'The troubles' rock Northern Ireland

(Former NewArk Post staff writer Bruce Johnson is in Lurgan, Northern Ireland, working with Delaware's Pacem in Terris on a project designed to bring together Catholic and Protestant youths in an atmosphere of peace. Even as the Americans counsel Northern Irish youths, hoping to bridge a wide gap of understanding, there is rioting to protest the 20th anniversary of the introduction of British troops.)

by Bruce Johnson

Special to the Post

LURGAN, NORTHERN IRELAND — And so the journey begins. Driving along the northern reaches of the New Jersey Turnpike, the Statue of Liberty to my left, my thoughts drift to the land of my destination and of my ancestors — Ireland.

I think of how many Irish immigrants saw the Statue of Liberty as they made their way to Ellis Island and their first breath of freedom in America.

Although my ancestors came to America very early, in the 1600s, and although bloodlines have been diluted in the great melting pot, I consider myself Irish, above all else. Stubborn, proud and self-reliant.

Now I board the 747 jetliner and as the stewardess passes out magazines to the 18 Americans travelling to Lurgan to work with Catholic and Protestant youths for three weeks, I realize I am going home, in a sense. Home to a country filled with hatred, violence and terrorism. Home to Northern Ireland.

All my friends looked in disbelief when I told them of my plans. When they found voice, most offered advice for dodging stray bullets.

When they asked "why," I just smiled and replied, "why not." But now I am faced with the reality of my decision.

From 3,000 feet, the trouble that rocks this country are quite invisible. Only beauty and peace can be seen, the geometric slices of green, historic rock walls and endless rows of hedges. Cows and sheep dot the landscape with the occasional sheepdog and shepherd standing watch.

It is as if some magical, prehistoric leprechaun had waved his wand and created a paradise. I believe Northern Ireland will never seem so beautiful as it does from this airplane seat.

July 19. "Pull over there, sir," calls the Ulster Defense Regiment (UDR) soldier. Nearby is a van filled with his UDR mates, all carrying automatic weapons. A typical Northern Irish scene — a checkpoint.

Across the street, another UDR soldier stands apart from the troops, scanning the area, looking for potential trouble. His gun rests gingerly in his hands.

City okays housing

A $15 million apartment complex proposed for construction on Elkton Road received Newark City Council approval Monday night.

By a 5-to-1 vote, council gave its okay to the annexation, zoning, subdivision plan and special use permits for Casho Mill Apartments.

However, council's approval did not come until after discussions over the proximity of the apartment complex to the Christina Creek floodplain and its impact on a neighboring farm.

Lokey Companies of Houston, Texas plan to build a 228-unit apartment complex on 26 acres of land on the west side of Elkton Road, adjacent to the Mayer property which will be the site of a large shopping center and office complex.

Ethel H. Wilson owns a dairy farm on Casho Mill Road. She told council that she has lived there since 1945, and the family has had no problem keeping cattle within the farm's fences.

However, in recent years, she said, people have taken to tearing down the fences and the cattle have escaped.

"Our problem isn't with the cattle," she said. "We have a problem with people."

Wilson told council that the developer should build a fence to separate her property from the apartment complex. Her barbed wire fences, she said, were not enough to keep people away.

"It's quite a temptation to come over the fence and cross over," she said.

Wilson said her cattle have gotten out four times in the last year due to torn-down fences. In one instance, she said, a cow was stolen.

Many members of council sympathized with Wilson's problem, but said they had not previously made developers install fences when they build near a farm.

"I don't think it's our business to get into a dispute over a fence," said Councilman Louise Brothers. "I think they should settle it themselves."

However, Councilman Hal Godwin said the city should try to be a good neighbor with residents living in the county, such as the Wilson family.

"I think we need to somehow divide a dense residential development from a neighboring farm," he said.

The developer offered to pay for half the fence at a cost not to exceed $5,000 if the Wilsons agreed to maintain the fence. However, Wilson said the proposal was not acceptable.

Council did not require the Wreckers claim aged theater, once vaudeville house

A 60-year city landmark is coming down.

After months of protests, debates and reminiscing, the actual demolition of the State Theater began this week.

A few people milled around the Main Street structure Monday afternoon, talking about their first visit to the theater. A police line and barriers kept spectators from getting too close to the building.

Developer Robert L. Teeven Sr. announced plans last fall for a $7 million development project at the site of the theater. The project includes a new office building and a multi-level parking garage.

Members of Citizens for a Newark Community had fought the demolition of the theater, hoping instead that it could be renovated into a cultural center.

"We put a lot of work out this past year and a half trying to get people to listen to us," said David Robertson, one of the founders of the citizens group. "We would like to retain Main Street's small-town character."

Although resigned to the fact that the theater was coming down, Hattie Bannowsky, another citizens group member, said they would continue to exist.

"Our group will go on beyond the State Theater," she said. "That was the issue that brought us together, but we intend to remain intact."

Former city council candidate Dave Colton brought the theater issue into his campaign.

"I'm real disappointed," said Colton of the theater demolition. "I think we did what we could and we didn't succeed."

Colton wanted the theater renovated into a community center. He said the city is still in need of a community center.

The citizens group requested the city intervene in the demolition, but city council refused, saying it was a matter of private property.

"We understood the issue of private property," said Bannowsky. "We still feel owners need to have some sense of community feeling."

Teeven plans a four-story office building that will house retailers on the first floor. In an earlier interview, he said the new construction would be a positive addition to Main Street.

He said the demolition of the older buildings on Main Street was necessary because many were not up to code and could not be easily renovated.

The theater opened in 1929 as a movie theater, then was redesigned as a combination theater and vaudeville house.

The State continued to show films until three years ago, when it turned out the lights on the cult hit "Rocky Horror Picture Show."

Newarker, 28, dies in county police jail

A 28-year-old Newark man died in a New Castle Police jail cell Aug. 8 after injecting crack cocaine, according to the state medical examiner's office.

Jeffrey D. McKee of Merry Road, Brookside, was found dead at 7:35 p.m. a few hours after being arrested on drug charges.

"The death was caused by crack intoxication after the victim swallowed a plastic bag containing crack," Dr. Ali Z. Hameli, the state medical examiner, said in a prepared statement.

McKee and another man, Bobby W. Perdue, 26, also of Newark, were sitting in a car, parked in front of a store on Philadelphia Pike about 5 p.m. on Aug. 8.

According to county police, a passerby suspicious of the young men notified a county police officer. The officer located the vehicle and, after a check on the license plate, found it was not registered either to McKee or Perdue.

Jeffrey D. McKee

The officer searched the car and found a small plastic bag containing a substance that was determined to be methamphetamine.

Both McKee and Perdue were placed under arrest and taken to county police headquarters. They were charged with possession of drug paraphernalia, maintaining a vehicle for the use of drugs, conspiracy and possession of methamphetamine.

Once at police headquarters, the two men were strip-searched to determine if they were carrying more drugs. Nothing was found in the search.

McKee was then placed in a holding cell while police took Perdue for fingerprinting, photographs and arraignment.

"Our group will go on beyond the State Theater,"

When police returned to the cell later to take McKee for processing, he was found on the floor. Paramedics responded to the scene, but McKee was pronounced dead.

According to police, Perdue admitted to purchasing drugs in Philadelphia earlier in the day.

Water tank saves city money

It isn't the kind of news one normally receives — that something will cost less than expected.

But that's just what Newark city officials learned when pricing a new water tank.

Bids were opened for the new elevated tank at Milford Crossroads and the low bid came in at $860,000.

"It was about $100,000 less than we anticipated," said Joseph A. Dombrowski. "That's mainly due to placing the tank at a higher elevation."

Dombrowski said, however, that some of the savings will be offset because the city will have to construct a longer water main to the tank. Still, the city will save almost $40,000.

Newark City Council will consider a contract to build the water tank at a meeting later this month. If approved, construction should begin shortly.

"It will look like a golf ball on a pedestal," Dombrowski said of the proposed tank. "It will serve existing customers in Chapel

Police crack drug ring

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

While pushing her infant in a carriage on Middletown's Lake Street, the woman also pushed drugs, selling a $20 bag of cocaine to an undercover police officer.

That is just one of many incidents police have to report following a four-month investigation, known as Operation Dry Lake, in this small southern New Castle County town.

Federal, state and local authorities participated in the investigation, which resulted in the indictment last week of 30 people on 85 criminal violations.

New Castle County Police began investigating drugs on Lake Street after learning that residents were at the hands of dealers who would go to any extreme to sell their illicit wares. Newark police assisted the investigation.

"Here's a neighboring community that's deeply involved in drugs — a very small community," said Newark Police Lt. Alex Von Koch. "We found out after we started that several of the people who were involved in the direct sale of drugs were also connected to Newark either through work, through social contacts or just frequenting Newark."

"So it became even more important for us to participate."

Although the operation in Middletown is for the most part complete, Von Koch said Newark police are continuing their investigation.

"We're further probing to see if the people involved in the Middletown arrests had any involvement in drug sales in Newark," he said. "We believe there may be some connections."

The open-market atmosphere of Lake Street shocked Von Koch. He said quite a few groups of dealers actively pushed drugs on people driving down the street.

"It was surprising," he said, "particularly since it is such a small town, that it is possible for them to have a mini-Aramingo-type situation in Middletown, where you can openly purchase drugs just by driving down the street."

