NOTED ARTIST GIVES LECTURE ON SCULPTURE

Henry Lewis Raul Shows Various Steps In Completing A Statue; Lecture Profusely Illustrated By Beautiful Slides; Given Under Auspices Of Memorial Committee

SHOWS MEMORIALS

A small audience gathered in Wolf Hall, last Friday night, to hear a splendid lecture on the art of sculpture. Henry Lewis Raul, famed American sculptor, whose main studio is in East Orange, N. J., took the audience behind the scenes of an artist's studio in his illustrated lecture, "Sculpture and How It Is Made."

Mr. Raul, a classmate of Professor H. K. Preston, was entertained by Professor Preston during his visit here. He gave his services gratis, and there was no admission charge to the lecture.

Mr. Raul used over 100 beautiful slides in illustrating his talk, and took the audience through the various steps from the first conception of an idea to the finished statue or group.

Mr. Raul explained that in sculpture, any figure over six feet was heroic in size, and that any over nine feet in height was colossal sized. He said that statues to be placed outdoors were usually made larger than natural size because an outdoor setting dwarfed them until they appeared much smaller than they actually were.

Mr. Raul showed that before a figure is completed, the subject is made from nine to thirteen times. The idea is first sketched roughly in clay in a small model. A mould is made of this model, and a cast of plaster of Paris made from the mould. This process is repeated in a scale model, each clay model being destroyed as the work progresses. After the cast of the scale model is completed, the final statue is made from it.

The final statue is built up of clay on an armature built in exact scale dimensions from the scale model. There are two ways of measuring the enlargements, both very tedious, but exact and accurate. One is in the use of a frame and measuring units which establishes a series of points to correspond with those on the scale statue. The other is with the use of a compass with two arms, working on a universal joint. This establishes the points on the large statue.

The figure is worked up in clay to the enlarged scale of the scale model, and then the artist puts on the finishing touches which distinguish a work of art from mere carving or modeling.

When the final clay figure is made, it is then transformed either into bronze or marble. To get a bronze reproduction, a mould is made on the clay figure, and the mould then cast in bronze. A marble figure is carved in reproduction from the clay by using a compass to establish exact points on the block of marble, which is then carved out.

Mr. Raul explained that for outside display, bronze was the material used, as it would stand for centuries, while a marble statue, exposed to the weather of this climate would be ruined in twenty years. He explained that by saying that marble was porous, absorbed moisture, which froze, and caused the stone to crack.

In his illustrations, Mr. Raul showed the various steps of the work in the three figures, and also a number of completed statues. His work is broad in range and he had many designs, both idealistic and realistic, which had won national recognition at various exhibits. One was his recently completed medallion of Lincoln, which is considered one of the finest Lincoln pieces ever produced.

Mr. Raul included in his illustrations a group of slides showing various memorial sculptures. These were shown for the particular interest of the people of Newark.

GOVERNOR CALLS STATE LEADERS

Representatives Of State's Banking, Industrial Agricultural And Labor Interests Meet With Governor Buck, Next Week, To Frame Prosperity Program

In order to cooperate with President Hoover, who has marshalled the resources and leaders of the country back of a general prosperity program, Governor Buck will call a conference of leading representatives of state banking interests, public service organizations, leaders of labor and agriculture, and the heads of city, county and State departments. This conference probably will be held either Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, and plans will be made to make Delaware an effective unit in the national prosperity program.

The announcement of this conference was made Tuesday, after Governor Buck had replied to a telegram received from President Hoover the preceding day.

Governor Buck's reply to the President's telegram reads: "Delaware is in hearty accord with your plans to stabilize industry, prevent unemployment and strengthen the country's prosperity in the coming months."

"To this end an immediate survey will be made of all public construction work contemplated for the year and all State building activities consisting primarily of highway improvements and new school construction will be commenced as rapidly as seasonable restrictions permit."

"Your promptness in marshaling and directing the resources of the country to strengthen the present economic situation is rapidly restoring confidence and my State is eager to contribute to the success of your ably conceived undertaking."

President Hoover, in his telegram, declared that "one of the largest factors that can be brought to bear is that of the energetic yet prudent pursuit of public works by the Federal government and State, municipal and county authorities."

"The Federal government," the telegram added, "will exert itself to the utmost within its own province, and I should like to feel that I have the cooperation of yourself and the municipal, county and other local officials in the same direction. It would be helpful if road, street, public building and other construction of this type could be speeded up and adjusted in such fashion as to further employment."

NEW CENTURY CLUB

The Newark New Century Club Corporation is placing the new mortgage against the clubhouse with the Newark Trust Company. They decided this was a good time to make a drive for funds to reduce the amount of the mortgage and letters were sent out asking for donations with that object in view. The corporation has been very well pleased with the response to the letters, several very generous donations having been received. It was at first announced that the drive would terminate November 28th, but the time has been extended to Monday, December 2, and any donations sent in before that time or brought to the club meeting on that date will be accepted. NEWARK READY FOR TITLE TILT

High School Squad In Dover Ready For State Championship Football Battle With Seaford; Pep-Fest Tuesday Night As Send-off For Team

The Newark High School football team left for Dover, this morning, primed and ready for its battle with Seaford for the State D. I. A. A. title. The Continental Band accompanied the team and hundreds of Newark fans will be in the Dover Ball Park at 2:30 to see these two undefeated eleven fight it out. This is Seaford's first year as a finalist in the title race, while Newark has held the Northern Championship since the D. I. A. A. was organized. Up until three years ago, Newark won the state crown every year, but for the past three years the local teams has lost to Laurel in the finals.

