YOUTH HELD AS HIT-RUN DRIVER

William Blackwell Arrested As Driver Of Car Which Struck Paul Keith, Saturday Night, Traced By License Plate Found Where Accident Took Place

William C. Blackwell, aged 21, of 3100 West Sixth street, Wilmington, is being held in the local jail as the driver of the car which struck Paul Keith, Saturday night, and left him lying along the road. He will be given a hearing, and probably released in bond, tonight. He was arrested, yesterday, by the State Highway Police, at Number 2 station.

Keith, who is from Missouri, and said that he was working his way to New York, was found laying over a culvert alongside the Lincoln Highway, just this side of Roseville, about 9 o'clock, Saturday night, by Daniel Rudder, of this town. Mr. Rudder picked the man up and hurried him to the Flower Hospital. Keith, who suffered deep cuts and lacerations of the head and arms, besides severe bruises, said that a car had struck him and kept on going.

Chief of Police Keeley was notified, and with Officer Cunningham, went to the spot where Keith was picked up and traced the wheel marks of the automobile. While they were following the tracks, they found a license plate which proved to have been issued to Blackwell. The State Police were notified, and went to the address from where Blackwell had made application for registration. He had moved from from there, and his address was unknown. Yesterday, Blackwell stopped at Number 2 Station to inquire whether he could drive with one plate, and was immediately arrested. He was given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Thompson, and held for investigation. He is charged with failing to stop and assist a person injured by him.

Blackwell denies knowledge of striking Keith, but does admit that he bumped something and then ran over a culvert. At the time his wife was riding with him.

The case is called for regular hearing, next Wednesday night, when it is thought that Keith will be in condition to be moved from the hospital to testify.

WILL PREPARE TRAFFIC STUDY

Town Council Committee Will Give Traffic And Parking Problems Further Study; Street Work Nearly Completed.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Council of Newark, held on Monday night, the matter of traffic and parking regulation was reopened, and a committee named to give the problems further study and prepare an ordinance. The committee consists of: Councilmen Widdoes, Hubert and Wollaston.

Some months ago the Chamber of Commerce suggested a plan which provided for limited parking and angle parking on one side of Main street. This plan was written into an ordinance, but after making some tests, it was shelved on the grounds that the angle parking clause would not be feasible or safe on the present street width of Main street.

It was also decided, Monday night, to repaint the traffic lines at street intersections, and to paint lines parallel to the curb on Main street to stop parking at more than a reasonable distance from the curb.

Councilman Widdoes brought up the question of snow disposal and suggested that snow shoveled from sidewalks be piled on the curb rather than thrown in the gutter. It is probable that an ordinance will be drawn on it.

Merle Sigmund, town engineer, reported the progress of street improvement work, and said that there was little more work to be completed. A bill for the Olliver Contracting Company, for work during August, was ordered paid. The bill amounted to $8,108.82. This was the net amount of the payment to be made. 15 per cent of the total is retained.

The treasurer reported a balance of $32,878.88 on November 1. The Alderman reported $160 in fines and license fees.

The milk report, submitted by George L. Baker, milk inspector, read as follows:

Palmer, extension poultryman, and secretary of the show has distributed over four thousand copies of the 92-page premium list and catalog which includes the rules and regulations of the show, and the educational program, in addition to the names of the one hundred and thirty different commercial firms which have advertised their products.

N. J. Lannan, Elsmere, Delaware, who is secretary of the association is taking an active interest in the state show, and is distributing the catalogs to all those poultrymen who are planning to make entries in the exhibition department.

S. Palmer, Newark, Delaware.

ARREST NEGRO GUNMAN HERE

Local Officers Arrest Negro Desperado, Wanted In New Jersey For Attempted Killing

John Fountain, alias John Wilson, colored, was arrested in the Farmer's Trust Company building, Saturday night by Chief Keeley and Town Officer Cunningham. He was wanted in Mulliga Hills, N. J., for assault and battery with intent to kill. He was taken without resistance, and was unarmed.

The local police have been on the lookout for Fountain for several weeks, and he was arrested, when he went to the bank to close an account he had there. On March 24 he was involved in a brawl in a restaurant, and during the fight drew a gun and shot at one of his adversaries. A New Jersey State trooper tried to place him under arrest, and Fountain fired three shots at the officer, later making his escape. The New Jersey police finally traced him to Newark, where he had come on April 1. The local police searched for him, but could not find him. They did discover that he had opened an account in the Farmer's Trust Company, and they watched the bank for his appearance.

