Dr. Hulihan Will Be Decorated By France

To Be Made Knight Of Legion Of Honor In Recognition Of Foreign Study Work; P. S. Du Pont To Be Made Officer

At noon tomorrow, at a luncheon at the French Embassy, Dr. Walter Hulihan, president of the University of Delaware, will be made a knight of the Legion of Honor of France, receiving his decoration from the hands of Paul Chudel, Ambassador of France. At the same time Pierre S. Du Pont will be made an officer of the Legion of Honor. Mr. Du Pont is already a knight of the order.

This high honor will be conferred on Dr. Hulihan for his origination of the foreign study plan. Mr. Du Pont will receive his decoration for his great help and consideration in charitable and educational work in France since the war. Mr. Du Pont was made a knight shortly after the close of the war, during which, among other services, he furnished all the anesthetics used in a French hospital for one year.

Those from Delaware who will attend the luncheon when the presentation is made will be: Mr. and Mrs. Pierre S. du Pont, Mr. and Mrs. R. Rodney Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Odell, Mrs. William K. du Pont, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Reese, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Scott, of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Thompson, of Greenville; Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hulihan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Evans, Professor R. W. Kirkbride, who is in charge of the foreign study work of the University of Delaware, all of Newark, and Madame de Jouzel, of France, who is now visiting in Wilmington. The officials of the French Embassy will be the others present.

Ira Ellis Appointed to Beacom Faculty

Ira T. Ellis, who last June graduated from the University of Delaware, yesterday began work as a member of the faculty of the Beacom Business College, in Wilmington. Mr. Ellis returns to Beacom as a teacher less than two weeks after he graduated from that institution.

Mr. Ellis was born in Ridgely, Maryland. He began his primary school work at Rehoboth, later entered the Wilmington public schools, then was graduated from Caesar Rodney High School in 1921. He later entered Wesley College Institute, taking some college "prep" work.

In September, 1923, Mr. Ellis entered the University of Delaware, and graduated in June, 1927, with the A. B. degree, having pursued the course in education. Due to the fact that he covered more work in education than is required to get the degree, he earned several additional credits. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity and the Phi Kappa Honor Society.

After graduating from Delaware, Mr. Ellis entered Beacom College at once and graduated from Beacom December 22, with high honors. While a student at Beacom, Mr. Ellis made the highest perfect record that has so far been turned into the Royal Typewriter Company, writing 95 words a minute, without error, for 15 consecutive minutes. In recognition of this standing record, Mr. Ellis was awarded a Royal typewriter, which was delivered to him in Wilmington by air truck from Hartford, Connecticut.

Mr. Ellis is secretary to the Young Men's Bible Class of Grace Church; and he is a member of the Beacom College Club.

Dr. E. B. Crooks, of the faculty of the University, was the speaker at the annual dinner of the Leather Manufacturing Company of New Castle, in the Club Room of Hotel Du Pont-Baltimore, last Thursday evening. The subject of Dr. Crooks' address was, "The Application of Psychology to Employment Problems." Guests at the dinner included the officers and executives of the company.

High School Athletes To Receive Letters

Ensignias To Be Presented Friday; Rigid Dismissal Precautions; School Hours

At the Friday assembly of the Newark High School the members of three athletic teams will be awarded letters. The coaches of the teams will present the players and Professor Brinser will award the coveted letters.

Mr. Thomas Malin, football coach will present the following players: John Dayett, Vincent Mayer, Amos Jaquette, Alfred Vansant, Warren Johnson, Raymond McDowell, David Cole, Irvin Smith, Joseph Gam, George Cook, John Holloway, Frank Mayer, Alec Zabenko, Wallace Newcomb and James Crooks.

Mr. Earl Keller, coach of soccer, will present the following boys for letters in that sport: Paul Whiteman, Raymond Benson, Ray Walton, Norwood Carroll, John Edmondson, William Lyons, Miles Coverdale, William Coverdale, Frank Mayer, Roy Gibbons, Curtis Potts and Archibald Wallis.

Members of the girls hockey team who will be presented by Mrs. Louise Duffy, coach, are: Ann Chalmers, Willa Dawson, Dorothy McVey, Elizabeth Dean, Anna Frazer, Rachel Sherwood, Pauline Robinson, Martha Jaquette, Lucy Danby, Dorothy Wheelless and Edna McVey.

The shocking tragedy in Los Angeles, where a school girl was lured from school and murdered by a degenerate has caused the local school authorities to establish rigid regulations regarding the dismissal of pupils, and to take every precaution against any such thing occurring to any pupil in the Newark schools. A letter will be sent to all parents, today, enclosed with the monthly report, explaining the new restrictions.

School Hours

Now that the reorganization of classes in the various buildings has been completed, the schedule of school hours is as follows: All school doors will open at 8:30 in the morning. Doors will open in the Main street and Delaware avenue buildings at 12:50 noon and at 1:00 o'clock in the new building. All buildings will begin morning classes at 8:45. Afternoon classes will begin at 1:00 in the Main street and Delaware avenue buildings and at 1:10 in the new building.

TWO SMALL FIRES

The Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company was called on Sunday and again on Monday to put out fires.

The Sunday call was to the home of A. B. Foote, just east of town, to extinguish a chimney fire. There was little damage.

On Monday an oil stove, burning in the house adjoining the store of George Law at Chapel and Main streets, set fire to the carpet. A call was sent to the Fire Company and the first engine was at the fire before the siren had finished sounding. The firemen found a dense smoke, but putting on masks they soon discovered the fire and extinguished it. The quick response of the Fire Company averted what might have been a serious fire. The smoke was so stifling that no one could get into the room without a face covering.

Rudolph Koehler Made Insane By Bandit Blows

Man Who Was Killed In A Leap From Train Had Been Attacked In Philadelphia

The remains of Rudolph Koehler, of Baltimore, who, while a passenger on Pennsylvania Railroad train No. 425 Friday night, suddenly became insane and jumped from the train a half mile south of Elkton, were claimed by an undertaker from Baltimore Sunday and taken to the latter city for burial.

Koehler for the past year was employed as a cutter in a tailoring establishment on Walnut street, Philadelphia, and made frequent trips to Baltimore to see his parents, and his wife and child who reside at 411 North Castle street, Baltimore, and he was making his usual trip when he became insane and leaped from the train.

When the man jumped from the rear platform of the train he landed between the tracks and evidently was knocked unconscious, and before he could be found, two other fast express trains had passed over the tracks and struck the body, cutting it to pieces, as both trains when they arrived in Washington, carried a portion of his body, which was so terribly cut and mangled that a small keg held all that the railroad employees could find of the unfortunate man.

