Seek Food And Toys
To Fill Christmas
Baskets For Needy

School Children Bringing Used
Toys; Girl Scouts To Stage Collection

Christmas will be a little brighter for Newark's underprivileged families if more fortunate residents show a little pre-Christmas spirit.

The food and toys they donate will go to fill Christmas baskets, which will be distributed on the eve of the holiday to needy families.

To aid the project, school children are being asked to bring used toys to their homerooms, where they will be collected by girl scouts and taken to the Academy building. Here they will be sorted and repaired by volunteer workers.

The scouts will also go from door to door seeking toys, especially those suitable for older children. Later, the scouts plan a collection of canned goods.

Meantime, anyone may leave a donation at the legion rooms in the Academy building. Legion officials are also anxious to obtain the names and addresses of families for whom Christmas does not promise much cheer. Anyone knowing such families is urged to pass the information along to Miss Alice Leak, visiting nurse, Mrs. Martha Coverdale, school nurse, or leave it at the Town Council office, Academy Street.

The project is sponsored annually by the American Legion and Auxiliary. This year a Mayor's welfare committee is being formed. Organizations which have expressed a willingness to cooperate with the legion are the Soroptimist Club, Aetna Fire Company, Needlework Guild, the New Century Club and the Council.

Rent Control Vote
Still Under Study

No Decision Yet On Plan To Hold Referendum

No decision on the proposal to hold a referendum on the question of continuing rent controls here was made at the special meeting of Town Council last Friday night.

The lawmakers decided to survey the town's voting list to determine whether or not a referendum on the issue would give an accurate reflection of public opinion.

If after checking the lists a referendum seems feasible, the Council will hold another special meeting to draw up plans for the vote. If it is decided a referendum would be impractical, the Council will vote on the rent control question at its December meeting.

If Council takes no action, the ceilings will automatically expire Dec. 31. Under the local option terms of a recent federal law, Council has the authority to continue the controls until June 1951.

The lawmakers are confronted with something of a dilemma since they have no effective way of gauging public opinion on the issue. Councilman William Coverdale suggested the referendum as a means of getting an accurate sampling.

Town Solicitor John P. Sinclair pointed out that such a referendum would have no legal significance and would not bind the Council but would merely serve as a public expression of opinion on the question.

PTA Hears Talk On Modern Methods Of Reading Instruction

Dr. Stauffer Uses Novel Approach In Explaining Child's Reading Problems

How the teaching of reading in public schools differs today from that of a few years ago was described by Dr. R. G. Stauffer, director of the reading clinic at the University of Delaware, in a talk at the November meeting of the Newark Parent Teachers Association last Thursday in the high school auditorium.

Using a novel approach to his topic, Dr. Stauffer asked his audience, consisting of about 250 parents, to imagine themselves as a first grade class just starting to learn to read. He then held up a series of nonsense diagrams and asked his listeners to memorize them as the ABC's. Later he combined the diagrams into "words," thus giving his thoroughly befuddled audience a vivid insight into the difficulties a child faces when it begins reading instruction.

Learning to read, Dr. Stauffer explained, is like learning a new language. Modern reading instruction, he continued, differs from the older method of memorizing the ABC's in several ways. First the teacher teaches the child not reading. In other words, individual differences in physical stature, intelligence, social aptitudes, emotional patterns and ability to read are taken into account by the teacher. A second factor considered is the child's readiness for reading. Third, meaning is stressed above merely learning the look and sound of words. Oral reading, Dr. Stauffer pointed out, can be mere mouthing of syllables. He emphasized that reading is basically understanding the printed word, and he said the child is instructed first in learning the meaning of word symbols. Later, oral reading has its place in classroom recitation and group reading.

In modern practice, Dr. Stauffer said, writing and spelling are not taught in the first grade. The order of learning places listening and reading for meaning first.