After his arrest the New Jersey State Police were notified, and Sergeant Kelley and Trooper Probst came to take him back to Mulliga Hills for trial.

New Post Office Ready, But Not In Service

Due to a delay in receiving definite instructions from the Treasury Department to turn the building over to the local postmaster, the new Federal Post Office Building has not as yet been put into service. Final inspection has been made of the building and it has been accepted by the government. With the exception of a few finishing touches it is completed, and ready for occupancy. It is thought that Mr. J. L. Oberwager, the construction engineer in charge of construction, will receive instructions any day to turn over the building to the local custodian, Postmaster W. H. Evans.

In anticipation of the increased service in the new building various promotions and appointments were made on the local staff, on November 1. William E. Morgan, city carrier, was promoted to a regular office clerk. Franklin S. Springer, city carrier on the lower route, was promoted and covers the upper route formerly served by Mr. Morgan. Edwin S. ## BIRD DOGS RUN TRIALS TODAY

Delaware Setter And Pointer Club Opens Annual Field Competition On Its Glasgow Preserve, Today; Trials Continue Tomorrow and Saturday

Field trials will be held by the Delaware Setter and Pointer Club today, tomorrow and Saturday, at Glasgow, on the 1,500 acre game preserve, which was recently acquired by the Club.

It is expected that the number of dogs competing will be in excess of seventy-five and they will include some of the finest of those of Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and some other states. A number of the dogs will be seen for the first time in this locality and their presence is being eagerly awaited by sportsmen familiar with the reputations of these elite of their kinds.

The preserve of the Club is a protected area which will be scientifically developed to provide the proper environment for the natural propagation of upland game birds and song and insectivorous kinds. Already numerous coveys of Bob White quail have been put on the land, while about 100 ring-necked pheasants have been released on the property. The latter birds were recently contributed by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company. They were reared at the du Pont experimental game farm, Carney's Point, New Jersey. While gunning is not permitted on the club preserve, it is believed that the overflow of birds during the next few years will provide good shooting on adjacent lands.

The Delaware Setter and Pointer Club includes among its membership dog owners throughout the entire United States. Officers of the Club are: Dr. William E. Harris, president; J. Paul Mullin, vice-president; W. S. Hadley, treasurer, and Miller D. Darrell, secretary, all of Wilmington.

No one can give more for your money than does Philco when you think of Radios. We have demonstrated ten sets since November 1, when our sale began, and sold every set. There must be a reason.

Let us put one in your home and let you be the judge. A few dollars down and a few dollars per month will make you the owner. If you are not entirely satisfied we will take it away as cheerfully as we placed it there. You are under no obligations of any kind to keep the set.

Parts for the Philco are manufactured in our own home town and every worker in the plant is a booster for Philco. Be sure you look the Philco over and hear it before you buy any radio. Make your selection now even though you do not want it until later. Radios are serviced with the same smile as our automobiles. Drop in our show room and see the different models, hear them play and talk over the easy method of buying. Or, if this does not suit, give us a ring or drop us a line and a salesman will call to see you at your home.

The Flower Hospital

On Monday, the Flower Hospital will observe its third anniversary of splendid and vital service to this community. Unfortunately this anniversary will mark a critical point in the affairs of the institution, for the Flower Hospital is struggling desperately to hold its head above water, financially.

The Flower Hospital is a private institution in establishment, but it is as public in service as any city or state supported institution. No case has ever been turned from its doors, and it gets the same quota of charity work as any public hospital. At present there is a poor wanderer lying in the Flower Hospital, the victim of a hit-and-run driver. He requires and is receiving constant and expensive treatment, for which the hospital will not be compensated. He is only one of many cases during the past three years which have received the same care and treatment that a private paying case would receive. The Flower Hospital has no wards, consequently a charity case, receives the same expensive privacy of care and treatment as a paying case.

The Flower Hospital has demonstrated its value to this community in terms of human life saved and mended. Miss Mary C. Ford, one of its two founders, has worked and sacrificed that the Flower Hospital could have the latest equipment, and that its service could be available to every afflicted sufferer, whether they could pay or not. The struggle has been an uneven one, for no general hospital in a small community can take care of its quota of charity work without some outside assistance. Miss Ford has come to the point where she must have assistance in order to carry on, and she appeals to the community for help.

