It's been one month since 8-year-old Emily Ruckle was critically injured by a pit bull inside her home, but on Tuesday, after enduring nine surgeries to reattach her arm, the daughter of Councilman Todd Ruckle was released from the hospital.

Emily and her parents headed home from Children's Hospital of Philadelphia and were met at Newark city limits by Newark Police officers, who used two motorcycles and a police cruiser to escort the Ruckle's car to city hall, where Emily stopped to thank the officers who responded on

City seeks state grant

Money would revitalize two downtown neighborhoods

By JOSH SHANNON

City officials this week made their case for a share of a new state grant program aimed at revitalizing downtown areas.

Newark's long-shot bid for the money focuses on two areas of downtown where city planners hope to encourage more owner-occupied housing: George Read Village and the area surrounding Center, New, Linden and Choate streets.

Halloween sale gives UD theater costumes a second chance to shine

By KARI SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Victorian dresses, gladiator sandals and Egyptian robes that once took center stage during University of Delaware theatrical performances will now walk the streets on Halloween night.

Hundreds of people bought the costumes over the weekend at a surplus sale in UD's Hartshorn Hall. Sales benefited the UD Theatre Department and the Resident Ensemble Players.

Costume director Barbara Hughes said it's been 17 years since the theater department's last sale, and the storage rooms were getting too full to function. Clothes were packed in so tightly that designers had a hard time getting in to pull pieces and see what was available, she said.

Amanda Janke, assistant costume designer, echoed Hughes' feelings.

"The closets are not necessarily useful if we can't find anything in them," she said.

Hughes said it was time to get rid of some of the clutter, and a costume sale around Halloween seemed like the perfect solution.

Clothing from 150 shows was available for sale, most for under $25.

Hughes said the clothes were worn by actors who performed in shows over the last 17 years and range in style from contemporary to Victorian to gothic.

"We've done all the Shakespeares," she said. "We've gone through all the ages."

Last Friday night, Rachel White, 20, and Brett Fylstra, 20, both juniors at UD, were browsing the racks inside Hartshorn Hall and said they came to do a mix of vintage clothes shopping and Halloween shopping.

"Basically everything I picked out is for everyday," Fylstra said.

White said she plans to be a "newsie" for Halloween and went to the costume sale to search for a cap and suspenders in order to look like an authentic paper boy. She also picked out several items to add to her personal wardrobe.

"I like antique shopping, and vintage clothes are really in," she said. "It's just fun to go clothes shopping in general."

White and Fylstra were having fun perusing the racks and said they saw some interesting pieces like a detailed Victorian-style dress and a pair of abnormally large women's shoes.

"This is really cool," Fylstra said. "They should do this more often."

Hughes said the sale was more successful than she expected and by the end of the first day, she had already taken 15 empty racks out of the room. She said she doesn't want to wait another 17 years and anticipates another sale around Halloween in about five years.

For now, she said, she's just happy to create some space for the department and give the theater's treasured items a new home.

"Some people are going out with costumes, and some people are going out with clothes," she said. "It's just great to see."

Woman robs UD students on Main Street

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Two University of Delaware students were robbed on Main Street on Tuesday evening by a woman claiming to have a gun.

The woman approached the female students near the intersection with Academy Street at approximately 6:45 p.m., grabbed one of their purses and ran, said Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The two victims chased after the robber, who quickly realized the purse she stole was empty. She then turned to the victims and demanded money, implying she had a gun. However, no weapon was displayed.

One of the students handed an undisclosed amount of cash to the robber, who ran away once again.

Spadola said several bystanders gave chase but could not catch her.

The suspect is described as a white woman, 25 to 35 years old, 5 feet, 7 inches tall with light brown hair in a ponytail. She was wearing jeans and a black jacket.

Spadola said no surveillance footage was available as of Wednesday evening.

"The first look at the cameras by investigators didn't show the incident. This could be due to a minor discrepancy in the time or location as has happened in the past," Spadola explained. "It could also have occurred on a stretch of Main Street that isn't viewable on camera."

Anyone with additional information on this incident should contact Detective Daniel Bystricky at 302-366-7110, ext. 136 or Daniel.bystricky@cj.state.de.us. You can send an anonymous text message tip by texting 302NPD and your message to TIP411. Information can also be provided anonymously to Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333 or via the Internet at www.tipsubmit.com where a reward may be available.

