St. Thomas's Episcopal celebrates milestone with special service

By JOSH SHANNON

St. Thomas's Episcopal Church has served the Newark community and University of Delaware students for 175 years — first in a Gothic-style church on South Main Street and later in a more modern building on South College Avenue.

On Sunday, congregants gathered for a special service celebrating that milestone anniversary. They also dedicated a new roadside sign intended to improve the church's visibility to those passing by.

"The feeling is wonderful," the Rev. Paul W. Gennett Jr. said.

The church traces its history back to the 1830s when Episcopal priest George Allen came to Newark to teach at UD, then known as Delaware College. With the nearest Episcopal church 8 miles away in Mill Creek,

UD provost to resign Oct. 15

Provost Domenico Grasso, the University of Delaware's chief academic officer, will resign Oct. 15, UD officials announced last week.

After a year-long leave of absence, Grasso will become a faculty member and help develop a program in engineering and environmental policy.

Officials said only that it was a "personal decision" by Grasso.

An Army veteran, Grasso was named provost in 2013 after holding a leadership position at the University of Vermont. He has also taught engineering at Smith College and the University of Connecticut.

In a letter to students and faculty, UD President Dennis Assanis framed Grasso's resignation as a "return to the faculty," though Grasso has been provost during his entire time at UD.

"I want to take this opportunity to personally thank Domenico for all he has done for our faculty, staff, and students," Assanis wrote. "His leadership and dedication have been invaluable to the university."

Assanis credited Grasso with leading several key initiatives at UD, including the creation of the Division of Enrollment Management, as well as the development of university-wide programs ranging from entrepreneurship to humanities, social science and arts programs. He also spearheaded programs to cultivate community engagement and diversity.

UD will form a search committee to identify candidates to replace Grasso.

City approves minor changes to traffic, parking laws

City council on Monday unanimously approved two changes to traffic laws and also imposed new parking restrictions in a downtown neighborhood. All three changes came at the recommendation of the city's traffic committee, which consists of representatives of the police, the city, WILMAPCO and a resident.

Council agreed to ban U-turns on South Main Street at the intersection of Amstel Avenue. According to the Newark Police Department, there isn't enough room for drivers to make a U-turn there without impeding other traffic or crossing into the bike lane.

Another change prevents drivers from turning right on a red light at the intersection of Cleveland Avenue and North College Avenue. The new law applies in all directions between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. on weekdays. The change is meant to accommodate a previously approved "pedestrian scramble phase" of the traffic light during which all traffic will stop and pedestrians can cross the intersection in all directions — north-south, east-west and diagonally.

Council also banned parking on the southeastern side of Thompson Circle in George Read Village between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m. on weekdays. Officials said cars parked on both sides of the road made it difficult for trash trucks to get down the street. The city received no objections from neighbors.

Newark annexes property in Christine Manor

The city of Newark just got a tiny bit bigger.

On Monday, city council unanimously approved a request to annex a 1.18-acre property at 4 Georgian Circle in the Christine Manor neighborhood. The property contains a one-story house owned by Beth Wise.

Wise requested the rezoning in order to be able to connect to the city's water and sewer system. She will pay the cost of connecting to the services, according to the annexation agreement.

Car hits Newark barbershop, causes gas leak

jshannon@chespub.com

One person was injured when a car struck the side of a Newark barbershop last week, hitting a gas line and forcing the evacuation of the building.

The crash happened shortly after 3 p.m. Sept. 22 at the Ace of Fades Barbershop on Old Barksdale Road, behind the 7-Eleven on South Main Street, according to Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

A 17-year-old boy from Newark was attempting to park a 2013 Nissan Altima in a parking space on the side of the building, Nelson said. The car struck two metal poles surrounding a gas meter, rupturing the gas line and pushing the poles into the building.

The force of the collision caused a mirror on the wall inside the building to shatter and sent barber equipment flying. A 42-year-old male barber was injured by the debris and was taken to the hospital to be treated for minor injuries, Nelson said.

The driver was cited for careless driving, but police would not release his name because he is a minor.

Xavier "Breezy" Chappelle, another barber at the shop, said he was cutting a client's hair on the other side of the room when the collision happened.

"I saw the mirror just smash," he said. "I just heard a boom, but I didn't know what it was."

As gas filled the building, firefighters from Aetna Hose Hook and Ladder Company and Christiana Fire Company evacuated the barbershop and an adjoining auto detailing shop. There were nine barbers working at the time of the crash, Chappelle said.

"It was so bad you could smell it all the way out here," he said, standing in the parking lot of the 7-Eleven.

The crash, however, did not stop Chappelle from completing his work. He finished a haircut while his client was sitting on a curb outside.

"I still had to keep the show going," he said, laughing.

Correctional officer indicted in fatal hit-and-run

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

A 29-year-old correctional officer has been indicted in the hit-and-run death of a man on Elkton Road in July.

According to the indictment, Todd A. Stillman, of Newark, was behind the wheel of a black Dodge Ram 1500 pickup truck when he struck 44-year-old Kelvin Dottin and fled the scene.

