

An excellent elocutionist from Wilmington will give some humorous recitations, besides numerous speeches by real talent. Music will further enliven the festive evening.

We are sure that both old and young will enjoy themselves, and it is hoped a large crowd will attend. No special invitations have been issued, but all are welcome.

EDUCATIONAL DISCUSSION

MR. WASHBURN REPLIES TO MISS HIRSHENSON

A defense of the classics is not the same thing as an argument for the teaching of the classics, or for the attempt to teach them, to pupils who spend time upon them which should be given to other things. Miss Tamar Hirshenson, though she combines, with great ability, pleas which would do credit to the ablest instructors at Yale or Johns Hopkins and with consummate skill marshals the arguments which support, to the mentally reasonable mind, if not to the cultured, the teaching of the classics in the schools, is not in reality pursuing the discussion of the advisability of teaching the classical course, which is the subject of the general discussion, but is defending the classical course for itself, thus transferring the debate from its former ground to the question of the value of the classics. Arguing, not from the standpoint of democracy but from that of the leisure class, she leads the inquiry to feel that by establishing the value of classical studies to those who have mastered them, she has established the claim that they should be in our school courses. Against so able a debater, supported by a remarkable ability in English and so wide a reading, only the most direct methods will avail, and I call attention, as is necessary, to the fundamental fallacy of her attitude, which refines the question as to why the young should study that which they can not use in preference to that which they can use, and declines the issue raised by her demand that children be no longer required, or even encouraged, to spend their time upon the immortals.

On the safe ground of the value of the classics to people with leisure and with classical tastes, she can not assume to have answered the question which has been raised in these columns: the question of the advisability of teaching the classics to the people, to the masses of the average human. In replying to her I must turn aside, somewhat, from a discussion of the advisability of teaching the classical course, but I am so willing, for her contribution to the debate is worthy of the effort.

In speaking of our school days as "education," she says that what education might be to be is "The problem of the working man and the working woman." It should be apparent to her that to solve it for the benefit of the working man and working woman it must include the means of securing "bread and fire." Without these, education for the average pupil is not a help but is lost opportunity. The present classical course, in so far as it is taken in the high school, and by most of the students in college, is taking from the youths the foundation stones of the home and substituting "gingerbread" ornaments for towers that will not be built. Throughout her paper Miss Hirshenson writes as one living in an age where opportunity for remunerative work all the year, education, the luxuries of life, are perpetually within the means of the common people. She would have students ready to discourse not upon what happens, day after day, primarily, but upon what happened in days long past. In her praise of the ancient and the beautiful she neglects the necessary foundations of education, which are not mere reading, writing, arithmetic and geography but ability far beyond this which might be acquired in time now being wasted. In her supposition that "a purely manual and practical education fails to broaden life," she ignores the observed facts as to mental development. It is the sending of brain-impulses into the hands and other members which is the foundation of all intellectual vigor which is inherited and of much of that which is acquired, and breadth of view is born of mental vigor and sympathetic observation. No great leader ever arose from an ancestry that had not developed through the relation of mind and hand. Moses, Paul Jesus, Benan, Lincoln and the great of the earth were thus developed. She praises the Greeks who sang and carved, but whence came their culture? Whence breathed that fire and beauty which she would have America more than match? When Homer sang, blind beggar perhaps, through alien cities, when the Athenians gained leisure and expressed themselves in the glories of the Acropolis, from what classics had they drawn their power? From the goat pastures of Sparta and the laboring oar that drove their fishing boats among the islands. From the blacksmith's forges, the winnowing of wheat, the pleasant sounds of useful toil echoed the voices of the gods and walked the forms of Juno, Venus, and the divine Hermes. So with all great peoples. No classical lore of the olden times was the fount of their greatness but the practical manual work and practical education of their own times and lands bloomed in due time like a red dawn above the common earth. Breadth is not the product of the classics nor ever can be. The narrowest theologians who ever piled faggots and invented thunderbolts have talked Latin. In that tongue the Inquisition recorded its decrees and in that tongue Calvin wrote when he refused Servetus the loan of dry wood with which to be burned for heresy. It was the accomplishment of the New England loggers who drove freedom of conscience into the wilderness, of the president of Harvard College who made withness fashionable and of the men who voted the damnation of infants to be a part of the Divine satisfaction. Its study, as is the study of all dead things which exclude a contemplation and knowledge of present needs by taking the time that should be devoted to them, is narrowing, and substitutes a fashionable accomplishment for a spirit born of God and devoted to man. It is by the casting aside of the study, in years of vital value, of the things which were, and the assuming of a study of the things that are, that we are to make this nation great. Our present educators and board of control are the Scribes of the educational world, making much of the tombs of the Greeks and little of the homes of the people. Blinded by the light of an age gone by, they fail to see the promise of a sunrise in the age at hand. It is not by imitation, acquisition of ancient things, but by the development of our own powers, through manual training and practical education, that we are to become a nation famous through centuries for the riches of the spirit, the appreciation of beauty and the uniform prosperity which is the first essential of the Kingdom of God in any nation.