Koehler was an ex-service man and while over seas he was shell shocked. At one time he was under treatment at the government hospital at Perry Point.

For the past year he had been working in Philadelphia and when he paid his fare to the conductor of the

Delaware Lower Classes Hold Rush In Dover

Police Quell Riot Following Frosh Banquet; Sophs Take Gasoline From Frosh Buses

The freshman and sophomore classes of the University of Delaware, this year, honored Dover with their annual brawl. The Dover police did not handle the matter as nonchalantly as the Wilmington police took care of the situation last year, but the fighting was quelled about as effectively. However, before order was restored, guns were flourished and several sophomores collared by the officers. No arrests were made, but it is probable that several bills will be rendered to the sophomore class.

According to custom, the time and place of the freshman banquet was kept a dead secret, and during the afternoon, yesterday, the "frosh" quietly slipped off to Dover in Traction Company buses. The banquet was held in the Dover High School and served to the 55 freshmen by the Dover High School seniors. The secret leaked out, however, and the sophs started for Dover in one of Stiltz's buses. They were plentifully supplied with ammunition in the form of pound bags of flour, and cabbages, turnips and eggs that were not of the latest vintage. The sophs did not reach Dover until the banquet was over and the freshmen were entering the Dover Opera House to attend the show. The sophs laid down a barrage of flour, but the frosh slipped inside and no fracas occurred at that time.

The sophs, however, waited and when the frosh came out after the show, they came fighting. There was a general mixup, in which a window

Delaware Graduate Wins Fame In Designing Electrical Equipment For Holland Tunnel

Joseph P. Maxwell Chief Design And Switchboard Engineer For All Ventilation, Lighting And Traffic Equipment Of Hudson River Tunnel

The following article from the Wilmington Evening News tells of the prominent part a young engineer, Joseph P. Maxwell, had in designing the electrical equipment for the new Holland tunnel under the Hudson River. Mr. Maxwell was graduated from the University of Delaware in 1919 with a B. S. in electrical engineering. In 1924 he returned to receive the advanced degree of Electrical Engineer.

"A Wilmington electrical engineer was responsible for the electrical equipment of the new Holland tunnel, under the Hudson River, connecting New York and Jersey City. This man is Joseph P. Maxwell, now a resident of Pittsburgh, Pa., being connected with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. He is a native of Wilmington, having been born in the Highlands section of the city. He is a graduate of the Wilmington High School and University of Delaware, and for a time was employed by the du Pont Engineering Company, in the du Pont Building, here.

"The Holland tunnel project presented many untried features when it was in the making. Therefore, it was necessary to make an exhaustive study of the subject and fit the plans for its various features accordingly. Among other things, a comparatively new element, monoxide gas, issuing from motor cars, had to be reckoned with in the ventilating scheme. There were other new things to be considered. That success crowned the efforts of the designers was, therefore, especially gratifying, as they had been practically exploring an unknown world in the planning. It is interesting to Wilmingtonians, therefore, to know that, as a representative of the Westinghouse Company, Mr. Maxwell was the chief switchboard and design engineer for all of the ventilating, traffic and lighting equipment of the tunnel. He had full responsibility for all of this. Mr. Maxwell was electrical designer and switchboard engineer for his company in the electrification of the Virginia Railway system, which work preceded the tunnel job.

Unique and Delicate Undertaking

"The Holland tunnel of itself being intended for the safe conduct of thousands of human beings and hundreds of vehicles under the Hudson River each day, was a particularly delicate undertaking. This was especially true of the electrical equipment, the purpose of which was to keep traffic moving and protect the lives of those using the tubes.

"Ducts were planned to force in fresh air and carry off that which is impure. The ducts begin and end in four buildings, two on each side of the river. They are electrically operated and so arranged as to automatically do their work, under, of course, human supervision. There is a control system, with telltale switchboards, which show at all times exactly how every unit of equipment is acting, with everything constantly under control, so as to take care of any emergency that may arise.

"The handling of traffic is another matter that the electricians had to work out. Because of the unusual conditions that might present themselves at any time, the engineers had to work out a unique plan, but one which, so far as results have shown, seems to be thoroughly effective. The ordinary moving of traffic was only an incident in the planning. There had to be considered the matter of accidents, automobiles catching fire and such other things as might happen in a vehicular caravan at any time or place. It was also necessary to plan for ambulance, relief truck and fire engine service, when, because of proximity, or for some other reason, it might be necessary to operate emergency vehicles against traffic, a special way being readily cleared. Also, the equipment was so designed to provide for unusual safeguards to be thrown around the outfits and its operation. For example, while there are several controls, there is a key that prevents more than one person operating any part of the equipment at the same time.

"The tunnel seems to be doing all that it was expected to do, greatly relieving the traffic situation between the city of New York and the state of New Jersey."

Big Laying Increase In Egg Record Club

Year's Summary Shows Enormous Gain Over Averages Of Preceding Year; Important Conference In Dover

The year's summary of the Delaware Farm Egg Record Club, whose year ended on October 31, shows an enormous increase in egg production over the preceding year. One hundred eighteen farms kept complete records for the year and the averages on classes of flocks were as follows: 155.7 eggs per pullet, 134.4 eggs per hen, and 140.5 for mixed flocks. Last year's averages were: 14.7 eggs per pullet, 10 eggs per hen, and 20.5 eggs per bird in mixed flocks.

The above averages were based on the average birds on hand each month. Taking the original number of birds on hand November 1, 1926 and dividing it into the total eggs gathered during the year it was found that the pullets laid 117.4 eggs each, the hens 111.4 eggs each, and the mixed flocks 112.3 eggs each. This production figure based on the original number of birds on hand at the beginning of the year is the real test of a flock. It is the test that birds must stand when they are entered into official egg-laying contests.

The highest record in the Club was made by a flock of 400 pullets that averaged 187.3 eggs per bird. The high record for hens was made by a flock of 370 that produced an average of 144.6 eggs per bird. The high mixed flock record was 156.9 eggs per bird, made by a flock of 1,661 birds consisting of 1,206 pullets and 455 hens.

Fifty-nine of the 118 farms were recorded at the end of the year as mixed flocks. In 37 of these mixed flocks the pullets and hens were kept together all the year, and the average production per bird was 93.1 eggs. In the other 22 flocks that were recorded as mixed, the hens and pullets were kept separate at least during the four or five fall and winter months, and they averaged to lay 118.1 eggs per bird over the other group. These records, or a difference of 25 eggs per production figures are based on the original number of birds. (Total eggs for the year divided by birds on hand November 1, 1926.)

