LEVY COURT MEN IN CONFERENCE

Report Of County Treasurer Showed That A Good Balance Is In Bank

The members of the Levy Court held a conference yesterday afternoon with their attorney, William G. Jones, Jr., relative to levying a tax on trolley cars passing over county bridges. The conference was private and the decision reached, if any, was not made public.

The matters considered were relative to the Wilmington and Philadelphia Traction Company and the court making an agreement. This agreement is to govern the running of electric cars over the various county bridges in Wilmington and a sum to be paid on each car for the privilege of using the bridge.

At the morning meeting, former Coroner James H. Callaway, who was recently sworn as a magistrate for Newport, was present relative to the matter of the county furnishing him with dockets and stationery for his office. Mr. Callaway is the first magistrate for Newport to have had for some time.

The new magistrate stated that he has no constable as yet, but that there would undoubtedly be several candidates for the job. It is expected that the citizens of that hundred will petition the Levy Court to appoint a constable.

After the report of County Treasurer Robert M. Burns was read at this meeting, showing the weekly county balances, President Dayett had the clerk read the report for the corresponding week of last year. The report showed a balance to the credit of the Levy Court this year to the extent of $154,005.60, while last year's report showed a balance of $14,366.81.

The report presented by the county treasurer contained the following data:

Levy Court	$154,005.60
Bond issue	17,052.71
Miscellaneous road appropriation	439.97
Christiania hundred	2,454.44
Mill Creek	1,801.94
White Clay Creek	846.32
Pencader	452.69
New Castle	2,569.41
Red Lion	990.09
St. Georges	6,715.23
Appoquinimink	1,542.11
Blackbird	1,214.73
Brandywine	1,473.47

At the next meeting of the Levy Court, which will be held on Tuesday of next week, that body will elect an attorney for the court for a term of one year. There will be a contest for this office, it is expected, the salary of which is $600 per annum.

William G. Jones, Jr., has been the court's counsel for the past two years, but it is now understood that Philip L. Garrett, Jr., will also be a candidate. An election of officers will also be held for men to fill the offices for a term of one year. As a result of a caucus held yesterday afternoon, Commissioner Dayett will be re-elected president—Morning News.

DOWN ON THE FARM

INTEREST IN AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

There has been of late, an unusual number of inquiries concerning the work of agricultural courses coming not only from Delaware, but also from Maryland, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

SPRAYING ORCHARDS.

This fine spell of weather has been used advantageously at the college farm to spray the peach and apple orchards.

ATTENDING MEETING IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Dr. Mel T. Cook left Sunday afternoon for Minneapolis to attend a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Dr. Cook will present two papers—one, "Tannin and its relation to the enzymes of Plant Cells" upon which he has been working for three years; the other, prepared by his assistant, Mr. Tannenbaum, "A Study of some Antitoxins and their relation to sweet pea diseases." Dr. H. P. Bassett is also attending the convention and will read a paper discussing a new turbidimeter that he and Dr. Dawson have invented.

PINE STOCK AT COLLEGE FARM.

The farm has recently received two Guernsey bulls worthy of more than passing notice. They were purchased from the well known Burnside Farm of Rebeckton, Md. The older one is three years old and has the distinction of having been sold when three months old for $25 at public sale. His dam has a record of 7000 pounds of milk and 400 pounds of butter as a two year old and sold at the same sale with son for $800. His maternal grand dam's record is 10000 pounds of milk or about equivalent to 5000 quarts in a year. The other bull, a calf of six months is equally well bred. Both represent the May Rose King family, a strain of Guernseys, which at the present time is the most popular in the breed. The Guernsey herd at the College farm has been spoken very highly of by local critics and all are invited to inspect them at any time.

Christmas Cantata Last Friday Night.

The cantata, "Santa Claus at Santiago," given by the Presbyterian Sunday School, was a pronounced success.

The music had a swing to it that was pleasing to every one while the words were bright and sparkling with wit.

The songs "Starlight" and "Echo," the leading parts taken by Misses Leila Herberich and Marion Campbell, were particularly pretty. The spook song with its woo-o chorus was heartily appreciated by the audience; "The Word you Mustn't Say" and "If you see it in the Papers, it's so," were clever little pieces which created a laugh, well sung by Gilbert Chambers and Katie Montgomery.

Toward the latter part of the program Santa Claus appeared to teach the lesson that wherever you witness a kind act or cheering word, there you see Santa Claus. The good old fellow sang his explanation, to which the children responded with a hearty "Santa, Santa, now we know who you are; It is the heart that's filled with love that makes the world so bright."

After the entertainment the members of the school were treated to candy and fruit.

The Levy Court Has Larger Balance Than A Year Ago

At the meeting of the Levy Court this morning, after the report of County Treasurer Burns, showing the weekly county balances, had been read, President Dayett had the clerk read the report for the corresponding week of last year.

The report showed a balance to the credit of the Levy Court of $154,005.60, while last year's report showed a balance of $14,366.81.