Our friend says we have not the right to spend millions of dollars and the energies of the most intelligent to rear a race of mere unadorned carpenters and cobblers. But she assumes that we have the right to spend those millions and those energies to instruct a mass of students so that they will enter life not even good carpenters and cobblers. And he who cannot teach his hands in self support; who cannot by hand or brain earn his living and maintain his home, is so lacking in the vital requisites of life that he can be neither truly cultured, truly religious, nor truly a man. The incompetent, whether he talk Latin or not, is already damned. Incompetents are, day by day, the result of the system our friend defends. It is a system hostile to democracy, hostile to art and hostile to religion, since it substitutes polish for ability, glow for discipline and justice attention for original thought.

She says that in life, hygiene, hygiene, spirituality, there must be something in common between all, outside the toilet-chest. Are the classics the best she can suggest as the common interest? Did not the shepherd David, the writers of the holy poems of the prophets, know these nobler things without having lived to the days of Socrates or Epictetus? Is there not as much nobility, as much truly artistic and spiritual life born outside the classical course as in it? It is not true, as she says, that "literature, language and pure science are the most prolific sources of inspiration and the best means for culture, tolerance and humanity." Father is culture, tolerance and humanity born of the quality of God in the soul. They are cultivated less by literature than by sympathetic association with humanity, not at all by the study of any language. Pure science includes more than the classical course, and retards culture when it is studied in place of something useful. It has nothing to do with tolerance. America has produced many poets, all of them second rate. England has produced two or three poets of genius. All of them, nearly, have as our friend says, drunk deep from the fountains of Greek lore and Greek verse. That is why many of them were poor poets and why some with genius have fallen short in spite of their natural gifts. Imitation is the Satan of literature. The great poet sings his own fields, his own traditions, his own living soul, clothing in words of fire the desires of his heart and speaking for a nation in the nation's tongue. To rescue mankind from the servitude, encouraged by the employing class because it stills the voice of the wage-earners' complaint and drives the passion of man from humanity to gold and symbols of ancient times, would be to lift up literature and to bring to our own cities words that should compare with any which graced the pillared doorways of the home-loving Greeks.

To answer such a paper as Miss Hirshenson has presented is beyond my spare. So packed is it with statements, some true, some erroneous, that every word calls forth a sentence, every paragraph an essay. But before a reluctant close I may call attention to the futility of the hope that any Montessori can make the dead past a part of the living present or so teach Latin and the classics that the average youth shall find in them a helpful guide to the life so close to him: a life in which he will need knowledge of living things and present facts and the discipline of actual contact with human tasks, far more than he will need the fashionable education of which he hears so little. It is pleasant for some to describe the advantages of the things which are impossible and to revere the classic when the time, the means and the inclination for their attainment are lacking in all save one case in a hundred, that it is idle to advise what can not be done. Education can not be acquired unless the interest of the pupil accompanies its requirement.

To the mass of the children and youths in college the classics can not be made interesting. To a majority of them they can not be imparted. To tempt them with the idea that they ought to be in fashion and take up their time with them is a social crime. These studies are not a necessary part of culture, productive of breadth, sympathy or progress. Those who study the courses as at present constituted and by knowing practically nothing of them save that they are bothersome, unless they have turned to good translations of the poets and writers they have stumbled tried to read in the original. If we were living in Heaven, with free rent, gold streets and no board bill, if we had no diseases to guard against, no children to provide for, no home to maintain, no politicians to deal with, if we had eternity for leisure and no humanity to serve, we might, quite exuberantly, devote a long enough time to Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Assyrian, Egyptian and Sanskrit to master each of them and be able to appear cultured at whatever corresponds to the literary teas given by the supposedly cultured here on earth. But as the problem of life is not to attain knowledge of how to talk about dead things but rather how to meet present problems we should devote our efforts in education to an orderly development of the mind of the young, along the natural lines, preparing the youth for the problems of home, church and country and encouraging the reading of good literature, translations and other, as a way in which to pass one's spare time. We should not forget that the struggle between those who advocate the present system and those who advocate an adoption of modern education to the needs of the whole people is an economic struggle. That the employing class are anxious to maintain the present study of the classics, not because they care whether any one is in school at all or not, but because such studies do not broaden, do not train toward original thinking, do not incline the student as does a study of practical life, to become a thinker who will demand more for his class. In an age of great production and wealth, making greater and ever greater profit with machinery and improved methods, a fact, we of the common people can hardly keep our children in school long enough to give them the primary grades, and in, to give further to get them into high school at all, or into college, they ought to be occupying their minds for something more vital than a discussion of Greek mythology or Latin roots. The smothering of original thought is systematic in all our educational institutions above the primary grades. Our educational system is stupid and must be replaced with something better. Whether, as is advocated by Mrs. R. W. Dawson, who recently wrote upon this topic and others, the classical course is optional, or whether it is compulsory as some would like it, it is simply impossible to give it to the average pupil, and in so far as it takes up time it is an impediment. In America the old theology, the old politics, the old industrial system and the old education is passing away. They will cease as rapidly as the growing body of thinking men and women take possession of the affairs of the country in the interests of the mass of the people and quietly take away the power of those who serve only the wealthy and the aristocratic. And the aristocracy of the mind which labels itself culture but is founded only on a talking knowledge of ancient languages, ancient art and general literature and knows not the culture which enables men to deal with the life of the multitudes and the art of harmony in home and shop and society and office, will pass away along with other shoddy imitations. The truly cultured are not the more so because they do or do not know the things of which Miss Hirshenson writes, but are such because they understand humanity as it is and something of the life of God in nature, society and the home. For as the true priest is not of the temples, nor the true prophet of a fixed altar so the truly cultured are not of the classical courses but of the wide life of universal humanity, refined through usefulness, informed by study born of interest in all that lives of man or bird or plant, and giving to those about them the active help that is the offering of a desire to teach the world the value of things that live and move today.—O. Marshes Along Elk River

The marshes along Elk River were alive with gunners during the week of the rail and road bird season. Most of the Elktonians have had fairly good luck but no favorable tides have as yet occurred. Reginald Constable and William Lang made the highest score for rail on the opening day, bagging 40. Road birds are quite plentiful, and rail fairly so. Gunners have had good luck with squirrels, the season for which also opened on September 2.