Dottin, who went by his middle name, Darnell, was walking on the southbound shoulder of Elkton Road near the intersection of Otts Chapel Road at 11:49 p.m. on July 6 when he was hit by a southbound vehicle.

Dottin's body wasn't found until more than 10 hours later, when a customer heading into American Spirit Federal Credit Union spotted it partially submerged in a rain-swollen ditch along the side of the road, police said.

Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, said investigators connected Stillman to the crash "through a combination of physical evidence, surveillance footage and interviews," but declined to provide details.

"He was a suspect early on," Nelson added.

Nelson confirmed Stillman was employed by the Delaware Department of Corrections. A press release from 2014 indicates Stillman was assigned to the Howard R. Young Correctional Institution, but his current status is unclear. A DOC spokeswoman did not return a request for comment.

After Stillman was indicted on the charge of leaving a collision resulting in death, he turned himself into the Newark Police Department on Sept. 18. After being arraigned, he was released on $10,000 unsecured bond.

Two charged in connection to Newark-area armed robberies

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Two Newark-area residents are in custody facing charges in connection with several recent armed robberies, police said.

State police identified the defendants as William H. Piatt, 32, and Candis N. Sanchez-Steever, 22.

The first robbery occurred at 6 a.m. Sept. 18 at the Motel 6 in McIntosh Plaza, east of Newark.

According to DSP spokesman Master Cpl. Jeffrey Hale, Sanchez-Steever "befriended" a 64-year-old motel guest and set him up to be robbed. Then, Piatt allegedly broke into the motel room while brandishing a handgun and forced the victim out of the room with the intention of taking him to a bank to withdraw money.

After the victim tried to run away, Piatt assaulted him and then he and Sanchez-Steever stole the victim's red 2014 Land Rover and drove away, Hale said.

Less than two hours later, Piatt struck again, this time at the Exxon gas station at 263 E. Chestnut Hill Road, Hale said. He pointed a gun at the clerk and demanded money. The clerk turned over an undisclosed amount of cash, and Piatt also stole several cartons of cigarettes before fleeing in the red Land Rover, according to police.

Just before noon Sept. 19, Piatt robbed Andrew Gallagher Jewelers in Suburban Plaza, according to Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

Brandishing a handgun, he approached a clerk and demanded money and jewelry. The clerk complied, and Piatt fled with an undisclosed amount of cash and merchandise, Nelson said. A witness reported Piatt ran to a silver SUV parked in the nearby Retreat at Newark apartment complex and got into the passenger seat.

State police found the stolen Land Rover at Gallaher Elementary School on North Brownleaf Road, just a few blocks from the Motel 6, on Sept. 19. Through witness interviews and evidence found in the Land Rover, troopers identified Piatt and Sanchez-Steever as the suspects, Hale said.

On Sept. 22, police raided Sanchez-Steever's home in the unit block of Dallas Avenue in Newark and Piatt's home in the unit block of Bluefield Road, east of the city. Both suspects were taken into custody without incident.

Troopers charged Piatt with home invasion, first-degree kidnapping, two counts of first-degree robbery, two counts of second-degree conspiracy and wearing a disguise during the commission of a felony. He was committed to the Howard Young Correctional Institution in default of $205,000 cash bail. Additional charges related to the robbery at Andrew Gallagher Jewelers are pending, Nelson said.

Sanchez-Steever was charged with home invasion, first-degree kidnapping, first-degree robbery and second-degree conspiracy. She was committed to the Delores Baylor Correctional Institution in default of $151,000 secured bail.

Woman robbed at knifepoint behind Newark gas station

By CARL HAMILTON

cahamilton@cecilwhig.com

Investigators are continuing to look for leads after a man reportedly robbed a woman at knifepoint last week while she was seated in a parked vehicle behind a Newark gas station, according to the Newark Police Department.

As of Monday afternoon, the knifeman remained on the loose.

The holdup occurred about 6 p.m. Sept. 22 at the Sunoco at 287 S. Main Street, where a man approached a 32-year-old woman seated in a parked vehicle, brandished a knife and demanded money, said Lt. Fred Nelson, a NPD spokesman.

At that point, Nelson added, the knifeman reached into the vehicle and removed an undisclosed sum of money.

Afterward, according to police, the robber fled and was last seen running onto nearby Murray Road. The victim did not contact authorities to report the armed robbery until Saturday, police officials noted.

The suspect is described as a white man, between 5 feet 7 inches and 5 feet 8 inches tall, with an average build and short hair. He was last seen wearing a blue short-sleeve shirt and blue cargo shorts.

As of Monday afternoon, investigators did not have surveillance footage of the suspect, Nelson reported.

Man steals backpack from Kmart, fills it with stolen merchandise

Police are asking for the public's help locating a man who stole merchandise from the Kmart in College Square Shopping Center.

The incident happened just before 2 p.m. Monday, said Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

An employee grew suspicious when he saw the man leaving the store with a backpack he had not been carrying when he entered the store. After checking the surveillance system, the employee saw footage of the man taking a backpack off the shelf and then placing additional items inside before leaving the store with the stolen goods.