Should the Flower Hospital close, it would be a big loss to Newark. It is a vitally needed public institution, which has been maintained by the heroic efforts of one individual. It is time that Newark helped carry the load, and it is hoped that some concerted effort will be put into immediate motion to give the Flower Hospital the assistance it needs and deserves, in order that it may continue to operate.

A Vital Service

It is gratifying to learn that this community is now being benefited by the services of the Associated Charities, of Wilmington, which on March 1, extended its service to cover New Castle County. Case work is being done in Newark by that organization at the present time.

The Associated Charities, which has a record of 45 years of fruitful service in Wilmington, has grown into a highly professionalized medium of social betterment, the scope of whose work has expanded to a point where it is a vital necessity to the life and progress of the community. It has grown far beyond its title, and its work only begins in bringing the emergency relief of food, clothing and shelter.

The members of the staff of this organization are highly trained members of a profession whose chief talent is practical sympathy. Their business is not only to save families and individuals from destitution, but to seek out and prevent the causes of destitution. To save a family is only the first step in its function; its real service is rebuilding the family by patiently seeking the causes of failure, and by sympathy, understanding and experience to help and guide the family to overcome these causes and rehabilitate itself by its own efforts. It serves as the constant friend and guide of the family in need. A friend with understanding, knowledge, experience and resources, who makes the problems of that family its own problems, and who tactfully prompts and aids in their solution.

The work of the Associated Charities is not entirely concerned with the home which is in dire material need. Much of its important work is in homes, which are being destroyed by subtle psychological causes. Here the experience and training of the staff workers shows its greatest worth, for these are not charity cases in the material sense. The charity distributed here is a charity of sympathy and understanding, of patience and moral support.

Every community has its families, which for one reason or another, are being destroyed, are either parasitical or are other forms of social menaces. It is the work of the Associated Charities to seek out these families, discover the underlying causes of their condition, and by removing these guide the family back into the road of good and productive family life and citizenship. This work is of large profit to the community, and every community should eagerly and generously give aid and support to the organization providing such a service.

Red Cross Roll Call

The thirteenth annual Red Cross Roll Call will open Monday, Armistice Day, and will continue until Thanksgiving. In the 3,500 chapters throughout the United States, new members will be enrolled, and old memberships renewed. The annual membership dues are one dollar.

The Newark Chapter of the Red Cross will follow the same method that it did last year in enrolling members. It will make a canvass of the Town. In addition to the canvass, both the Farmers' Trust Company and the Newark Trust Company will have blanks, and will take memberships or renewals for the local chapter.

The American Red Cross is the greatest human relief agency in the world, and membership in it has become as much a duty of citizenship as voting. Its scope of service is world wide, and except in cases of extreme disaster and emergency, its work is supported by its membership dues. Every citizen of Newark should be a member and should enter his or her membership through the Newark Chapter.

Degrees of Pacifism

On this page, today, appears an article, submitted by our good friend Edward L. Richards, which calls us to further account for a letter and editorial comment on the pacifistic portion of Communism's campaign of subversivism in the United States. The letter in question appeared in our issue of September 26 and was written by Lieutenant Victor E. Devereaux, a member of the National Sojourners, a patriotic order of high standing and merit. The editorial comment was our introduction to Lieutenant Devereaux's letter, and was scathing in its denunciation of the treasonable influences put at work by some of these pacifist organizations. Lieutenant Devereaux named organizations which were promoting the campaign of pacifism, either in direct connection with the Communist program, or along lines that would prove useful in attaining the ends of Communism's complete program. Some of these organizations named have no direct connection or sympathy with Communism, but they are more useful to its campaign than if they had a direct connection and sympathy.

We are in accord with Mr. Richards in his hope for World Peace and his abhorrence of war. We disagree only in the practical means to insure peace for our own country in particular, and the world in general. That is, we do not believe that complete disarmament will attain peace for the United States or for the World. We believe in adequate defense of the United States as the best possible insurance of peace.