Honor Revolutionary Hero

One of the most stirring tales of the American Revolution is that of the march of Gen. Nicholas Herkimer and his volunteer troops to the relief of the besieged Fort Stanwix on the New York frontier. Fourteen bronze tablets, set in huge boulders, have been erected this summer to mark the forty miles of that memorable march, and the spot where the patriot leader fell, mortally wounded, at the moment of victory.

Christmas Seals For 1912

Although it is still a long way to Christmas, the designs for the 1912 Red Cross seals are already made. They show a picture of Santa Claus framed in a wreath of holly. About thirty-two million seals were sold last year; and in the four years since the happy idea was adopted, the income from this humble source has been almost a million dollars, all of which has been devoted to the fight against tuberculosis.

Modern Fire Fighting

Steam railway locomotives as fire fighters have proved so efficacious on the Pennsylvania Railroad that that company has equipped 612 engines with special apparatus for use in case of fire. This fact came out to-day in a notice issued by the company.

The special fire fighting apparatus consists of pumps and hose attached to switching engines regularly used in switching cars. The crews of these engines are systematically trained as fire fighters to put out promptly any fires that might occur in the hundreds of cars out of reach of city fire departments.

The yards are divided into districts, numbered as are fire alarm boxes in cities. When a fire is discovered, the nearest switch tower is notified and alarm whistles are blown throughout the yard limits. By a code of signals, engineers of locomotives within the yard can tell from the whistles just where the fire is.

Each engine is uncoupled from its draft of cars as soon as the latter can be placed where they will not obstruct main tracks. Yard masters and train directors give necessary orders to provide a clear track to the engine. A clear track to the scene of the fire. Almost before the locomotives are uncoupled, signals are set indicating the routes by which to reach the fire, and by the time they arrive their crews have pumps unlimbered ready to work and hose ready to unroll. In the fire organization the Assistant Yard Master acts as chief, and gives general directions both in fire fighting and in drills. The conductor of each train crew acts as foreman of that crew, the flagman looks after unrolling and connecting the hose, and the two brakemen act as nozzlemen and direct the stream.

At a fire which occurred near the gas tank under a passenger car, the first engine was coupled up ready to act within two minutes after the alarm was sounded, while within seven minutes nine engines were on the scene.

The locomotives equipped for fire fighting service are divided as follows on the lines East of Pittsburgh and Erie: New Jersey Division, 216; Eastern Pennsylvania Division, 110; Western Pennsylvania Division, 131; Northern Division, 17; Erie Division and Northern Central Railway, 35; Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad, 30; and Philadelphia Terminal Division, 73.

Indicative of the effectiveness of locomotives as fire engines is the fact that in the past four years 153 fires on Pennsylvania Railroad property have been extinguished by them.

The Nut Crop in Delaware

The nut crop of Delaware has become a factor, commercially speaking, in lower Delaware, within the past few years, and the prospect this season is for a record breaking yield. All these trees are laden with nuts and the nut growers should get a good sum from the sale of them.

The large English walnut trees on the farm of John H. Herring, near Milford, will not lose much money if the prices which prevailed last fall are realized. William Hammond, another Milford farmer, has about twenty acres planted in nuts, all of which have been attended to and which give promise of returning good money. His orchards comprise English walnuts, chinquapins, chestnut, Japanese walnuts, which grow in large clusters, pecans, butter nuts, and others just as prolific. Clarence Emory has a large field of nuts in which every tree is loaded. Not only are the cultivated groves well loaded with fruit but the large woods in that vicinity are equally well set as their more fortunate neighbors.

Elkton Gun Club Meet

H. Linn Worthington, the noted trap shot of Rising Sun, will direct the first annual tournament of the Elkton Gun Club, to be held on its grounds on Tuesday, October 3. There will be ten regular events of 15 targets each. 01.40 entrance fee in each event which includes cost of targets. Entrance for the Squier Money Back System, $1.00. The Rising Sun, Chesapeake City and Elkton Club will compete in a ten men County team race at five cent targets for each man. Entrance $1.00.

ORGANIZATION FOR FARMER

The following interesting article from the Farm Journal was written by Professor Conwell of Camden, Del. Prof. Conwell will be remembered here as the Professor of Latin at Delaware College. He is now a prominent farmer of Kent County, keenly alive to the interests of all phases of agriculture. As a member of the last session of the Legislature Prof. Conwell often spoke of organization as the greatest need of the Delaware farmer.

