Legislators, advocates mark launch of new foreclosure mediation program

Attorney General Beau Biden was joined by a bipartisan coalition of legislators and advocates to mark the launch of Delaware's mandatory foreclosure mediation program. The program, which became operational on January 19, was established last year as part of a legislative package developed by Biden's office and legislators to respond to the foreclosure crisis in Delaware. It is modeled after successful programs in other states and jurisdictions, including the City of Philadelphia and the state of Connecticut.

"The foreclosure crisis has impacted Delaware families up and down the state," Attorney General Biden said. "Losing a home to foreclosure can be devastating, and borrowers deserve the opportunity to meet face-to-face with their lender and explore all available alternatives. Mandatory mediation can help people stay in their homes, and that's better for families, lenders and the community."

Recent years have seen a record pace of foreclosures in Delaware, with more than 25,000 foreclosure filings since 2007. The state experienced a record-setting year in 2010, with more than 6,400 filings. Biden's office and legislators produced a package of bills, passed during the last legislative session, that address Delaware's foreclosure crisis. That legislation strengthened the state's existing voluntary mediation program in several key ways:

- Mediation is no longer voluntary. When a bank files a foreclosure complaint, the law now requires that lenders and borrowers sit down one-on-one and have a meaningful conversation about a payment plan or other options before a foreclosure can proceed.

- It eliminates the income qualification for homeowners.

- It establishes a filing fee, paid by the lender, to fund the program.

- It extends the time a homeowner has to respond to a foreclosure complaint. Previously, homeowners had 20 days to respond to a foreclosure complaint. Under the new program, the foreclosure process is put on hold when a mediation conference is scheduled, and a lender cannot seek judgment until after the mediation conference takes place.

The mandatory foreclosure mediation program serves Delawareans who own a one- to four-unit home, who reside in the home as their primary residence, and whose mortgage is foreclosed upon on or after January 19, 2012. The program runs through January 2014.

Rep. Helene M. Keeley, D-Wilmington South, noted that several of her constituents are facing foreclosure. She said that the initial voluntary mediation process was a great first step, but requiring that lenders and homeowners sit down to work out an agreement will help more people stay in their homes.

"Losing your biggest investment — your home — is nothing short of catastrophic for a person. By providing this additional step, we are ensuring that more homeowners will have the opportunity to stay in their homes and keep a roof over their heads," Rep. Keeley said. "We hope that this mortgage mediation program will address the issue of a record number of foreclosures and that in a couple years, when this program sunsets, there will not be a need for it."

"This process provides a lifeline for many homeowners who are facing the possibility of losing their homes and need to find a solution to possibly keep a roof over their

Bill would raise minimum school attendance age to 18 years

The age at which students must attend school would be increased to 18 under legislation introduced last Thursday afternoon.

Sponsored by Rep. Debra J. Heffernan, House Bill 244 would raise the age requirement for compulsory school attendance in Delaware from 16 to 18 over a two-year period. Currently, a student who is 16 years old or older is not legally required to be enrolled in school.

"Times have changed. In the 21st century, a high school diploma is no longer optional if we want our young people and our state's economy to be successful, we need our students to graduate," said Rep. Heffernan, D-Brandywine Hundred South. "Not completing high school puts them at a severe, lifelong disadvantage for getting a well-paying job. A high school diploma is really the minimum education for young people today who want economic success and independence."

According to a National Conference of State Legislatures report, Delaware lags behind surrounding states for average graduation rate for the 2007-08 school year. High

Newark Police investigate two strong arm robberies

The Newark Police are investigating two strong arm robberies which occurred in the early morning hours of January 18 in the City of Newark.

The first incident occurred at approximately 1:40 a.m. at the intersection of Cleveland Avenue and Kershaw Street. During this incident the victims, a 21 year-old female from Newark and a 21 year-old male University of Delaware exchange student from Portugal, were walking on the sidewalk of Cleveland Avenue when they were approached by three black male suspects. One of the suspects, wearing a black hooded sweatshirt with red lettering, grabbed the female and then forcibly removed her small clutch-style purse. The female victim attempted to retain her clutch during the incident and suffered a minor cut to her finger. A second suspect removed the male victim's wallet from his pants pocket. All three suspects then ran to a vehicle parked on Kershaw Street and fled the scene.