The total value of items is approximately $100, Nelson said.

The suspect was described as a black man wearing a light-blue collared shirt and black jeans.

Anyone with information regarding this incident should contact Officer Megan Keating at 302-366-7100 ext. 3489 or MKeating@newark.de.us.

FRED NELSON

Police say this man stole items from the Kmart in College Square.

Man steals $480 in medicine from Acme

A man stole hundreds of dollars worth of over-the-counter medication from a grocery store in Suburban Plaza.

The incident happened just before 11 p.m. Monday at the Acme, said Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The man pulled a laundry bag out of his pocket and filled it up with $487.71 worth of medication and walked out of the store and headed toward the nearby Applebee's restaurant.

Police were not notified until the following day, when an employee reviewing surveillance footage noticed the theft. Nelson released a photo of the suspect but no description.

Anyone with information regarding this incident should contact Officer Carter McKennon at 302-366-7100 ext 3491 or CMckennon@newark.de.us.

Police say this man stole hundreds of dollars worth of medication from the Acme in Suburban Plaza.

Native American culture on display at Iron Hill powwow

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

Native American music and dance filled the yard outside the Iron Hill Museum on Saturday as the museum hosted its first-ever powwow.

"When we get together, we like to party, and our party is called a powwow," said museum director Maureen Zieber, who has Nanticoke, Lenape and Oneida heritage.

The event drew 50 dancers representing a number of tribes as well as approximately 150 spectators. The museum was a fitting location, as Iron Hill for centuries was home to Native Americans, who were drawn there by its jasper deposits.

Zieber, who participates in at least five powwows each year, said the events are a way to share Native American culture.

"It brings native culture into a more present understanding," she said. "We want people to know native people still have a vibrant culture that is always changing and adapting."

"We might not look like the stereotype but we're still active in our community," she added.

Most of the dances performed Saturday were intertribal and during some, audience members were invited to join in.

"We want the audience to come and enjoy good feelings with us," Zieber said. "It's all about sharing."

The powwow also featured a performance by Guatu Ma Cu A Boriken (Council of The Sacred Fire), a group of Taino dancers. The Taino people are the native inhabitants of Puerto Rico.

Albert Ayala, one of the Taino dancers, said that in the dance they performed, the dancers stomp their left feet as a way to call upon their ancestors to join in.

"Every pattern is symbolic," he said.

Ayala said he's been dancing for 16 years after seeking to learn more about his people as a teenager. Like many indigenous cultures, the Taino people were nearly wiped out due to disease after Europeans colonized the Caribbean. However, Ayala said, the culture is still celebrated.

"When you read about our people, they say we all went extinct," he said. "We want people to be aware we do exist."

The Taino culture teaches people to respect the earth and its resources, Ayala said.

"It's more important now to teach kids these things because we can see the effects of not being responsible human beings," he said.

Mary J. McIntosh

Mary J. McIntosh, 93, a long-time resident of Newark, DE, died September 22, 2017, at Ware Presbyterian Village in Oxford, PA, where she had lived the last 10 years. Born on Oct. 29, 1923 in Pottawattamie County, IA, she was the daughter of the late Harry E. and Grace F. Johnson.

Mrs. McIntosh graduated from Oakland High School and attended Iowa State University, where she was a member of Kappa Delta Sorority, majoring in home economics.

She married Donald H. McIntosh on Sept. 12, 1943, in Oakland, IA. From 1943 to 1944, she worked as a volunteer for the American Red Cross Blood Bank in West Allis, WI. Then, while her husband was stationed in Princeton, NJ, in the Navy, she worked for the Gallup Poll and Audience Research, and was a Librarian Assistant at Princeton University.

Mrs. McIntosh was a member of PEO. Over the years, she held most of the offices in her local chapters, and was a charter member of Chapter I in Newark, DE. She was also a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Cooch's Bridge Chapter. Mrs. McIntosh was a former member of the Delaware Genealogy Society, and spent over 20 years researching the many lines of the McIntosh and Johnson families. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church in Newark since 1956. Mrs. McIntosh liked to travel with her husband, particularly enjoying trips to the National Parks. She was very close to her family and enjoyed reunions and family gatherings.

Mrs. McIntosh is survived by her five children: Fredric D. (Sandra) of

New Bern, NC; Ann Corbett (Russell) of Dayton, MD; William H. (Lynne) of Suwanee, GA; Jill Stabley (John) of Newark, DE; Gregory J. (Vicki) of Avondale, PA; nine grandchildren; and 12 great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by Donald, her husband of 71 years; by her brothers: J. Bond Johnson and H. Edwin Johnson; and by her sister, LaVerne Green.

A memorial service was held Thursday, September 28, 2 p.m. in the Hunsworth Room at Ware Presbyterian Village Health Center, 7 E. Locust St., Oxford, PA. Family and friends began visiting at 1 p.m.