The talk was followed by a social hour with refreshments served by mothers of the sixth grade children. Co-chairmen were Mrs. J. Owen Ely and Mrs. A. L. Lackman, assisted by Mrs. E. C. McCauley, Mrs. Winfield S. Conner, Jr., Mrs. George Martin, Mrs. Lester Biers, Mrs. John H. Burns, Mrs. J. M. Christman, Mrs. Edward Cooper, Mrs. Paul Manwell, Mrs. E. Orville Otley and Mrs. Charles W. Keith.

Groundwork Is Being Laid For Civilian Defense Corps Here

Auxiliary Police and Firemen Being Trained For Action
In Emergency; More Volunteers Sought;
Weekly Training Sessions Underway

The groundwork is now being laid for Newark's civilian defense organization, which will go into action if and when a wartime emergency arises. Volunteer auxiliary firemen and police are now attending weekly training sessions in the firehouse. Films covering such subjects as radio activity, A and H bomb control, and general security measures are being shown. Later, lectures on similar subjects will be given.

Once organized, the local defense setup will be under the direction of a coordinator yet to be named. It is expected that should this country meet with a sudden air attack, nearby large cities would be the hardest hit, in which case regular police and firemen from surrounding small communities would be called on to supplement depleted city forces.

Newark Education Board Named One Of America's Top-Flight School Units

The Newark Board of Education was named one of America's outstanding school boards in a recent poll conducted by the Teachers College at Columbia University.

The poll covered state superintendents, state school board officers and professors of education.

The announcement that Newark's board was included among those picked as outstanding came in a letter from Daniel R. Deeres, professor of education at Columbia. He did not say how many boards were in the top group.

Mr. Deeres' letter also included a questionnaire, which he asked the Newark board to use in describing the practices and techniques which have made it outstanding. Information gained through this and other questionnaires will be coordinated and made available to educators.

The questionnaire covers such subjects as how the board selects a superintendent, keeps in touch with the local community, keeps informed on the activities of its school system and develops a competent staff.

Three Local Girls In Delaware
Delegation To 4-H Club Congress

For the past five years, Peggy and another member of the Pencader 4-H Club have given demonstrations on the use of dairy foods. Peggy has been a member of several clothing demonstration teams, too. In fact, she has taken part in 18 demonstrations of 4-H skills, one of them on a television program.

An excellent seamstress, Peggy has a collection of blue ribbons from dress reviews and other clothing contests.

She's helped many of the younger members of her club with problems such as the use of a sewing machine. She's now busily engaged in raising the funds for a 4-H club house.

Good food, well cooked has been Marjory Brown's theme song for the past eight years. The 17 year old 4-H Clubber is president of the Pencader Club, this year, and Delaware's state food preparation achievement winner.

Marjory missed only five club meetings in eight years. She's served as foods project chairman for her club, has given many demonstrations, and has completed 18 projects. She competed in the leadership contest and did an outstanding job at the state 4-H camp.

Property Tangle

The discovery of an old deed and a resultant tangle between the parties concerned has held up the purchase by Maxwell O. Hammond, of Wilmington of the Richards property on East Main Street. Mr. Hammond plans to build a garage and auto sales agency there. The deed casts doubt on whether or not the adjacent driveway known as Renshaw's lane is included in the Richards' property. Mr. Hammond agreed to purchase the land and drew up his building plans on the belief that it was. It is believed a satisfactory adjustment will be worked out shortly.

The final drive for a new and modern Methodist Church and auxiliary annex opened her Sunday night. Church officials have been working toward the goal for two years. Led by their pastor, the Rev. Frank Herson, the entire congregation look upon the completion of at least part of the unit as their biggest project for 1926.

Some months ago, the church purchased a tract of land fronting Academy Street near the new high school. Upon it will be erected a complete church.

Big Sports Year

Probably the biggest scholastic and college football season Newark has ever seen comes to an end tomorrow, when both Delaware and the Newark High champions play their Thanksgiving Day games on foreign fields.

Escorted by the Continental Band and close to 200 rooters, the high school team will journey to Milford tomorrow where they engage Georgetown High in the annual DIAA championship game.

A grim Delaware team entrained today for Carlisle where they stack up against Dickinson in the hardest game on the schedule. The Pennsylvanians are favored.

