enacted by city council, giving police more authority in controlling late-night problems on Main Street.

- Parking waivers — Because new business often cannot meet parking space requirements under city code, the requirement is often waived. If the requirement were not waived, it could impact downtown development.

- Tax incentives — City council has enacted a special program to encourage renovation of downtown property. Developers receive tax breaks on improvements.

- Facade Improvement Program — This program loans money to property owners to improve the facade their property.

- Newark Business Association — Local business have joined in their effort to address the concerns of local business owners.

- Sample Newark Brochure — The brochure was developed to acquaint visitors and new residents with businesses in the city.

As far as the future of Main Street is concerned, Lopata is hoping for continued interest in development.

"The cities that are not evolving or changing," he said. "are the cities in which nothing's happening, that have nobody going downtown."

First State Games adds skiing, wrestling

by David Woolman

Three new events and a revamped closing ceremony will be part of the second annual First State Games, to be held the last weekend in July.

Eric Conrad, First State Games executive director, expects to see the additions bring in nearly half again as many participants to the games as last year.

The majority of Games-related activities will be held in Newark, as they were last year. The University of Delaware Field House and surrounding facilities will be the center of activity the weekend of July 29-30.

Powerlifting, waterskiing and wrestling will be added to the schedule of competitions, bringing the number of different sports to 18. World champion powerlifter Mike Hall, a resident of Delaware, will inaugurate the new competition in his sport with an exhibition.

The wrestling competition will feature scholastic level wrestlers. The waterskiing competition will be for skiers of all ages and will be held at Lums Pond State Park just south of Newark.

Both a formal closing ceremonies and an ice show were high priority on the list of planned additions to the Games. Conrad has decided to combine the two.

Last year's low-key dimming of the flame outside of Carpenter Sports Center will be replaced by a specially choreographed skating exhibition by the University of Delaware skaters at the new University Ice Skating Science Development Center.

Former national champion ice dancer Suzie Semanick will organize and choreograph the show, as well as perform with her partner Ron Kravette. National junior pairs champions Jennifer Heurlin and John Fredricksen are among the others expected to skate in the Sunday evening show.

Other changes include a revamping of the cycling competition, with more talent and age divisions as well as separate sprint and criterium races for most divisions. The cycling will also be held on the same weekend as the rest of the games, rather than two weeks before.

Exhibitions of aerobics, gymnastics and more are planned to make the University of Delaware Field House a place of continuous activity over the whole weekend.

Conrad hopes that the Games will benefit as much from the year's experience as from the new features.

"We were on target in a lot of ways," says Conrad, "but now the execution has to improve."

Conrad's perception is that the athletes got much out of last year's Games. His hope is that the spectators, sponsors and media could do as well this year.

Even in its infancy, Conrad believes the Games have begun

King rules ECC

by David Woolman

Kevin King did all the things a young baseball player was supposed to do in high school. In his junior year, he hit .421, was named most valuable players of the Glasgow High School team, made Delaware All-State, and played with the state's Carpenter Cup team at Veterans Stadium.

But he didn't feel he was that good a baseball player. So, along with his twin brother Keith, he graduated early and went to college. (Keith is at the University of Maryland. Kevin still feels his brother, a catcher, is the better ballplayer.)

In his mind, there was no reason to stay at Glasgow, and some good reasons to move on.

"I knew I had the ability," says King, 21. "I just needed to get around someone who could bring it out."

"When I came to Towson State (University), just north of Baltimore, that's when I really took off."

His achievements since have been a tribute to his foresight. By the time he wrapped up his junior year a few weeks ago at the East Coast Conference tournament at the University of Delaware, just a couple miles up the road from his baseball beginnings, King owned Towson's record for total hits, made first team All-ECC twice, led the Tigers in batting average as a sophomore with a .351 and was named second team All-East, led the team in doubles, walks and homeruns this year.

Uptown Swell wins 'chase at Fair Hill

by David Woolman

FAIR HILL, Md. — Uptown Swell proved as proficient over the jumps as he has been on the flat in the past with his first victory in a steeplechase stakes race, the Miles Valentine Novice Stakes, Monday afternoon.

The seven-year-old son of Master Derby covered the about two and three sixteenths miles over national fences in 4:17 and three fifths seconds under jockey James Lawrence. He went off the favorite in the field of nine novices (horses who did not win a steeplechase race before this year), and paid $4.20.

Uptown Swell is a multiple stakes winner on the turf, having won the Grade I Bowling Green Handicap at Belmont Park and the Grade II McKnight Handicap at Calder, as well as placing in a number of other prestigious races as a four-year-old. His subsequent form over the flat deteriorated from that level.

Taking an older horse that was formerly a fine handicap runner on the flat and making it a jumper is common enough in England, but much less so in America.

"He's a very sound horse," said trainer F. Bruce Miller. "He was getting older and he had run out of conditions."

"Mrs. Payson (Virginia Kraft Payson, the owner of Uptown Swell, as well as other fine flat runners such as Salem Drive and Carr De Naskra) is a very sporting person, more than anything. Her friends told her that he (Uptown Swell) is the jumper type, which he is. He's got a lovely disposition, and he's one of the few horses in this country bred to go a mile and a half."

Uptown Swell received a well judged ride from Lawrence, who kept him in the middle of the well bunched field until the last time down the backstretch. Lawrence moved the horse up on the inside around the turn, caught Intelligent Choice, the race leader up to that point, at the second from last jump and drew away to win by six lengths. Intelligent Choice lasted for second, a half a length ahead of Get The Hook.

"When you're on that much horse, all you have to do is give him the best going," said Lawrence. "A friend of mine (Patrick Cooney, rider of longshot Symphony Sid, who finished a distant eighth) gave me a hole."

"I yelled at him to give me a hole. He was going nowhere, so he gave it to me. That's what put me in position to win."

"I had a super jump, I think the third down the back, and he went right up there with the leaders."

"You kind of judge a race by how the horses are doing in front of you. They were kind of laboring a little bit, and he's got such a powerful stride, I knew I could be there in just two strides, so I saved him. He doesn't have that sensational run, but he goes along so powerfully."