Mr. Richards' friend, in his article asks, what patriotism is, and cites Washington, Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson, Herbert Hoover and Elihu Root as examples of true patriots. We quite agree with him in that respect, but he represents them in such a way as to have us assume that they would and do favor complete pacifism and total disarmament. This we do not believe to be true. We have never thought of Washington, Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson, or Herbert Hoover as complete pacifists. Their records of public service would hardly bear out such a belief. We do believe that they did do and would do anything in their power to insure and preserve peace, and to that extent they were and are pacifists, just as most of us are. However, we do not believe that their pacifism ever did or ever will take them to the point of active treason. We wonder whether Washington, Jefferson, Wilson, Hoover or Root would subscribe to the following petition, which is being circulated by the War Resisters League, and which, by the way, is addressed to President Hoover. We wonder if anyone worthy of the name of citizen, not to mention patriot, would sign this petition which is circulated by one of the organizations which Mr. Richards' friend rises to defend. This is the petition:

Peace Letter to the President of the United States,

Dear Mr. President:

"We, the undersigned, convinced that all disputes between nations are capable of settlement by peaceable means, hereby declare our deliberate intention to refuse to support war measures or to render war service, in case our government should resort to war."

Mr. Richards' friends states that arguments against complete pacifism have all been exploded, patiently. We would like to have him justify the above declaration of treason, patiently or otherwise, to our satisfaction or to the satisfaction of any good citizen of this nation.

We wonder if any of the signers or supporters of the above petition derived any financial profit from the World War. If they did, they will immediately realize that these profits should be returned to the government as they came from support of and participation in war measures. No doubt all of them will make haste to return such moneys.

We believe, with Mr. Richards' friend, that war as a means of settlement of political disputes is outdated, but we are not in any way convinced that this belief is universal. Until it is, nations, particularly this nation, will have to maintain adequate national defense in order to insure peace. We believe in practical pacifism but not in pacifism carried to the point of treason.

Further Defense of Pacifism

The following letter and article has been received from Mr. Edward L. Richards. Some weeks ago we published another letter written by Mr. Richards in answer to editorial matter mentioned in the following article. Comment on this article will be found in our editorial column.—Ed.

Dear Mr. Jacobs: That we might have another's thoughts on your and Lieut. Devereaux's criticism of the list of so-called slacker organizations, I gave to a friend of mine your issue of September 26th, and one or two others and am enclosing an article from him. While I did not write it I will be glad to have you publish it over my name as sponsor.

Very truly,
Edw. L. Richards.

A subscriber to the Newark Post, Newark, Delaware, has called attention to an article appearing in that paper on September 26th, the article being an introduction to a letter which immediately followed, both set up in the editorial column.

This introduction asserted that the letter was filled with facts "Astonishing-Alarming." They would be indeed were they "facts."

Yet the underlying accusations are "old stuff" which at first received no notice when used either in press or address, since they were so obviously unbelievable, yet, when they continued to be presented were taken up patiently and exploded, one of the latest efforts in such direction—and a notably clear one—being that of Mrs. Catt in the Women's Journal some time early in the spring.

This letters lists

The Fellowship of Reconciliation
The Fellowship of Youth for Peace.

Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Peace Committee of Friends.

War Resisters' League.

World Alliance for International Friendship thru the Churches.

The Church Peace Union.

as "communist and pacifist organizations which are working to put this Crusade of Slackerism across" and working "to hasten the approach of The Day when Bolshevism intends to turn the world into the bloody shambles that was Russia's during 1917-1922."

Fancy the people who form the listed organizations working either for "slackerism" or to open the way for "bloody shambles" over the world! One needs only to consult the lists of such organizations—open to all—the actual words of their creeds to gain the necessary knowledge of indisputable truth.

"Mr. Libby," says the accusation specifically "has long waged a war against Patriotism, Americanism and the Constitution," and others are spoken of in somewhat the same manner. But what is patriotism? Beginning with the ideals of those who founded the republic and framed the Constitution, with the expressed and extant beliefs of such of those founders as Washington and Jefferson, has not that ideal been always towards the upbuilding of a country which gave to its citizens opportunities for liberty and happiness and looked towards other countries with friendship and desire for peace?

Is it not in this direction of growing development that the leaders and statesmen of the land have worked? Who first proposed the World Court? Whose ideal was the League of Nations? Are Elihu Root and Woodrow Wilson and President Hoover unpatriotic?