The three suspects were all described as black males 18 to 25 years of age, wearing black clothing with hoods over their heads. One suspect, as described above, had red lettering on his black hooded sweatshirt. The vehicle was described as an older model tan boxy style vehicle, possibly a Cadillac. There was no tag displayed on the vehicle.

The second incident occurred several minutes later at approximately 2 a.m. at 700 Scholar Drive, University Courtyard Apartments. During this incident a 21 year-old female University of Delaware Student from Dumont, New Jersey had just entered into the apartment building which is a controlled access building. Upon entering the building lobby she heard a knock at the door and observed a black male wearing a black or grey hooded sweatshirt with red lettering standing outside the door. She opened the door for the suspect and then turned her back to walk away. The suspect immediately grabbed her from behind, forced her to the ground, and then removed her purse before fleeing out of the apartment building. The victim was uninjured during the incident.

The suspect in this incident is described as a black male 18 to 25 years of age, wearing a black or grey hooded sweatshirt with red lettering.

Investigators are working to determine if the two incidents were committed by the same individuals and are asking for the public's assistance in identifying the suspects.

DIAA must allow Red Lion transfers to play immediately

By JON BUZBY

JONBUZBY@HOTMAIL.COM

By now if you read this column you most likely have heard about the Red Lion Christian Academy sports situation.

In a nutshell, last year the football and men's basketball programs were granted permission by the Delaware Interscholastic Athletic Association to become associate members, allowing them to circumvent some of the established DIAA rules — including enabling them to offer athletic scholarships — but in turn not be part of any conference or participate in the state tournament in either sport.

This past fall the football team played against national powerhouses in Ohio (twice), Florida, Maryland and New Jersey.

Shortly after the season ended, the church and school was taken over by nearby Glasgow Church after incurring a debt of nearly $6 million, and Glasgow's associate pastor, Chuck L. Betters, was named head master of Red Lion Christian Academy.

Last Thursday, Betters appeared before the DIAA asking to be reinstated as full members, vowing to return the school's sports program into complete compliance with DIAA rules. Betters reported that the entire football staff and two other programs affiliated with the program — FLASH Training (Faithful Leaders Always Serving Him) and FOCAS (Financially Obedient Christians Assisting Students) — are no longer part of the school. David Needs, who previously coached at Mount Pleasant and Caravel Academy, has been hired as head coach.

The DIAA has not rendered a decision, but instead chose to form a committee to work with the school to resolve the issues that must be addressed before reinstatement as a full member is considered.

As of last Friday, 35 students, 30 of whom are football players, had withdrawn from the school following the completion of the second semester.

"We did everything we could to keep these students at Red Lion, including allowing them to stay until the end of the year regardless of whether or not [their scholarship] was fully paid," Betters said.

While there is speculation as to where some students might end up — "You'll have to direct that question to [former Red Lion head coach] Dwayne Thomas," junior Kenny Bigelow told me when I asked if he would finish out the year at Red Lion — the bottom line is nothing has been finalized. However, one thing the DIAA must decide, and quickly since it might impact decisions, is whether or not to let any departing players compete next season at another Delaware high school.

This is where a very complicated situation and process gets very simple: The DIAA must allow these kids to play again.

The naysayers will claim that the students and their parents — or in some cases, a family relative or caregiver — chose to accept the athletic scholarships and therefore the players should not be allowed to play for a DIAA team again.

I ask you this: If you are a parent in a less-than-ideal financial situation, or even an OK one, and someone offers to give your football-playing child a free private school education with an opportunity to play on a team that is going to play a national-caliber schedule that will undoubtedly attract the attention of college scouts and potential scholarships, what would you do?