Anderson House spans 208 years of local history

This week's Out of the Attic item is a Sheila Harrington photograph published in the August 1982 edition of the Newark Historical Society Newsletter.

The article states that the first part of the two-and-a-half-story stone house was built by James Anderson and his wife in 1806. At that time, the village of Newark was already more than 100 years old but was still basically one street surrounded by farms.

Andersons Lane led from Newark Street to the house about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile away. As the town slowly expanded, the farms gave way to streets and houses. Today, the Anderson House fronts on West Park Place at the intersection with Indian Road. It is a private residence.

The house is one of the oldest stone dwellings in Newark. The original portion of the structure with its 18-inch-thick stone walls includes the front entry and the part of the house to its left. The eastern part of the house to the right of the front door is constructed of 12 inch-thick brick faced with stucco and was added some years later.

Henry Whitely purchased the house in 1818 along with 100 acres of land. Whitely continued to buy land until 1840 when he sold the house and 263 acres to James S. Martin, a trader from Philadelphia. The next year, Martin began construction of his new home, a Greek Revival mansion, just to the east of the Anderson home.

The area became known as the "Deer Park" farm for the many deer that came drawn by the trees planted on the grounds, a grove of which exists today between St. Thomas Church and Park Place. Martin acquired the century old St. Patrick's Inn at Main Street and New London Road, tore it down, and built a new inn naming it the Deer Park.

The Anderson home was sold in 1862 to John and Sara Ann Myers. By the end of the century, it had changed hands three more times. The surrounding land was still largely undeveloped and not sold off separately in any large quantity until after 1909.

Visit the Newark History Museum located on South College Avenue beside the bridge. It is open Sundays from 2 to 5 now through November. Make appointments to visit at other times all year by calling 302-368-9845 to schedule. Man charged with DUI in wrong-way crash on Main St.

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Newark Police have charged an Elkton, Md., man with driving the wrong way down Main Street last week and colliding with another vehicle in front of the Deer Park Tavern.

Authorities allege 44-year-old Timothy Krieger was drunk when the crash occurred.

According to NPD spokesman Lt. Mark A. Farrall, the crash occurred on Oct. 22 at approximately 9:50 p.m. while Krieger was driving his Dodge Durango east on West Main Street, approaching the railroad tracks.

Krieger failed to merge right at the intersection where eastbound West Main Street turns right onto South Main Street and instead traveled straight onto the one-way portion of Main Street.

Farrall said Krieger was traveling at a "high rate of speed" the wrong way on Main Street when he struck a Toyota Prius head-on in front of the Deer Park Tavern. A 66-year-old man was driving the Prius.

The crash was captured by the city's network of downtown surveillance cameras.

Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co. and New Castle County Paramedics extricated and treated both men on scene before taking them to Christiana Hospital with serious injuries.

The 66-year-old driver of the Prius remains in serious but stable condition at Christiana Hospital, Farrall said.

Court records indicate that police found an open can of beer in Krieger's car. They also allege that Krieger told a paramedic treating him that he had consumed three beers that evening.

Krieger was arrested on Saturday following an investigation and charged with the driving under the influence and second-degree assault. He was arraigned at JP Court #20 and released on $10,000 unsecured bond.

Maryland man charged in fatal beating at Pencader Plaza

By CARL HAMILTON

Special to the Post

Investigators have charged a Maryland man with the drug-related beating death of another man in the parking lot of Pencader Plaza.

Maryland State Police detectives and troopers arrested Aaron Darron Downes, 27, of Elkton, on Monday night without incident after he was developed as a homicide suspect through a joint investigation by Delaware State Police, the Cecil County Sheriff's Office and MSP, according to Sgt. Paul Shavack, a DSP spokesman.

A second suspect in the deadly assault also has been identified and located but, as of Tuesday afternoon, he had not been charged, police reported.

Downes, who is charged with manslaughter, is accused of beating Tyler Stanley, 22, of Chesapeake City, Md., about 6:15 p.m. Oct. 24 in the Food Lion parking lot at Pencader Plaza at 907 S. Chapel St., police said.

Stanley died from his injuries at Christiana Hospital on Saturday, police added.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Downes remained in the Cecil County Detention

Police say a Chesapeake City, Md., man was fatally beaten in the parking lot of Pencader Plaza on South Chapel Street.

Center without bond, awaiting extradition to Delaware.