One hundred and fifty years ago there were men who realized that autocrat government was outworn. They established a "government of the people, by the people, for the people" and deplored that war was then the way by which it was established. With their far vision they had glimpses of another day when mankind should have outgrown such methods, even as they had outgrown autocracy. And back through every year of America's growth is to be seen the growth of that vision also—a vision which lead to the Kellogg Pact. The statesmen of the country today see that settlement of political difficulties by war is outdated and that machinery must be set up to take its place. They have set themselves about doing it; are they "slackers?" They realize the advancing of the age, they see that defense is in peace between lands; and destruction in modern war. Witness the exhibition at Aberdeen of bombs from the air, and tanks capable of 90 miles per hour and guns with range of 25 miles, throwing a mass of projectile. The strong and clear mind turns to other means of defense. It is patriotism, undiluted and knowledgeable, which actuated such men as Root and Kellogg and Hoover, Briand and Stresemann and MacDonald. The man who will not see is

Poisoning the Minds of Children

Lieutenant Victor E. Devereaux, Secretary of the Du Pont Chapter of the National Sojourners, has sent us another letter containing interesting and sensational information about the Communist Children's Camps, which have been increasing in numbers throughout the United States. These camps are but a section in the Moscow directed campaign of Anarchism-Atheism-Anti-Americanism, which is being waged in the United States by the Communist (Third) International. Let those, who believe there is no actual menace in the Communistic movement, and its interlocking and allied agencies, read this letter. Let them suppose that such a camp has been established in their community, and that children from that community are being trained in this camp, and then turned back into the community to mingle with normal-minded children. Let them imagine the result of this contact on their own children, for instance. Let those people read this letter and realize that there are such camps, and such conditions, and that next year or the year following one may be actually established where it will draw children from their community, and its influence will reach their children.—Ed.

Fort Du Pont, Del., Nov. 5, 1929.
Mr. Charles B. Jacobs, Jr., Editor,
The Newark Post.

Dear Mr. Jacobs:

In the September 5th issue of The Post, I set forth a number of facts concerning the establishment of so-called Pioneer camps for children throughout the country. These camps were established by the American Section of the Communist (Third) International, and it was known that children were being taught sedition and atheism. Children were required to stand each day with bared heads and uplifted hands, doing homage to the Red Flag of World Revolution and Communism, and they were taught to denigrate the American flag by spitting upon it.

Satisfying and delightful proof that the patriotic forces of the United States are gradually awakening to the menace of Communism, and are being aroused to effective action, was afforded last month by the conviction of six leaders of a Communist camp for children, by the Superior Court of San Bernardino County, California. On the following day, one of them committed suicide in his cell, ample evidence of the distorted, twisted minds that have activated Communism since the Communist Manifesto of Marx in 1844.

The camp in question was opened in the hills about Yucaipa, California, last August. Shortly after this, having received reports of the activities being carried on, representatives of the American Legion and the Better America Federation, enlisted the interest of the District Attorney of San Bernardino County, and, together with representatives of the Immigration Service, the Health Office and the Sheriff's Department, visited the camp. During this visit, discoveries were made that lead to the indictment of the ring-leaders, and later, their conviction.

A searching investigation of the camp revealed that some forty boys and girls ranging in age from 8 to 16 years were sleeping together on cots arranged in a barren open spot. The lavatory for these boys and girls was the same; no privacy; no distinction. The food was poor, and these youngsters were forced to drink sour milk. The women in charge of them were bare-foot and filthy, wearing no clothing except an outer apron. Nearby ranchers and a number of the children themselves brought forth piled up evidence that each morning the children assembled on a knoll in the camp, while one of their number hoisted the red flag of the Third International with its black hammer and sickle emblem, and that same young boy and girl repeated his or her solemn pledge of allegiance to that revolutionary rag.

"the slacker," one allowing himself to stay in the slack waters of backwash. Is it not the real patriots of this and stand back of it, and of the work of such men—to name them again—as Root and Kellogg and Hoover, Briand and MacDonald?

The leader of the activities in this camp was Yetta Stronberg, a 16-year-old girl, who is well known for her activities in Communist work. The vital question over which to consider in this connection is the fact that American citizens have for a number of years been contributing money toward the education of Yetta Stronberg. She was a graduate of a public high school, and a student of the State University of California, and the education that was given her by a generous nation, to work for its overthrow, to better teach Anarchism, Atheism, anti-Americanism and hatred for the flag which forbids keeps her from becoming public property, the thing that Communists, which she aids and abets, would do to her. She is, thank God, a rare example of what Communism is attempting to make of the youth of the Nation at the present time. It was from this young woman's diary that came most of the evidence which proved the guilt of herself and her co-defendants at the trial.