Angelo Blackson was living in the city of Wilmington, having been raised since the age of 7 by his aunt, when Red Lion offered him a scholarship that, at the time, was based on financial need. It was a no-brainer for him.

"More than anywhere else, Red Lion has helped me," Blackson said during a 2010 interview. He's now getting a college education while on a full football scholarship at Auburn University.

He isn't the only example of a naive kid making a decision even the most mature and well-off teenager might make. But what those students were promised when they chose to attend Red Lion has now been taken away, through no fault of their own. And that's why they should not be punished, even for one season. It's not as if they can go "back" to and make up the time.

So DIAA, here's how to do it to make it fair.

For one football or basketball season, those former Red Lion players should be allowed to play football or basketball for the public-high school — note I said public, not charter or private — in the district in which they reside. In other words, play for the team at the school they most likely would have attended if they had never chosen to attend Red Lion. If they truly want to play football for the sport itself, this should be an acceptable option for them.

After that one year, they can then do as many players do and choose to go play at a different school, but also must follow the transfer rules put in place by the DIAA.

Educators always preach they are in it for the kids. This is a decision that has to be made for just that reason.

It really is a no-brainer.

Newark resident earns UAA Athlete of the Week Honors

Washington University in St. Louis senior Erica Jackey, of Newark (Archmere Academy), was selected as the University Athletic Association (UAA) Women's Indoor Track and Field Athlete of the Week, as announced by the Association.

Jackey earned the Women's Athlete of the Week honor after a record-setting performance at the Illinois Wesleyan Triangular on Jan. 21. She clocked a school-record time of 2:14.14 to finish second in the 800 meters at the meet. Jackey also raced to a first-place finish in the mile (5:06.40) to lead the Washington U. women to a narrow two-point win over Illinois Wesleyan University in the triangular. Newark High School offers mentoring program for students

Newark High School now has a mentoring program for students. Research shows that a mentor relationship can be one of the most important relationships in a teen's development. Mentoring helps teens become all they can be by helping to build self-esteem, self-confidence, interpersonal communication skills, social values, aspirations, and scholastic achievement. Mentors help students; through personal, one-on-one time in schools once a week; develop their unique qualities and reach their full potential.

This program is funded through NHS Title 1, Connecting Generations and AmeriCorps. AmeriCorps members serve as Mentor Coordinators in schools and community after school mentoring programs in 10 sites across Delaware, now including NHS. The mentor coordinators will help recruit, place and train mentors. They will then support those mentors in the site-based program. This program was developed in partnership with Communities in Schools of Delaware. Both organizations are committed to making this program a success and promoting an ethic of service in communities throughout the state.

Steven Fox, the new Mentoring Coordinator at NHS, is looking for volunteers to mentor students. If interested, please contact Steven Fox at 631-4700.

Low-tech quality time for your family

By CAROL SCOTT

UD COOPERATIVE EXTENSION

Now that the holidays are behind us, it's time to look at your family's daily use of technology. Whether it is texting on a new phone, gaming on Wii, or watching movies on a handheld tablet, many families find that they are more digitally wired for more hours of every day than ever before. It might be time to evaluate and manage your family "media diet" by purposefully unplugging for a portion of the day. By unplugging, you can make sure time is spent in socializing with others, playing outside in a natural environment, and holding meaningful conversations, perhaps while eating a healthy meal together. While our smart phones and devices have brought us closer to the rest of humanity, it is the family time that really brings us closer with shared experiences and time spent together.

With a little planning, you can balance your family's tech activities with much-needed face time. By setting stricter time limits for yourself and your children, you can downsize your reliance on technology in order to create more quality family time. Make a list of activities to include in your daily and weekly schedule and agree on use of devices with time limits.

Make sure the kids have plenty of input in the planning so that family time includes suggestions from everyone. Rather than banning use of technology altogether, consider scheduling some family tech time to watch a movie together, or set up a Wii bowling tournament or Zumba dance contest for both adults and children to play together and compete for prizes.