The Newark eleven had its formal send-off Tuesday night at a Pep-Fest, held in the High School auditorium. Captains of past teams made addresses of congratulation and wished the team success. They were William Swartz, '22; Arthur Mayer, '23; Vincent Mayer, '28. Frank Mayer, captain of the team, responded.

R. S. Gallaher and Ira S. Brinser spoke in behalf of the Board of Education; while I. Newton Sheaffer, represented the Lions Club, and Ira Steel, president of the Alumni Association, brought the wishes of success of those two organizations. Other speakers were: Huey Morris, Harold Grant, Amos Jaquette, Paul Jaquette and John Holloway.

J. Irvin Dayett, president of the Newark Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. P. K. Musselman, president of the Lions Club, sent messages of congratulation and wishes for success in the big game. Mayor Collins and Louis Handloff sent congratulatory letters, and Mr. Handloff included complimentary tickets for "The Cocoanuts" for the team and coach.

Coach Gillespie spoke of the team and its chances of winning. He said that his hardest task was to pick a starting lineup, as he had two teams, almost equally good. He gave some inside information on the team, and mentioned particularly Raymond Benson, whom, he said, could play any position, and was sent in to plug weak spots during games.

The Continental Band attended the Pep-Fest, and played for the singing. The members of the band will be the Thanksgiving dinner guests of Mr. Brinser following the game today.

Cheer leaders at the Pep-Fest were Curtis Potts, '28; Harry Williamson, '26; Jack Collins, '31; and Austin Ober, '30. They will also lead the cheering today. The auditorium had been attractively decorated for the Pep-Fest with banners, pennants and school colors. One of the features of the decorating were posters made for the occasion by George Laskaris.

Coach Gillespie is taking a squad of 28 players to the game. The probable starting lineup for Newark will be either Sommermeyer and Rittenhouse, or Widdoes and Willis, on the ends; McDowell and Gallagher, tackles; Suratt and Schwartz, guards; Ford, center; Smith, quarterback; Barrow and McCully, halfbacks; and Captain Frank Mayer, fullback.

Coach Gillespie has spent the past week and a half in strengthening the defense of his team, and developing new plays. Every player is in good condition, and Newark is given more than an even chance to take the crown, this afternoon.

The Seaford team is also in the pink of condition, and has been undergoing a polishing process by Coach Light. Several thousand people are expected at the game to see the duel between two great teams, and two great leaders, Frank Mayer, of Newark, and Sullivan, of Seaford.

Kiwanis Club Offers Silver Trophies For High Scores In Delaware Poultry Show

The Delaware State Poultry Association is one of the newer agricultural organizations that is made up of those members representing a large economic interest in this section of the country, with the result that it deserves the support of everyone who is concerned about the improvement of our farming conditions.

In keeping with the recognition of these agricultural associations by other organizations such as the civic clubs in this state, the Kiwanis Club of Wilmington, through its agricultural committee, has taken the first step toward encouraging the Delaware State Poultry Association by offering for competition two silver cups at the State Poultry Show which will be held in Milford on December 3, 4 and 5.

Sale For Disabled Veterans Successful

The sale of articles made by the disabled veterans at Perry Point was unusually successful considering the fact that it was the first sale of its kind held in Newark. The articles sold consisted of baskets, trays, toys, tooled leather bags, novel door-stops, footstools, and rugs.

Most of the articles were disposed of on the day of the sale. The baskets especially were in great demand. Many more baskets could have been sold than were contained in the shipment from Perry Point. It is planned to have a larger number of baskets in the next sale.

The tooled leather work showed skillful designing and workmanship. The bags and billfolds were fairly expensive because they were made of high grade leather and considerable time was required to tool the designs.

The entire proceeds of the sale of the articles are sent to the hospital at Perry Point. The disabled veteran who made the article receives one-half of the sale price and the other half goes to the Government. The disabled veteran has the privilege of using this money for his personal needs or of sending it to his family that might be dependent upon him. The Government uses its half to supply the

Mr. McSherry, the new publisher and editor, has been a Delawarean for the past ten and a half years, during which time he has been manager and editor of the Dover Index. He has severed his connection with the Index in order to publish his own paper. It is the intention of Mr. McSherry to continue the present policies of The Post, which are those laid down by its founder, Everett C. Johnson, when he established the paper in 1910.

The Post has a record of continuous weekly publication since its first issue, in January, 1910. It was published and edited by Mr. Johnson until his death, in 1926, after which his estate published the paper under the editorship of Mr. Johnson's widow. In 1928, the paper was purchased from Mrs. Johnson by The Post Publishing Company, which is owned by a group of Mr. Johnson's close personal friends. Chas. B. Jacobs, Jr., who had been on The Post for the preceding two years, under Mrs. Johnson, was appointed manager and editor.