"That's probably the best he's jumped," said Miller. "He got a super ride — he wouldn't have done it otherwise."

Uptown Swell will be pointed towards a steeplechase early in the August Saratoga meet, and

Caravel, Shaw fall to Penn in state baseball tourney

As the baseball program at Caravel Academy continues to develop, the teams have invariably reached the goals they have set. After making the state tournament for the first time last year, the hope this year was for a little more.

William Penn did quick work of that hope Monday evening, pounding out 14 hits on the way to a 15-1 victory at Caravel.

"We reached a couple of our goals, but our main goal was to win at least one game in the state tournament," said coach Paul Niggebrugge. "There'll be other years."

"We got beaten by a better team. We couldn't stop them."

Derek Shaw started the game with his 18-game winning streak on the line, and lasted three innings against the Colonials.

"I went in and pitched my own game," said Shaw (9-1). "In the first two innings, they really couldn't do anything."

"I didn't feel I had the velocity today...."

The streak's importance was mostly a creation of the media.

"It really wasn't a factor. I knew it wasn't going to last forever. I'm happy to win 18 games."

The game was quiet for the first two and a half innings. Then Penn scored a run on a sacrifice fly by John Joins, and put Chuck Stapleford and Bill Gilman on base. Ron Austin put a 2-2 high fastball over the fence in right-center for a 4-0 William Penn lead.

The next batter, Mike Wallace, hit a single, and Shaw was replaced by Brian Blomquist, who got out of the inning with a double play. Blomquist would go on to give up eight runs in the next two innings. C.J. Hoffman finished up the pitching for Caravel, giving up three runs in the sixth.

As the Colonials added to their lead, Caravel began to put together some offense against starter Bill Sullivan, loading the bases in the fifth and sixth innings. The lone run was knocked in on a Jeremy Smith double.

The Bucs also loaded the bases in the final inning against relief pitcher Matt Brainard. Mike Kraft led the team with a pair of singles.

"I'm extremely proud of our kids," said Niggebrugge. "We never gave up. We showed a lot of heart."

Shaw made second team All-State as a pitcher, and Blomquist made the second team as a utility man. Rich Swavely received honorable mention at first base. Caravel ends the season 13-3.

Caravel Buc batter takes a cut in loss to William Penn.

Riders oust Newark

St. Mark's High School was the only local team alive in the state high school baseball tournament as of Monday, defeating Milford 4-1 in the opening round.

The Spartans played Indian River in Dagsboro Tuesday. For details, see Section A.

Newark High School fell 5-2 to Caesar Rodney in the opening round.

"We did not play good defense and we did not hit the ball," said Newark coach Harry Davies, who gave much of the credit to Riders pitcher Matt Bloch. "He's one of the best in the state."

Previously undefeated Kevin Noonan started for Newark and pitched well. Throwing errors led to a three-run inning for the Riders, and the Yellow-jackets never recovered.

Bush and Inden All-America

University of Delaware senior lacrosse players Nari Bush and Lecia Inden were named to the national Division I All-America team last week.

Bush, named the University's outstanding senior female athlete earlier in the month, made the first team after being given honorable mention last year. The Wilmington Friends graduate is only the third player in the history of the school to earn All-America honors more than once. A four year starter on defense, Bush holds the school's interception record with 58. She led the team with 12 interceptions and 84 groundballs this year, and scored 16 goals.

Inden was named to the second team after leading the team in scoring for the second year in a row. She scored 39 goals and had nine assists this spring. She is the ninth player to score over 100 goals for the Hens, with 106 in her four year varsity career.

Newark netters remain unbeaten

The University of Delaware's 3.5 men's tennis team improved its record to 3-0 in Volvo Masters League play with two victories last week. The team defeated Microblasters of Wilmington 5-0 and Three Little Bakers 4-1. Bruce Getzan, Ken Lewis, Barry Haldeman and Bill Pulliam won at both matches.

Western YMCA soccer tryouts

The Western Branch YMCA will hold a tryout for its Liberty representative soccer team, which competes in the Nor-Del Soccer League, this evening.

Players born in 1976 and 1977 are invited to attend the tryout at 6 p.m. Thursday, June 1. It will be held at the Western YMCA soccer complex on Kirkwood Highway. Call 453-1482 for details.

Hey, dudes, surf's up

Around 150 surfers of all ages are expected to hang 10, and perhaps more, at the inaugural Delaware State Surfing Championships, to be held June 3-4, 9a.m. at the South side of the Indian River Inlet.

The Championships will be the largest amateur surfing-bodyboarding contest ever held in the state. The open competition is sanctioned by the Delaware Eastern Surfing Association.

For an entry form and more information, call Harry Wilson (302) 227-8288.

Concord hosts soccer matches

The Concord Soccer Association will host the semifinal and final rounds of the First State Cup June 3-4. ## Local softball teams knocked out

by David Woolman

The 10-5 Caravel Academy softball team, having reached the state tournament last year, set a goal of getting past the first round of the tournament this year. Renee Leary never gave them a chance.

The St. Elizabeth senior was veritably unhittable in Thursday's high school state tournament opening round game.

Also losing in the opening round were two other Newark area teams. Glasgow fell 6-4 to Laurel, despite a one-hitter by pitchers Stacy Winterringer and Niki Tarantino, and St. Mark's fell 8-0 to Concord.

Eight walks and four errors helped Laurel to victory, and left Glasgow with a 9-8 record.

St. Mark's wound up on the wrong end of a one-hitter, this one hurled by Concord's Stacy Zentz. Julie Lygate had the Spartans' only hit, a bunt single in the sixth inning.

In Caravel's loss, a fifth inning walk to Vicky Jones was the only thing that kept the St. Elizabeth's Leary from perfection. She struck out 13 in her second no hitter of the season, and the Vikings won 11-0.

"That's the most outstanding pitcher I've seen," said Caravel coach Steve Baker. "I've heard she can get wild. We tried to take pitches from the beginning but she was hitting the inside corner. We tried to change our strategy and start swinging and we put a few balls in play, but nothing very hard."