The family suggests, in lieu of flowers, that memorial donations be made payable to "First Presbyterian Church" and sent in care of R.T. Foard & Jones Funeral Home, 122 West Main St., Newark, DE 19711.

Newark escape room opens larger, high-tech location

Forced move a 'blessing in disguise,' owner says

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

In one room, mechanical doors swing open to provide access to a dragon's lair. In another, airbags under the floor cause the ground to move, providing the feeling of being on a spaceship. A third room features an 11-foot-tall mock nuclear rocket, complete with smoke machines and loud sound effects.

Those are some of the new, high-tech escape rooms that are part of a recently relocated business in downtown Newark.

"No one else around is building rooms like us," said Bill Wright, owner of Axxiom Escape Rooms at 280 E. Main St.

Escape rooms, sometimes referred to as "real-life video games," began in Japan in 2007. Since then, their popularity has increased in the United States.

The concept is simple: Several people are locked in a room and given a set amount of time to use puzzles, brainteasers and other clues to find a way to escape. Employees watch the action through a surveillance system and can feed hints to the participants as needed.

Wright first opened the business, then called Exodus Escape Rooms, on Main Street in 2015. While successful, the business was forced to move after city officials realized they incorrectly allowed the business to open in a building not zoned for an indoor recreation facility. Instead of applying for a variance, Wright decided to move a short distance to a properly-zoned space in Market East Plaza.

Rather than just transfer his existing rooms to the new location, Wright spent more than a year designing new, interactive rooms and built them with help of family members with expertise in carpentry, computer programming and engineering.

While the old location's rooms were mostly analog — clues hidden inside books, padlocks with hidden keys, etc. — the new ones use things like hidden RFID chips to provide a more magical feel to the experience.

Most of the rooms are equipped with computer screens, some with custom-designed programs based on the theme of the room. Smoke machines and sound systems provide special effects.

Wright also upgraded the construction quality of the rooms, providing a more realistic feel to the given scenario, such as a room with a bank robbery theme, complete with teller windows and a vault.

Ultimately, the forced move, while expensive, was a "blessing in disguise" because it motivated him to redesign his rooms, Wright said.

"It was painful. The biggest issue was paying rent in two places," he said, adding that he appreciates the city's code enforcement being patient while he readied the new location.

Wright opened the new location in July, but is still working to complete a couple of the rooms, including the spaceship and the nuclear rocket. He operates additional escape rooms in Wilmington and Rehoboth Beach.

He also is getting ready to unveil his first mobile escape room, which he is building in a converted RV. Expected to be ready just in time for the Halloween season, the room will have a "creepy carnival" theme that involves a fortune-teller machine based on Zoltar from the movie "Big." An Axxiom employee will be inside the machine to interact with customers, making it the company's first room to feature a live actor.

The RV will be parked outside the Market East Plaza location and travel to events, such as the Mayor's Harvest Festival at Olan Thomas Park on Oct. 8.

Admission to the escape room is $20 for adults and $15 for kids and students. The company, which gets a lot of business from corporate team-building events, also has a discounted corporate rate. For more information, visit www.axxiomescaperooms.com.

Orchard Road couple receives Better Newark Award for sustainability efforts

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

Two Newarkers who have made their property more environmentally friendly are the latest recipients of the Better Newark Award.

The city's Conservation Advisory Commission, a volunteer board that advises city council on environmental issues, awards the honor periodically.

Catriona and Stuart Binder-Macleod, who live on Orchard Road, installed solar panels on their home, planted native plants in their yard and replaced their driveway with pavers that allow rainwater to seep into the ground.

"The changes we made were small, individually, but together make a large difference in the overall look and feel of our home and our impact on the environment," Catriona Binder-Macleod said in a statement. "We hope others are inspired to make similar changes as well."

Mayor Polly Sierer presented the award to the Binder-Macleods during a city council meeting on Monday. A photo of their property will be displayed in the lobby of city hall.

"Residents who make a concerted effort to improve the appearance of their property while being environmentally conscious are to be commended," Tom Coleman, acting city manager, said in a statement. "The Better Newark Award provides an opportunity to formally recognize their efforts and encourage others to consider environmental upgrades, further enhancing the quality of life for all who live, work and visit the city."

¹The product is a variable rate line of credit secured by the primary residence and not exceeding an 80% loan to value ratio (LTV). This account includes a fixed rate option. This rate may vary, but once established as a new Fixed Rate Advance, will not vary thereafter. A $100 rate lock fee applies each time you establish a Fixed Rate Advance. The fee is waived if rate is locked at closing. A separate rate schedule applies for Fixed Rate Advances. There is no maximum line amount for this promotion.

For properties in PA and DE, all closing cost fees will be waived on primary 1-4 family residence secured credits up to 80% LTV. If you close your account within 36 months of opening it, you will be required to pay any closing cost fees that Fulton Bank paid on your behalf. Closing costs for lines of credit up to $500,000 typically range from approximately $143 to $5,103 depending on line amount, appraisal requirements and property location.

