Galleria passes second milestone

By LAURA SANKOWICH

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

INCE OPENING in April of 1996, the Main Street Galleria has already seen more than one business come and go.

In this past year alone, the Lux hair salon replaced part of the space previously rented to Head Lines beauty parlor, Scented Cottage, which also took part of that space, has relocated already, and Delaware's newest burger king, Colonel Mustards, has replaced the Hibachi Express.

But others like Donna's

Delites, Saladworks, Disc Go Round, the Brickyard Tavern, Grotto Pizza, and The Gap have remained in their original location since the miniature shopping mall opened.

Astra Plaza approaches first birthday

INCE ITS OPENING last fall, Main Street's Astra Plaza has slowly filled with food and retail businesses. Owner Gus Tsonias said that he expects the remaining two empty retail spaces will be filled soon in the mini-mall at the corner of Chapel Street.

"An office has expressed interest in moving there," Tsionas said. Another business interested in space will be a fish market, which Tsonias expected to sign a lease some time this week.

Celeste Kemple, co-owner of Campus Surf, said, "We're sustaining ourselves even when there are no students here (during the summer)."

The store's other owner agreed.
"We've been really happy," said Renee
White. "We have other markets besides

White said she ex[ected more growth when new apartments opened down the street. "We expect to get a lot more foot traffic."

The sisters said that business has been steady. "This is our first year for back to school," White said. "(But) I wish we had more retailers instead of food on Main Street. I think people think that students have unlimited income and stomach potential."

Porach seeks restraining order against city

Porach seeks restraining order against city

Newark resident Albert
Porach is seeking a Restraining Order from Chancery Court to prevent the city of Newark from abolishing the Newark Parking Authority as an independent entity.

According to his Complaint,
Porach maintains that abolishing the NPA by deleting the original enabling legislation under Ordinance 98-4 was improper.

Passed in March, the ordinance established the Downtown Newark Partnership which would consolidate all planning for downtown business and development, including the NPA, into one organization under city direction.

under city direction.

Porach further objects to the expenditure of public funds which he maintains will be spent if the NPA is a non-statutory committee under the direct authority of the city.

Directed by the DNP board, funding which city manager Carl Luft estimates will cost about $94,000 annually will come from the city and the University as well as businesses in Newark.

A companion ordinance established a $25 business license surcharge for all city businesses to help fund DNP's programs. Revenues from the NPA lots in downtown Newark would be put into an Enterprise Fund separate from other city budget monies to be used for development and maintenance of public parking facilities.

Porach has repeatedly spoken out against the plan and asked the city to consider alternatives.

City planning director Roy Lopata initially said the State Legislature would need to pass a resolution to abolish the NPA. However, assistant planner Maureen Roser said this week that city solicitor Roger Akin determined a state assembly resolution was not necessary.

City manager Carl Luft said the city met with local state legislators for informational purposes in preparing the ordinance.

Mark Sisk, attorney for the parking authority, said he did not express a legal opinion to the

Shoplifting isn't exactly petty theft

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark Police report that a teenage shoplifter was easy to find when he apparently went exactly where they expected.

"This was excellent police work," said public information officer Mark Farrell. "The officer realized the 'Glory' Beanie Baby taken from The Science Fair on Aug. 6 was expensive and she called other businesses in the area that handle the items to alert them if one showed up."

The day after the collectible valued at $100 was taken from the Science Fair in College Square Shopping Center, a group of teens walked into Dreamline Collectibles on East Main Street and tried to sell the stuffed toy. "The shopowner attempted to detain the five youths and an off-duty state trooper who happened to be in the store also tried to help," said Farrell. "He caught one 16-year-old boy after a footchase while the owner called Newark Police."

Charges are still pending in the matter and police welcome any information concerning the two incidents.

Celeste Kemple of Campus Surf said shoplifting is an ongoing problem for businesses in Newark. "We have a sign up now saying only three juveniles in the store at a time," Kemple said. "It's a problem when they all crowd in at once."

Kemple said two incidents in April made her mad. "A group came in on April 14 and I suspected they were shoplifting but I didn't actually see it and didn't know what to do."

Items were missing after the group left and Kemple reported the incident to police. Two days later, the same youths returned and she grabbed one boy before he could get away. "I got his mother on the phone but she said I had to let him go because he hadn't done anything that I could prove."

Kemple talked to other businesses on Main Street and found apparently the same group was taking items from other locations and some were known to the storeowners. "As a result, one of the boys brought back some stuff taken from my store and asked me not to prosecute him," Kemple said. "He brought back stuff I didn't even know they took – that's how good they are."

Kemple said the items taken are not cheap. "They took $90 sunglasses and another storeowner saw boys in the parking lot pulling surfer trunks from inside their clothes after they left my store."

Kemple let the alleged shoplifter who returned merchandise go, but gave him a piece of her mind. "I told him 'everyone on Main street works too hard for their money to let you do this," Kemple said. "Why aren't you working like I was at your age?"

Kemple said the group has never returned to her store but she believes they are still taking things elsewhere. "Their parents don't seem to care and the kids do what they want," she said.

Farrell said storeowners who suspect shoplifting can tell the individuals to leave and not allow them back in the store again. "They can also detain them if they really have reason to believe something was taken," said Farrell.

"We don't recommend that because they might get hurt, so it's better to just call police and report what happened."

Three Newark Police officers recently received awards from the Knights of Columbus, Saint Michael Council #4548.

P.F.C. John Palka was named the Officer of the Quarter for the fourth quarter of 1997. He was recognized for re-establishing the Newark Police Department Explorer Post. The Explorer program allows young people interested in law enforcement to experience first-hand some of the day-to-day activities of police officers.

P.F.C. Jerry Dawson was named the Officer of the Quarter for the first quarter of 1998. Dawson was honored for his investigation into numerous vehicle thefts and attempted vehicle thefts that had occurred over several weeks in the northwest section of Newark.

He identified a suspect and lodged 19 criminal charges against him. A follow-up investigation resulted in the same suspect being charged with numerous other vehicle thefts, by both the Newark and New Castle County police departments.

Det./Cpl. Jerry Simpson was named the Officer of the Quarter for the second quarter of 1998. Simpson was the lead investigator into an assault that occurred at Maxwell T's, a former restaurant/bar on North College Avenue. During the incident, six employees of the establishment were injured when a large group of people, some of whom used bottles as weapons, attacked them. Simpson's investigation led to the identification and arrest of 12 suspects, who now face a total of 150 criminal charges.

Large enrollment will mean tight quarters for some UD students

By LAURA SANKOWICH

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Three is company, or at least that's what the University of Delaware will be trying to convince at least 200 members of this year's incoming freshmen class.

With at least 400 more students enrolled to attend Delaware this year, than last, the university will be hard pressed to find space for them all. This year's class has the highest number of students to be placed in extended housing since 1980.

David Butler, executive director of housing assignment services, said the alternative of would be simply denying housing to some incoming freshmen. However, this may mean that some people will not attend Delaware because they are from out of state, or may not feel comfortable living off campus.

Instead the university opts to place them in extended housing situations.

Butler said the number of students in extended housing tends to vary. Last year only 97 freshmen were in extended housing. "It really depends on acceptance and cancellations," he said. "The university admitted the same number of applicants as last year, but more accepted the offer this year. We think that that's because the public understands this is a good university."

Cynthia Cummings director of residence life at the university said,

"This is not uncommon,we open every year with extended housing, which is 3 people to a room."

Cummings said in order to ease the tension that having three students in a room can cause, residence life has taken several steps. "We have developed getting to know the other student's programs. We also have roommate contracts to anticipate sources of conflict and resolve them."

She said the resident assistant staff is also trained in mediation, and has also devised a program which has received national awards, called "Three's Company." The program includes newsletters to those in extended housing updating them on the situation and welcome baskets to students in triples as well as offer outreach to students at the beginning of the semester.

Leslie Conner, a counselor at the center for counseling and student development. said, "With over-crowding in general some people handle it better than others."

She said possible conflicts that may arise include alienation of one of the three roommates.

"One of the problems when you're getting to know a roommate is that its easier to get to know one person instead of two, so there is a potential to leave one person out." Conner also said, "This division also serves as a natural way to relocate that person, but it takes a while and they have to live with that for the rest of the semester, it's hard to feel like a third wheel."

Another source of tension can arise from a lack of personal space. "To ease it, students can have their own space or area of the room that is theirs and be considerate of roommates by not leaving personal items all over the room."