"It was even faster when you get up there," said freshman Veronica Homiak, the Caravel pitcher, who went six innings and gave up 12 hits, seven earned runs and five walks, four of those in the first inning.

Homiak, one of the top pitchers in the state herself, at least found the loss edifying.

"I like to see what other pitchers have, compare it to mine and hopefully compete against them in the future," she said. "In my view, she's the best in the state. She mixed up pitches — I noticed a curve and a change up."

The Vikings made the near perfection of Leary's performance superfluous with six runs in the first inning, as Caravel showed its youth.

"I don't think Veronica was unsettled in the first inning, our defense was," said Baker. "We made some errors. The line drive (by Laurie Lewandowski in the second inning) and the grand slam (by Leary in the fifth inning) were the only two balls hit hard. There were a lot of infield hits and miscues."

"They got a lot of hits off me in the beginning, but I just tried to keep my head up," said Homiak. "If I got my head down it would get the whole team down."

Which may seem like a lot of pressure for a freshman, but she's used to it.

"I've had a lot of experience on my Little League teams (she competed in the Eastern regionals with Canal's team last year). I've won under more pressure there. I know my team can back me up when people hit the ball."

"The first few innings, I got upset. I noticed my fielders were really nervous. They just couldn't get the ball in the glove. I just had to keep trying."

The loss did little to occlude the continued improvement of the Caravel program. After being blown out by state champion Smyrna in the first round of the tournament last year, the Bucs played them to a 1-0 losing decision this year. The season also included an extra inning, one run loss to St. Mark's. Caravel only graduates three players, two time second team All-State Kristi Taylor among them.

"There's a good nucleus," said Baker. "We need some sticks. We need to find somebody who can hit this fast pitching."

If she reaches her goal, Homiak may make that much hitting unnecessary. By the time she is a senior, she hopes to be as good as Leary.

Oft-honored Leni Wilson is Georgetown bound

by David Woolman

For all of St. Elizabeth School's tradition in girls basketball, for all the trips to the Delaware Field House past, this was not supposed to be their winter. No triumphant season, no Field House, nothing.

Deep in January the dire predictions looked to be the word of truth, with the Vikings scraping along with a 9-7 record, in fourth place in the Catholic Conference. They were not.

Center Leni Wilson had been to the Field House, site of the state championship finals, three times before and refused to let her senior year be the worst for St. Elizabeth. The Vikings returned.

"She's the main reason we came this far this year," says St. Elizabeth coach Tubby Dobrowski. "She was the glue that held us together when nobody expected us to do what we did."

"We lost a lot of seniors and I thought that we were a young team," says Wilson, a lifelong resident of Newark. "We needed that closeness. We needed leadership, not the kind of leadership the bosses around but the kind where we can understand and talk to each other in a nice manner and communicate well."

"I felt as though I could be their friend as well as their leader, on the court and off."

"We wanted the seniors, Leni most of all, to quietly lead," says Dobrowski. "Leni's not a real vocal rah-rah kind of kid."

She does it by example.

"I think the kids see Leni hustling up and down the floor and coming to practice every day and working as hard as she can, and it's a great example. The kids say, 'If it's good enough for Leni Wilson, it's good enough for me.' That's going to be a long-term benefit for us."

The point is all the more salient considering Wilson's credentials, which include first team All-State and All-Catholic twice, honorable mention Street-Smith, Dick Vitale's Top 48, Blue Star Top 80, most valuable player at the New York AAU tournament 1987 and 1988 and nomination to the Converse National High School All-America Team.

Wilson scored more than 1,000 career points and had career game averages of 24 points, 17 rebounds, six steals and eight assists. Add to that a 3.2 GPA and you get someone more than worthy of a full scholarship to Georgetown University, where she will play for coach Patrick Knapp.

Only the presence of another extraordinary basketball talent in Delaware, Ursuline's Val Whiting, could overshadow any of that.

For four years, Wilson was left to deal with the rather unique situation of facing another player of her stature in the same league.

"I felt I handled that well," says Wilson. "Val and I were really two different players. She is a center, and I'm not. The match of 6' 2" and 5' 10" is a little different."

"But that's the way people saw it. She's a great player and she deserves it. I think coaches and people know what I can do also, even though she might have the advantage every time we play each other. I respect her a lot as a player."

"I think Leni's right; it's not a fair comparison," says Dobrowski. "She's our center in our situation. If we had any other kind of center, Leni would have been a forward. They're two kinds of players and that's hard to compare."

"Comparing those kids is difficult, but it's automatic. I think you'll find that when they go to college they're going to be great players in their own situation."

"I didn't try to overdo it," says Leni of their matchups. "I just tried the best I could."

The honors and attention from colleges she received put pressure on her, but never in a negative sense. When she returned from the New York summer league, she knew how she wanted to perform.

"I knew exactly what I had to do. I felt leadership, I felt the power to go out strong and hard my last year."

"I was hoping we could take it (the state championship) since it is my senior year, but I'm not going to make excuses. We just went out and got beat."