Downes allegedly launched into his deadly attack after spotting Stanley in the front passenger's seat of car while he and the other suspect traveled through that parking lot in a white sport utility vehicle, according to police.

"Downes approached the passenger side of the car and opened the front passenger door, confronting Tyler Stanley about money Stanley owed him from a previous illegal drug transaction," Shavack explained.

At that point, according to Shavack,

Downes repeatedly punched Stanley in the head and upper body, before he and the other suspect got back into the SUV and drove away.

"Detectives have determined through preliminary interviews and investigation that this does not appear to be a random act, and the victim was targeted in this incident," Shavack reported.

A 57-year-old woman, who was in the driver's seat beside Stanley when the attack occurred, drove out the parking lot, too, according to police.

That woman, whom investigators have not publicly identified, called 9-1-1 when she noticed that Stanley was "unresponsive," and then met paramedics and DSP troopers at a nearby Royal Farms on Old Baltimore Pike, police said.

Stanley remained in critical condition at Christiana Hospital before dying about 29 hours after suffering the beating, police reported.

Anyone with information that might help investigators is asked to contact DSP Homicide Detective Danny Wright at 302-741-2811. Information also can be provided to Delaware Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333 or by internet at www.tip-submit.com.

POLICE BRIEFS

Radiator stolen from car in dealership lot

Police are looking into the theft of a radiator from a car parked at a used car dealership on Cleveland Avenue last week.

According to Newark Police spokesman Cpl. James Spadola, the incident occurred sometime overnight between 9 p.m. on Oct. 20 and 7 a.m. on Oct. 21 at Martin Honda, located at 237 E. Cleveland Ave.

Spadola said someone removed the front grill from a 2012 Kia Optima and took out the radiator, which is worth about $200.

Spadola said the dealership is looking at the parking lot's video surveillance and police continue to investigate the incident.

Air compressor, battery charger missing from resident's truck

A Fremont Road resident awoke early on Oct. 22 to see a suspicious vehicle parked near his home and noticed items were missing out of his car.

According to Newark Police spokesman Cpl. James Spadola, the resident woke up around 4 a.m. on Oct. 22 to the sound of his dog barking and looked outside to see a white car parked on Wakefield Drive. He told police he had never seen the car in the neighborhood before and it drove away shortly after he noticed it. He described the driver as a black man with a heavy build.

Later that day, Spadola said, the victim got into his work truck around 7:30 a.m. and discovered that several items were missing, including an air compressor and battery charger worth approximately $390.

Spadola said the car was left unlocked overnight and police continue to investigate the incident.

Bomb threat, fight cap 'challenging week' at Newark High

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

A 15-year-old Newark High School student was arrested last Friday and charged with calling in a bomb threat that evacuated the school.

The threat set off a chain of events that ended with police officer using pepper spray to break up a fight that broke out on the football field.

Acting on tips from the public, police arrested the teen at his home and charged him with terroristic threatening. The teen, whose name police did not release, posted $5,000 bail and was released to his parents.

The New Castle County 911 center received the threat at approximately 7:30 a.m. Friday. K-9 units from Delaware State Police and Wilmington Police swept the school for explosives and found none, said Lt. Mark A. Farrall, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

After students evacuated to the football stadium, two students began fighting on the field. The two were taken into custody after an NPD officer used pepper spray to break up the fracas.

A female student who was sitting in the bleachers suffered an asthma attack and was taken to Christiana Hospital for treatment. Throughout the day, police released conflicting information about the role pepper spray played in the girl's asthma attack. However, late in the day, Farrall acknowledged that it was, in fact, the cause.

Several other students were treated on scene for "residual affects" of the pepper spray, such as eye irritation.

Farrall said the officer was without backup and "unable to physically separate the two" when he decided to use pepper spray in the crowded stadium.

"We have a responsibility to stop an assault from occurring," Farrall said. "I can't speak for the officer, but it's not uncommon for a police officer to use pepper spray to stop an assault."

He declined to say whether the decision was influenced by the incidents that happened at Newark High four days earlier. On Oct. 20, officers were at the school investigating a fight in the cafeteria when a second brawl broke out in a hallway.

More than two-dozen officers from three agencies were called in to break it up, and at least 14 students are facing charges.

Farrall said there is no indication Friday's fight is related to the earlier incidents.

The two students involved in Friday's fight were taken to police headquarters, charged with disorderly conduct and released to their parents. Officers are investigating the bomb threat but have no suspects.