The balances to the credit of the different hundreds, with the exception of Christiania and Mill Creek, are also larger than at this time last year.

MARY P. WILSON.

Improvements On Pennsylvania R. R.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has just completed the installation of a snow-sweep system. By this system a new invention is used for the first time on the Maryland Division. Its main feature is what is known as the snow-flanger, which is attached to the regular snow-train, which runs from six to eight miles an hour. It clears the snow away from the rail a distance of 12 or 14 inches, thus saving much hand labor. Signals have been placed on the main line of the Delaware City branch at all switch connections, since it is necessary to lift the flanger at all cross-sections.

DEATH OF GEORGE W. WILLIAMS

One Of Newark's Active And Most Prominent Business Men--Funeral To Be Held Tomorrow

BRIEF SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

The death of George W. Williams on the 26th inst., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. P. Wilson, has cast a gloom over the whole community and left vacant a place in the town that will not be easily filled. His life has been one full of activities and closely associated with public welfare. Thoroughly acquainted with the people and their needs, his advice was eagerly sought by all who knew him. Though in failing health for some years, he kept in touch with the business world and was at the time of his death connected with several financial institutions and actively engaged in promoting their welfare.

Mr. Williams was born in Pennsylvania, near Germantown in 1836. His father, Isaac Williams, was a native of New Hampshire, proudly tracing his ancestry directly to Roger Williams. His mother was a member of the Miller family, pioneers of the neighborhood of Germantown.

He was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Johnson, near Millford Cross Roads. After her death he was married to Miss Letitia Russell.

Mr. Williams first came to Newark as clerk in Williamson's store, where Mr. T. Snider now has his place of business. He later became a partner in the business. He entered the National Bank as teller in 1874, in which capacity he served until his age and health compelled him to retire a few years ago. Since that time he has served as director and at his death was Vice-President. He took an active part in local affairs, being elected a number of times as member of Town Council and for a great many years held position of Secretary and Treasurer.

One of his greatest services to the town was his association with the Newark Building and Loan Association. He was one of the organizers and for 41 years held the position of Secretary and took active part in its management up until his death, holding still the office of Treasurer.

Mr. Williams not only was active in the business institutions of the town; he took in his earlier manhood, much interest in politics. Strong in the principles of the Republican party, he was consulted in his politics.

Aside from these, he was prominent in the local fraternal organizations. He was one of the charter members of the Masonic Order of Newark, Hiram Lodge No. 25, A. F. and A. M. Before this time he was a member of the Washington Lodge No. 1, A. Y. M., of Wilmington.

He was a member of the Odd Fellows' Lodge, Oriental Lodge No. 23, I. O. O. F., and was the oldest member in the local fraternity, having made his membership in 1857. He was honored by being made Grand Master some years ago.

He was one of the organizers of the local number of Ancient Order of United Workmen and enthusiastic in its praise.

During the Civil War, Mr. Williams served in one of those clerical positions which, though void of the glory and glamor that follows the clash of arms is so necessary to the success of the cause and call of greatness for a steadfastness and determination equal to that demanded on the battlefield.

According to an act of Congress on July 1st, 1860, levying a special Federal tax, Mr. Williams became a collector of the same. This position held his attention for a year, after which he returned to local duties, the outcome of which has done so much toward the conservative but healthy progress of our town.

A daughter, Mrs. J. P. Wilson, of this town, and a brother, of Germantown, and grandchildren, George, Katherine, Letitia and John Wilson, and Nellie Reed, survive him.

The funeral services will be held from the residence of his son-in-law, J. P. Wilson, on Thursday, December 29th, at 2 p. m. Dr. Rowan will conduct the services. Interment at White Clay Creek Cemetery. Odd Fellows will have charge of services at the grave. The pall bearers will be Messrs. George Kerr, J. W. Cooch, C. B. Evans, Eben Frazer, and Winfield Quigley.

Mrs. Thomas Remembers Young Folks

Between fifty and sixty children were royally entertained last Thursday evening by Mrs. Jacob Thomas, at her beautiful home on Main street. Invitations were sent to members of the Catholic Sunday School the children of employees of the Jacob Thomas Wall Paper factory.

The children were treated to ice cream, candy and cake. A Christmas tree, whose boughs were laden with oddly shaped packages, provided a gift for each one.

Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Reeve, Misses Rosalie Pie, Maggie and Mary Kennedy, Mary O'Donnell and others assisted Mrs. Thomas in entertaining her young guests.

Around Town

HEREIN IS WRITTEN THE COMMENTS OF THE OLD MAN AROUND TOWN. PLAIN, CRUDE, BLUNT, KIND, HAPPY AND CONTENTED—WITH A SHACK OF TRUTH—HE TELLS THINGS IN HIS OWN WAY.

"Take care of the holly; the mistletoe will take care of itself"

"Top 'o the mornin and a Happy New Year."

Some one said the other day that the only cloud about Christmas was the coming Legislature. But then he was defeated and that accounts for it.