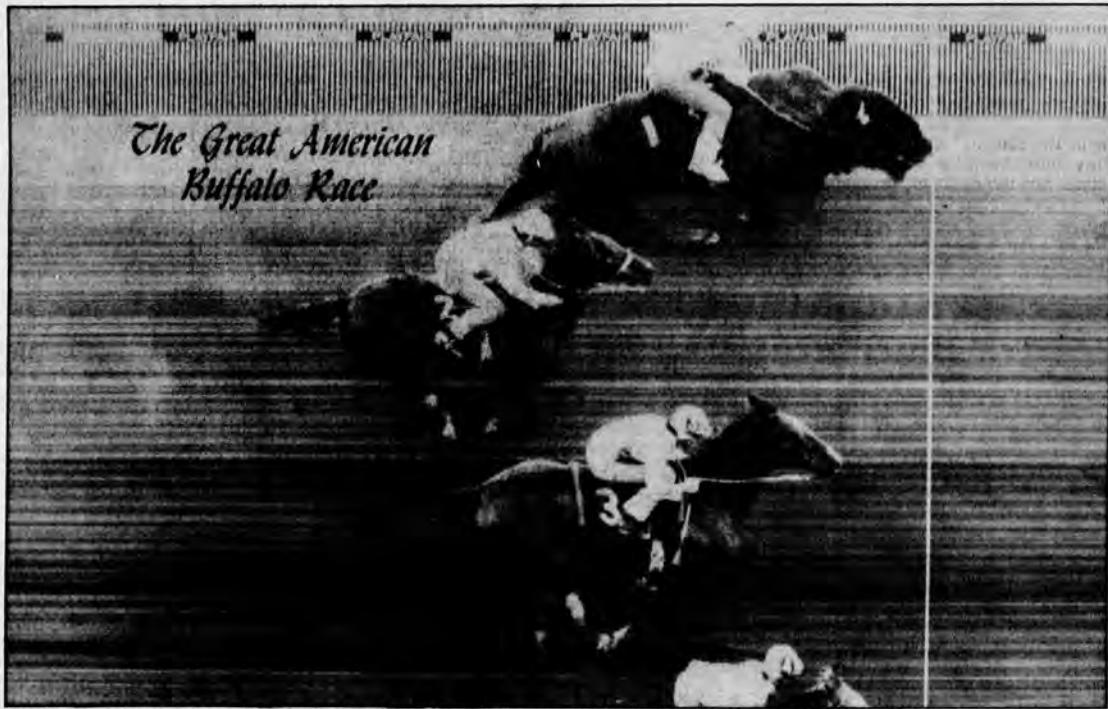

"This year, getting to the Field House was a big achievement. There we're so many doubts in people's minds this year. Just being there was great, especially for me, being a senior, to give it one more try."

"It just showed everybody what closeness and commitment can do."

Leni Wilson of Newark leans in to make basket for St. Elizabeth.

The Great American Buffalo Race

It's the buffalo by a nose, or perhaps by a horn, in unique race which will be duplicated at Delaware Park.

Buffalo to race at Delaware Park

The Maltese Cat, the racehorse who became famous as the best man at Delaware Park trainer Terry Griffith's wedding, will be back in his custom-made tuxedo June 25 for a match race with Harvey Wallbanger at Delaware Park.

Harvey is a buffalo. "He's done many things in his life," says Griffith of the 'Cat, "but he's never run against a buffalo. It's just a new experience for him. He takes on every challenge."

Harvey has made a name for himself at racetracks out west, where runs against and defeats (60 percent of the time, at least) horses of various breeds in short races.

The Cat, a particularly well-loved $5,000 claimer, has just returned to Griffith's barn at the racetrack after six months off and 45 days of swimming to get back into shape.

Training for this race will be a little different than normal — it's a first for Griffith as well.

"We've been showing him training films," says Griffith. "We've been thinking about sending him to Roy Rogers' ranch."

Griffith's instructions to horse and jockey will also be a Delaware Park first: "Watch out for the horns."

to achieve the stated purpose of developing an amateur sports network, encouraging sports participation and health and providing recognition for athletes.

Specific examples of benefits are a jump in fencing activity in the state, as well as the genesis of developmental track meets in Kent County.

The sports returning from last year are basketball, bowling, cycling, diving, fencing, field hockey, lacrosse, the 5-kilometer road race, roller skating, softball, taekwondo, track and field, volleyball and yachting.

The tryout schedule for the First State Games is:

• June 3 — Open mens volleyball, 9 a.m., Carpenter Sports Building.

• June 4 — Open womens volleyball, 9 a.m., Carpenter Sports Building.

• June 10 — Open co-ed volleyball, 9 a.m., Carpenter Sports Building.

• June 10 — Open mens and scholastic boys basketball, noon to 2 p.m., scholastic girls 2-4 p.m. New Castle County residents at Wilmington High School, Kent and Sussex County residents at Sussex Central High School.

KING

That, perhaps, is a tribute to the foresight of his coach as well.

"The thing that attracted me first about him was his defense," says Towson State head coach Mike Gottlieb. "I thought he could be a good hitter, but so often it's a guessing game...."

King worked hard on his offense, and it paid off last year. This year, perhaps due to some bad habits picked up at the Valley League over the summer, it took a while for him to get going and he wound up hitting .323.

"I feel that he is capable of doing better than he did this year," says Gottlieb. "I don't mean that as knock on him."

"Most college coaches would love to have what he's done this year. I saw him play a little bit better last year, and I guess I'm demanding. In his defense, the college season is so short."

The inaugural First State Games featured torch bearers Vicky Huber and Frank Masely, both Delaware Olympians.

School.

• June 11 — Scholastic girls volleyball, time and place to be announced.

For information any event, including entry forms, deadlines, schedules and sponsorships, call Eric Conrad at the First State Games office, 454-1000.

In addition, his reputation preceeded him — he was named pre-season ECC player of the year by Baseball America, and was well known around the league. Add to that the conscious awareness of scouts judging him for professional baseball and that's a great deal of pressure for a 21-year-old. All things considered, King has handled it well.

SWELL

perhaps return to the flat after that. Miller is also considering some of the other novice 'chases to be run this fall.

"He really wants to go a mile and a half," said Miller. "He might just be alright over hurdles. We're going to try to run him on the flat, but you can hardly find a long race."

Miller blames Uptown Swell's

degenerating form on the flat on a breathing problem which was subsequently solved. What Miller hasn't solved is the problem of keeping such a valuable commodity (Uptown Swell is a complete horse, and as a Grade I stakes winner has significant residual breeding value) in training as a jumper.

"Let me tell you, it's a little nerve wracking. It won't be any relief until a few days from now when we find that everything's alright."

In any event, Miller doesn't see Uptown Swell as a case of a trend towards using good flat horses over the jumps in this country. At least not yet.

"Maybe this will start a trend...."

YOU'VE COME A LONG WAY, BABY.

YOU'VE QUIT.