You might be up for the challenge of a "no tech" old-fashioned family fun night playing table games or acting with charades. Look for ideas that generate fun on your own steam with no Wi-Fi, data or electricity. Dust off the Scrabble board to power up your vocabulary to find the perfect scoring word, dictionaries allowed.

Part of your media management will be to role model good habits as adults. This may mean setting your own curfew for checking work e-mails or texting family and friends. Use the quiet moments to leave space for conversations with family members, both adults and kids. When you model low-tech activity time and provide a balance of activities for your children as part of your family routine, you will find that you and your children will grow to appreciate your unplugged time.

Delaware's First Lady visits Newark KinderCare

Delaware's First Lady Carla Markell visited the nationally accredited Meadowood KinderCare® in Newark to observe first-hand what a high-quality early learning classroom looks like. As a youth mentor, First Lady Markell understands the positive impact a caring adult can have on a child's life.

During her visit, First Lady Markell toured the center and talked with staff about pre-K and school readiness. In a recent report the U.S. Department of Education praised Delaware's Race to the Top work in the past year and their efforts to improve the quality of education students across the state receive.

Program to help families in need

» FORECLOSURE, from page 1 heads," said Sen. Bethany Hall-Long, D-Middletown. "It's not only vital for the people facing a foreclosure action, it's also vital when it comes to maintaining healthy communities and I'm honored to have been a part of this effort."

"This program will provide a renewed resilience for homeowners faced with the loss of their most prized and personal possession — their home," said Rep. John A. Kowalko, D-Newark. "There is no way to exaggerate the needs of families who are struggling in these desperate times. Their safety and security are in jeopardy and it is the state's responsibility to provide resources and expertise so that families can stay in their homes. This process being implemented today is a huge step in the right direction to help them."

State Representative Mike Ramone, R-Middle Run Valley, a prime House sponsor of the bill establishing the foreclosure mediation program, said, "I am thrilled that we are rolling out this very important program. As I have stated before, the foreclosure process is our new reality, unfortunately. This program is vital to providing those many families faced with the painful prospect of losing their homes with the opportunity of working with a mediator — something they may not normally had the chance to do prior to this bill being enacted last year. Mediation has been a viable option in helping families in other areas. It is my hope that Delawareans in a similar situation will find the help they need with this new program."

The legislation was also sponsored by House Speaker Rep. Robert F. Gilligan, D-Sherwood Park.

Eligible homeowners will be provided with detailed information about the foreclosure mediation program when a foreclosure is filed against them. Homeowners can learn more about this program by calling the Attorney General's Mortgage Hotline at 800-220-5424, e-mailing mortgage.mediation@ state.de.us, or visiting www.attorneygeneral.delaware.gov/mortgageforeclosure or www.deforeclosurehelp.org.

In a continuing response to the ongoing foreclosure crisis, the Department of Justice will also hold open houses throughout the state in the coming months to answer residents' questions, introduce new programs and assist in resolutions:

Newark Senior Center announces Longwood Foundation Grant

The Newark Senior Center is pleased to announce a $125,000 grant from the Longwood Foundation. The grant will fund a portion of parking lot repaving to maintain a safe and accessible facility. The Center, located at 200 White Chapel Drive, opened in 1996 and receives more than 77,000 visits each year. A safe parking lot ensures access to the many programs and services that the Center offers.

Members, age 50 and over, come for many programs such as the therapeutic pool, fitness center, exercise classes, the computer club, educational and enrichment opportunities as well as card games, board games and a wonderful freshly prepared midday meal. The Center is also the home to the Meals on Wheels program for the greater Newark area and provides transportation for those who are no longer able to drive. The NSC is the first and only accredited senior center in the state of Delaware accredited by the National Institute of Senior Centers. It is a tremendous resource center for those who are over 50. With a full time Social Services Director, members have access to many services such as tax preparation, Medicare & social security counseling, housing and transportation information and so much more.

About receiving the grant, the Newark Senior Center released the following statement: "The NSC is very grateful for the continued support of the Longwood Foundation.