The past year has been a live one for Newark and perhaps the period of greatest growth, but 1911 should show still more improvement. You know we are to have a sewer system installed during the coming year. Mr. Fisher, our Legislator, will probably present a bill authorizing the town to borrow money or some such scheme. The engineers have been very busy here of late and all sorts of plans will likely be presented, but one thing is certain—the sewer has got to come.

As the New Year approaches everybody begins to make their annual resolutions. I don't know that this is any special harm recognizing as we do that they are to be broken, but I am going to change my tactics this year and make only one and that is to make none. On New Year's Day I am going to do the best I can and the next day the same and so on throughout the year. Of course, this will be broken too, for none of us do the very best we can. I am not going to write out a set of them like old Ben Franklin. I am no philosopher nor are you, for that matter.

I shall continue to write for the POST, try to keep an eye on the Graveyard Train and Blue Blood. Then, too, I may organize a Twentieth Century Club, join a budge party or some such. I shall take up the discussion of Girls' education, read some Chaucer, those fundamentals, you know. What I shall try to do is this—to keep an eye on these institutions and folks around here and talk about them in my own way. In the meantime, I wish you a Happy New Year. I shall try to do better in my column after these holidays are over.

Recollections Of A Unique New Year's Experience

Probably the most unique experience in my travels and in South Africa, was at this season of the year when I saw the old year out and the new year in, together with a travelling companion, along the shore of the Indian Ocean.

The last day of the old year found two of us at Grahamstown, several miles inland, where we were attending an exposition. It was here that we conceived the idea of cycling from here to Port Elizabeth, probably a distance of 20 miles.

We mounted our wheels and followed a path over the hill and down into the valley, and thence along a brook that we knew would lead us to the Ocean. After going several miles we came across a fork in the road, and did not know which we should take.

We found here a Kaffir kraal (village), and the women who saw us began to run, almost falling over themselves, due to the heavy blankets which enveloped them. Our presence was quickly heralded to a hundred or more blacks of various ages, and a lot of nude pickaninnies were among the group. Our bicycles were a curiosity to them, but we wanted to get on our way. After speaking to them in Ka, using the words "Monango Monzie, Lap Lap," meaning "Big water, there or there," pointing to the different paths, we were soon directed and were on our way. After going several miles, during which we saw several deer, we ran into a swarm of locusts which completely obscured the sun; and we ran over thousands of them, who in turn for our ill treatment, severely scratched our faces with their thorny legs.

We finally reached the "big water" and refreshed ourselves in its warm water. We found a house here, where we secured a good meal. After supper, we informed our hosts of our intended trip, and they put up their hands in horror. We were told of quicksands and two rivers to cross, but we were game enough for the trip, and at nine o'clock with a full moon coming up in the East, and the low tide with the sand along its edge packed solid, we proceeded. Every thing went nicely for several miles, until we reached the first river, where we found the tide was coming in. It was now midnight, so we seated ourselves on the wreck of an old Norwegian large, and ate some sandwiches while we listened to the noise of the baboons along the stream. The moon was so bright that the sands threw up along the banks looked like snow. We certainly felt alone in the world, and questioned whether anybody had ever had a simpler experience.

My friend, who was older and larger than myself was the first to get across the river, then he returned for the two bicycles, and left me to get over with my clothes. The tide was coming in and the water was foaming from the rapid springs. After several attempts I got across, but not until I had lost my footing and gone under with my clothes. We then dressed, and decided to proceed, for we could not return after having boasted of the fact we would make the trip. Now our troubles began to multiply. The water was coming in, and we found the sand was becoming softer accordingly. We found we had to carry our machines most of the time and climb over rocks and around cliffs.

About a 10. m. New Year's Day, we reached the other river, and it was so wide we decided to camp for the night. We made a fire out of brush and then pushed the burnt wood aside, and made a bed in the warm sand, while it was hot summer here, the nights seemed very cold.

Awaking next morning we found our remaining sandwiches secure, for the baboons had left them alone. This night we had slept along what is known as the Aloo Bush, which is the Elephant section of South Africa.

We located a Kaffir, who had a boat, and he took us across, and started us on our path toward Alexandria. Along this trip we had considerable trouble with thorns which punctured our tires. We found a canteen where we bought some wine, and pumped it through the valves of the tires, which healed the holes.

We came along a group of monkeys, which quickly scattered at our approach. I rushed in the wood after them, but while I could hear branches breaking everywhere, I could not see eyes watching me. After going along the road further and waiting they began to come out, and started at their old occupation, which every one knows. It was amusing to see them running from us. The little monkeys would run and jump on their mother, who would scamper off into the woods with them.

There are many ostriches in this section, and many times we would chase them. When we would be on the point of catching them to pluck a feather, they would leave the path and go faster than a horse across the field.

We had our New Year's dinner at Alexandria; and after heating against a strong wind for several miles the rest of the day, we reached Port Elizabeth, and felt gratified that we had accomplished what we set out to do, and had reached our destination in safety.