For properties in VA, all closing cost fees will be waived on primary 1-4 family residence secured credits up to 80% LTV. Closing costs for lines of credit up to $250,000 typically range from approximately $231 to $4,647 depending on the line amount, appraisal requirements and property location. Recordation taxes will only be waived on Eligible Property Value subject to the tax. Eligible Property Value, for purposes of this waiver of taxes, is defined as the lesser of the following two amounts: $250,000 or the difference between the appraised value of the property and the sum total of any recorded liens.

In addition, borrower is required to purchase title insurance if the line is used to purchase the property or the line amount is for $500,000 or more. Also, there is a $300 Trust Review fee, if applicable. Borrower must pay mortgage satisfaction fees at loan termination. Property insurance is required. Rate and terms subject to change and may be withdrawn without notice. Rates are available to qualified borrowers and loans are subject to credit approval. Introductory rate offer does not apply to refinancing of existing Fulton Bank debt or properties currently listed for sale.

²The advertised introductory 2.69% APR (Annual Percentage Rate) applies to new lines of credit of $5,000 or more. The 12-month introductory period begins at loan closing. Applications must be received by October 31, 2017.

³After the expiration of the 12-month introductory rate period, the variable APR will be based on the Wall Street Journal Prime (WSJP) as published daily plus or minus a margin, and will vary with WSJP. The advertised 4.25% APR is our current standard rate with automatic deduction of payment from a Fulton Bank deposit account. APR will increase if automatic payment is discontinued. Your APR is based on credit qualifications, appraisal requirements, DTI, and payment option selected. Your APR will not exceed 18% at any time during the term of your account. WSJP may change at any time and is subject to change without notice.

home to check on the welfare of Campbell. When they got inside, they found Campbell dead from multiple stab wounds, Bryda said.

Officers gathered evidence, which Bryda would not describe, that linked Veal to the murder and obtained an arrest warrant for him Saturday afternoon. After learning Veal may have fled to New York, NYPD enlisted the help of the New York Police Department.

On Sunday, NYPD officers located Veal in a hospital, where he was recovering from injuries he suffered during his suicide attempt.

Bryda said he did not have details of the suicide attempt, but the New York Daily News, quoting anonymous NYPD sources, reported that Veal stabbed himself in the throat at Grand Central Terminal and then jumped on the tracks. Police rescued him before a train arrived and took him to a hospital, where he underwent surgery on his trachea.

As of Wednesday night, Veal remained unconscious at a New York hospital, guarded by police officers, Bryda said.

Bryda declined to say why police were asked to check on Campbell's welfare, what type of weapon was used or when the murder occurred.

"We're still very early in the investigation," he said, noting that NYPD detectives are in New York working on the case.

The home where the homicide occurred is one of seven houses in a small cul-de-sac off Casho Mill Road. According to property records, the house is owned by an Elkton, Md., couple and has an active rental permit.

The homicide is Newark's first since 2014, when a man was gunned down in the parking lot of KFC on Marrows Road during a botched drug-related robbery.

UD ambassadors program aims to increase community service

By JESSICA IANNETTA
jiannetta@chespub.com

While the University of Delaware was nationally recognized for its community engagement a few years ago, the university is hardly resting on its laurels.

This fall, UD launched the Community Engagement Ambassadors program, picking 14 students to help educate their peers about community service and connect students with opportunities to serve. The program is designed to build on the work that helped the school earn the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching's classification as an engaged university in 2015, said Valerie Lane, coordinator of UD's community engagement initiative.

While the Community Engagement Initiative has four designated staff members, UD has no volunteer office and no one specifically tasked with reaching out to undergraduate students about community service, she said. Given that missing piece, Lane said there's no one better to recruit students than students themselves.

"The further away you get from college, the less in tune you are with it, so I knew that I was not the person to spearhead that quest," Lane said. "So I wanted a group of students who could easily connect with one another and role model how to get involved in service and balance your schoolwork and your social life and family and relationships and things like that."

The ambassadors, who are mostly juniors and seniors, were chosen from around 60 applicants and had to complete both an online application and an in-person interview before being picked. As part of the interview, applicants had to present some ideas about activities or systems that could be put in place to connect more students with community service, Lane said.

That interview question inspired a lot of brainstorming among the ambassadors, many of whom are excited to have the chance to build up a program from scratch.

Nicole Mejia, a junior, hopes the ambassadors can find a way to get a more diverse group of students involved in community service, some of whom simply may not be aware of all the options available to them.

"Sometimes on campus it might be very narrow and not everyone is always aware or included, so that's one of the things I was really passionate about helping kind of initiate and get rolling," she said. "That's hopefully something I can do through this program and initiate more involvement for underrepresented students or diverse students in service."

Annie Stohler, one of two sophomore members, agreed and noted that often students feel they need to be involved in certain clubs or organizations in order to find opportunities to serve. One of the ambassadors' goals, she said, is to be able to provide a support system for all students who want to serve.

Some of that support may come in the form of a calendar students can subscribe to or a series of newsletters, though the ambassadors are still brainstorming ideas, Lane said.

