Newark cops take kids on shopping spree

Given $100 to buy toys, 5-year-old Teabout Haskins first thought of his big sister, 8-year-old Truth. He picked out a doll and other items for her as he walked around Kmart with Newark Police Officer Megan Keating.

As he passed Truth in an aisle, he stopped to show her the doll and give her a big hug.

"I'm going to shop for my brother now, because he bought me a lot," Truth said, adding she had already picked out a gift for her dad.

That touching moment between siblings was just one of many moments that brought smiles to the faces of the more than 20 Newark Police Department officers participating in the Shop with a Cop event Saturday morning. The officers treated 16 deserving kids to a shopping spree just in time for Christmas.

Newark's early-morning robocalls prompt complaints

For the second time in three years, Newark officials are reviewing their procedures for sending emergency notifications after robocalls awakened residents early on a weekend morning.

Just after 5 a.m. Dec. 10, the police department activated the InformMe notification system to let residents know that a water main break had closed a portion of Cleveland Avenue.

"Unfortunately, because of the time of day, it woke many people up, and we received feedback from some who felt it would've been better to receive the notice via text or email only," city spokeswoman Kelly Bachman said.

The InformMe system allows residents to sign up for various alert types – such as reminders about meetings, notices of road closures or changes to trash pickup – and specify whether they want to receive calls, texts and/or emails.

However, a resident who wants to receive a call when Main Street is shut down during rush hour might be less thrilled to get a call in the wee hours of the morning when little traffic is on the road.

"We are reviewing our practices and we're going to look at doing texts and emails before, say, 7 a.m. on the weekend, and maybe we'll call once people start waking up," acting City Manager Tom Coleman said. "We're starting to work the kinks out on our notifications."

Bachman said calls only went to those who had signed up for traffic alerts, unlike in March 2015 when a series of errors caused 8,000 people in the city to receive up to six calls alerting them to a road closure at 4:30 a.m. on a Sunday. That incident prompted city officials to issue a written apology to residents.

Carolers spread old-time Christmas joy in Brookside

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Wearing Santa hats, a small group of carolers strolled around Brookside and Altersgate on Sunday afternoon, spreading Christmas joy and a message of goodwill.

On Brookside Boulevard, they sang to a man suffering from a bad cold who stepped out onto his porch to request a rendition of "O Holy Night." On Mattei Lane, they sang to a man hanging up Christmas lights as a family member filmed the scene with her phone. On Martell Drive, they serenaded two young boys riding by on bicycles, who stopped for a few minutes before riding off smiling and perhaps a bit bewildered.

Along the way, drivers beeped their horns in support, and residents watched from their windows.

"It just makes you feel like you're spreading the message," said Fran Taccone, who organized the caroling event for St. Nicholas Episcopal Church of Newark. "The idea is to remind people what Christmas is about."

This is the third year members of the congregation on Old Newark Road have gone caroling in the neighborhoods surrounding the church. A total of eight people participated Sunday.

Taccone noted that the church's namesake is St.

Wanda Simons joins other members of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church in singing Christmas carols in Brookside on Sunday.

Nicholas, the fourth-century bishop who became the inspiration for Santa Claus. She said the caroling is a way to spread the message of God's love.

"We have something to sing about," she said, adding it reminds her of days gone by, when her mother used to take her caroling in the small Pennsylvania town where she grew up.

The effort also helps the church connect with nearby residents.

"Being present in the community is important to us," Taccone said.

Caroler Lawana Lockhart said she enjoyed meeting the Brookside Boulevard resident who was, as she put it, "in need of a song."

"We were able to lift him up," Lockhart said. "That was the best."

"I think we really touched the heart of that gentleman," added Wanda Simons.

Wreath ceremony honors the fallen at Cooch's Bridge

POST STAFF REPORT

Dozens gathered at the Pencader Heritage Museum on Saturday morning to honor the two dozen colonial soldiers who died at the Battle of Cooch's Bridge.

In what has become an annual Christmas tradition, volunteers laid several wreaths in honor of the Revolutionary War soldiers, who are thought to be buried in unmarked graves somewhere between Cooch's Bridge and Glasgow.

