Make Tuesday important

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Judging by the abundance of signs, advertisements, commercials and stories that have inundated us over the late summer and fall, you would think that Tuesday is a pretty important day.

Tuesday, of course, is Election Day. It's a mid-term election nationally and there is a good deal of important local and statewide races as well.

Unfortunately, based on past results, there more than likely won't be a run on the polls.

Mid-term elections historically draw fewer voters than do presidential elections.

And it seems only the race for Attorney General (Beau Biden and Ferris Wharton) has generated any buzz in the state. There appears to be a handful of interesting local races like the ones between Stephanie Ulbrich and John Kowalko, Terry Spence and Mike Barbieri and Vince Lofink and Earl Jaques, but turnout is generally not spurred by local races.

While this seems generally depressing to people that care about the democratic process, the good news is that the election didn't actually happen yet and people can still make time to vote.

The thing is — people don't have any problem taking the time to moan, groan and complain.

It's amazing that so many people can have so many opinions but that so few of them actually take 15 minutes out of their day to cast a vote.

Only 30 or 40 percent of registered voters are taking the time to vote in elections like this. Unless there is a big

The Christina District school board has requested that District administrators postpone the Computer Removal Project, part of this year's budget, and any related action until a more public, collaborative method of addressing computer age and usage in schools can be developed. Starting this week, staff from the District's technology services department is meeting with individual schools to gather additional information.

At a meeting held on July 11, the school board approved Christina's preliminary 2007 budget. According to Kathy Dick-Frederick, the District's finance manager, District adminis-

Police investigate rape of UD student

Incident may be linked to Oct. 8 rape

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Newark Police Department is investigating the rape of a 20-year-old female University of Delaware student that occurred on Saturday, Oct. 28, between 5 a.m. and 5:30 a.m., in a home in the 100 block of Haines Street.

Police have reason to believe the unknown suspect may be the same man who raped a 19-year-old female DelTech student at her home in the unit block of Wilbur Street a few weeks prior, on Sunday, Oct. 8, at 5:30 a.m.

Newark Police Chief William Nefosky said Monday, "There are a lot of similarities between the two incidents." In each case, he said, the suspect entered the home through an unlocked door around 5 a.m. Physical descriptions of the suspect, as given by the victims, are very similar, he said.

A third incident, a home invasion in the 200 block of East Park Place on Sunday, Oct. 8, around 4:50 a.m., has been linked to the suspect.

The 20-year-old female resident told police an unknown man came into her bedroom and woke her up by caressing her arm as she lay in bed. The woman screamed and demanded the intruder leave, which he did after making a comment about being lost.

At the time, police named the East Park Place suspect a "person of interest in the Wilbur Street rape."

Nefosky said the department has stepped up patrols in these areas and has made catching this suspect its "number one commitment." He encouraged residents to lock their doors and windows to prevent further incidents.

Police have described the suspect as a college-aged white male with a medium build and short brown hair. Anyone who saw anything unusual along Haines Street, Continental Avenue, Lovett Avenue, South Chapel Street or Benny Street around 5 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 28, is asked to contact the Newark Police Department at 366-7110, ext. 135, or Delaware Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333.

■ Police Blotter is compiled each week from the files of the Newark Police Department, New Castle County Police and the Delaware State Police by the newspaper staff.

Students robbed in home invasion

Two male University of Delaware students were robbed Wednesday, Oct. 25, at 12:30 a.m., when three armed suspects forced their way into an apartment in the 200 block of Scholar Drive, said Newark Police.

Police said one of the victims answered a knock at the door, and the suspects forced their way inside ordering the victims to the ground when the door opened. The victims were forced to turn over their wallets, said police, and at least one bedroom was ransacked before the suspects fled.

The first suspect was described as a white male in his mid-to-late 20s, 5'6" to 5'9" and wearing a hooded sweatshirt. The second suspect was described as a black male in his mid to late 20s with a thin build, about 6' tall, wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt. The third suspect was a black male wearing a hooded sweatshirt.

Anyone with information is asked to contact the Newark Police at 366-7110, ext. 135, or Delaware Crimestoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333.

Businesses on Sandy Drive robbed

An unknown suspect cut an opening in a fence to gain access to the parking lot of a business in the 100 block of Sandy Drive and stole more than $1,000 worth of tools, police were told on Friday, Oct. 27, at 6:49 a.m. Another business in the 100 block of Sandy Drive had its front glass window broken and office equipment removed from inside by an unknown suspect, police were told on Friday, Oct. 27, at 2:12 a.m.

Burglary on Kinross Drive

Burglars forced their way into a home in the 300 block of Kinross Drive and stole video games, DVD movies and hand tools from inside while the owners were away, police were told on Tuesday, Oct. 24, at 5:28 p.m. Police said the suspect appeared to enter the home through a rear basement door. Investigation will continue.

Jewelry taken from Colgate Lane home

Unknown suspects forced their way into a home in the 700 block of Colgate Lane on Monday, Oct. 23, between 6:45 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. and stole an iPod and several pieces of jewelry, police were told. Police said a rear door had been kicked in and a rear window screen cut.

Other incidents

A Newark High School student had his cellphone stolen during science class, police were told on Wednesday, Oct. 25, at 2:23 p.m.

A laptop computer and several watches were stolen from an apartment in the 1000 block of Christina Mill Drive, police were told on Tuesday, Oct. 24, at 10:44 p.m. Police said unknown suspects appeared to forcibly enter through a ground floor window.

Unknown suspects kicked and punched holes in the drywall of an apartment building in the 700 block of Scholar Drive and broke a fire exit sign, police were told on Monday, Oct. 23, at 11:07 a.m.

Graffiti was found on a sign at the Delaware National Bank in the 200 block of E. Main Street, police were told on Monday, Oct. 23, at 10:42 a.m.

A video game system and games were stolen from a home in the 100 block of Cheltenham Road while the owner was away, police were told on Sunday, Oct. 22, at 9:58 p.m. The unknown suspect used a brick to break a window in the rear of the home to gain entry, said police.

Unknown suspects damaged a fence in the 700 block of Wollaston Avenue and stole a bike from the backyard, police were told on Friday, Oct. 27, at 10 p.m.

A 13-year-old boy reported being punched and kicked by another student in the parking lot of Newark Charter School in the 2000 block of Patriot Way on Friday, Oct. 27, around 11:30 a.m. Investigation will continue.

A 6-year-old boy allegedly hit a school bus driver with a bookbag on his way to Downes School in the 200 block of Casho Mill Road, police were told on Friday, Oct. 26, at 2:26 p.m.

A teacher was pushed over when a 17-year-old male student at Newark High School in the 400 block of E. Delaware Avenue pushed and attempted to harm another student, police were told on Friday, Oct. 27, at 11:09 a.m.

Vehicles targeted

Newark police reported that thieves and vandals targeted a number of vehicles here recently. Some of the reports include:

The rear signal light of a Volkswagen Jetta parked in the unit block of Choate Street was shattered by an unknown suspect, police were told on Thursday, Oct. 26, at 1:41 a.m.

An unknown suspect damaged the side view mirror of a Dodge Neon parked in the 200 block of E. Main Street, police were told on Thursday, Oct. 26, at 1:16 a.m.

A laptop computer was taken

Newark Emergency Center holds reunion

Former colleagues recall years of serving community

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

In 1973, a group of physicians opened the Newark Emergency Center on Main Street to service a community that was miles away from the nearest emergency room at Wilmington Hospital.

The 24-hour center, complete with X-ray and lab services, saw 50 to 60 patients a day and, at one time, was the third busiest emergency center in the state, said Dr. Amir Mansoor, M.D.

That was 33 years ago. Some things have changed since then with the opening of Christiana Care right up the road from Newark. Patient load, for instance, is down to 35 to 40 people a day, and trauma ma cases are taken, by ambulance, to the hospital, said Mansoor.

But many things remain the same at the Newark Emergency Center. Hours are still 24 a day, seven days a week; patients still receive care for illnesses ranging from lacerations to heart attacks. And the people that staff the emergency center continue to care about the community they serve.

Last Sunday, Oct. 29, the Newark Emergency Center held a reunion of former colleagues at the Newark Country Club. Physicians, registered nurses, technicians and volunteers gathered to talk and remember their days working together at the center.

Some of those days were pretty exciting, they recalled, such as one in 1976 when a nearby McDonald's restaurant blew up and the 20 or so injured customers and employees flocked to the emergency center for treatment.

Some were touching, such as the day Joy Smith, a former head nurse, received a thank you note from a man she helped resuscitate from cardiac arrest. The letter contained a picture of him and his family, saying his "time wasn't up yet."

"Those are the things that brought us together," said Joan Van Horn, a former head nurse.

Smith agreed. "I don't think you'll find any workplace with this kind of rapport," she said.

The two women said they were particularly proud of their work in the community. At one time, the center ran several educational programs, including a puppet show for children on the effects of illegal drugs and a babysitting class that taught participants CPR and first aid. "We always had a spirit for the community," said Van Horn.

And that community gave back in the form of volunteers. To help meet patient demand, the Emergency Center recruited volunteers from the New Century Club, the University of Delaware and Hodgson Vo-Tech to assist. Some of the students went on to study medicine, becoming nurses, technicians, surgeons and physicians. "We're very proud of our alumni," said Van Horn.

Newark's finance director resigns

Cites 'personal reasons' for move

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

George Sarris, director of the city of Newark's finance department since 1997, submitted his resignation Wednesday, Oct. 25, to City Manager Carl Luft. The decision to resign, said Sarris, was "entirely for personal reasons."

Sarris has accepted an offer to become budget director of a school district in the Washington, D.C., suburbs. The move, he said, will give him an opportunity to be closer to his children who live in the area.

Sarris said he has "looked occasionally" for job opportunities in the Washington, D.C. area before, adding it was "just coincidence" that the timing of his resignation coincided with a recent debate over the city's electric rates.

That debate followed last month's announcement of a $1.5 million budget shortfall that occurred when a July 2006 electric rate increase violated a contract with the University of Delaware.

Sarris presented several options for correcting the error at the Monday, Oct. 23, city council meeting, and council favored an option that will not further increase customers' rates.

Sarris, whose resignation is effective Nov. 7, will leave before the city approves the 2007 budget. He called the draft budget he presented a "great starting point" for council, and said City Manager Carl Luft is "the perfect person to see this through."