A PLEA FOR HIGHER EDUCATION BY A HIGH SCHOOL GIRL

Although it is a question that has of late been widely discussed, few people realize that Delaware girls have less educational advantages than the girls of any other State.

Delaware is the only State in the Union that has not recognized its duty toward the young women. The lack of provision for the higher education of girls has for many years been a glaring defect in the educational system of Delaware. It is, of course, not a function of the State to assume entire charge of the higher education of either men or women. The State it is doubtful if more can be asked. It is especially questionable if a State can be justly asked to provide purely classical or technical schools.

There is in Delaware, only one such school which girls may attend, that provides courses higher than those of the average public school. This is a denominational one, is the Wilmington Conference Academy at Dover. The training received here is little, if any, better than that received in some of the high schools.

Normal schools, co-educational land grant colleges, art and industrial schools provide a higher education for girls in many other States.

The utility argument for a higher school for girls lies in its value as a training school for teachers. Many of our Delaware teachers have been poorly prepared for the important work in which they are engaged. This poor preparation is largely due to the fact that they have not had the means to attend schools in other States. At present most of our teachers are learning their art only through experience. That experience is gained at the expense of hundreds of children in the schools. This is educational waste and injustice to the children, no factor for self-respecting State should tolerate.

The education of the girls is one of the gravest questions Delawareans of today have to consider, for upon the settlement of this question depends largely our place of honor among the States. If the girls who are to become the mothers of future generations, were educated, it would do much toward banishing political corruption from our State.

The society also of today, demands that a girl have a higher education. The most feasible plan to provide normal and other courses for girls seems to be the establishment of a women's college in some connection with Delaware College. The two institutions might use different buildings, but could have practically the same president, the same faculty and the same courses. The most essential and noteworthy course would be one in normal training.

If the school were connected with Delaware College, it would receive part of the national aid now given to that college. It would further have to be supported by appropriations from the State and by the small fees paid by the students every term.

There are those who might object to having a girl's school established in Delaware on the ground that there is no real need for such a school since there are many girls' colleges in neighboring States which Delaware girls may attend. Although there are women may attend, it is not the duty of those States to provide a higher education for Delawareans, and it would be less expensive surely if the Delaware girls could attend a school in their own State.

Some, too, may say it is too expensive for our area and population to have a separate school. Although our area is small, certainly we can afford to have at least one girls' school in the State. That probably only a small number would enroll in the school is another argument. There would surely be sufficient enrollment to meet the needs of the school. And so there may be many other objections but all are of little value.

The majority of girls through the college training will have strengthened their characters, and broadened their capacity for systematic work and thought, so that they are better prepared to take up domestic problems, than most girls of less educational advantages.

As a result of this school, Delaware would no longer need to give scholarships to Normal schools in neighboring States and she would also have better teachers.

It is evident that the State, in mere justice, must either admit women to Delaware College or make provision for their training in similar courses in another institution in the State.

UNDERWOOD STANDARD TYPEWRITER

A LEADER

The principle of construction in the Underwood was found first in the Underwood, and every typewriter seeking business in the same field with the Underwood which has been put on the market since the advent of the Underwood, has been an imitation of, and in general appearance like, the Underwood.

The last "Blind" advocates of importance have now fallen into line, and there is not today a single "blindwriting" typewriter actively on this market. Recall all the arguments you have heard in past years by Underwood opposition, and you will realize what an advance agent to progress the Underwood has been; then bear in mind that the Underwood was the first fully "visible", has had time to develop and improve, and is to-day the most perfect typewriter made.

COMMODORE THOMAS MACDONOUGH

Delawareans have just cause to be proud of the record made by one of their sons in the command of the Great Britain. Thomas Macdonough was born at a place once called Trapp in St. George's Hundred, New Castle county, on December 23rd, 1783. His father was a distinguished physician and major general in the war of the Revolution. Young Macdonough received his midshipman's commission on February 5th, 1800, and in the Mediterranean Sea attracted the attention of his superior officers. He was one of the daring characters who volunteered to accompany Lieutenant Decatur in a ketch to destroy the frigate Philadelphia, that had fallen into the hands of the Barbarians, and a reward for his bravery was promoted to a lieutenant. In the bombardment of Tripoli he displayed conspicuous bravery, especially while engaged in the hand-to-hand struggle in the decks of the enemy's gun boats, three of which were captured under the massive stone forts of the city.