The farmer is already getting oceans of advice. If it is good advice, the more the better, on the principle of "line upon line, and precept upon precept." He is already getting floods of information. It is pouring upon him in torrents from the Department of Agriculture, from agricultural colleges, farmers' institutes, various kinds of agricultural and horticultural societies, from thousands of professors, lecturers, experimenters and demonstrators; in pamphlets, circulars and bulletins.

Much of that information is valuable, and probably the farmer should not kick, despite the fact that it all tends to increase competition over production, lower prices for farm product, higher prices and more worthless farm labor, and higher prices for what the farmer has to buy. And, of course, it should be borne in mind that this agricultural propaganda is not primarily a farmers' movement, and that it is benefiting others more than it benefits the farmers. Indeed, it is a debatable question whether it is not doing the farmer more harm than good.

But it can, at least, be safely said that there is one thing the farmer needs more than he needs additional information—and that is organization. Of the one hundred and one blessings that organized agriculture could bestow, attention is asked to five of them:

1. It would put more farmers in Congress. How humiliating to intelligent farmers in this supposed-to-be representative government, that there are so few farmers in Congress! The railroads and trusts have probably fifty to represent them, where there is one farmer. This fact is full of peril to the farmer; and means for him, if it continues, even less profit from his farm, still fewer comforts to his home, more patches on his pants and sooner or later—as in certain European countries—"peasant" and "serf" as his titles of honor.

2. It would make it impossible for any man in this country hereafter to get his clutches on hundreds of millions and leave it to his children and grandchildren, either as a means for the display of folly or as a weapon whereby to help subjugate the nation to the yoke of plutocratic oligarchy.

3. It would bring producer and consumer closer together and thereby remedy existing conditions under which the average consumer can hardly live because of the high price of farm products, and the average farmer can hardly live because he has difficulty in getting enough out of his crops to meet expenses.

4. It could reduce the number of offices and the salaries attached to them with their never-ending increases and thereby head off monarchical salaries and conditions, and help to bring it about that the average intelligent and capable farmer could get as much out of his business as the average politician and others now get out of theirs.

"Harriett and I," as Judge Biggle sometimes says, "were talking the other evening about a neighbor of ours—an intelligent and very industrious man, and a good farmer of no bad or expensive habits. He had been farming for forty years and had saved in that time, as we estimated, about $4,000. At the same time we called to mind an unprincipled politician who was getting more than that sum per seat. As the 'melancholy Dane' remarked on one occasion, there is something 'rotten in Denmark' when an unprincipled man, possibly by some mean or unpatriotic act, can get as much in a year as an intelligent, industrious and economical farmer can save in forty."

5. An organized agriculture would have it in its power to govern this country and make and preserve it in fact as in name, a government of, for and by the people. But an "advised" and "informed" but unorganized agriculture will accomplish nothing. It will become poorer and poorer; more and more the slave of its "friends" and "lovers."

PEOPLES' COLUMN

WHILE IS THE BOARD OF TRADE

Mr. Editor: "That Newark people are on the move is clearly shown by the big amount of business done last month at the P. B. & W. station. Reports show a sale of 2,245 tickets and the handling of 2,153 pieces of baggage."—From The Post, Sep. 18. Is it possible that the Board of Trade will pass this by unnoticed? With such a record breaking report, Newark has poorer service than was given her twenty years ago. Elkton, our neighboring town fares better than hustling, growing Newark. Is there nothing that will arouse the Board of Trade?

Through action by them backed by the citizens of the town, this train service can be improved. The railroads have always shown a reasonable consideration when requests have had public sentiment back of them. Let us get busy. Now is the opportune time, just before the fall schedule is put into effect.

As a regular patron of the road I ask the officers of the Board of Trade to call a meeting and take some action on this subject. The facts given in your news article with the backing of the Board of Trade, would bring the desired result. At least we would get service equal to Elkton, or equal to that given Newark twenty years ago. Bull Moose.

SUSPICIOUS EXIT

Walking up to the ticket window of a Market street moving-picture theatre last night an excited individual informed me young woman within the enclosure that his wife was in the theatre with another man and that he was going to kill both of them as soon as they came out. The stranger's declaration was heard by several persons, a crowd collected and there was much excitement for a time.

The young woman ticket-seller then notified the manager of the theatre, who mounted the stage and announced that a man was outside waiting to kill his wife and the man who was with her. The manager advised the couple to leave the theatre by the rear exit, and within 10 minutes 14 couples had hurried from the theatre by way of the back door.

*The morning was a bright September morn;
The earth was beautiful as if newborn;
There was that nameless splendour everywhere,
That wild exhilaration in the air,
Which makes the passers in the city street
Congratulate each other as they meet.*—Longfellow.

S. K. Chambers, real estate agent, has sold for George T. and Sarah Brown, their farm of 65 acres in Penn Township, to D. Linton Stephens of the same township, who will move there to April 1, 1913. Terms private. This is one of the old homesteads, having been built by Ann Pusey, a member of one of the oldest families of this section.

Also, for S. K. Chambers & Bro., their property (Kent Cottage), on West Summit Ave., West Grove, to Everard Conrad.

Don't fail to visit the Banquet Hall of the Opera House October 10th, and enjoy the good supper provided by the Ladies' Aid of the M. E. Church.

Plans are progressing for the State Christian Endeavor Convention which will be held in the Methodist Protestant Church, Laurel, Delaware, on November 7th.