November Record

With 152 farms reporting for the first month of the new year, November, the total averages were: pullets, 9.1 eggs per bird; hens, 2.5 eggs per bird; mixed flocks, 6 eggs per bird. The highest flock averages were: 20.5 eggs per bird for a flock of 450 pullets; 12.3 eggs per bird for a flock of 394 hens; and 16.4 for a mixed flock of 75 birds. The total average production in November, 1926, was 7.8 eggs for pullets, 3.3 for hens, and 4.7 for mixed flocks.

To Hold Meeting

W. C. Mathews, of Hockessin, president of the Delaware State Poultry Association, has called a meeting of the executive committee of the Association, to be held in Dover on January 9. The object of the meeting is to check on the membership for 1928. At this meeting there will be a conference between the executive committee, the State Board of Agriculture, and H. S. Palmer, extension poultryman at the University of Delaware. The executive committee will consider the State Board program as regards extension department, and of regards poultry and that of the University suggestions which will tend to promote a more effective co-operation between the two bodies.

HIGH SCHOOL CARD PARTY

The executive committee of the Alumni Association of the Newark High School met at the High School on Monday evening. It was decided that the Association should sponsor a card party to be given at the High School on the evening of February 21. The proceeds from the party will be placed in the Alumni Scholarship Fund.

COUNCIL MEETS

The Town Council held its regular monthly meeting, last night in the Council rooms. Nothing but routine business was brought up or discussed. The alderman's fees were reported to be $81.

Sheriff's Alertness Averts Jail Break

Negro Prisoner Caught At Jail Wall When Sheriff Allows Plot To Partially Go Through; Accomplish Forced To His Part Of Plan

Alertness on the part of Sheriff Clinton Logan, of Cecil County, averted a New Year's break for liberty from Cecil County jail in Elkton that might have involved many of the 40 prisoners now in the jail. The plot was allowed to partially go through in order to catch one of the plotters, and Joseph Gray, negro, charged with assault on his wife and held for the Federal authorities in Bluefield, W. Va., ran into the arms of deputies, who were waiting to catch him. Walter Scott, his accomplice, another negro, was made to go through his part of the plan in order to catch Gray.

Scott threw a rope over the jail wall to Gray, who was taken by the deputies as he grabbed it. He tried to explain that he was looking for a hot water bottle full of liquor that a friend was to pass to him.

The Cecil County jail is so crowded now that no attempt is made to lock the cells. The door to the corridor which leads to the jail yard, is the only barrier to the prisoners, with the exception of the high brick wall.

Sheriff Logan discovered last Friday that the lock on this outside door had been sawed and carefully concealed. He suspected Scott, who was scheduled for release, after serving a term for violating an automobile law, on Saturday.

Saturday morning, Scott said his time was up and he wanted to get out. The sheriff told him that he wouldn't be released until he produced the saw with which he severed the lock. He, at first, denied having a saw or tampering with the lock. "All right," said the Sheriff. "You'll just cool your heels in the jail here until you produce that saw."

Apparently this warning, which the sheriff had no intention of carrying out, were the magical words needed. It wasn't long before the negro sent word to the sheriff that he would give up the saw and tell everything if given his liberty. He then told the sheriff that he was to come back to the jail after midnight the next morning to throw a rope over the wall so Gray could escape.

Sheriff Logan told him he could go free if he would go through with the plot as scheduled so as to catch Gray in the attempted break and so substantiate his own story. The negro agreed to this.

Deputy Sheriff Clark and Oscar Humes were detailed to wait in the jail yard for the proposed break. Shortly after midnight, Scott took his position along the railroad within sight of Gray's cell window. With a flash light, Scott gave the signal. It was not very long before the deputies, carefully hidden in the yard, saw Gray carefully open the door and start a search along the wall. At first he failed to see the rope, with a brick tied to it, dangling over the wall. Finally he spied it, and as he started for it he ran into the arms of one of the deputies. He was returned to the jail without further trouble.

Gray was locked up in a cell that is designed, particularly for dangerous prisoners.

BANK BUSINESS GROWS

Comparative statements for 1927 and 1917 for the Farmers Trust Company of Newark shows that the business of that institution has increased over 100 per cent in the last ten years. Its resources in 1917 were $842,425.46, and at the close of this year, $1,747,504.76. During 1927 the deposits increased nearly $100,000.

It was just about a year ago that the Farmers Trust Company moved into its new building, which is one of the most handsome and completely equipped banking institutions in the State.

WILL SELL CHRYSLERS

The Rittenhouse Motor Company, agent for Star cars, has taken over the garage next to their present quarters on South College avenue, and will add Chrysler models to their line. The new building has been remodeled and repainted, and will include a showroom and repair department.

Determined To Die Poor, George G. Booth Gives Fortune To Found Unique School

Detroit Publisher Establishes Cranbrook Cultural Community As A Place For Youth To Develop Talents; Gives Entire Fortune Of $12,000,000

"When George G. Booth, publisher of The Detroit News, gave $12,000,000 to establish the Cranbrook Foundation, he did more than enroll himself with scores of American philanthropists who felt that they owed something to the communities in which they lived. He is determined to quit the world as poor as he came into it. If he accomplishes that he will stand, in all probability, without a parallel in the annals of American philanthropy. Moreover, his wife and his children not only encourage him in that course, but actually assist him in stripping himself of a fortune which it has taken over a generation to accumulate and which is to be applied to fostering the arts through education.

"The Cranbrook Foundation supplies evidence of a new tendency, increasingly manifest of late years, in giving away large sums of money. Charitable institutions will always attract gifts for the simple reason that the poor are always with us. But there is nothing constructive about almsgiving, even on a large scale—which is probably why it is emotionally unsatisfactory to a man who has been suspected for gold in Alaska, built railroads in the wilderness or driven oil wells in Oklahoma. The hundreds of millions that rich pioneers have bequeathed in the last half century have therefore been devoted largely to furthering both the spiritual and material progress of the United States. If the sciences and the arts flourish as never before in this country, it is because of the schools, laboratories and museums that have been endowed by millionaires.

"The manner in which a man gives away a huge fortune invariably reveals his character and personal taste. Cranbrook Foundation is as perfect a reflection of this as we are likely to find in the annals of American philanthropy.