According to Butler, in conjunction with offering transitional programs for residents in extended housing, students will also be offered a reduction in housing fees for the period of time that they are placed in that housing situation.

"We try to encourage them to make the best of the situation, most of the students do pretty well but with those that don't we try to get them out as quickly as we can," he said

As far as building additional oncampus housing, Butler replied that he thinks the recent boom in student housing developments will compensate for any necessary additional housing in the future. "One of the things we're watching closely is the community, Two apartment complexes are opening up in the fall which will be all students." He said, "There may also be a housing development on South Chapel. I think what's going to happen is, as private enterprise swoops in on the market the situation will balance and they will siphon off some of the students and create a balance.'

NTRC members appointed

Newark's revamped traffic relief committee saw many of its members reappointed at Newark's city council meeting this week.

The two-year-old Western Newark Traffic Relief Committee became the Newark Traffic Relief Committee on July 27 after the group's focus was expanded to the entire city.

Among the Newark residents from the six districts nominated Monday by individual councilmembers were Jack Billingsley from District 1, Thomas Parkins from District 2, Willett Kempton from District 3, David Athey from District 4, and Robert Smith from District 5. Councilmember Gerald Grant did not yet have a nomination for District 6.

Council also approved Mayor Hal Godwin's choices for the remaining nine members, including: Newark Police Chief William Hogan and Planning Director Roy Lopata, non-voting city staff members; Joan Odell and Jerome Lewis from the University of Delaware; Margaret Priest representing Chrysler Corporation; Paul Lesniak representing W.L. Gore; Linda Ayres representing E.I. duPont/Stine Haskell Research; Gary S. Kirk from Delaware Motor Transport; and State Representive Timothy Boulden (R-Newark).

Among the Newark residents or corporations except Parkins and Athey have served on the committee in the past.

In addition to broadening the geographic focus, council accepted Godwin's suggestion to incorporate members from all districts which led to the reappointments. The committee and its membership will be reviewed again by city council in two years.

Godwin said the newly-formed committee will meet for the first time on Aug. 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the city manager's conference room to elect a chair and set schedules for their meetings.

New Christina school unveiled for Bear/Glasgow

By LAURA SANKOWICH

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Christina District School Board approved a schematic design for a school, tentatively being called the Glasgow Elementary School, on Tuesday night.

Preliminary plans for the school to be located near Routes 896 and 40, are for a K-4 elementary school.

Deputy school superintendent Franklin A. Rishel confirmed the school will house students at the K-4 level. However, the school could be a regular feeder pattern school or or a Theme school, or a combination of both. "At this stage, (a regular school) is what we're looking at," Rishel said. "It would be possible that we will look at it as a Theme school.

According to the proposal by the school's architect Buck Simpers, the one-story school on 26.95 acres will have a maximum capacity for 840 students.

Proposed for the school is a basic instructional program including reading, writing, mathematics, science, social studies, art, music, physical education and health. The school will also contain spaces for remedial tutoring, counseling, speech therapy, psychological and educational diagnosis, teacher workrooms, storage and rest room facilities. Advanced data and communications technology will also be integrated into the school.

According to the design report, in addition to self-contained class-rooms, the school will have TAM (Team Approach to Mastery) class-rooms, small work group areas, wet and dry areas for graphic arts and large areas for physical education and music programs. All students will participate in a regularly scheduled general music program.

The pod design will allow the core facilities, such as the school's gymnasium and rest room facilities, to be opened for recreational purposes while the remainder of the school is closed.

Simpers said the pod design of the school is similar to that of Brader and Marshall elementary schools.

The administrative area, cafeteria, kitchen and media center will also be in areas designated as core areas, leaving the educational areas in pods. The classroom pods will consist of classrooms grouped around a central resource area. Adjacent support space for a small conference room, storage room and community toilets will also be contained in each pod.

Pods will also have easy access to the art room, teacher's work room, administration, health care, media, music, gymnasium and cafeteria areas.

The school is expected to be open in September 2000.

New signals at College and Main

Long-awaited resignalization at the intersection of College and Main streets in downtown Newark began this week.

The Delaware Department of Transportation expects to complete the project by Aug. 21. Motorists should expect intermittent lane closings on Main Street at North College Avenue during the project. In addition, right turns from Main onto North College will not be permitted.

DelDOT planner Gene Donaldson previously said Eagle Signal Distribution was awarded the contract for the software and supporting central office hardware.

This system will use fiberoptics in the future but Donaldson said it will start out with copper wiring. "Fiber optics has not been used in Delaware for signals and I don't want to take the chance it won't work initially," said Donaldson.

DelDOT spokesperson
Mike Williams said this week that the new signals will designate separate "green time" for both vehicles and pedestrians.
"That means all motor vehicles will be stopped at once so pedestrians can cross," said Williams. "Presumably they can cross from any corner to any other corner at the intersection when pedestrians have the green light."

During the "green time" for vehicles, pedestrians will not be able to cross at all.

Williams said the signal will replace the existing yield conditions at the intersection.

DelDOT's plans also call for the installation of a crosswalk east of the intersection to facilitate pedestrians.

Galleria thriving in second year

► GALLERIA, from 1

"We're pretty happy here, business is great," said Linda Kangur, owner of Disc Go Round. "It's a super store - and wait until the kids get back for school."

Despite the success of her store, Kangur did have a few concerns about the mall. "During the school year sometimes there is damage," she said. "Some places are open until 1 or 2 a.m. and sometimes people have a bit too much to drink."

Russ Huxtable, manager of the Brew Ha-Ha coffee shop, said the two-year-old business is a little slow in summer because the students are

But the store attracts professors and new customers all year round, which was good considering that there are five other coffee shops on Main Street. "People feel comfortable coming here because they can sit and read or talk to other regulars and interact with the staff," Huxtable said. "It's large compared to other coffee houses and even other Brew Ha Ha's. It's homey like people's living rooms."

Donna DuPhily, owner of the sweet shop located on the first floor of the building, said business is slow during the summer. "When the (college) kids are here, business is good and each holiday gets two times as good as the previous one," she said. "During the summer we work harder to let people know we're around. We put out lots of ads and we have specials."

But DuPhily also said, "I think it's a shame there is so much food on Main Street instead of other types of businesses."

Al Decesaris, owner of the Brickyard Tavern & Grill, said the first year was difficult for the restaurant, but the past year has been better. "We're very pleased, especially being so close to the University of Delaware campus," Decesaris said. "I went to school here and I've been (in Newark) for seven years."

Decesaris said the Galleria was the best location in Newark. "I think the Galleria ignited a lot of growth," he said. "It's been good for the community and the university as well."

Peter Weisbord, owner of Salad Works, said even though the students are gone, business from adults and people at other local businesses hasn't slowed much.

"You can't go wrong (in the Galleria), this location is my advertisement," he said. "At lunch we're always packed."

Weisbord added,"I think the new WSFS/UD-1 card will also help business. Kids have to use pocket money for things other than food."

The Lux opened just five months ago. "Business is good and it'll get better in September," said manager AnaH. Russel. "The location is great, we're right on the UD campus.'

The salon was formerly located at Liberty Plaza on Kirkwood Highway under a different name and different interior design. "The salon's interior went from a classic image to industrial chic," Russel said. "It's a very artistic and comfortable atmosphere.

Grotto Pizza, considered one of the Galleria's anchor businesses, has grown into a mainstay on Main Street. "We're very pleased, business is doing really well." said general manager Adam Webster.

When September rolls around, the restaurant staff will be welcoming the students back with open arms. The location will no longer deliver pizza (see new Grotto this issue) and will foster a more student friendly environment, according to Jimi Snydr, owner of Colonel Mustard's which opened this summer said his business is a Delaware tradition. "We have been voted the best burger for six years in a row, and we have 20 different burgers," he said, "from the Yo baby to the Barbecue Thang." Snydr said he decided to relocate his business from the beach area and picked the Galleria because it is the most active place on Main Street. "We've been looking into Newark for the past couple of years - it was the wise thing to do," Snydr said.

The latest addition to the Galleria has its owner's sense of humor adorning the walls but he's serious about business. "Since we've opened the response to Colonel Mustard's has been outstanding," he said. "All the businesses here complement each other with the food we serve and the quality here is excellent." Snydr said when school starts the store will be open from 10 a.m. until 3 a.m. "And I expect the place to be packed from open to close," he

P stands for parking complaints

ESPITE a generally upbeat forecast for Main Street in general and their own businesses in particular, the one complaint heard at new and old locations was parking.