Incidents of this nature should warn us that continuous action against this destructive force is necessary. Being merely a "good citizen" is not enough. Mark Twain has said: "Be not simply good—be good for something." And when we realize what the Communism philosophy, "Everything is novel which helps the cause of Communism," means to our national life, our national existence, we will have found the necessity for (as Better America Federation terms it) "not only a good citizenship but also an alert citizenship, and if necessary, an angry citizenship."

Very sincerely yours,

300 Improvements in County Kitchens Due To Campaign

"The 'Wife Saving' Kitchen Campaign and contest put on in New Castle County last spring resulted in over 300 single improvements being made in the kitchens of New Castle County Homemakers," says Mrs. Kate Henley Daugherty, County Home Demonstration Agent for the University of Delaware Extension Service, who has just compiled a report of the results of this campaign.

Among the most important improvements listed were: installing hot and cold running water with sink and sanitary waste disposal; raising the heights of working surfaces to the proper level; making the kitchen "step saving" by the convenient grouping of working centers; increasing the storage space; finishing walls, ceilings, and floors in sanitary and attractive finishes; and obtaining labor-saving equipment. Mrs. Daugherty said that many of the home makers felt at first that they could not do a great deal to improve their kitchen without a lot of money, but after studying their Kitchen Score Card and getting suggestions from demonstrations, bulletins, and from the judges who scored their kitchens, they found that they could make a great many improvements at a very small expense.

"It is indeed gratifying," continues Mrs. Daugherty, "to receive the comments that have been coming into the office from the women who improved their kitchens during the contest last spring." Mrs. Harold Batten, of Middletown, said, "that never before have I been able to accomplish my work with such ease as I have since I made the changes in my kitchen." Mrs. Batten was a first prize winner in Class I of the contest.

Mrs. John D. Reynolds, of Middletown, said, "I wish that I could have joined a Home Demonstration Club years ago for I believe I would look several years younger now and would have saved myself miles of unnecessary walking."

Mrs. Eugene Minner, of Middletown, says the following in regard to her improved kitchen, which won first prize in one of the classes of the contest last spring, "We have a beautiful, well-arranged kitchen with which Mr. Minner and I, after all of our hard work, are so well pleased. We cannot praise too highly the value of such a contest. My work is so much easier and I feel so happy about doing it, for my kitchen is so bright, cheerful and convenient that I could not feel otherwise in it."

Mrs. Horace Dennison, of Hockessin, says, "In improving my kitchen I have tried to adhere to the original thought as to the convenience and cheerfulness in making it a better workshop. If it is convenient I can do my work easier. If it is cheerful, I will take greater pleasure in doing my work. Having convenience and cheerfulness it naturally will be a better workshop and a 'Wife Saving' kitchen."

ASSO. CHARITIES EXTENDED WORK COVERS COUNTY

Charities prevented many cases of mental breakdown.

Miss Mullen reported on the year's work of the organization and explained the changing methods and technique of social work. She stated that 584 families were aided during the past year, an increase of 111 over the year preceding, and in these families were 1446 children under 16 years of age.

MONARCH OF PIELAND

Princess Blueberry of Pieland is only one of the royal family. Hers is a radiant personality, and when she appears in her bluish purple gown multitudes of admirers give her tumultuous acclaim and heap upon her head all manner of extravagant praise. But she is just a princess, not a ruling sovereign. That high honor belongs solely to his rotund majesty, King Pumpkin the First.

The learned lexicographers have been unable to trace the ancestry of the royal house of Pieland. Most of them insist that the name should be spelled pumpkin—a flourishing aristocratic foolishness—while the plain people have for centuries preferred pumpkin, a pronunciation which admirably connotes the simple habits and humble origin of this beloved monarch.

The King of Pieland himself has no delusions of royal grandeur. He is essentially of the soil, brother of the lowly squash and companion of the tassel corn. He wears none of the flamboyant trappings of authority, but is content with the saffron jerkin of his low estate.

His coming to the throne room is preceded by an exhalation of spicy odors, redolent of harvest riches. King Pumpkin is holding court just now throughout his wide domain, to the immense satisfaction of his devoted followers. Long may he reign and prosper.—Christian Science Monitor.