Sarris said he was proud of the work done in Newark under his watch. "I think we've done a lot of good things," he said. "We made some huge progress in the area of technology."

The city also received a certificate of achievement for financial reporting from the Government Finance Officers Association and achieved its first AA bond rating. The challenges, said Sarris, sprung from the state's transition to electric deregulation, which he called a "very difficult adjustment."

Sarris said the next person to fill his shoes will have some new issues to tackle, including diversifying revenue streams for the city. Now, the city's electric utility is its biggest single source of revenue. But, as rates decrease in order to stay competitive, the city will need to be less reliant on the utility, he said.

Luft said recruitment for a new finance director will start this week. He expects to recruit on a national level and thinks the job will generate quite a bit of interest.

Of Sarris, Luft said, "He's done very well. I'm sorry to see him leave."

LOCAL BRIEFS

New trial sought

The city of Newark is seeking a new trial or a reduction in the settlement awarded by a federal jury to Donald M. Durkin Contracting in a lawsuit that found the company was wrongly fired from the reservoir project in 2004.

The city filed documents in U.S. District Court last week claiming the verdict contradicted evidence presented in trial and that the damages exceeded state law.

Also, the city asked for another trial based on new evidence, including one witness who said Durkin declined to bid on jobs while litigating with the city. Durkin's attorney argued during trial that negative publicity surrounding the ordeal kept the company from getting work.

In October, a federal jury ordered the city pay Durkin more than $38 million in damages. The jury award included $5.5 million for work performed before the company was fired, $6.2 million for expenses related to the project after the fact, $1.7 million for legal fees and $25 million for violation of the contractor's constitutional rights. The amount was later reduced by $1.7 million due to a clerical error.

Workshop to look at money for roads

The Wilmington Area Planning Council (WILMAPCO) will present a workshop on "innovative transportation finance" at the Embassy Suites on S. College Avenue on Monday, Nov. 13, from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.

The event will feature expert speakers, as well as provide an opportunity for the public to get involved in the decision-making process for the 2030 Regional Transportation Plan, a long-range plan for WILMAPCO.

The "Our Town" workshop will address innovative solutions to transportation financing challenges and ask the question, "How can we adequately fund our communities' transportation needs?"

The event is free and open to the public. For more information, visit www.wilmapco.org.

Planners to meet Wednesday

The city of Newark's planning commission will meet next week on Wednesday, Nov. 8, at 7:30 p.m. Among those items on the agenda are the election of officers and review of the process for notifying property owners about special use permits.

At city council's Oct. 23 meeting, Mary Lou McDowell was appointed to the planning commission to represent District 3. McDowell will replace Alice Shurtleff, who resigned.

A lifelong Newark resident, McDowell has worked as a radio announcer for WNRK, WDEL, WSTW and WJBR, as a corporate travel agent for DuPont and AstraZeneca and as a substitute teacher. She is the daughter of former District 6 Councilman Olan Thomas.

Patrols never end at middle school

Goal is to stop trouble before it starts

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It's 9 a.m. on a Monday morning and the detention room at Shue-Medill Middle School in Newark already had almost a dozen detainees. Counselors, teachers and the school's Student Resource Officer (SRO) hustled in and out of the room, holding whispered conferences, doling out forms and conducting terse interchanges with their charges.

Excuses for misbehavior ranged from "I got put out of class, like 10 times," and "Teacher was disrespecting me," to "[The teacher] does not like me; he gave me a zero for nothin'," and "My boy was gonna get jumped and I had to help him," according to the students' versions.

"It's kinda' like time out," explained State Police Corporal Michael Smith, Shue's SRO. Some students might be there until the school day ends at 2 p.m. Others eventually return to classes that have already been in session since 7:20 a.m.

The school day starts at 6:30 a.m. for Smith along with the principal and other administrators. On this Monday in October, two school buses idled in the darkness outside by 6:50 a.m. "We let them off the buses at 7:05," said one of two deans of discipline who, armed with walkie-talkies, patrol the hallways with Smith, the principal, the assistant principals and full-time hall monitors.

On arrival, Smith makes coffee and takes a quick tour of the halls and classrooms stretching away in every direction over two floors. "Sometimes I'm here at 6 a.m.," Smith said. "It gives me a chance to look at cases I'm working on and do paperwork."

By 7:05, he's back at the main entrance to greet the 25 to 30 buses that drop off "waves" of middle schoolers. "I usually like them to see me first thing in the morning and the last thing in the afternoon," Smith said. "That's also why I park my cruiser where everyone can see it."

Smith's goal is to "get out there" to either stop trouble from happening or be visible to a student with a problem.

The ordinary Monday almost became a crisis when Smith suddenly was called to intercept a special education student walking out a side door. A few tense minutes ensued as Smith and the principal chased after the boy at a slow trot. He paused before proceeding down the school driveway, and the principal stood aside allowing Smith to talk the boy into returning. "It's a good thing he stopped before reaching the road," Smith later explained. "It's a much more serious violation when that happens."

Smith took the boy to his office where they spent a half-hour discussing the immediate reason for the attempted exit, as well as other issues troubling the tearful 13-year-old. "These are minor issues," Smith said. "We can deal with this. Kids have been 'messing' with him on the school bus and his day started off badly,

But I can help him with that — if he tells me."

Several times a month, Smith boards the school buses to observe and warn bullies or other troublemakers that someone in authority is able to step in as needed. "I do a lotta' crisis intervention work here," he explained again. "I try to get involved before something actually happens."

The bulk of this Monday was spent in doing "hall sweeps" over and over. "Where are you supposed to be?" Smith asked repeatedly as students appeared in the halls after classes had begun. "A lot of kids get into the halls on a pretext, like going to the bathroom, and just start to wander."

Smith also spent some time in the small classroom housing the in-school suspension program. "This is the last stop before an alternative school and kids are in a 20-day program at a minimum," explained teacher Matt Bolado. "We're very strict and nobody leaves the room during the school day. We may let them out to work with other teachers during the last week, but teachers come in to help with curriculum and tutor them as well."

A trooper for 24 years, Smith has "really enjoyed this" duty as a

UD hosts high school teachers

The University of Delaware's chemistry and biochemistry department hosted 20 chemistry teachers during state-wide professional service day on Oct. 13. Seven UD professors with specialties in a wide variety of disciplines provided the teachers with an overview of the work they are doing in chemistry at the surface and molecular levels.

Kate Scantlebury, associate professor of chemistry and biochemistry and secondary science education coordinator, organized the day's events which included morning and afternoon presentations, lunch at the Blue & Gold

Club and a tour of UD's science laboratories.

Gwyneth Sharp, a chemistry teacher with the Delaware Department of Education's Science Coalition, said the UD program is essential for chemistry teachers. "It's extremely important for high school science teachers to recognize where [in science] their students will be going," she said.

The teachers' day began with a series of lectures and demonstrations giving them an overview of research and new research techniques. Later, the teachers were able to see firsthand the instruments and devices described in each professor's presentation.

Tom Beebe, professor of chemistry and director of UD's surface-analysis facility, described some of the instruments the facility has made available to the scientific community for "building biomaterial bridges" to the molecular and atomic structure of chemical surfaces.

Charlene Kemmerle, a teacher at Dover High School and a UD graduate, said she was impressed with all that she heard. "Maybe we can get a course, at the high school level, to teach biochemistry," she said.

High school chemistry teachers spent a day with professors in the chemistry and biochemistry department at the University of Delaware.

Free breakfast for every student

Eight schools in the Christina School District have established the Universal Breakfast program. Currently, Brookside Elementary, Gauger-Cobbs Middle, McVey Elementary, Bayard Intermediate, Bancroft Intermediate, Elbert Palmer Intermediate, Stubbs Intermediate, and Christiana High School are participating. Universal Breakfast is a federally funded program that allows all students in the participating school to eat breakfast at no cost. The District is currently focusing on schools that are above the 50-percentile range for meeting federal free and reduced meal guidelines, but hopes to continue to expand the program to eventually serve all District schools.

SRO has already made arrests

School Resource Officer at Shue. "I've gotten to know kids and after I gave presentations to sixth graders, they came up to me in the halls to ask questions or just say hi," he explained. "That's the best part of my day."

Smith tells students he is not in the school to arrest students. "But don't confuse me with staff - I can arrest you, but I don't want to," he said. "Middle-schoolers have issues and it comes out in anger. Most times, I will calm them down - that's the goal - calm them down before it gets out of control and then they can go on with the day like that student earlier. That feels good."

Smith had already made arrests at Shue by the second month of school. "They don't realize how wrong their [behavior] is," he said. "They think it's OK to defend yourself by pushing a teacher away or pulling away when a teacher or I take them by the arm."

Smith also teaches students how to avoid fights with each other. "There's so many ways to avoid getting in fights," he said. "You can see they don't really want to fight - they're looking at you and [silently] begging you to break it up."

Smith cannot praise the SRO program and school administrators enough. "I'm near retirement and I would like to finish up here," he said. "I can teach life lessons to the kids - I've already had kids tell me they did what I told them - and it worked! The hardest thing is to convince them to tell me what is happening to them."

Nearing lunchtime, "a treat, but lots better than last year when kids were getting strong-armed for their lunch money," Smith had already been walking and talking for five hours with miles to go before the end of the day. His walkie-talkie, a constant background of requests and notices, alerted him to yet another problem. The school secretary who relays these messages all day, asked staff to be on the look-out for a student who had left a classroom 20 minutes earlier and not returned. "Gotta go, that's for me" Smith said, ending the interview with a smile. "But, come back anytime and see us."

Vision 2015

By RUTH KELLY

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

I read with great interest the Delaware Voice commentary "Imagine the best schools in the world ... no exceptions, no excuses," by Marvin Schoenhals of WSFS Bank and Valerie Woodruff of the Department of Education.

First of all, I applaud Paul Herdmann of Rodel Foundation, the Broad Foundation and all of the other contributors, myself included, for the hard work that it took to put this vision together for Delaware's schools. Every possible stakeholder had numerous opportunities to help develop this plan and have their input included.

Rodel Foundation has done an enormous amount of work in Delaware school districts across the state and especially in Christina. I participated in a two-year program sponsored and supported by Rodel and the University of Delaware and was able to earn a certificate as a certified parent educator.

Rodel has put in many hours, dollars and resources to research best practices across the country in education and developed a good plan to fit our tiny state of Delaware. They trained many parents in the state to be parent leaders and teach and train others on empowerment and advocacy for children.