Donna DuPhily at Donna's Delights said one problem with being in the two-year-old Galleria is the cost of parking. DuPhily said validation tickets just went up $5 a book. "We have to buy books of the validation stickers," she said. "It used to be $20, now its $25, and a lot of that hurts Newark."

She said while the college kids frequent Main Street, the townspeople are less likely to because of the parking situa-

Dwayne Adkins of Grotto Pizza cited parking and traffic as part of the reason that company opened a second store this month in College Square Shopping Center. (See page 5, this issue).

Saladworks owner Peter Weisbord's only complaint about being a business on Main Street was parking. "The city should buy land and build a multi-level parking garage," Weisbord said. "Let people that have been residents for one year or longer use it exclusively."
Weisbord added. "If the parking situation doesn't change we may have to raise our prices."

Down the street at the barely one-year old Astra Plaza, most complaints that the business owners expressed were over parking. "The Plaza is filling up," said Renee White, co-owner of Campus Surf. "Parking is a big issue - they should have a mandatory lot." She said if people who park in the lot should be patrons of Astra Plaza or else get towed. White explained that because people who aren't shopping at Astra Plaza park in its lot, there isn't enough parking for

"If I could wish for anything, I'd wish for a municipal lot in the area (near the Plaza)," said Rich Hanel of You've Been Framed. "People abuse this lot, people park in the lot and take spaces for retail establishments." He explained that when he relocated his business from the building next door, having a lot with free parking was a big draw for him.

We didn't feel it as much as other stores at first, because our customers are in and out of here in eight minutes," said Ed Reith, owner of DP Dough around the corner from Hanel, "but parking is definitely a problem."

Reith said with a bigger lunch crowd now, they are starting to notice a few draw-

According to Astra Plaza owner Gus Tsonias, a parking monitor will be hired as of Sept. 1 to watch the lot. "Anyone who parks in the lot will come here to shop or else get towed," Tsionas said.

White and Kemple said overall they are thrilled to have a store with a location on campus and the community has responded to them well.

Adrienne Moore, mother and employee of Georgette Poulous who owns Little Green Drinks, said the store has been busy during their first few weeks. "On Sunday when we were open from 8 to 6, we never stopped until close," Moore said. "People in Newark want some really good home cooked food. Everything (here) is fresh and mostly organic.'

Moore said when the university students return to campus she expects about five times the customers they have now. "The big thing is how to handle it," she said. "We have a lot of young people here now into health.'

Mark Hutton's beauty retail store, which also contains an instore salon, is among the latest additions to the row of shops. The University of Delaware graduate said that there is no one else in this area with his concept.

Although his store contains a salon, Hutton wanted to give more than just perms and hair cuts to his clients."We want to do a lot of retail," he said.

Hutton said he was interested in opening his store in the Astra Plaza location because it was new, and he felt the customer traffic at that location was imperative to his business. "I knew Newark and the draw it Rich Hanel, owner of You've Been Framed is no stranger to business on Main Street.

"We've been next door since 1980," he said. "We moved for two reasons: better exposure than the building we were in which is set back too far, and with the town growing the way it is, we thought we should stay here but we wanted to create a presence.

Hanel also said the business wasn't making the best of the space it had previously. "The other place was actually larger," he said, "But we have a gallery sale every summer and this summer (at the new store) was the biggest we've ever Hanel added. "In general I'm real pleased with the move. I like the atmosphere and the feeling of being on Main Street.'

Al Carlson, owner of Wings To Go, said there are actually five businesses in his store location, Wings to Go, Freddy's Roast Beef, Fruit Freeze, Wraps To Go and this week they will add Freddy's Salads.

Since opening in November, business is picking up. "We're doing quite well (during the summer) without students," said Carlson who added he also does lunches for local businesses. "We do very good business in the community. We'll certainly more than have business when students get back'

As for the location of his store Carlson said, the store is in a beautiful location, but there's not a lot of foot travel that comes past Klondike Kate's. "Now more businesses are open here and it looks more alive," he said. "With all of the new (apartment) developments we'll be accessible and we'll be incorporated into the campus."

Second Grotto Pizza opens in Newark

New store located in College Square

Grotto's second Newark pizza shop was off to a flying start in its first week. Eager customers lined up out to the sidewalk on the evening of Friday, Aug. 7, at the new store in the College Square Shopping Cen-

With one restaurant already operating on Main Street since 1996, Grotto staff said the second store was opened in order to better serve the area. "We felt it would be the best thing to open up another location due to the parking and traffic constraints on Main Street," said Dwayne Adkins, manager at the Adkins said factors ranging from parking to proximity to the University of Delaware campus detracted from family patronage at the restaurant's previous location.

In addition, delivery for both locations will operate from the new site to improve service as well. "When someone called for an order previously, it increased delivery time to have to go in and out of the parking lot behind the Galleria," said Adkins. "This location will better serve customers of the area."

Adkins concluded, "Business has been good so far, and we're pleased with turnout. We're looking forward to capturing the family market here in eastern Newark.'

EDUCATIONAL PERSPECTIVES

Barring a salary raise, you can raise the bar

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

ecently, there has been a plethora of articles, in such notable publications as the Philadelphia Inquirer and Time magazine, lamenting the state of mediocrity that exists in the teaching profession. Some examples cited include mass failures in standardized certification tests from Massachusetts to Virginia, half the teachers of math or science in California Bartley have no background in their subject area, and nationwide, 20% of high school teachers lack even an undergraduate minor in their field of "expertise."

Of course, all the articles have solutions to this problem of mediocrity. Typically these solutions are offered by politicians, businessmen, journalists, and any other "education experts" with access to a public forum. I will summarize the solutions so that you do not have to bother going out to the garage to dig out old issues of Time or pull newspapers from the bottom of the bird cage. The problem of mediocrity in teaching can be solved by making it harder to be a teacher! Make entrance qualifications to teaching programs more difficult. Prospective teachers must have a "B" or better in their subject area classes. Raise the bar! Get rid of tenure to be able to fire more teachers who do not perform, and periodically make teachers take re-gone stupid on us. Finally, make teachers leap tall buildings in a single bound.

At face value, these seem like pretty reasonable solutions, except for the one about the single bound. However, in the very same articles that propose these solutions, the problem that causes mediocrity in the profession, a shortage of qualified teachers, is also stated. The shortage begins with qualified applicants to college degree programs, and continues through to the classroom. One of the primary reasons there are so many uncertified teachers in science and math in California is that administrators are forced to assign unqualified teachers to rooms simply to have an adult warm body present.

'Breathing?'

"Yep."
"Pulse?"

"Present."

"Go teach chemistry."

Now, to examine the potential effectiveness of the proposed solutions, let's match them with the problem. Let's see, there's a teacher shortage, make entrance qualifications to teaching programs more difficult. There's a teacher shortage, make prospective teachers earn higher grades and take tougher certification tests. There's a teacher shortage, make it easier to fire teachers. There's a teacher shortage, make teachers jump through more hoops, such as re-certification. The rhetoric from politicians and business does not match the desired outcome of improvement in the teaching profession.

To be able to enact solutions that are essentially designed to separate the wheat

Fireman's Carnival opens Saturday night

The biggest local event of the summer season, the annual carnival of the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company opens next Saturday night on the grounds in the rear of the old Academy building. The affair has grown from humble proportions during the past years into one of the largest and most important in the surrounding country.

Threat to kill Chief Lewis is brought out

Alleged threats to shoot Chief of Police Lewis, to destroy his own life and a desire to join his family at the New Castle County Workhouse, were weighed in the balance Saturday morning last by Ernest Frazier, 22 years old, of Wilmington. He finally decided without aid upon the latter course, walked up to Constable Ellison and asked the astonished officer to "take me to the workhouse." Two local youths claim to have heard Frazier make threats against the life of the officer, and reported their stories to Lewis Saturday evening.

The prisoner, after his arrest, told of his breaking and entering the pool room of J. W. McCormick, and taking the sum of 90 cents and a few cigars.

Federal funds may fall Newark's way

Newark, suffering from an unemployment rate well above the national average, may be in line for up to $1 million in federal money as the result of a Congressional override of President Ford's veto of the 1976 Public Works Employment Act.

The Act, subject to action by Congress under the Approriations Act, is designed to combat unemployment and authorizes a $2 billion grant to be spread among the nation's local governments for public works projects.