Aramingo is a street in Philadelphia known for heavy drug activity.

County police Capt. George Haggerty, commander of the New Castle County criminal investigations unit, agreed that Lake Street was a "model program of Aramingo."

"We think it was a fairly large open-air market," he said. "A lot of residents throughout the county were frequenting the area."

Haggerty said the drug dealers on Lake Street had what he called a "supermarket mentality."

"They have a product," he said. "We have the money. They sell us the dope."

Even New Castle County Chief of Police Col. Thomas P. Gordon was able to purchase drugs from Lake Street dealers.

According to David Chillas, New Castle County director of public safety, this drug bust is only the beginning.

"We're sending the message that the police community in New Castle County will not tolerate the sale or purchase of drugs in this county," he said. "We've set a long-term goal of making this a drug-free county."

County police have already stepped up presence in the Brookmont community on U.S. 40 near Glasgow, scene of drug activities which became a community concern.

New parking restrictions in city

City property owners who want to convert single-family homes into rental property will come under some new restrictions following Newark City Council action Monday night.

Council approved an ordinance that requires all new conversions of homes into rental property to provide two off-street parking spaces. The requirement will go into effect after July 1990.

Unlike other proposals designed to limit the impact of college students living in residential areas, this plan received little discussion.

One resident, Victoria Owen, told council that the ordinance would "penalize people who live close to the university." She asked council to reject the ordinance.

Councilman Harold F. Godwin questioned Junie L. Mayle, city building director, about the additional paperwork required by the new ordinance.

"Of course, it's difficult because it's one more thing that has to be done," said Mayle. "One more check has to be made."

Mayle said the ordinance will create some problems because current rental properties are protected by a "grandfather clause" and therefore not required to provide the off-street parking.

He said building department employees will have to separate rental license renewals from new applications.

In other action Monday night, council amended the city's alcohol ordinance to lift some restrictions on downtown restaurants.

The two-year-old ordinance was reviewed at the request of Robert E. Ashby, owner of Ashby's Grille and Restaurant on Haines Street. Ashby earlier told council that certain requirements in the ordinance were difficult to enforce.

In particular, Ashby pointed out problems with the requirement that patrons be seated at a table when served alcohol and that food must be served with each alcohol purchase.

City staff reviewed Ashby's concerns and submitted the amendment approved by council Monday night.

Pizza shop is robbed

A bandit held up the Domino's Pizza shop on Cleveland Avenue early Friday morning, city police said.

Stephan Kahramen, an employee, was leaving the pizza shop about 5:09 a.m. Friday morning when he was confronted by a man carrying a sawed-off shotgun.

The man forced Kahramen back into the store to open the company safe. The robber then escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

Police are looking for a white male, 5 feet 11 inches tall, with a heavy build and light-colored or reddish hair.

Nominations are sought

Nominations for membership on the Delaware Humanities Council, the governing body of the Delaware Humanities Forum are now being accepted.

To nominate a candidate, obtain his or her approval, and send a letter of nomination along with the candidate's resume to Henry H. Hirschbuhl, Executive Director, Delaware Humanities Forum, 2600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Wilmington, DE 19806.

The deadline for nominations is Nov. 1, 1989.

The Delaware Humanities Forum is an independent agency supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities and by corporate and private contributions.

Council members review grant proposals, select projects to be funded, establish policy, oversee program administration, visit projects and assist in fund raising.

Surface water standards hearing

Stricter standards limiting toxics in Delaware's streams are among proposed changes in the state's water quality standards which will be the subject of a public hearing in September.

The Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control (DENREC) will hold a public hearing on the proposed water quality standards on Sept. 6. The hearing will be held in two sessions, at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. in the auditorium of the Richardson and Robbins Building, 89 Kings Highway in Dover.

The hearings is the forum for interested and affected parties to give testimony regarding the standards and to ask questions of DENREC staff.

Labor pool said increasing

The Delaware labor pool continues to expand, according to the Delaware Development Office.

According to the statistical report "Current and Projected Labor Supply for the State of Delaware," there is a growing number of workers and an increasing working age population in each of the state's 12 marketing areas.

"The rising supply of workers, primarily due to the positive economic growth experienced in the region, assures an adequate supply of labor to staff future development," said John J. Casey Jr., director of the Delaware Development Office.

For details or copies of the report, call the DDO's Dover office at 736-4271.

Christina School District officials tour the new Henry M. Brader Elementary School in Four Seasons.

Christina opens new school

by Cathy Thomas

Of the Post staff

The doors of a new elementary school south of Newark will open in September to accept children for the first time.

Workers are installing carpet, moving in furniture and sweeping up construction dust as they complete the Henry M. Brader Elementary School in the Four Seasons development off of Del. 896.

"We're about 98 percent complete," said David A. Riblett Sr.,

Christina School District supervisor of capital improvements. "There are a few construction items to be finished yet."

"We will be ready for the opening day of school."

Classes in the Christina School District will resume Sept. 5. Kindergartners will report for classes on Sept. 7.

Named after a long-time educator in the Newark schools, Brader elementary is a one-story building with a brick exterior. The school, which has been under construction the past year and a half, cost about $6 million to build.

"It's truly state-of-the-art design," said Riblett. "It is up to the minute in styling."

The new school was needed, according to Christina officials, because of increasing population in the area south of Newark. It will house kindergarten through third grade classes.

"It's a 28-classroom building," said Riblett, "and, as such, it is one of our larger elementary schools."

Already in the planning is another elementary school near Newark.

"The site has not been finalized," said Riblett. "It would be in the area of Walther Road and Old Baltimore Pike (near the Salem Woods development)."

Renovation and additions to several Christina elementary schools in Wilmington are also under way.

Preliminary plans for Drew-Pyle and Pulaski elementary schools have been approved by the school board. Elbert-Palmer elementary school is currently under renovation with completion expected in September 1990.

IRISH SIGHS: THE TROUBLED NORTH

his finger on the trigger. Lurgan residents pass by, ignoring the scene. It's all too familiar to them.

It is not uncommon to see various units of British troops in Northern Ireland. Dressed in camouflage green uniforms which conceal bulletproof vests, they are more than 10,000 strong in a country of 1.5 million, a country the geographic size of Connecticut.

But with paramilitary terrorists operating from both the Catholic and Protestant camps, most Northern Irish understand the need for the presence of troops, even if they don't particularly like them. Nearly 3,000 citizens have been killed in Northern Ireland in the last 20 years.

The day I arrived, there was yet another killing. Officials believe the Irish Republican Army (IRA) responsible for kidnapping and murdering a man for allegedly supplying information to the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Northern Irish police.

The troops try to maintain order, something that has proved largely impossible over the centuries.

Now, obeying the soldier's order, my driver slams the van into first gear, cursing in an Irish brogue that remains lyrical despite the anger. He hands over his license and registration, which by virtue of his address show him to be a Catholic, and the questioning begins.

"Where ya coming from?" "Belfast Airport (where he had picked me up)," he says, looking straight ahead and avoiding the soldier's eyes.

"For what reason?" "To pick up an American group on holiday."

"And where are they staying?"

"All over. They're with the Phoenix Centre working on the Ulster Project." The driver turns to the soldier. "If you check my name out you'll see that I'm clean and I can be on my way."

The soldier looks at me suspiciously and begins to walk away. But I hear him mutter the word "NORAI," an acronym for the North American arm of the IRA.

The driver reacts, sticking his head out the window. "Now there's no need to say that. He's been here just two hours and you've given him a fine welcome."

The soldier walks back and the driver pulls his head back in the window and resumes his forward stare. There's only so far he can go with the soldier and he's stepped over the line a bit.

Again, the soldier leaves, this time to talk to his commander. I ask the driver what is going on and he explains about NORAI, the UDR and Northern Ireland.

For the first time, I realize my true situation. I am in a police state and, as an American, not much trusted. My freedom as an American no longer applies. I am a suspect, guilty until proven innocent.

After a brief chat, the soldier and his commander come towards our van. The officer asks, "What's your name?" "Bruce Johnson."

"Where are you staying?"

The driver says we don't know yet, that we will find out once we reach the Phoenix Center. He again asks for a check of his name to clear the air. They ignore him.

Knowing the name of the town in which I will be staying, I tell them. Bainbridge. That makes them all the more suspicious.

The officer looks me in the eye. I feel his power but, adrenaline flowing, return his stare confrontationally.

"That's pretty strange," he says. "You coming over here to Ireland from America and not knowing where and with who you're staying?"

"Yes," I reply. "You must have a lot of trust."

"Yes," he writes down my name and address to be checked by the central command.

Five minutes later, at his leisure and long, long after the lead van, driven by a Protestant, has cleared, we are on our way.

Upon arrival at the Phoenix Center, little is made of the incident. The driver plays it down and begins joking with the locals. Protestants are in the room, and you don't discuss "the troubles" in mixed company, I learn later.

July 20. Tonight they held a barbecue at the Phoenix for all the American volunteers. Vegetable burgers and Irish sausages were the main foodstuffs, along with warm soda.

A great variety of people attended. German volunteers, British students, and many Lurgan locals, both Catholic and Protestant.

Even in the peaceful environs of the center, the troubles are not far from us. Armored police trucks rumble by, disrupting the quiet of the evening. And beneath the soothing sound of an acoustic guitar can be heard the undertones of politics.

