NEWARK, DELAWARE, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1926

NUMBER 46

SEASON'S GREETINGS

3 Newark Men Killed At Crossing

Car Struck By Freight at B. & O. Crossing, Elk Mills; Two Others Injured

The lives of three Newark men were instantly destroyed and two other men, also from Newark, injured, when the Ford Sedan, in which they were riding, was struck by Baltimore and Ohio freight train No. 186, at the ungarded grade crossing at Elk Mills, Md. The accident occurred about 11:30 Saturday night. This crossing is approximately three miles below Newark.

As a result of the tragedy, three women were widowed and eighteen children left fatherless. The three men killed were occupying the back seat of the car which was struck directly by the locomotive. The impact was so sharp that the machine was cut cleanly in half and the two men in the front seat escaped with injuries not likely to prove serious. The dead are: Alfred C. Wilson, Joseph H. Kirkley and James E. Rohrer.

Harry Coyle, owner and driver of the car escaped with several broken ribs and lacerations about the head and face. He is in the Union Hospital, Elkton, with his condition improving. John Baylis, the companion on the front seat, was cut about the face and was also taken to the Union Hospital, but was able to leave after his lacerations were dressed.

The party were on their way to pay a visit to Baylis' wife, who was visiting at Conowingo, and made the short cut through Elk Mills to reach the Fair Hill road. They failed to hear the gong, the only protection at the crossing, which was sounding the alarm of the approaching train, and drove onto the tracks directly in front of the engine. The locomotive struck the sedan toward the rear and cut it in half as cleanly as if it had been done with an enormous knife. The rear portion of the car, with the three men killed, was carried quite a distance up the track before the train could be stopped. Engineer Hegley stopped the train as quickly as possible, and with Conductor Waltjar and the train crew hurried back to the scene of the crash and summoned help.

Coyle and Baylis were conscious and able to walk and were put in a machine and hurried to the hospital at Elkton.

The bodies of the three men killed were taken to Cherry Hill by Albert T. Abernathy, undertaker, and were held until released by Coroner Harry Green, of Cecil County. Robert T. Jones later brought the bodies to Newark and is conducting the funerals. The bodies were not badly mangled and apparently shock and internal injuries caused the deaths of all three. Word of the tragedy reached Newark shortly after it had taken place.

Farm Bureau Meeting

Frank F. Yearsley, of Marshallton, president of the New Castle County Farm Bureau, expects from 75 to 100 representative farmers in attendance at the annual meeting of the New Castle County Farm Bureau.

The meeting will be held in the Orange Hall at Stanton, beginning at 1:00 p. m. Monday, December 20. President Yearsley will submit his annual report. Mr. John D. Reynolds, of Middletown, president of the Delaware State Farm Bureau, will speak on the activities of the Farm Bureau from a State viewpoint. Dean C. A. McCue, of the University of Delaware, has been secured as the chief speaker on the program. Dean McCue will discuss some pertinent phases of Delaware agriculture. R. C. Bauman, County Agricultural Agent, will discuss the influence of an extension program upon the agriculture of the county. Ed William, County Club Agent, will submit an annual report, covering the activities of the Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

CHRISTMAS CANTATA OF ST. THOMAS

The Christmas party of St. Thomas Church Sabbath School will be held in the Parish House on Wednesday evening, December 22, at 7 o'clock. A Christmas Cantata will be given by the children. The parents are invited.

FARMERS TRUST NEW BUILDING

Farmers Trust Company To Open New Home Saturday

$100,000 Building Will Be Inspected By Thousands Of Visitors; Is One Of The Most Handsome And Modernly Equipped Institutions On The Peninsula

Orpheus Club Concert Enjoyed by Many

Wolf Hall was packed last evening with town and college folk, who came to hear the concert given by the Orpheus Club of Wilmington and Miss Flora Toronti, soloist, of New York. The affair was sponsored by the Sophomore Class of Women's College, Miss Anne Whaley, president.

The Orpheus Club came last year to Newark under the same conditions, and last night's audience attested to the Club's popularity in Newark. The program was varied and the singers were generous with encores. Miss Toronti charmed all by her personal loveliness and the beauty of her voice.

Miss Whaley, on behalf of her class, presented Miss Toronti with a bouquet of beautiful roses, and at the close of the concert in a short speech thanked the Club on behalf of the Sophomore Class, the other students of the University and for the friends.

One of the finest banks on the Delaware Peninsula will begin business here next Saturday, when the new $100,000 home of the Farmers Trust Company of Newark will open its doors to the public.

Invitations to the opening have been sent to over 4000 firms and individuals in this and nearby communities, and plans are being made to handle a big crowd of visitors. The doors will be opened for the reception at nine a. m. and will close at nine p. m. The work of moving records, safe deposit boxes, currency and necessary office equipment will have been completed by Saturday so that the bank will be ready to take up work in its new quarters immediately.

Outside of these necessities, nothing in the way of fixtures or furnishings will be moved from the old bank building. Down to the inkwells on desks, the new home is completely equipped.

Modern in Every Detail
The new building, Georgian in architecture, was erected and furnished under the direction of the Tighman-Moyer Company of Allentown, Pa., specialists in this field of construction. It occupies a lot fronting 75 feet on Main street in the center of the business section and is easily the most attractive business structure in the town. Indiana limestone and buff faced brick form the outer construction. The limestone extends along the front and part way along

Dr. Hullihen at Princeton

Yesterday Dr. Walter Hullihen and Mr. Alec Taylor had a conference at Princeton with Dean Green, head of the Princeton department of engineering. They were seeking advice and suggestions on plans and layout for the construction of an engineering building.

The Commission on Grounds and Buildings of Delaware University are seeking counsel in order to reduce the costs of building to the absolute minimum that will satisfy construction needs.

Cobweb Social

Mrs. Marguerite Balling held a Cobweb Social at her home on last Thursday evening for the benefit of the Degree Team of Mineola Council No. 17, D. of P. Although the weather was bad, there was a good attendance and the benefit realized $25.00. The evening was spent in singing and dancing the old old time square dances. Mrs. Taylor Campbell chanced off a cake, which was won by A. B. Foote, contractor.

AGED NEGRO IN HOSPITAL

Last Thursday the Newark ambulance took William Ward, colored, of Newark, to the Homeopathic Hospital, Wilmington. He was suffering from heart disease.

Ward is one of the oldest colored men in this section and it is said that he was at one time a slave. He does not recall his own age. Messrs. Clancy, Sprugle and Tasker made the trip.

FOUR NEWARK GRADUATES AT GOLDEY COMMENCEMENT

Judge Hugh M. Morris, of the United States District Court presided last evening at the graduation exercises of the fortieth class to be graduated from Goldey College. The exercises were held in the auditorium of First-Central Presbyterian Church.

The class this year numbered ninety-eight students, four of whom are from Newark. They are: Miss Agnes Fraser, Miss Charlotte Rohrer, Albert Clark, and Herbert Leverage.

AMBULANCE OUT YESTERDAY

Yesterday the Newark Ambulance, with William Clancy driving, brought Patrick Harty, of Wilmington, from the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital to the Flower Hospital in Newark. Harty is a chronic case and will remain in the Flower Hospital for an indefinite period.

High School Christmas Program, Next Week

Schools Close Thursday, Cooperating With Boston Univ. in Educational Survey

Next week, Thursday, the Newark Public Schools will close for the Christmas holiday. The various classes and grades will hold their Christmas exercises and programs Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

On Tuesday from 1:10 to 2:30, the Grammar School, including grades 4, 5 and 6, will hold their programs. These will be under the direction of the following teachers: Miss Madeline Johnson, Miss Nell Lumby, Miss Bessie Wingate, Miss Marion Pixley and Miss Frances Medill. Grade 4 will present a Christmas play. Grade 5 will have a program of recitations, songs and dialogues. Grade 6-B will give a play, written and presented by the children. Grade 6-A will give a representation of Christmas in other lands.

The grammar school will follow the same procedure they did last year in regard to gifts. Instead of exchanging gifts, they will use the money they would spend to fill Christmas baskets for needy families. Last Christmas they were able to bring material cheer into a number of homes.

On Wednesday the primary department will hold their exercises under the direction of Miss Sarah Steel, Mrs. Emma Robinson, Miss Katherine Jones, Mrs. Mamie Palmer, Miss Harriet Wilson, Miss Miriam Scarborough and Miss Virginia Lee Bell. The grades will give a Christmas pageant representing children from all lands. Alex Cobb will play Santa Claus. A little American girl and boy will be portrayed by Mary Lewis and Jack Pié. A poor little boy and girl, Ethel Stephan and Bobby Jones. The different classes will show, in costume, Spanish, Dutch, German and English children.

On Thursday the junior and senior High Schools will present a musical playlet.