Vision 2015 is a well thought out, bold challenge to revamp our current education system in Delaware. Will it be implemented? I seriously doubt it and it makes me both sad and angry.

Vision 2015 is going to cost a lot of money, but it will be money well spent. House Majority Leader Wayne Smith "wonders whether the time is right for another reform plan." When will the time be right? It's now or never. Senate Minority Leader John Still says "it will be tough for the state to pay for things like a longer school year and that 'we support education in this state very well — we do a much better job than most states.'" Vision 2015 no doubt has researched innovative ways to fund this effort; they only need to get the educational leaders to endorse and embrace their recommendations.

I would also like to add that much of the plan's vision will be familiar to many of us who have been engaged in public education in the recent past. For instance, many new, bold initiatives were undertaken in the Christina School District, which has never received the credit it rightly deserves as a leader in piloting innovative ways to better serve the students in Christina and in Delaware.

The numbers prove that great strides are being made. African American students are now in more AP courses than ever before. The achievement gap is slowly closing. Measure of Academic Progress (MAP) testing has been implemented in many other districts since Christina first introduced it.

Everyone knows that change must happen for our children to be ready academically to compete globally with other students around the world. Waiting is not the answer. What is wrong with this state? I just can't understand why such a small state would have this much dissention. Personalities, politics and hidden agendas are getting in the way of educating our children and this infuriates me.

Legislators will cry that it costs too much money. Teachers will resist when they are asked to be accountable for student achievement. The merry-go-round will continue as it has since my daughter entered the system in 1991 and exited in 2004. I spoke out in 1995 and made the prediction then that these same issues would be argued long after my daughter graduated, got married and had children of her own and they had children of their own.

Too much research, public input and thought went into preparing this vision for it not to be implemented. Until education becomes a priority in this state, nothing will change. Our children will be ill-prepared to face global competition for jobs and our state is going to suffer because of this issue. Let's do as Vision 2015 suggests and stop making excuses. It's time to truly put children first.

The author, a single parent, has been a columnist for the Newark Post from time to time since 1994. A former Dupont employee, she was also a specialist for the Christina School District.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week, "Out of the Attic," continues a months-long series of photographs taken in the early 1950s of all buildings on Main Street in the downtown area. This treasure trove of nostalgia is borrowed from archives in the City of Newark municipal building. Few details were discovered with the color slides but it is believed the photos were made by Leo Laskaris in 1954. Readers who have a historic photo and would like to share it with other readers are invited to loan their photos for reprinting in this space. Special care will be taken. For information, call the Newark Post, weekdays, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 737-0724.

New stores still opening despite economic downturn

As the nation's time of uncertainty continues, more and more businesses are reporting losses, laying off employees — and even shutting down.

Here at home, however, locals are holding to the course and investing themselves in the future. Owners of a Mexican grocery, a sports bar and a hardware store opened as planned at Red Mill Square in October, despite the September events that blasted the hopes of many others.

COMMENTARY

Two sides to Christina deficit story

To: the Editor

From: Thresa Giles

Former Finance Director,
Christina District

I have watched from a distance as events unfold in Delaware, and am deeply saddened by statements of political candidates there that are reckless, destructive, and most importantly, false.

During the past year, I have repeatedly asked State Auditor Tom Wagner to provide to the public, information relating to the Christina School District that would do the following:

1. Identify with specificity each component of the "deficit" that he claims exists (Note that a "deficit" means an absence of money. If Mr. Wagner's assertion is true, $250 million has been spent, plus an additional $11 to $28 million above that amount. Check the records. The assertion is a distortion of fact. At best. And coming from one allegedly well versed in financial matters, it ironically raises questions of competency.)

2. Identify with specificity any amount expended by the District that wrongly resulted in personal gain to Dr. Wise, me or any person.

3. Identify with specificity each transaction wrongfully impacting the operating budget, capital budget and special funds budget with details. Include any waiver, exception or exemption for each transaction that has been authorized by the Department of Education for any Delaware district.

To date, Mr. Wagner has not provided the requested information; instead, he continues to make headlines that play to adult emotions, without the requisite substance to back up his words. Lost in the mix are the kids of Christina.

Frankly, I feel revulsion over Mr. Wagner's most recent insinuations, which now imply that monies earmarked for special needs students in Christina were somehow misspent. The truth is this: Money was expended, and was approved by the Department of Education to be expended, to better meet the needs of at-risk students.

Last year, for the first time in the history of the Christina School District, significant closure of the achievement gap occurred (See independent analysis, CTAC Report). These unprecedented, across-the-board academic gains for Christina's African-American, Hispanic, and other minority children (as well as white children) arose in part from the re-prioritizing of how education dollars were spent. Most importantly, it was also the result of the intense work of teachers and principals.

Mr. Wagner's report does reveal one thing he is not trumpeting: Each dime of funding for "at-risk" children went into programs and support for "at-risk" children. More importantly, not once did funding go to parties, food, travel, gifts etc. IT WENT TO SUPPORT KIDS. The purchase of desks and related materials does not mean the lavish decorating of offices, despite the artful innuendo.

I had long ago predicted that likely three weeks or so before the election, Mr. Wagner would once again renew the sloppy sort of slander he has engaged in since I became the first African-American female in the state of Delaware to be appointed CFO of a major school district. Not surprisingly, he fulfilled my prediction this week. His personal attacks, and the unprecedented number of audits of the Christina School District, began immediately upon my appointment; an appointment to which he vehemently objected, following the rejection of his candidate of choice for the position (a white male).

Here are some additional questions raised by Mr. Wagner's troubling behavior:

1. How much did he charge the Christina School District each time he unilaterally elected to conduct an audit (33 in 28 months) of the District? What many may be unaware of is this: By state statute, a district is compelled to pay all fees the State Auditor charges, regardless of the number, or merits, of any audit activity.

2. How much was paid to private, for-profit firms he retained to conduct audits on his behalf?

3. How many of those private, for-profit firms were awarded no-bid contracts?

4. Why were such contracts awarded?

Mr. Wagner now asserts that Christina's priorities in spending violated the way the State wanted the money to be spent. Although false, his assertion raises an interesting question: If re-prioritizing expenditures resulted in significant student gains for the first time since 1978, why would he (and other state officials) insist upon micromanaging a district to now eradicate those gains?

Make no mistake: that is precisely what they are doing. The removal of thousands of computers from classrooms, the laying off of significant numbers of teachers, the distortion of facts over the past year is not about spending. It is not about education. And it is not about children. It is about power. And I suspect it is about race.

I had asked a leading authority on school finance to perform an analysis of what occurred in Christina and compare it to what occurs in each other school district within the state of Delaware. His response was this: In a "unit count" state like Delaware, there is no way to accurately track what is being done financially statewide, because the rules are murky. The structure is easily manipulated by contradictory "interpretations" of rules, and those doing the interpretation frequently have agendas easily concealed and/or unrelated to education. Absent full cooperation by all parties within the state, he advised that the truth would never be found with certainty.

After giving it much thought, I feel now that ultimately a federal investigation may be appropriate and necessary: an investigation into a statewide funding structure that continues to deny minority children and economically deprived children the very educational resources they so desperately need. A structure that enables politicians to remove computers from classrooms, lay off teachers, ride roughshod over a now-powerless superintendent, and consolidate power bases at the expense of children. And at the expense of teachers whose lives have been committed to educating those children.

I cannot tell you how disheartened I am. Grown-ups should know better. Maybe even behave with dignity and honor. For a change.

Make Tuesday important

change from previous elections, that's what the turnout will be Tuesday.

What is everybody else doing?

Whether it is the war in Iraq, gas prices or the never-ending pothole problem on your street, there are some significant issues to be dealt with.

We've heard all the excuses — 'my vote doesn't mean anything,' 'I don't like any of the candidates,' 'I don't have time,' 'I don't care,' and 'I'm not interested' are a few of them.

Yes, it's frustrating that the entire process has become so polarizing. It's crazy that the only voices that seem to be heard are from the extremes.

Undoubtedly, that turns people off.

The only way, however, to lessen the impact of the people that turn you off is to take the time to vote. The more people that vote, the truer representation we will have.

There's still time before Tuesday.

Make an effort to find out about the candidates and how they stand on issues that you care about. It's not hard. There is information out there — whether it is in this paper or on the Internet somewhere. Take 30 minutes and read and then take 15 minutes on Tuesday and go vote.

Make Tuesday the important day that it's supposed to be.

Want to play in the dirt?

By DORIS BEHNKE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

When was the last time you had the chance to play in the dirt? For most of us over the age of 10 it was probably years ago, but for a group of New Castle County high school students it was just days ago.

It wasn't just aimless digging in the soil, though. The students were gathered at Hickory Hill Farm in Cheswold to learn more about Delaware's soils. They took turns rotating through four different learning stations. This training session helps to prepare the team for the Delaware Envirothon Contest, which will be in May 2007.

Sponsored by a coalition of state agencies, businesses and academic institutions, Delaware Envirothon provides students with an integrated approach to exploring natural resource topics. It tests their creativity, analytical thinking and team-building skills in a competitive format. The competition takes place out in the field, with teams visiting testing stations to solve various problems.

One aspect of the Cheswold training focused on having the students and their advisors use all their senses (except for taste!) to determine the types of soils they were squishing between their fingers.

Can a soil be identified by the sound it makes? Can a ribbon be formed with all soils or just some soils?

The students who participated in the session learned

Newark woman hikes entire Appalachian Trail over 15 years

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Two weekends ago, Newark resident Debra Palermo took the last few steps in a journey she started 15 years ago.

As she hiked into Damascus, Va., flanked by friends, family and grandchildren, Palermo became an official 2,000-miler, having hiked the entire Appalachian Trail, a footpath that runs along the Appalachian Mountain ridge from Georgia to Maine.

Palermo started her journey at age 40 with a desire to spend more time outdoors. She was a novice, she admits, with no previous experience hiking or camping. She had never even slept in a tent before.

For her first hike, a 14.6-mile section of the trail, she joined the Wilmington Trail Club and decided to "wear something rugged" — a pair of blue jean shorts that were soaked through with sweat by the end of the July day, she said, laughing.

But, she wasn't deterred. She hiked another section of the trail the next month and began hiking parts of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia with two friends. Then came Virginia and parts further north and further south as time would allow.

Often, Palermo hiked with friends she had made along the trail. Sometimes, her husband would accompany her, making a fly fishing trip out of it.