Moving between Catholics and Protestants, I quickly came to understand the depth and complexity of the problem. And I found that for most, Northern Ireland is divided more by national allegiance — England and Ireland — than by religion. It seems religion is but a by-factor that adds to the prejudice.

I also found that even the most moderate of citizens have rock-bound opinions that will not be budged.

July 21. Lurgan is about the same size as Newark. It has one main street and neighborhoods of various socio-economic strata. What makes it typical of Northern Ireland is the dividing line that separates Catholics and Protestants. That line is a street. It is a line Catholics and Protestants cross warily by day and never by night.

Catholics frequent Catholic bars and shop in Catholic shops. Protestants do the same.

The public toilets rest on the town line and there's a saying in Lurgan that "the politics runs with the toilets." And so it does.

July 23. Walking through the Catholic section of Lurgan to visit an American friend, I am watched cautiously. I am a stranger and therefore not to be trusted. Soon, however, upon learning that the visitor is an American, the stony faces give way to good cheer. The Irish, regardless of background, will give you the time of day and then some, and will offer it with

There's always time for a story, a little Irish history and, of course, a discourse on the troubles. It is ironic that a place so friendly and homespun could also be so hateful and divided.

July 24. I spoke with a Catholic youth today, and ventured to ask him how he thought the troubles would be solved. He leaned close, so Protestant ears could not hear, and said, "Aye, England will pull out soon. They're tired of the burden of Northern Ireland, both financially and in terms of lives. It serves no purpose to them now. Before, hundreds of years ago, it was a strategic military stronghold against France and other countries. Now, it's just a sore. They'll find a way to pull out respectably. It won't happen soon, but maybe in five to ten years."

It was an opinion I had heard before from others, and a dread fear of all Protestants in this country. No one knows if it will happen but England has shown signs of moving in that direction. One can only wonder what will become of Northern Ireland if they do leave.

July 28. IRA terrorists tried to blow up the Lurgan train station last night. It was the joke of the day at the Phoenix Center. It is amazing how quickly one becomes immune to the violence.

Most of the violence is the work of the IRA and many in Northern Ireland, including Catholics, have grown to distrust and hate the organization. They believe the IRA has forsaken its original goals in favor of ties to professional terrorists in the Middle East, and the group has lost the prestige it once held as a feared but respected political organization with strong values and respected ideals.

The IRA members are now viewed as thugs and the group likened to the Mafia, using fear and bombs to extort money.

Most Northern Irish want peace. They detest the troubles, but suffer economically, physically and morally.

August 1. Working with the children of Northern Ireland is an experience. They are keen, fun-loving, mischievous and caring, like children anywhere. But one major difference is obvious to all the American volunteers — these children are more violent.

In the past week, I have watched Irish children ages 7 to 14, both male and female, take to their fists to solve such simple conflicts as where to stand in line or whose sandwich is whose. Violence is part of their lives. When asked why they fight, they stare blankly, confused at the very question.

The hatred is little concealed. Children spit out slogans, phrases and songs of hatred for Catholics or Protestants, for Ireland or England.

Still, the hope is the children. When they get together, as at the Phoenix Center, they do so peacefully and seem surprised at how normal their counterparts are. They wear the same clothes, enjoy the same games, laugh the same laughs.

There is great joy in watching a seven-year-old stand in front of his Catholic or Protestant peers and say he has made a new friend and doesn't care what religion that friend is. Yes, there is hope.

August 3. "You see that man over there," asks a Lurgan resident, pointing to a smiling young man at a local pub. "His parents were blown up two years back. They were just drinking in a bar and a bomb went off. As I know him, I knew his parents, and they had nothing to do with the troubles. They were a nice lot, they were."

He pauses, looks away and takes a sip from a pint of ale then goes on, talking about the violence caused by both sides in this struggle.

The innocent suffer, he says. "But that's how it is. It's a part of life here, and unless you've lived in Northern Ireland you just can't say or see what it's like. Even you will never know what it's like."

"Twenty years ago the IRA was fighting for a cause and it was just and respected. Now, they're just a vigilante group. Both sides are like that now. It's tit for tat. There's no purpose, just revenge. It solves nothing."

August 5. We Americans went to play snooker tonight. It's a billiards game with a table nearly as long as a football field and pockets the size of small mice. The lads laughed at our poor attempts to understand the rules of the game.

Innocently, we asked a number of Lurganites to join us in the game. Some declined quickly. The snooker hall is a Protestant hangout. Surprisingly, some Catholics did come.

They appeared nervous and as I passed one 16-year-old, I heard her whisper to a friend, "God, I'm scared."

And so it goes in Northern Ireland. It was night and they were on the wrong side of the line.

August 6. Very few in Northern Ireland have hopes the troubles will be over soon. Some predict civil war on an even more terrible scale. They point to the small children, who are socialized in the tradition of hatred and violence. They fear the worst.

Yet few dare muster the courage to step out of their culture and into the middle ground, the meeting ground, where a peaceable solution can be found.

The English want out but the Protestants fear for their safety if the troops leave.

Northern Ireland is like Beirut, never at peace, always troubled, locked in a tragic death struggle.

It is ironic that the values that make the Irish so admirable — their diligence, faith and strong traditions — are the very values that lead them to ruin here.

NOTICE

H & R BLOCK TO OFFER INCOME TAX SCHOOLS IN WILMINGTON

Thousands of people are learning the skill of income tax preparation from H & R Block and are earning money as income tax preparers.

H & R Block, the world's largest tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course in Wilmington starting September 5th & 6th, with morning, evening and weekend classes available. Classes will be offered at three locations.

During the 14 week course, students will study all phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual and small business Federal and State returns. Experienced Block instructors will teach new tax laws, theory and application, as practiced in Block Offices Nationwide. There is a classroom discussion on each tax subject and practice problems at every level. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging. Courses are ideally suited for people who want to increase their knowledge and learn how to save money on taxes or who are looking for a rewarding career. No prerequisites are required to enroll.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H & R Block.

One low course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the course. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. Also, the cost of the course may be tax deductible.

Registration forms and brochures for the Income Tax Course may be obtained by contacting H & R Block at 4711 Kirkwood Highway, Wilmington, (The Midway Shopping Plaza), telephone 999-7488.

Ralph Hylton Jr. of Tastee Freez and prize winner Iris Brown.

Brown is winner at Tastee Freez

Iris Brown of Christiana is the grand prize winner in the Tastee Freez of Newark rock 'n' roll contest.

Brown won a mini-jukebox cassette player, complete with an oldies tape, flashing lights and an AM-FM radio.

As Newark winner, she is also eligible to win a Goldstar home stereo, a vacation for two in Jamaica, a 1937 Pontiac street machine or Wayfarer sunglasses. The mini-jukebox was presented to Brown by Ralph Hylton Jr., assistant manager of the Tastee Freez. The restaurant is located on South College Avenue.

Western Y to break ground

The Western Branch YMCA will break ground next month for a new outdoor family recreation center.

The first phase plans call for construction of an 81-foot by 75-foot outdoor pool, a wading pool for toddlers, a bathhouse complex, a picnic pavilion and more than 100 additional parking spaces.

Tetra Tech Richardson has been hired as project architects and engineers.

Western Branch YMCA is located on Kirkwood Highway, just east of Newark.

Lions won't collect newspapers

The Glasgow Lions Club has discontinued the collection of old newspapers.

Glasgow Lion Ed Short said the organization will continue to collect computer paper and aluminum cans, however.

Newspaper collection is being halted because of the loss of a recycling company to take the paper, Short said.

Computer paper and cans will be collected 9 a.m. to noon the last Saturday of each month in the rear parking lot of the Delaware Trust Company branch in Peoples Plaza shopping center.

WHYY to air 'Oil Spill' Friday

The devastating impact of tanker accidents hit home on June 24 when the Presidente Rivera dumped 307,000 gallons of oil into the Delaware River.

"Oil Spill," a WHYY-TV12 production looks at the effect oil spills have on the environment, the economy and the petroleum industry. It will air Friday, Aug. 18, at 7:30 p.m.

The 30-minute documentary, hosted by TV12 News anchor Nancy Karibjanian, travels from the soiled shores of the Delaware River at historic Battery Park in New Castle to the once-pristine banks of Prince William Sound in Valdez, Alaska.

It shows how cleanup crews and volunteers at Tri-State Bird Rescue and Research, Inc. saved 95 percent of the birds affected by the Delaware River mishap.

Each year, more than 1,000 tankers travel up and down the Delaware, bringing a source of heat, light and power, but a risk of environmental disaster as well. To feed an apparently insatiable demand for oil, the U.S. imports 45 percent of its petroleum.

The TV12 production raises serious environmental and fuel questions for the next century: Do people regard oil spills as necessary evils in maintaining their standard of living? Or, are people willing to make lifestyle changes that would help prevent those accidents? Would eliminating dependence on foreign oil help solve the problem? What kind of stronger legislation is a must?

In "Oil Spill," Karibjanian talks to environmentalists and oil industry representatives about the prevention of and responsibility for oil spills. "Oil Spill" looks at alternative energy sources and why research, so prevalent during the energy crisis of the 1970s, was abandoned because of the return of cheap oil in the 1980s.

According to Hunter College environmental sociologist Dr. Joan Goldstein, the Prince William Sound mishap, the worst U.S. environmental oil disaster to date, was the turning point of the public's awareness of the environmental problem.