Congratulations. You've kicked a habit that's not stylish — it's foolish. Studies have shown that smoking is a major risk factor of heart disease. Yet, unfortunately, more women are smoking now than ever before.

And as the Surgeon General pointed out, cigarette smoking is the most preventable risk factor in heart-related diseases. So by quitting, you're helping to decrease your risk. For information on how to stop smoking, contact the American Heart Association.

REAL ESTATE

By

John H. Litzenberg

REALTOR

Being in the real estate business gives us the opportunity to meet lots of nice people. We enjoy being able to help them buy or sell homes or other property in such a way that their desires are accomplished. We realize that we're lucky to be in a profession that lets us perform a worthwhile service for those who need us.

In discussing real estate with people, we've learned that many think real estate is pretty mysterious. There's much to learn before you qualify as an expert, and there are lots of misunderstandings, too. So, we've thought of one more way that we can be of service to you...by sponsoring a weekly "column" on real estate.

We'd like to meet you here each week and discuss various aspects of real estate. Your ideas and suggestions will be most welcome.

It's a grand old flag!

by Nancy Turner

It's a grand old flag and it's high flying in mass numbers throughout Newark neighborhoods these days.

With Memorial Day just past, Flag Day on June 14 and Independence Day on July 4, area residents who delight in watching Old Glory wave triumphantly in the breeze feel extra patriotic.

Unless you are involved with a local scouting organization or a grammar school, or are serving in a branch of the armed forces, there's a good chance that you don't think about the Stars and Stripes very often.

There are specific rules governing the presentation of the flag but like most states Delaware does not employ a full-time flag etiquette specialist to answer the public's flag-flying questions.

Once you grow up and leave the guiding care of scout leaders and teachers who are often knowledgeable in the fine art of flag flying, you're on your own and the amount of respect that is due this great national symbol is entirely in your charge.

Here are some rules for flying the United States flag. You may have heard them before, during childhood. But hear them again, and let her colors never fade.

Men and women have defended the flag with their blood and their lives since its origin during the American Revolution. It shall not, therefore, be dipped in humility for any person or thing.

The flag should not be permitted to touch anything beneath it, such as the ground or the floor. The prescribed burning of any U.S. flag which accidentally falls to the ground has proven to be largely impractical. However, the military still adheres to the practice in certain circumstances.

A flag that has become torn or worn out should be destroyed in a dignified way, by burning or burial. It must not be flown dirty, but should be washed first. Years ago, before the invention of durable synthetic fabrics, dry cleaners cleaned customers' flags free of charge during the month of June.

Brent Ferry and Rich Turner of Troop 205 and Patrick Turner of Pack 205 fold the flag.

The flag may not be used for clothing or as drapery. No advertising sign of any kind shall be flown on the same staff or rope with the U.S. flag.

When displaying the flag, it receives the place of honor. It should fly above state or organization flags, to the right of a speaker at a podium or to the right of other flags and if it is suspended over a street, the stars should be turned to the north on an east-west street or to the east on a north-south byway.

The flag may be flown at the same height as the flag of another nation on a separate pole, but no other flag may be flown at greater height.

The U.S. flag is flown from sunrise to sunset outdoors unless it is spotlighted, in which case it can be flown around the clock. It must never be left on a mast in the dark or in the rain.

In the morning, it is run briskly and triumphantly to the top of the pole and in the evening it is lowered slowly and solemnly.

The only time the flag may be flown upside down is as a signal for help.

Whenever the flag is flown at half staff as a symbol of national mourning, it is first raised to the top of the pole and then lowered.

Before it is removed at sunset, it is once again hoisted to the peak before being lowered.

When folding, fold it twice the long way so that the stars show on both sides. Then fold it in triangular folds from the striped end. When it is finished, it will be a blue, starred triangle.

The only emblem that may be used to adorn the top of a flag pole is the American eagle.

'Lives of the Rich and Fatuous'

Every year there is a national convention for inventors. Anyone who has ever believed that he has designed the proverbial "better mousetrap" should attend. Frequently the convention is held in Las Vegas, which, come to think of it, is an appropriate place. Chances of having your invention make the big time are about the same as the odds of breaking the bank at roulette.

I suppose what keeps many hopeful inventors inventing is the knowledge that the road to riches is paved with good inventions — or bad inventions or weird inventions for that matter.

Who would have thought that Hula Hoops, Frisbees, Pet Rocks and Wacky Wall Walkers would have made their creators wealthy enough to be featured on "Lives of the Rich and Fatuous?"

So what are the latest inventions?

A person interested in psychiatric matters figured out how to put a light in the middle of a showerhead to combat Showerstall Depression. I'm not so sure that is a wise idea. The only thing that will prevent my personal showerstall depression is a new body.

For the slugged, a thoughtful inventor created a clock that projects the time on to the ceiling so that the sleepyhead doesn't have to raise his head to see that it is time to get up. While I suppose there is a market, I suspect is a greater market for an alarm clock that gently and politely awakens me with a cup of hot coffee and a fresh-baked croissant.

Late-breaking bulletin from the news desk: There already is, she's called a French maid.

I have a special spot in my heart for the inventor who shares my frustration with squirrels who snatch birdseed from birdfeeders. (Those of you not having this problem probably think I am over-reacting. You are wrong. The average conniving squirrel can get birdseed from the most elaborately defended bird-feeder. Rumor has it that bank robber Willie "The Actor" Sutton took lessons from Sammy "The Sneak" Squirrel.) This wonderful inventor has designed a birdfeeder that not even the most devious squirrel can feed from; it has one small flaw, though, it's also bird-proof.

As long as I am outside in the garden, I should mention the Compost Tool — a special long, thin gizmo that the dedicated gardener can insert into the center of her compost pile. Once it is inserted, she flicks a switch in the handle and several six-inch metal paddles flop out of the stick. These slowly rotating paddles stir the compost as the gardener withdraws her Compost Tool. Sounds like just the thing to liven up a quiet Saturday afternoon in the backyard.