At the opening of the war of 1812 he was dispatched to Lake Champlain with instructions to keep a sharp eye on the enemy, and act in conjunction with the land forces to hold the British troops from assembling near Montreal, their object being to invade New York, following the same route mapped out by the ill-fated Burgoyne. To oppose that splendid army of over 10,000 warriors the Americans had but a puny force. A tremendous task was thus laid upon the shoulders of the young lieutenant; namely to gain control of Lake Champlain, and prevent the British army from advancing beyond the bounds of Canada. All the vigor of his young manhood was consecrated to the work of getting ready a squadron of ships to contest the supremacy of the lake with the newly created British fleet. At last he felt prepared to meet the foe. He had built the corvette Saratoga, converted a merchantman into a war schooner, bearing the name Ticonderoga, and hastily thrown together the sloop Preble and a few small gunboats. His squadron consisted of 14 vessels manned by 880 men, and carrying 20 guns, more than half of which were cannonades, and hence of no value as long range. The British fleet was made up of frigates, a large brig, a sloop, and 13 gun boats; in all 25 vessels manned by 1,000 men and carrying 65 guns. The guns on the frigates and brig were equal to the whole power of the American squadron. Naval experts praise Macdonough for his judgment in the selection of the spot for the battle. He chose a place where he was sure to have the weather gauge. Furthermore he anchored his ships near the shoals, so that it would be impossible for the enemy to flank him, and to add wisdom to provide anchors for the bow and stern of the ships. This latter device won him the victory, as we shall see. At 8 o'clock on Sunday morning, September 11th, 1814, the British were sighted, and the roll of the drums called the Americans to quarters. What do you suppose Macdonough, whom his men called "Commodore," did, as the British fleet bore down under a spanking breeze? When you know that he was a very religious man, you will not be surprised at his gathering his officers on the quarter deck of the Saratoga, and having them kneel in prayer to God. The action began with a few trill shots at a long distance, and then resolved itself into a steady, fierce cannonading. At first the advantage was with the Americans. In a few minutes one of the smaller ships of the British fleet, the frigate, was disabled and surrendered to the Saratoga. But when the frigate was anchored about 300 yards from the Saratoga and let go a broadside of her long guns, the Saratoga fairly reeled and shivered from the shock. To add to the flight the big Linnet also managed to get close to the American flagship, which was severely hit by the concentrated fire of the two most powerful vessels in the British fleet. But Macdonough held on, fighting coolly and deliberately, doing effective work, until every gun on the starboard side of the Saratoga was dismantled. Something had to be done, and quickly, or the day was lost. Thrice had the commander been hurled violently to the deck, once by a piece of wood from the splintered panther-boat, and again by the severe gory head of a gun-captain. But he soon recovered consciousness, and directed the battle. Here was the critical moment. While the frigate and the brig hurled their heavy shot into the Saratoga, her crew called away from the useless guns were hard at work with the kedge anchors to swing her around, so that she might have a fresh broadside for the enemy; and then the British attempted the same maneuver. The American succeeded, but the frigate became unmanageable, and, being in a position where her guns could not be made to bear on the Saratoga, she received broadside after broadside without being able to reply, and finally was forced to lower her colors. In fifteen minutes the Brig Linnet struck her colors, and the long and bloody contest came to an end. Several of the enemy's gun boats were completely annihilated, and the British fleet after a mere skirmish action with the American troops turned back to Canada. The whole country rang with the praises of the young Master Commandant, who had won a signal victory over a greatly superior force, and at the same time had saved New England and New York from the horrors of a British invasion that threatened to be even worse than Burgoyne's raid from Canada to Saratoga. Macdonough showed her appreciation by presenting the hero with a fine estate of 200 acres overlooking the scene of the battle, and the Legislature of New York presented him with 2000 acres of land. Congress voted him a gold medal and promoted him to a post captain. A Yankee girl, by the name of Lucy Ann Shaler, of Middletown, Connecticut, became his wife. She passed to the other world a few months before the Commodore. He died at sea November 16th, 1825, and on December 1st was buried in Middletown, Connecticut, by the side of his wife. The news of his untimely death was received with genuine regrets; for he was recognized as the greatest fleet captain of the group of naval stars of 1812. It may be of interest to Newarkers to know that there is living today in our town a grand-niece of Commodore Macdonough, Mrs. Fanny O. Elliott.

GEORGE W. WILLIAMS

IN THE death of Mr. George W. Williams, Newark loses one of her foremost citizens. A life full of activities, a life of public good, his place will not be easily filled. In his prime of years, he was constantly on the alert for anything that meant progress for the town. Strong and firm in his convictions, his advice was eagerly sought by all who knew him well. For years he was a familiar figure at the National Bank. Along with his old colleague, Mr. George Lindsay who died a few years ago, many have sought counsel and helped over some business embarrassment. It was not our privilege to know him other than as a passing acquaintance, but we saw and feel today the influence of his work. No work of his stands out with glaring prominence, but every institution in this town has felt the influence of his interest and judgment.

His familiar figure will be greatly missed, and a strong man indeed it will be who at his age will be credited with successfully filling the place occupied by this honored "town father," George W. Williams.

MUCH has been said about the holiday season and we hope, not without some purpose and good. One striking feature about Newark this season was the manner in which the merchants of the town met the demands and presented a showing heretofore unknown. The choice of displays in the several stores were especially pleasing. Aside from a mere mercenary point of view, the merchants seemed to enter in the spirit of the season. That this was appreciated is shown by increased sales over former years. Fewer than usual of our people found it necessary to go to the cities to do their shopping. Many expressions complimentary to our stores have been heard and from those who usually went their way for a day in Philadelphia. Newark merchants are meeting the demands in a way that suggests great possibilities for our town.