During the program, American Petroleum Institute officials Art Wiese and Dr. Michael Canes discuss the need for the oil industry to build bi-coastal oil response centers and to allocate more research money to identify new energy sources.

Environmentalists content that oil companies would put more money into prevention if they were forced to bear the complete cost of cleanup, and if they were held responsible for the on-going impact of any spill. Some environmentalists say that using double-hulled tankers or on-board containment equipment would help prevent accidents.

Despite these kinds of preventative steps, other experts, such as Coast Guard Capt. Larry Murdock, feel that "oil spills are inevitable from any kind of container you carry them in."

Environmental activist Jake Kreshtool, president of Delaware Citizens for Clean Air, points out an innovative legal approach, which would help solve the problem. In addition, local Sierra Club officials talk about recent polls showing that the public wants environmental protection. However, club officials believe that politicians should create stronger legislation.

developer to build the fence and left the matter for the property owners to negotiate.

Councilman Edwin D. Miller Jr. was the lone council member voting against the project. He expressed concerns over special-use permits allowing some of the parking lot in the floodplain.

Roland Roth told council that the lessons of the July 5 flood should be remembered.

"Floodplains belong to streams," he said. "If one builds close to streams, one can expect flood damage sooner or later."

Lokey Companies representative Jeff Booth told council that the complex would offer luxury apartments.

"It's just a high-quality, country club atmosphere that we're trying to create," said Booth. "I really don't know a project in the entire tri-state area that has this quality."

Booth said the one-bedroom apartments would rent around $500 with other apartments renting for as much as $800. "We're going to be at the top of the ren-

Hill and on the Cook and Cullen tract."

One stumbling block for the city is obtaining the necessary land, but Dombrowski is confident that negotiations will go well.

Plans for the tank first surfaced more than ten years ago.

tal market," he said.

While some University of Delaware students may rent in the complex, Booth said, the apartments will cater to young professionals.

Norris attends
Brevard Center

Terri Lyn Norris of Newark is attending the Brevard (N.C.) Music Center this summer as an advanced-division bassoon student.

Norris is the daughter of Mae O. Norris of Newark. She is a rising senior at the University of Delaware, where she is completing a double-major in educational studies and criminal justice and where she participates on the Blue Hen women's track team.

This is Norris's first year at Brevard. She is participating in performing ensembles and attending classes and seminars during the seven-week music festival.

Each year, Brevard Music Center brings in more than 300 top music students from across the country for a summer of intensive musical study and performance in the mountains of western North Carolina.

Walker program is national winner

The McKean High School vocational agriculture program, directed by lifelong Newark resident Keith Walker, has won a national award.

The program received the National Vocational Agricultural Teachers' Association's Outstanding Vocational Agriculture Program Award for 1989.

Formal presentation of the award will be made during the NVATA national convention Dec. 1-5 in Orlando, Fla.

Walker is a 1968 graduate of Newark High School and there, under the leadership of his vocational agriculture teacher Bill

Kent, he decided to make a career as a teacher of agriculture science.

Walker has won five state awards and two national awards.

STRIVE sets
information meeting

STRIVE, an educational organization sponsored by the Delaware Region of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will hold an information meeting 9:15 to 11:15 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 19 at Trinity Episcopal Church, 1108 N. Adams St., Wilmington.

STRIVE programs help elementary schoolchildren gain better understanding of themselves and others through experiential activities in the classroom. Students are made more aware of their individual uniqueness, their feelings and their attitudes toward others.

Training for STRIVE volunteers will begin Sept. 28. For information, call Kathie Stamm at 655-1061.

Americanization program registration

The Red Clay Consolidated School District will hold registration for its Americanization Program.

Registration for daytime classes will be held Sept. 6-8 in Room 121 of Wilmington High School, Lancaster Avenue and DuPont Road.

Registration for evening classes will be held Sept. 12 and 14, also at Wilmington High.

The program is open to all mature youths and adults who do not speak English, and students may enter the program at any time during the school year. Four separate levels of "English As a Second Language" will be offered, as will a course in citizenship.

Daytime classes will meet 9:30 a.m. to noon weekdays, and evening classes 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at Wilmington High.

For information, contact Margaret McConnell at 651-2746 or Malcolm Baird at 651-2709.

Christina School District students accounted for more than 10 percent of the total number of youths attending Delaware Business Week, an educational program of the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce held annually at the University of Delaware. Students are (seated, from left) Lora Jennings, Patti Cleveland, Paula Gibbs and Kathy Cleveland, (standing) program director Jean M. Toman of the Chamber, Krista Zeumer, Daniel Ambrose, Aaron Matucha and Mike Lennon.

Rogers wins Coke scholarship

Charles Lawler Rogers.

CHICAGO — Charles Lawler Rogers of Newark was presented a $25,000 scholarship here Aug. 7 through the Coca-Cola Share the Dream Scholarship Sweepstakes.

Rogers was one of 10 national winners, and one of only two to receive the $25,000 scholarships.

Eight other students received $10,000 scholarships and six Apple computers were presented to secondary prize winners.

According to Rogers, the scholarship will enable him to continue his education and pursue a college degree.

The 18-year-old has completed his freshman year at North Carolina Central State University and plans to attend Morgan State University in Baltimore this fall.

All Coca-Cola Share the Dream scholarships are awarded through National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education schools. The association is made up of 117 historically and predominantly black colleges and universities.

The scholarship contest is held annually during February, Black History Month. It draws the name Share the Dream from the famed speech by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

"In the seven years that the Coca-Cola Company has sponsored the Black History Month scholarship sweepstakes program, about three quarters of a million dollars have been awarded in scholarships and prizes," said Chuck Morrison, vice president for black and Hispanic consumer markets for Coca-Cola USA.

Selected to promote this year's contest were Julius Erving, Michael Jordan and Isiah Thomas, three famed basketball players who chose to return to college to complete their education and earn a degree.

"(We) chose these role models to inspire young people to achieve their goals," Morrison said. "Dr. J, Michael and Isiah are dynamic athletes and businessmen to whom young people can relate."

Holder is new coach

MaryBeth Holder has been named head coach of the nationally-recognized field hockey and women's lacrosse programs at the University of Delaware, becoming the first person to head both programs at the same time.

Holder comes to Delaware from East Coast Conference rival Lehigh University. She replaces long-time Blue Hen coaches Mary Ann Hitchens in field hockey and Janet Smith in lacrosse.

Both Hitchens and Smith stepped down as coaches to pursue other duties at the University of Delaware.

Holder is a 1982 graduate of Old Dominion University in Virginia, where she was an All-America field hockey player and a lacrosse standout.

In addition, she was a member of the United States field hockey team for four years and competed in three National Sports Festival hockey tournaments.

After graduating from Old Dominion, Holder served as graduate assistant coach at Trenton State College in New Jersey.

The 1983 Trenton State field hockey team won the NCAA Division II title and the 1985 lacrosse team also won a national championship.

Holder was named head coach of the Lehigh field hockey and lacrosse teams in 1985.

She led the two squads to a combined record of 78-75-5, and her 1986 field hockey team won the East Coast Conference title.

At Lehigh, Holder coached one All-America, 13 regional All-Americans and 20 All-ECC players.

Holder inherits a Blue Hen field hockey team that went 16-3-2 and won the 1988 ECC title before falling to Penn State in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

The Delaware lacrosse team finished the 1989 season with an 11-6 record and was second in the ECC playoffs.