The Newark schools are co-operating with the department of education of Boston University in making surveys of standard educational tests. One of the most important of these is the survey of the foundation number facts in arithmetic. These tests are being given to representative school in New England cities, and after the survey is complete, the Newark Schools will be able to compare their achievement, pupil for pupil, grade for grade, month for month, with the records of the best schools in New England. Other tests are being conducted in English, working vocabulary, science, mathematics and history together with a general test of word knowledge.

W. M. Spackman Rhodes Scholar From Delaware

Graduate of Friends' School '23, Is Senior at Princeton

THREE OTHER APPLICANTS

William Mode Spackman, of 1338 Lovering avenue, Wilmington, has been selected the Rhodes scholar from Delaware, Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College and American secretary to the Rhodes trustees, announced yesterday.

Mr. Spackman, who is 21 years old, is the son of the late George H. Spackman, at one time an official of the Delaware Hardware Company. He is living with his mother at the Lovering avenue address.

The Rhodes scholarship winner was born in Coatesville, Pa., but has lived in Wilmington since he was two years old. He was graduated from Friends' School in 1923 and will be graduated from Princeton University this year.

Besides Mr. Spackman, there were three other applicants for the Rhodes Scholarship from Delaware. They included J. Winston Walker, of 7 East Fourteenth street, Wilmington, a school teacher in Gloucester City, N. J., and taking a post graduate course at a university; John C. Pool, of Middletown, an undergraduate of the University of Delaware, now taking a course in the Theological School of Harvard.

Upon Threefold Basis

The scholarship committee in Delaware is composed of Dr. Walter Hullihen, president of the University of Delaware, chairman; Henry R. Isaacs, secretary; Charles W. Bush, principal of Wilmington Friends' School; James I. Boyce, William S. Prickett and Christopher L. Ward, Jr.

Rhodes scholars are chosen on the threefold basis of intellectual ability and attainments, qualities of character, including public spirit and leadership, and interest in many outdoor sports. An appointment carries with it a stipend of $400 per year for three years for study at the University of Oxford. No restriction is placed upon a Rhodes scholar's choice of studies.

For the 32 Rhodes scholarships available in the United States this year there were 372 candidates.

A. F. FADER IMPROVING

A. F. Fader, prominent local business man, who is a patient at the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore, has improved rapidly since his recent operation, and expects to be able to return to his home here the last of this week.

P. S. DuPont Assures Foreign Study Cost

Announces Support After Report By Dr. Hallihen

Mr. Pierre S. du Pont has guaranteed the overhead expenses of the Foreign Study Plan for the next year. The announcement was the result of Dr. Hallihen's report on the operation of the plan, made after his return from a trip abroad with Dr. Joseph H. Odell, director of the Service Citizens, in the interest of the Foreign Study Groups. Dr. Odell recommended that Mr. du Pont assure the expenses.

The Foreign Study Plan, sponsored by the University of Delaware, has, at present, 47 students from 18 colleges and universities taking a year's course at the University of Paris, commonly known as The Sorbonne. This course counts as their junior year in the institution they represent. Each student pays $1,000 for the year's course, and it is the additional expense that Mr. du Pont has assumed.

As to the total amount of this additional expense, it can only be estimated at this time, and Dr. Odell declined to hazard an estimate.

Burglar Enters Newark Home

An intoxicated white man entered the home of Dr. George Paine, on Orchard Road, yesterday morning, ransacked the house and attacked Bill, Dr. Paine's young son, who was alone in the house.

The boy escaped from the man, who upset furniture in his search for money. Finding no money, he left. The boy at once called his father at his office at the University, and the chief of police was notified, but the intruder had made his escape. Bill Paine has furnished the authorities with a description of the man, and it is hoped that he may soon be apprehended.

GASOLINE TAKEN FROM LEAK'S GARAGE

This morning about 2 o'clock, four men were seen taking gasoline from the pump at Leak's garage at the East End of Main street. They were apparently in two Ford cars. One a Ford touring car, was drawn up in front of the garage and the other parked across the road. These young men were known to the parties who saw them in the act. George R. Leak, proprietor of the garage, stated that he would not cause their arrest and prosecution if they settled for the gas immediately.

HONOR FOR NEWARK GIRL

Miss Aileen Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Shaw, formerly of Newark, now of Wilmington, has been elected president of the Freshman class at Wellesley College.

Theft of Year Ago Run Down

One of the values of up-to-date merchandising methods was proven by the recovery of a radio set stolen from the store room of the Rittenhouse Motor Company on Depot road, January of this year. A careful check on their records gave the name of the purchaser of every radio of that design in the vicinity, and when it was learned that Rudolph Rider, colored, possessed such a set on which no sales record was evident, Town Officer James Keeley, armed with a search warrant invaded his premises. He discovered a set with marks on it identical with the one stolen, and trated Thompson. Rider claimed to rest. When brought before Magistrate Thompson, Rider claimed to have bought the radio in a Philadelphia pawnshop. However, he had nothing to prove this, so Magistrate Thompson held him in $1000 bail for the County Court.

THREE CUPS TO BE AWARDED

Three loving cups will be awarded at the 1927 State Corn and Grain Show to be held at Middletown, January 12-14 next. A handsome cup donated by the Dover Rotary Club will be awarded to the boy between 10 and 20 years of age that selects and exhibits the best 10 ears of corn in the boys' class.

A sterling silver cup donated by the Delaware Corn Growers' Association will be awarded to the best Four-H Corn Club judge. This cup must be won three successive seasons to become permanent property. It is now the property of Irene Tarr, of Seaford.

A third cup donated by the Delaware Bankers Association is to be awarded to the High School having the best corn judging team. Newark High School now holds this cup. Any High School winning this cup three times retains it permanently.

MISS CLENDANIEL TO GO TO OHIO

Miss Cynthia Clendaniel, who for a year has been conducting a kindergarten in St. Thomas' Parish House, will leave Newark about the first of the year to take up advertising work in Canton, Ohio.

The kindergarten will continue under a graduate kindergarten teacher, whom Miss Clendaniel will select.

CHRISTMAS SERVICE AT ST. THOMAS

The Sunday morning service at 11 o'clock next Sunday at St. Thomas Episcopal Church, will be a Christmas service, with special Christmas music. Sunday School and evening service will be held as usual.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC

There will be special Christmas music at the Presbyterian Church on Sunday, December 19 and on Sunday, December 26.

each side, where it joins the brick. Features of the building from an architectural standpoint are the splendidly proportioned doorway and the treatment of the high, arched windows. Two of these are placed on each side of the doorway and are in turn flanked by tall, graceful limestone columns. A heavy, well-proportioned cornice runs along the top of the building, into which is carved the name of the bank.

Upon entering the new bank from the street, the visitor passes through a vestibule and directly into the public banking space. There is no break from floor to ceiling in the sweep of the room, and the high, vaulted windows give an additional touch to the roomy effect of the interior. Walls are cream-white, trimmed with marble.

To the right as one passes on down the banking space, are the tellers' cages, and to the left the trust department and individual offices. Just off the vestibule to the right is an attractive, well appointed rest room for ladies. Except for the cages, which are of dull bronzes, fittings for all other departments on the main floor are mahogany. Placed at convenient points in the public space are counters for the use of patrons. All movements of the staff are carried on through connecting passageways without the necessity of going through the large space in the center.

At the rear, opposite the entrance, the massive door of the new vault is visible as soon as one steps into the building. This vault, built and installed by the Mosler Safe Company of Hamilton, Ohio, is burglar proof and fire proof, electrically controlled and roomy enough for every purpose. Despite its excessive weight, the door of the vault is so finely balanced as to move with very little pressure.

Flanking the vault on the right is the safe deposit box holders' room, from which private entrance is gained to the rear of the vault. To the left a stairway ascends to the mezzanine floor, and a second stairway leads to the basement, wherein a permanent record vault, fire proof in construction, a heater room, and storage rooms are located.

The mezzanine floor of the bank is visible from the main floor through three French windows, also arched, from each of which a small balcony with a handsomely designed bronze railing extends. On this floor, which takes up about one-third of the total length of the building, are located the director's rooms, a smaller meeting room and office space. Furnishings here, as on the main floor, are of mahogany.

From the standpoint of efficient handling of banking details, the new Farmers Trust Company is considered modern in every way. Every inch of space in the building serves a useful purpose, and yet there is no effect of cramped quarters whatsoever. Posting and bookkeeping departments are allotted a large room in the rear on the main floor.

One of the artistic features of the interior is the single lighting fixture hanging from the ceiling. It is of beautiful design, offering both direct and indirect lighting, and does not suffer from the presence of numerous other lamps along the walls. In the tellers' cages and on the desks individual lights, well-hooded, fill all requirements.

Has Progressive Record

The Farmers Trust Company is the oldest banking house in Newark, having been established as the "Bank of Newark" early in 1856. At that time, deposits totalled a little over $38,000, and business was transacted in two rooms in the present J. P. Wilson residence at Main and Academy streets. The first president of the bank was Daniel Thompson, grandfather of Magistrate Daniel Thompson, who is now a director of the present institution. Mr. Thompson's father was also a former president.