The once-novice outdoors-woman could now backpack and tent camp, cook meals along the trail, hike through rain, wind, hail and all other kinds of weather, escape thunderstorms when above the tree line and even scare off a wooly bear or two.

"You become, almost, a part of nature," she said. "You're like a creature out there that has to learn to survive."

And, she said, taking in the natural scenery all around her — the flaming azaleas in North Carolina, the grassy balds in Tennessee, the moose drinking out of a pond in Maine — made the rain, and the blisters, all worth it.

Yes, there were blisters, she said. A particularly notable one appeared in Virginia when, said Palermo, the skin on the bottom of her heel pulled completely off. She wrapped it with a bandage and hobbled six miles out of the trail, where she was met by friends. The incident, and others, led her to joke about changing her trail name from "Timberdoodle" to "Blister Queen."

Palermo enjoyed the physical challenge and breathtaking views of the trail, but the friends she made in chance meetings along the way may stick with her most. "I met so many wonderful people from all over. We became friends for life," she said.

After completing the trail, Palermo had her picture taken by the Appalachian Trail Conservancy for its archives.

Newark author to appear at book fest

Weintraub

First Delaware Book Festival to be Nov. 4

Stanley Weintraub of Newark, the author of many works of military history and biography, will join authors from across the country at the first annual Delaware Book Festival in Dover this Sunday, Nov. 4.

Weintraub's many works include "MacArthur's War: Korea and the Undoing of an American Hero," "Silent Night: The Story of the World War I Christmas Truce, December 1914," and "Iron Tears: America's Struggle for Freedom, Britain's Quagmire."

His most recent work, due for release on Nov. 7, is "11 Days in December: Christmas at the Bulge, 1944." It recounts the unforgettable story of soldiers and generals embroiled in the last great battle of World War II, the Battle of the Bulge.

Weintraub will appear at the Book Festival pavilions on Legislative Mall in Dover to speak at 1:30 p.m. and sign books at 2:30 p.m.

Other authors appearing at the festival include best-selling authors Sebastian Junger ("A Perfect Storm"), Phillip Margolin ("Proof Positive" and "Gone but Not Forgotten"), Charles Todd and David Elliott ("Evangeline Mudd" and the "Great Mink Escapade").

Event to Inspire Newark

Inspire Newark, a new organization committed to improving and inspiring the Newark community, is hosting an event on Saturday, Nov. 4, from noon to 4 p.m. at the George Wilson Center.

Activities include free food, children's games and informational booths on topics, such as composting, recycling and bike building.

Inspire Newark is an online forum (www.inspirenewark.com) that allows community organizations to share information about events and solicit volunteer support and participation.

Jordan Epstein, a University of Delaware graduate, was among the forum's founders. Epstein, who studied psychology, said the idea sprang from his study of Abraham Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs. Maslow defines the highest need as self-actualization through personal growth and fulfillment.

Epstein said he hopes the forum will bring community members and organizations together to achieve goals of community development and personal fulfillment. "The more people that get involved, the more people that are inspired," he said.

the answers to these questions and much more. And they gained confidence in themselves and their abilities — a quality that will help them not only at Envirothon, but throughout their lives.

The host farm was a peaceful, bucolic setting for Envirothon training. The additional training sessions — which will concentrate on the areas of wildlife, forestry, aquatic ecology and renewable resources — will be held at equally pastoral sites.

So if you love the outdoors, the fresh country air, and are interested in learning more about the environment we live in, join a 4-H Envirothon team now. For more information, or to join a team, call the New Castle County Cooperative Extension 4-H Office at 302-831-8965 and ask for Doris Behnke.

Several of those friends joined Palermo as she hiked her last remaining section, a 73.3-mile stretch from Groseclose, Va., to Damascus, Va. She reached her goal, becoming an official 2,000-miler (something only 9,000 hikers have accomplished since 1936), but Palermo intends to continue hiking and hopes to revisit some of her favorite trail sections.

Of the journey, she said, it was all worth it. "It was an amazing challenge," she said. "The most wonderful, most amazing thing I've ever done."

Ceramics exhibit at UD

A ceramics exhibition featuring the work of Abigail Donovan, ceramic installation artist and University of Delaware faculty member, will run from now Tuesday, Nov. 21, in Recitation Hall Gallery, Main Street and North College Avenue, on UD's Newark campus.

Donovan, whose ceramic installations incorporate language and text, is a new assistant professor in ceramics in UD's Department of Art. She received her master of fine arts degree from the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan and has had a major exhibition at the Santa Monica Art Museum in California.

The show, lecture and opening reception, which are sponsored by UD's Department of Art, are free and open to the public.

For gallery hours and more information, call 831-2244.

Talk on art and slavery set at UD Nov. 2

Ikem S. Okoye, associate professor of art history at the University of Delaware, will lecture on "Captive Audience: Theorizing Art and Slavery in Late 18th- and 19th-Century Near Coastal West and Central Africa," at 5:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 2, in Room 006 of the Willard Hall Education Building, West Main Street and North College Avenue, on UD's Newark campus.

The lecture, part of the Department of Art History lecture series, "Liminal Visions, Elusive Objects," is free and open to the public. An informal question-and-answer session will follow the talk.

Okoye has lectured and written extensively on the architecture, sculpture and history and theory of space in Africa in the modern era.

For more information, call 831-8415.

UD Frankenstein expert appears on History Channel

Charles Robinson, University of Delaware professor of English, appeared in a new History Channel program, "Decoding the Past: In Search of the Real Frankenstein," discussing the original manuscript of Mary Shelley's 1818 novel, Frankenstein, or the Modern Prometheus, on which the popular character is based, on Sunday, Oct. 29, on the History Channel.

The program was filmed at the Bodleian Library and the Clarendon Building at Oxford University in August by Wild Dreams Films, Robinson said.

"The Bodleian Library has a draft of the novel and fair copy, which was edited by Mary Shelley's husband, the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley," Robinson said. "It was marvelous to be in the presence of the manuscripts that I have worked with."

Robinson said that there are several reasons why the character of Frankenstein originally captured the attention of readers in 1818, and why it has continued to reverberate in the consciousness of modern culture.

"The novel obtained epic significance early on, because it explored the various myths of the results of the dangerous pursuit of knowledge, as exemplified in the biblical story of Adam and Eve and in John Milton's Paradise Lost," Robinson said. "Today, the name Frankenstein also is invoked as a cautionary tale when people are debating the implications of scientific pursuits such as cloning."

Of the many films that have portrayed Mary Shelley's creation, Robinson said that his favorites are Frankenstein (1931), directed by James Whale and starring Colin Clive, Mae Clark, and of course, Boris Karloff as the monster, and Young Frankenstein (1974), directed by Mel Brooks and starring Gene Wilder, Madeline Kahn and Peter Boyle.

"There also have been some not so good versions of Frankenstein," Robinson said. "The real version of Frankenstein that is true to Mary Shelley's novel has yet to be made."

A graduate of Mount Saint Mary's College, Robinson received his doctorate from Temple University.

Charles Robinson, professor of English, is an internationally known expert on Mary Shelley's 1818 novel, 'Frankenstein, or the Modern Prometheus.'

UD planner receives career achievement award

Ed O'Donnell, a policy scientist in the University of Delaware's Institute for Public Administration, received the Peter Larson Memorial Achievement Award at a joint conference of the Delaware and Maryland chapters of the American Planning Association held earlier this month. O'Donnell, of Newark, is a member of the American Institute of Certified Planners.

"Throughout his 41-year planning career, Ed O'Donnell has become an expert in land use planning, growth management, infrastructure and community facilities, natural-resource protection, state growth-management policies and intergovernmental coordination," Tigist Zegeye, executive director of Wilmington Area Planning Council (WILMAPCO) said in nominating O'Donnell for the award.

"I'm delighted by this recognition," O'Donnell said. "It's particularly meaningful for me to receive an award that honors Peter Larson, a visionary city planner who guided the development of Wilmington during turbulent times in the late 1960s and the 1970s."

Before joining the Institute for Public Administration as a planner who guided the development of Wilmington during turbulent times in the late 1960s and the 1970s."

Before joining the Institute for Public Administration as a policy scientist in July 2005, O'Donnell served as a planner for the Montgomery County (Pa.) Planning Commission, the Wilmington Metropolitan Planning Organization and the New Castle County Department of Land Use.

"Ed O'Donnell is an outstanding planner whose knowledge and skills are continuing to benefit the state and region through his work with the Institute for Public Administration," Tim Barnekov, dean of the College of Human Services, Education and Public Policy, said. "Equally important are the contributions Ed makes by sharing his knowledge and skills with graduate students in the School of Urban Affairs and Public Policy."

The regional planning conference, held Oct. 4-6 in Wilmington, was co-sponsored by the Delaware Humanities Forum and AARP Delaware.

UD alums honored for excellence

Gregory F. Lavelle, managing director of Puglisi & Associates in Newark, and Stoyan Tenev, lead economist for the East Asia and Pacific Region of The World Bank Group's International Finance Corporation (IFC), received Alumni Awards of Excellence on Oct. 13, in the Chaplin Tyler Atrium at Alfred Lerner Hall.

Lavelle has been with Puglisi & Associates since 1987. His major responsibilities are investment management and accounting for a group of the firm's clients. A long-time civic and nonprofit organization volunteer, Lavelle was first elected to the Delaware House of Representatives, 11th District, in 2000 and re-elected in 2002 and 2004. He currently serves on the board of directors of the Delaware Council on Economic Education and Westside Health Service and serves on the advisory board of Fresh Start Scholarship Foundation. He has been actively involved over the years with a number of civic associations and other community organizations including Girls Incorporated of Delaware.

Lavelle graduated from UD in 1987 with a bachelor of science in business administration with concentrations in both finance and marketing. He also earned his master of governmental administration in 1995 from the University of Pennsylvania and his certified cash manager designation from the Treasury Management Association.

Tenev is responsible for strategy, development, economic analysis, and technical assistance in East Asia and the Pacific. He also participated in the design and implementation of IFC's strategic response to the Asian financial crisis, which led to a sharp increase in IFC's program and cumulative investments of over $2 billion in Korea, Thailand, Indonesia and Philippines.

He graduated from UD in 1993 with a master's degree in economics. He also has a bachelor of science from Varna University of Economics in Bulgaria, and earned his doctorate in economics in 1998 from the University of Maryland. He is fluent in Bulgarian, French, Russian and English.