Wendy Lapham, a spokeswoman for Christina School District, said classes resumed just before 10 a.m.

The district will investigate the incident and determine what disciplinary measures to take against the two students involved in the fight, Lapham said.

Principal Curtis Bedford sent a letter to parents explaining the day's events.

"This has been an unusually challenging week for our school," Bedford wrote. "I would like to extend my sincere thanks the majority of Newark students who handled this week's events in a responsible, cooperative manner."

Newark High students say actions of a few don't represent school

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

In the aftermath of a challenging week at Newark High School that included three fights and a bomb threat, several students are speaking out, saying their school shouldn't be defined by the poor choices of a few.

"Those people are not representing the school the way 99.9 percent of us want to be represented," sophomore Maddie Campbell said, referring to the 17 students who were charged in the two incidents.

Campbell is leading an "NHS Pride" campaign, primarily using social media.

The first incident came Oct. 20, when two fights broke out within minutes of each other as students headed to their first classes of the morning. Four days later, police used pepper spray to break up a fight that broke out on the football field after a bomb threat evacuated the school.

When Campbell saw the way some people were perceiving the school last Friday afternoon, she texted her friends and encouraged them to tweet messages things about the school. Throughout the week-end, dozens of students used the #NHSPride hashtag to talk about their favorite classes, clubs and memories.

"It was a bad week," she said. "We needed some positivity."

The campaign eventually drew the attention of school administrators, alumni, school board members and local politicians. In an email, Principal Curtis Bedford said he was proud of the students but declined to comment further, saying he didn't want to take attention away from the kids.

Campbell, whose mother, Elizabeth Paige, is a Christina School Board member, said she decided to speak out when she saw the way many regional media outlets portrayed the incidents.

Some called the first incident a "riot," initially reporting that hundreds of students were involved. One publication, the News Journal, used an editorial to call for disciplining many student bystanders, whom the editorial claimed were "actively engaged" in preventing police from breaking up the fracas. Two days later, the newspaper acknowledged that was not accurate and has since removed the editorial from its website.

"I was definitely a little upset that most other media sources blew things out of proportion," Campbell said.

Senior Madeleine Milligan said she hopes the pride campaign continues.

"There's so many great things about Newark," she said. "I hope we'll continue to let people know about that."

She said students have logged more than 7,000 volunteer hours and noted that in order to take advantage of the NHS music program.

"Newark's a good school," he said, adding that for many outsiders, "all they see is the negative stuff."

Some of the students said they feel there is a negative connotation to public schools in a state known for its large number of charter and private schools.

"I hate it when people bash our school just because it's a public school and things happen," senior Gabby DeAngelis said.

As the students gathered in front of the school Tuesday afternoon to discuss their Twitter campaign, most agreed that things have gotten back to normal after the disruptions last week. Many praised the school administrators and their fellow students for the way they handled the incidents.

"We're a student body, we're a family and we care about each other," Campbell said.

Editor's note: Volunteers at the Pencader Heritage Museum have been digitizing old Newark City Council meeting minutes. They share excerpts with Newark Post readers in a weekly column.

July 1897: At the request of 13 city freeholders, council undertook an effort to widen and repair a portion of Main Street. Permission was granted to erect additional telephone poles in the town "to connect with Elkton and other places." A tax of $1 per pole was levied on all such poles in town.

Street lighting at the west end of town was enhanced. Frank Steele appointed a new superintendent of the Water and Light Department at $50 per month. The cost of repairing the steam-operated water pump estimated at $25 to $40.

Complaints were being received from users that water and electric bills were not being issued in a timely manner each month. Eben Frazer was appointed collector of water and electric fees, and was to receive a commission of 2.5 percent on collections. An electric light was ordered placed over the door of the lock-up.

Posters were placed around town offering $25 reward for the arrest and conviction of anyone robbing or attempting to rob any store or house in town. Water charges to the two schools in town were reduced to $17 per year from $22. Council inspected fencing around schools, but no record of action taken.

E. McKee was paid $5 for burying a dead horse. Residents of the east end of town requested lights be installed at East Newark RR station. Problems were still arising concerning new wells needed for the town. In September 337,000 gallons of water were pumped, using 25 tons of coal.

See the original minutes at Pencader Heritage Museum, 2029 Sunset Lake Rd (Rt. 72 south of Newark.) Regularly open first and third Saturdays, 10 - 4. Other times by appointment. the day of the attack.