By 1897, the bank, then operating under a federal charter as the National Bank of Newark, had quite outgrown its old quarters. Accordingly, work was begun on the building just vacated. Within fifteen years, that building too had become inadequate for the constantly growing firm, and several additions and improvements were made in 1913. In that year the bank was once again incorporated under a state charter as the Farmers Trust Company of Newark.

At the present time, deposits in this institution run well over $1,300,000, a well organized real estate and trust department is functioning and an insurance department established, in addition to the customary facilities.

The present officers of the bank, most of whom will be present Saturday to welcome guests on the opening day, are: President, Alfred A. Curtis; vice-president, Mayor E. B. Frazer; vice-president and treasurer, J. E. Dougherty; assistant treasurer, Owen K. Moore; assistant treasurer, Edna A. Campbell.

Newark Plays Caesar Rodney, Friday

Opens D. I. A. A. Basketball Schedule Away From Home; Coach Malin Has Shaped Two Teams

On Friday evening on the Caesar Rodney court, the Newark High School basketball teams will open their season against the boys and the girls teams of Caesar Rodney High School.

These will be the first games for the Newark basket tossers and Caesar Rodney will have an edge in that respect, as the boys team has played two games and the girls one. Beacom College beat the boys team 25 to 20, but the Caesar Rodney girls' team made that defeat more bearable by taking the Beacom Misses into camp 12 to 6. In their first D. I. A. A. game versus Delaware City, Caesar Rodney boys won 38 to 16.

Coach Malin, however, is sanguine of victory, as he has had two strong teams practicing on the floor. The team he will probably put on the floor first will be made up of Morris at center, Mayer and Riley guards, and Rubanks forward with either Doordan or Williamson as his partner. Johnson, center; Smith and Holloway, forwards; and Cole and Whiteman, guards, have been giving the first named aggregation close competition, and any are likely to get a variety berth. Paul Jaquette, captain, is still out of uniform, due to injuries received in the Laurel football game.

Newark will further be handicapped Friday night by the low ceiling of the Caesar Rodney gym, which is only a few feet above the baskets. However, Newark has been preparing for this by working the ball close to the baskets before trying to cage it.

The Christmas Spirit

"I will be brave enough to give only where love and sympathy and helpfulness make giving worth while. I will not turn Christmas Day into a day of barter and exchange. I will make those whom I love and who love me happy, and bring joy, as far as I am able, to those who otherwise would have no joy—to the poor, the lonely, the ill, the old, the friendless, and the helpless."

The Orpheus Club Concert

To say that Newark enjoys the Orpheus Club concerts is not enough; Newark is enthusiastic over the Orpheus Club concerts. This was evident to every one in Wolf Hall last evening. We are beginning to feel as if the Club were our club.

The Sophomore Class of Women's College sponsored the event. The purpose was two-fold: to assist in bringing good music to the town and college and to make some money for the College Year Book. We know that the class could not possibly have cleared a large sum of money, when the price of admission was so low, even with the record attendance. But, we feel that the girls have done a worth-while thing, a really big thing and we hope the pleasure they were instrumental in giving last evening will reward them for all of the hard work.

Newark, Delaware.

Dear Editor:

Persons with "eyes to see" and "ears to hear" know that a public servant gets more criticism and knocks than all private citizens put together; rarely is favorable comment heard. I take, therefore, great pleasure in speaking a word of praise for the personnel of our local post-office. I have lived in various parts of the world, but find the Newark post-office the best, conducted and most efficiently managed post-office at which I have ever received my mail.

PATRON.

Newark, Delaware.

Editor, Post:

To any one who questions "what good is a woman's club," (and we learn there are those who do) it should be significant that the distress of one of the families of the men who were killed at a railroad grade crossing Sunday, was immediately recognized and means taken at once by the welfare committee to relieve it. The very fact that there is a living organization in the town to which trouble of that kind can be brought and relieved, is, in itself, a justification.

"Candida"

The students from the English Department of the University of Delaware who played Shaw's "Candida" in Wolf Hall last Friday evening, deserve a great deal of credit for the performance. The lines had been well rehearsed and the acting was far above the average in student plays. Especially thoughtful was the acting of Frank Swezey as Eugene Marchbanks.

The play was produced under the direction of Professor VanKeuren. Margaret Ellis had charge of the stage settings. The cast follows: Reverend James Morell, Karl F. Frisbie; Prosperine Garnett (Prossy), Frances Eckbert; Alexander Mill (Lexy), Winfield S. Adams; Mr. Burgess, Justin Steel; Candida Burgess Morell, Angela Wisneski; Eugene Marchbanks, Frank Swezey.

MEN'S CLUB TO MEET

The Men's Club of St. Thomas Church will meet in the Parish House tomorrow, Thursday, evening. Colonel Brown, of Fort Dupont, will give an address on "The Panama Canal." This lecture, which will be profusely illustrated, has been given only once before, before a society of engineers, and promises to be of great interest. All members are urged to attend.

DR. SYPHERD SPEAKS

On Monday night at St. Andrews Parish House, Wilmington, Dr. W. Owen Sypherd, head of the English Department of the University, was the speaker for the monthly meeting of the Social Workers' Club of Delaware. Dr. Sypherd read French-Canadian Tales.

he has represented his school on two previous winning teams.

A school, in order to retain permanent possession of the Cup, must win it three times, (not necessarily in succession).

The selection of the team to be left to the judgment of the agricultural teacher.

Identification of members shall be by numbers.

Any boy communicating with a team mate shall be declared ineligible to continue in the contest and an alternate shall be substituted under the same number to finish the contest and full time allowed to complete the games not finished.

Exhibits to be judged shall consist of:

- (1) Four ten ear samples of white corn.
- (2) Four ten ear samples of yellow corn.
- (3) Four single ear samples of white corn.
- (4) Four single ear samples of yellow corn.

First, second, third, and fourth places to be made in each class.

The scoring of the team shall be based on 60% for placing and 40% for reasons.

The Agronomy Department of the University of Delaware shall act as judges of the contest.

The time allotted for judging shall be twenty minutes for each of the ten ear classes, and ten minutes for each of the single ear classes; or a total of one hour to complete the entire contest.

Address all communications with reference to this contest to R. W. Heim, State Supervisor of Agriculture, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware.

The prize, the silver "Challenge Cup," is donated by the Delaware Bankers Association.

and Town Officer Keeley and Highway Officer Leach went immediately to the scene. The accident is being investigated by Cecil County authorities and railroad officials. That particular crossing is protected by a watchman until 10:30, but after that, the only warning of approaching trains is that of a gong. In this instance the bell was not heard. Owing to the numerous fatalities on B. & O. railroad grade crossings in Cecil County, the County Commissioners have, for several months, been holding meetings with the railroad officials in order to provide 24-hour watchman protection at all grade crossings. Coronor Green stated that the Elk Mills crossing should be protected at all hours by a watchman.

ALFRED C. WILSON

Alfred C. Wilson was 50 years of age and lived on the John Dean Farm, near the Curtis Paper Mill, and operated by Wallace Cook. He leaves a wife and four children: Mrs. Howard Nobb and Mrs. Charles Armstrong, of Elkton, E. Carol Wilson and Clifton Wilson, both living in Newark. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at one o'clock and interment made at St. Augustine Cemetery, near Chesapeake City, Maryland.

JOSEPH H. KIRKLEY

Joseph H. Kirkley was aged 50 years and lived on North street. He was employed at the plant of the National Fibre Company and is survived by a wife, five daughters and four sons. The daughters are: Mrs. Flora F. Downey, Marguerite Kirkley, Lillian Kirkley, Florence M. Kirkley and Ethel L. Kirkley, all of Newark. The sons, all living at home are: Elwood Horace, William T. Joseph H., Jr., and Paul M. Kirkley. Funeral services were held this morning at eleven o'clock, and interment made in Newark Cemetery.

JAMES E. ROHRER

James E. Rohrer, aged 52, lived on lower Delaware avenue, and was employed by the Continental Fibre Company. He leaves a wife and five children: Mrs. Katherine Odess, Charlotte, Thelma and Gladys Rohrer, and a son, Harry. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon and burial made in the Newark Cemetery.

CHRISTMAS AT THE M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL

Two programs will be rendered at the Methodist Episcopal Church at the Christmas time in the Sunday School.

On Tuesday, December 21st, the Beginners and Primary Departments will have an interesting program, in which the little folks will speak and sing and entertain as only they can. A great deal of effort is being put forth to make this program as attractive as possible. Coupled with the other part of the program will be the opening of the New Church Banks which were given out several weeks ago. These banks are made to represent a Church of old style in the roof of which is a slot for placing of pennies and other small gifts of the children. Some of these Churches are getting quite heavy, indicating a desire on the part of the youngsters for better church quarters.