Some well-meaning soul, no doubt a person with a high metabolism and naturally curly hair, has conceived the Cholesterol Crusher. When a

Kids not for the faint-hearted

by Connie Hall

Being the new kid on the block is usually kind of lonely until you make new friends.

However, Kirsten and Chauncy aren't having a bit of trouble. They're fitting in very nicely with the other kids on Kathy Majewski's Tree Top farm outside Elkton, Md.

One reason might be the fact these two adorable kids are goats.

Secondly they're a rather rare species, Fainter goats, so named because of a tendency to faint when startled.

The species has been traced to the early 1880s in Tennessee.

Around that time a man named John Tinsley, later thought to have come from Nova Scotia, arrived in Marshall County.

He showed up at the farm of J.M. Porter with his companions, a "sacred cow," three nannie goats and a billie goat. It's these goats which are believed to be the originals of the breed.

Around the fall of the year he showed up, Tinsley sold his goats to Dr. H.H. Mayberry, also of Marshall County. After that sale, for a grand total of $36, he moved to the Mayberry farm and worked for three weeks.

Tinsley's eccentricity continued even when it came to meals. He'd never eat with the Mayberry family, preferring instead to take his meals to the barn and eat with his sacred cow.

At the end of the three weeks, Tinsley moved to the neighboring Maury County where he married a woman named Barnhill. Seemingly a good farmer, he raised an excellent corn crop.

However, one night after the corn was in he did his disappearing act. Taking his cow, not even saying goodbye to his wife, Tinsley moved once more, never to be seen again.

A stranger he came, and a stranger he left.

The unusual characteristics which show up in the breed of goat left behind by Tinsley are most noticeable when they are startled by cars backfiring or people moving too quickly near them.

The Majewski goats even keeled over when a soccer ball rolled past them.

When startled, the goats' muscles stiffen. They drag their hind legs as they try to continue walking, or they fall over in a paralyzing faint or seizure.

It also can happen when they try to climb a fence, even one as low as three feet, or when they try to jump shallow ditches.

In 10-to-15 seconds, however, they're up and on their way. Though still showing some stiffness in rear limbs, it's as if nothing had happened.

According to research, these goats apparently are afflicted with the condition known as myotonia. It seems to be similar to Thomsen's disease, a rare disease affecting one in every 25,000 people.

Hopefully, further study on the Fainters could develop insight into treating the muscular defect in humans.

Their original color around 1920 was said to be black and white.

By 1940, Majewski says, the goats could be found in all colors.

Fainters tend to be less aggressive than other breeds and smaller in size.

Kathy Majewski and goat.

During the birthing process breeders are sometimes called into service. The doe may need help and assistance pushing because of locked muscles.

The same can ring true during mating when the buck's muscles can lock. The breeder must again assist.

Majewski knows of herds in much of the United States.

Because Fainters have a very soft undercoat they may be valuable commercially in the future. In Texas, Majewski says, it's hoped a study concerned with breeding the Fainter with Angora goats may provide a source of material for a new type of cold weather apparel.

In addition to her herd of 21, Majewski also keeps African pygmies and dwarf goats. Her real interest, however, is in this small, usual, rare Fainter species.

To help in protecting rather than exploiting them, Majewski has established the Original Fainting Goats Club. Members now number about 70, and she's attempting to find exactly how many goats do exist and where.

Hopefully, with genuine concern and the true desire of others to breed for reasons other than monetary, the 250 Fainters now known will grow into a larger herd.

Brandywine hosts scrimshaw exhibit

There is always something new and exciting at the Brandywine River Museum. There is always something old and exciting at the Brandywine River Museum. Take your pick; both statements are true.

Opening this month and running through August 27 is something on the old side, American scrimshaw. The great age of whaling that spawned such classics as Moby Dick and such artwork as scrimshaw is long past, but visitors to the museum can see the legacy of the past in one of the most extensive exhibits ever assembled.

The Brandywine River Museum is showing the Barbara Johnson collection. Ms. Johnson is one of the foremost collectors of this delightful folk art and she has built an exquisite collection that brings a very special segment of the whaler's experience back from the past.

According to the museum's Laura Mumaw, more than 100 pieces make up this collection of elaborately carved scrimshaw from the late 18th and 19th centuries. Laura described the exhibit, saying, "Whale ivory has been transformed into many marvelous and useful forms including knitting needles, pie crust crimpers, hammers, dominoes and doll dishes."

Why did the rough, tough men who were whale hunters ever take up such a delicate art? The answer seems to be the long, lonely hours which hung heavily on the men as they made their way to and from the seas where the whales lived.

Scrimshaw involves the carving of whale teeth and bone. The carvings usually have to do with the lore of the sea. Some of the most frequent subjects are pirates, mermaids and the chase as the whale was hunted and killed.

The art, now just a memory, is truly beautiful to see. The person new to the art is rarely unimpressed.

I first began to really appreciate scrimshaw when Marie and I were traveling in the Northwest. We saw it in many places and aboard a floating museum in Puget Sound. Genuine interest and appreciation were born. An old seafarer filled our heads with some stories about the art and we were hooked — no pun intended!