"She had to stop here first and say thank you to the men in blue," Todd said.

Emily was home alone with her half-sister, Megan, 15, on Sept. 27 when she was mauled by a pit bull owned by Maria Ruckle's ex-husband. Megan fought off the dog, called 911 and used first aid training she received as part of the Civil Air Patrol to help her sister.

Cpl. Andrew Pagnotti, Ofc. Dan Burgess and Master Cpl. Truman Boulden were the first to arrive at the home in the Stafford neighborhood and shot and killed the dog. Emily was rushed to A.I. DuPont Hospital for Children and from there, was flown to Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, where she has been recovering for the past month.

Todd said the process has been long and hard for him and his wife, who took turns staying in the hospital with Emily every night. For the first six days, Emily was in a medically-induced coma and suffered a sudden onset of hypothermia and some fluid buildup in her lungs from blood transfusions.

The 8-year-old said the hardest part about being in the hospital was being away from her classmates at Newark Charter School.

"I missed having all my friends with me," Emily said.

She said she also missed her sister, Megan, who is credited with saving her life.

"She's the best big sister I could ever ask for," she said.

Several people came to visit Emily while she was in the hospital, including Megan, Pagnotti, University of Delaware mascot YoUDee, Mayor Polly Sierer and former councilman Jerry Clifton, who is a family friend of the Ruckles.

Earlier this month, Clifton helped organize a comedy show fundraiser for Emily. The event drew about 700 people and raised $30,000 from ticket sales, "For Emily" bracelets and donations. The money will go directly to the Ruckle family to help pay for some of the medical bills.

"Jerry Clifton has been so great. He's been like a brother," Todd said.

Emily received cards from local elementary school students wishing her a speedy recovery, and members of Maria's Padua Academy graduating class also reached out.

Todd said the outpouring of community support for Emily over the last month helped lift everyone's spirits.

"There's been so many happy moments, unbelievable moments," he said. "We've felt every emotion in the last 30 days."

Clifton said Emily wasn't expected to come home from the hospital for another month, but he was happy she was released early. He said the entire Ruckle family is relieved to have Emily back.

"I know it's been really stressful on them," he said.

Emily Ruckle, 8, daughter of Councilman Todd Ruckle (left), was released from the hospital Tuesday after spending a month recovering from a dog attack. Emily and her parents stopped by the Newark Police Department to thank responding officers Tuesday before heading home.

Clifton was at city hall Tuesday afternoon to welcome Emily home. The 8-year-old ran into his arms before she was escorted into police headquarters by officers who gave her some of the department's trading cards and let her sit on a motorcycle.

Maria said Emily received Pagnotti, Burgess and Boulden's cards, but was most excited about the K-9 cards. At home, she said, Emily has a special bond with the family's 8-year-old German shepherd, Kona. She likes to dress Kona up like a princess and paint his nails, Maria said.

"I'm so happy to be back in Delaware, but my favorite thing about Delaware is Kona," Emily said. "I missed him."

Even though Emily is home, Maria said the journey of recovery for her daughter isn't over. She will start rehabilitation in a couple of months, and they are expecting to be back at the hospital for more work on her arm.

"It's going to be years and years of surgeries to get it looking like it did before," Maria said.

In the meantime, she said, the family is planning to meet with officials at Newark Charter School to discuss creating special uniforms that accommodate Emily's injury. They said Wednesday they hope she returns to school by the end of the week.

145 charged in underage drinking crackdown

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Officers from the Newark Police Department, University of Delaware Police Department and Delaware Division of Alcohol and Tobacco Enforcement (DATE) initiated an "underage drinking enforcement operation" over the weekend that resulted in the arrest of 145 partygoers at a house on Continental Avenue.

According to NPJ spokesman Lt. Mark A. Farrall, officers saw a loud party in the unit block of Continental Avenue on Saturday and, after an undercover investigation, determined that alcohol was being provided to minors.

Farrall said officers executed a search warrant at the residence just after 3 p.m. and identified 145 underage people there who had consumed alcohol, including three who were under the age of 18.

All 145 were issued a summons to appear in court, and the three juveniles were turned over to their parents.

The three residents of the house where the party was held, whose names were not released, will be charged with 145 counts of providing alcohol to a minor, two counts of possession of marijuana, three counts of a noise violation, underage consumption of alcohol, failure to obtain an event permit for gathering over 150 people and conspiracy to provide alcohol to minors.