Mr. McSherry started his newspaper career on the York (Pa.) Dispatch as a reporter. Joseph McLaughlin, present sports editor of Wilmington Every Evening, was on the Dispatch staff at that time. Mr. McSherry later went to the York Gazette. His journalistic career was interrupted by the World War, during which he served for two years with the American forces. On his return he went with the Chester Times, Chester, Pa., later taking the editorship of The Dover Index. Both Mr. McSherry and his wife have been active in the American Legion, and Mrs. McSherry is a past State President of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Delaware. They have one child, a daughter.

Mr. McSherry is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity; is a past master of Union Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; past priest of Kent Chapter, R. A. EDWARD F. SMITH FOUND NOT GUILTY OF KILLING AUNT

Edward F. Smith, of Philadelphia, was acquitted by the judges of the court at Easton, Md., Tuesday afternoon of the murder of Mrs. Anna J. Mahoney, 83 years old, of Pleasant Hill. Another charge of killing his cousin, Edward J. Mahoney, and also a charge of arson, were dropped by the court. Smith chose to be tried by the judges of the court instead of the jury. When declared not guilty and told that he might go, Smith arose, walked out of the court room and met some women relatives in the corridor. He embraced and kissed them and then walked out of the court house, entered an automobile which was waiting, and started for Philadelphia.

The verdict occasioned no surprise. Practically all of the evidence offered was circumstantial. At the trial Tuesday Mrs. Anna Speakman testified that she saw Smith in the vicinity of the Mahoney home some time before the fire and he was carrying a container similar to the kind used for gasoline. This was in the afternoon before the fire.

Mrs. Sarah Chitterson testified that on the night of the fire she heard three shots in the direction of the Mahoney home which is but a short distance from her own.

After argument by counsel on both sides, the judges retired to their chambers at 4.15 o'clock. They were in consultation half an hour and on their return announced a verdict of not guilty. Smith appeared to be unconcerned during the trial.

Mrs. Howard Scarborough, the widow who was with Smith on his visit to the section, was one of the witnesses for the State at the trial and gave the most damaging testimony against Smith but admitted that she boarded at the same place with him and had furnished him money to make the trip to Cecil county.

The congregation of the Marshallton M. E. Church have been asked to join in a Thanksgiving service in the Cedars M. E. Church at 10:30 tomorrow.

County employees for the past week have been engaged in erecting snow fences in this section. These fences, which are placed near the highways during the winter months aid the workmen in clearing the roads of snow and are considered a valuable aid. During heavy snow storms prior to last year, drifts of snow blocked the roads and often traffic was held up for several days. With the snow fences near the roads, the snow drifts into fields in back of them.

The plant and offices of the Delaware Hard Fibre Company closed Wednesday and will not reopen until next Monday.

While Deighton Husler, who suffered a fractured shoulder bone about two weeks ago, is said to be improving, he is still confined to his home.

Structure, in English Colonial Design, Occupies Fine Site Near New School

One of the newest additions to the rapidly developing Haines street section is the residence of Mr. William Lovett, back of the new school, which has just been completed by Charles G. Smith, general contractor, who also designed and laid out the building. This attractive home in English Colonial design is of two stories and large unfinished attic. It is built of Gyplap, furnished by the Newark Lumber Co., stuccoed with a special preparation, to give a Nile green cast to the color.

The entrance is on the open porch, to the left of the sun parlor, and opens into the spacious living room, while to the left rear is the entrance to the dining-room. The woodwork in these three rooms is in dark oak, painted by I. Newton Sheaffer, which gives a rich appearance to the whole.

The kitchen and pantry are to the right of the dining-room and are in lettuce green, which is also the predominating color of the linoleum. The plumbing fixtures, furnished and installed by Dan Stoll, are also in a color harmonizing with the general scheme. From the kitchen there is an exit to the rear porch, and also the entrance to the cellar.

Three beautiful bedrooms, each larger than ordinary, are on the second floor, reached by an attractive staircase from the living-room. The woodwork on this stairway is finished in dark oak. Large clothes closets are in all the bedrooms, which, because of skillful laying out, are very light and cheerful. The bathroom is in imitation tile, done by Norman Tweed, and contains all the necessary accessories. The handsome electrical fixtures throughout were furnished and installed by Samuel Slack. The window shades were supplied by R. R. Lovett Furniture Store.

The third floor is unfinished and is used for storage. It is entered by a special contrivance, a disappearing stairway, which drops when the trap door is opened. The cellar, which was cemented by Samuel Little (who also did the masonry), contains stationary tubs, and a National Radiator Company furnace, which was installed by Daniel Stoll. In the rear of the house is a garage, also stuccoed in Nile green.

Quality construction is apparent throughout the home and even a casual glance brings that fact out forcibly. Floors throughout are of yellow pine scraped and finished in dark oak. Simplicity of design, noticeable on the exterior, is seen on the inside as well. The residence occupies the center of a large lot, which in the spring will be finely sodded and planted with shrubbery, setting off the structure to advantage.

It is indeed a home of which Mr. Lovett may be proud and a triumph for its designer, Mr. Smith.