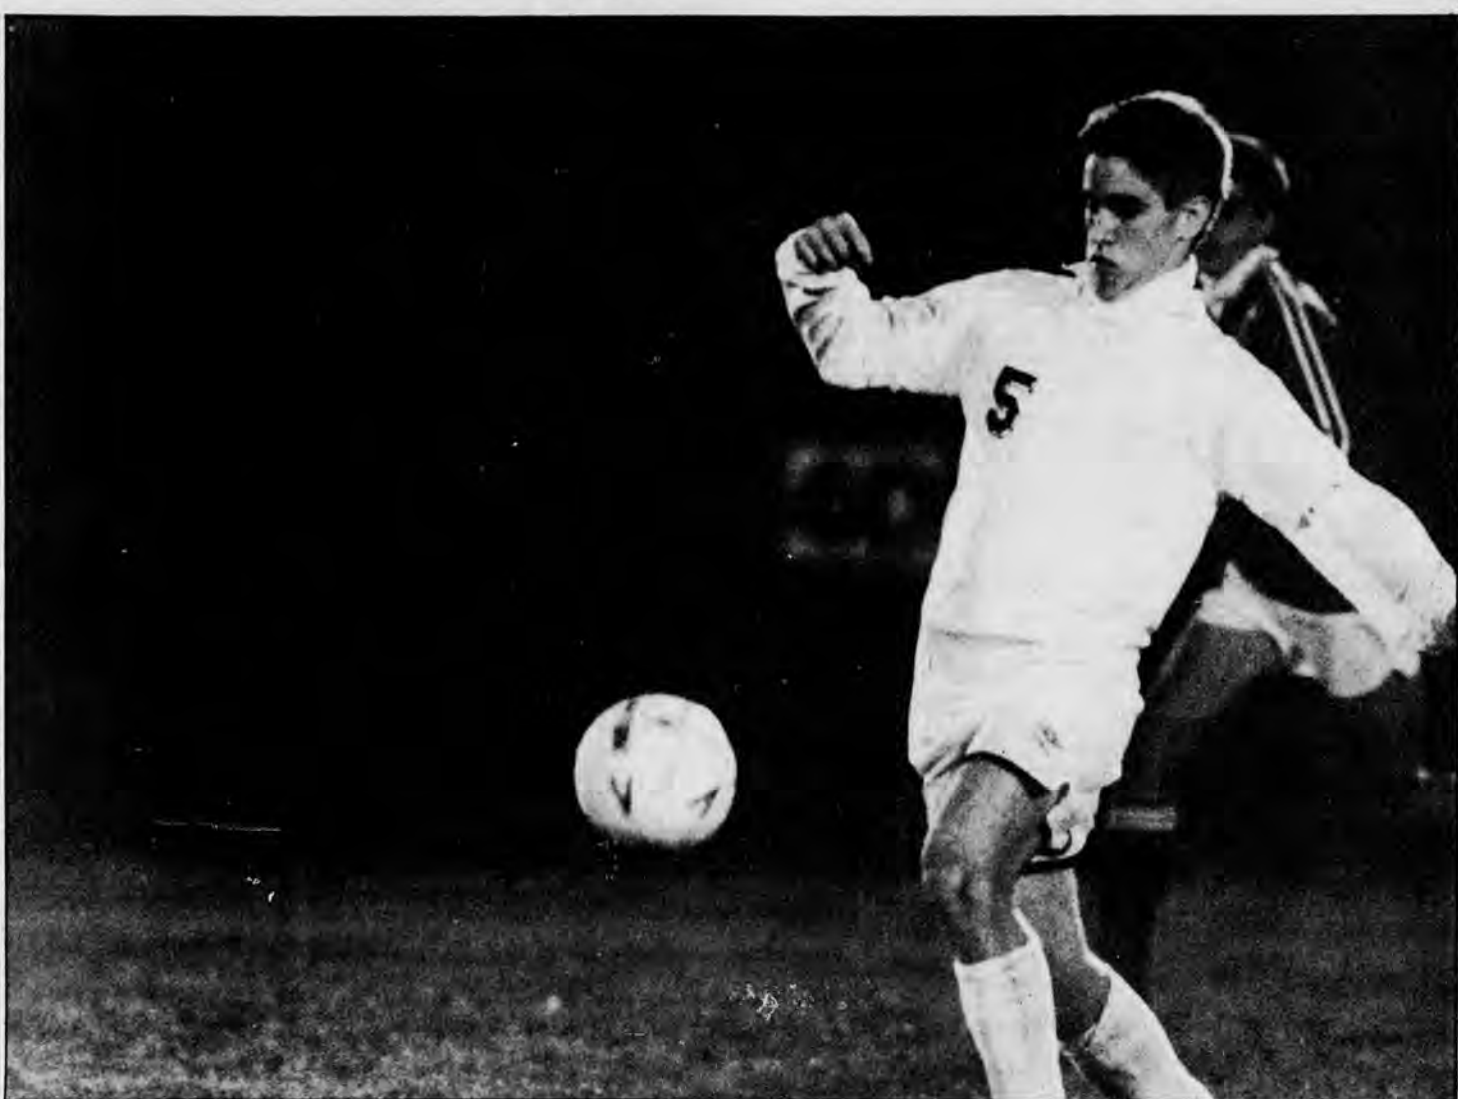

Both the Blue Hen field hockey and lacrosse teams were ranked in the national top 10 throughout their seasons.

Hitchens, now associate athletic director at the University, was field hockey coach here for 16 years. Her record was 196-76-30 and she led five teams to top four finishes in the national playoffs.

The 1983 Blue Hen team placed third in the NCAA Division I championships.

Smith, who stepped down in June to concentrate on duties within the University's College of Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation, posted a 10-year record of 118-51-1.

She led the 1983 lacrosse team to the NCAA Division I title. The 1981 and 1982 teams won AIAW Division II national championships.

OK, it's time for Final Jeopardy. The category is "Commonalities."

Have your pens ready?

The answer is: Acid rock at Woodstock, Neil Armstrong's walk on the moon, and soccer at Newark High School.

Players, you have thirty seconds to write the correct question.

(The famed tick-tock sound of the "Jeopardy" theme song can be heard playing while readers all over Newark sit in easy chairs with puzzled looks on their faces.)

Time's up. The correct question is, "What events are celebrating famous 20th anniversaries?"

According to research by Karl Voigt of the Newark High School Soccer Boosters Club, the Yellowjacket soccer team began formal varsity play in 1969 under head coach Assen Slavov.

It's first victory was a 1-0 shutout of William Penn High that season.

The early years were difficult, as is the case with any new team, and the 1973 team, which went 4-8, suffered what remains the worst loss in 'Jacket history — 11-1 at the hands of Mount Pleasant.

It was in the early 1970s when Slavov turned the fledgling team over to Charlie Blackwell, who was head coach through the 1988 season.

Blackwell resigned and has been replaced by Hugh Mitchell. Newark turned its fortunes around in 1974, going 10-4 and defeating traditional heavyweight Concord High.

Leading the team was forward Jeff Thomas, who scored 18 goals on the year.

After an off year in 1975, Voigt said Newark stormed back in the bicentennial year, going 8-3-1 in front of outstanding goalkeeper Carey Belt.

The Yellowjackets were invited to the state tournament, and lost in the first round.

The 8-2-1 1977 team went even further, reaching the state tournament semifinals before losing 1-0 to Brandywine. During the regular season, the 'Jackets shut out seven opponents.

In 1978, Newark went unbeaten in Blue Hen Conference, posting a record of 6-0-2 behind leading scorer Carlos Goncalves. The 'Jackets went to the state tournament for the third straight year, losing 2-1 to Caesar Rodney.

Voigt said the 1979 team record fell to 4-7-1, although Chris Brown capped his varsity years with a record for career goals.

Jeff Kraft helped the 1980 and 1981 teams to winning records (8-6-1 and 8-5-1), but the 1982 team won just four games against 10 losses.

Excitement built early in the 1983 season, as the high-powered 'Jackets posted a 5-1-2 record by midseason and eventually shattered school scoring records with 44 goals and 32 assists.

The team, however, was tied by St. Mark's and Salesianum, finished with a 7-4-4 record, and narrowly missed a state tournament berth. All-State recognition went to Chris DeStefano and Gary Bates and Stefan Boettcher was named the best team

Newark Ruth stars eliminated

□ The Newark Babe Ruth League 14-15 year old all-stars were eliminated Aug. 9 from the Eastern regional tournament in Saugerties, N.Y.

The Newark team fell 9-5 to Southern Maryland for their second loss in the double-elimination tournament.

Newark's Anthony Carlini homered in the game, while Steve Murphy laced two run-scoring doubles and Mike Gerhart stroked two singles and a double.

The local stars took leads of 2-0 and 3-1, but Southern Maryland bounced back.

Pitching for Newark were Kevin McCullough and Jack DeLuca.

Fall co-rec softball to open

□ The Newark Fall Co-Rec Softball League will open play Sunday, Aug. 27 at Barksdale Park.

The league includes eight teams, and will play through October.

Teams are Taylors Ink, Goldey Beacom Braves, Newark Sporting Goods 1, Newark Sporting Goods 2, Throbbars, Wilmington Trust, Sleepy Hollow Farms and the Bandits.

The league is sponsored by the Newark Department of Parks and Recreation.

NCC slow-pitch baseball registration

□ A men's slow-pitch baseball league is being organized by the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation.

Teams will play a doubleheader one night a week (Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday) at Banning Park with starting times at 6 p.m. or 8:35 p.m. The season will begin Sept. 5 and end Oct. 27. Teams will play a 10-12 game schedule, plus playoffs. Make-up games will be played Thursday and Friday nights.

Entry fee for a team is $295, and is due Tuesday, Aug. 29. To register, call the Department's Sports and Athletics Section at 323-6418.

Football leagues are planned

□ Touch football and non-contact flag football leagues are being offered by the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation.

The touch football league will play 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday, and the flag football league 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. Individuals are permitted to participate in both leagues.

Each team will play a nine or 10 game schedule plus playoffs. Officials will be provided for all games. League play will start Sept. 9 and 10.

Entry fees are $420 per team for the touch league, $315 for the flag league. Deadline for registration is Friday, Aug. 25. Call 323-6418.

NCC no-check street hockey regs.

□ A 12-team men's no-check street hockey league is being organized by the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation.

Games will be played Sundays at New Castle County's new outdoor street hockey rink on McKennas Church Road.

The season will begin Sept. 10 and end Dec. 17. Teams will play a 10-game schedule plus playoffs.

Entry fee for a team is $290 and is due Tuesday, Aug. 29. To register, call the Department's Sports and Athletics Section at 323-6418.

MS 150 Bike to the Bay

□ The MS 150 Bike to the Bay, to benefit the Delaware Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, will take place Sept. 23 and 24.

The tour begins on Saturday in Smyrna and meanders over scenic roads to Dewey Beach, where the expected 600 riders will stay overnight. The 150 mile tour is completed with a return ride to Smyrna Sunday.

Riders of all ages and skill levels can join the tour, but must have at least $150 in cash to participate. To participate as a rider or volunteer, call 571-9800.

Reybold wins Babe Ruth title

Reybold Homes, regular season champion in the Newark Babe Ruth League's 16-18 year old division, is also the playoff champion.

Reybold topped Rodriguez Market 8-5 to cap a two-game sweep in the best-of-three series.