A Love of Design

"George Booth ought to have been an artist or at least a craftsman. Accident made him a publisher of newspapers and native commercial ability a successful business man. At his own insistence a book-loving, deeply religious father consented to his entering an architect's office and thus satisfying a love of form and design. Later George Booth became a foundryman and eventually the proprietor of a small shop in which ornamental ironwork was fashioned. He was on the road to success when he married the daughter of James E. Scripps, founder of The Detroit News, who was at that time far from wealthy. At Scripps' insistence Booth sold his prospering foundry and entered the untrodden field of journalism as business manager of The Detroit News at a salary of $40 a week.

"The News was successful, but competition was sharp. Soon opportunity gave a few slip taps. Booth bought and sold profitably two or three small newspapers in various places. Eventually he and his brother acquired a number of newspapers in Michigan. To consolidate their holdings the brothers formed the Booth Publishing Company, which owns eight newspapers. It is George Booth's majority interest in this company—practically his entire fortune, inasmuch as his holding in The Detroit News, chiefly owned by the James E. Scripps estate, is small—that has now been made the basis of the trust that is to maintain Cranbrook and carry out his plans.

"George Booth's office suggests that of an architect rather than that of a business man. The usual flat-top desk gives place to an Italian desk. On the walls are pictures than an artist would select for his living room. In the Booth home the same artistic taste is expressed. Old masters on the walls, pieces of ancient and medieval statuary, furniture made by craftsmen centuries ago, a library of thousands of books, most of them devoted to the fine arts, the half-timbered house itself—everything testifies to a pronounced artistic bent. If George Booth had clung to architecture or to his iron foundry he might not have acquired a fortune of $12,000,000, but he would certainly have won distinction as a builder of good houses or of gates and fences that bore the stamp of a craftsman who was carrying on the best traditions of an old craft.

"Cranbrook Foundation was foreshadowed by Booth's patronage of modern artists and craftsmen, his virtual creation and long and generous support of the Detroit Society of Arts and Crafts, whose program includes the maintenance of an art school; his gifts to the Detroit Institute of Arts, his endowment of traveling scholarships for the architectural students of the University of Michigan, and his donations of art objects and architectural models to the University's College of Architecture.

"Booth began to wonder how he ought to dispose of his fortune twenty-five years ago when he bought an estate in Bloomfield Hills, north of Detroit, and called it Cranbrook. After he had built a house to his taste, carried out his own landscape-gardening plans and laid out roads himself, other wealthy men bought land around him. Bloomfield Hills, once sparsely settled, soon needed a school for children. There was none. So George Booth and his wife built a neighborhood school, at one corner of Cranbrook, a beautiful, rambling building resembling an English farmhouse, half timbered, with casement windows.

"With the establishment of this school the Cranbrook Foundation began to take form. In 1925 George Booth and his wife, who contributed from her personal income, gave the property and the money to support it to trustees, with full power to conduct the school as they thought best.

"The Children's School took care of the early years of instruction. After them—what? The answer, in part, took the form of Cranbrook School for boys, which was opened last Autumn with seventy-four students, and which when completed will have room for 200. The school has its own land, its own endowment, which is administered by a Board of Trustees, and its own non-sectarian Board of Directors.

"Here we have a collection of buildings that bear the stamp of a strong individuality. They were designed by Eliel Saarinen, a celebrated Finnish architect, who came from Helsingfors by invitation to teach in the College of Architecture of the University of Michigan. Saarinen won an international reputation and second prize in the competitions conducted to obtain suitable plans for Canberra, the new capital of Australia, and for the tower of The Chicago Tribune. With his wife and son he is now installed in a studio at Cranbrook, free to do what he pleases in designing beautiful buildings. Another studio is that of Professor Geza Maroti of Budapest, a sculptor and painter, who is designing the architectural decorations.

A Community Church

"The community needed a church. Booth and his wife decided to provide it. Betram G. Goodhue, in his lifetime the foremost American exponent of Gothic architecture, was engaged to design it. It is nearing completion, but at a cost about twice that originally contemplated, because the project has been expanded. Thus the modest bells that were originally called for have become a carillon of forty-six, the gift of Booth's daughter and son-in-law. All the Booth children have given to the church. George Booth's personality and taste are expressed not only in the structure as a whole, but in a chapel dedicated to St. Dunstan, patron saint of craftsmen, and in carved images of early church dignitaries as well as of Orville Wright, Lincoln, Gutenberg, Faraday and the late Bishop Charles D. Williams.

The remaining portion of Cranbrook, comprising some 133 acres, will be devoted to a School for Girls, the plans of which are being drawn by Henry Scripps Booth; a School for Arts and Crafts, and an Academy of Arts. All the schools are to have as masters and instructors, artists and craftsmen of high rank, who, with the pupils they will attract, will form an artists' settlement or colony.

"Mr. Booth's expressed purpose in assembling these schools is to add to and strengthen the educational facilities within the State of Michigan. His expectation is that the masters in the Academy of Arts and the School of Crafts will reside in the schools and that the students will be tutored by the apprentice method. In the Cranbrook School and in the School for Girls, arts and handicraft will be taught. Pupils showing talent will be encouraged to continue their studies in the Academy of Arts or in the School of Arts and Crafts; others will be prepared for college.

No Evidence Woman Is McKown's Widow

Cecil Court Dismisses Case Of Woman Claiming To Have Married Wealthy Bachelor

Whether Samuel McKown, wealthy fortune hunter and veteran of the Klondike gold rush, died a bachelor, or he was supposed to have lived, or whether he married during the heyday of his roving career, a New York school teacher, who is now claiming the dower right to administer his estate, is the interesting question that a jury in the Circuit Court of Cecil County has been asked to decide.

Attorney Joshua S. Clayton, who with J. F. Evans, is counsel for the woman who first made her appearance here as "Miss Ida Bloomfield," and later as "Mrs. Ida Bloomfield McKown," told the court and jury in his opening statement that he had witnesses to prove that the marriage did take place and that the couple spent at least one night in a boarding house in New York after they had announced their marriage.

The defense counsel, who is resisting the efforts to have the court vacate the order naming Harry McKown of Charlestown, as administrator, is said to be pinning its hopes on the reported failure of the woman's counsel to produce any documentary evidence that the marriage was performed, and also the fact that the minister, alleged to have performed the ceremony, is dead.

The story that was unfolded before the court runs almost like a page from a romantic novel of a few generations ago. Fiction writers have made novels galore on material, no less picturesque or romantic.

McKown spent the last fifteen or twenty years of life quietly at his old home in Charlestown, from whence he set out to win fortune more than fifty years ago. When he died, it was reported that he left will invested a fortune, most of which had been made in the goldfields of the far west and Alaska. He built a nice home in Charlestown, and lived there, known as a bachelor until he died last January. He was 72 years old when he died.