A chance to "Howl." If you are an adventuresome soul with a touch of Scotch thrift in your bones and a desire to create — here's a howling good opportunity.

Within 2 miles on historic New London Road, hard paved, so-called 896 (ramble from Newark up Lancaster way to the north) a winding lane leads to a group of farm buildings and a fairly modern frame house.

The 6 room house, set among giant trees and near among rolling hills, overlooks the farm's pleasant meadow and woods.

It's far enough from the road to be exclusive, but close enough to town not to be isolated.

The old place, priced at $20,000 with 90 acres more or less, is exactly what people with ideas and a little money are looking for.

Tossy Spivakovsky Lists Program For Recital On Monday

Within a period of only seven seasons in this country, Tossy Spivakovsky, brilliant Russian violinist, who will be heard on Monday, Nov. 27, at 8:15 p.m., in Mitchell Hall, University of Delaware, has come to be ranked with the great masters of the bow today. His Newark concert will be open to the public as one of the U. of D. Artists Series.

With such tributes from the critics as "most colossal technique of any violin soloist"; "violin playing of the highest order to be heard in a generation"; "thrilling virtuosity"; "literally magnificent"; "peerless artistry"; "in the ranks of the greatest"; "fabulous," Spivakovsky makes plain the reason why.

The selections he has announced for his Newark program are as follows: "Sonata in A Major, Op. 162," for violin and piano, Schubert; "Chaconne" (for violin alone), Bach; "Sonata," Debussy; "Rumanian Dances," Bartok; "Capriccio No. 24 (for violin alone), Paganini; "introduction and Tarantelle," Sarasate.

Born in Odessa, southern Russia, on Feb. 4, 1910, he was taken to Berlin at an early age to study violin with Arrigo Serato. Later, he continued his studies with Willi Hess. He made his debut at the age of 10, concertized throughout Europe and subsequently attained foremost recognition and acclaim as soloist with the most celebrated orchestras in the continent.

3 Compositions By State Musicians To Be Played At Fete

Original compositions by three Delaware musicians have been selected by a special jury to be sung at the Contemporary Music Festival, now being arranged for Dec. 2 at the University of Delaware.

Marvin R. Fennema, chairman of the committee on selecting the compositions, said that the three compositions were picked from several submitted. They are:

"The Mermaid," based on an anonymous ballad of the Seventeenth Century, by Mrs. Barry V. Cornwall of Liftwood; "Music, When Soft Voices Die," by David B. Kozinski of 807 West Twenty-third Street, Wilmington, based on a poem by Percy B. Shelley; "God Be Merciful," a sacred composition by Northrop Brown, of Deerhurst.

All arranged for a mixed chorus, the compositions are to be sung by the University of Delaware A Cappella Choir at the luncheon to be held in conjunction with the festival program.

The choir comprising 60 picked voices is rehearsing twice weekly under the direction of Mr. Fennema, a new member of the university's music faculty and a graduate of the Westminster Choir College.

Mrs. Cornwall, the former Jane Allen of Wilmington, received a master's degree in music from the Eastman School kept a record of all the meals she prepared at home during the past two years. She also cooked all the meals for an elderly neighbor. This year, her demonstration featured the seven basic food groups.

Dorothy Pierson, 17, of the White Oak 4-H Club, never dreamed that she would save almost three hundred dollars by making her own clothes. But that's what her 4-H record shows. Dorothy won her trip to this year's Congress through all around development in home economics projects. She's had over 21 of them in the last seven years—in such fields as clothing, cooking, canning, and room improvement. Top honors went to her in last year's state dairy foods demonstration contest.

A member of one of the state's largest 4-H clubs, Dorothy has helped cooking project members with their work; she's been chairman of a bake sale, club historian, window display chairman, and sings and plays the piano for her club choir. She also serves as secretary of her club and representative to the county 4-H junior council.

Dorothy is a senior at the Friends School, and is looking forward to college. Much of her savings can be credited to the $1,038.42 which represents the total income of all her 4-H Club projects.