The hard-fought final stretched over two evenings, Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 7 and 8.

The game was tied 5-5 in the seventh inning when Kip Houchen singled to drive home Chip Watkins with the game-winning run.

Tom Snedeker and Dennis Craig followed with hits, driving in two insurance runs.

The winning pitcher was Reybold's Gary Stollings, who hurled a six-hitter and struck out eight batters.

Reybold Homes won the championship series opener Aug. 6, topping Rodriguez Market 10-6.

Reybold pitcher Danny McCall went the distance, striking out eight batters and driving in two runs on a pair of hits.

Teammate Tom Pritchard plated three runs on two hits.

For Rodriguez, Pedro Rivera starred, rapping out three hits and scoring three runs.

Rodriguez reached the championship series by nipping Feralloy 7-6 in a playoff semifinal Aug. 5.

Jorge Marrero three a complete game and also hit a double and a triple to lead Rodriguez to victory.

Teammates Jimmy Beltran and Tito Martinez also collected two hits each.

player and leader.

The next two seasons — 1984 and 1985 — were rebuilding years, and Newark went 6-8 each season. The '84 team featured fine play by junior Steve White, who made first team All-Blue Hen Conference.

In '85, White set school records for most career goals (37) and most career assists (38).

The 1986 team rebounded to complete the regular season with a record of 8-4-2, topping Concord for the first time in 12 years and earning a state tournament berth. The 'Jackets topped Milford 4-1 in the first round but then lost 2-0 to Tower Hill.

Tamir Klaff was named first team All-Delaware, and Marty Pritchett second team all-state.

In 1987, Newark enjoyed its best season ever, winning the Blue Hen Conference title for the first time and scoring 13 victories against just three defeats. The team was 11-1 in conference.

Goalkeeper Curt Kingham, Davin Rudy and Dan Pelletier provided outstanding play, and both Marty Pritchett and Gary Hendrixson were named All-Delaware.

Newark topped Wilmington Christian 4-2 and St. Andrew's 2-0 in the first two rounds of the state tournament, then lost 1-0 to eventual champion St. Mark's.

In 1988, what was generally expected to be a rebuilding year, Newark turned in a strong performance. The team went 9-5 in the regular season, then knocked off St. Andrew's and A.I. duPont in the first two rounds.

The 'Jackets finally lost, 1-0, to the eventual champion, Tower Hill. The Hillers defeated Christiana High 1-0 in the final.

Davin Rudy, Greg Lillie and Eric Voigt were named All-Blue Hen Conference.

Farewell to State Theater

Delawareans, according to one native Newarker, have this misguided notion that progress can be measured in terms of how much history has been bulldozed.

His theory may have gained support this week as Newarkers watched the demolition of Main Street's State Theater.

Oh, the State wasn't a majestic architectural achievement.

It wasn't even a modest one.

And certainly renovations of the onetime moviehouse and vaudeville theater would have been costly.

Some argued with a good deal of logic that the State really didn't deserve to stand any longer, that it was a decrepit building which was in the way of, well, progress.

State owner Robert Teeven Sr.'s has proposed a sweeping new office, retail and parking garage complex for the site.

But the State meant something to Newarkers. It had a soul. It touched them.

And it provided the ever-changing face of Main Street a landmark to which residents could relate.

Many remember going to the State as children, piling out of station wagons to watch "The Fighting Prince of Donegal" or "Blackbeard, the Pirate."

Others remember going to the State as college students, out on their first date with that special someone.

Older residents even remember the vaudeville revues.

Yes, the State will be missed.

Already, residents and downtown workers have been collecting bricks as mementos of the old lady.

And, sadly, Newark has missed out.

Here was a chance to turn an old theater into a cultural arts center, a major draw for a downtown in need of a better mix between residents and students.

Here was a chance to build community pride, as was the case in Middletown, where residents of a much smaller and less wealthy community refurbished the Everett Theater as a splendid example of the can-do spirit.

The Everett will stand for years as a testament to their vision and their concern for their hometown.

Infant mortality data alarms

A study on infant mortality released this week contained some alarming news for Delaware. The number of babies in our state who died before their first birthday rose nearly 20 percent from 1983 to 1987.

In another recent study, Delaware ranked among the worst 10 states in infant mortality rates. The percentage of infants who die in Delaware is well above the national average.

That's very startling news for a state as prosperous as ours.

The study released this week by the Southern Regional Project on Infant Mortality examined 17 states plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. Every other state in the study reduced its infant mortality rates from 1983-1987. Only Delaware and the District of Columbia did not make progress.

These studies raise a red warning flag. There are dangerous new forces at work — particularly the growing number of pregnant women who abuse illegal drugs — which threaten the health of mothers and their children. We can not ignore this deadly problem and hope it will take care of itself.

SENATE REPORT

Joseph Biden

Governor Castle and the federal government have worked hard to lower our infant mortality rate in Delaware and across the country, but our problems are still serious. In 1987 nearly 12 babies out of every 1,000 born in Delaware did not live to see their first birthday. Globally, the United States ranked 18th in infant mortality rates in 1986, behind countries like Ireland, Spain, Hong Kong and Singapore.

What is so sadly ironic is that in the United States, we have improved the technology that can keep a premature or low birthweight baby alive. But it makes more sense to provide women with prenatal care so that their babies will not be born with these problems in the first place. Not only does it save young lives, but according to the Institute of Medicine, every dollar we spend on prenatal care saves us $3.38 in intensive care and hospitalization costs.

For many years, I have pushed for this type of investment in our children's lives. Last year Congress passed legislation to expand Medicaid coverage to pregnant women and infants which I supported. This bill passed overwhelmingly and now helps hundreds of thousands of women and infants. It will save lives as well as tax dollars.

Unfortunately, last year's legislation did not cover many pregnant women and young children who are too poor to afford medical coverage. I introduced my own legislation this year — the Health Care for Children Act — to expand coverage to the nation's poorest children until they reach the age of 18.

At the same time we help mothers and children with traditional medical care, however, we face a difficult, less traditional problem — drug abuse among pregnant women. Babies who have been exposed to drugs are most likely to be miscarried, to be born prematurely, to have very low birthweights, to have AIDS, and to have brain damage.

I have recently proposed two programs to protect the unborn children of mothers who abuse drugs. First, we should provide drug treatment on demand to every addict in the U.S., and we should start by making pregnant women and new mothers our top priority. In 1989, 375,000 drug-exposed babies will be born in the United States. That's 11 percent of all babies born. It is far safer and cheaper to get these mothers off drugs than to cure a drug-addicted baby.

I have also proposed creating a toll-free information telephone line to help pregnant drug abusers. Trial programs have been very effective and have directed women to treatment centers that they otherwise would not have found.

Our children in Delaware are much better off than most children in the world. We should be thankful for that. But we should never stop trying to improve their chances for a healthy, successful life. We must remember that there are many children in Delaware and in this country whose prospects are dim. They are not someone else's problem, they are our children, and they are our future.

POSTBOX

Rebuilding Nicaragua

To the Editor:

I was pleased to see your recent (July 20) coverage of the Pastors for Peace caravan to Nicaragua. And Newark should congratulate itself that this last, but not final, event is just one in an ongoing chain of enlightened humanitarian actions in our city.

Nicaragua is in terrible shape. And since so much more needs to be done, it is important for as many people as possible to understand that Nicaragua's problems are not due merely to Hurricane Joan or its monumental bank debt (inherited from Somoza) but to the economic embargo and covert guerrilla war that our own federal government has been waging against it.

After Somoza's fall, in fact, Nicaragua was achieving great things in public health and literacy until our government's aggression came along.

Sadly now we must spend and work to undo what Reagan and his successors have been doing with our tax dollars, all too frequently without our knowledge or consent.

For more information, and to find out how to help, people can call the Newark United Methodist Church at 368-8774 or Pacem in Terris at 656-2721. Or write Nicaragua Network, P.O. Box 221, Newark, DE 19715, or the Newark Peace Fellowship, P.O. Box 391, Newark, DE 19715-0391.

A mystery to most Delawareans is the near-away rest stop on Interstate 95.

I-95's best kept secret

by Nancy Turner

Of the Post staff

Bermuda has its triangle. Stonehenge has its rocks. And Delaware has an enigma of its own. The Delaware Turnpike Rest Area.

Nestled about midway on the state's stretch of Interstate 95, between the ramps at Del. 896 and Del. 273, is one of the Small Wonder's greatest wonders — the Marriott Travel Plaza. Also known as the Delaware Rest Area. And still to some the Hot Shoppes, although the rest area has not had a Hot Shoppe there for many years.

Shining like a beacon in the night, the rest area is an out-of-state motorist's mecca on Delaware's busy interstate corridor.

But there's more to this picture than shiny hubcaps and bright head lights.

Although the rest area has been in the same location for nearly 30 years, as strange as it may seem there are still folks who live less than 10 miles away who have either never heard of it or deny that the semi-famous landmark exists altogether.

Ask someone from Maryland or New Jersey what they think about the Delaware rest area and they'll tell you, as a couple from Baltimore told me, that "yep, she's a good one."

But if you ask a Delawarean, the first thing you'll get is likely a puzzled expression.

According to Ed Delooze, general manager of the rest area, "Delawareans need a little explanation about our location, then some of them catch on. But you wouldn't believe how many people forget about us completely."