In addition to those mentioned who worked on the structure, the Jackson Hardware Store supplied the hardware and Henry Mote did the excavating.

Lovett avenue and Haines street, were opened in 1925 by W. J. Lovett and they founded a fine new section developed by him. This section was started in 1923, when Mr. Lovett built a home on a lot on Academy street and then cut through Haines street to build other houses fronting on it.

Thanksgiving

(An editorial written by Everett C. Johnson and printed in The Newark Post, November 25, 1925.)

Thanksgiving is a point of view, an attitude of mind. To interpret it in its fullness means more than mere appreciation of Facts; it implies the power of analysis and insight. It is not simply a Day set aside by official Proclamation, nor a holiday, nor for mere presence in the pew; it is a day of History full of tradition and romance, a day of gratitude for the blessings of yesterday and faith in tomorrow.

Its observance is a matter of thought and temperament. Some go afield with dog and gun, other atramping in the wood of the Great Outdoor, still others to the altar of their church—or around the fireside glow with homecoming kin.

All of these are worthy and expressive only of individual trend of thought and the day.

This morning with increasingly overhanging clouds, dull outlinings of trees in the distance and then the Snow—that delightful messenger of Winter with visions of Christmas and cold evenings—glowing logs and evening lamps make Thanksgiving today so impressive. With all the rush and speed, the worries and strains, the deceptions and disillusion, the misinterpretations and thrusts of enemies of the year, we are thankful. For they have challenged us, spurred us on and brought us nearer Realization and its Truth. And, too, with these have come the joy of work and at times the thrill of accomplishment. There have come quiet moments, cheering moments, grim determination. Best of all there has come a truer conception of men with their motives, and Facts with their secret forces. Our sight dimmed a bit more but insight clearer.

Gratitude guards always against Ingratitude and Success always crowns Disappointment—if viewed aright.

Thanksgiving—yes it is ours. Kells and our work and our lives are approaching yesterday's Dreams and our Trust in its fullness is just Beyond. The Past has been a delightful experience—the Future, an Adventure that thrills.

There is Work ahead. And there is Joy and Thanksgiving in Work. “Blessed is the man who has found his work.” Ideals and Thanksgiving call and lead us on.

Thus our Thanksgiving and our best cheer to all who love work and men.

The Post Changes Management

Next week's issue of The Newark Post will be published and edited by Harry C. McSherry, who has leased this paper from The Post Publishing Company. Mr. McSherry, a man of ripe journalistic experience, is taking The Post for what it is, and will conduct it under the same policies which have guided its progress since it was founded by the late Everett C. Johnson, in 1910. Mr. McSherry knew and appreciated Everett Johnson, and it is his thought and aim to perpetuate the part of Everett Johnson's work which is reflected in The Newark Post.

Under these auspices, Mr. McSherry comes to Newark, a servant and friend of the community. In this spirit he hopes to be received; and we ask that he be accepted; and that he be extended the courtesy, interest and friendship, which has been the heritage of the editor of The Post since the time of Everett Johnson.

The retiring editor uses this opportunity to express his feeling of regret in leaving Newark and The Newark Post. He takes with him, to be cherished, memories of friendliness, tolerance, and thoughtful interest, which have marked his associations with this community and its people.

The Fruits of Pacifism

Following this introduction is a letter by Lieutenant Victor E. Devereaux, which clearly states the stand of the opponents of complete pacifism and total disarmament, and goes further and describes the fruits of the seeds which are being assiduously and insidiously planted by radical agencies and their unwitting allies.

The sentiment of patriotic Americans and patriotic organizations, who abhor war, but believe that this nation must have adequate protection against war, was concisely and lucidly stated by President Hoover in his Armistice Day address. He said:

“Proper defense requires military strength relative to that of other nations. We will reduce our naval strength in proportion to any other. . . . I am for adequate preparedness as a guaranty that no foreign soldier shall ever step upon the soil of our country. . . . No American will arise today and say that we wish one gun or one armed man beyond that necessary for the defense of our people. . . . We must reduce and limit warships by agreement only. I have no faith in the reduction of armaments by example alone.”

In his letter Lieutenant Devereaux portrays a picture of conditions against which it is vital to stand guard with an adequate national defense. No right minded citizen wants this nation to become militaristic, but every clear thinking citizen must realize that this nation must be amply protected against forces which are strenuously forging ahead with a program of destruction of our national institutions, ideals and identity.—Ed.

Fort Du Pont Del., Nov. 25, 1929. Mr. Charles B. Jacobs, Jr., Editor, The Newark Post. Dear Mr. Jacobs:

There is a prevailing idea abroad among uninformed citizenry that be-advocates, without regard for the obvious consequences, an impractical, ridiculous, potentially tragic policy of non-resistance, peace at any price and complete disarmament. Pacifism thus attempts to place the nation in exactly the position desired by the frenzied leaders of Soviet Russia, who have already designated “The Day” when the Judas kiss is to be implanted on the cheek of civilization; they are that certain of the success of their respectable-front allies and those who follow blindly along the clear path laid out for them not only in America but throughout the civilized world.