Police suspect arson in blaze

Newark police suspect arson as the cause of an Aug. 7 fire on Main Street that started at T.C.B.Y. Yogurt, burned Travel Travel, the travel agency next door, and an apartment building.

A T.C.B.Y. employee said four customers and two employees evacuated the store when the fire broke out at about 10:30 p.m., a halfhour before closing time.

Lt. Alex Von Koch of the Newark Police Department said the fire was most likely arson because some boards had been placed against the back of T.C.B.Y. and looked to be deliberately set on fire.

Maier to run again

Seeks another term in 21st District

State representative Pamela Maier (R-Drummond Hill) announced she will seek reelection in the 21st District.

Elected in 1994, Maier serves on the education, governmental accountability, land use and infrastructure, transportation, and labor committees

As chair of the health & human development committee, Maier was the primary sponsor of the Parents Right To know Act, a law that provides greater parental access to day care records and complaints prior to contracting for care. She also sponsored legislation which made it easier to terminate parental rights in cases of severe abuse or neglect.

Maier served on the Nursing Home Review Task Force which led to new state laws to improve long term care. She was also instrumental in passing the new graduated licensing for teenage motor vehicle operators.

Presently an English instructor at Delaware Technical and Community College, Maier holds a bachelors degree in political science and international relations and a masters degree in higher education administration from Oklahoma State University.

She and her husband reside in the Pike Creek area with their two sons.

Spence will seek re-election

Rep. Terry R. Spence (R-Stratford) filed for re-election to the seat in the 18th District that he has held since 1980.

During the recently concluded 139th General Assembly, the 56-year-old state legislator had more than a half-dozen high-profile bills passed and signed into law. One of his measures now allows police to crack down on the use of some previously unregulated drugs, including the so-called 'date rape' drug Ketamine.

Another law signed this summer limits patrons of bars, restaurants and taverns to one drink at last call. "It didn't make any sense to me to have people drinking large amounts of alcohol just minutes before they were being put out on the road," Spence said. "The House also passed my resolution forming a task force to take a comprehensive look at our state's drunk driving laws and offer suggestions on how they might be improved." Legislation he authored which has been signed by the governor, makes it a Class C felony for sexual predators to use the Internet to solicit children for sex.

"I'm proud to have served my constituents for the last 18 years and I hope they will continue to have faith in me," Spence said. "I look forward to returning to Dover and finishing the public school financing revolution that I and other General Assembly Republicans began this year."

In addition to his duties as a legislator, Spence is also the longest-serving Speaker of the House in Delaware history. He has held the post since 1987.

Spence is an account executive for Brooks Courier Service. He resides with his wife in their home near New Castle. The couple has four children.

State demands better teachers, unwilling to pay

from the chaff, there needs to be enough wheat in the harvest after the winnowing process to make enough teaching flour to go around. In other words, if educating children is as important as everyone says it is, the profession needs to be rewarding enough to attract the best and brightest.

The article in Time was all too willing to suggest that education and certification standards for teaching be similar to those for law and medicine, but failed to point out the "slight" discrepancy in average salary between the professions, or the ability to pursue professional growth. It is not surprising that economically distressed areas of the country that do not have the ability to pay a "doctor salary" to people in the medical profession have a shortage of doctors. Unfortunately, Delaware is becoming an "economically distressed" area of the country for teachers.

What are some of the incentives Delaware provides to improve the quality of teachers in the public school systems? There needs to be plenty since a large segment of the teaching population is approaching retirement age, which will create a significant number of openings in the schools.

Let's see. There's that huge 3% raise the Governor and the legislature enacted while sitting on the largest budget surplus in the history of Delaware. Better hire more personnel to handle the flood of applications after news of that gets out!

Unfortunately, that is not enough to keep pace with surrounding districts in New Jersey and Delaware. Christina School District also has a surplus in the budget this year, but it appears that there will not be a significant raise offered in the new contract proposal under negotiation at this time. So, I guess there will be no local angle to the economic incentives.

In professional growth, earning a master's or doctorate means absolutely nothing in terms of advancement in the teaching profession, and nets the recipient very little economically. A person with a doctorate earns less than $1,000 more than a person with a master's degree plus sixty graduate credits, and after fifteen years of teaching, cannot receive raises except percentage raises offered by the state or district which are applied to the entire salary scale.

Well, that's about it. In other words, nothing is being done to attract better people to the teaching profession. In fact, some of the "solutions" to mediocrity in teaching that I summarized earlier in this article sound very familiar because they were offered by our own "education experts" when the accountability issue was debated in the legislature. Until excellent teaching is valued, and by "value" I mean economically valued, the effect of enacting any of the so-called solutions is to exacerbate the problem, a lack of qualified teachers. If you are thirsty, raising the bar simply makes it harder to drink.

Aging Parents? Plan Now Prevent Worry

isiting my parents recently, we tackled a major discussion. I was sort of dreading it but I looked them straight in the eye and started asking them the tough questions about what they wanted when they got to that age we all dread thinking about. That age when we are no longer able to care for ourselves. I didn't want to wait for a crisis to occur and find myself trying to make decisions for my parents.

I just jumped into the discussion about the future with my parents. I wanted to do it now while they are still healthy and can make decisions for themselves. I went armed with a list of questions. Here is the list I went with.

Who do you want to take care of you if that becomes necessary-family, friend, neighbor? Do you want to move to my house or some other family members house?

By Maria Pippidis

Do you think your home is easy to live in? We did a safety check and made a list of things that will need to be repaired over time in order to avoid potential prob-

How would they feel about living with someone else, moving into a retirement community, or being admitted into a nursing home?

How will you decide when it is time to quit driving, stop living alone or make other major changes in their life? I really asked them to set up their own guidelines now will help when decision-making time comes.

I know my parents have a will and an advanced health care directive. I asked them where these were located and where their other important papers are.

I wasn't sure if they had designated a power of attorney so I asked them if they had done that paper work as well. This document will be helpful if financial matters need to be handled while they are still living and yet not capable of doing it themselves. As it turns out they did. They indicated that they had set it up so that two doctors would have to certify them as incapable of making their own decisions before it would become active and that in the event that it would need to be invoked that I should call the lawyer about it. This is a really important document and yet its contents don't have to be shared unless parents want to. I felt comforted that my folks had been so thorough in having their documentation done.

During my visit I also updated a medical history of my parents or other elderly relatives,

Newark High School cadets take the challenge

unior ROTC cadets from Newark High School successfully tackled a truly unique summer camp this

The U.S. Army Cadet Command offers a mentally and physically challenging outdoor experience each summer to any JROTC cadets confident enough to attempt it. According to retired Sgt. Maj. John Bigham, the local students accepting the challenge this summer included Shanaya Adams, the "Yellowjacket Battalion" commander-designee, Matthew Bogart, a 1997 camp veteran, twins Tameka and Tilesha Brown, third-year camp veteran Lauren Cleary, and Edward Chandler, William Foster, Geoffrey Hunter, Shan-non McClelland, Michael Meredith, and Brian Shripka.

The group was selected as the best-prepared and motivated from a much larger pool of applicants to attend the second year of "Camp Vigilance" at Fort Indiantown Gap, northeast of Harrisburg, Pa.

University poet is a Pew Fellow

OET AND PLAYWRIGHT Jeane Murray Walker, professor of English at the University of Delaware, walked in her house from her son's eighth grade graduation this spring and pushed the blinking button on the answering machine. "Congratulations! I'm so glad. If I couln't have won, I'm happy that you did!" was the message from a friend.

It was true. Walker had won a 1998 Pew Fellowship in poetry, one of 12 fellowships in various areas of the arts awarded this year.

"It's wonderful. It's the biggest award for poetry in the U.S. It's really astonishing that there even is such a thing for poetry," Walker said. "I've been a finalist several times and this year there were 500 applicants in the category. It was a surprise to be chosen from so many and I feel very grateful.'

Walker's latest volume of poetry, "Gaining Time," was profiled in a Newark Post article on June 19, 1998. Local poetry fans can catch her reading from the book at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 18 in 103 Gore Hall.

The goal of Pew Fellowships is to advance the artistic life of the artists who receive them. There are very few strings attached and no restrictions on what one can do with the money. One former Fellow, a jazz musician, used the money to buy a house with a practice room.

After taking the summer off from teaching to attend various writers' seminars and retreats, Walker doesn't have any specific

"It's always good to be back teaching, and the new script competition in the English Department is just in its fledgling state, I want to be here to see that through," Walker said. "The creative writing track really depends on a few of us and I have high hopes for the competition and that whole area.