Delawareans just don't stop there a lot. It takes more than the state's mere 11-miles of interstate highway to force a local motorist into a rest area for a coffee break.

And as half the population of the state lives within half an hour of I-95, events that traditionally send motorists screeching into rest areas can usually "wait until we get home."

So what's the big deal about the travel plaza?

Well, it's a big deal to Marriott, that's for sure.

The Marriott Corporation complex serves more than 2.4 million travelers annually — about four times as many people as live in its host state — and is ranked second largest of 110 Marriott turnpike units scattered throughout the United States.

It has received numerous awards and citations for outstanding customer service and in fact is such a gem in the corporate crown that Marriott brings restaurant employees from all over the country to Delaware for training in management.

The travel plaza houses a Bob's Big Boy Restaurant, an outpost of the Greater Wilmington Convention and Visitor's Bureau, a kiosk snack bar featuring Sbarro's pizza, a Roy Rogers, and a video arcade.

There is also a gift shop where you can buy Diamond State pennants, bumper stickers, pewter spoons and postcards. And if you didn't get a stuffed Maryland crab pillow or miniature replica of the White House while on vacation, you can buy those, too.

There are 224 employees working at the travel plaza, which is now in its busiest season. One recent week 385 tour buses stopped for meals, many of those at the Roy Rogers restaurant.

"Marriott runs a quality operation here in Delaware," said Delooze. "I'd just like to see a few more local people come out to eat with us. We've got great food here."

Those little dears

Don't read this column unless you (1) have been to summer camp, (2) are the parent of a summer camper, or (3) know someone who has been to summer camp. This column is devoted to summer campers and the letters they send and receive. Everyone knows about letters from camp. Parents who have sentenced children to summers of happy camperdom treasure them.

Printed in letters two inches tall and one inch wide, the following letter arrived from our eldest: Dear Mom and Dad, they won't let me in the dining hall for dinner 'til I write you a letter that lasts a whole page.

The middle child wrote from music camp: Dear Mom and Dad, I am getting to be a pretty good bowler. Yesterday I had two strikes and four spares. Send money, I'm bowling on credit. The food is awful.

Lydia's fastidious youngest wrote: Dear Mom and Dad, Why didn't you tell me that squishy things live in the ocean? Everything smells funny. I don't think I'll last another week.

Last July, Grace's pride and joy sent the following order from a camp in the wilds of Wyoming: Mom, it is really cold here at night. Get me some flannel jammies with feet and Federal Express them. Please put Tasty Cakes and Oreos in the package.

In spite of what you've read so far, this isn't going to be a column about cute or pathetic letters from campers. I used these letters to introduce a seldom discussed, but significant, problem: letters to campers from parents.

Experts on child development say that the happiest campers are the ones who get lots of mail every day (mail addressed to Occupant and gardening or plumbing catalogs don't count). The younger the camper, the more important the mail. These experts claim that it is a good idea for the new camper to get mail on the very first day, which means that parents who pay attention to experts have to mail letters to their children before they've even gotten suitcases and duffel bags out of the attic.

Naturally I want to be labelled Caring Parent, so I (it is the always mommies of the world who write the letters) have written lots and lots of letters to campers.

There is one small nagging problem: what to write about?

Life at my house isn't exactly the stuff of great novels or even run-of-the-mill novels. A weekly summary of the family activities won't quite fill a 3 by 5 card. Besides, the few things that I might consider noteworthy — the price of roasting chickens is down 5 cents a pound, I almost made a baby slam in bridge on Thursday night, the light-of-my-life balanced the check book on the first try, there was a traffic jam on the Kirkwood Highway Friday morning, the slugs are eating my tuberous begonias, the dog was dipped for fleas — aren't the sorts of things any of my offspring, lonesome or not, want to know about.

Equine aquacise is offered

by Nancy Turner

Of the Post staff

August was steaming outside, but the water was cool in Max Walton's swimming pool on Paper Mill Road.

As the chestnut beauty waded in slowly for her morning swim, her still, blue-glass reflection was broken by gentle ripples.

Then suddenly, her brown eyes widened with excitement. Her ears perked upward and she began to kick, first one leg, then another, then another, and another. She splashed and swirled. "Hee, hee, hee, hee!" she whinnied. It was good to be pampered.

Although having four legs is probably the most important criteria, privileged horses with special breeding gain admission into the pool at Max Walton's Farm each year in Newark.

Max Walton built the 60 by 20 foot therapeutic indoor swimming pool for injured race horses about 10 years ago and has been helping put the spark back into the steps of standard breds ever since.

Civil War reenactment planned

Fort Delaware, which played an important if less than glorious role during the Civil War, will come alive with the sights and sounds of 19th century soldiering this weekend.

Members of the Living History Society of Delaware will reenact the lives of Civil War soldiers and their families on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 18 and 19.

Society members will wear period uniforms and clothing and demonstrate weapons, marching drills, battle tactics and the daily routine of military life.

Fort Delaware, located on Pea Patch Island in the Delaware River, is an appropriate setting for the Civil War display.

The massive granite and brick fort was constructed from 1848 to 1859, and soon thereafter was armed to prevent Confederate vessels from slipping up the Delaware River.

When it became obvious that there was little to the Confederate navy, the fort was converted for use as a prison camp.

Though the wars years, it housed more than 33,000 Confederate prisoners.

At one point, following the Rebel loss at Gettysburg, Pa., the island was jammed with more than 12,000 prisoners.

Fort Delaware gained a notorious reputation because more than 2,400 prisoners died of diseases contracted on the small, marshy island.

The fort was garrisoned through World War II but is now a state park, complete with a nature trail and a wading bird sanctuary.

Admission to the fort and the park is free, however both can only be reached by a passenger ferry for which there is a fee.

The ferry is located at the foot of Clinton Street in Delaware City and makes at least two round trips each hour from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The boat fee is $2.50 per adult and $1.25 per child.

For those who cannot make the reenactment, Fort Delaware State Park is open Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from May through September.

Prepare car for vacation trips

A car that's willing to be driven around town without any serious complaints may not behave as well on a long vacation. With local driving, people can get so accustomed to car "quirks," such as a rough idle, that they fail to check into these seemingly minor problems before taking longer trips.

Unfortunately, minor or hidden problems can develop into safety hazards on a long trip. To make sure your vehicle is road-worthy for vacation driving, Ron Jester, University of Delaware Extension safety specialist, offers the following car safety checklist:

• Examine all tires, including the spare.

• Fill the radiator or coolant recovery tank to recommended level with a 50-50 mixture of antifreeze and water.

• Check every hose you can reach, and replace any that are cracked, brittle or soft.

• Have your car tuned up if it's difficult to start, idles roughly or stalls.

• Examine the battery for frayed cables, loose clamps and corrosion around the terminals.

• Check brakes for adjustment or low fluid level.

• Top off fluids for power steering, transmission, brakes and windshield-wipers. Also top off oil, but it if looks or feels gritty, change oil and filter.

• Check headlights, tail lights, brake lights, hazard lights, overhead lights, turn signals, emergency brake, horn, air conditioner, heater fan and defroster.

• Test windshield wipers. Jester advises a careful, pre-vacation car inspection to ensure a safer, happier trip.

Brooks, Rice selected readers

Christian Science readers Dr. Doris B. Brooks and Sandra Jean Rice, both of Newark.

Dr. Doris B. Brooks and Sandra Jean Rice, both of Newark, are the new first and second readers at First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Wilmington.

The women were elected during a membership meeting to serve three-year terms conducting services at the church. The Christian Science church is composed entirely of lay people.

Their primary responsibility will be to conduct the 10:30 a.m. Sunday service. Rice will read scriptural citations, and Brooks will follow with correlative passages from the denomination's textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

These readings comprise a Bible lesson-sermon which has been studied worldwide the previous week by Christian Scientists.

The Sunday service also includes repetition of "The Lord's Prayer," hymns, responsive Bible readings by the congregation, and a solo.

Brooks will conduct the church's Wednesday evening meeting with readings from the Bible and "Science and Health" on a topic of her selection.

Besides hymn singing, the Wednesday meetings include a period set aside for members of the congregation to share experiences of Christian healing as understood in Christian Science.

A native of Delaware, Brooks is dean of development at Delaware Technical and Community College. She has founded many programs during a 20-year career with Del Tech.

Brooks received her doctor of education degree in educational leadership from the University of Delaware.

Among her community contributions, she recently served as president of the Peoples Settlement Association.

Rice has taught in New Castle County schools for more than 16 years.

She was a reading resource teacher at McCullough Elementary School in New Castle, and is now a Chapter I reading specialist there.

Rice holds a master's degree in reading and language education from the University of Delaware.

Brooks and Rice succeed Aileen Hutnik and Alma Greeley as readers for the church.

Faith Baptist Church hosts
'An Evening of Sacred Music'

"An Evening of Sacred Music," featuring Samuel Hsu and Ronald Alan Matthews of the Philadelphia College of Bible, will be presented Sunday, Aug. 20 at Faith Baptist Church, 4210 Limestone Rd.

The free concert will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the church's Family Center, and nursery will be provided.

Dr. Hsu is chairman of piano instruction and instructor in music history at the Philadelphia College of Bible.

He began music studies at age nine at Shanghai National Conservatory and earned bachelor's degrees in Bible and music at Philadelphia College of Bible.