Pencader was one of more than 1,200 locations across the country that held such a ceremony as part of the Wreaths Across America project.

The annual Wreaths Across America effort began in 1992 when the Worcester Wreath Company of Harrington, Maine, had a surplus of wreaths and arranged to have them laid on graves at Arlington National Cemetery. The tradition continued, largely unnoticed, until 2005, when a photo of the wreaths went viral online.

The attention led to an influx of funds and volunteers, and the project expanded. Today, more than 1 million wreaths are laid in all 50 states and in American cemeteries on foreign soil.

Newark girl, 17, dies in crash

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

A 17-year-old girl from Newark died in a crash on Salem Church Road on Tuesday evening, police said.

Caitlin Rouwhorst was driving a 2001 Saturn SL 2 on Cornell Drive, approaching the intersection with Salem Church Road, just before 6:30 p.m., according to Master Cpl. Michael Austin, a spokesman for Delaware State Police.

After stopping at a stop sign, she proceeded through the intersection and directly into the path of a 2011 Dodge Nitro, which was heading north on Salem Church Road, Austin said. The Dodge then struck the driver's side of the Saturn.

Rouwhorst was taken to Christiana Hospital, where she died.

The 27-year-old driver of the Dodge and Rouwhorst's 16-year-old male passenger were taken to the hospital to be treated for non-life-threatening injuries. An 8-year-old boy who was a passenger in the Dodge was not hurt.

All occupants were wearing seat belts, and impairment does not appear to be a contributing factor in the crash, Austin said.

Police investigate graffiti in Hunting Hills

Newark Police are looking for two vandals who sprayed graffiti in the Hunting Hills neighborhood of Newark.

Police were called to the unit block of Blue Hen Ridge Drive, off Barksdale Road, for a report of two suspicious men at 12:30 a.m. Wednesday.

The suspects were gone, but the officers found that a street sign, an electrical box and the road had been sprayed with black paint, according to Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The vandals were described as white men of high school or college age. A witness told police they left in a silver sedan.

Anyone with information regarding this incident should contact Officer Kelsey O'Donnell at 302-366-7100 ext. 3490 or KODonnell@newark.de.us.

Man gets 10 years in prison for gun charges

A convicted felon found near Newark with a loaded gun will spend the next decade in prison.

Ralph Walsh, of West Grove, Pa., was sentenced last week to 10 years in prison followed by six months of home confinement and two years of prison after pleading guilty to carrying a concealed deadly weapon and possession of a firearm by a person prohibited.

Walsh, who was wanted on several traffic warrants and capiases, was arrested in June by officers from the Newark Police Department's Street Crimes Unit. The officers spotted him while checking a residence and then followed him to a gas station on Capitol Trail, where they arrested him.

Walsh was found in possession of heroin, methamphetamine and a Luger handgun, which he was prohibited from having due to previous felony convictions for assault and drugs, police reported.

Package worth $4,000 missing from One Easton apartments

High-end fashion merchandise worth thousands of dollars is missing after the items were delivered to the One Easton apartment complex behind Newark Shopping Center.

A package, which contained a variety of Dolce & Gabbana items worth a total of $4,000, was delivered to the complex between Nov. 16 and Nov. 20, according to Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

Due to an incorrect name on the label, a staff member at the apartment complex marked the box as "return to sender" and set it aside for FedEx to pickup, Nelson said.

However, on Dec. 13, the intended recipient called police to report the package missing. Nelson said FedEx never picked up the box, and neither the victim nor the apartment staff can locate it.

Police are investigating the incident as a package theft, Nelson said. Anyone with information regarding this incident should contact Officer Corey Spencer at 302-366-7100 ext. 3485 or CSpencer@newark.de.us.

Shoplifting arrest at Newark Acme leads to drug bust

A Newark man detained for shoplifting is facing additional charges after police raided his home and found drugs, authorities reported.