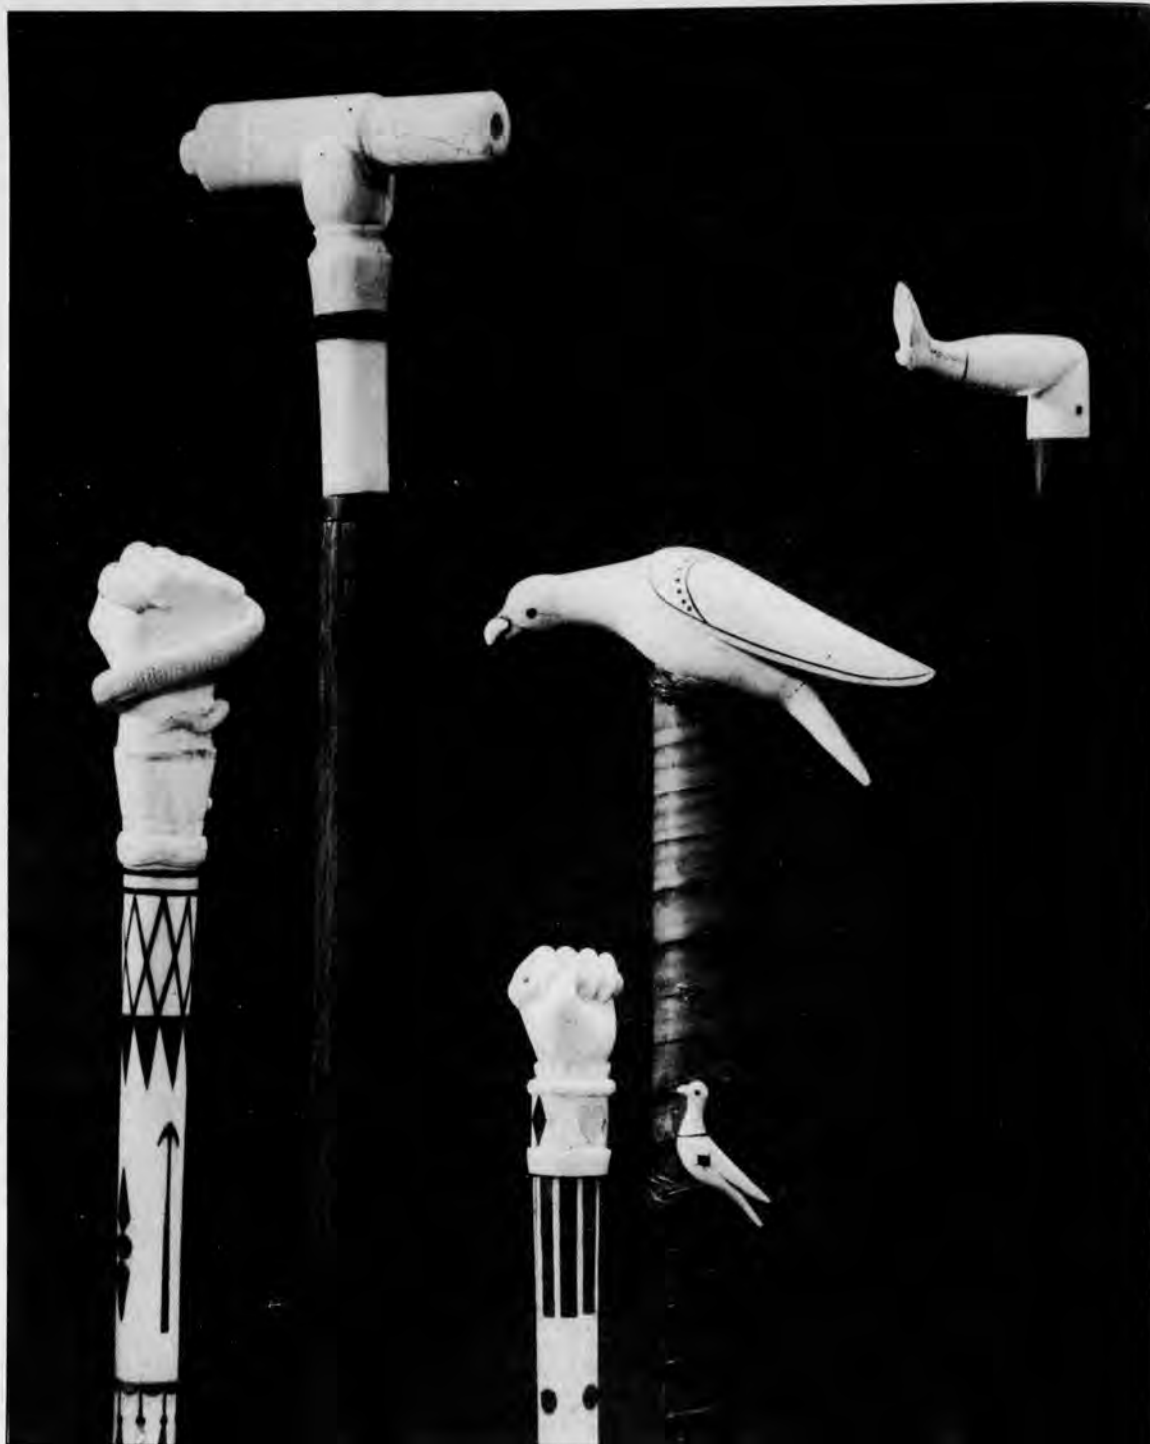

If you are planning your first trip to the Brandywine River Museum, don't miss the opportunity to see the wide variety of artworks representing the quality and growth of the museum's collection over the years since its founding.

This includes fine landscapes of the Brandywine Valley, a rich collection of still lifes and one of the finest collections of American illustrations to be found anywhere.

Also on display now in the new Andrew Wyeth Gallery are over 40 watercolors, drybrush and tempera paintings by the internationally noted Chadds Ford artist. Among them are some recent watercolors never shown before.

The museum is located on U.S. 1, just a short distance west of the intersection with Pa. 100. It is just over a half-hour drive from the Newark area, and this time of year the drive itself is a thing of beauty.

The galleries are open 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. every day but Christmas. Admission is $4 for adults, $2.50 for senior citizens and $1.50 for students. If you need more information you may call (215) 388-7601. Enjoy!

Among the more than 100 pieces of American scrimshaw now on exhibition at the Brandywine River Museum are these exquisite cane handles. The handles, photographed by Laura Mumaw of the museum, are carved from whale ivory.

Newark Band opens season in Bethany

The Newark Community Band will open its summer season on the road, performing in Bethany Beach and New Castle the next three weekends before returning home for an Independence Day concert.

Roland Garton, director of the Newark Community Band, said the summer program includes selections from "Camelot," a medley of Frank Sinatra favorites, "String of Pearls," "Montego Bay," "Emperata Overture," "Tubby the Tuba" and a variety of familiar, stirring marches.

The program will premiere at 8 p.m. Saturday, June 3 at the Bethany Beach Bandstand.