MILFORD CROSS ROADS SCHOOL

The Reading Club of Milford Cross Roads School was in charge of the Halloween party held in the school room on Thursday afternoon. Word had been passed around by the committee, Hazel Johnston, president, Evelyn Jester, vice-president; and Mary Kwiatkowski, secretary, that the children should mask. A goodly number of the parents came to watch the stunts of the children and to participate themselves in the Halloween fun.

The judges: Misses Ruth Fisher, Marie Greer and Anna Starkey, awarded the prize for the prettiest costume to Charles Greer. Charles was dressed as a girl and wore the daintiest of rose bud dresses, with hat to match. He carried a basket of roses.

The prize for the funniest costume was awarded to Carolyn Guthrie. You never saw a cuter negro outfit than Carolyn wore. Imagine a seven-year old youngster donning a negro mask with gray hair attached! Well, Carolyn acted her part perfectly.

Refreshments were served by the hospitality committee to all present.

BROADCAST ON COOKING

There are no meals anywhere in the country better than Del-Mar-Va dinners, and no cooks better to prepare them than Del-Mar-Va housewives, in the opinion of Mrs. Nellie F. Snyder, of Newport, household economics expert for radio station WILM, Wilmington.

But occasionally it happens to every housewife that she would like things prepared in a trifle different style or would like to offer food of the same quality without the same expenditure.

Exactly how this can be done is told every morning by Mrs. Snyder in her daily talks on food economics over Station WILM.

With the exception of Saturday and Sunday, Mrs. Snyder goes on the air through the station at 9:45 o'clock, for a half hour's address. During that time she gives recipes of all kinds as well as advice on how to prepare and serve dinners for various occasions.

HORNED TOADS NOW ARE WIDELY SOLD

There has developed a growing business in the West of collecting horned toads and selling them to tourists. The specimens so vended, as a rule, are taken far from their native homes, maintained in captivity and often starved to death. Fear has been expressed that the horned-toad business is making too great inroads on the stock in some regions, and effort is being made to have it controlled.

Friends of the horned toad have reason for their demands for protection, because these animals are valuable allies in the never-ceasing warfare between man and insects. They feed almost exclusively upon destructive insects and have been known to exterminate a colony of the large harvester ants.

They are in reality lizards, as shown by their scaly covering, and not toads, animals that have smooth, moist skins. They have short tails, while toads in the adult state have none.

MANY-ROOMED

ROMAN HOUSES

One entered the house through a narrow passage, called the porticus, which led directly into the atrium. At the other end, up a few steps was a big room, the tablinum, in which were kept the archives of the family. In the smaller houses it was sometimes used as a drawing-room or banquet chamber on great occasions. It had often on two sides no dividing walls, being separated from the atrium by heavy curtains. On the other side of this room and continuing straight through the house one came to the peristylum, which was a great open court, surrounded by columns. These columns supported a narrow roof, forming a covered pathway on all sides, very similar to a cloister. Of entirely Greek conception, the peristylum was adopted by the Romans in their domestic architecture at the beginning of the empire. The court was often very big, especially in country houses, and in the palace of Domitian covered an area of ten thousand square feet. Frequently, transformed into luxuriant gardens, filled with flowers, in which great fountains poured out their limpid waters, it took the name of Viridarium. Sometimes in the middle was a swimming pool, where the occupants of the house could keep themselves cool on the hot summer days. Marble and bronze statues and statuettes ornamented these charming spots, which served as the private quarters of the family, where none but intimate friends were permitted. Around this vast enclosure were all the reception rooms of these villa-palaces. Dining-halls, "triclinia," and drawing-rooms, oecus and exdra, opened out their doors on to these little gardens of Eden, where even in town the owners could enjoy all the beauties of nature in the intimacy of their homes.

The Romans seem to have been very fond of these courts, and in Pompeii, where the houses are rarely big, and never of the vast proportions of big country estates, there are frequently several under the same roof. The House of the Faun, the oldest and one of the most beautiful of the buried city, has two atria, and two open courts, in the centre of one of which is a swimming pool, while the other is a garden.