One day the early part of last year, not so very long after McKown's death, an elderly woman, well dressed and of cultured appearance, called at the office of the clerk of the Orphans' Court and asked if there had been a bequest left in the will of Mr. McKown for "Miss Ida Bloomfield."

Told that the man died intestate, the woman left the court without any further inquiries.

About two months later a bill was filed by Mr. Clayton, asking the Orphans' Court to vacate the order, naming Harry McKown as administrator of the estate, and to appoint Mrs. Ida Bloomfield McKown, his alleged wife, as the administrator. The woman engaged counsel and prepared to fight for what she contended were her dower rights, when the court refused to act on her petition. An appeal was then taken to the higher court.

The woman's story to the effect that she had met McKown when a young man, in New York in the seventies, and that they were married on July 3, 1876, in Port Jervis, N. Y., by an Episcopal rector, now dead. She contends that they lived together while, and that one child was born, which died. She alleges that McKown finally determined to go out West and make his fortune. Those were the days that impromptu camps were springing up around gold fields in the West. McKown is said to have been in many of these camps. Whether he was a miner or engaged in some other business is a question that was never brought out. However, it is said that he followed the gold rush on to Klondike, and there made a fortune.

The woman contended that she had first given up her husband as dead when she lost track of him, and had begun teaching school, and that after she did learn that he was still alive, she decided it best to keep her marriage secret, so as to preserve her status as a pensioned teacher in New York.

The case was tried before a jury on Tuesday morning and after hearing several witnesses for the prosecution the Court dismissed the case for lack of documentary evidence to prove the marriage.

EXCITEMENT CAUSES GIRL TO FAINT IN THEATRE

New Year's excitement, coupled with the change in coming from the frosty air of the street into a crowded theatre, is thought to have caused Miss Mary Mason, 20 years old, of Elkton, to faint in the Aldine Theatre at Wilmington, 12:30 o'clock Monday morning.

The girl was revived with cold water by officials in the theatre and her escort, who took her away. She would not go to a hospital.

Ex-Parson Needs $100 Court Fine

Western Must Pay Penalty Installation for Commercializing Marriage

Whether friends of Richard P. Westren, erstwhile "champion marrying parson" of Elkton Gretna Green will raise the required $100, and whether the court will send him to jail if this first installment of the $300 fine is not paid, are two of the questions that are being discussed.

Westren, who was "unfrocked" by the quarterly conference of Mt. Salem M. E. Church in Wilmington on a charge of commercializing the marriage ceremony, was first fined $500 by the Cecil County Circuit Court for performing, unlawfully, one of the thousand or more marriage ceremonies, which he performed during the first part of 1927. The court recently reduced the fine to $300, with the stipulation that he pay the first installment of $100 January 3.

After Westren was definitely ruled out of the marrying mart in Elkton, he turned his talents to driving a wagon for a laundry company. A month ago he told the court he hadn't enough money to pay his fine, which caused the court to reduce it. He has been allowed to go on with his laundry route while on bail. It was reported that he was still little better off financially than before, and that friends were circulating an appeal for funds to help pay his fine.

How It Feels to Be 66 Years Old!

SOME day many of us will be 66 years old—but don't let that worry you. It feels fine! We're 66 years old this year and it feels great.

Of course, 66 years is not very old for Mullin's—considering we expect to live to be 100. Although Mullin's was started in West Chester, Pa., 66 years ago, Mullin's is just started. You haven't seen anything yet.

The fact is, we get younger every year, and so will you if you buy all your clothes here all your life.

There's an idea—it suggests something—it suggests a proposition. Suppose you buy everything you wear at Mullin's from now on! You're 66—That's a lot to ask, isn't it?

But it shows we mean to please—Every time you come in to our store we will try to treat you so well that you will want to keep coming back until you are 66 or 70 or 80.

One man 95 years old came in for a sporty necktie the other day and said he had been buying from us since "Jim Mullin's Time"—1862.—That's the kind of customer we want you to be.—That's the kind of store we are trying to run—so all men and boys will be with us 50 or 60 years from now.

Here's our New Year's resolution:

The Reward

Apropos of Christmas Clubs and savings accounts, let us tell a true little story. In doing so, we feel that we shall not distress any one if we mention names, and that in using them the story will be more interesting.

A customer in the local American Company's Store recently overheard the manager, Harlan Tweed, talking to Mrs. Joseph McVey, formerly Miss Agnes Medill, who, some fifteen years ago, taught the fifth grade in the Newark Public Schools. In order to stimulate interest and to encourage the pupils, this teacher had offered a reward of one dollar to that pupil who should make the most improvement in his work.

Young Tweed won the dollar. It seems that he was about as proud as if he had won one hundred dollars. Straightway, he put the money in a savings account, and let it stay there. During the years that followed he almost forgot about it. The other day, he was notified by the bank that his dollar had grown to four dollars and an half. Mr. Tweed decided to draw the money and present it and its story to his little daughter, as a nucleus for a savings account for her.

All this he told the other day to his former teacher, with respect and gratitude. That dollar not only served its original purpose, but became a symbol.

The best part of the story is that the history of young Tweed's dollar may as well be the history of any other dollar.

Ideal Town Government

Milford, Dover and some other Delaware towns have what may almost be considered direct government by the people. While each has officers, including a council, the inhabitants gather in town meeting before each election, discuss governmental problems for the ensuing term and select a ticket, which is subsequently elected by popular vote. Usually all contests are decided at these town meetings, which take the place of primaries, while at other times the people are called upon to make the decision at the polls on election day.

Partisan politics, as a rule, have no definite part in the management of public affairs in these communities. Usually only persons are nominated who are believed to be qualified for the offices, their politics not being a factor. The result is that what the people want done these officials do. They hear directly from their constituents before the election, as to what their wishes are. Consequently, following election they feel instructed, provided there are any matters of sufficient public concern to suggest the advisability of preliminary instruction. This plan comes about as near producing a 100 per cent result as any that could be devised.—Every Evening.

Friendship

Friendship's like that. You aren't friends with some one only because you want to be. You can't have a friend unless you can feed one another. Once or twice in your life you'll meet some one and you'll go on with them for the rest of your days. Finer and finer it is. But for the rest—those you meet on a journey—be grateful for the times you've had together, let go when it's over, bear no grudges, above all don't prolong it falsely. No one knows at the start what a friendship's going to be. Don't hang on and be false. Life's all movement, or ought to be. Don't be sentimental over reminiscences and don't charge others with falseness.—From "Jeremy at Crale," by Hugh Walpole.