She also will be busy outside the classroom. Walker has a new book of poems going to her publishers in the fall and will see UD's Professional Theatre Treining Program produce her new play, "Rowing Into light on Lake Adley" in January. She's also developing a play about Queen Elizabeth for a theatre in Philadelphia.

Grand Opera House prepares for another successful season

EN WESLER and his great staff at the Grand Opera House have been working very hard to get ready for the 1998-99 season. This week and next I want to share some of the excitement with you. I have selected programs to write about which I feel you might find interesting.

One of the greatest violinists of this, or any other, age is the first on tap. Itzhak Perlman and his particular brand of musical magic will be at the Grand Thursday, October 22, at 8 p.m. His technique is absolutely flawless, yet his programs always leave us with a sense that he is having as much fun as we are! His interest in helping the young in our world has endeared him to many of us, but it is his music that we be front and center in October. Perlman's piano accompanist will be Samuel Sanders.

Another October program might well be called "Local girl makes good." On Sunday, the 25th at 7 p.m., Wilmington native B. J. Ward will appear in her one woman show "Stand Up Opera." This ain't not never Music Appreciation 101! Ward is a rare combination of an outstanding comedian and an wonderful operatic singer. In her show she offers us a new "understanding" of opera plots and conventions. I doubt you have ever been able to gain such "understanding" in one evening. With all the fun, she does work in some fine aria performances as well. This is one of those shows for people who like and who don't like opera!

November will belong to the St. Petersburg State Symphony Orchestra under their Music Director Alexander Polischuk. Accompanying them at the 8 p.m. November 16 concert will be soprano Margarita Alverdian. The program will include Glazunov's Concert Waltzes, Tchaikovsky's "Letter Scene" from "Eugene Onegin," Rimsky-Korsakov's Marfa's aria from "The Tsar's Bride," Glinka's Ludmila's act I aria from "Ruslan and Ludmila" and Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade." Something for everyone on that Monday.

One of the few regrets I have from my spring trip to St. Petersburg is that schedules did not permit me to hear this orchestra at its home. Since its inception in 1969 it has attracted great conductors including Leonard Bernstein, Rafael Fruhbeck de Burgos (who will also appear at the Grand this season,) Simon Rattle, Yevgheny Svetlanov and Rafael Kubelik. Its repertoire is surprisingly catholic for an orchestra founded during the days of the now defunct Soviet Union.

The soprano soloist with the orchestra, Margarita Alaverdian, has impressive credentials including being a member of the St. Petersburg based Kirov (Mariansky) Opera Company which visted this country at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York this spring. A 1986 graduate of the Odessa Conservatory, she has performed in "Don Giovanni," "La Boheme," "Carmen," "La Traviata," "Il Trovatore," "Faust" and many more.

January is traditionally the beginning of the winter doldrums. But the Grand Old Lady of Market Street already has our first escape from those post Christmas blues already planned. And what a great escape it is. Let me tell you about it and see if you can guess what opera they have scheduled. It is a tale of revenge — of the most uproarious kind. All your favorite characters will be there, Gabriel and Rosalinda von Eisenstein, Dr. Falke, Adele, Prince Orlofsky, Dr. Blind and of course the two characters painted with the widest of comedic brushes, Frank and Frosch.

Well, that wasn't too hard, was it? Of course it is Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." The presenting company is the London City Opera. It will be on stage for one performance only, Wednesday, January 27 at 7 p.m. This is an opera which can be enjoyed by all those from about middle school up. It is an wonderful way to introduce your whole family

YLA RAFERT isn't one to limit her means of artistic expression, even if it involves using a chunk of downtown Newark sidewalk as her can-

Last month the 18-year-old artist took chalk in hand and garnered first place in her age category at the Chalk Festival, a new event at the Downtown With the Arts celebration sponsored by the Newark Arts Alliance.

As Rafert's artwork took shape, a passerby stopped to watch and commented, "Incredible."

Rafert had brought a photograph of a friend to use as a basis for the chalk portrait, and then her creativity took over. "I generally need some kind of reference to start with," she said. "(But) I realized the composition was wrong, so I gave her wings to fill up the space."

The artist said she found the most challenging aspects of sidewalk drawing are the colors are more washed out and the chalk smudges easily. She also noted that the pastels got used up quickly

Chalk it up to inspiration

"It was great. I had never done that kind of drawing before, and lots of people were looking at it," she commented, adding that free events like the Chalk Festival are a good way to get people of all ages involved in art. "I think it's important to let people know that their participation in events like that is welcome and encouraged."

KYLA RAFERT

Art has been a lifelong interest for Rafert because there was no television in her house when she was growing up. "My parents gave us crayons and lots and lots of paper."

Recently, the Wilmington Friends School graduate has been drawing and working in pastels, creating two-dimensional and mixedmedia pieces.

One project this summer involved an internship with the publications office of the University of Delaware to create an illustration for Sexual Assault Awareness Week.

Her participation in the arts in the Newark community also has included exhibiting in the Art Alliance second annual "Young at Art" exhibit, a show especially for 18-and-under artists volunteering at the Art House.

Rafert is interested mainly in human subjects or other subjects from nature because, as she describes it, "their lack of consistency makes them very flexible."

Sometimes she identifies someone as interesting and asks that person to pose for her; other times she'll start with a specific subject in mind. She says she does plan the composition of most of her pieces, but that the art often just develops on its own.

"For me, my biggest interest is to draw. I love the fine arts aspects - I just like to do art," she said. "After I do it, I can look back and see how I was feeling. I can see what was going on in my head."

Rafert heads for the Rhode Island School of Design this fall. "Doing art," as she puts it, is her top priority for the future.

She also plans to come back and defend her title in next year's Chalk Festival. Perhaps she'll do a selfportrait this time - complete with Professor B. Math program a big help to teachers and kids

By LAURA SANKOWICH

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Learning basic math skills can be difficult for many elementary school students. And teaching it is no day at the beach, either.

"Some kids don't respond to traditional teaching methods," said Karen Ernst, a third grade teacher at Leasure Elementary School.

Ernst, along with other primary school teachers in the Christina district, found when it came to teaching math their curriculum was incomplete; until they started using a teaching program named Professor B. math.

The program was developed by a teacher named Everand Barret to teach math to inner city kids in New York who were having difficulty learning. Ernst said, "I've been using the program for 4 years. I started to use the program shortly after I received training to fill in gaps that were missing in math education."

Professor B. mathematics is a way to teach children in kindergarten through fourth grade basic arithmetic skills. According to Patricia McNeil, one of the program's coordinators for the Christina District, the philosophy behind the program deals with making connections between math content.

Carol Allmond, a teacher of a mixed class of first and second graders at Brookside Elementary school in Newark, said the way the program is sequentially laid out allows students to see how the pieces go together. "They see the direct relationships between multiplication and addition and subtraction."

McNeil said, "The result of putting connections in place is an accelerated rate of learning." Connections help with assimilation which leads to retention, and "truth telling, or giving actual reasons why math problems are executed in a certain way.

With the Professor B. method, there is no memorization involved in the learning of math facts. McNeil said the focus of the program is to give kids mental strategies to solve problems. "Children don't count on their fingers. They give them a strategy for addition and subtraction and multiplication."

McNeil said when the program started, "Initially there were maybe five of us that were trained." There are now over 250 teachers in the district who are trained to use that style of teaching, 200 of which were just trained in the last year.

McNeil said, "With any math program you have to have basics, that's why this program is so unique, its like the trunk of a tree."

Allmond said, "Students really look forward to it because they achieve a level of success. There is high motivation for kids to be highly focused for longer periods of time and more intensely because it requires strong, quick responses."

She also likes using the program because it is easy to assess student progress. She said she found the greatest success rates with at-risk children.

Principal Elva Brooks, of Marshall elementary said, "I've had parents request that their children be moved from one math session to another to get this teaching."

Brooks added that scores for the math portion for district standardized test, the California Test of Basic Skills, have increased since the program's institution. "We just got the CTBS scores back and the students who I knew had professor B. teaching scored better than those who didn't," she said. "It was startling for me to see that there was a lot of improvement on CTBS test. It prepares them with a balanced instruction for the state accountability test as well."

Jason Baughman a kindergarten teacher at Wilson elementary said, "The biggest part of the program that I like is that you can teach a kid any part of the program and they would learn it. Parents commented on how still and attentive their kids were. I work with kindergartners teaching them in short bursts."