And while the ambassadors have only had two meetings so far, Ron Phillips, a senior, said he's already been encouraged by the ideas brought up by his fellow ambassadors. Many of the ambassadors, like Phillips, joined the program after seeing the need to reach out to more students but they also all bring a wide variety of perspectives, he said.

"You're really exposed to a lot of people who have different reasons about why they're passionate about service, and that really opens up your eyes," Phillips said.

For many of the student ambassadors, community service has already played a big role in widening their worldview beyond the classroom and now they hope to pass that experience down to others.

"It's really important for students to get out of their own bubble because we're on a college campus and you can be so overwhelmed or just so focused on your school work or your social life," said Mickey Nguyen, a junior. "So just recognizing there's other things that you can do, other important issues to be aware of and contribute to, that can help you personally to learn and grow as a person."

Christina schools cut golf programs

Newark High's winter track program reinstated

By JON BUZBY

JonBuzby@hotmail.com

All three high schools in the Christina School District have eliminated sports and coaching positions due to budget concerns.

District spokesman Wendy Lapham confirmed that all three high schools — Christiana, Glasgow and Newark — have “discontinued for the year” the sport of golf. In addition, Christiana and Glasgow will not offer the pole vaulting event within its track-and-field programs this spring. The Newark winter track program, originally on the “discontinue” list at the school, has been reinstated.

“When I first heard about [the program being discontinued], it was a shock,” head boys track-and-field and cross-country coach Mike Mooney said. “Newark has had a long and proud history in track and field as well as cross-country. Those sports share many of the same athletes who are in a year-round progression of training. Losing indoor track would negatively impact spring track and cross-country. We have very good participation numbers and have produced recent state record-holders and state champions.”

Originally, with the understanding that Glasgow and Christiana would do the same, Newark chose to discontinue its winter track program as part of the budget cuts. However, after learning through inquiries from the Newark Post that in fact the other two schools would offer winter track, Newark reinstated the program, electing to make yet-to-be announced cuts elsewhere.

“[Principal Aaron] Selekmán has said from the outset of all of this that he felt the track program was an important component in the growth and development of the young men and women at Newark High, as many of our outstanding graduates have exemplified,” Mooney said.

Mooney also voiced his concern about the repercussions the original decision might have had on other schools’ programs across the state.

“I went to a meeting of state cross-country coaches shortly after the news, and they all had heard and were concerned,” he added. “We are all too aware that if budgets became too much of an issue, sports, indoor track in particular, may be in jeopardy. We are not naive to reality when it comes to money. Thankfully, there are many who value the experiences and lessons afforded in track and field.”

The money-saving decisions are part of state-wide cuts that have impacted schools across Delaware following the recent reduction in the state education budget by the state legislature earlier this year.

Lapham said part of the district’s cuts included reductions in funding for Extra Time for Extra Responsibility (EPER) stipends, which cover additional pay for coaches, advisors and other roles that staff members undertake in addition to their regular contracted duties.

“Principals were forced to make difficult decisions about how these reduced EPER funds would be applied, and at each of the three high schools, these reductions resulted in the loss of EPER positions,” she said. “Decisions were based on student enrollment in sports and extracurricular activities. Although some programs will not have coaches this year, it is possible that they could be run on a club status. Also, although these programs will not be offered in 2017-2018, this situation may be temporary, depending on future funding availability.”

Lapham confirmed that although the district office mandated the amount of money that had to be cut from each school’s budget, it was the decision of each school as to which programs would be impacted for the 2017-18 school year. Each school was also asked to “discontinue” nine coaching positions.

“It is disappointing whenever we have to make reductions that impact students,” Lapham said.

Mark Freidly, who was set to begin his 11th season as the golf head coach at Newark, was disappointed with the decision.

“I believe the more choices we eliminate for our students, the more they and their families will want to find alternative possibilities elsewhere,” Freidly said. “In addition, our golf team includes girls, and college golf scholarships for ladies are some of the most unclaimed at the college level. It’s unfortunate to see opportunities lost.

“And it’s one of the least expensive sports in the district,” he added.

Yellowjackets shut out again but show improvement, coach says

Buzz from the Hive

An insider's look at Yellowjacket football

By JON BUZBY

JonBuzby@hotmail.com

The Newark players and coaches were hoping to use a “Gold Out” at their home opener last Friday night as momentum toward the season’s first win. A good-sized crowd, many clad in their $5 gold T-shirts purchased during the week or at the game, turned out hoping the same.

Unfortunately, Hodgson had other plans.

The Silver Eagles took advantage of several Yellowjacket mistakes to turn a seven-point halftime lead into a 27-0 victory. Newark held Hodgson scoreless in the third quarter, but a safety early in the fourth quarter followed by three touchdowns sealed the win for the 2-1 Silver Eagles.

“I thought we made some improvements from last week and finally started making some plays,” head coach Barry Zehnder said. “It was a 7-0 ball game going into the fourth quarter, and we just couldn’t find a way to make something happen.”