There is no doubt that the World War has rocked the foundation of European civilization. The same forces which promote discontent and civil strife in many of the countries of Europe are at work on this side of the ocean seeking to create a division in our population, stimulating class hatred and a contempt for government, which, if continued uninterrupted, must necessarily result in serious consequences to the peace and prosperity of America. These anti-American forces are carrying on this vicious program by taking advantage of the real grievances and the natural demands of the working classes for a larger share in the management and use of the common wealth. They are attempting to destroy entirely our present trade-union organizations and create revolutionary industrial unions which will have the power to so cripple the government as to render it powerless. The ultimate effort will be the universal general strike that will denote the opening guns of the revolution. In the meantime, the peace-at-any-price groups will have prepared the Holocaust whether they realize it or not.

There is one conclusive general fact that must be driven home to Americans, and that is that the pacifist movement in this country, its growth and connections, is an absolute integral and fundamental part of International Socialism-Communism. It is not by any means an external growth. It is not a side issue. It is part and parcel of the subversive program.

One of the principal purposes of Communism is the creation of an international sentiment to supersede national patriotism. This internationalism is based on pacifism, in the sense that it opposes all wars between nations while, at the same time, it develops class consciousness which is intended to culminate in relentless class warfare. Briefly, it is not really peace that is the goal, but the abolition of the patriotic spirit of nationalities, so that the world will be prepared for destruction. The entire program is based on the ideas of Karl Marx, and the Communist (Third) International, founded at Moscow, is the result of these ideas. It would be impossible to enumerate all of the essential elements of the subversive movement, in the space available here. Combined, however, they are bringing nearer and nearer the day when the general strike, instead of being either a threat or a passing phase, will bring about not concessions but the total destruction of present organized society. In their efforts to disarm America, the dupes and the non-resisters must realize that the Church and Christianity are a part of our present organized society, that atheism is the religion of Communism, and, that, of the differentiating roads, so speciously described by them, the road to reality and preparation for a definite danger ahead is the one which, if taken, will perpetuate the ideals of Brotherly Love and the Christian Church which characterize the other.

The trouble with most of the fatuous Americans who will not see, is that they are so thoroughly inflected with the pacifist-hysteria-complex they will refuse to recognize facts when they see them.

Very sincerely yours, Victor E. Devereaux, 2nd Lieut., Eng-Res. Secretary-Treasurer, Du Pont Chapter No. 76, National Sojourners.

MINING A LIBRARY

An order came from Colonel West to Company E to detail Corporal Ayer with fourteen men for duty at the Cerro Colorado mine. . . . And now it was that the young commander had the adventure that was to give color and direction to his whole life. Colonel Samuel Colt. . . . at this time chief owner of the Cerro Colorado (or Heintzleman) mine, had sent a few books out to the mine for the use of the employees during their hours of loneliness and leisure. Rum-maging through this little library, Edward Ayer came upon The Conquest of Mexico in three volumes by W. H. Prescott. Here was a perfect illustration of George MacDonald's saying that “as you grow ready for it, somewhere or other you will find what is needful for you in a book.” Up to this time Ayer had never read a book. There were no books in the Wisconsin and Illinois wilderness in the '40's and '50's when he was a boy. He had been to school a little in the rough log school-house, but the magic and the meaning of books he knew nothing about. He picked up these volumes of Prescott because he was near the Mexican border, and, naturally, anything about Mexico aroused his interest. He read the books through with astonishment and delight. He was amazed that the printed page could contain so much of action, color, and entertainment. He said to me concerning this experience, “I read those three volumes through twice while I was at the mine. They seemed to open up an absolutely new world to me.”

He was mustered out of service, about June 1, 1864, and he reached his home in Harvard, Illinois, on the first day of July. Shortly after his return his father presented him with a thousand-dollar (one third) interest in a general store at Harvard. . . . He went to Chicago to buy goods for the first time. . . . and saw the sign, “Cobb and Pritchard's Book Store.” He had read no books since his adventures with the Prescott volumes two years previous. This was the first bookstore he had ever seen. . . . He rushed across the street, and into the store, and asked:

“Have you got Prescott's Conquest of Mexico?”

“Yes,” the salesman replied; and forthwith he handed down Lippincott's edition of 1864, bound in black cloth, consisting of five volumes, the two on Peru as well as the three on Mexico.

“They are three dollars and fifty cents a volume,” said the dealer. . . . It was out of the question to buy them, as he did not have enough money. Finally he said to the salesman, who proved to be one of the proprietors:

“My name is Edward Ayer. I have been four and a half years on the plains and in the war three years. I just got back a month ago after four years among the Indians. My father has given me a thousand-dollar interest in his store at Harvard Junction. I want that first volume on Mexico awfully bad, and if you will let me have it, I will pledge myself as a gentleman to economize and save three dollars and fifty cents a month and in five months I will have paid for the set.”

The bookseller looked at Ayer a moment and said: “Young man, you take the set right home with you. Give me three-fifty now, and three-fifty each month until they are paid for.”

