

Harriet Boone, Barbara Gordy, Elva Grogan and Liz Attix show that Women's College students like "Confucius-say" jokes over cokes as much as metaphysical questions over the tea cups—a DeLuxe scene.

Acknowledgements

The burden of producing a year book falls ultimately upon the editor. Recognizably, however, an editor could not produce the book without the assistance of other people. To particular members of the faculty much credit is directed. Miss Edith McDougle was interested in all aspects of the book, but her qualities of precision and accuracy were especially valued when applied to correcting the written copy. The editor and staff wish to acknowledge the time-pressed work of Miss McDougle as well as that of Miss Barbara Alden who also assisted in reading of literary copy. To Miss Jane Gardner appreciation is also extended. Miss Gardner very willingly supervised the art drawings and made helpful criticisms about the lay-out of the book.

Outside the college "thank-you's" go to Mr. Harry Hollander of Hollander and Feldman, Photographers and to Mr. Coleman Bye of the Mercantile Press, Incorporated. Mr. Hollander made many trips to the college in order to take nearly all the formal and informal pictures contained in the book. His sincere interests in the book rose above an interest in financial remuneration, and his courtesy, and cooperation in dispatching photographs were much appreciated. Mr. Bye contributed a friendly interest as well as technical information. The few promises which Mr. Bye mentioned materialized and in addition were supplemented with the much-appreciated willingness to go "the second mile".

The editor wishes to thank in writing the five executives of the staff: Ann Harrison, who on a minute's notice would come to the book's rescue; Sally Dickinson, who was the last word in dependability; Helen Adams, who doubled last years record and trippled the previous years' records in securing advertisements for the book; and Ann Kline and Mina Press who contributed their art and literary talents.

Finally, appreciation is expressed to the entire staff and to those who ex-officially worked on the staff for their time and energy. Special mention can be made of Margaret Dawson's drawing of the doors which are printed on the flaps of the four introductory sections and of the very outstanding work of the advertising staff as a whole.

500 Years

This year, while the Blue & Gold Yearbook is being published, the world commemorates the five hundredth Anniversary of the invention of printing by Johann Gutenberg, a man who entered upon the tedious and costly experiments which brought forth a successful method of printing.

Mechanical improvements, made largely during the past century, in the printing process first devised by Gutenberg have resulted in progressively lowering the cost of producing print, thus putting printed information and opinion into the hands of more and more people previously unable to afford it.

As it has been in the past our steadfast policy to avail ourselves of all new methods of technique in the printing industry, we pledge ourselves in the future to keep abreast of the continuous progress in printing set on the march five hundred years ago by Johann Gutenberg.