NEW RULING CONCERNING DOGS

Must be leashed until Nov. 1

The State Board of Health met in Wilmington last Monday and adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas, It has come to the knowledge of the State Board of Health that a large number of dogs in New Castle County are infected with rabies and the same were killed; and that from the thirteenth to the nineteenth of September, a dog suffering with rabies, wandered from Montehann in Christiana hundred and possibly part of Brandywine hundred, and said dog was killed at his home on September 19; that the bacteriological examination of the dog's brain showed that he had rabies.

"This dog bit at least seven people in the city of Wilmington alone, and, no doubt, a number of dogs. On September 22, a dog was shot near Claymont and that an examination of its brain showed that it was suffering with rabies. This dog bit one child, and, no doubt, a number of dogs through Brandywine hundred.

"In view of these facts and acting in conjunction with the State Live Stock Sanitary Board, the State Board of Health, acting under the power given it in chapter 642, volume 19, section 3, Laws of Delaware. 'It may make and execute orders necessary to protect the people against diseases of the lower animals, and considering that a real danger exists from the causes enumerated, hereby makes the following orders:

"Wilmington, Del., Sept. 23, 1912. 'The owners of all dogs in Brandywine hundred, city of Wilmington, Christiana hundred, Mill Creek hundred, White Clay Creek hundred, and New Castle hundred, Pender hundred and Red Lion hundred, in the State of Delaware are hereby ordered to keep their dogs in leash or imprisoned from September 23, 1912, to November 1, 1912.

"All police officers of said city and hundreds are hereby authorized to shoot or kill or impound any dog found at large during the above named period, unless the dog is in leash.

The secretary of the State Board of Health is hereby authorized to advertise the above named orders in the papers of Wilmington and Newark.

State Board of Health of Delaware Approved: William P. Orr, M. D.

"Attest: A. E. Frantz, M. D. Secretary."

BASE BALL NEWS GAMES OF THE WEEK

Newark trimmed Northeast on Saturday by the score of 6 to 4. Geoghegan for the locals and Finn for the visitors, two south-paw, pitched the game and while both were hit hard, Geoghegan managed to keep the safe drives on him pretty well scattered.

Newark broke the ice in the third inning by scoring on Montgomery, a two base hit to right which Cameron missed, and Jackson's solid three bagger to left. North East tied it up in the fourth when a run was scored on hits by Reynolds, Middle and Finn.

Newark put the game beyond the visitors reach in their half of the fourth scoring five runs on timely hitting. Marney lead off with a well placed single. Del Willis fanned but Gregg dropped a Texas leaguer safe in right and when Reynolds dropped Finn's throw on Morris grounder both runners were safe. Johnson, Herdman and Montgomery hit in succession, driving in the five runs. North East scored two more in the fifth and one in the ninth. The hitting of Marney and Johnson were features of the game. The score follows:

Arrangements have been made for Newark and Oxford of the Tri-County League to play off a postponed game here on Thursday. The game will be started at 3 o'clock and "Vic" Willis will probably do the pitching for Newark and "Iron Man" Reynolds for the visitors. Because of the fact that Oxford has a chance of winning the pennant and there is a possibility of Newark tying Port Deposit for the lead was what influenced the president of the league, in ordering this game played off before the regular season ends, which is next Saturday.

Interest is keen throughout the circuit because of the close race and the game on Saturday should attract one of the largest crowds of the season. Many fans from other towns of the league and also from Wilmington are expected to be here on Thursday.

If Newark should win the game from Oxford and then defeat Elkton here on Saturday, the locals will be tied with Port Deposit, providing the latter club is defeated by Elk Mills on Saturday which many of the fans are predicting. If the games should turn out that way there would then be three teams tied for Oxford and Aberdeen are scheduled for Saturday, and the winner of that contest would also be in the tie. The standing of the clubs follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Port Deposit		17	10 .630
Oxford		16	10 .615
Aberdeen		16	11 .593
Newark		15	11 .577
Havre de Grace		14	13 .519
Elkton		13	14 .482
Elk Mills		9	17 .346
North East		0	20 .231

Some newspapers in the Tri-County League circuit figure that Aberdeen has won 17 and lost 10 games the same as Port Deposit, and Elkton has won 12 and lost 15 games. This, however, is not possible according to a careful examination made of games played, unless a game between Aberdeen and Elkton; which was credited to the latter club was contested and awarded Aberdeen.

The Birds in September

"Not only are we between seasons, but our country is a between country for many of the birds. There were a few weeks in May when our thickets and hedges were delicious with the love calls of hosts of dainty warblers. Out of the southland they came, clean coated, bright feathered, clear voiced, merry and active as they could be. Then most of them left us and went on to their summer camps in the Adirondacks and the wilds of Canada. Now they are with us once more, on their way to their winter homes in the southland—often indeed in Venezuela, Brazil, or even in the pampas back of Buenos Ayres.

"But what a change has come over them! The bright clothes are worn out or cast aside, the cheery melodies are apparently forgotten, the pursuits and flirtations are all over, and a quiet and sedate band of travellers they have become. The passage of these more extensive voyagers seems to set our own summer sojourners to longing for their winter homes, and one by one they will drop away. The martins, that are scattered in little colonies all over the countryside, will join in great flocks and make the excursion together. About the same time the Baltimore oriole will leave her pendant cradle and take her now grown children with her. The humming birds with their glittering crests will drop out, a few at a time, and cross the gulf to join their tropical cousins.