Police were called to the Acme in Suburban Plaza at 2 p.m. Dec. 13 after an employee reported detaining a man accused of stealing approximately $80 worth of merchandise, according to Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

When officers searched the suspect, 35-year-old Dominic Polifroni, they found six bags of suspected marijuana and three methadone pills, Nelson said. They also found him in possession of $158 worth of merchandise stolen from the nearby Walgreens.

Armed with a search warrant, other officers raided Polifroni's home in the 100 block of Madison Drive and recovered 489 grams of suspected marijuana, 3 Xanax tablets, a digital scale and hypodermic needles.

Polifroni was charged with two counts of shoplifting, two counts of drug possession with intent to deliver and other related offenses. He was committed to the Howard Young Correctional Institution in lieu of $15,600 secured bond.

Council approves 3 percent raise for city secretary

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

After emerging from a closed-door executive session last week, city council voted 5-2 to approve a 3 percent raise for City Secretary Renee Bensley.

The raise equates to an additional $2,576 per year, bringing her annual salary to $88,426. This is her first increase since January 2016.

Bensley is responsible for keeping the city's records, filing all official documents and compiling agendas and minutes for meetings. She is also tasked with researching laws, coordinating elections and handling Freedom of Information Act requests.

The city secretary and city manager are the only full-time employees who report directly to council and do not receive regular increases like most other city employees get.

Councilman Mark Morehead noted that the city's unionized workers can receive up to 4 percent yearly increases. Next year, council plans to consider a plan to provide its two employees with a regular merit raise program.

"My suggestion for 3 percent would address an immediate need, and we can develop a plan to move forward," Councilwoman Jen Wallace said.

Councilmen Luke Chapman and Chris Hamilton cast the opposing votes.

Delaware Growler wins decorating contest

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

After coming in second or third place for the past three years, The Delaware Growler finally edged out its Main Street neighbors this year, winning the Downtown Newark Partnership's annual holiday storefront decorating contest.

"It feels good," owner Mike Slattery said. "It was worth the wait."

The store's window features a Christmas tree, a light-up snowman and other winter decorations.

"I don't know that I had a theme; I just wanted to be festive," Slattery said.

Unique Impressions, which incorporated several screen-printed T-shirts into its window design, took second place. Meanwhile, third place went to Del-One Federal Credit Union, where the windows featured painted-on Christmas lights, a Christmas tree and a snow scene.

Ten stores participated in the contest, and the winners were determined by an online vote.

Slattery said the friendly competition helps make downtown Newark look festive for the holiday season.

"It all helps Main Street," he said.

Natali Gogoladze's drawing and story about her pet bird, Kasha, appears on a page of "awesome animal stories" along with submissions from other kids from around the country.

Kasha "says poems, and 'I love you, Natali,' and so much more," the 9-year-old wrote.

Each year, Highlights readers send the magazine more than 35,000 submissions. The magazine selects work by kids of all ages and from many different places in the world. Natali was one of only 38 children chosen for the December 2017 issue.

According to biographical information released by a magazine spokeswoman, Natali enjoys arts and crafts, swimming and building things. She wants to be an engineer or architect when she grows up.

Solomon Lodge keeps Salvation Army bells ringing in Newark

By DARA MCBRIDE
Special to The Post

If you haven't caught the holiday bug after two hours of bell ringing for The Salvation Army, there's something wrong.

That's according to Toland S. Van Stan Jr., who, for nearly 30 years, has organized volunteers from Solomon Lodge No. 36 in Newark to man red kettles outside area grocery stores and shopping malls during the holiday season.

"It really gets the Christmas spirit going," said Van Stan, who plays Christmas carols and hands out candy canes during his shifts. "You walk among the crowds and you just feel different."

The iconic red kettles date back to San Francisco in 1891, when a Salvation Army captain collected from a similar pot in hopes of raising enough to feed that city's poorest individuals on Christmas Day. Today, The Salvation Army, an evangelical part of the universal Christian Church, reports its outreach assists more than 4.5 million people in the U.S. during Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Locally, the Solomon Lodge tradition got going in 1989. There are now 120 volunteers – some Masons, some family and friends – covering 550 volunteer hours.