Edward Everett Ayer, the great patron of the arts and one of the chief book-collectors of the world said:

“I have blessed him ever since. I feel that that day, taking those books home, was, perhaps, the happiest of my life up to that time; and going home I only touched the earth in high places. And I want to reiterate that the finding of Prescott's Conquest of Mexico in that mine in Arizona in '62, has been responsible, and is to be credited as the principal force that has given me a vast amount of enjoyment in this world, and is absolutely responsible for the great ‘Ayer Library’ in the Newberry Library, Chicago.”

The Ayer collection in the Newberry Library, Chicago, is the most complete body of source material on the early life of America in existence. Mr. Ayer's gifts to the Newberry Library aggregate more than two million dollars in value.—Frank C. Lockwood, in “Arizona Characters.”

EDUCATION AFTER SCHOOL

We still hear the occasional croaking of critics who complain that all the public money spent on education has done little for the practical needs of daily life. What children are taught at school does not help them, we are told, to be useful workers, or is an influence directing them from well-paid craftsmanship to overcrowded clerical occupations. How little ground there is now for these complaints, how much is being done to adapt the educational system to industrial requirements and local opportunities of employment may be seen at a glance at the plans of the London County for “continued education.” The demand for instruction in trade schools is continually increasing. For example, a technical institute has just been opened for the special training of boys and girls who are to serve in shops. The assistant of the future is to have a thorough knowledge of the materials he sells.

Young people who have to earn their living in the daytime might be excused a lack of enthusiasm for education in the evening. But the fact is that the number of those who come to the polytechnics to take evening classes is continually growing.

All sorts and conditions of people, the London County Council officers report, dustmen and bank clerks, bricklayers and typists, shop girls and bus drivers, apply for courses of study. This ambition of higher capacity and better fortune so sincere and so powerful in hosts of young people—nearly 200,000 in London last year—that it makes them ready to work double tides is the best evidence of national vitality. A great deal too much loose talk has been heard of the frivolity and the slackness of the generation which has grown up since the war. The records show that there were never so many young people in London working to increase their capacity as there are now, and never before was such work so regular and persistent.

CAPE COD'S GREAT THRILL

The Eastern Steamship Company has operated its line between Boston and New York through the Cape Cod Canal a number of years; but the passing of time has not diminished their interest in the passing of the ships. “Seeing the New York boat go through the canal” was first a novelty; now it is an institution. A man making his introductory visit to the Cape is bundled into his host's car the first evening and hustled to the banks of the canal, where every family has its reserved grandstand either at the Sagamore end, the Buzzards Bay end, or on the high cliffs in between.

When the beam of the searchlight shoots high in the sky like the northern lights, and a few minutes later the great ship—certainly great in comparison to its narrow confines—appears around a bend in the canal, the newcomer realizes he is just a little bit thrilled. Silently it comes through the darkness, like a huge phantom hotel moving on air. When it is a few yards away, the waters of the canal recede from the banks, and as it passes they rush back against the shore in mighty breakers. The sight-seers on the shore call and yell, and a few of the passengers, looking haughtily down from the high decks, deign to wave in reply. Soon there is only a glow of lights down the bay; another “boat has gone through the canal”; and there's no great excitement until the next night.—Boston Herald.

It is better a man should be abused than forgotten.—Dr. Johnson.

OLD SOD HOUSES STILL USED IN THE SOUTHWEST
Sod houses, symbols of a dauntless strain of pioneers, are not entirely memories. On the prairies of Western Kansas, Eastern Colorado, Northern Oklahoma and Northern Texas many of these old landmarks are still being used for homes. Remodeled and improved, they yet hark back to yesterday.

The greatest problem before the settlers of the '80s was that of homes. They were attracted to the fertile plains by the promise of agricultural wealth which in many cases did not materialize because of grasshoppers and drought. They left their rocky, hilly land to till the raw acres and to establish new homes.
Lumber, of course, was out of the question because of the lack of trees and the long distances to railroads. Freight was slow and hard. Oxen, the common beasts of burden, toiled over the ungraded, rough trails, but they hauled sustenance and clothing rather than building materials.
So the settlers erected their homes from the virgin sod. Blocks, similar to cement blocks of later days, were cut and piled to form the walls. At first the roofs were fashioned of wide boards covered with sod blocks. The infrequent rains, however, pierced such roofs and the early home builders began to use shingles.
Cool in Summer, warm in Winter, these "soddies" furnished adequate, if not beautiful, shelter for the settlers.

WHEN THE FIRST CALLOPPE AMAZED THE PUBLIC
That herald of the circus, the calloppe, made its first public appearance in July, 1856, screeching "Old Dan Tucker," down the Worcester & Nashua Railroad.
A contemporary account describes the effect as "magical, nay wonderful, exciting and amusing. Men left their workshops and rushed for the railway. Women and children swarmed like ants when their ant-hill is trodden on, agrin with wonder and delight. The horses danced pirouettes to the music; the very pigs relaxed the tension of their tortuous tails, and stupid calves . . . snuffed the music-laden air, their pendant tails outstanding straight behind."
"Twa marvelous, and we should not have been surprised if all the bending woods, charmed by the Orphich strains, had walked adown the shaded hills and made obeisance to the Calloppe . . . even as Birnam Wood came down to Dunsinane!"