Ballot includes national, state-level candidates

► ELECTION, from 1

Assembly and New Castle County races.

Delaware voters will decide whether to return Senator Tom R. Carper, a Democrat, to the U.S. Senate or send one of his two opponents, Republican Jan Ting or Libertarian William E. Morris.

Congressman Michael Castle, a Republican, is up for re-election to his seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. He faces three opponents, Democrat Dennis Spivack, Green Party candidate Michael Berg and Karen M. Hartley-Nagle, an independent Democrat.

Other statewide races include the hotly-contested fight for attorney general between Democrat Joseph "Beau" Biden and Republican Ferris Wharton. State Treasurer Jack Markell is up for re-election, facing opposition from Republican Stell Parker Selby, and State Auditor Tom Wagner, a Republican, will go head-to-head against Michael John Dalto, a Democrat.

At the state level, Newark area residents will have their say in a number of contested races. Voters in state representative District 25 will choose again between incumbent Republican State Rep. Stephanie Ulbrich and Democratic challenger John Kowalko.

In District 18, Republican

State Rep. Terry Spence faces Mike Barbieri, a Democrat. Two candidates are vying to represent the Glasgow area in District 27, State Rep. Vincent A. Lofink, R-27, and Democratic challenger Earl Jaques.

In the eighth Senate district, which includes parts of northern Newark along Paper Mill Road, Possum Park Road and W. Chapel Hill Drive, State Sen. David Sokola, D-8, will attempt to head off a challenge by Republican candidate Mike Ramone. (For more information about state races, see the Oct. 27 Newark Post.)

Newark's State Rep. Terry Schooley, D-23, is up for re-election but does not have anyone running against her.

New Castle County offices up for a vote include recorder of deeds, register of wills and sheriff. Democrat Stephanie McClellan, a Kells Avenue resident and professor at the University of Delaware, is running, unopposed, for the District 5 New Castle County Council seat, which represents Newark.

After the polls close Tuesday, Newarkers can track local election results on the state elections Web site, <http://elections.delaware.gov/>. To find your polling place, visit the Web site, or call 1-866-276-2353.

Antique bottle show and sale Sunday

The Tri-State Bottle Collectors and Diggers Club will hold its annual show and sale at Singerly Fire Hall in Elkton, Md., on Sunday, Nov. 5. This year's event is scheduled from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. Admission fee is $2, with children under 12 free with an adult.

Sixty-five collectors from Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Virginia will present 88 tables of bottles, jars, stoneware, small tabletop antiques, advertising and other memorabilia and collectibles. Bottles will include milk, beer, soda, food jars, poisons, medicine and more.

The show includes educational displays to explain the history of containers used by Delaware and Maryland dairies and Wilmington bottlers.

The Tri-State Bottle Collectors and Diggers Club is a non-profit group whose purpose is the promotion of the hobby of antique bottle collecting. For more information, contact Dave Brown at 738-9960.

Democratic candidates push healthcare issue

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Less than two weeks before election day, local Democratic candidates for the state legislature spoke out on the issue of healthcare, saying they were committed to reform.

Joined by U.S. Senator Tom Carper, D-Del., and Delaware's Insurance Commissioner Matt Denn, they discussed the "growing healthcare crisis in Delaware" and three reform bills that did not pass the House in 2006.

Senate Bill 146 would have created a statewide health insurance purchasing pool; Senate Bill 236 would have allowed Delaware to regulate rates charged by health insurance companies to ensure they weren't excessive. A third bill would have limited the ability of homeowners and auto insurance companies to use credit ratings when calculating insurance rates.

"Unfortunately, at the end of the day, these bills were stopped in a partisan fashion," said Commissioner Denn.

Earl Jaques, Democratic challenger for Glasgow's Representative District 27, said, "It's time for a change. Delaware needs a new direction for more affordable healthcare."

He pointed out the high cost of health insurance to employers, and the recent news of Daimler-Chrysler's financial struggle.

"While we know that the plant will stay open, it highlights a problem that many businesses have: skyrocketing healthcare costs are driving small and large businesses to new extremes, by cutting benefits, reducing staff or moving," he said.

John Kowalko, Democratic candidate for Representative District 25, spoke to these concerns as well. "Chrysler execs have stated that the cost of private health care insurance adds $1,300 to the cost of each vehicle," said Kowalko. "Implementing universal health care coverage would likely allow businesses such as Chrysler to stay in Delaware and attract new businesses."

Healthcare reform has been a favorite talking point among Democratic candidates this campaign season, and at least one voter in the 25th Representative District is all ears.

Kathy Devincentis of Newark, a registered nurse and breast cancer survivor, said she is soon to be uninsured. She left her job while being treated for cancer and said her temporary insurance is about to expire.

Though she's healthy and considered to be "cured," Devincentis has been unable to find an affordable insurance provider and is not yet eligible for Medicare benefits. "It's been impossible for me to replace my health insurance," she said.

Photography Studio chosen for March of Dimes calendar

Creative Image Associates studio in Newark was recently selected as the photographer of record for the 2007 March of Dimes Faces of Prematurity Calendar. The calendar is a major fundraising effort for the March of Dimes, whose mission is to prevent infant mortality and improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects and premature births. This is the second consecutive year that the firm has been chosen to photo-

The Faces of Prematurity Calendar features thirteen babies and children from Delaware who have been directly affected by the March of Dimes and its mission. It also pays tribute to those babies, who despite medical advances, did not survive due to a birth defect or premature birth. "We were honored to be selected to photograph these precious children who have already overcome so much at their young age," said Creative Image Associates founder Bob Horton.

According to the most recent March of Dimes statistics, in 2003, there were 1,554 preterm births in Delaware, representing 13.7% of live births. Babies born too soon and too small struggle to survive those first few weeks and sometimes months of life. They are more likely to have developmental delays, chronic respiratory problems, and vision or hearing impairment.

"It is our hope that this calendar will help raise awareness of the growing problem of premature birth in Delaware," explained Creative Image Associates partner Tim Dishong. "This is some of the most meaningful and rewarding work we've ever done."

"Bob and Tim spent countless hours photographing children from Delaware who were born too soon for our Faces of Prematurity Calendar. Without them, this wonderful mission piece would not have been possible," said Dina Handwerk of the March of Dimes, Delaware Chapter.

For more than 25 years, Creative Image Associates has been distinguished by an innovative mix of classic and photo-journalistic styles. The award-winning studio provides photography for a wide range of occasions including children's and family portraits, corporate and event photography, and weddings.

Temporary plans made for Hockessin Library

Library will move during renovation

Plans have been announced for the temporary relocation of the Hockessin Library during its renovation and expansion.

The Hockessin Library will close on Dec. 31 and re-open at its temporary home on Jan. 16, 2007, in the Community Activity Center at the Hockessin P.A.L. Center. The temporary library at 7259 Lancaster Pike in Hockessin, is approximately one-half mile from its current location.

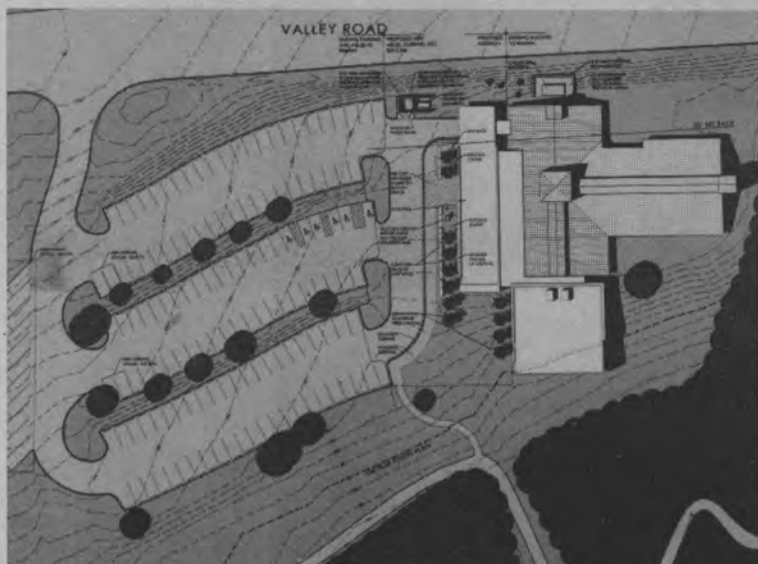

"After considering several locations for a temporary library, we chose the Community Activity Center in the Hockessin Police Athletic League Center because it is a safe, convenient location for the community, and it is cost-effective," said New Castle County Executive Chris Coons. "This temporary library relocation presents us with an opportunity to introduce residents to the many activities that make our Hockessin P.A.L. Community Activity Center a great place for children and adults to learn and play."

The current facility opened in 1994, prior to the automation of the county library system and the significant growth in housing in the Hockessin area.

The library renovation project will include the construction of 8,420 square feet of additional space, as well as the installation of a new HVAC system for the entire building.

The $7.9 million project will take 15 months to complete and will re-open to the public in the spring of 2008.

Former golf, UD reporter writes book

A Newark resident, Tomashek covered Blue Hens and area golf scene

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

There's a newly published book about baseball that's sure to be a hit with fans around the country.

Local resident and sportswriter Tom Tomashek has co-authored a book entitled "Town Ball -- The Glory Days of Minnesota's Amateur Baseball."

Tomashek's long-time friend and business associate Armand Peterson, helped with putting the project together. It took about three years to finish.