"I'm very proud of all the people who have done this," said Van Stan, now secretary of the lodge.

You won't catch them ringing before Thanksgiving. Lodge volunteers start the Saturday after Thanksgiving, the official start of the Christmas season, Van Stan said. The collection period ends Christmas Eve, but this year will end Dec. 23 because the holiday falls on a Sunday.

Solomon Lodge ringers are out in the greater Newark area from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. every Saturday, and 5 to 9 p.m. every weekday. Their locations include the College Square Acme and Kmart, Suburban Plaza Acme, Fox Run Acme, Prices Corner JCPenny and Salem Center Food Lion.

About two weeks before Christmas, with temperatures dipping into the 20s, Ken and Patty Brown were bundled up outside the College Square Acme ringing their bells. Retired educators and Newark residents, the couple started ringing for their Rotary Club 10 years ago.

This season, they will give four two-hour shifts through Solomon Lodge. All they have to do is show up and be pleasant, Ken said. Someone from The Salvation Army drops off and picks up the kettle and bells.

Patty does a constant "jingle bell" ring while Ken prefers to give a sharp shake to his bell on a slower beat.

"Bells have different tones," Ken said. "Sometimes they're in harmony, sometimes they're not."

The location brings in a lot of University of Delaware students, who might not have as much to give as shoppers at other locations, Patty said. Nonetheless, everyone gets a greeting of "Merry Christmas!" or "Happy Holidays!" and a bell ring.

Ken and Patty Brown, of Newark, volunteer together at The Salvation Army collection post at the College Square Acme.

Over the years, several donors have told the Browns they once needed The Salvation Army's help.

"This area isn't the most affluent right here, and it just does your heart good to see them taking a dollar out of their pocket and putting it in," Patty said.

Although The Salvation Army is careful about sharing how much each kettle brings in, because it doesn't want thieves to target the collections, Van Stan said the lodge raises about $20,000 annually. This year, he expects to finally pass the $500,000 mark of total raised over the years.

Across town at the Suburban Plaza Acme, where the foot traffic is heavier, Steve Charles saw about 50 people in an hour stop and give, although it's hard to say how much. He's seen people – men, women, young and old – put in $10 and $20 bills, or some change.

"It really gets me in the holiday spirit, because I'm freezing my butt off but it gets me warm inside," said Charles, a Newark resident who also volunteers with the Lions Club selling Christmas trees.

His trick is to dress in layers – a light sweater, sweatshirt, light jacket and hunting coat – and also wear a hat and insulated gloves.

The colder it is, the more likely people are to stop and chat, Charles said. They sometimes bring him a hot coffee or cocoa. At 72, his knees bother him, so he brings a chair. Even then, the second hour can be difficult.

Charles, who is semi-retired and works as a driver for the Cecil County Health Department, has been ringing for 10 years through the lodge. It may be harder than it used to be, but that's not stopping him.

"It makes us feel good to be able to help," Charles said. "I'm not rich, so I can't donate large sums of money, but I can still give my time, which is pretty precious to me."

Group distributes 300 food boxes to families in need

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

More than 300 families will have a brighter Christmas season, thanks to dozens of volunteers from the Newark Area Welfare Committee who spent three days packing and distributing boxes full of food for the holidays.

"We're helping the working poor, we're helping the elderly and we're helping families," Beverly Stoudt said last Friday as she oversaw an assembly line packing effort at the First Presbyterian Church of Newark.

With 315 boxes lined up in the church's multipurpose room, volunteers moved down the lines, dropping in canned goods, boxes of pasta, cereal, pancake mix and other food. Meanwhile, other volunteers sorted and packed bags of fresh produce.

On Saturday, families lined up at the church to pick up their box and a turkey.

Stoudt said she enjoys watching the families receive their food.

"When they leave, you can see the tension flow out of their bodies," she said. "We're helping them provide Christmas for their families."

Approximately 40 volunteers helped pick up and pack the food, which was collected by more than 20 schools, churches and community groups. NAWC also received monetary donations, including $8,240 from the Newark Morning Rotary Club, which raised the money with a "ball drop" fundraiser at the Newark Country Club.