"Most of my kindergarten kids, 75% were into higher math skills, addition and or subtraction. Their parents were thrilled." Baughman also said many parents ask him for information about Professor B. math to help their other older kids."It builds a foundation for math," he said. "They learn their addition and subtraction facts, and multiplication and division builds on it."

UD's Affordable Composites idea earns national award

The University of Delaware's Affordable Composites from Renewable Resources program is one on the first recipients of the 1998 Innovation in Real Material Award.

Richard Wool, professor of chemical engineering, who leads the interdisciplinary ACRES team, accepted the award given by the conference for advances in "real" materials research or research based on practical applications.

Rustum Roy, conference chairperson, said this award is a departure form the usual recognition for abstract or theoretical investigation. He described the new award as an accolade for work that develops something practical, "something you've got to be able to touch and feel, that's not just on paper.'

ACRES specializes in producing composites made with soybean oilbased resins rather than petroleumbased resins. The program has already succeeded in creating a soybased resin composite that farm equipment maker Deere & Co. will use in tractor components nation-

ACRES is also investigating genetically engineered soy oils to insure more consistent high performance. In addition, the team is looking into composites made with soy resins and natural fibers, such as hemp, straw, flax, jute and wood making the entire composite biodegradable and inexpensive.

'Snail mail' resumes still preferred

Job candidates who want to make the best impression with a prospective employer should opt for a trip to the corner mailbox before faxing or e-mailing their resumes, suggests a new survey. While the majority of the nation's top executives were neutral on the subject, 21 percent said they prefer to receive resumes the old-fashioned way via regular mail.

The survey was developed by OfficeTeam, a leading staffing service specializing in highly skilled temporary office and administrative professionals. It was conducted by an independent research firm and includes responses from 150 executives with the nation's 1,000 largest companies.

Respondents were asked: "What is the preferred method at your firm for receiving resumes?" Their responses: mail 21 percent, fax 8 percent, e-mail 4 percent, in person 1 percent, don't know 2 percent and no preference 64 percent.

BP to purchase Amoco Corp. in $48 million deal

In what would be the biggest foreign takeover of an American company, British Petroleum Plc said Tuesday it would buy Amoco Corp. in a deal valued at $48 billion.

According to an Associated Press report, the companies intend to save $2 billion a year by 2001, mostly by eliminating 6,000 jobs.

BP said it will close its North American headquarters in Cleveland, cutting about 1,000 jobs, while BP and Amoco offices in Houston would be consolidated.

The new company, to be called BP Amoço, would be the second biggest gasoline retailer in the United States behind a joint venture that covers Shell and Texaco gasoline stations.

BP and Amoco currently have service stations throughout New Castle County. Existing BP stations would be converted to Amoco.

By combining themselves top to bottom, the companies are attempting a merger similar to those that have reshaped other global industries.

Such combinations had proved elusive in an oil sector that has been battered recently by the lowest oil prices in a decade and persistently weak retail gasoline prices. Until now, oil companies limited their combinations to refineries, shying away from outright mergers.

BP, the world's third biggest oil company, and Amoco, the fifth largest in the United States, said they are trying to get bigger and stronger rather than merely finding ways to weather a depressed and changing market.

"This is an aggressive move. This is not a defensive move," BP's chief executive, Sir John Browne, told a London news conference.

BP's New York-listed shares soared as much as 14 percent and Amoco jumped 27 percent in early trading Tuesday, before tailing off to more modest gains. BP gained $2.188 to $78.188 per share and Amoco rose $5.875 to $46.875 on the New York Stock Exchange.

BP Amoco would be based in London and still would be No. 3 in the world, but would be a much more muscular rival to the Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Cos. and Exxon Corp.

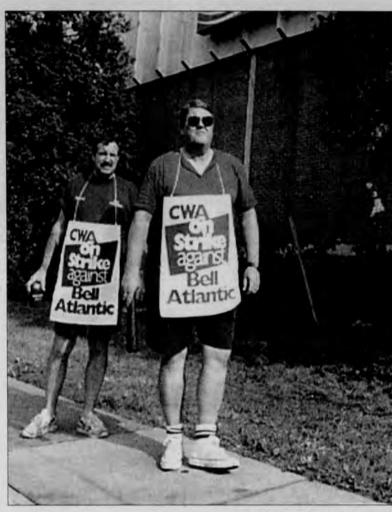

"There will be no weakness in the new company, which will have the top two international players looking over their shoulders," said analyst Fadel Gheit at Fahnestock & Co.

Other oil giants such as Mobil, Texaco and Chevron would be left far behind unless the deal spurs more buyouts. U.S. oil company stocks rose strongly Tuesday.

Previously, the biggest foreign takeover of a U.S. company had been the recent agreement by Germany's Daimler Benz to pay $40.5 billion for Chrysler Corp.

The Amoco headquarters in Chicago would become the group's U.S. headquarters.

Striking Bell Atlantic Corp. employees made their presence known in Newark this week at the company's facility on East Main Street. Dale Wood and Jim Casey, both of Bear, took a turn on the picket line Tuesday morning. Employees began returning to work later that evening after the two-day walkout ended.

According to Communications Workers of America president Morton Bahr, the union reached agreement with the company on a two-year contract that would increase job security and limit forced overtime. The strike affected some 73,000 workers in 12 Eastern states, including Delaware and the District of Columbia.

UD has preparatory computer courses

The University of Delaware is expanding its computer education curriculum this fall to include preparatory courses for students seeking Microsoft Windows®NT and Lotus Notes®certification. Windows NT is a popular computer network operating system. In conjunction with Rockey and Associates Inc. of Malvern, Pa., UD is now the only Lotus-authorized education facility in New Castle County.

"These course offerings reflect increasing employer demand for professionals who have mastered specific applications, as well as obtained the accompanying certification," a continuing education spokesperson said.

The 112-hour Lotus Notes curriculum includes schedule making, applications development I and II, and system administration I and II. The series is designed to prepare

"These course offerings reflect students for the Lotus notes certificreasing employer demand for cation exam.

All Lotus Notes courses will be offered at the University's computer training facilities, recently relocated to the County Commerce Building at 630 Churchman's Road. Other Lotus software courses also will be offered at the Churchman's Road site, as well as at the new UD Downtown Center, 8th and King Streets, Wilmington.

Local coaches leave mark

Behind every good player is a quality coach

By STEVE WESTRICK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

With the high school sports season just around the corner players and thus coaches are ready for competition.

Again, last year, local teams had many successful seasons. From Caravel's run to the state baseball title, to St. Mark's eight individual wrestling titles, winning has become a tradition for many area high schools.

Behind every successful team or athlete there is almost certainly a successful coach. We here at the Newark Post realize every coach is dedicated to their respective sports and student-athletes. However, we have chosen six area coaches who have exhibited the ability to build winning and respectable programs.

Steve Bastianelli-St. Mark's, Wrestling Age: 40 College: Lehigh University Years coaching: 18 Other sports coached: Freshman Soccer and Youth Soccer. Job: American History teacher

Bastianelli doesn't put a lot of stock in dual meet records. Still he has between 100 to 200 victories.

According to Bastianelli, there have been many highlights in his career. One highlight which stands out, was the first Spartan team state title under his reins, in 1986.

That year St. Mark's was battling with Salesianum (there was no dual meet championship).

Legion final an extra innings war

Stahl Post earns trip to Boyertown

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

In a game characteristic of the entire state championship series, Stahl Post nipped Post 1 4-3 in 10 tense innings Saturday afternoon at Wilson Field to capture the Delaware American Legion state title and earn a berth in the Mid-Atlantic Regional.

The winning rally started when Stahl's Randy Truselo, after being struck out, reached first base safely as John Sterling's curveball bounced to the back stop.

Truselo then stole second base and moved to third on the errant pick off attempt by the catcher. Two batters later, Brendan McElroy singled up the middle to score Truselo and give Stahl its second straight state title.

McElroy, who will attend Glasgow High this fall, is just one of several local players who were sprinkled through the rosters of both teams.

"The game got a lot more intense in the late innings," said Stahl's Davey Stevens, who was also a member of Caravel Academy's state championship high school baseball team. "It actually made it a lot more fun."

The two teams split the first four games of the best-of-five championship series but Stevens still felt his team had the upper hand.

"We felt we were in better shape pitching wise," said the left fielder. "They had used a lot of their guys and we still were in pretty good . shape."