The band will perform at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 10 at Battery Park in New Castle and at 7 p.m. Wednesday, June 21, again in Battery Park. The June 21 concert will also feature the Newark Dixie Ramblers.

July 4 will find the band back in Newark, performing 11 a.m. to noon during the city's Liberty Day celebration at Carpenter State Park.

A return engagement at the park will be held 7 p.m. Monday, July 12, when the band performs as part of the park's evening concert series.

The band also will perform at 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 20 at Bellevue State Park near Wilmington.

Newark Community Band was formed by the Newark Department of Parks and Recreation in 1982. It now has more than 40 regular members with a variety of musical experience.

In addition to its summer schedule, the band performs at patriotic ceremonies, retirement and nursing homes, civic events and at local malls.

The band is open to anyone who enjoys playing music, regardless of skill level.

Rehearsals are held 7:30-9:30 p.m. Wednesdays in the Newark Municipal Building, 220 Elkton Rd. There are no auditions or dues.

For information, call the department at 366-7060 or contact Don Nelson, the band's publicity chairman, at 368-5758.

Newark artist Wynn Breslin with one of many new works which will be shown during her annual open studio.

Breslin hosts annual open studio

Fresh off one of the most productive periods in her career as an artist, Newark's Wynn Breslin is preparing for her 13th annual studio exhibition.

The open studio days will be held 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, June 3-4 and 10-11 at Breslin's picturesque studios overlooking the historic Wedge in north Newark.

The studio is located at 470 Terrapin Lane, just off Del. 896 north of Newark. Terrapin Lane is about one-quarter mile north of the Carpenter State Park entrance and will be marked by flags the days of the open studio.

Breslin said she is particularly excited about the 1989 exhibition, which will feature 25 new oil and 30 new watercolors on view for the first time.

Also shown will be award-winning works from the five-state regional show at the University of Delaware and Chester County Art Association exhibitions.

Her University entry won first prize for acrylic and best in show.

Breslin is included in Who's Who in American Art, Delaware Women Remembered, Who's Who in American Women, and American Artists of Renown.

CHURCHES

Union funeral facility

Union United Methodist Church of Bear has entered into an agreement with Beeson Funeral Home for use of the church as a funeral service facility.

The agreement was reached to "serve the growing needs of the Christiana-Glasgow community," according to the Rev. Albert C. Burton, pastor of Union Church.

"Just a few short years ago, (this area) was virtually unknown," said Burton. "Now a community is being built, with homes, shopping centers, convenience stores and roads. As this new community has grown, so has need for a conveniently-located funeral facility to assist the bereaved with dignity, respect and comfort."

The proposal was presented to the Union Church Property Committee, the board of trustees and the administrative board.

"The response was overwhelmingly positive," said Burton. "Everyone, it seems, shared the commitment in ministering to the community in this way and opening our church for this purpose."

Our Lady of Grace prepares for the resumption of its annual picnic.

Grace picnic Sunday

The annual Our Lady of Grace Home picnic was something of a Newark tradition until 1987.

That year, after 32 annual gatherings, the Catholic sisters who administer the home for children had to cancel the picnic because of a devastating fire.

A blaze on Feb. 14, 1987 claimed a dormitory at Our Lady of Grace, which neighbors Holy Family Catholic Church on Chesnut Hill Road.

Fortunately, there were no injuries in the fire, but it did leave the sisters with a massive rebuilding job which cost them the 33rd and 34th annual picnics.

This year the construction is complete and the picnic is back.

It will be held noon to 7 p.m. Sunday, June 4. Admission is free and there will be homemade foods, drinks, game of chance, wheels, flea market, bingo, dancing and music by the Seventh Avenue Band.

The picnic is open to public and there is ample parking.

The ART of HOME DECOR

By Joyce Fischer Sposato

INTERIOR COLOR

When selecting a color for an interior paint job, hold the color chip in the same lighting conditions where the paint will be applied. Be cognizant of the fact that the color on the chip or chart will look darker after the paint is applied and allowed to dry. Larger rooms will tend to accentuate the darkness of a color. It is also very important to hold a color sample next to other colors and fabrics in the room. Place it next to draperies, the flooring material, and the walls of adjacent rooms. In general, lighter colors make a room appear larger. They also reflect heat and light, and they are more durable. When in doubt, try going a shade lighter.

When rearing kids, follow your heart

As I began my new endeavor, this column, "Tender Years," I wanted to pick out the most important skill in the craft of mothering. That, I decided, is to "follow your heart."

The advice may sound simplistic, but think about it. Conjure up a mothering experience in which you felt less than perfect. I bet the anger you felt at that moment overpowered your heart.

It can only be hoped that such moments are rare. But with your heart as your guide, you may find all of motherhood much more fulfilling.

Use your heart to weed through child-rearing advice you find in books, magazines, next door neighbors and "well meaning" Aunt Millie.

Let's say your baby has trouble falling asleep. Dear old Aunt Millie warns of that unless you let the baby cry herself to sleep, you may spoil the child. On the other hand, you read this may cause the baby to mistrust you. Listen to your heart. After all, who knows baby best?

I hope never to blindly follow someone's advice just because it worked for them. In the case of breastfeeding, for instance, there was some dismay when I stopped the practice when my daughter Rachel reached nine months of age. I had been advised to breastfeed for at least one year. But I knew in my heart it wasn't right for us.

I don't discount all advice as bad. Obviously, it worked for someone or it wouldn't have entered the advice marketplace. Consider whatever advice you hear or read, and grit your teeth when necessary, then listen to your heart to decide what really warrants consideration.

This requires strength of character on your part. Whatever you do, there will undoubtedly be someone who disagrees and who will predict for your child some hardship later in life as a direct result of your actions.

You are really in for it if you choose an extreme philosophy. For instance, if you believe in completely non-physical discipline, no doubt your child will act up while you are with someone who insists "all he needs is a good swat on the butt." Follow your heart.

Preparation is your responsibility. But with your heart as guide, you won't be led astray.

And when you are feeling less than perfect, don't tell Aunt Millie unless you want to hear more "expert" advice.