"Newark Morning Rotarians are proud to help our neighbor who does so much for our community," Rotary Club President Joshua Martin said. "We never know when disastrous circumstances will hit any one of us."

Among those helping pack food was Bucky Marino, who recently moved to Newark from New Brunswick, Canada.

"It's a good use of time," Marino said as he placed packs of ramen noodles in each box. "It's a good way to help people."

He said he was looking for a way to get involved in the community and found out about the NAWC project through his church, Newark United Methodist.

"I've got the time and energy to do it," Marino said. "I'm getting to the age where I can't just goof off. I've got to do something good."

Elizabeth Taylor, in her fourth year volunteering, echoed those sentiments.

"I like giving back to the community," Taylor said. "I can't afford to give money, but I can give my time and service."

Tammy Sharp noted that members of NAWC often split up and work on different projects, but preparing the food baskets takes an all-hands-on-deck effort.

"For this, everybody comes together," Sharp said. "It's amazing seeing all these boxes and knowing people are being helped."

Toys for Tots event brings holiday cheer to Newark kids

By JESSICA IANNETTA
jiannetta@chespub.com

As organizers started planning for this year's Toys for Tots event, they realized they had a problem: The event had become so popular it had outgrown the Newark Housing Authority's Main Street office.

"It's just growing and growing, so we needed a bigger room," said NHA director Marene Jordan. "Our office is so small, we were on top of each other over there."

With a move to the community building at Alder Creek, a two-year-old NHA housing development at the former site of Cleveland Heights, everyone had more space to enjoy the holiday cheer Wednesday as approximately 80 children received gifts from the Toys for Tots campaign, a national effort run by the United States Marine Corps Reserve and coordinated locally by the Newark Police Department and Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company.

NPD Lt. Fred Nelson said the bigger space was a good change, giving the fire department more parking space and everyone inside more room to move around. But regardless of where the event is held, the kids always seem to enjoy it, and Nelson said the officers do, too.

"It's great just seeing the kids' faces and giving gifts to kids who might not otherwise get something," he said.

The event began with Santa arriving by firetruck and greeting the children with high-fives before listening to each child's Christmas wish and handing him or her a wrapped present donated by a community member.

As the kids took their turns on Santa's lap, electronics and toys of all types were among the more popular items. But Alicia Pettis, 9, explained that her desired gift was a little more unusual.

"I asked for a mannequin so I can sew," she said.

While she already has a sewing machine, Pettis said she'd like a mannequin so she can better model her creations, with shirts and pillows being her favorite things to sew.

While Santa was the primary attraction for those in attendance, Kimora Jennings, 10, wanted at least one other person to hear her Christmas wish list.

"Mom, listen to this," she said, calling over her mother before reciting her list, which included a tablet, an iPhone, a shoemaker and a slime kit.

For the Patrick brothers, Eric, 5, DJ, 7, Kameron, 9, and Keshan, 14, remote control cars and phones were some of the top items. And at least one of them was pretty sure they weren't going to end up on Santa's naughty list.

"I think I'm going to be on the nice list," DJ said.

has sponsored the community-engagement event.

"It's important to get these interactions early with kids, so when they're older, they realize we're their friends," Lt. Fred Nelson said.

The effort was funded by proceeds from NPD's No Shave November program, in which officers paid to be able to grow beards last month. A local resident chipped in a $100 donation, as well.

"It gives us a chance to get into the community and get them to have a positive image of police officers," Cpl. Brandon Walker said.

He added that Nerf guns were popular among the kids this year.

"I guess we'll have some fun Nerf wars," he said, laughing.

Kagome Matousek, 12, picked out a Littlest Pet Shop toy and other items with help from Officer Kelsey O'Donnell.

"I like that we can spend time with a cop and get to know them," she said. "I also like the chance to have gifts we pick out."

With Lt. Nelson's help, C.J. Stokes, 9, picked out a few Lego toys and a Wild West play set. However, his favorite toy was a remote-controlled tarantula.

"I'm going to scare my cats," he said.