Following the safety and subsequent free kick early in the fourth quarter, Hodgson running back Simian Smith broke away up the middle for a 65-yard rushing score.

Newark fell to Hodgson 27-0 last Friday night.

“When you can do that to a team who has kept it close for three quarters, you suck any confidence right out of them,” Zehnder added.

Offense shut out again

Newark has now played eight consecutive quarters without scoring a touchdown and has found the end zone just once — a fourth-quarter touchdown in the St. Mark’s game — the entire season.

“We have struggled to put plays together,” Zehnder said. “We either throw a nice ball and drop it. Make a great block and the ball carrier falls. Or beat a guy on the route and the ball can’t be thrown because of pressure. We have to start putting whole plays together and stop missing opportunities.”

Defense looks good again

For the second time this season, the defense held its opposition to just one score in the first half. But for the second time this season, that still wasn’t enough.

“I thought we showed good mental toughness early,” Zehnder pointed out. “Hodgson had some drives but we were able to keep our heads and come up with some stops and turnovers.”

Special captains

Joe Hodges was the special teams captain chosen for Week 3 after several nice kickoff returns against Concord, including one that he returned all the way but was negated by a penalty.

Jason Cortez was named the practice captain for his work simulating Hodgson’s star wide receiver.

“It is tough for a young man who doesn’t play much on Fridays to believe he is part of the team,” Zehnder explained. “But each week, Jason really works hard on our scout teams and thanks to his efforts was a clear cut decision this week to be a captain.”

Next up

Newark continues its Flight A conference schedule Saturday at William Penn. Kickoff is 1 p.m. at Bill Cole Stadium in New Castle.

“Playing at Bill Cole Stadium is always special,” Zehnder said. “It’s a great atmosphere; it’s a tough stadium to play in. I have many memories as a player and coach from Bill Cole Stadium and not many are happy ones. You know you are going to get the tough New Castle guys and some speedy athletes that make plays. I know they love beating Newark, no matter what our record is at the time.”

William Penn (1-2) picked up its first win of the season last Friday night, handing Caesar Rodney its first loss of the season, 19-14.

More than just football

For the second straight year, the football program raised funds for pediatric cancer and for the second straight year raised more than $1,000, bringing the total monies raised to $2,400. Players sold T-shirts the week leading up to and at the game, and also asked for change in the parking lot last Friday morning.

“It’s a great way to remind our players how lucky they are to be able to play,” Zehnder said.

The fundraising week included a special guest who has undergone cancer treatments visiting practice to talk to the team and then serving as an honorary captain last Friday night.

The Buzz from the Hive will be posted online each Monday morning during the high school football season and also in Friday’s print edition. It will include some game analysis and exclusive quotes from Newark High football coach Barry Zehnder and select members of the team after they’ve had a chance to watch game film, evaluate their performance, and begin preparation for the next game.

CHURCH

Allen held services in UD's Old College building but eventually decided Newark needed its own Episcopal church.

St. Thomas's was formed in 1842, and consecrated its church building three years later at the corner of South Main Street (then Elkton Road) and Delaware Avenue. The building, designed by well-known Gothic revival architect Richard Upjohn, cost a total of $3,825 to build, though it was later expanded.

By the 1930s, church leaders began exploring a move to a new location that would offer more space and be closer to the main UD campus. World War II disrupted the planning, but in 1955, the congregation moved into its current building at 276 S. College Ave.

The old building, which is on the National Register of Historic Places and remains one of the most architecturally distinctive buildings in the city, went on to house an early iteration of the Newark Free Library and is now owned by UD and used for musical performances and other events.

Gennett, who joined the church in 2008 and plans to retire next month, attributed the church's longevity to its congregants, whom he called the lifeblood of the church.

"It's a wonderful gathering place of all God's people," he said, adding that the church has a strong culture of diversity with members representing many ethnicities and several countries.

Connie Cooper, senior warden at the church, echoed that sentiment.

"There are a lot of good people who give so much for the church," said Cooper, who has been involved with St. Thomas's for 28 years. "This is a church that survives and thrives because of what the members today do for it."

She noted that the church's strong ties to the university community have persisted since its founding. The church has a dedicated campus minister and a student ministry that meets every Wednesday. Recently, the student ministry founded Blue Hen Bounty, a food pantry for students in need.

With an eye to its future, in 2014, the church purchased the grove located next to the church. Gennett said the church plans to keep it as green space but may use some of the space to build more parking spaces.

Beyond that, the congregation's next step is out of members' hands, Cooper said.

"We'll wait and see," she said when asked what lies in store for St. Thomas's next 175 years. "God often has a way of providing us with a plan."

VIRTUAL WORKSHOP

Proposed Construction of the Christina River Bridge and Approaches
<http://deldot.gov/information/projects/crb/vw/index.shtml>

October 9, 2017

The Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) would like to invite interested parties to a Virtual Workshop to discuss the proposed construction of the Christina River Bridge and Approaches. The purpose of the virtual workshop is to present the details of the proposed construction of the Christina River and Approaches and to solicit feedback from the public regarding the plans. The Virtual Workshop will be available online beginning Monday, October 9 and will be accessible for 30 days.