Farrall said the sting was part of a new effort by police to combat a recent spike in underage drinking in the city.

"Since last year, we've seen a significant increase in these large daytime parties and we're taking steps to address them," he said.

Newark Police continue to investigate the incident and anyone with additional information is asked to contact Cpl. Greg Micolucci at 302-366-7110 ext 412 or greg.micolucci@cj.state.de.us. You can send an anonymous text message tip by texting 302NPD and your message to TIP411. Information can also be provided anonymously to Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333 or via the internet at www.tipsubmit.com where a reward may be available.

GRANT

The grant program, conceived by Gov. Jack Markell and approved by the general assembly earlier this year, allows municipalities to carve out "downtown districts" and compete for funding.

This year, one town from each county will be selected. If funding allows, more will be selected in future years. In districts selected for the program, private entities will be able to receive grants to offset up to 20 percent of capital costs for building or redeveloping properties in the district.

Ricky Nietubicz, a city planner who also serves as administrator of the Downtown Newark Partnership, said there are several areas of the city that could benefit from the grants, but due to restrictions on the size and placement of the district, the two areas chosen are the most feasible. In addition, both are already listed in the Comprehensive Development Plan as "housing rehab" areas.

"We wanted to go with something that was part of an established plan vetted by the public," Nietubicz said.

George Read Village, located off Tyre Avenue, was built during World War II as emergency housing for servicemen and war workers. Today, many of the properties are maintained by the Newark Housing Authority.

The second area - Center, New, Linden and Chocate streets - is almost exclusively student rental housing. In 2010, city council designated the area as the New Center Village Overlay Area and implemented zoning restrictions that encourage single-family ownership.

The city has long had the goal of increasing the number of owner-occupied properties in the central business district. Currently, homeownership rates in George Read Village and New Center Village are 13.8 and 3.3 percent, respectively, compared to 72.1 percent in the city as a whole.

However, a proposed development project could pose an immediate challenge to the efforts in New Center Village. Lang Development Group's plan would replace five houses on Center Street with a four-story apartment building and could put a damper on efforts to attract homeowners to the area. The planning commission voted down the project earlier this month, but the developer has the option of bringing it to city council, which is not required to follow the planning commission's recommendation.

Nietubicz sees luring permanent residents downtown as a way to boost business and provide some stability during summer and winter months when students leave town.

"Having folks who are invested in Newark move downtown would be a positive," he said.

A "for rent" sign hangs in front of a home in George Read Village. The city is hoping to be selected for a state grant program that would help encourage owner-occupied housing in that neighborhood.

The challenge to overcome, he said, is the property values downtown. A person looking to buy a home could, for less money, find a house that is newer and would require fewer improvements in other areas of Newark. Median home values in George Read Village and New Center Village are $270,000 and $320,000, respectively, compared with $241,000 citywide.

If Newark is awarded the grant, potential homeowners could combine that funding with money from programs already offered by the city, such as the Promoting Owner Occupancy of Homes Program, which provides interest free loans of up to $30,000 towards the purchase of single-family home currently being used as a rental property.

"That might be just what the doctor ordered to make it a viable investment for people who want the benefit of downtown living," Nietubicz said.

On Monday night, city council approved the grant application, 6-1.

"I think that would significantly improve that area," District 6 Councilman Stu Markham said.

District 3 Councilman Rob Gifford cast the lone opposing vote, saying many improvements could be made to the plan.

Many believe that Newark's chances of receiving the grant during the first year are slim. In April, Markell unveiled the program in downtown Wilmington, using the Queen Theater as a backdrop.

"When I first read it, I knew that Wilmington was very interested, and they have a leg up, shall I say, on these sort of funds," Markham said.

Newark's Rachel Beston runs to Blue Hen Conference title

By JON BUZBY

Newark Post

As far as cross-country finishes go, this one wasn't even close.

Newark High's Rachel Beston cruised across the finish line in an impressive 18:38 to capture the Blue Hen Conference cross-country championships on Oct. 23 at Bellevue State Park. Beston, a junior, finished a full 17 seconds ahead of runner-up Katherine Macturk, of Concord. In comparison, there was less than one-second difference between the top two finishers in the boys' race.

"Heading into the season, I thought I would be up there in the conference, but I wasn't by any means sure that I could take the title," Beston said. "I knew that there were a lot of fast girls in the conference, so I think it was just a combination of being prepared, staying positive throughout the race and having a lucky day."