On Thursday, December 23rd, the Junior, Intermediate and Senior Schools will have their programs, combined with the White Christmas Gifts. The school has set as a goal for the White Christmas Fund, the most of which will be for the new building, the sum of $500.00. If you have not already helped, don't let this opportunity slip. Following the presentation of these gifts a general collection will be received and the Junior Choir of about 50 boys and girls will render a number of Christmas songs. This part of the program will be especially interesting and we hope you boy or girl is one of this number. Come out anyhow and hear them sing. —Superintendent.

Delaware Opens Cage Season With Victory

Game Develops New Stars; Teamwork and Speed Offset Lack of Size on University Lineup; Score 28 to 19

Last Friday on the University court, Delaware opened its basketball schedule with an impressive 28 to 19 victory over the Philadelphia Textile School five. This showing was particularly favorable because it was the Blue and Gold's first taste of competitive fire against a team hardened by several battles. The intensive work of Coaches Forstburg and Doherty was evident in the flawless team-work and snappy passing that accounted for the victory. Lack of size in the University combination is more than offset by speed and precision.

The contest uncovered two new stars, both yearlings and former Wilmington High aces, that should prove effective factors in a successful season. "Scoop" Barton was the sensation of the game with seven field goals and a foul to his credit. Johnny Le Carpentier not only kept the Delaware basket empty on many threatening occasions, but scored two field goals in the bargain.

In the opening minute of the game Captain Creamer caused the first decoration on the score-board by shooting a foul. Wright, star defense man for Textile saw that and raised him one by shooting a basket. On this the University boosted the pot in all directions, Le Carpentier with a foul and Barton and Jaquette with a basket each. From there on Delaware was never headed and the half ended with their holding a four-point margin.

In the last three minutes of the game, Coach Forstburg sent in a whole new line-up, including three new faces, Green at center, Hill, forward, and Taylor at guard. The Holt brothers, last year veterans, completed the reserve combination. This crew kept their slate clean and Hill accounted for two points from the field.

Textile had a fast, even working team. Sherer at forward and Wright and Luban guards, copped the individual honors for Philadelphia.

D. I. A. A. Games To Interpret Rules

Newark Coaches and Captains Attend Exhibition Games in Milford

Last Thursday evening, the D. I. A. A. held two exhibition games of basketball for the purpose of interpreting the new rules. They were under the direction of Field Agent Major P. P. Prince and refereed by E. Heite and John Moore of Dover. Professor Brinser, Coaches Thomas Malin and Miss Katherine Johnson, together with Paul Jaquette, captain, and Ann Chalmers, captain pro tem of the two teams, attended from Newark. Over 300 coaches, officials and players from Delaware schools were at the games.

The games were between the boys and girls teams of the Milford High School versus the boys and girls teams from the Milford Community House. Between halves the rules were interpreted, followed by open discussion.

This was a progressive move on the part of the D. I. A. A. and should do much to clear the laden atmosphere surrounding the problem of officiating at athletic contests.

NEWARK NEW CENTURY CLUB

At the meeting of the Newark New Century Club on Monday afternoon the program was a feast, both to the student of events and to the lover of music. Mrs. Code and Miss Bell delighted the members with a two voice song in French, and Miss Bell sang three French songs very charmingly. They were accompanied by Miss Wilson. Mrs. S. J. Smith, accompanied by Mrs. George Dutton, captivated her hearers with her rendition of three English ballads, "The Gift," "John Olden," and "Another Day." Dr. E. B. Crooks, of the University, spoke on "A Year of World Happenings," and explained many puzzling moves in recent affairs among foreign governments, also called attention to some events in our own part of the world, which are by no means insignificant. He proved the statement that the year just ending has been the most troublous year since the war, and yet it seems to be coming to a close without anything very disastrous happening.

The meeting next Monday will be in the evening at 8.15, when Dr. Benner of the University will give the third lecture in the "Current Events" series. Christmas carols will be sung.

—Acting Secretary.

For Delaware, Jaquette played a strong game at center and captain Creamer played a great defensive game.

Next Thursday evening Delaware will again play host on its own floor, this time to the Philadelphia School of Osteopathy.

GENTLEMEN prefer a Gift simple in design providing years of usage. We have assembled a collection of chains rings pencils links evening jewelry flasks cigarette cases and other male accessories whose simplicity and purity of design make them distinctive without being blatant. Frequently gifts of this character made last year may be supplemented by another article in complete accord with those now possessed.

For the ladies we have articles too many to attempt to mention each a graceful thing with an elusive charm a subtle influence from classic art that will win the discriminating feminine taste at a glance.

MILLARD F. DAVIS

DEPENDABLE SINCE 1879

831 Market Street Wilmington

This is the second season that Delaware has been represented by a swimming team. Last year under Leroy Sparks, nationally famed instructor, the team had a fair season. However, both the coach and the swimmers were badly handicapped by lack of a pool and their practice was confined to two sessions a week in the Y. M. C. A. tank, Wilmington. This year's team will be faced with the same conditions, but as all but one man of last season's squad is back, Coach Nobis is hopeful of a more successful campaign. Reybold, Reese, Maier, Russo, Rose, Walz, Eskridge and Derrickson have all reported in first-class condition.

Manager Tremaine has scheduled five dates each for the Varsity and Freshman teams and has several other meets pending and has several they will open January 8 with Swarthmore College in the Swarthmore tank, and then will take on Temple, Johns Hopkins, Catholic University, Germantown Boys Club and other amphibian organizations yet to be listed.

On the frosh team, Coach Nobis has a problem, as only three of the candidates are experienced and know the crawl. However, these three are stars of the first magnitude and may be enough to turn in a perfect season. They are: Wilson Boyer, from Wilmington High, who is an all-round swimmer and has many decorations for his work on the springboard; Alec Taylor, free stroke and back stroke specialist, and Larry Lattomus from Coatesville, who headlines in the sprints.

The freshman schedule includes: Coatesville High, Tome, City College

Unusual Used Car Sale

Celebrating my 14th Anniversary as representative of the Ford Motor Co., I am going to make a clean sweep sale of used cars regardless of the original prices at which I traded them in.

I have determined to have a clean garage by January 1, 1927.

As a special inducement during this used car sale, I will furnish free 1927 set of license tags, no matter in what state you reside.

All cars guaranteed for a period of 90 days, five days' trial allowed on any car purchased and if you are not absolutely sure that you have your money's worth bring it back to Fader, who always backs up whatever he says.

In addition to this you may win a valuable prize. Every person who registers his name between now and January 1, 1927, will be given a number. These numbers will be drawn by a disinterested party on New Year's Day at 4 o'clock at my salesroom, Newark, Del. Customers must be on hand personally when number is called.

FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF TEN PRIZES

- (1) Crossley Radio Set (retails for $120).
- (2) Freed-Eiseman Radio Set (retails for $75).
- (3) One Set of 5 Wire Wheels for Ford Car (retails for $35).
- (4) One Set of Bumpers for Ford Car (retails for $25).
- (5) Automatic Radiator Front (retails for $15).
- (6) Firestone, One Tire and Tube to fit Ford (retails for $12.50).
- (7) Pyrene Fire Extinguisher (retails for $11).
- (8) Speedometer installed for Ford (retails for $10).
- (9) Lock Motometer (retails for $7.50).
- (10) Parking Light installed for Ford (retails for $5).

Any car can be purchased on the most liberal terms ever offered to a purchaser. If interested in the purchase of a used or new Ford, it will pay you to get in touch with one of my salesmen immediately.

Women's College Notes

Current Events were discussed in Forum on Thursday afternoon. Professor Barkley presided. Miss Keely and Miss Richardson, of the faculty, were present. Marjorie Johnson discussed General Wood's policy in the Philippines; Louise Booker explained the relations between Nicaragua and Mexico; and Ann Walker gave an account of Great Britain's colonial policy.

Eleanor Edge was hostess. Assisting her were: Ethel Merritt, Mildred Sherwood, and Charlotte Rambo.

The Athletic Council has chosen the honor team in hockey, selected from the best players on the class teams. Those who have been chosen and their positions are: Margaret Burke, center; Marion Reese, right inside; Ethel Merritt, left inside; Marion Steele, right wing; Adeline Richards, left wing; Rosalie Steel, right half; Carmen Thomaschewski, center half; Martha Hill, left half; Dorothy Sharpless, right end; Tacy Hurst, left end; Frances Goldstein, goal. Substitutes: Anne Barclay, Emma de Huff, Betty Smithers.

Vesper service was largely attended last Sunday evening when Professor Code read to the students a number of his own poems.

Heleen Morton was the leader. Mr. Thomas Marsden, of Chester, was the soloist. He was accompanied by Homer Ewing, assistant organist of Grace Church, Wilmington.