SOME FACTS CONCERNING COLLEGE FARM

THERE is perhaps no institution in Delaware whose work is more concerned in her future welfare, and around which center the interests of a greater number of her citizens than the Delaware College Experiment Farm. The Agricultural Department has made wonderful progress since the purchase of the farm. Contrary to general belief the greatest work of the station staff is in the educational work done along practical lines with the farmers of the state. No method of calculation can be given that will total the increased crops and land improvement that has had its incentive from this farm. As a Department of the College, it will grow just as other courses have grown. Only a few years ago, few men were taking the Engineering Courses where now since the department has improved its equipment and adapted itself, it is the best attended course in the college. The farm has not only adapted itself to the needs of the State and confined its efforts to supplying those needs, even at the risk of professional standing, it has proven itself a pretty healthy farm proposition. To farmers in this vicinity, the figures here will prove quite surprising. The Station staff took possession of the farm in April, 1907. Without equipment and greatly handicapped from lack of funds, they started their campaign under adverse criticism from all over the State. Today, the farm has done more to advertise Newark and to change critics of the college to friends, than any work of the State. This is nothing more than reasonable for the work of the Station brings the staff in close association with farmers all over the State, and they have created a new spirit toward the whole college. The staff, under the directorship of Professor Hayward, has given hearty service with funds at hand and though embarrassed at times with mere arm necessities, they have worked with what they had at hand and with the motto—"Do it well or wait until you can"—have made it an institution that promises untold service to our State.

Of course, practically no sales were made the first year. Forty acres have been devoted to orchard experiment work and twenty-five acres to the Department of Agronomy, so that in the most part the actual sales may be confined to the too acres which is under the supervision of Director Hayward. The greatest drawback has been the lack of cattle. Not until this last month has the farm had any dairy and the stabling facilities were lacking until the last Legislature appropriated money for a suitable barn. Now, with the addition of a well equipped dairy, the figures will be even more striking.

Since the purchase of the farm, there has been sold the following:—
Hay $220.47
Pigs 1041.48
Wheat 947.84
Board of cattle 158.75
Stallion fees 105.00

$6548.07
These figures may not be exact, but represent approximately the actual sales during the three years. Take into consideration the lack of equipment, and practically no sales could be expected the first year. Then consider the rotating of crops to be planned. Again, the pig sales have only begun and the dairy which will probably be its greatest source of revenue.

WILSON ARGUES FOR PRACTICAL POLITICS

In his speech before the American Political Science Association tonight, Dr. Woodrow Wilson argued indirectly for practical rather than theoretical politics.

Dr. Wilson's subject was "The Law and the Facts." Among other things he said: "The life of society is a struggle for law. Where life is fixed in unalterable grooves, where it moves from day to day without change or thought of change, law is also, of course, stationary, permanent, graven upon the face of affairs as if upon tablets of stone. Politics is the very stuff of life. Its motives are interlarded with the whole fibre of experience, private and public. Its relations are intensely human and generally intimately personal. It is very dangerous to reason with regard to it on principles that are fancied to be universal, for it is local. "I do not like the term political science. Human relationship, whether in the family or in the State, in the counting house or in the factory, is not in any proper sense the subject matter of science. They are stuff of insight and sympathy and spiritual comprehension. I prefer the term political both to the statesmanship of thinking, and the statesmanship of action.

"Your real statesmanship is, first of all, the chief of all, a great human being, with an eye for the great field upon which men like himself struggle with unflinching, pathetic hope toward better things. "Know your people, and you can lead them; study your people and you may know them; but study them as a body of human souls, the least as significant as the greatest—not as you would calculate forces, but as you would comprehend life. "In such atmosphere of thought and association even corporations may seem instrumentalities, not objects in themselves, an ethic means may presently appear whereby they may be made to the servants, not the masters, of the people. The facts are precedent to all remedies, and the facts in this field are spiritual perception."—Public Ledger.

Hints For Stock Owners

There are many farmers who always shelter their cattle from storm, but there are raw, cold, windy days which harm them as much as storms. Don't let them emerge in pasture corners, clustered together for warmth on such days. Shut them in the shed or barn.

Bank up the cold barns to shut out the cold wind under the doors. The sunshine should come into every stable through large windows.

Every window should have shutters to close tightly at night to keep the cold out.

If a cow has an apple or similar obstruction lodged in her throat, it can be removed by pouring a pint of melted lard down her throat. This will make the animal strangle and cough, and in the struggle the obstruction will be dislodged.

Plethys of exercise is one very important item for keeping a flock healthy. Encourage exercise by placing feed some distance from the sheds on fine days.

Be sure that the sheep barn has a tight roof, a dry floor, good ventilation and no drafts.

Hold on to some of the clover for spring feeding. It is great when the sheep get tired of timothy.