There's no question Beston's top finish was more about preparation than luck.

"Heading into the conference meet, I tried to be mentally prepared by staying calm and keeping the mood lighthearted on the warmup with my teammates," Beston said. "Physically, the past few weeks leading up to the conference were tough. But as the championship got very close, my team backed off of training a bit and did our pre-meet routine of ice bath and elevating our legs to get fresh for the race."

Newark coach Gordon Thomas pointed to his top runner's focus as one of the main reasons for her success.

"That is the common denominator with successful distance runners - great attention to detail," Thomas said.

Beston joins Caron Marra (1995) and Nancy Duarte (1982) as the only female conference champions in Newark High history.

Her effort, combined with junior Xia Howard placing ninth and senior Lydia Izzo 10th, helped lead Newark (62 points) to a second-place finish behind Charter of Wilmington (42). Despite her outstanding individual performance, Beston was quick to credit her teammates for her success.

"I wouldn't be anywhere without my teammates," said Beston, who started running Newark High's Rachel Beston became just the third Yellowjacket to win the Blue Hen Conference girls cross-country championship when she captured the title at Bellevue State Park on Oct. 23.

5K races with her father and sister at the age of 7 before joining the Girls on the Run Club at Downes Elementary.

"Not only do they encourage me in tough workouts and after tough races, but they are some of my best friends. We always have fun when we're together, and going to practice is what I look forward to each day."

Newark is now practicing for the DIAA state championship meet Nov. 8 at White Clay Creek State Park. Other Yellowjackets competing in states are seniors Helena Elder, Ally Delaney and Sam Rowley, and junior Virginia Milham. Senior Alicia Feliciano, sophomore Halimah Roberson and freshman Kendra Cutler could still make the state team, according to Thomas.

Beston remains focused in her preparation for what will be the biggest race of her career.

"One of the most important parts of the race is mental preparedness, and I'm trying to stay relaxed and confident about the race," she explained. "For the race itself, I don't really have any big plans. Right now, I'm thinking I'll try to stay up with the lead group as long as possible."

On the boys' side, despite graduating two All-State performers last year, Newark (57) finished in second place behind Charter of Wilmington (29) at the conference championships. Senior Jarod

Wilson, a first-team All-State runner last year, led the Yellowjacket harriers with a fourth-place finish (16:22). Finishing right behind Wilson in sixth through eighth places, respectively, were junior Daniel Mwaniki (16:42), senior Brandon Holveck (16:44) and freshman Brandon Smith (16:45).

"Brandon has been a huge plus for us this season," Newark coach Mike Mooney said. "He has really come on and is right up there running with our veterans. He has the fastest 5k time of any freshman in the state so far this year."

Newark finished 52 points ahead of third-place Appoquinimink and Mooney is optimistic about their chances at the state meet.

"Greg Biddle, Ryan Gerhart, Paul Mallary and Alvaro Bedolla have been fighting for the very important fifth-man spot," Mooney explained. "Charter of Wilmington and Salesianum have a little more depth than we do this season, but we are close enough that anything can happen."

Jones, Hodgson trounce Yellowjackets, 50-20

By KEVIN PHILLIPS

Special to the Post

GLASGOW — Coming into Saturday's non-conference football game against host Hodgson, Newark knew that it was going to have its hands full with dynamic Silver Eagle quarterback Ray Jones.

Those worries were warranted. Jones gashed the Yellowjackets for six touchdowns as Hodgson defeated Newark, 50-20, and put a damper on the Yellowjackets' playoff hopes.

"When you play against a good football team, don't execute well with turnovers and have difficult field position, it's tough to overcome that and then you add the dynamics of Raymond Jones," Yellowjacket head coach Butch Simpson said. "It's been a tough week to rest well because I could see him do damage against us, and that's what happened."

Newark started the game strong by forcing a three-and-out on defense and then scored on its first offensive possession of the game when Darryl Chambers caught a 17-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Ben Campbell.

The Silver Eagles took over from there with 42 unanswered points over the next two-plus quarters to take a 35-point lead.

The barrage started with Jones completing a 57-yard touchdown pass to Da'von Riley to cut the Yellowjackets' lead to 7-6.

Hodgson took the lead on the first play of the second quarter on DeJuan Outlaw's 20-yard touchdown run, and Jones added to the lead with his first rushing touchdown of the day, a 12-yard run, and took the ball himself to convert the ensuing the two-point try to make it 20-7.