Nine-year-old Abdul Watson spent the morning browsing the toy aisle with Deputy Chief Mark Farrall.

"I appreciate it," he said. "I like to shop with a police officer."

Abdul picked out a Nerf gun and had his eye on a Star Wars light saber, but not all of Farrall's suggestions were well-received.

"I'm trying to get him to pick a Steelers hat," Farrall said, laughing, as Abdul, a New England Patriots fan, said no.

Nicole Miller, mother to Truth and Teabout, enjoyed watching her kids pick out their toys.

"This is so cool," she said. "They've been waiting for this for a while."

Sherrita Green concurred as she watched her kids, 7-year-old Jayden and 5-year-old Jordan, shop.

"All week, I was trying to keep it a secret, but I told them a little bit. They were excited," Green said. "They don't get to do this too much."

As he waited at the checkout line, Timothy Haskins, 11, turned around to Sgt. Greg D'Elia and said, "Thank you."

"It was a blessing, a very big blessing," he added.

— not just for years, but for decades to come."

The facility, which will house laboratories and some office space, will employ approximately 325 scientists and other personnel, all of whom will be relocated from more than a dozen other Chemours facilities in New Castle County.

While the new headquarters won't create additional jobs right away, Vergnano said the company has plenty of room to expand.

"The whole idea here is for us to grow," he said. "I believe there will be new jobs over time."

For now, the benefit of the new building is the ability to bring together scientists who are currently spread out among a number of other sites.

"By bringing our scientists and engineers together in one location, we can make our efforts more efficient, more productive and, above all, I hope more fun as well, as we interact more in person," said Zeru Tekie, who heads Chemours' fluoro-products division.

According to public records, the company inked a 75-year ground lease with UD for a 15.2-acre, pentago-nal plot of land in the southeast corner of the 272-acre STAR Campus. That area was designated as "future development" in UD's 2014 master plan, which called for turning STAR into an urban-inspired campus centered around a new transportation hub and featuring research and development space surrounded by parks, restaurants, residential units, retail stores and a hotel.

Chemours will be situated in close proximity to Bloom Energy, which opened in 2013 as the first private company to locate on the STAR Campus.

Formerly the site of the Chrysler assembly plant,

STAR also includes the UD health sciences complex, the technology company SevOne and a business incubator. A 10-story tower, which will house part of the health science program as well as several undisclosed commercial tenants, is slated to open next summer. In October, UD broke ground on a six-story, $156 million biopharmaceutical building.

Under the terms of the deal, Chemours paid UD $4.6 million to lease the land, a UD spokeswoman confirmed. Chemours will pay UD an additional $4 million over five years as part of a research agreement, in which faculty and students will do work for Chemours.

"This is a big deal for the University of Delaware and our state," UD President Dennis Assanis said. "They're going to be part of a neighborhood, an ecosystem of researchers, educators, innovators and entrepreneurs. We're going to create the future of our state here and we're going to be a major force in the mid-Atlantic region for job creation and for wealth generation for our society."

Assanis said the deal came together quickly after he and Vergnano discussed a possible collaboration approximately six months ago.

Like any good relationship, it's all about chemistry, he joked.

"From the moment I met Mark, I knew there was great chemistry," he said.

Vergnano said he hopes to create a "pipeline" from UD, in which students intern for Chemours while studying at the university and then go on to be hired fulltime.

"People forget the University of Delaware is one of the top chemical engineering schools in the world," he said. "We're not only collaborating with the University of Delaware because they happen to be local; we're collaborating with one of the best universities in the world."

Kevin Leary, who heads Chemours' titanium technologies division, said the proximity to UD is crucial for attracting young, innovative talent to the company.

"Our success is rooted in new generations building on the work and wisdom of those that came before them," Leary said. "With that in mind, this facility and this partnership will be a magnet to attract talent not just from the greater Philadelphia area but from across the country and around the world."

Headquartered in Wilmington, Chemours was founded in 2015 when DuPont spun-off its performance chemicals division. With 7,000 employees worldwide, the company's flagship products include brands such as Teflon, Ti-Pure, Krytox, Viton, Opteon, Freon and Nafion.