Rehearsals have commenced on the Christmas play to be given in the Hilarium before the holidays. The play will be Van Dyke's "First Christmas Tree," and will be given under the direction of Lillian Benson.

There was an Academic Council meeting in the Common Room of Sussex Hall, Monday afternoon. Miss Kelly was hostess and was assisted by Miss Spencer.

Dean Robinson presided at Chapel on Monday, Christmas carols were sung.

Anne Whaley and Miss Gillespie were guests of the Orpheus Club at the concert given at the Playhouse, in Wilmington, on Monday evening.

Miss Gillespie and Miss Sturges were guests on Thursday at a demonstration luncheon given by Virginia Smith and Miriam Lysle, in the practice dining-room in Science Hall.

Guests at the Practice House on Wednesday evening will be Miss Keely and Miss Marx. The hostess will be Ella Reynolds and Ruth Larter will be host.

The Christmas meeting of the French Club will be held this evening in the Common Room of Sussex Hall. French Christmas carols, games, and readings will form the program. Katherine Krauss, president, will tell about Christmas in France.

Freshman Class elections have been completed with the following results: President, Margaret Middleton; vice-president, Ann Barclay; secretary, Charlotte Rambo; treasurer, Helen Stephens.

The Women's College Christmas Dance will be held in the Commons Saturday evening. Katharine Ady, chairman of the Social Committee, has charge of the party. Assisting her are: Linda Bassett, Savina Skewis, and Tacy Hurst.

Dr. Ruth Phillips spent yesterday in New York City at the American Museum of Natural History, to observe a demonstration of the preparation of zoological specimens.

Forestry In Delaware

Dr. Schenck, Famed Forester, Says Delaware Has Great Opportunity

Dr. A. A. Schenck, German forestry expert, who is an international authority on the subject, was the speaker at the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce luncheon on Monday. The subject was "Forestry In Delaware."

The meeting, under the auspices of the Whitehall Division, was attended by the Chamber of Commerce members, the Service Clubs, the Forestry Conservation Commission, the members of the General Assembly, and many other guests interested in the subject.

Dr. Schenck is well known in the United States, having spent much time here since 1900. He has lectured before hundreds of universities and schools of forestry and is acquainted with the forest situation in every section of the United States. For a time he was in charge of the forest reserves of George Vanderbilt in North Carolina. He served on Herbert Hoover's relief commission in Germany after the war, and when that was disbanded, the French government wanted to retain him in an advisory capacity on their forest problems. This post he declined. Dr. Schenck painted a practical and optimistic picture of possibilities in Delaware.

"Forestry in Delaware? You will hug your shoulders and you will wince, half laughingly and half regretfully; that there isn't any forestry in Delaware. Pardon me when I differ from you. And there is a reason, nay, here are three arguments for my contention:

"1. There are some woodlands in Delaware; after the statistics, there are some 300,000 acres of woodlands in hand covering as much as 25 per cent of the State's area.

"2. There is also, without the slightest doubt, common sense at hand in the State of Delaware, not 25 per cent of common sense, but 100 per cent of the unique raw material of progress.

"3. Now, thirdly, unless forestry is common sense applied to woodlands—of woodlands in Delaware—neither do I want to have anything to do with it.

What Is Forestry?

"Forestry is common sense applied to woodlands; not more and no less, in Delaware as much as elsewhere; and the scientific definitions of forestry given by Roosevelt, Pinchot, Ferrow and the rest cannot and will not alter my point of view.

"Possibly, you do not like the kind of commonsensical forestry, of 'brush-actory' which your neighbor in the State is doing. Few people, on farm and forest alike, approve of the methods used by their neighbors; thus there is nothing extraordinary about this, your disapproval of the things happening or failing to happen in your neighbor's domain; and your neighbor is sure to retaliate your wholly feelings respecting his managerial sagacity, by criticizing similarly your own commonsensical things.

"Again: Forestry is common sense applied to woodlands,—in Germany, Sweden, in France and in America.

"Some 250 or 300 years ago when our ancestors arrived in this country, they applied common sense to the woodlands by applying to them their own, their sows and—emphatically—their incessant fires. Forest destruction was then—in Delaware as it is now in sundry sections of the U. S. A.—the world at large—the common-sensical method of forestry. The American law of relativity seems to be applicable to trees as well as to wars. The primeval forest must go—museum pieces excepted—because it is unproductive or, very often, because it is more badly needed than is food.

The Essence of Forestry

"When the primeval forest is gone, that we can do on land not claimed by agriculture but potentially productive of timber is this: We can wait for second growth to come up. They do not do anything else in France or in Germany, in Sweden or in Finland. Planting, planting wee little slips of seedlings so as to raise a second growth artificially is, even in Europe, an exception and not the rule. It does not pay, this forest planting. For very reason, it is usually poor common sense and poor forestry.

"In the prairies, I admit, things are different. Who, however, would think of raising timber in the prairies?

"Forest planting may be a necessary evil; it is not and it never was the essence of forestry.

"What is the essence of forestry? "The essence of forestry is business, is dollars and cents; and he is the best forester who obtains from his woodlands the best possible dividend. In America, none but business forestry has a birthright or any other right.

"But—there is the people: The people—your own good selves—want to have forests rather than forestry. You want forests for outings in your flivvers, forests to protect your water supply, forests to supply you with lumber for your house, with pulpwood for your books and with rayon silks for your hat ribbons. All that you want; and you want all that regardless of the dividends which the owner of woodlands in Delaware fails to make; indeed, you want all these fine things at the smallest possible expense for yourself, and therefore, necessarily, at the smallest possible profit—which is dividends on his investment—for your forest-owning neighbor.

What Is Wrong With Forestry?

"Apparently, there is somewhere some nigger in the woodpile of forestry. Common sense applied to Delaware woodlands does not yield to you what you demand of Delaware woodlands. There cannot be anything wrong with your common sense; there must be something wrong elsewhere.

Delaware's Chances

"It seems to me that the chances for forestry are better in your State of Delaware than they are anywhere else. On your farms interwoven with your woodlands, there is plenty of help available during the chief season of forestry, which is the winter. Your climate and your soil are particularly well adapted to tree growth; and you are in close proximity to the consuming markets. There is the wonderful possibility in Delaware of cheap transportation, because of your excellent roads, of logs and lumber, of pulpwood and mining timber, of telephone posts and of railroad ties. Mind you, Forestry is, if it is a business, a matter of transportation as much as it is a matter of botany. A tree which has in the State of Washington a value of $3.00 would be worth $18.00 in the State of Delaware, under otherwise equal conditions. The freight difference to Philadelphia or Wilmington explains the price difference of $15.00. Indeed, when it comes to the chances, the actual natural chances for forestry in the U. S. A. and elsewhere, Delaware is in the lead. One hundred years ago timber was sent down the Delaware River. There is no reason why it should not be sent up the river, nay, all over the East, not in a raw state but in a highly manufactured condition, in days to come.

"What, you will ask, is needed to the end that common sense, instead of letting things hang and drift and trail in the woodlands of Delaware, can embark in the timber-forestry as in an investment productive of a fair and secure income? Obviously, we cannot change common sense; we may however change the economic conditions surrounding its application; and when we change them, common sense, instead of using the woods as if they were a quarry may use the woods as if they were a factory of timber. At that time commonsensical dollars, instead of fleeing from the timber, instead of withdrawing from the trees, will run towards the timber and into timber-forestry.

Two Ways of Proceeding

"There seems to be open two ways of proceeding:

"Firstly, Delaware can do what Pennsylvania did; Delaware can issue state-bonds and Delaware can buy for the state to be retained as state forest reservations, what woodlands there might be for sale. In that case, the people of Delaware pay the taxes on the land and the interest on the bonds and the expense of protecting and administering those state forest reservations by a miniature forest service modelled after that in Washington, D. C. And further, in that case, the people must pay a property tax of two or three mills annually for the benefit of state forestry. Personally,

I am not in favor of that scheme; forestry is a business investment; and, to my mind, business had better be entrusted to a board of directors than to a state board of forestry. State forestry is at best a necessary evil if private capital cannot be persuaded to engage in timber-forestry.

"And this brings me to my second alternative: Let us persuade private capital to engage in timber-forestry.

"How can we persuade it? "Let me give you some hints. Private capital is cowardly; it does not run in any direction where there is any danger of its life; instead it prefers to run in a direction where there is a chance for a progeny of capital, for interests and for dividends. Let us encourage capital. Let us remove the dangers of forestry. Let us increase the chances for propagated dividends.

"Did we not encourage, in the seventies and in the eighties of the last century, private capital to build some dare-devil railroads across the continent? We did and we did it, usually, by giving the capitalists all sorts of benefits, rights and lands and mines and what not. We removed the danger, we gave the chances.

"Did we not settle the prairies in the course of a few decades? How was it done? Well, the settlers were obtaining 160 acres of land for nothing. There was not much danger of loss; there was a good chance of a gain.