Another local player, Nate Husser, pitched for Post 1. Husser had just pitched earlier in the week but came back with a strong effort in the final game.

In fact, Husser, who helped last year's Canal Senior All-Star team to within one game of the World Series, seemed to strengthen as the game went on.

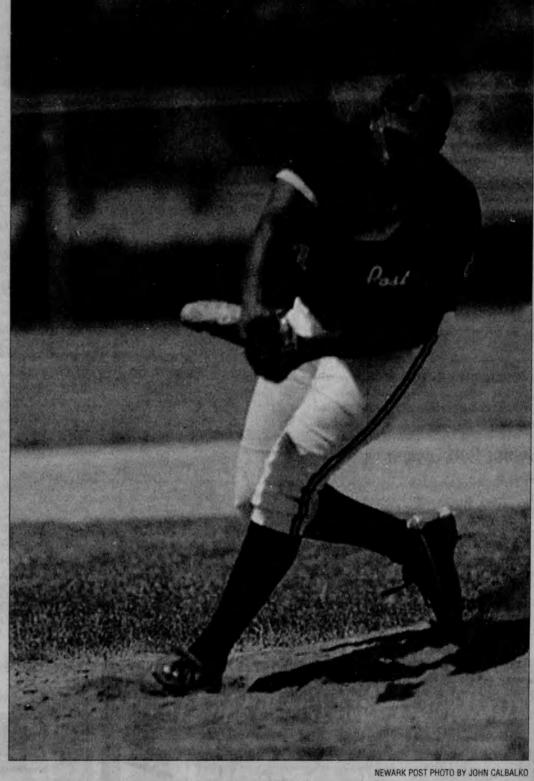

Stahl scored twice in the first innings on an RBI- triple by Aaron Lewis and a double by Truselo. Stahl picked up another run on a home run by Lewis in the third inning.

Lewis hit for the cycle and was intentionally walked during the game.

In all, Stahl picked up five hits and had eight base runners in the first three innings.

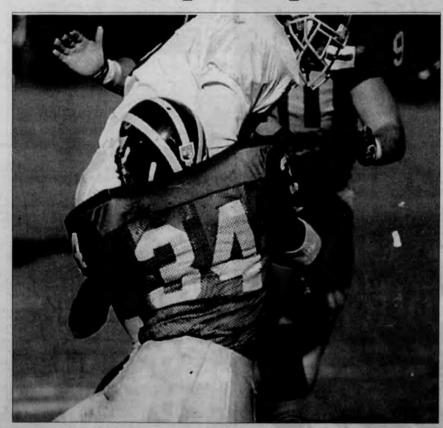

Husser, though, got stronger and allowed Post 1 to chip its way back into the game.

Hens open preseason camp as A-10 favorite

Delaware's Mike Furline is one of the Hens returning starters from last season. The Blue Hens opened preseason drills Wednesday afternoon.

Hens face Villanova in second game

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

As unbelievable as it may sound, it's football season.

The University of Delaware opened its preseason drills Thursday in preparation for its highly anticipated season. The Blue Hens, coming off a 12-2 season in which they advanced to the semifinals of the NCAA I-AA playoffs, enter this season ranked third in the nation and the favorite to win the Mid-Atlantic Division Atlantic-10 conference.

Delaware opens its season Sept. 3 against Massachusetts.

"Very few football games are won in rooms where people are voting," said Delaware coach Turbby: Raymond, who enters his 33rd season as head coach. "Both Villanova and Richmond are very good and William & Mary should be there too."

Raymond went on to downplay his team's chances.

"What it is really, is a tribute to the kids and a byproduct of the way we finished last season," the coach said. "But I think it'll be a very difficult season.

"We have a lot of problems. We have to remake the offensive line, get a running game and replace [Courtney] Batts – probably the best receiver we've ever had.

"We have a lot of work to do."

Despite Raymond's pessimism, there is a reason that Delaware is being picked so high.

The Hens do return 12 starters from last year's excellent team including both quarterbacks and a large stable of running backs. Eddie Conti returns from his knee injury and should fill Batts' shoes. The tight end position is well-manned with former Newark High star Jody Russell expected to see a lot of playing time

Defensively, Delaware was hurt by graduation in the linebacking corps. But the secondary and the defensive line appear strong.

"I think they'll be a typical Delaware football team," said Villanova coach Andy Talley, whose team will try and defend its regular season title. "Offensively, they present a number of problems. Conti's back and their quarterbacks are very impressive and perfect for that Wing-T system.

"The Delaware football is always solid. They will be again this year." Delaware and Villanova square off in a huge conference game Sept. 12 at Villanova. One thing that may aid the Hens is that the Wildcats open their season the week before at the University of Pittsburgh.

"Delaware is the biggest game," Talley said. "That game will go a

Post 1's victory forces a deciding game

By STEVE WESTRICK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

After four games nothing has been decided in the American Legion state championship. Post 1 defeated Stahl Post 9-7, Aug. 6 at Wilson Field, to tie the series at two games apiece.

Post 1's victory set up a deciding game with the winner going to the Mid-Atlantic Regionals in Boyertown, Pa

Post 1 scored six runs in the bottom of the sixth inning. Stahl Post's starting pitcher, Randy Truselo, had retired 10 batters in order prior to the sixth.

Post 1's Jeff Rogers led-off the inning with a single. The next batter, Brett Underwood hit a hard, bouncing grounder just inside the first base line. The shot ended up as a RBI triple.

After a sacrifice out scored Underwood, Jesse Ohliger and Mike August hit back-to-back singles. An out latter, Bob Lenoir hit a double to drive both runners in. Josh Nelson followed with a RBI single to bring in the final run of the inning.

Those six runners gave Post 1's John Sterling the lead he needed. Sterling was installed for an ineffective Bob Lougheed in the fifth inning. He allowed only one run off four hits in four and a third innings.

Post 1 manager Tim Skirvin said he went with Sterling because he uses a variety of offspeed pitches.

"Both of these teams can hit the fastball," Skirvin said. "But if you have a quality junk ball pitcher like Sterling, you can keep these hitters off balance."

Both teams scored two runs in the first inning. Both of Post 1's runs came off a monstrous home run, over the 330 foot left field fence, by Underwood.

Stahl Post scored a very unusual run in the second inning. After reaching on an error, Rafail Rodriguez attempted to steal second base. Shortstop Mike August tagged Rodriguez on the leg while he was still running. However, the ball spurted out of August's glove and into the outfield allowing Rodriguez to come all the way home.

"I tagged him," August, who plays for St. Mark's during the year, said. "He kept running and the ball came lose. I thought I had him tagged long enough [for it to be ruled an out.]"

Stahl Post scored three runs in the third inning. That lead would hold until the sixth.

"We don't get nervous," August said of his teams come back. "We need to come out strong [in the final game]."

Tubby says there will be no quarterback battle in camp

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A quarterback controversy is something no football team or coach wants to start the season with.

Delaware coach Tubby Raymond insists the Blue Hens don't have one this year either.

Nevertheless, the Hens do enter the season with two fine quarterbacks in junior Brian Ginn and sophomore Matt Nagy.

Ginn was the starter for 10 regular season games (and went 9-1) last season before getting hurt. Nagy saw action in 11 games and filled in as starter the regular season finale against Lehigh. He also played very well in two playoff games. Ginn started the playoff opener against Hofstra.

Nagy completed 52-of 80 passes for 721 yards and four touchdowns while Ginn completed 103-of 192 passes for 1,681 yards and 14 touchdowns.

"Let me be the first one to officially ask about the quarterback position," a reporter said to Raymond at last week's Atlantic-10 Media Day, echoing a thought that most fans have been pondering since the end of last season.

"Let me be the last to say that we have no controversy," Raymond answered. "We have two very fine quarterbacks and we'll take a look at them both in preseason.

"Nagy has a good arm and is a fine prospect. Ginn knows the offense very well and also has a fine arm."

Raymond went on to say that the presence of two such good players may cause an adjustment in his thoughts on switching players.