"Meanwhile some of our permanent birds are beginning to get ready for winter by changing their summer clothes. In the spring-time every one so well knows and loves one of our dainties little birds that he has received more names perhaps than any other of our feathered friends. We call him the thistle finch, the goldfinch, the salad bird, the wild canary, or the yellow-bird, as best suits our individual fancy. Bright as he was in his courtship suit, he now puts away his canary coat, and for the winter is quite content to dress like his quiet wife and his sparrow cousins. So it is that few realize that this merry bird, with his toboggan-slide flight, is with us all the year round."

Dr. Schmucker in "Under the Open Sky."

Convention of Postmasters

A convention of postmasters of the State of Delaware will be held in Wilmington on October 4th. Two officials from the Department at Washington, D. C., will address the convention on the money order and registry business. It is expected that Leroy W. Hickman, the assistant postmaster of the Wilmington postoffice, will address the convention on the subject of the proper preparation of rural carrier vouchers. All postmasters in the State whether they belong to the association or not are expected to be present. The convention, through the kindness of Postmaster Jester, will be held in the postoffice building. This convention is expected to be the largest ever held in the State.

H. S. Lippincott, Pennsylvania Agriculturist

As an indication that the Pennsylvania Railroad intends actively to pursue its campaign in the interest of better farming, is the announcement made today of the appointment of H. S. Lippincott as agriculturist. Mr. Lippincott has had charge of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Demonstration Farm at Bacon, Delaware, since it was first started.

Some six years ago the Pennsylvania inaugurated its agricultural work. It was the first railroad in the east to carry the gospel of good farming to the very doors of the farmers throughout the states in which the road operates. Since that time a number of booklets on agricultural and good roads subjects have been issued. Its most important movement was the establishment of the Demonstration Farm at Bacon, Delaware, where acres of supposedly worn out land have been rehabilitated, until today they are furnishing crops second to none on the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia peninsula.

The office of the Pennsylvania's agriculturist will be in Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

"I want to so live that when I die those who know me best will say, 'He planted a rose and plucked a thorn where ever he thought a rose would grow.'"

CHANGED ATHLETIC RULES AT DELAWARE

An Athletic Council, composed of two members of the Faculty, two members of the Alumni Association, three students, one from each of the upper classes and the physical director, as an ex-officio
member, will have direct control of all athletic activities, including the charge of the new athletic field, at Delaware College in the future. This is a marked change from the plan that has been followed for some years, which has been for the College Athletic Association to have control. This council, however, will be subject to the authority of the faculty and the board of trustees of the college.

The final assurance of putting this plan which originated with the faculty, into effect, came at a recent special meeting of the Athletic Association. It is the general opinion that the college sports can be managed in a better and more business-like way by a Council like this,
than was possible by a larger body. Now that the college is to have an athletic field (Joe Frazer Field), which will be among the best and most modern in the country, interest in sports has increased and there will no doubt be a marked improvement in athletics at the college
during the next year.

The faculty has already elected Professors E. Laurence Smith and C. A.
McCue, as its members of the Council.
The three classes will elect their members in a short time. It is likely that John Collins, president of the Alumni Association, who lives in New Hampshire,
will be allowed to appoint two members and then the Association can elect at its meeting next June.

The president of the Council will have to be a member of the Faculty so that honors will go to either Professor Smith or Professor McCue, whom the Council organizes. The faculty some time ago appointed Professor Syphard, Short and McCue, a committee to look into the matter of athletics. At a meeting this week
the committee made the following recommendations which were approved and which resulted in the radical change of the control of the college sports:

1. That the direct control of all athletic activities shall be vested in the Athletic Council which shall be subject to the authority of the Faculty and the board of Trustees.
2. That the Athletic Council shall consist of seven members chosen as follows:
Two members of the Faculty elected annually by the Faculty; two members of Alumni, elected annually by the Alumni Association; and three students—one from each of the three upper classes,
elected annually by their respective classes.
3. That the Physical Director shall be, ex-officio, a member of the Council
without vote.
4. That the question of the eligibility of all contestants in inter-collegiate athletic contests, shall be passed upon by the Faculty.
5. That the Faculty reserves the right to approve finally of all schedules
of inter-collegiate contests.
6. That the Athletic Council shall have charge of Frazer Field, arrange the athletic contests, reserve and disburse
all moneys, and in all other matters exercise a direct and authoritative control over all branches of athletics subject to the final authority of the Faculty, and the board of Trustees.
7. That the Chairman of the Council shall be one of the Faculty members of the Council; the Treasurer shall be an Alumni member, all other officers may be either students or Alumni.
8. That the Council shall, as soon as feasible, effect an organization, and submit its constitution for approval by the Faculty.
9. That the internal organization of the Council and its duties shall, in all particulars not covered by the foregoing statements, be determined by the Council.

W. O. SYPHARD,
Chairman.
C. A. SHORT,
C. A. McCue.

The students of Delaware College held their first athletic association meeting
last Wednesday afternoon in the Oratory.
The object of the meeting was to elect an athletic association reporter, whose duties would be to see that the result of each game in which Delaware takes part are sent to the papers correctly. Here-before many of the games were not even reported to the different papers; hence to avoid this an athletic association reporter was decided upon. He is to be a member of the athletic association and must accompany teams on all trips. This reporter will have charge of all of field news of the college. After quite a lengthy discussion it was decided to have the reporter appointed by a committee. Jolls, president of the athletic association named the following men to appoint the reporter: Jolls, chairman, Reek, Shalleress, Schlittler, McNeal and Connelley.