Fight for Road at Conowingo Dam

The question of a new road in the Eighth District for Cecil County, Md., made necessary by the flooding of the old tow path road at Conowingo, by the new dam, has been taken into the Cecil County Court in the case of Charles W. Drew, against the Commissioners of Cecil County, testimony being taken before James F. Evans in the local court.

The claim of the residents of Conowingo is that their section has been completely cut off by the impounding of the waters of the Susquehanna River and that they are justly entitled to a portion of the $150,000 paid to the County Commissioners by the power company for road purposes, in place of expending the entire amount on a road from Port Deposit to the Conowingo dam.

Testimony showed that the people living in and around the new Conowingo section were obliged to travel two miles out of their way in order to cross the Susquehanna River, by reason of the destruction of the old Conowingo bridge.

The residents of the new Conowingo section are desirous of getting a new road to the Conowingo station and the dam breast.

Mr. Rhinedollar, of the State Road Commission, presented testimony as to the locations and distance of the roads near new Conowingo, and that a new highway would cost about $75,000. A good dirt road with proper grading would cost $30,000. The road desired would start from Mr. Drew's property paralleling the Rowlandville-Weaver Corner road to the dam breast. Mr. Rhinedollar stated that a concrete road would not be justifiable from the standpoint of the State Road Commission, and that such a road would only benefit a few people.

CORN SHOW NEXT WEEK

Plans are being perfected for the annual State Corn Show, to be held in the State Armory, Dover, on January 11, 12 and 13, under the auspices of the Delaware Corn Growers' Association, in co-operation with various local organizations and the extension department of the University of Delaware.

All exhibitors, planning to have farm products, are urged to either take or send their exhibits to Dover not later than Wednesday, January 11, at 10 o'clock, which is the opening day of the show.

The committee, consisting of Vice-President Denny Pleasanton, R. Harry Wilson, John M. Roe, and B. B. Chase, are co-operating with the state officers toward making the show one of the outstanding agricultural exhibits ever staged in the State.

Cash premiums to the amount of $500 are to be awarded. In addition, ribbons for the best exhibits of corn, small grains, forage and hay crops are to be given. Only crops grown in Delaware by the exhibitor during the season of 1927, shall compete for the prizes, and no exhibitor shall make more than one entry of the same variety of corn in a single class, but he may enter any or all classes on the premium list. An entry fee of $1 is required for each exhibitor, and this fee will also entitle the holder to one year's membership in the Delaware Corn Growers' Association.

LIBRARY TO DRESS BOOKS IN BRIGHT COVERS

Gay Colors Found to Stimulate Reading

The thousands of volumes in the circulating branches of the New York Public Library are about to shed their time-honored dull covers and blossom out in bright new bindings.

After a year's experimenting in two branch libraries with gay bindings, library officials have determined that the public prefers its reading matter in bright covers and have selected some thirty new cover materials to replace the present dull reds, browns, blues and greens which, with continued usage, tend to become drab.

The public library here is the first in the country to experiment with and adopt bright colors for book covers. The purpose is merely to increase the exterior attractiveness of books so as to give the public added pleasure in its reading. The experiments proved that sample books in the new types of binding were much more in demand than the same books in the old bindings. The diversity of coloring also adds to the attractiveness of book shelves in the branch libraries.

The change of binding will be gradual, of course, since the new type will be substituted only as the old bindings wear out. The new type will be confined to volumes for home use. Reference books, which cannot be taken out of the libraries, will retain their present covers.

While the use of bright covers has been considered a long time, they were not adopted because they were deemed too perishable to stand hard use. This drawback has been overcome, however, by the discovery of light-colored materials which do not show fingerprints, can be washed and are no more expensive than the old.

Some of the new bindings compare favorably with the novel and attractive book-covers devised by publishers for special volumes. Special effort is being made by the library's supervisor of bindings to give individuality to books by enclosing them in covers suitable to their contents. The new bindings are of many hues, some monotone with stamped designs. One even has a mottled gold effect.

Another departure in the bindings will be the substitution where possible of decorative stamped symbols on the backs of volumes for the present stamp identifying books as the property of the public library. For instance, volumes of drama will bear a gold mask, fairy tales will be stamped with a miniature elfish figure, and similar symbols are being worked out for other volumes which permit of classification.

Experiments with the new types of covers were made in the branch libraries at 121 East Fifty-eighth street and at 251 West Thirteenth street. So popular were the bright colors that when a group of old books, long unread by the public, were rebound in purple, they were all taken out and have been in constant use.—N. Y. Times.

Reduce and Stay Strong

The complaint of many would-be reducers is not that they are tormented by hunger, but that a sense of weakness interferes with the activities which are an integral and important part of their regime. Though largely psychological, it is a phase to be avoided, if possible, and it can be avoided by a wise choice of foods.

The heart of the reducing problem is limiting the diet to a point where the excess body fat can be turned to supply necessary energy. During the period when this is happening, the body continues to need protein for building and repair, minerals and vitamins for maintenance, building and repair, and plenty of liquid to wash away waste products. A certain amount of carbohydrate, better known as starches and sugars, is also necessary to avoid acidosis, a condition

THE LIFE OF A BOOK

There is something pathetic about the brevity of the life of a book. A man works over it, thinks about it, talks about it, if he can get anyone to listen to him; at last he finds a publisher; and the book appears. For a few days, perhaps, it may be seen in the bookshops, and then, like the snowflake in the river, it disappears, and forever. Speaking by and large, the greatest successes escape this fate only for a moment. There are so many books! Go into any public library and ask what proportion of the books on the shelves are called for, say, once in ten years. The answer should make for modesty in authors. That it does not do so proves only with what eagerness we pursue the phantoms of hope.—A. Edward Newton.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

THE MEANING OF CULTURE

In the common use of the word culture as in that of the word education, there is an element of narrowness and untruth which must be eliminated before its true and rich meaning can be appreciated. For culture, instead of being an artificial or superficial accomplishment, is the natural and inevitable process by which a man comes into possession of his own nature and into real and fruitful relations with the world about him. It is never a taking on from without of some grace or skill or knowledge; it is always an unfolding from within into some new power; the flowering of some quality hitherto dormant; the absorption of some knowledge hitherto unappropriated.—H. W. Mabie.

tion which occurs when fat is the sole source of energy.