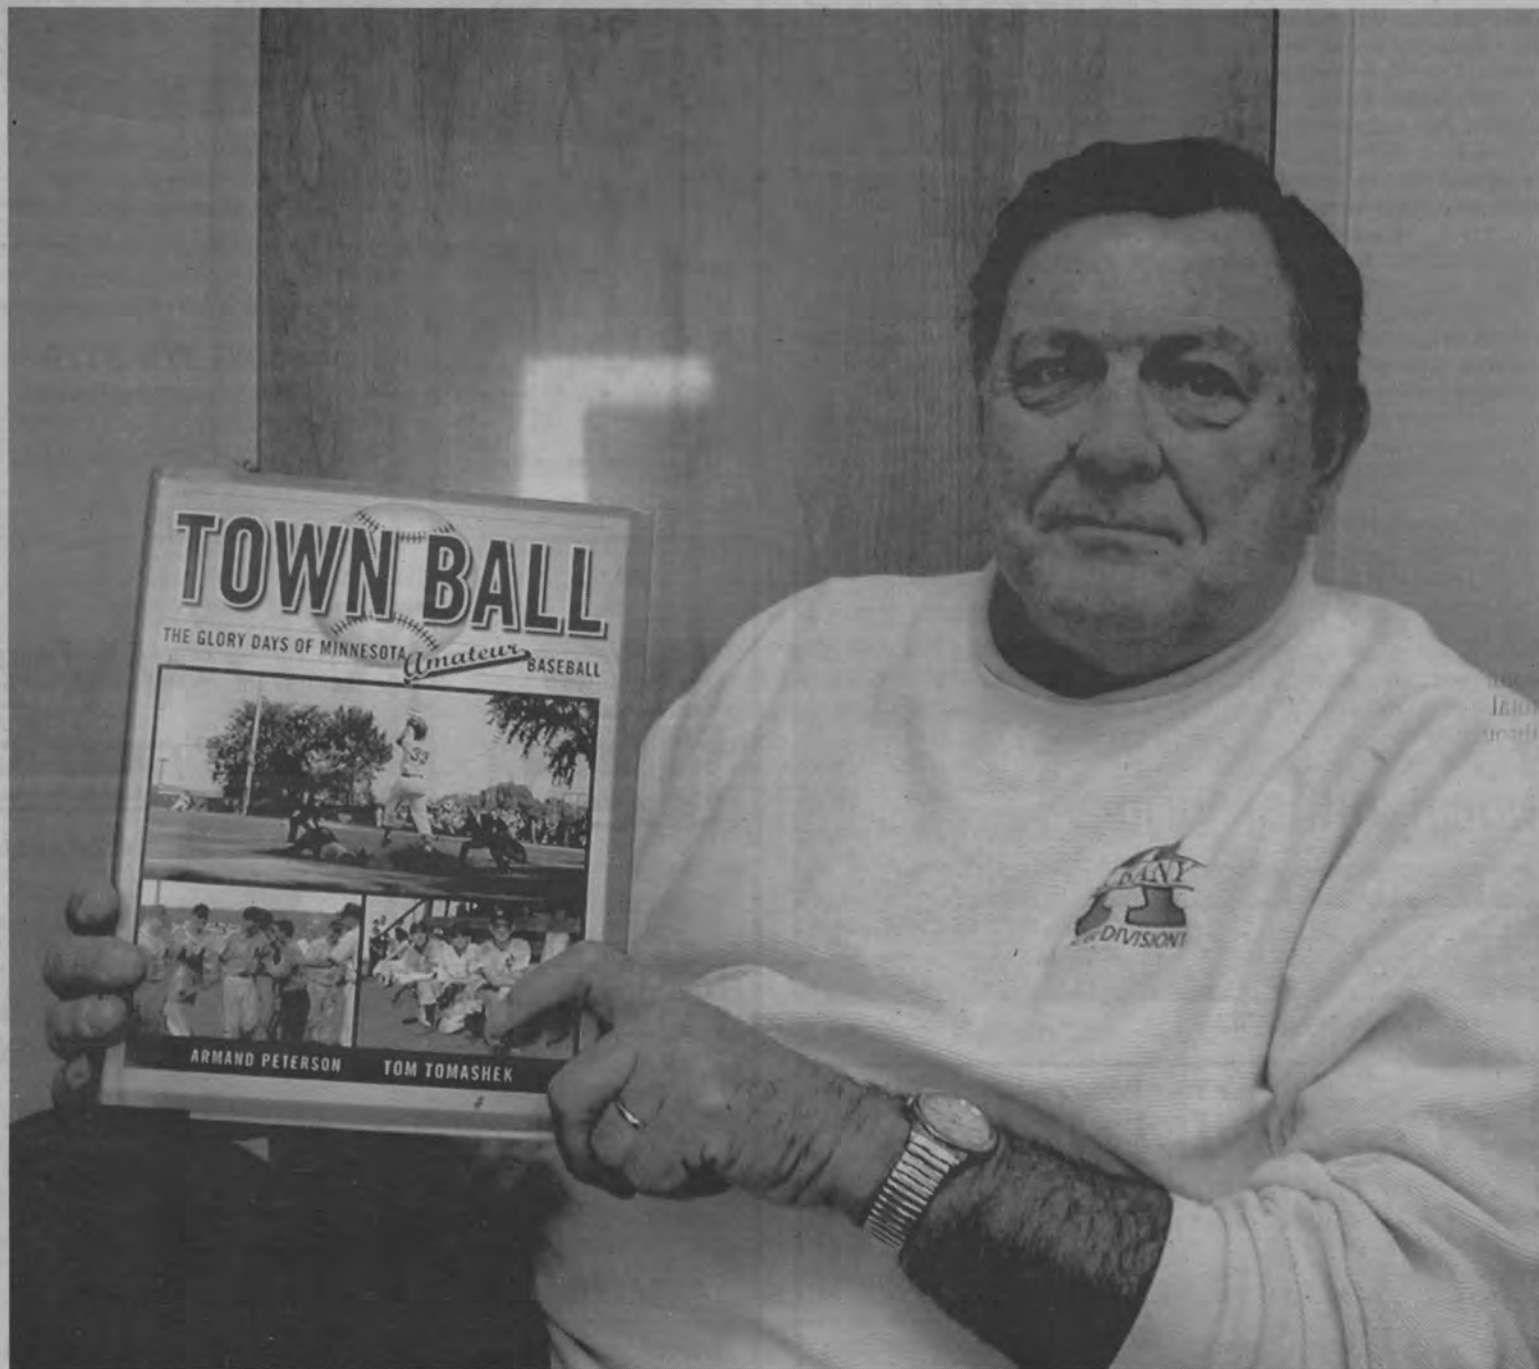

The book is published by the University of Minnesota Press.

"When we began the book, they asked us to write about 100,000 words," said the 65-year-old Tomashek. "When it was finished, it was about 160,000, but we finally carved out about 30,000 words."

The book details the glory years, 1945 through 1960, when "Town Ball" was a way of life every summer in the small town of Hutchinson, Minnesota.

Town Ball was a very good brand of baseball played by college age, and professional players up to the age of 40. It gave the players a chance to play baseball and earn some money after World War II.

Tomashek, who grew up in Minnesota, says a number of now-famous people played baseball during Town Ball's golden era.

Newark resident Tom Tomashek, who long covered University of Delaware sports, co-authored a book about Minnesota town baseball.

Glasgow shuts out Newark, now eyes tourney berth

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Glasgow's all-purpose running back Barren Griffin scored three touchdowns to lead the Dragons to a 22-0 home victory over Newark Friday night.

Griffin, who helped re-introduce the single-wing offense to high school football two weeks ago against Middletown, ran for 245 yards on 39 carries on the cold, blustery and rainy evening.

The Newark loss means the Yellowjackets, (3-5 overall, and 2-3 in Flight A), will not have a winning season for the first time in more than a decade.

Glasgow, meanwhile, improved its record to 6-2 and 4-1 in conference. The Dragons have a serious shot at making the state tournament now, especially if they win their last two games against conference rivals Delcastle and Christiana.

After a scoreless first period, Griffin went to work pounding the ball inside, and occasionally sliding outside, despite the sloppy conditions.

Early in the quarter Griffin scored on a four-yard run. Then as the first half was winding down, he took a pitchout and polished off a 40-yard dash to build a 14-0 lead. He also added a two-point conversion on the second touchdown.

Newark's offense was unable to operate against the stingy Dragon defense for most of the night.

The Jackets were only to make about 115 yards total offense, with about one-third of the total coming in the fourth quarter after the game's outcome had been decided.

Griffin capped the scoring midway through the fourth quarter when he galloped 36 yards for the Dragons final score of the game.

Newark hosts Flight A opponent Christiana Friday night at Hoffman Stadium, beginning at 7 p.m.

The Dragons are on the road Saturday morning to play Delcastle. Kickoff is scheduled for 10:30 a.m.

William Penn rallies to knock off Christiana

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

William Penn stayed atop the Blue Hen Conference Flight A standings with a narrow 18-12 victory over Christiana Monday afternoon on the Vikings home turf.

The game had to be rescheduled from Saturday due to heavy rains in the morning, and unplayable field conditions.

The Colonials are 6-2 overall, and 6-0 in Flight A.

Christiana's record dropped to 3-5, with a 3-2 conference mark.

"We knew this was going to be a tough game," said William Penn quarterback Mel Robinson. "We knew it was important to win this game, and our team played hard all day long."

Robinson was an offense and defensive star of the game, directing a solid running attack, and mixing in the occasional pass to keep the hard-hitting Viking defense honest.

Robinson also scored the game-winning touchdown with 2:15 left in the game on a 1-yard keeper. Robinson's run capped off a nine-play, 40-yard drive that was set up by his interception of a Ryan Scully pass with less than six minutes remaining in the fourth quarter.

On the day, Robinson had three interceptions to help keep Christiana's offense from going into high gear.

The Vikings opened the contest with an impressive 14-play, 55-yard drive that consumed more than half of the first quarter.

Christiana's Dallas Brown scored the first of his two touchdowns at 5:33 of the period on an eight-yard run around the right side. A two-point pass attempt failed, giving the Vikings a 6-0 lead that would hold up through halftime.

The Colonials put together a solid drive at the end of the first half, but a last-second pass into the end zone was batted away by several Viking defenders.

Penn came roaring out in the second half, and scored on the second play from scrimmage, when Brian Fields ran 54 yards to tie the score 6-6.

Christiana regained the lead with 10 seconds left in the third quarter when Brown scored from one yard out. His second TD capped an 11-play, 68-yard drive.

Brown finished the day with 136 yards on 30 carries. He reportedly has more than 1,500 yards rushing on the season with two games to play.

In the decisive fourth quarter, Fields scored his second touchdown on a nine-yard scamper at the 8:03 mark to tie the game at 12-12.

Christiana travels to Newark Friday night to play the 3-5 Yellowjackets at 7 p.m.

William Penn hosts 7-1 St. Mark's Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., before wrapping up the regular season against Middletown on Friday, November 10.

Blue Hens fall to Towson for second straight year

The University of Delaware came up short in an Atlantic 10 Football Conference aerial battle Saturday afternoon as Towson sophomore quarterback Sean Schaefer threw for 435 yards and five touchdowns to lead the Tigers to a 49-35 upset victory over the No. 25 ranked Blue Hens at wind swept Delaware Stadium.