What the Bell Does for You

You are situated in a population group of approximately two and one-half million people of which Philadelphia is the center.
Within a territory of which the farthest point from that city is not more than eighty miles there are over 216,000 Bell Telephones—one to about every eleven persons.

This means a great deal to every Bell Telephone user. Today, to-morrow, anytime, the necessity will arise in your daily social and business intercourse to reach some one in one of these places instantly. You can do it, and a telephone call to the farthest point in this territory will not cost more than about fifty cents;
—if it is nearer perhaps it will only be five, ten or fifteen cents.

In the metropolitan centers, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and New York, there are over 750,000 Bell Telephones at your call.

The Bell System means even more than this. It is a progressive aggregation of Companies giving universal service between any point within the reach of the telephone voice—that means across the state or almost across the country. A comprehensive system reaching 70,000 points is at every Bell Telephone Sub-scriber's command.

Home Coming Week in Wilmington Extensive Preparation

Thousands of visitors will spend the week of October 24 to 31 in Wilmington, the occasion of the big Home Coming Week celebration. In view of the many visitors who are expected to put in some part of the week in the metropolis of Delaware, special arrangements are being made for their comfort. The hotels, boarding and lodging houses, already have begun to arrange for the entertainment of the visitors, and hundreds of private families have sent out invitations to friends and former residents to be there during the week of the celebration. It is understood that special trains on the different railroads
will be run from various points down
the state and nearby towns in other states.

Visitors to that city, it is said, will be given the surprise of their life. They will be received with open arms by the residents of Wilmington and their stay in that city made as pleasant as possible.

The decorations, judging from what the Committee has planned, will alone
be worth the price of a trip to that city.
Market Street will be one long Court of Honor, and the electrical illuminations will be something never before attempted in that City.

The week will be opened on Sunday,
October the sixth, with special services in all the churches. The next day will be devoted to a formal opening of the celebration by exercises at the City Hall
and Band Concerts in all the parks.
Tuesday will be known as "Children's Day", an elaborate program having been arranged for that day's exercises. On Tuesday night there will be a band concert, an elaborate open air moving picture entertainment and one of the biggest displays of fireworks ever seen in Wilmington, concluding with the ignition of one ton of loose powder.

There will be an immense Industrial Parade on Wednesday afternoon, with General T. Coleman duPont as the Grand Marshall. The Organized Militia of Delaware will act as escort for this parade,
after which a dress parade of the militia
will be held at Washington Heights. Wednesday night will mark the big parade
of fraternal, social and secret organizations in which 10,000 men are expected to participate.

The parade of the City Fire Department will be held on Thursday afternoon,
and on Thursday night there will be an automobile parade. Fun will run riot on Friday night when the Mask Carnival
will be held, and on Saturday afternoon
there will be a parade in honor of Columbus Day.

The Delaware Sausageband, one of the country's foremost German Singing Organizations, will give several free concerts during the week in addition to a number of other features that will be given in the open air.
GOODS FOR THE BIG TIME!

Cecil County Letter

The 25 acre Fowler property located near Elkton, on the North East Road, has been sold to Chas. Marcus for $1,700.

John A. Long, of Philadelphia, has purchased a portion of the Whiteoak farm at Town Point, Elk River, and on the bluff just below the point, will erect a bungalow to cost $10,000. A tower structure to contain a bathhouse, bath room, reading room, and observatory will be erected on the shore and connect by a bridge with the bungalow.

Among the recent real estate transfers recorded in the Circuit Clerk's office are the two farms of the late Thomas M. Ferguson, in the Fourth District, the Miner tract of 62½ acres, and the home farm of 76 acres, with improvements, to Harriett G. Ferguson, by George A. Blake, trustee, for $6450.

The ladies of Rock Presbyterian Church, near Fair Hill, will hold a "Harvest Moon" Festival on the church grounds this evening, with music by the Utopian Band. Ice cream, cake, candy and hot cocoa, and fancy articles will be on sale.

Ladies of St. Andrew's congregation, Andora, near Fair Hill, will hold an ice cream festival on its lawn, on Saturday evening.

William H. Warrington, with the aid of neighbors, has raised the framework for a large new barn on his farm, near Eder Station on the R. & O. R. R., to replace the one burned about two years ago.

The funeral of Miss Rebecca B. Steele was held on Thursday, from her home near Blue Ball, with interment in Rosebank Cemetery, Calvert.

Miss Steele, who was 68 years of age, died on the previous Monday, of cancer of the liver. She was a daughter of the late Alexander Steele and was highly esteemed by her friends and neighbors.

The Rising Sun Gun Club will hold its twelfth annual shooting tournament on its grounds on Wednesday, October 16. The program embraces ten events of 15 targets each, and a 50 target match for the Cecil Championship, closing with a special team race between members of the Elkton, Chesapeake City and Rising Sun Gun Clubs.