Sheep are timid, nervous creatures, and all excitement and roughness should be avoided in handling them. Look out for sore teats on ewes with lambs. When such conditions are discovered, rub the affected parts twice a day with salved butter.

Hogs properly sheltered will thrive on much less feed than those exposed to cold.

Alfalfa hay and corn have been found to be a most satisfactory fattening feed for hogs.

Hog manure is almost the richest of any made on the farm. Save it all and put it on the land. If the food is allowed to sour in the troughs it will throw the hogs off feed. This will check growth, and is a loss.

Don't try to winter fall pigs with the feeding value, the slop encourages out good provision for slop. Besides the feeding value, the slop encourages the pigs to drink freely, which is desirable in cold weather.

The best feed we find for young pigs before weaning is helled corn, soaked from one feed till the next and sprinkled over, when damp, with middlings, with a very small proportion of oil-meal and tankage added. Salt the mixture lightly and feed in troughs.

Be kind but firm with the colts and tie them with strong halters. Irregularity in time of feeding and quantity will cause indigestion. An ignorant, ill-tempered, loud-voiced man should never be tolerated in any stable.

A little shelled corn mixed with the ground feed you give your horses will help to keep them from swallowing their food too fast.

The man who bores auger-holes in his stable floor to allow the liquid manure to escape, is the man who is always hard up and in "bad luck."

Do not neglect to keep the feet of the driving horses, sharply shod. It may save sad wrenches and will greatly add to the comfort of the animals. Do not put a handful of salt in the feed box. Put a brick or lump of rock salt in a convenient place where the horse may help himself to it when he wants it.

Do not neglect to give each horse a chance to drink the last thing at night, even if the weather is cold.

A horse that is thirsty all night will lose in condition, as compared with one watered frequently, and the last thing at night.

Installation At Head Of Christiana

On Thursday afternoon, the Rev. Adrian Van Overen was installed pastor of the Head of Christiana Church by the Committee appointed by Presbytery for that purpose.

The Rev. Joel S. Gillilan, D.D., the former pastor, presided. After singing and the reading of Scripture from Col. 3: 1-17 and prayer by the Rev. J. W. Lowden, of White Clay Creek Church, the sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Cunningham of the East Lake Church, Wilmington, from the subject: "Christ is All"—in which he exalted Christ as the pre-eminent one in the Church, in the home and in the individual, as the highest exponent of God's love to man.

Dr. Gillilan then recited the acts leading up to this event in the church, of their extending a call to Rev. Adrian Van Overen, of the Presbytery having approved of the call, and of placing it in the hands of Mr. Van Overen; and of his acceptance of the same. Then of the Presbytery's appointment of the committee to install which committee was present for that purpose. He here asked the pastoral-elect to arise and answer the following questions:

1. Are you willing to take the charge of this congregation, as their pastor, agreeably to your declaration at accepting their call?

2. Do you conscientiously believe, and declare, as far as you know your own heart, that in taking upon you this charge, you are influenced by a sincere desire to promote the glory of God, and the good of his church?

HEAD OF CHRISTIANA CHURCH

3. Do you solemnly promise, that, by the assistance of the grace of God, you will endeavor faithfully to discharge all the duties of a pastor to this congregation, and will be careful to maintain a deportment in all respects becoming a minister of the Gospel of Christ agreeably to your ordination vows?

Having received an affirmative answer to all these questions, Dr. Gillilan then asked the congregation to rise and answer the following questions:

1. Do you, the people of this congregation, continue to profess your readiness to receive the Rev. Adrian Van Overen, whom you have called to be your pastor?

2. Do you promise to receive the word of truth from his mouth, with meekness and love; and to submit to him in the due exercise of discipline?

3. Do you promise to encourage him in his arduous labor, and to assist his endeavors for your instruction and spiritual edification?

4. And do you engage to continue to him, while he is your pastor, that competent worldly maintenance which you have promised; and whatever else you may see needful for the honor of religion and his comfort among you?

The members of the congregation having agreed to the above by raising the right hand, Dr. Gillilan, by authority of Presbytery, pronounced the Rev. Adrian Van Overen to be regularly constituted the pastor of that congregation.

The charge to the pastor was then delivered by Rev. J. W. Lowden, pastor of the White Clay Creek Church. He charged him to look well to his physical health as a basis of both intellectual and spiritual development. Not to let the many calls of the congregation sap his physical strength. He charged him in the second place to look well to the development of his intellectual life and not let anything interfere with his proper study hours, and in the third place he charged him to look well to his spiritual life without which his work as a minister would be vain.

The charge to the people was given by Rev. Dr. Rowan, of the Newark Church, who felicitated the people on the happy consummation of this pastoral union and wished for them a successful work for the Lord. He admonished the people that they should be careful to give him their hearty support, both in spiritual things and in temporal. He deplored the fact that they could not have a pastor for his whole time, but stated that to secure him for his whole time would only call for an average contribution of 20 cents per member per week, which would only be the tithe on $2.00 per week.