Despite the gusty winds, Schaefer and Delaware's Joe Flacco had few problems moving through the defenses. The teams combined for 84 points and 1,018 total yards, including 776 yards through the air.

Towson (6-2, 3-2 A-10), which scored touchdown on its first four possession of the second half and on 7 of its first 10 for the game, remained in contention for post-season action as the Tigers exploded for a season-high 627 total yards, the third highest total ever against Delaware and the second highest amount against UD in the 54-year history of Delaware Stadium.

Schaefer, who has now thrown at least one touchdown pass in all 18 career games, completed 27 of 37 passes for 435 yards and matched his career-high with the five touchdown passes, including three to wide receiver Eric Yancey. Towson, a third-year member of the league, downed the Hens for the second straight season as they posted their highest point total since a 50-19 win over Lock Haven in 2003.

The 435 yards was the fourth highest total ever against a Delaware defense. Yancey caught nine passes for 140 yards and three touchdowns while Demetrius Harrison had six catches for 128 yards and two scores. Nick Williams added 86 yards and a touchdown on the ground.

"We threw everything at them," said Delaware head coach K.C. Keeler. "It's difficult to match a team that is playing that well offensively. We just couldn't generate a pass rush against a team with a tremendous quarterback and great skill players. We couldn't afford to let them throw the ball around but we did. We made some mistakes we hadn't made the last two weeks and that was frustrating. You just can't ask your offense to score every time they get the ball but that's what we had to do."

Delaware (4-4, 2-3 A-10), which had a two-game win streak snapped, lost for the second time in five home games this season despite a big offensive effort themselves. The Hens piled up 454 total yards of offense, the second highest total this season, as Flacco hit on 32 of a school record 51 passes for 341 yards and four touchdowns - all career highs. His passing yardage was the 10th highest mark in school history. Aaron Love caught 12 passes for 126 yards and a touchdown and Ben Patrick caught seven balls for 74 yards and a score.

"No doubt this is our biggest road win in conference play since joining the league and it keeps our playoff hopes alive," said Towson head coach Gordy Combs, whose team downed Delaware for the second straight year. "Sean is unbelievable, our offensive line does a good job, and we have great receivers. I don't care about all the yards we got today, the bottom line is we got the win."

Local author writes Minnesota baseball book

► TOMASHEK, from 20

"The list is quite extensive and includes Bud Grant, Moose Skowron, Herb Score, Gordy Coleman and "Sad" Sam Jones," he said.

There's a few other well-known people who played baseball in Minnesota including seven members of the original Minneapolis Lakers basketball team, and Herb Brooks, who later became a famous ice hockey coach, coaching the 1980 U.S. Olympic "Miracle on Ice" gold-medal winning hockey team, and in the National Hockey League.

Another player who went on to become a Hall of Fame coach in another sport is the legendary Harold R. "Tubby" Raymond, who coached the University of Delaware football team for more than three decades.

Raymond was noted in the book as "The Hustling Catcher from Michigan."

A few other notables are Dick Durrell, the co-founder of People Magazine, and Howie Schultz, who played a number of years for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Schultz was a platoon first baseman and was eventually replaced in the Dodger lineup by Hall of Fame player Jackie Robinson.

Tomashek said Town Ball is still doing well up north, but it is no longer the town's major entertainment attraction.

"After the Twins came to Minnesota in the early 1960s, people still watched, but their attention was then diverted to Major League Baseball, and other things including television and the influx of mass transportation," said Tomashek.

The publisher has printed 3,000 copies so far, and Tomashek said there's an order for another 2,000 just in time for the holidays.

"Town Ball" is now available through bookstores, on line or through Tomashek, who lives in Newark.

IN THE NEWS

Not all bad news for Christina

The Christina District released a statement this week noting successes earned in the past year by teachers, administrators and students despite the projected budget deficit.

Highlights include:

- The District received a Federal NCLB (No Child Left Behind) rating of "Commendable."

- Three of the six teachers in the state selected as finalists for the 2006 Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching are from the Christina District.

- Two of the three schools in the state nominated as Blue Ribbon Schools are in the Christina District.

- The only two schools in the state chosen for recognition by a national Title I organization to receive $10,000 grants for sustained student progress are in the Christina District.

- Nine schools in Christina District have been selected as Positive Behavior Support "Star" Schools.

"For the last six months the public's focus has been on our financial recovery, and rightly so," said school superintendent Lillian Lowery. "However, it is very important for the public to know that great teaching and learning have continued to take place in our schools, despite the distractions and negative publicity."

Each year, guidelines issued by the U.S. Department of Education and the Delaware Department of Education determine the rating of each District by the Annual Yearly Progress (AYP) at each grade level under the No Child Left Behind Law. Christina's rating of "Commendable" is an improvement over its rating of "Academic Review" in 2005.

"Schools worked extremely hard to meet the requirements for AYP this past year, and it shows," said the District's supervisor of curriculum and instruction, Helen Spacht. "We are really beginning to use our data effectively to tell us exactly where we need to improve."

Six Delaware teachers were honored at a banquet this week for receiving the Delaware Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and for being selected as finalists in the national program administered for the White House by the National Science Foundation. Although Brandywine and Appoquinimink school districts also had nominees for these prestigious awards, Christina boasted three out of the six teachers nominated statewide: Beverly Jordan of Wilson Elementary, JoAnne Deshon of Downes Elementary and Karen Fredricks of Marshall Elementary.

Two out of three schools in the state nominated as Blue Ribbon Schools are in the Christina School District: Wilson Elementary School and McVey Elementary School. Schools qualify to be nominated if at least 40 percent of the students are disadvantaged, the school met or exceeded Annual Yearly Progress, students in sub-groups show dramatic improvement, students' achievement is at least at the 60th percentile or higher in the highest grade tested, and achievement scores have been disaggregated by race, socioeconomic group and special education for the last four years. This is a national competition overseen by the U.S. Department of Education.

Wilson Elementary School and McVey Elementary School were also selected by the National Association of Title I Directors (NASTID) for the National Title I Schools Recognition Program. Each state may nominate two schools for recognition, and this year, both schools were in Christina.

Wilson was nominated for exceeding its adequate yearly progress for two or more years, and McVey was nominated for significantly closing the achievement gap between student groups. The awards to be presented in January 2007 each include a $10,000 grant to continue to implement the improvements that have proven successful.

In 2005-2006, Christina added three more "Star" schools to its growing list of schools recognized by the Delaware Positive Behavior Support Initiative, a collaborative project between the University of Delaware Center for Disability Studies and the Delaware Department of Education.

Positive Behavior Support is a school-wide strategy for establishing a positive and safe school climate that promotes academic, social, and emotional development for all students. The District's nine Star schools for 2005-2006 are Downes Elementary, Gallaher Elementary, Keene Elementary, Smith Elementary, Wilson Elementary, Stubbs Intermediate, Shue-Medill Middle, Delaware School for the Deaf and Newark High School.

trators had very little input in that budget. "The budget was done at a very high level by the state Financial Recovery Team and [consultants] Alvarez and Marsal," she told the District's Financial Review Team last month. "I don't really know how they came up with it. Now, we are trying to break it down into months."

Included in the budget was a section entitled "Budget Assumptions: Non-Personnel Spending Reductions/ Eliminations vs. FY06, Computers/Technology Programs: Computers & Technology Contracts Eliminations in Unrestricted Only." This section documents proposed cost reductions in the area of technology services.

The technology services department determined that by reducing the number of computers, the district could save money in licensing fees, maintenance costs, and technical support costs. This Computer Removal Project would save the district $70,000 in licensing costs, $70,000 in maintenance costs, and an estimated $160,000 on technical support and contracted staffing costs.

According to administrators, the District has one computer for every three students in high schools and one for every five students in elementary schools. School superintendent Lillian Lowery said these numbers are in line with national norms.

When District staff began implementing the Computer Removal Project, however, they received a large amount of push-back from school administrators, teachers, parents, students and others. "At the request of the school board, we are revisiting all options in regard to the computers," Lowery told the Financial Review Team. "We don't have any monies other than what is there now, however, and we've just learned there is another audit coming out with more deficit numbers. (See Newark Post, Oct. 20 issue).

Boardmember John

Mackenzie also told the Team that all the funding for technology must come from local monies. "The state does not pay any dollars for technology in Delaware schools," Mackenzie stated.

Dick-Frederick said the District is also researching other computer software than Microsoft's for which the licensing fees are paid. "Some Districts are using Linux," she said. "But that's more upfront costs, so we have to look at it more."

Eric S. Burke

Eric S. Burke, 49, of Newark, died on Monday, Oct. 23, 2006.

Burke was born in Alexandria, Va., on May 19, 1957, the son of Joseph Burke and the late Eleanor Burke. He made Newark his home for 40 years, where he graduated from Christiana High School in 1975 and has been a member of Holy Family Church since 1986. He was co-owner of Eric S. Burke Custom Home Improvement Company, Newark for more than 20 years.

Burke is survived by his wife, Sharon; daughter, Erica; son, Stephen; father, Joseph Burke and his companion, Pat Gestwicki, of Bear; stepmother, Andrée Burke of Falls Church, Va.; brothers, Joseph Jr. of Bulger, Pa., Brennan of New Castle, and Kevin of Stafford, Va.; sister, Robin Zahory of Centreville, Va.; mother-in-law, Vera Passmore of Florida,

Jeanne Hagerty, 60, longtime city clerk

Jeanne D. Hagerty, 60, of Newark, died on Wednesday, Oct. 25, 2006, surrounded by her family.

Born in Chester, Pa., the daughter of the late John and Jennie Hueston, she graduated from P.S. Dupont High School in 1964. For 31 years, she served the city of Newark as a secretary for the building department. She also worked part time at Millcroft Nursing Home for the last 15 years.

Colleagues in the city's building department remember Hagerty as a soft-spoken, caring and patient employee who was dedicated to her family, friends and to serving the people of Newark.

"Her unofficial title was the 'matriarch of the municipality,'" said Building Director Tom Sciulli. "I think there's only about four or five people in the whole city government that have more time on the job than she did."

Sciulli, who joined the department in January 2006, said Hagerty took him under her wing. Her "institutional knowledge" of city government will be missed and impossible to replace, he said.

"I am truly going to miss her," said Sciulli. "She really made an impact on me in the short amount of time I was here."