A deed was recorded in the Circuit Court Clerk's office last week transferring all the property and franchises of the Diamond State Telephone Company in the several counties on the Eastern Shore of Maryland to the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, of Baltimore, for $515,580.88 and the assumption by the latter of a mortgage of $500,000 on the property.

Miss Leatrice Biddle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Biddle, of the Elkton section, and Mr. John L. Bender, of Port Deposit, were married last Tuesday at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. David Devare, on West High St. Elkton, by Rev. E. P. Roberts.

Cherry Hill M. E. Church, near Elkton, is undergoing repairs and improvement, including metal ceiling and side walls, interior and exterior painting, new floors, pews and carpet and a new steam heater, all of which will improve the appearance of the building and the comfort of the congregation.

William Pratt, Howell Graham and Edward Dawson, three of last year's graduates from the Elkton High School, have entered at Delaware College. Miss Susan Bratton Booth, another graduate of the school, has entered at Swarthmore.

The September term of the Cecil Circuit Court, which was thought would prove quite lengthy, will likely close this week with the disposal of the cases on the Criminal Docket. But two of the many cases on the Civil Calendar were tried last week. Several marked for trial were removed to other counties in the Circuit. The Grand Jury found nine indictments:—one for selling liquor, three for larceny, three for burglary, one for assault and one for murder. In the last case, that of Tony Duke, the demented Italian, who shot Sheriff J. Myron Miller, in the jail yard at Elkton, last spring, W. T. Warburton, Esq., was appointed counsel for the defendant whose sanity is to be tested by an alienist who will give his conclusions at the trial of the accused.

The Maryland followers of Roosevelt and Johnson, on Monday agreed upon their nominees for Presidential electors as follows: J. R. Baldwin, Harford County; Charles H. Torsch, William Allen, D. W. Newbold, George D. Penniman and N. Winslow Williams, all of Baltimore City; F. Snowden Hill, of Prince Georges; and Dr. R. Lee Hall, of Wicomico County. Messrs. Penniman and Williams are Democratic converts and the six others were original nominees of the Republican Convention, held in May last, but gave place to out and out Taft men named at a second session of the convention held last Thursday week. The Rooseveltites will go upon the official ballot by petition. The "Bull Moose" campaign was opened in Cecil at Perryville on Friday night, at a meeting at which addresses were made by Col. E. C. Carrington and ex-Congressman Charles R. Schunn, a noted former Republican "spell-binder," of Baltimore.

The funeral of Mrs. Maria Groome Knight, widow of William M. Knight, and eldest daughter of the late Col. John C. Groome, of Elkton, was held on Sunday from her home, 2131 Maryland Ave., Baltimore, with interment in the family lot in Elkton Cemetery. Mrs. Knight and her husband, who was former State Senator from Cecil and later a leading grain dealer of Baltimore, resided long on the old McLane farm, near Bohemia Bridge, in the first district, but later removed to Baltimore. She was stricken with apoplexy while attending the wedding of Miss Julia R. Potter, daughter of the late William S. Potter, of this county, and Mr. Maxwell Case, of New Castle, Delaware, in St. Michael and All Angels Church, Baltimore, on Thursday evening, and died early on Friday morning.

Mrs. Knight, who was 70 years of age, was a lady of fine personal traits and had a wide circle of friends. One of three sons and four daughters survive, also a sister, Mrs. John J. Black, of New Castle, Delaware. Another sister, the late Mrs. Albert Constable, Sr., of Elkton, died in October, 1908.

There was a large attendance of lawyers from the several counties of the Second Maryland Judicial Circuit, in the Court House at Elkton, on Friday at the presentation to Chief Judge James H. Pearce, at the impending close of his term of 15 years, of a fine oil portrait of himself, as a token of their esteem. The portrait is of life size and as faithful as a photograph. It is the work of Waldemar F. Dietrich, a noted painter of Baltimore. States Attorney Albert Constable of Elkton, who will succeed Judge Pearce in December, presided at the ceremony. William S. Evans, Esq., the oldest member of the Cecil Bar, made the speech of presentation, and Messrs. William T. Warburton, Lewin W. Wickes,

J. Frank Harprier, J. Frank Turner, and T. Alan Goldsborough followed, on behalf of the bars of Cecil, Kent, Queen Anne's, Talbot and Caroline counties, with tributes to the worth and work of Judge Pearce. Associate Judges William H. Adkins and Philemon B. Hopper also paid tribute to their distinguished colleague, and Judge Pearce made a fitting and feeling response. The ceremony was followed by a dinner at the Howard House.

HOW ABOUT THOSE CALENDARS

Luck came our way last week when we secured the option on a fine line of Calendars for 1913.

The subjects are fine but where the Luck came in was the prices given us. They are such that we can quote you prices that really sound ridiculous. Of course, if you want some extra fine, say a sepia tint on deckle edged card, it does cost money—but you will not regret the expenditure made.

For real commercial purposes with a calendar for usage and advertising service, this line of calendars will take your eye.

We are enthusiastic you say. Of course we are. But we can deliver the goods.

Don't think of going out of town for your Calendars. Come here. We are going after trade in other towns. And we'll get it, too.

Stop in an select your subject. We will sell you exclusive right to your choice. Of course we charge you for this honor. But even then, we can give that Calendar agent a run for his money.

Augustus, the old fellow who started the Calendar business back there in Rome was all right in his day—but these calendars here would put him to shame.

Just come in and see for yourself.