The Vanishing Black Bear

By W. S. Long, in "Our Dumb Animals"

One of the commonest, best known, and least understood of the North American animals is the ordinary black bear. Most of the stories told of the bears are untrue, for they are usually pictured as ferocious beasts, ready to attack man with no provocation whatever. As is usually the case with "nature stories" this is absolutely untrue. One hundred and fifty years ago black bears might have been grouchy beasts, for they were larger then, and had not been taught the lesson of the white man's gun—that discretion is the better part of valor. They had little to fear from the arrows of the red man.
Now, however, their numbers have been greatly decimated by the hunters and the clearing of the forests, so that they are extinct over a great part of their former range. Those remaining have a wholesome fear of man, and flee at the first sign of the arch-enemy. Bears are powerful beasts and when aroused make fearful antagonists, but unless wounded, cornered, or in defense of their young, seldom show fight.
Bears are usually classed as carnivorous. They will eat meat, fish, berries and even carrion. They are extremely fond of sweets of all kinds, robbing every bee tree they can break into, and often raiding lumber camps for the syrup and sugar to be had there. They are fond of pork, and often raid farmers' pig pens.
One of the most curious and interesting habits of the bears is that of hibernation. They are the only large American mammals which habitually choose a warm den and sleep away the cold winter months. The length of the death-like coma is from three to six months, depending upon the winter. Contrary to public opinion, the bears do not emerge from this long sleep ravenous, devouring, emaciated beasts, but in good condition. Bears probably do not eat much immediately after coming out in the spring, for examination has shown that the stomach is commonly shrunken until it would do well to hold a good-sized rat.
In this winter den the two or three young are born, and by the time warm weather comes are able to follow their mother in search of food. In this connection it is interesting to observe that the black bear has two color phases. Sometimes an old she-bear will be followed by one black and one brown cub. In Alaska there is a color phase which is bluish gray. Some naturalists call it the glacier bear, and say it is a new species being formed by old Mother Nature. Time alone will tell about this, but in both these color phases the black bear is the parent species.

Bears are usually nocturnal animals, that is, they sleep by day and roam about at night. However, in sections of the country where they are unmolested they often wander about by day.
Bear cubs are often captured and make very interesting pets, but are a nuisance because it is impossible to keep them out of things without a chain. They are so insatiably curious that they must investigate everything that they can reach. I think, in this respect, they are even worse than monkeys.
It is a sad fact that in most parts of the country bears are rapidly being killed off. Unless they are given protection they will ultimately become entirely extinct. The cutting off of the forests for farm land, and the fact that a bearskin rug is a trophy to be proud of, is fast spelling the end. If given protection part of the year they respond nobly, as proved by the experience of Pennsylvania and some other states, where the black bears roam in greater number than ever before. In Yellowstone National Park, where they are given complete protection, they will eat from the human hand. It is only hunting and persecution that makes animals fear man.

SENIORS DEFEAT FACULTY, 6-0

Classic Contest Revived, Monday; Faculty Endurance Noteworthy; Worrisome Low Stars

A sporting classic was revived, Monday, at the University of Delaware, when the faculty and the seniors lined-up for a renewal of football hostilities, formerly an annual event. Youthful sinews necessary for the modern game tipped the scales in favor of the undergraduates, and they eked out a 6 to 0 victory over the professors.

The astonishing part of the contest was the stamina displayed by stars of a decade or two ago, such as Dr. Mamm and Phil Meyers, who played a full game for the faculty, and smothered the enthusiasm of constant fresh replacements put into the game by the seniors.

Joe Rothrock, director of athletics at the University, was counted as the big gun of the faculty aggregation, but every time Joe made a move, eleven seniors played him exclusively. In fact a half dozen or so usually played him belatedly after he stopped moving.

Both teams went into the air for the major portions of their attacks, and the seniors advanced the ball within the distance required for their lone score by forward passing. Rothrock and "Doc" Doherty unleashed a passing combination, that gained considerable ground for the faculty.

No account of the struggle would be complete without mention of George Worrislow, the Gunga Din of the faculty. Much of the faculty's success in stemming the senior attack was due to George's magnificent broken field running with the bucket.

PROPER HEIGHTS ADD TO WOMEN'S COMFORT

Mrs. Kate Henley Daugherty, County Home Demonstration Agent for New Castle County, advises that the home makers can save about 40 per cent of their energy when working at the sink, table or stove if they will have the heights of their equipment adjusted to their individual heights. She continues that many women have tired backs or round shoulders from working on surfaces that are too low. Standardization of the height of kitchen tables and sinks has been unfortunate. Some one has rightly said that these should be tailor-made for the person who is to use them. If you are tall the standard height is too low; if you are short the standard height is too high.

The work table, the bottom of the sink and the top of the stove are the proper heights if when standing erect before them the palms of the hands can be laid flat on these surfaces without stooping or without bending the arms. If the palms are above these, say two inches, then they should be raised two inches. In the case of a work table, that can easily be raised by putting casters or nailing blocks under the legs. If it is too high, the legs can be sawed off the right amount.

If the sink is more than two inches too low for the worker, it is deemed advisable to have a plumber raise it. If it is not more than two inches low it can be remedied by putting a wooden slat or metal rack in the bottom of the sink to raise it to the proper height.