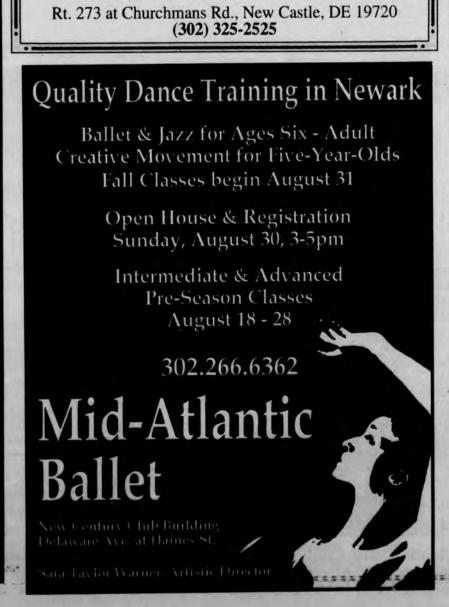

"You may see a difference in my attitude," the coach said. "I've never been much of an advocate on changing people. But I can say we have two very good quarterbacks and both will play."

Both apartment buildings will be available for Fall Semester 1998

STREAM MAP FOUND AND RESTORED

The recently published Stream Map of Maryland and Delaware resembles another map-known to Pennsylvania anglers as the "Lost Stream Map."

The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania" was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map. The map sold extremely well - until it was lost several yearsafter it first appeared in print. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates, declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Highee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in nonphotographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Then, by combining Professor Higbee's knowledge with computer technology-the Maryland/ Delaware Stream Map was created.

Why every fisherman and boater needs this map

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Maryland/Delaware is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This new 2 x 3 1/2' foot color map shows virtually all of the 12,000 miles of Maryland/Delaware streams, plus lakes. Now, overlooked streams and lakes are easy-to-locate on one map.

Five area coaches making a difference

COACHES, FROM 19

"All through the tournament we would go ahead, then they would go ahead," Bastianelli said. "We we're in the finals and we came head to head at the 155-pound championship. Our kid won the bout and we secured the [state title]."

Still, Bastianelli said he considers accomplishments by particular individuals to be some of his biggest career highlights.

'Sometimes it's a kid that won the state title but didn't have the best talent," he said. "Or sometimes they just place, but they work hard to get that place.'

Bastianelli said the most enjoyable thing about coaching is the teaching aspect.

"Coaching is just teaching," he said. "If you enjoy working with kids and teaching, you enjoy coaching. It's never the same thing, every year it's a different team.

"The great thing about wrestling, there is no professional side and it's hard to get college scholarships, so most people do it because they love the sport. It's that one-on-one battle in wrestling that makes it different."

At first Bastianelli didn't know if he was cutout for coaching.

"In my very first year I inherited a team that had a lot of talent, but not much match experience," he said. "I had to spend a lot of time on basic skills and it got frustrating. I remember calling my college coach and saying, ' I don't know if I can teach basic skills every year.' However, the next season, basically the same team had made such major

Mitchell has led three boys and one girls team to the state championship game, although he is yet to win a state title. Despite, these successful teams he believes the most satisfying thing is to have an team which overachieves.

One of the teams which exceeded expectations was this years boy's team, which won the conference championship.

Regardless of not always having the outstanding personal we have some years, we're still able to maintain an outstanding tradition of winning," Mitchell said.

Mitchell attributes this success to two factors he tries to instill in his teams: effort and team unity.

"The success of a team all depends on how hard they work and how strong they are. Do they check their egos at the door and work together?"

Mitchell said he has changed a lot in his 24 years of coaching. Like many coaches, when he first started Mitchell was full of energy, but didn't always handle situations correctly because of a lack of experience.

However, with experience, Mitchell has learned how to stay composed in tight situations, gaining insight to talk with parents. reporters and referees and how to deal with disciplinary problems.

"Coaching is a continuous learning process. If a coach isn't learning something every year, then something is wrong.

It has become almost commonplace for a DeMattis team to win a state title. It happened again this year, as the Spartan boys took home the championship. That title gave DeMattis seven championship

"At St. Mark's we've been real fortunate to get great kids that work hard and are good people," DeMattis said. "You have to have those types of kids to win, and we've had a lot of them."

DeMattis listed the seven title games as highlights of his career. However, he said coaching the large number of hard working, respectable students was more of a

STEVE BASTIANELLI

Lou Bender-Hodgson, Basketball Age: 60

College: West Chester Years Coaching: 34, 29 on the high school level Other Sports Coached: Football, Soccer, baseball Job: Driver's education for New Castle Vocational district.

Bender performed perhaps the best year of coaching this area as seen in a long time. Before the season started, Hodgson's state player of the year, Lloyd Price, transferred to a private academy. Still, Bender led the Silver Eagles to a 10-0 start, as the team was ranked number one in the state.

Then mid-way through the season, Hodgson lost its leading scorer and two top reserves to grades. Despite having virtually no depth, Hodgson advanced to the state tournament's semi-finals.

Bender contributes most of this year's success to the 'we' philosophy.

"We buy shirts that say 'we' on
"We talk about them," Bender said. "We talk about DeMattis said he does not we. No one is allowed to talk in the first person singular. I think it really brings the team together and it has carry-over value [after basketball]. Many of these kids will have to work with many people of different values and races when they get out of school, and this gives them a team philosophy.'

The coaching staff does not escape the 'we' philosophy. Benders four assistant coaches John French. Gregg Browning, Rob Williams and Jeff Goff, all had input during varsity games. In addition, all five coaches, including Bender, took turns coaching the freshman team.

Bender said he loves changing kids minds about themselves.

The most enjoyable thing about coaching] is the great feeling you get when you see kids that doubt themselves learn what they can do," he said. "It's great to see their eyes light up."

Bender feels the lessons learned in any sports arena can carry over to

"Through sports I think kids learn at an early age how to deal with the full court press of life.

"A lot of times when kids step off that [graduation] stage they have no idea what they're getting into. We hope we have given these kids some idea of what they need in life to be successful."

Butch Simpson- Newark, Football Age: 50

College: Indiana University of Pennsylvania

Years Coached: 29 Other Sports coached: Basketball, Baseball

Job: Drivers education teacher

In his 21 years as the Yellowjackets' head coach, Simpson has won three state titles and appeared in another three championship games. The last state title came this year with a 7-0 victory over William

"I love competition," Simpson said. "That part of the game has always remained very exciting to me. I also really love putting the game plan together each week. And of course nothing is like the relationship you have with the players."

According to Simpson, one of the things he is most proud of is the unity among the coaching staff.

"We have had very little turn over on the staff during my years here," he said.

Offensive line coach Doug Hunt has been on the staff since Simpson began. In addition, four former players are presently working as assistant coaches.

It is the dedication of these assistants which have enabled the program to be successful, Simpson said.

"I am very much overwhelmed by our assistant coaches dedication to the program and community. For them it's more than a job, it's a pas-

Simpson believes his own role is to put the players in the right position to be successful.

"Being a veteran coach I'm sure I've changed over the years without even knowing it," Simpson said. "When I was younger I was more hands on and aggressive. Now I'm, more of the philosopher type. I do more through conversation [with the players], and count on my assistants to teach and provide the energy during practice.'

On average, Newark, each season, sees several of its players extend their careers to the college level. This year is np exception as four players have decided to play college football. An accomplishment which Simpson feels reflects positively on the program.

"Our hope would be, one of the reasons so many of our players decide to continue onto the next level of football is because they have had a positive experience playing football on the high school level," he said.

New Castle County Land Use Department gets new head

Shawn P. Tucker has been appointed general manager of the New Castle County Department of Land Use. He replaced Edward J. O'Donnell who retired in July after 24 years with the County.

Tucker, an attorney, was a leading participant in the creation of the Unified Development Code, the landmark land use reform package approved by County Council in December.

He first joined the County's Law Department in April of 1997 as an assistant county attorney. Prior to then he was a prosecutor with the State Department of Justice and had a judicial clerkship with the Delaware Superior Court.

The County Department of Land Use currently has a staff of 91 employees and an annual operating budget of $6.4 million dollars. The land use department performs the functions of comprehensive planning, zoning, sub-division review, erosion and sediment control, property assessment, building inspection and code compliance.

A graduate of the University of Delaware and Widener University School of Law, Tucker resides in New Castle with his wife and daughter.

Johnson named HBA director

The Home Builders Association of Delaware announces the appointment of Rick Johnson, manager of New Homes with Prudential Preferred Properties-New Homes to the Sales and Marketing Council as a director. Johnson is co-chairman of the Builder's Showcase. The Sales and Marketing Council is the marketing arm of the Home Builders Association and is responsible for the creation, implementation, and coordination of seminars and activities which promote education and awareness of the home building industry in Delaware. The Sales and Marketing Council also sponsor The Regal Awards for excellence in home building and new construction sales within Delaware. Johnson has been a licensed real estate broker in Delaware and Pennsylvania for the past 15 years.