It is only with the help of local foundations, businesses and individual donors that local nonprofits are able to offer programs and services while providing safe facilities. The Center has really become a tremendous community center over the past 44 years. With ongoing support from the community, the lives of our 4,000+ members will be enriched for many years to come."

Additional funding for this project is welcome. For more information, please contact Carla Grygiel, Executive Director at 302-373-2336 x 15.

Newark campus featured in Google Street View

Pedestrians on the University of Delaware's main campus can start Googling their routes. Google Maps' Street View feature now includes 360-degree images of UD's Newark campus.

Previously, the University appeared as an undefined block on Google Maps because the service gathered Street View imagery only by cars driving on public roads. Google took its technology to places cars can't venture, including UD's brick pathways, by mounting cameras on three-wheeled pedicabs called trikes.

The maps can help visitors and prospective students familiarize themselves with campus, assist current students looking for the best path to class, give alumni a trip down memory lane and all other

University of Delaware Library exhibition highlights Delaware during the Civil War

The University of Delaware Library has announced a new exhibition entitled "A State Divided: Delaware During the Civil War," which will be on view in the Lincoln Exhibit Case adjacent to the Special Collections Exhibition Gallery from Tuesday, Jan. 24, through Thursday, Dec. 20.

The year 2011 marked the 150th anniversary of the start of the American Civil War (1861-1865). The sesquicentennial celebration (2011-2015) is set to continue over the next three years in cultural institutions around the country to commemorate the nation's greatest conflict fought on its own soil.

As one of five border states -- states that remained in the Union but which bordered states that joined the Confederacy -- Delaware represented a microcosm of the nation as a whole on matters of states' rights, slavery, and support for the Union cause. Politics were generally defined geographically: urban centers like Wilmington in northern New Castle County favored Republicanism, while southern agrarian Kent and Sussex counties were Democratic strongholds.

"A State Divided: Delaware During the Civil War" offers items from Special Collections including books, prints, postcards, speeches, sermons, soldiers' letters, memoirs, and other documents showcasing the state at a social, economic, and political crossroads.

The exhibition can be viewed during the regular hours of the Morris Library. The curator of the exhibition is Maureen Cech, assistant librarian in the Special Collections Department in the University of Delaware Library.

The exhibition will also be available online at <http://www.lib.udel.edu/ud/spec/exhibits.html>.

UD spirit teams among best at national championships

By JERRY RHODES

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

YoUDee, the first mascot in the First State, finished first and the University of Delaware cheerleading and dance teams placed near the top at the Universal Cheerleaders Association (UCA) College Cheerleading and Dance National Championships, held Jan. 13-15 at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

For the fourth time in 11 years, YoUDee won the UCA's open mascot division, finishing ahead of Villanova, Tennessee Tech and Arkansas State universities.

The UD cheerleaders finished second in the Division I championships and the dance team, also in Division I, took second place in the hip-hop finals and ninth in the jazz finals.

"The mascot team worked very hard to prepare for their national mascot skit, and their dedication paid off," said Sharon Harris, assistant director in the Office of Communications and Marketing and coordinator of the mascot program. "I couldn't be more proud of their accomplishment. Great job, mascot team!"

First year mascot team member Grace Relf, a senior from Boise, Idaho, an Honors Program student who is majoring in energy and environmental policy, said, "We put in a lot of hard work, and winning made the whole experience worthwhile. It was also fun meeting the mascots from other schools and seeing all of the talented people on the cheerleading and dance teams."

Senior team leader Andrew Davis, an engineering major from Dover, Del., said that putting on the skit can be stressful but also satisfying when things go as planned and nothing breaks.

"Every time a prop works or people laugh at a joke, you have a little sigh of relief," Davis said. "If you can make people forget about their everyday problems for even just one minute and get them to laugh at some cool thing you did, then the whole thing is totally worth it."

With new members comprising just over half the squad, the cheerleading team had to work extremely hard to compete at the national championship level, said Ben Schreiber, spirit coordinator for UD Recreation Services and cheerleading coach.