Lean meats and fish supply protein; skim milk supplies protein, calcium and other minerals and vitamins, fruits and vegetables supply minerals, vitamins and the necessary carbohydrate in a good form, bulk to satisfy hunger and a high percentage of water. Therefore it is well to make the diet from this group of foodstuffs. Should loss of weight greater than one-quarter pound a day occur, some concentrated carbohydrate should be added, such as bread or potatoes. Crisp, unbuttered toast may always be part of the morning meal, if limited in quantity.

Fruits a Boon

Fruits are a boon to those trying to reduce because they are palatable, supply only such elements as should be included in the diet, and are sufficiently bulky to give a sense of comfortable fullness. At the beginning of the day, the readily available fruit sugars give the immediate energy supply for starting work with a vim, and so aid in breaking down the fat cells of the body as a continued source of energy. Canned pineapple, because of its palatability, adaptability and richness in minerals, vitamins and fruit sugars holds a high place as a reducing food in the opinion of physicians and nutrition experts.

At breakfast, it may be served sliced or crushed, as a fruit dish or as an accompaniment to a meat or egg dish. At luncheon, salad, with mineral oil dressing, cocktails or compotes are always favorites, and this is also a good meal at which to serve the lamb chop-pineapple combination which has sometimes been recommended as a good reducing diet unvaried by other foods. At dinner, pineapple can find a place in any course, beginning with a fruit soup and ending with pineapple meringue. Therefore, if you are among those interested in shedding excess baggage, see that your fruit shelf is well stocked.

"The stage and the press are alike powerful in molding the young mind to discriminate as between wholesome and unwholesome moral standards. Possessing this power, society has an unquestionable right in conserving public welfare to demand and command that its influence shall be exerted, not to debase and destroy, but to purify and sustain; not to induce moral decadence, but to animate and buttress social righteousness."

Correct Attire for Evening Wear

To merely state that we have in readiness the authentic apparel for evening wear does not suffice in proving how comprehensively we have planned to fill the needs of particular men who are about to secure new clothes for formal occasions. We have a definite outline of "what's to be what" in men's wear for social occasions.

DELAWARE COLONY

Christmas at Delaware Colony, the State Home for subnormal boys and girls, was a very enjoyable affair. There were trees in all of the cottages and Santa Claus visited all of the children. The Kings' Daughters, of Milford, supplied a stocking filled with nuts, candy and fruit for each child, 122 in number. A turkey dinner was served, the turkeys having been raised on the Colony farm.

Various clubs, organizations and individuals adopted children for Christmas, and supplied Christmas boxes containing toys, clothing, candy, etc.

A motion picture climaxed the Christmas celebration, a moving picture machine having been given the Colony by the State Federation of Women's Clubs some years ago.

Employment Gain In Present Year Predicted By U. S.

Great Prosperity Will Be Evident
Despite Presidential Election, Is Claim

An unqualified prediction of great prosperity and satisfactory employment of workers in America during 1928 was made today by the United States Employment Service. It was backed up by a digest of the outlook reported in every State in the Union from the employment offices maintained by the Federal Government.

"Contrary to the precedent established in former Presidential election years, when the business world stood by awaiting results before charting their programs, the opposite is true at this time," declared Francis I. Jones, director of the service. "Industry and business will mark new high levels in 1928. The pessimists, doubting Thomases and the iconoclasts will be obliged to revise their opinions with respect to the nation's industrial future."

"All signs point to the biggest year in the history of the automotive industry. Iron and steel point to a marked increase over 1927. Indications are that building construction will compare favorably with the previous year. The position of agriculture shows improvement. Railroads will, undoubtedly, enjoy normal business."

"Owing to increased introduction of labor-saving machinery, considerable labor will be displaced, but the volume of business is expected to register a new high level."

The national survey which guided Director Jones' enthusiastic prediction was elaborated in the study of Eastern States as follows:

"Connecticut—The industrial outlook for 1928 is promising. Everything points at the present time to normal production in all industries throughout the State for 1928."

"Delaware—The gradual recession in production during the latter part of 1927 leads to the belief that accumulated demand for many products will bring about an increase in production and employment for 1928."

"Maine—Industrial employment opportunities for 1928 will at least equal those of 1927, and in all probability will be slightly better."

"Maryland—The industrial prospects for 1928 indicate a similar condition to that experienced in 1927."

"Massachusetts—The industrial outlook for 1928 is very favorable. General feeling of optimism prevails among textile manufacturers for increased production in 1928."

"New Hampshire—From present indications, industrial employment conditions will be at a high level during 1928."

"New Jersey—Industrial employment conditions in 1928 should compare favorably with those of the year just completed. In some of the larger cities a somewhat greater demand for skilled labor is expected."

Expect Gains In New York

"New York—There was a marked decrease in employment in this State the last half of 1927 and the prospects for the early part of 1928 are not particularly bright. However, a gradual improvement is anticipated as the year advances."

"Ohio—The employment outlook for the first quarter of 1928 is not altogether favorable. It will be some weeks before industrial activity can increase sufficiently to absorb the unemployed."

"Pennsylvania—The demand for skilled labor should be as large in 1928 as in 1927. While employment at the close of 1927 was not entirely satisfactory, a gradual increase is expected in the next few months."

"Rhode Island—A fairly satisfactory year is anticipated in all industries throughout the State during 1928."

"Vermont—Reports from all sections indicate a spirit of optimism concerning the industrial employment prospects for 1928."

"West Virginia—The industrial prospects for 1928 indicate a greater demand for skilled and unskilled labor than that which existed during 1927."

"Wisconsin—There will be no increase in demand for labor in 1928, as compared with 1927. However, the major industries expect to operate on fairly satisfactory schedules. Very little increase is anticipated in agricultural acreage."

"Wyoming—Increased employment is expected in all major industries throughout 1928. A decided increase in the livestock industry is anticipated."

"He who knows what secrets and virtues are in the ground, the waters, the plants, the heavens, and how to come at these enchantments, is the rich and royal man."—Emerson.

Expect New Star Car At New York Show

With the new Ford and Chevrolet models announced and exhibited, the next question in the mind of the motoring public is: "What is Durant going to do?"

The following article, published in several New York papers, surmises that Durant is preparing a sensation in the Star line, and will probably spring it at the New York Automobile Show.

"The Father of General Motors," who is not only known for his astuteness but has proven by his past record that he is a match for any situation or competition, also possesses the sort of resourcefulness given to but few men.

"And the industry is quite agreed that he has something up his sleeve. And that something is sure to cause a sensation about New York Show time."