Interested persons are invited to express their views either online or in writing, giving reasons for support of, or in opposition to, the proposed project. Comments will be received during the workshop or can be mailed to DelDOT Community Relations, P.O. Box 778, Dover, DE 19903.

If you need further assistance or additional information, please contact DelDOT Community Relations at 1-800-652-5600 (in DE) or (302) 760-2082 or write to the above address.

Rallies at UD support DACA students

By CARL HAMILTON

cahamilton@chespub.com

Carrying signs bearing messages like “Defend the DREAMer, Deport our leader” and “I stand with those who dare,” scores of students and others congregated outside the University of Delaware’s Memorial Hall and then marched on the South Green in support of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program last week.

The Sept. 18 rally that took place on the south side of Memorial Hall was organized by HOLA, a registered student organization representing the Hispanic community.

Focusing on the issue predominantly from a national standpoint, participants voiced their opposition to President Donald Trump and, more specifically, to his recent rescinding of a program that protects young undocumented immigrants from deportation, a program that Trump’s predecessor, Barack Obama, put in place in June 2012.

Students and UD representatives were at that rally to show their support for the approximately 800,000 people throughout this nation who would be adversely and affected by the impending DACA repeal. People in that group, known as “DREAMers,” are undocumented immigrants who were brought to the United States as children without documentation but — shielded by the Obama-era program — have been allowed to remain in the United States to legally pursue their education and to work.

“We want to raise awareness and show our fellow students that we are willing to fight for them,” said Norma Cruz, a criminal justice major who serves on HOLA’s executive board.

Reyna Trujillo, a sophomore biology major, came to the rally to show support for DACA and undocumented students because she “feels a personal connection,” based on her own Mexican nationality.

“We share this amazing cultural background,” Trujillo said, adding that one of the goals is make those students feel at ease.

Participants urged people to take a stand in numerous ways, including lobbying lawmakers to support the DREAM Act.

Meanwhile, on the north side of Memorial Hall, a smaller group, also marked by sign-toting participants, conducted a rally that was more provincial in scope. Propelled by a movement called No Blue Hen is Illegal, those approximately 50 participants expressed concerns that the university isn’t doing enough to protect “DREAMers” and undocumented students enrolled in the college.

They demanded that the university create a concrete plan and make policy changes that would ensure protection for undocumented students and ones who would be affected by the DACA repeal.

Moreover, those protesters listed 10 demands of the university — including hiring an undocumented student coordinator, sensitivity and diversity training to staff regarding undocumented students, ensuring that all undocumented students have equal access to financial aid and academic programs, ensuring all immigrants receive police protection when they are victims, providing culturally competent psychological counseling services to DACA students and providing adequate access to emergency housing.

Those demands reportedly were listed in a No Blue Hen is Illegal petition that circulated in May and garnered 859 signatures. However, university officials reportedly declined to meet those demands, explaining that the college could only, and would only, work within the full extent of the law to protect DACA students.

The participants’ unified chants during that smaller rally included, “If one Blue Hen is illegal, all Blue Hens are illegal,” and “The people united will never be divided.”

That group opted to hold its own protest after No Blue Hen is Illegal representatives were told that they would not be permitted to offer criticisms of the university during the main rally. Although two protests were held, people in both groups said they supported the other’s effort.

There are approximately 22,000 undergraduate and graduate students enrolled at UD, according to Dean of Students Jose-Luis Riera, who said administrators do not know how many of them are DACA and undocumented students, nor do they actively try to determine a number.

“We don’t have a list,” Riera said, adding that, in keeping with the university’s goal to protect DACA and undocumented students and to allay any uneasiness and fears they have concerning their status, it would be counterproductive to do so.

DACA and undocumented students are revealed only if they choose to do so, perhaps by seeking guidance through university services to handle a related problem or to express a concern.

“They disclose. It’s by word-of-mouth,” Riera said, explaining that “networking” can springboard from that.

Riera was there on behalf of the university to show support for DACA and undocumented students.

“We want to communicate that, as a university, our goal is teaching and learning,” he said.

During his speech, Riera told the crowd on behalf of the university, “Core to our mission is learning and educating all who are qualified to be here, regardless of color, creed, political ideology or, yes, even citizenship.”

While encouraging students to “advocate on a large scale,” Riera urged those who do not have the DACA or undocumented status to “make a commitment to do what you can to support an environment at UD that indeed allows students to have a place here and flourish toward graduation.”

In closing, Riera gave advice to DACA and undocumented students.

“It is crucial that you take care of yourselves. We admire your fortitude for choosing to become and persist as a student at UD, and our goal is to help each and every one of you to be successful. In addition to the challenges inherent in your status, the national climate and debates on immigration make life stressful. Please, remember to take care of yourselves and reach out if you feel you need help. There are many here at UD ready to support and assist you,” he said.