"The team came together in a special way and battled through adversity to achieve a second place finish," Schreiber said. "I am very proud of what this team was able to accomplish this year."

Adriana Rodriguez, a senior urban affairs and public policy major from Bethlehem, Pa., said going to the nationals with a lot of new team members was a rewarding experience.

"For me, it was unlike any other year, because it would be my last year with the team at the nationals," Rodriguez said. "It was a good learning experience, and we received a lot of support from team members from other schools."

The most exciting part of the whole weekend was the two and one-half minutes of competition in which the team performed pyramids, basket tosses and elite stunting routines, said Stephanie Reiner, a junior finance major from Clinton, N.J.

"All of the other teams were watching us because we were the last team to go on," Reiner said. "Everyone performed to the best of their ability, which is the best you can ask."

Michael Larocca, a finance major from Westborough, Mass., who graduated during Winter Commencement ceremonies earlier this month, said, "Being able to compete with my teammates allowed me to get to know them better. I've made a lot of friends and I know I will stay in contact with them."

With nine of its 17-member team entering national competition for the first time, veterans stepped up to help their teammates prepare for competition at the highest level, said Nicole K. Daliessio-Zehnder, dance team head coach.

"They proved to their teammates and performers on other teams that they are true and talented competitors," Daliessio-Zehnder said. "I look forward to seeing them continue the UD Dance Team's tradition of excellence."

Alyssa Scerbak, a freshman University studies major from Nutley, N.J., said that because it was her first trip to the nationals, she "didn't know that I would be having the time of my life dancing with 16 of my best friends. I can't wait to do it again next year."

"Being part of the UD Dance Team is such an amazing and rewarding experience," Michelle Golini, a senior Spanish education major from Lake Ronkonkoma, N.Y., said. "I couldn't be happier with my teammates and the way we performed."

Out of the Attic

We Make National Brand Packages Right Here In Your Own Hometown

This week's Out of the Attic item is a 1975 picture of the Westvaco Plant on Ogletown Road (Route 273) east of Newark. The picture appeared in the 1975 Krawen, the Newark High School student yearbook. Fifty years ago the stretch of the two-lane Ogletown Road from the edge of town to the railroad underpass was mostly open farm fields punctuated with a few houses and barns. By the mid-1960's the picture changed to an area of light industry, distribution, and some retail. The Stafford Farm remained as the lone sentry from the past. Names such as Motor Wheel Corporation, General Foods, Southern States, R. C. Peoples, FNC Corporation, Avon Products, Morton Salt, Shep's Burgers, A & P Supermarket, U. S. Post Office, Aetna Hose, Hook, and Ladder Company, 84 Lumber Company, Thrifty Rent A Car, State Services Center, and more became the scenery, the employers, and the economic engine along the east gateway to the town.

Westvaco, a division of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, described its business in the overprint of the yearbook picture that reads, "Westvaco National Brand Packages Right Here in Your Own Hometown. We're Westvaco's Folding Carton Division, we've been here in Newark ten years. In that time we've designed and produced many millions of national brand packages. Chances are you've picked Westvaco-made packages off the shelves many times - almost as often as you've gone shopping. People right here in your community made all this possible, and you can too.

There are many opportunities for high school graduates to build careers in folding carton manufacturing... right here in your own home town. Come talk to us."

Visit the Newark History Museum located at the historic 1877 passenger train station on South College Avenue beside the bridge on the town side of the tracks.

The museum is now observing winter hours through March. Individuals, groups, clubs, or organizations are welcome to visit by appointment. Call 368-9845 for arrangements. The Newark Historical Society invites donations or loans of objects, stories, pictures, and other artifacts of places, activities, people, and life styles in the Greater Newark Area for its permanent collections and display. Join the Newark Historical Society as an individual or family member for just $15.00 for the 2012 year.

For a membership application, contact the Newark Historical Society by voice mail at 302-224-2408, by postal mail to P. O. Box 711, Newark, DE 19715, or by email to newarkdehistoricalsociety@yahoo.com.