"Did we not establish the most astounding steel industry in the U. S. A. and also a gigantic chemical

Advice For Writers

Advice to people who want to write, or who are already writing but wish a better market, is poured forth from many sources in enormous quantity. Some of it is good and some of it is nothing more than a means of getting money away from would-be authors. There are six magazines in this country now devoted to writers and writing, with hundreds of correspondence schools, college courses, literary agents and publishing clubs, some of them honest and more of them quacks.

The editor of The Writer, W. D. Kennedy, has just published a book which should be of practical value. Under the modest title, "The Freelance Writer's Handbook," are collected opinions of two score men and women who are making a living through some connection with writing for publication. There is sufficient variety in their work and personality to make the book useful for everybody with the writing urge. Robert E. Sherwood writes about the freelance humorist. Ivy Lee discusses publicity, house organs and such possibilities for writers. The writing of fiction, plays and scenarios is taken up in detail by people who know about it from their own experience. Resort to an agent, the literary markets and every practical aid are examined carefully.

Yet no undue heartening of those who would better stick to the garage business is found. The writers selected by Mr. Kennedy have been frank in pointing out difficulties. They have recounted some of their personal obstacles. The editor himself indicates an ideal of training for authorship which should frighten off any except professionals and the most ambitious of beginners. When the opportunities of the screen world are considered, the advice seems perfect. "Every good American sooner or later dashes off a scenario—even as you and I." After suggesting that if "you and I" are to get our masterpieces read something should be done, the writer with cruel pleasure passes on the word from the movie editor, "Snowed under by the too fluent efforts of plumbers, typists and usherettes, their message to the general public is urgent and unmistakable and all in one word—desist."

In addition to a full and up-to-date directory of markets for everything from verse to jokes, a careful account is given of the special editorial needs of many leading magazines, publishers and syndicates. But even such a survey cannot be so helpful to the determined amateur as the candid, sometimes brutal and always well-written counsel of such writers as Ben Ames Williams, Henry Seidel Canby, Katharine Fullerton Gerould and Augustus Thomas. The force of example counts for as much as the sound suggestion.—From New York Times.

industry? How was the miracle achieved? Well, we saw to it that the infantine years of the industries were protected by a high tariff on foreign steel and on foreign chemicals.

"In other words, every industry existing in the U. S. A. has been encouraged, at the temporary expense of the people, when it was started; timber-forestry was never thus encouraged. Capital will never embark in it unless it is encouraged to embark in it. It is here that the nation and it is here that the State of Delaware must begin to realize their providential functions, and here that they must lead, leading the world. 'Where there is no vision, the people perish'—no slogan is truer than this when it is applied to the forest.

What Can You Do, Personally?

"Now, what can you do in a desire to assist the forestry movement? Enthusiasm such as is spread on Arbor Days and in Forest Weeks will not bring timber-forestry into being any better than were U. S. steel works, du Pont chemical factories, Northern Pacific railroads and Anaconda copper mines created by steel, chemical, railroad and copper festivities. Forestry is an economic problem; and I do care for that enthusiasm alone which capital shows for timber-forestry.

"In 1924, a federal law fathered by Senator McNary and by Congressman Clarke was passed, timidly, without any appropriation and without any enthusiasm. The law points to two financial impediments preventing capital from engaging in forestry; that is all that it does, practically; one of the impediments is forest fires endangering forestry investments and the National government, under the law, offers to render some financial aid to all states and through them to all investors who are willing to embark in the venture of timber-forestry. The second impediment consists of forestry taxes which are levied from growing trees (you remember my simile of corn-growing) to be reimbursed, fifty years later by mature trees. Here, in forestry, a penny saved is—owing to the long and insistent accumulation of interest upon interest on any outlay made early—a dollar earned. In timber forestry taxes must be paid from capital though taxes should be paid from income.

"Not much has been achieved, so far, under the provisions of the McNary-Clarke law; but this law is the first star on the sky of remunerative forestry which I have seen rising in thirty-two years of astronomic observations in America. It is up to you, in Delaware, to apply the McNary-Clarke law to your own State, by creating an office which can co-operate with the federal government. Neglect all Arbor Days and all Forest Weeks; but do not neglect this unique chance to remove two of the impediments to timber-forestry as a business. You cannot do it under the law unless there is a forestry office established in your capital.

"There are other impediments which you may help to remove. Timber forestry cannot be practiced on small woodlots; concerted action is needed; co-operatives are needed, for examples, you may have to go as far as Finland. The trouble with most co-operatives lies in the internequity wars waged by them; co-operatives must co-operate among themselves. If the Sherman law, enacted in the year 1890 under entirely different conditions, stands in the way, the Sherman law must be amended. Nothing will be preserved or conserved which it does not pay to preserve—neither corn-lands nor timber-lands. Unlimited competition in the exploitation of natural, unreplaceable resources is an economic crime. Here, unlimited co-operation is the root of all conservation, while unlimited competition is the root of all waste. In my opinion, forestry stock companies must be encouraged; they must be formed by co-operatives of wood-owners, and they must be large so as to be able to buy intelligence, for administration (Continued on Page 12.)

Letters to Santa Claus

Dear Santa Claus:

How are you this year? I love you Santa Claus. I have been good this year. This year I want a pair of shoes, and an umbrella, and a Book-Bag and a wool cap, and a dolly-baby and a dish-set. I guess that is all. Good-bye. Santa Claus

OXFORD — A PANEGYRIC

I have been in Oxford well over a month now; too long to write my impressions of the town and university. (The characteristic American method of writing impressions is to do them immediately upon first arrival to the place about which the impressions are to be written.) Consequently, I have waited too long, and instead of writing my impressions of Oxford I must write my conception of Oxford.

Immediately above my desk is a print of Leonardo da Vinci's La Gioconda—"All the thoughts and experience of the world have etched and moulded there, in that which they have of power to refine and make expressive the outward form, the animalism of Greece, the lust of Rome, the reverie of the middle age with its spiritual ambition and imaginative loves, the return of the Pagan world, the sins of the Borgias. She is older than the rocks among which she sits; like the vampire, she has been dead many times, and learned the secrets of the grave; and has been a diver in deep seas, and keeps their fallen day about her; and trafficked for strange webs with Eastern merchants; and, as Leda, was the mother of Helen of Troy, and, as Sainte Anne, the mother of Mary; and all this has been to her but as the sound of lyres and flutes, and lives only in the delicacy with which it has moulded the changing lineaments, and tinged the eyelids and the hands."

This morning, for but a few minutes, a ray of sunlight shot through the double Gothic window in my study and fell directly upon La Gioconda's face. It was a revelation. The sort of revelation that is beyond the limits of words. And yet it gave me an idea. Here is this picture of da Vinci, with its unusually high forehead and its baffling expression which defies analysis, representing—in a single frame the whole history of woman-kind. And here is Oxford, a single little city, representing the history of all England for the past one thousand years!

With its ancient crumbling spires and towers, its narrow, crooked, little streets, the cloister-like quadrangles of the colleges, the quaint little shops, all haunted by the ghosts of great souls and brilliant intellects—men who made nations; men who were great in mind and spirit and yet not exempt from the frailties of mankind, but all the greater because of these frailties; men to whom we turn for solace, inspiration, and strength—this is Oxford.

The room in which I sit writing this is seven hundred years old; thirty-five generations have come and gone since it was built. The stone steps leading up to my door are worn deep by that long and mysterious line of my predecessors.

A place of Books, is Oxford, where—in "lies the soul of the whole Past Time"; a resting place for the weary in spirit; a lighthouse on the rocks of experience casting a never-failing light over the eternal sea of time; a tradition built in stone.

Here came to intellectual majority such as Adam Smith and Samuel Johnson; Henry Kingsley, Bradley, Stanley, and Shelley; John Wycliffe, Matthew Arnold, and Southey; Addison and Steele; Ruskin, Beau Brummell, Raleigh, Cardinal Newman, J. A. Froude, Oglethorpe, and Cecil Rhodes; Lyly, Locke, William Penn, Peel, Jeremy Bentham, Walter Pater, and Christopher Wren; Thomas de Quincey, Robert Burton, Hobbes, Tyndale, Lords Baltimore and North, Swinburne and Landor; Blackstone, Gladstone, Shenstone, Hakluyt, and Thomas Hood; Wolsey, Charles Reade, Fox, Pelham, William Pitt, Warton, Andrew Lang, Beaumont, and Thomas Coryat; and Clough, Jowett, Massinger, and Henry Vaughan.

The appeal of Oxford is manifold. Each individual experiences an individual sense of its attraction. For in a way Oxford is a great paradox: it is not only noble and old; it is young and foolish. It is not merely a place of Books; it is also decidedly vigorous physically. It is more than a resting place for the weary in spirit; it is a spot of intense labor for the fresh keen mind. It is not just a tradition in stone; it is a gallows for standardization. It is the world's center of the tremendous search for the disinterested truth; yet it is not entirely unselfish. Perhaps Keats was wiser than he knew when he called Oxford "the finest city in the world."