Jones added touchdown runs of 1 and 2 yards in the final five minutes of the first half, and the Silver Eagles used a two-point conversion on both scores to take a 36-7 lead into halftime.

Even though few things went right against Hodgson, Simpson said he was proud of the way Newark fought in the second half, scoring on a pair of touchdown passes from Campbell to Peter Suski.

"Well, there's certain things in football that have to take place across the board in order to win, and we didn't win many of those fights today," Simpson said. "It's tough on a group of young men. I'm proud of them coming back out of halftime and still trying to hang in there and play right."

Campbell went 9-14 for 180 yards, three touchdowns and an interception. Suski caught five passes for 146 yards and two touchdowns.

Newark returns home tonight to host Middletown in a 7 p.m. contest.

At Newark's Halloween parade, fun outweighs fright

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

On a crisp fall afternoon, thousands of costumed kids lined Main Street for the annual Newark Halloween Parade.

The traditional scary characters – such as skeletons, werewolves and mummies – were well represented. Cats, scarecrows, and at least one ladybug strolled around in search of candy. There was a plethora of princesses and fairies and enough superheroes for Newark to form its own Justice League.

And then there was Timmy O'Connell, who turned heads by wearing one of the most creative costumes of the day.

The 8-year-old was wearing a cardboard toilet tank and bowl, complete with a fake pair of legs that had a pair of jeans pulled down around the ankles. He topped it off with a party hat.

"I wanted to be a party pooper," Timmy explained, adding that his dad helped him create the costume.

A total of 2,300 people marched in Sunday's parade, including 90 organizations and marching bands. Nearly 12,000 people attended, making it one of the biggest crowds in the parade's 67-year history, city officials said.

Eight-year-old Paige Sahrage and her siblings, Emme and Brodie, came dressed as characters from "The Incredibles."

"I've watched that movie a lot and I love it so much," Paige said, as she and her siblings and friends were perched on a wall next to the U.S. Male Barber Shop, waiting for the parade to begin. "I'm so excited to watch the parade from up here."

Her favorite part of Halloween? The candy, of course.

"I have a big sweet tooth," she said.

Her friend, 9-year-old Maddie Barber, was dressed as a "neon zombie."

"Three of my friends will be in the parade," Maddie said.

Brett DeVary, 8, was using a chain to lead around his grandfather, Don Gregg, who was dressed in a full gorilla costume. Brett said the costume was "funny."

"He didn't like it when he was 3 or 4 but he does now," Gregg added.

Julia Sauder and her little brother, Gavin, were both dressed as mummies.

Mummies are "cool" because they "look like they wrapped themselves in toilet paper," 10-year-old Julia explained.

Their mother, Colleen, said they attend the parade every year.

"We love it," she said. "It's a tradition."

Mei Tobin, 11, and Brynn Lintner, 11, wait for the parade to begin.

UD to host public forum on strategic plan

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

Members of the public are invited to voice their comments and share suggestions about the University of Delaware of the future on Wednesday during a community meeting on the new strategic plan "Delaware Will Shine."

The meeting will be from 6:30 to 8 p.m. inside St. Thomas More Oratory located at 45 Lovett Avenue.

Charlie Riordan, vice provost for research, said the new plan is aimed at addressing how UD can remain transformative on a global stage and make the greatest contributions to the problems that plague the world. The name "Delaware Will Shine" comes from the university's fight song.

The last strategic plan, called "Path to Prominence," was unveiled in 2007 and Riordan said it was time to take another look at UD's mission because the role of technology and the economic climate has changed. The university has also since acquired the former Chrysler manufacturing plant on South College Avenue to create a Science, Technology and Advanced Research Campus.

"Now we have those 271 acres to think about," Riordan said.

Bloom Energy and UD's College of Health Sciences are currently the only tenants on the STAR Campus. In July, the university broke its lease agreement with The Data Centers, LLC, which had planned to build a controversial 279-megawatt data center and power plant on the site.

Riordan said 100 staff, faculty and students are involved in the planning process, but he wants more input and involvement.

"We don't think that's enough," he said.

Riordan said UD is deeply integrated into the fabric not only of Newark but in the state of Delaware, and it's the university's job to serve both the students and the community.

"The best way to do that is to talk to people and build those relationships," he said.