He charged them to have respect to the pastor's time and remember that he must have opportunity to study in order to acquit himself well in the pulpit, which is his throne. He charged them that they must respect and honor him as their superior officer, that by virtue of his office he had the oversight of all the departments of the church, including the music, the service, the trustees &c.; that they should remember that he was responsible to Presbytery for anything that was done in the church and should see that every department of church work was conducted properly, or the Presbytery might call him to account for neglect of duty.

After the charges had been delivered the installation prayer was offered by the presiding officer and a hymn was sung and the benediction pronounced by the newly installed pastor.

At the close of the services the people came forward and greeted their new minister. A supper was served in the basement of the church for all present.

Eleven years ago last June Dr. Gillilan was installed pastor and was released last June that he might enter upon the work of Presbyterial Evangelist to which he was appointed by the Board of Home Missions of New York, on the recommendation of the Presbytery. The church made considerable improvements to its property during Dr. Gillilan's ministry. The first was the erection of the Manse on Newark Heights, which is a valuable addition to the church property.

Then the church itself was renovated. The high pulpit platform was lowered and the pulpit reduced in size. A choir platform was built and new choir chairs procured. A vestibule was made in the back of the room and the two outside doors taken out and one large double door placed in the center. The basement back of the Sunday school room was excavated and a kitchen made, and a stairway from the basement to the vestibule above.

A steel ceiling was put in and the whole painted and decorated. The old windows and window shutters were removed and memorial windows put in. The following are the windows and their donors:

The emblem, the World with the letters I. O. G. T. The inscription—In honor of Joel S. Gillilan, D.D., Grand Chief Templar, by Fairview Lodge, No. 8, I. O. G. T.

The tablet in the vestibule was presented by Mr. Elmer Thompson and contains the following inscription:

KILMON-TALKS ABOUT FEED

Everybody is talking about Pure Food Products and a wave of reform has swept the country—the outcome of which is all food products are what they are labelled to be.

We Sell That Kind of Groceries

But in this reform we have lost sight of the feed for animals.

JUST TAKE THE SUBJECT OF MIDLINGS

MIDLINGS is often written on the bag—and mill sweepings IN THE BAG.

How can you tell good middlings?

The color of MIDLINGS is WHITE.

Now if you get a bag marked Middlings and they are dark—that means MILL SWEEPINGS.

Now all the proof you need to this statement is just to come take a look at the Middlings I am selling, any farmer in this section will agree with me when they compare the PURE WHITE MIDLINGS and MILL SWEEPINGS.

10 PER CENT. CHEAPER HERE

I am selling Pure White Middlings at least 10 per cent. CHEAPER THAN YOU CAN BUY ELSEWHERE.

Bran, Corn and all Mill Feeds—All as Good—Some better than sold ELSEWHERE.

 ing.

 Rev. J. B. North, L.L.D., of Snow
 Hill, Md.
 2. Sister Churches whose History runs back nearly 200 years.
 a. Glasgow, Rev. T. C. Potter, D.D.
 b. St. Georges, Rev. J. R. Milligan, D.D.
 c. Rock, Rev. Wilson T. M. Beale.
 d. Christiana, Rev. J. Edgar Franklin.
 3. Children of this Church, Rev.
 Wm. J. Rowan, Ph.D., of Newark, Del.
 4. Sister Churches of Lated Date,
 Rev. John McElmoye, D.D., of Elkton, Md.
 On the following year the church held the 200th anniversary exercises, when greetings were heard from—
 Rev. Henry C. McCook, D.D., L.L.D.,
 Sec. D., President of the Presbyterian Historical Society, and the sermon in the afternoon was preached by Rev.
 Joseph Brown Turner, of Dover, on "Our Heritage in Other Men's Labors." And the sermon in the evening was preached by Rev. William H.
 Roberts, D.D., L.L.D., Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in U. S. A., on "Presbyterianism."

Below Head Of Christiana Installation

The installation of Rev. Adrian Van Overen as pastor of the Christian Church at Christiana Village.
 The Rev. Adrian Van Overen was installed pastor of the Christiana Church on Thursday evening of last week. This is the first pastor they have had for 28 years. All who have served the church during the last 28 years have only been stated supplies.
 This was, therefore, an interesting surprise to the people of the Christiana Church.
 Rev. G. R. Milligan, D.D., of St.
 Georges, presided, and Rev. G. D.
 Blake of the Red Clay Creek Church, preached the sermon from Heb. 12:2
 "Looking Unto Jesus."
 The constitutional questions were propounded by Dr. Milligan, and answered by the pastor and people, after which he declared Rev. Mr. Van Over-en regularly constituted the pastor of that church.
 Dr. Milligan then gave the charge to the pastor and Dr. Gillilan gave the charge to the people.

 At the close of the service the people gathered around the new pastor and gave him a hearty welcome.

I am still at the same place ready to serve you with notions at the least prices. Call and see me, 360 Main street.