Architecturally, one finds in Oxford practically every type represented in England: Saxon, Norman, Early English, Decorated, Perpendicular, the English Renaissance, the Stuart Renaissance, the modern Gothic. The famous Tom Tower built by Christopher Wren, Radcliffe Camera, Magdalen Tower and Bridge, the Sheldonian Theatre, the Bodleian Library, the Bell Tower at New College, the Cathedral. There is a jostling of Classic and Gothic styles, and the architecture of different periods is constantly intermingled. A most amazing architectural mass is Oxford. From Carfax down High Street, held to be the most beautiful street in the world, to Magdalen College and one may almost say that he has seen England.

Situated on the junction of the Isis and Cherwell in the Thames valley, Oxford was at one time a great stronghold, a plot of firm ground amid swamp and forest. Perhaps, the earliest authentic record we have of its size is found in the Domesday Book, where an entry in 1086 shows that there were then 721 "mansions," most of which were habitable, composing the town.

Oxford was cradled in Romance, the spirit of which lives on. One of the stories of the origin of the town is briefly this:

Didan, a prince, had a beautiful daughter, Frideswide. On the site of what is now Christ Church College, Didan built a nunnery for his child. After taking the veil, Frideswide was asked in marriage by Algar, King of Leicester, whose offer she declined. Algar, having something of the cave-man in his make-up, determined to carry off the maid by force. She learned of her proposed abduction and fled to a wood where she hid in a pigsty. Algar pursued her, however, and she is only saved by the intervention of Providence which caused her impetuous lover to lose his sight. Frideswide returned to Oxford and lived a long, happy, and unmarried life.

Some of the more authentic stories about Oxford are not so happy. On St. Scholastica's Day, February 10, 1354, took place the most famous and bloody of all the Town-and-Gown battles. The fight started in a tavern brawl. Angry words led to a street fight, which in turn developed into a riot. "On the one side the bell of Carfax summoned the citizens to the fray; on the other that of St. Mary's was the tocsin of the students. A fierce struggle ensued, but eventually the citizens were driven off, and the University remained victorious for a time.

"But for a time only. Hardly had breathing space been given than the citizens returned, reinforced by a body of peasants two thousand strong. The students were overborne by weight of numbers and many were hunted down and murdered. The Friars, with great courage, came out of the colleges, bearing a crucifix, in the hope of staying the tumult. But they availed naught. One student was killed clinging to the crucifix, and some were ever scalped, the aggressors, with a savage humor, shaving off the skin of the tonsure."

However, modern Oxford is quite different from that picture. The University practically controls the town. The townspeople depend to a large extent upon the students for their living. The merchants cater to student trade in an almost servile fashion. A Town-and-Gown war today would probably ruin Oxford economically if not otherwise.

Withal there is a powerful and enduring charm about Oxford; a charm based on its antiquity and kept alive by its youngness; a charm, as are all such charms, indefinable; a charm that once one has felt will last as long as memory. Oxford—the mother of the arts, the nurse-maid of eloquence, and the sleepy governess of the world! —C. T.

A MESSAGE FOR YOU ABOUT YOUR SCHOOLS

A building which thoroughly discredits the fine spirit that prevails in the community is the story in the Millsboro district. An old frame structure which eight years ago was pronounced beyond repair, is school headquarters for 238 children. One windy day last week three panes of glass blew out.

The woodwork is so old we found it impossible to putty them in," Mr. D. A. Petry, the principal said. "Instead we had to prop them in with sticks until new timbers could be secured." The cold throughout the building, from similar conditions, is the cause of great discomfort to all quartered in it.

All of the grade rooms are heated by stoves in which wood is burned for at least a portion of the year. The original rooms have been partitioned electric bulbs furnish light for the rooms.

But the most deplorable condition is the awful fire hazard that prevails throughout the building. The Millsboro school once afire would undoubtedly burn like kindling wood. The exit for two grade rooms is through a vestibule 6 x 10 feet in size, in which fuel is stored for the wood stoves in the two rooms which open out of it. "What to do in case of fire" is conspicuously posted on every door. Fire drill is a feature of the school's program. Fire extinguishers have been installed, which the principal makes it a point to refill, personally. "Everything that we can do is being done," Mr. Petry said.

Three years ago, crowd the children in as they may, it became necessary to find new quarters for a part of Millsboro's children. The town was searched for a spot that might be used as a possible schoolroom. Finally, after weeks of fruitless effort, George S. Williams, now president of the State Board of Education, erected at his own expense, a building in the woodpile, bordered on one side by a driveway, leading to the freight station, and on the other, by a barnyard, is all that they have. The school's basketball team finds it impossible to entertain visiting organizations. In order to schedule games it is necessary to go twice to the opponent's court, since they refuse, on account of the conditions that prevail, return engagements. "This," Mr. Petry said, "creates financial hardships for the pupils."

"Millsboro has been recommended as a logical consolidation center for a number of outlying districts, at the present time in dire need of new school quarters. The people in these districts are reported willing to consolidate. "If Millsboro had the space to take care of the pupils," one of the trustees declared, "the problem would solve itself." The trustees, alive to their opportunity to develop a school which would become a real community center in the neighborhood, have been working for the last six years to secure the building. A site, including six acres, purchased in 1919, in the rear of the present school, is now held by the State Board of Education. Three years ago 20 per cent of the cost of a new building was pledged by leading citizens of the town and an appeal was made to the executives from Peninsula towns held meeting here recently.

"CASTLES IN AIR"

After 47 weeks in Chicago, "Castles in the Air" will land at the Shubert Playhouse, Wilmington, Christmas night only. Donald Brian, Roy Cropper and Virginia O'Brien, along with the whole Chicago organization, will add to the drawing qualities of this box office bonanza. Few musical shows have acquired before New York entry the reputation that has attached to "Castles in the Air" for more than a year.

Besides Donald Brian, Roy Cropper and Virginia O'Brien, the principal players are Genevieve McCormick, Walter Law, John T. Dwyer, Betty Marvin, Dorothy Wilkins, Joseph Granby, Benedict MacQuarrie, J. Harry Jenkins, George A. Weller, John Ehrle, Cecil Butterfield and Antoinette Mack—all names that have first call from the big casting directors.

With a genuine plot, as well as a lot of shapely legs to stand upon, "Castles in the Air" has an American heiress who dreams of a "big, beautiful boy," who will one day make her his princess in a land of romance. Her wish coming true, the dream boy arrives at her country place in prosaic

Westchester county, New York. In the next act they journey to the Balkan Kingdom of Latoria, surrounded by merry villagers and the picturesque figures of a musical of royalty.

Owing to the fact that Sussex County's allotment of the funds available from that source had been pledged, the association found it impossible to grant the request. "YOU NEVER KNOW WOMEN"

No man should assume a woman loves him until he has definitely asked about her regard.

Neither should he take it for granted that she does not care—without giving the lady a chance to express the state of her heart.

Clive Brook, who was very much smitten with Florence Vidor, said nothing about his affections, thinking she had been won by Lowell Sherman.

And he would have lost her had it not been for a certain bit of magic that always seems to set things right for lovers.

In "You Never Know Women," which comes to the Newark Opera House, Newark, readers will find the danger of "speechless love,"—a lesson in frankness, that shows how a miracle of the heart worked out at a moment when two lives might have been blasted.

"THE BLIND GODDESS"

The plot of this gripping drama, coming to the Newark Opera House tomorrow and Friday, is based on the law that every man is innocent until proven guilty.

The action of the story opens in the atmosphere of smart Fifth Avenue society and then switches to the somber background of the criminal court room. The story develops a mystery that is not solved till the last few flickers of the film. Jack Holt, Esther Ralston, Ernest Torrence and Louise Dresser are important in the cast.

Our work is what we are; to do one thing and to be another is impossible. —Saint, Charles Borromeo.

ELKTON

Mrs. Helen M. Mackey was removed to Union Hospital on Friday, suffering from a broken hip sustained in a fall down the cellar stairs at her home on East Main street.

The newly elected County Commissioners for Cecil County qualified on Monday before Clerk of the Circuit Court, S. Ralph Andrews, and assumed charge of their new duties on Tuesday. One of the best paying plums to be handed out by the new board will be the appointment of a supervisor of assessment for a four-year term.

The Orphans' Court has changed the day for its weekly meetings from Tuesdays to Wednesdays.

Plans are under way, in charge of the Young Men's Committee of Elkton, for another community tree and treat for the children on Christmas Eve on the Court House lawn.

The Elkton Rotary Club was addressed by Phil Palen, of Philadelphia, at its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening.

At their December meeting, the directors of the Mutual Building and Loan Association elected Dr. S. Claude Sykes, president, to succeed the late William H. Mackall. Irwin T. Kepler was elected vice-president and S. Ralph Andrews was elected a member of the board.