Co-worker Linda Sprintz described Hagerty as a "patient teacher who always had time to explain something or research an issue in order to find the answer." Rosemarie Beron said of her friend, "She had a heart of gold. Always ready to help, listen and be there for you."

"Jeanne's smile," said co-worker Pat Fogg, "could be seen almost from the other end of the hall because it lit up her beautiful face. She was dedicated to her family, her friends and the city of Newark...I am privileged to be called her friend, and I hope she knows that her heart has touched so many of us."

In addition to her colleagues and the many customers she served, Hagerty will be dearly missed by her daughters and sons-in-law, Jacque and Steve Wilson and Heather and Jeff Sobolewski, all of Newark. Also surviving are her grandchildren, Jeremy, Sydney and Ryley; her former spouse, Joe Hagerty, and many dear friends.

A funeral service was held on Tuesday, Oct. 31, at St. Margaret of Scotland Church in Newark. Burial followed in All Saints Cemetery in Wilmington.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. Margaret of Scotland Building Fund at 230 Executive Drive Suite 8, Newark, DE 19702 or to the Ronald McDonald House, 1901 Rockland Road, Wilmington, DE 19803.

Madison Grace Brown

Madison Grace Brown, one month, died at Christiana Hospital on Wednesday, Oct. 25, 2006.

Born on Tuesday, Sept. 5, Brown was the daughter of Regina Hawthorne and Jason W. Brown. She is survived by her grandparents, Robert L. Hawthorne III, Kathy Campbell, Linda Brechtel, and Grace Anagnostou; her great-grandparents, Mary and Robert Hawthorne Jr., Mildred Sapp and Betty Quirolgico; and her uncle, Captain Alexander T. Hawthorne.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday, Nov. 1, at Mealey

Funeral Home, Limestone and Milltown Roads, Wilmington. Interment will be private.

John H. Johnston

John H. Johnston, 53, of Newark, died on Tuesday, Oct. 24, 2006.

Johnston was born in Bowling Green, Ohio, on April 18, 1953. He was a graduate of McKean High School class of 1971 and attended Bryant College and the University of Delaware. Johnston farmed with his wife, Melissa, at Pike Creek Hill Stables. He worked at Agway Farm and Garden and then at Info Systems as a cable technician.

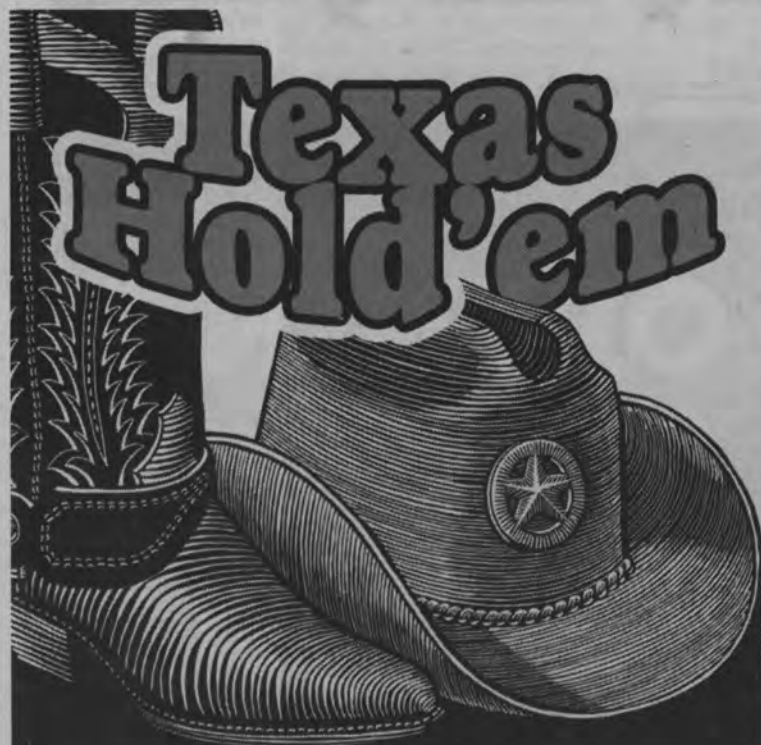

Johnston was predeceased by his parents Herschel and Ruth Johnston. He is survived by his wife of 23 years, Melissa Molitor Johnston; his son, Andrew; and daughter, Jessica; his brother, Michael; sisters, Michelle Bogard and her husband, Roger and Melissa Potter and her husband, David; and his father and mother-in-law, Joseph and Janice Molitor.

A memorial service was held at Ebenezer United Methodist Church, 525 Polly Drummond Hill Road, Newark, on Saturday Oct. 28.

Contributions may be made to The Children's Educational Fund c/o WSFS, 4730 Limestone Road, Wilmington, DE 19808; or Delaware Hospice, 3515 Silverside Road, Clayton Bldg., Suite 100, Wilmington, DE 19810.

Knights of Columbus honors Newark Police veteran

A four-year Newark Police veteran who captured a three-time bank robber May 3 was honored for his outstanding performance to the Newark community at the Knights of Columbus St. Michael's Council #4548 recognition ceremony on Monday, Oct. 23.

Cpl. Joseph Kendrick's actions in apprehending this robber were highlighted by Captain Rick Williams, who called officer Kendrick a very dedicated member of the Newark Police Department.

The Knights of Columbus are proud to recognize officer Kendrick and his fellow officers for their outstanding service to the city of Newark, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

REAL ESTATE

Of Leatherface, a haunted farmhouse and the "Red Lady"

By David Myers
About Real Estate

Dear Mr. Myers: I see that there's yet another "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" movie that was recently released. But is it really based on a true story, like its movie trailers say? If so, is the farmhouse where all the murders supposedly occurred still standing?

ANSWER: First, there never was a chainsaw massacre in Texas, or any other state. But one of the movie's main characters — the horrifying Leatherface, who likes to wear masks made from the skin of his murder victims — is indeed based on real-life killer Ed Gein, who some say still haunts the area around his former Midwestern farm and the cemetery where he's buried.

When a local sheriff arrived at Gein's farmhouse outside Plainfield, Wis., in 1957, there was no way he could have known what to expect. Inside was the naked body of a local woman — beheaded, disemboweled and hung upside down from a ceiling beam like a deer that had been slaughtered.

Among the sheriff's other discoveries were a soup bowl fashioned from a human skull, as well as chairs and even clothing made of human skin.

The remains of an estimated

15 other people were found at the farmhouse. Gein eventually admitted to killing two, and stunned authorities by telling them about his fondness for stealing body parts or even entire corpses from freshly dug graves. He also explained how he enjoyed wearing the shirt and other garments he had made of skin while lounging about his house.

Gein was eventually found guilty of first-degree murder and was sent to a state-run mental hospital, where he died of cancer in 1984.

After he was arrested, the farmhouse where Gein performed most of his unspeakable acts burned to the ground. Inspectors believed the blaze was the work of vengeful neighbors, but no arson charges were ever filed.

Gein not only inspired the Leatherface character in "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre," but also serial killer Buffalo Bill in "The Silence of the Lambs." His life story was also the basis for the movie "Psycho."

The killer is buried in a Plainfield cemetery, right next to his domineering mother and mere yards from some of the very graves he robbed more than four decades ago.

Some local residents have reported seeing a number of ghostly figures roaming the area throughout the years, including that of a headless woman and a gaunt man dressed in 1950s-style clothing, who some believe is the specter of Gein himself.

AUCTION

IMMEDIATE POSSESSION SUBJECT TO CONFIRMATION

Seven (7) Acre Farmette
On The Scenic Octoraro Creek
4 Bedroom House • 2 Car Garage
900 Feet of Road & River Frontage
468 Horseshoe Road,
Rising Sun, MD

PREVIEW: Sunday, October 29, 1-3 p.m.
AUCTION: Saturday, November 4 at 11 a.m.

This 7.17 acre property is divided by Horseshoe Road and borders the Octoraro Creek to the south. The road frontage to the north has been fenced including the river so this field could be used for pasture. There is a lofting shed on this parcel of land. The remaining land has been fenced but has not been used in years and is overgrown plus some standing timber. To stand anywhere on this parcel you have a view of the river and the sound carries about the property. Dwelling is a farm house with open country kitchen, four bedrooms, two bathrooms. The porch provides a picturesque view of the river and wildlife at play. The rear porch is covered with a deck off the second floor with steps to ground level. A 24'x24' garage is located to the west side. There were plans for a circular drive but all has been left as the dreams faded away. The river runs clear, great fishing, canoeing, kayaking or afternoon swim. It's country and the rear property line adjoins over 500 acres owned by the Boy Scouts. This open space adds to the beauty and the multitude of wildlife. Yes! This property is a diamond in the rough and is waiting for a NEW OWNER.

DIRECTIONS: From Delaware Rt. 273 to U.S. Rt. 1 south one mile to Horseshoe Road on right to the property. Harford County take Rt. 1 four miles north of the Conowingo Dam to Horseshoe Road on left. It is 1.2 miles to the property.

TERMS: $25,000.00 at time of auction. Settlement within sixty (60) days. Available for immediate possession.

The above information has been obtained from reliable sources. No liability for its accuracy or omission is assumed by the seller or by its agents. Announcements made at the time of sale take precedence over all printed and oral information.

A Gold Mine in Bedroom Drawers

Newsire: People are selling their old scrap gold that is gathering dust for its cash value because gold prices are so high. With the price of gold at a 25 year high (over $650.00 per ounce), it makes sense. ScrapGold.com, a gold recycler, offers free insured recycle kits so people may cash in their scrap with 24 hour service and guarantee satisfaction. They accept broken and outdated items like chains, charms, rings and more. "Everyone has bits of gold just lying around which can be turned into cash" says Richard Zakroff, VP of marketing. "Even old dental gold has value." ScrapGold.com processes over 10,000 recycle Kits per month. People can get a free GoldKit at 1-800-283-4700 or ScrapGold.com.

All In One Travel Mug

My wife has Rheumatoid Arthritis and small handled mugs hurt her hands. So, I designed the "All In One Travel Mug" to be lightweight with a large, soft handle. She loves it.

I clean restaurant vent hoods for a living which puts me on the road driving several hundred miles per day. En route to a job, I'll typically stop for gas and a beverage. Using my "All In One Travel Mug", most convenience stores and truck stops will only charge a small "refill" price for my drink and my mug is designed so that the beverage will last for hours.

The "All In One Travel Mug" comes with its own, specially designed, holder that is adjustable to fit your car or truck doors.