"After the table height has been adjusted for you," continues Mrs. Daugherty, "the stool should be tailor-made accordingly. Kitchen stools can be bought in several heights, and in the present case, the best procedure is to get one that is too high and proceed to saw off the legs a little at a time until the right height is found."

DELAWARE BOWS TO HAVERFORD

Loses Final Game, 20-6. After A Season Without A Victory; "Ace" Taylor Gives Brilliant Exhibition

The University of Delaware football team lost its seventh and last game, Saturday, when it bowed, 20 to 6, before its traditional rival, Haverford. The game was played on the Haverford gridiron. This completed a season without victory for the Blue and Gold. One game, with Susquehanna, was a scoreless tie.

Captain "Ace" Taylor, playing for the last time in Delaware uniform, displayed the brilliancy which has been the only bright spot in the Delaware football year. He made Delaware's score of the day, and was responsible for the advance which led to the score. Haverford scored touchdowns in each of the first three periods, and Taylor, taking a pass from Haggerty, took the ball over for the Blue and Gold in the last quarter. Prior to this touchdown, two unerring passes from Taylor to Haggerty had advanced the ball to scoring distance. Line-up:

SELLS CHRIS-CRAFT TO LOCAL RESIDENT

Although cold weather has set in, it has not interfered with the sale of speedboats by the Marine Construction Company, at the foot of Commerce street, Wilmington, authorized Chris-Craft dealers. Last week, Clifford Young, salesman, sold a No. 13 sedan model to James Cullin, of Wilmington, scheduled for spring delivery. It will be used at Hack's Point, Md., and vicinity, during the summer of next year.

This model is 26 feet long, has a 200-horsepower Cripps motor, which will propel it along at 40 miles per hour. The craft has a capacity for eleven persons.

For demonstration purposes an Eastman business Kodascope on which four reels of film, each 100 feet in length. A portable machine it can be placed anywhere and will show these films, which are of all models and lengths of Chris-Craft in action.

In addition to activity in the Chris-Craft department, the company is busy building two large yachts, one for Ernest du Pont and the other for an undisclosed purchaser. The keel for the latter cruiser, which will be 74 feet in length and of bridge deck type, was laid last week. It will have a sixteen-foot beam and a speed of 13.5 miles per hour, produced by two Hall-Scott gasoline motors, each of 175 horsepower. This boat, which will have a hull of mahogany, has quarters for eight passengers and a crew of four.

UNUSUAL FLEXIBILITY IN NEW TYPE LOCK

The flexibility of the Best Universal Locking System, and the convenience of its one-key idea is aptly illustrated in an example setup, showing how the one key idea will admit a person to just the lock, or locks, to which he has right of entry and no other.

This setup is so arranged that each of the four officials in a certain company carries but one key, no two of which are alike, yet each official's key opens every lock in that company's plant and office. Then each person properly entitled thereto, has his individual key which admits him to the office but not the warehouses or yards. Other employees, each having his individual one key, are admitted thereby to the warehouse, or yard, or both, as responsibility requires, but not to the offices. Also, the officials' respective one key opens the doors to their respective home, but the locks are so set that the key of one official cannot open the locks in another official's home. Nor can the keys used by the family in one home open the locks in the other official's homes, nor in the company's plant. The locks in the home are so set that the maid may open only the kitchen door with her one key. Also, an individual key is provided as a guest key which will open just the front entrance door.

A number of Wilmingtonians have installed the Best Universal Locking System in their places of business and their homes, using a setup similar to

FALL RENOVATION FOR MUNDORFF WORKS

At this time of the year, the bottling plant of H. A. Mundorff and Son, at Thirtieth and Market streets, Wilmington, undergoes its regular cleaning and painting-up period. At the close of the busy summer season, the plant is given this treatment.

This work is done so as to not interfere with the regular bottling of beverages, which are sold the year around. At this time of the year, particularly, Canadian Club ginger ale and Mundorff's ginger ale, in quart bottles, enjoy increased sales. Many people buy these beverages in quantity lots and serve them at meal times.

LUMBER SHED VIES WITH SHOE STORE DISPLAYS

Gay Packages of Special Boards to Appear in Yard of Company

As a result of an innovation in the lumber industry, the warehouse of the E. J. Hollingsworth Company here will take on a new appearance shortly.

"Lumber users and lumber buyers will be interested in this new forest product, not only because it looks different from the boards they are accustomed to, but also, because it actually is different in important respects," said Mr. James H. Hollingsworth, manager of the concern.

"It comes from the Weyerhaeuser mills in northern Minnesota, Idaho, and the Pacific Northwest, where newly invented equipment has been installed to re-manufacture the lumber after it has gone through all the ordinary processes of milling.

"These caps are of vital importance to lumber-users," said Mr. J. H. Hollingsworth, "because they state the species of the wood and the grade of the lumber. This is a guarantee of quality, for it assures the building-owner that he is getting exactly the grade of lumber he or his architect specified."

As soon as the Four-Square stock arrives from the mills and is arranged in shoe-box fashion in the local company's warehouse, Mr. Hollingsworth intends to invite the building public to see the result of this development in lumber manufacture.