Hsu completed his doctorate in historical musicology at the University of California at Santa Barbara in 1972 and soon thereafter joined the Philadelphia faculty.

Matthews is chairman of the department of music at the Philadelphia College of Bible.

He holds a bachelor's degree in music from Westminster

Choir College, a master's in choral conducting from Temple University, and a doctorate in composition and conducting from Combs College.

Matthews taught for six years at Nyack College in New York before joining the Philadelphia faculty.

He has conducted and recorded with the Jerusalem Chamber Orchestra and is organist and music director of Calvary Presbyterian Church in Willow Grove.

Prison Fellowship program
topic of September meeting

An informational meeting on Prison Fellowship's New Castle County community service projects will be held Thursday, Sept. 14 at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, 503 Duncan Rd., near Wilmington.

Community service projects are projects of restitution, reconciliation and alternative sentencing in which inmates are furloughed for two weeks to work on the homes of needy county residents.

The inmates are carefully screened by Prison Fellowship and the Delaware Department of Corrections before being released.

While on furlough, they are housed by area Christians and provided meals by local churches.

Edward Codelia, area director for Prison Fellowship, will be on hand to answer questions.

For information on the meeting, call Peggy Laird at 478-1208 or Fay Whittle at 368-2813.

Bibles will be sent to Eastern European Christians

NEW YORK — The American Bible Society has announced that the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe will be the primary focus of its 1989 Bible Sunday.

Bible Sunday, observed each year near Thanksgiving, is a program in which the Society sends copies of the Bible to a designated part of the world.

"Opportunities are opening up so fast for scripture distribution in the USSR, faster than any of us could have dreamed possible even a year ago," said the Rev. Fred A. Allen, Society director of church relations. "We just cannot let those doors slam shut."

Allen said there are believed to be about 60 million Christians in the Soviet Union alone, and millions more in the Eastern bloc.

Those people have just three-to-four million Bibles among them.

Earlier this year, Society officials were astounded when leading church figures in Moscow issued them an open challenge to export 20 million

Bibles to the Soviet Union.

The Society has been supplying the people of the Soviet Union with Bibles for many years, and has seen the flow increase dramatically since 1985.

Allen said churches throughout the United States will be asked to take up love offerings on Bible Sunday, Nov. 19, to support the $3 million project.

William Broomall.

William Broomall is Eagle Scout

□ William J. Broomall III, 14, of Newark, was awarded the rank of Eagle Scout, Boy Scouting's highest honor, during a ceremony held recently at Holy Angels Catholic Church.

Broomall is the son of William and Carol Broomall of Elizabeth Court, Newark. He is the first member of Boy Scout Troop 205 to attain the rank of Eagle.

Broomall was one of seven original members of the troop, formed in 1985. He has served as patrol leader, assistant senior patrol leader and senior patrol leader, and is a member of the troop leadership corps.

Other achievements in Scouting include the mile swim, World Conservation Award, Paul Bunyan Axman, and membership in the Order of the Arrow. He also has earned more than 25 merit badges.

Broomall's Eagle project consisted of planning and leadership in the preparation and construction of a playground at Holy Angels School.

Broomall will be a sophomore at St. Mark's High School this fall.

Dennison attends 4-H program

□ Chris Dennison of Newark was one of seven Delaware 4-H members who attended a special citizenship program at the National 4-H Center in Chevy Chase, Md.

Citizenship-Washington Focus attracted 4,000 American teens. The theme of the program, designed to help young people understand how government functions, was "A People's Power."

Ruth and Henry Brader.

Braders mark 50th anniversary

□ Ruth and Henry Brader of Calgary Road, Newark, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday, Aug. 12.

One hundred friends and relatives attended a celebration Sunday, Aug. 13 at the DelCastelle Inn.

The Braders have lived in Newark since 1948. Henry worked in the Newark schools as a principal from 1948 to 1978 and the new Brader Elementary School in Four Seasons development was named in his honor.

Delaware Hospice seeks volunteers

□ Delaware Hospice needs volunteers to assist in its programs of care for the terminally ill.

Volunteers may choose to be involved in direct support of hospice patients and families, assist in the bereavement program, or help office staff with a variety of clerical duties.

Volunteer time is flexible and can be arranged to fit into anyone's schedule.

All volunteers receive complete training, with fall training sessions to be offered at convenient locations throughout New Castle County beginning in late September.

For information, contact Barbara Connell, Delaware Hospice volunteer coordinator, at 478-5707.

Delaware Hospice is a statewide non-profit organization which provides in-home care for the terminally ill and support for their families.

Controlling those pesky crickets

As long as it's coming from outside, the loud chirping of crickets on a summer night in late summer and early fall can be a pleasant sound.

But when crickets invade your house, their constant singing can quickly lose its charm.

According to Dr. Dewey Caron, University of Delaware Extension entomologist, a few crickets in the house is a normal occurrence. "It's difficult to keep an occasional one from coming in, and then it's difficult to get rid of it," Caron says. "Even though you can hear the constant chirping, it's not easy to locate the source."

Crickets may be especially attracted to houses near grassy areas, refuse areas and lighted areas. They gain entry to homes through cracks, basements, and open or loose-fitting doors and windows.

Caron says crickets are an annoying pest primarily because of the noise they make. But if large numbers get indoors, their symphony could be the least of your worries.

For instance, crickets can damage wool, silk, furs, cotton, linen and rayon clothing, particularly if it's in storage or soiled and left lying on the floor. They also can damage a wide variety of foods and paper products.

With this season's weather, breeding conditions for crickets are good, the entomologist says. Because of the heavy moisture, predictions are that cricket numbers will be higher than usual this year.

In Delaware, there are several species of crickets. According to Caron, the two that are of greatest concern are the house cricket and the field cricket.

House crickets cause the real damage. The trouble with this species is that it often sets up permanent housekeeping and will reproduce indoors. It's a light yellowish-brown color and grows about 3/4 of an inch long.

Field crickets are larger and darker — either black or dark brown which makes it easy to distinguish them from their more destructive cousins.

They're not really adapted for indoor living, Caron says, but they will invade a house or other structure at times when their outdoor populations are high or when food is scarce.

Sanitation is a good first step for cricket control, the entomologist says. Remove trash, and keep vegetation away from the exterior of the house. Also repair and close areas through which crickets and other insects might gain entry.

According to Caron, treating around the outside foundation with a residual spray is an effective way to prevent entry. For the isolated crickets that may be an annoyance in the house, you can use an aerosol.

"If you have an infestation of house crickets, insecticidal treatment may be necessary indoors," Caron says. Apply residual sprays in any non-food preparation areas the crickets frequent — along baseboards, in closets, under stairways and around fireplaces. Use malathion or diazinon, or have a pest control operator do the job professionally, Caron advises.

Once you've taken the necessary steps to make sure the crickets stay outside where they belong, you may not mind their chirping. Crickets — nature's fiddlers — produce their shrill music by rubbing their wings together, says Caron.

When the common field cricket wants to make his call, he raises his wings to an approximate 45-degree angle from his body. A file on one wing rasps against a scraper on the other, producing a sound that's pleasing to some people and irritating to others.

During this fiddling process, called stridulation, the insect controls the volume and direction of the sound by changing the position of its wings in relation to its body. Only adult male crickets chirp, Caron says. Females, with ears in their knees, listen. Wingless baby crickets are seen but not heard.

Entomologists have found that crickets have several songs with different meanings, Caron notes. Some are love songs, while others announce danger. Still others are the equivalent of "Here I am! Where are you?"

HORSE

This summer his nephew, Andy Feldmann, who is a junior animal science major at the University of Delaware, is controlling the reigns of the operation.

"The pool is really good for any sore joints that a horse has," said Feldmann. "Just like a human with a sprained ankle, they'll have to stay off of it, but we have to keep race horses racing or else we'll take a loss on them."

Most horses race about once a week and the good ones will win five out of 30 starts, he explained.

DEARS

However, sending a letter that says, "Dear child, Nothing much has happened this week," is unacceptable Caring Parent behavior. Lying sets a bad example; thus you aren't allowed to write: Dear Child, since you plained.

"If you swim them, you can give them their exercise and keep them off their feet at the same time. Ten minutes of swimming is equivalent to about five miles of jogging. It's also good therapy because this water is cold, 52 degrees, year round. And as they swim, it circulates around their legs so it's like a cold whirlpool for a horse with bad legs."

Well, maybe it's not exactly a Swiss health spa, but The Farm offers jogging in the morning, three meals per day, rub downs, constant hoof care and a cool dip in Max's pool can make any guest who "sweats like a horse" feel refreshed.

Just ask Tucker's Rule, one of the farm's best swimmers and a favorite at the Brandywine race track, or H.H. Bridget, or Downright Upright.

"Some of them like to play in the pool," said Feldmann. "They'll keep their heads up and sink down and try to touch the bottom with their back feet a little. Then some of them will just loaf. I think they really like it on a hot day, but they hate getting their ears wet."

"Sometimes first-time swimmers will just walk right into the water because they don't know what they are getting into," said Feldmann. Then there are a few horses that "don't ever take well to water. We've got a wench and we've cranked them into the water and we've tried blindfolding them to get them in, but if they really don't want to go, there's really nothing we can do to change their minds."

Indeed, sometimes breeding has its privileges.

really big. Send money.

Or, my very favorite suggestion: avoid the problem and go to Mommy Camp where sending or receiving mail is strictly forbidden.