"What he has no one knows. What he proposes doing no one is saying. But those closest to him know that since his famous declaration of April 7th his force of engineers has been working night and day in the Durant laboratories at Elizabeth. Not only that, but they have been working under lock and key. What have they been doing and what have they got ready for the public?"

"In addition, it is a known fact that the assembly lines of the various Durant plants have finished with the present models and that they are going to start again December 19th. What are they going to start running then?"

"T. S. Johnston, Assistant to W. C. Durant, and who has created unprecedented Star sales records during September, October and November, winks knowingly but says nothing. However, the general assumption is that W. C. Durant is going to be an important contender for 1928 automobile business, and that his come back is going to be of such proportions as to make him the continued marked figure he has been for twenty years. Durant has always been inclined to give the public a full dollar's worth for what it has paid, and the surmise is that for 1928 he is actually figuring on being in the front row of the industry, with unprecedented values.

"But the industry and public want to know—with what. So far those in authority refuse to divulge the details. But after all the public won't have long to wait."

"Great minds have purposes, others have wishes. Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortune; but great minds rise above them."—Washington Irving.

Rudolph Koehler Made Insane by Bandit Blows

train he was riding on, he stated that three weeks ago, he was held up by bandits in Philadelphia, robbed of his money and dealt several severe blows over the head.

He occupied a seat in the rear coach on the train and apparently was in a normal condition until the train had reached Elkton, when he expressed a desire to leave, but was told his destination was Baltimore, and to stay on the train.

The blow he suffered from the hands of the bandits is believed to have caused him to lose his mind, for after the train had left Elkton, he jumped from his seat and shouting to the trainman, "They are after me," made his leap from the rear platform of the train. The search that soon followed revealed the mangled remains of the passenger.

Koehler was 35 years of age, and had a wife and child who reside in Baltimore. Coroner Green has the case under an investigation.

Lodge Notes

JR. O. U. A. M. NEWS

American Flag Council, No. 28, Jr. O. U. A. M. started the New Year right by holding a large meeting Monday evening in their hall. All members present expressed their desire to make this a banner year for Juniorism in Newark and vicinity. The slogan adopted for January is "Fisher of Men." A class of candidates will be received in this month. We need all young men from 16 years and up to uphold the standard of "True American Manhood."

The Council at a recent meeting elected the following brothers to the respective offices for the coming year: Councilor, Wm. Todd; Vice-Councilor, A. Neal Smyth; Recording Secretary, Henry F. Mote; Assistant Recording Secretary, Wm. Collins; Chaplain, Wm. Merrick; Warden, George Morrison; Financial Secretary, Raymond McMullen; Treasurer, Chas. W. Colmery; Conductor, Wm. Poole; Inside Sentinel, John R. Kennedy; Outside Sentinel, James Lewis; Junior Past Councilor, F. L. Hall.

On Monday evening, January 23, the officers elected will be installed in their offices by Past State Councilor Arthur W. Hope of Old Glory Council No. 27, of Middletown.

After the installation an open meeting will be held at which time the "Annual Anniversary Night" will be celebrated. All the members of the American Flag Council are asked to hold this night open and to bring their men friends that they may be enlightened on the principles of Juniorism. A very elaborate entertainment is being arranged after which refreshments will be served.

A good thing to remember, And a better thing to do, Is to work with the construction gang, And not the wrecking crew.

FURNACE TENDING

Common salt, zinc scraps or dead dry batteries will only partly clean out soot or carbon in chimneys and leave the part that should be removed, namely, the foreign matter in coal known as red ash. When you clean out your furnace, piping and chimney, scrape them. The location of the coal bin has nothing to do with the consumption of coal and the form of coal has nothing to do with the amount of consumption.

If you will shake down the ash in the evening before retiring for the night, you will have a clean fire; that is, no ash under your fire on the grates. Then you can bank the fire, close all drafts, cover with ash and in the morning you have a live fire to start on and a warm house. Enough draft leaks in round the dampers to keep a clean fire going just right all night. Don't stir up a fire. This gets ash and clinkers on top and retards proper combustion.

Dampen the ash in the pit to stop the dust nuisance, keep your grates shaken down at all times so you might see to pick up a nickel off the top of the ash in the pit from the light given off by the fire. This will save your grates from burning out or warping. Fire according to the amount of heat you want, and regulate dampers for the same purpose. Remember grates covered with ash waste fuel. Ashes are hard on the grate bars because they do not get the air through them enough to keep them cool to prevent warping. The more ash on the grates, the more smoke you make.

This is from one who is interested in the prevention of smoke and in the least possible consumption of fuel.—L. W., in Indianapolis News.

"One might say that the Golden Rule is more impracticable in the industrial life than in any other sphere; but the fact is that here it is the only workable principle."—N. MacEachern.

Recipes

WHITE FRUIT CAKE

1 pound white sugar; 1 pound flour; ½ pound butter; 12 eggs (whites only); 2 pounds citron, cut in thin strips; 2 pounds almonds, blanched and cut up; 1 large coconut, grated.

When the flour is sifted add to it 1 teaspoon of soda and 2 of cream of tartar. Cream the butter and sugar and beat well. Then add white of eggs and flour. After beating add one-third of fruit, reserving the rest to add in layers as you put the batter into the cake pan. Bake like any other fruit cake.

PUMPKIN PIE

1 cup fresh stewed pumpkin; 1 cup milk; 2 ounces butter; ½ teaspoon cinnamon; ¼ teaspoon ginger; ¼ teaspoon nutmeg; 1 tiny pinch mace; ¼ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon lemon extract; 1 teaspoon flour; 3 eggs; ¾ cup sugar.

Beat eggs, add sugar, milk and melted butter; then add dry ingredients; mix with pumpkin and lemon juice. Pour mixture in pastry shell and bake in moderate oven.

BAKED APPLES

Peel and core apples of medium size, fill center with sugar and place in a baking dish.

Make a syrup of two tablespoons of red cinnamon drop candy and two cups of water. Let the candy dissolve in the water, cover the apples with the red syrup, cover the dish and bake in a slow oven until soft and clear. Serve hot or cold with any kind of meat.

SWEET POTATO BALLS

25 marshmallows; 8 pounds sweet potatoes; ¼ pound butter; 2 cups milk; 2 eggs; juice of 1 lemon; 2 teaspoons salt; Bread crumbs (dry).

Sweet potatoes, boiled, peeled and mashed, with a little butter, salt and lemon juice. Take one marshmallow, wrap with potato mixture, shape into a ball. Then roll in flour, dip into beaten egg and milk, then roll in bread crumbs. Fry in hot oil until brown.