Two small buildings of the Victory Sparkler Company, on the Singler road, were destroyed by fire Saturday morning. Taft Malin, of Elkton, was painfully burned about the face and hands. After having his injuries attended to at Union Hospital, he returned to his home.

Sheriff Logan, Deputy Buckworth and Constable Ott raided the pool room of William Darby and George Kling, near Conowingo. Twenty-four half-pints of liquor, a gallon jug of liquor and four slot machines are said to have been confiscated. The proprietors were placed in Elkton jail to await the action of the Cecil County Grand Jury, which convened in Elkton Monday.

The ladies of Elkton are holding their annual Christmas sale this year in the store of Samuel H. King and Sons, and have all kinds of fancy work, bread, rolls and Christmas novelties for sale.

The United States Civil Service Commission will hold a competitive examination here on January 17 for the position of mail carrier from the Elkton postoffice. The position will pay $1500 per annum.

CHRISTMAS AT HOWELL SCHOOL

The pupils of Howell School will give their Christmas entertainment Thursday evening, December 23, 1926, at 8 o'clock. Santa Claus will be there and have a treat for the boys and girls of the community. Everybody welcome.

Elkton Personals

Mrs. Charles Grant entertained at bridge at her home Thursday of last week.

Mrs. W. H. Wright and Mrs. Joseph Wilson entertained the Westminster Guild at Mrs. Wright's home last Tuesday evening.

Miss Harriet Evans was a guest of her niece, Mrs. Armand Durant, of Newark, last week.

Clifford Dean and Mary Purnell, both of Elkton, procured a marriage license and were married in Chestertown last week.

Misses Mollie and Flora Ash were Philadelphia visitors last week.

Mrs. Laura V. Roberts was given a birthday party by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Roberts at their home on Bridge street on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Thackery, wife of Robert C. Thackery, Esq., is confined to her home by a serious illness.

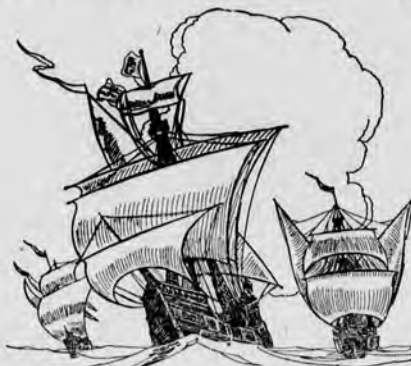

Arthur F. Stanley, Elkton's news-dealer, is slowly recovering from an attack of pneumonia, at his home on West Main street.

William H. Cole is confined to his home with a serious attack of pneumonia.

Gas Company Changes Hands

The Eastern Gas Company, a recently organized company, of which John H. Ware, Jr., of Oxford, Pa., is president, has purchased the Elkton Gas Company, and the stockholders of the local company will be exchanged for stock in the new concern for their present holdings. It is understood that many improvements are contemplated in the Elkton plant.

Forestry In Delaware

purposes and for the sale of the produce, and so as to reduce to a minimum the overhead charges per acre of forestry and forests. We require, in this grand country, timber-forestry on a grand scale; and there is, in this modern world of ours, no other means to that end than business, stock companies, with stocks and bonds quoted at the leading exchanges. Whether these stock companies should be chartered, like national banks, under national laws, or whether state charters are preferable; that is an open question with me, and for you. Let Delaware, let little Delaware lead in the movement—that is all I can insist on.

The Tariff

"Our great industries have been made possible, were actually raised under the motherly protection of a tariff. Will a tariff on lumber imported from elsewhere be any help? It will, most certainly it will. What encouragement do I have for forestry if pine lumber from Mexico or from Finland can take my profits any day? Do you realize that we are already paying to foreign countries for printing paper alone, annually two hundred millions of dollars which paper we might as well produce from home-raised trees? When the infantine years of real timber forestry are over, we shall be able to dispense with a tariff on forest products; today, we need it and we need it high and we need it badly. Look at England, with its barrens covering one-eighth of the land. England is the only industrial nation which has never had a tariff on things made of wood. Today it is cheaper in England to import timber than to raise it inland. And yet, if England had four million acres of woodland where she had four million acres of wastes, how different would her condition look today. England neglected her soil as long as she was the richest country on earth; today, it is too late for her.

"Germany and France, have, of course, a tariff on forest products; while it is not high, it is a safeguard for such forestry as there is. "And do we need precedents? In the U. S. precedents were made, are made, are to be made, and are not to be imitated. Were it for the necessity of precedents, there would not be any U. S. A. We cannot have a town-forestry in town forests such as prevail in France and in the South of Germany. We do not want any enclaves; we do not want any petrified and militarized state forestry such as we find in all central European states, in Finland and in Sweden where, by the way, not a state forester but a business man acts, in recent years, as chief. We want American business-forestry and we want it under American conditions; we want it to be as remunerative as is any other investment; and we want nation and state to create the conditions needed for forestry exactly as they were created for other industries. I have mentioned but four of these conditions—the tax problem and the fire problem touched by the McNary-Clarke Law of 1924; the co-operatives and the timber syndicates antagonized by the Sherman Law; the necessity of a high tariff. There are more inducements to be offered and more impediments to be removed. Worst of all impediments is, perhaps, the high price of money when required for novel investments such as forestry investments. We cannot issue timber bonds at 8% while the trees are growing at a rate of only 4%. We cannot increase the value of our trees by road improvements when money costs, for such purposes, 10%. Here, we might learn, from a precedent, a lesson in little Switzerland, a country just twice as long as is the state of Delaware. The Swiss Federation defrays up to 90% of the expense for any permanent road improvement in the woods made by private parties; and, on its national railroads, it gives a preferential rate to the home-grown tree products. Encouragement and optimism is needed, for nothing more than for capital deared (for an enterprise very remunerative for everybody excepting the owner).

Results Obtainable

"There are in Delaware three hundred thousand acres of woodland; they might produce, in forestry as a business, annually at least sixty million feet b. m. of lumber and seventy-five thousand cords of pulpwood, mining props and railroad ties. In money, these woods should yield an annual net income to the owner of $3.00 to $5.00 per acre. But they might do more. They might give employment in winter to the farm hands, employment in all seasons to thousands of factory hands, sport to the sportsman, enjoyment and health to everybody, and how the woods can preach of a Sunday, that is an experience worth making.

"And—would it not be grand for little Delaware to lead the nation on the road to real commonsensical American business-forestry? Precedents are there to be made."

A New Yorker asked divorce because she slapped him in a bridge game, but the Judge disregarded the little slam.—Dallas News.

The Black Pirate

On Thursday and Friday, December 16 and 17, the Hanark Theatre will show one of the most outstanding pictures of the year, "The Black Pirate," by and with Douglas Fairbanks.

This is the first picture in which the technicolor process has been used with complete success and with the natural colors; the picture seems more realistic and life like. Fairbanks outdoes himself in acrobatics and one of the high points in the production is his descent of the huge sails of a merchant ship by sticking his sword in the sail and sliding down, cutting the canvas in half as he goes. Fairbanks took several bad tumbles before this stunt was perfected as the first sails used were too light and his descent was a matter of seconds—only his natural agility saved his life. He must have assembled all the surviving characters of the old Barbary Coast to get his villainous pirate crew, as they are all perfect Howard Pyle pirate types. While this is a picture that no child should miss, grown-ups with any romance in their make-up will find it a rare treat.

Coroner's Jury Exonerate

Holds B. & O. R. R. Responsible for The Death Of Three
Cyclists R. R. Negligence
Having Crossing

At an inquest held Monday at the Cecil County Courthouse by Coroner Howard Coroner's jury who was responsible of the fatal accident of December three men, all from the same town, were killed, exonerated Harry of the death car, and more and Ohio Railroad responsible for their crime in not having the crossing protected.

This was the second case. At the first hearing, December 14, Coyle was held to be responsible for the crash. Monday appeared in company with Coyle, the driver of the car, which had been in danger of breaking down ever since occurred.

After reviewing the case, of which Coyle was the most important, the jury reached the following verdict:

"Resolved, That A. Joseph E. Kirkley, Jr., of Rohrer, came to their death by a Baltimore road train at Elk Milling on December 11, 1926, through the negligence of road company by not having man and safety gates closed and we, the jury, exonerate Coyle, the driver of the car, which the three men were all blame."

Coyle sustained severe and other injuries, while the fifth man in the car was Coyle's companion, escaped with minor car, a Ford sedan, was half and the three men back seat instantly killed.

Coyle testified that safety gates were not closed, and that as it, he stopped, but failed to warn from the going or the bell on the proceeded to cross and he reached the east bound train. Under Maryland law, driver of a vehicle held on a charge of when passengers of the car were killed. Coyle said that no charge for the trip party was on their way wife at Conowingo.