Sen. Tom Carper said the discovery hub is an important step for Delaware's economy.

"A lot of people looked at Chemours when DuPont spun them off three years ago, and a lot of the skeptics said Chemours ain't gonna make it," Carper said. "Lo and behold, Mark Vergnano, the CEO, has provided great leadership."

"The wonderful thing about this investment is that this will foster more innovation and it will lead to the introduction of technologies that can be commercialized and turned into economic opportunity and job creation," he added.

Newark High's Nick Zegna commits to play baseball at George Mason

By JON BUZBY

JonBuzby@hotmail.com

Before the 2018 baseball season has even started, Newark senior Nick Zegna announced where he'd be playing in 2019.

Zegna signed a National Letter of Intent to play baseball at George Mason University during a signing ceremony in the Newark High library on Dec. 13.

"I chose George Mason because my ultimate goal is to play in Major League Baseball, and out of all my options, Mason seemed like it would give me the most developmental opportunity," Zegna said. "To get better, you have to play, and at Mason, I will have many opportunities to prove myself. George Mason will also provide more athletic focus than the Ivy League schools I was looking at, which is necessary for my ultimate goal."

Zegna's junior season at Newark started late due to illness. He played in 12 games, starting two on the mound and relieving in two others. He batted .353, struck out 19 in 15 innings and finished with a 3.19 ERA during his four no-decisions. He will be the ace of Newark's staff this spring.

"I am looking forward to many things this year, but one in particular is how this young man finishes out his career at Newark," Newark coach Jason Bedford said. "He is extremely important to the success of Newark, and I am very grateful for the opportunity to have coached him through high school. Hopefully, he learned a few things from the program, and I hope to see him live his dream to the fullest. He is a great leader and I've enjoyed watching him grow into the young man that he is today."

Zegna plans to study economics in college.

"I understand that an education is just as important, so I did not settle academically," he added. "Mason is a good academic school with a lot of diversity and networking opportunities."

Bedford is confident that Zegna will succeed at the next level, on the field and in the classroom.

"Nick is a special young man who has a very bright future," Bedford said. "He is what I want the community to see as the 'face' of Newark High baseball. He has the athletic ability to play multiple sports in high school and more importantly the focus to earn a 4.35 cumulative GPA."

When Zegna put pen to paper signing his National Letter of Intent, it was the first step toward his next move after graduation. Now with that major decision behind him, Zegna is completely focused on his final baseball season as a Yellowjacket.

"I'm really looking forward to pitching against some of the best teams in the state," Zegna said. "We have a pretty tough schedule this year and I'm excited to represent Newark and public school baseball."

Ezekiel Dawkins wins award

Newark freshman Ezekiel Dawkins was presented with the inaugural "1971 Newark Cross Country State Champions Award" at the annual Newark High School cross-country team banquet on Nov. 30.

"Zeke's presence on the team gave everyone a spark and contributed to our team's success this year," Newark coach Mike Mooney said. "He is a willing worker and loves to compete."

Dawkins earned All-Blue Hen Conference and All-New Castle County recognition and finished 18th in the DIAA State Championships.

The award was created by teammates of the late John Greenplate, who won multiple cross country running and outdoor track state championships in the early 1970s. Greenplate was also an accomplished runner at the collegiate level, first at William & Mary and then the University of Delaware. He was elected to the Delaware Track Hall of Fame in 2009.

UD skating exhibition

The University of Delaware will host its annual National Send Off Show at the Fred Rust Ice Arena tonight at 7 p.m.

The show includes several skaters who are preparing to compete at the U.S. National Championships in San Jose on Dec. 29 – Jan. 7. UD has invited families from the Casey Cares Foundation to attend the show and then have a meet-and-greet with the skaters. Casey Cares provides ongoing and uplifting programs for families with critically ill children from the moment a child is diagnosed with an illness throughout their medical treatment and beyond.

Tickets can be purchased at the Bob Carpenter Center ticket office or the night of the event at the arena. Admission is $10 for adults, $7 for senior citizens and $5 for children 12 and under.