Dining-rooms, especially, were abundant. Every Roman house possessed at least two, a summer and a winter one, the former opening out on a garden, the latter more intimate and easier to heat, overlooking the atrium. In the great country houses, where space was of no consequence, there were triclinia of all shapes and sizes, open and closed, with and without roofs, sunny and shady, some for the master alone or a few intimate friends, others for those perpetual banquets which for many Romans were the chief form of entertainment. Pliny, who prides himself on the simplicity of his living, had a bewildering variety of them. What must have been the house of a Lucullus?—Geoffrey Bret Harte, in "The Villas of Pliny."

'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark our coming and look brighter when we come.—Byron.

Abstinence is whereby a man refraineth from anything which he may lawfully take.—Elyot.

Abstinence is the surety of temperance.—Plato.

Taming the Gasoline Pegasus

Ownership of motor cars in America is said to be so near the saturation point that it is penetrating what, to paraphrase an expression from another sphere, might be called "the highbrow fringe." The call of the open road—full-throated, so to speak, as such calls have become in the vicinity of New York; the urge to get out from under the city's tall buildings and test the effect of the open spaces; and the beauty of the hypothesis that one may be whisked hither and yon, in city and out, up hill and down dale, by the mere pressure of a lever—all have made their appeal to the nation's larger minds, and scholarly men-about-town who a few years ago were well content with simple journeys in the classics are now having their fling with the new Pegasus.

Now that Summer is here they may be seen on the streets now and then, sitting tensely at the wheel, accompanied by some more worldly minded guide, going through their first attempts at domesticating their new steeds. They wear an excited, lost expression, as though, having descended from the lofty firmament in which their footing was secure, they felt the bottom had dropped out of everything, now that they are manoeuvring on terra firma. Cold perspiration appears from time to time on their brows, and when traffic lights give them a blessed respite they sink down on the wheel as though another stretching on the rack had been survived.

The first stages of driving are treated like a geometry lesson. The formula for getting in motion is painstakingly recited, and action is suited to word, down to the point where the proposition is to put the clutch in. The oracle above murmurs this injunction with the same deliberation as the rest and the foot starts to obey loyally, but as the clutch is let back millimeter by millimeter a half inch, an inch, and still nothing has happened, boldness replaces caution, the clutch pedal is released altogether, the noble steed lurches once, twice, three times and, as the classic would say, universal darkness covers all; the engine is dead.

Once in motion, the problem of traveling is treated as a problem of getting from X to Y, often regardless of the fact that in a garage, for example, there may be some oil cans or extra automobile fenders not covered in Euclid; or that, on the streets, an inconvenient curbstone may modify the axiom about the shortest distance between two points.

In minor manoeuvring, such as backing, the assignment is given to the car in much the same way as an assignment to a freshman to write a theme. The scholar adjusts the gears, turns the wheel, steps on the gas and lets in the clutch, and then sits erect and waits for an affirmation from the car, such as a thud of a fender against a lamppost—a sign that that particular operation has gone far enough. In no way does the disparity of the highbrow from the common run of humanity stand out more than in the attitudes toward the automobile. A highbrow who would use all his energy to guard a $15 etching or call in his friends to see a first edition he had unearthed at some second-hand bookstore, at a cost of $5 or $10, gives his $1,000 runabout the same consideration as a barnyard cart, bumping it over chuck holes and ruts with no concern as long as the engine keeps pulling him in the direction he wishes to go.

The "highbrow fringe," also adds a quirk all its own to the problem of administering the traffic laws. Ordinarily its members are so cautious of violating any regulations that their chief danger is of running afoul of that against blocking traffic. In the early stages of their driving, at least, they start slowing down for intersections about the middle of the block, and in moments of doubt as to what their rights are, wait until a hold taxi driver comes along and slips across on the lee-ward side.

When justice descends on them in the person of the traffic cop and the torrent of abuse starts—which in most cases ends with a gruff forgiveness and a warning if proper meekness is displayed—their technique is again at variance from what the policemen has been led to expect. One member of the fringe who recently found himself being fixed by a steely eye and felt the rain of harsh words, suddenly put up his hand and exclaimed:

"That's enough, officer! I'd rather pay the fine than stand this abuse. Give me a ticket."

"A ticket? Who said anything about ticket? I haven't given anybody a ticket in two years. Get along with you!"

And when the members of the fringe do get to court, it is not with the speechless manner to which judges are accustomed. Palliating facts spring up on all sides to convince his Honor that the violation of the law occurred only a most unfortunate mischance; and when the waves have been sent futilely against the stern and rockbound countenance, up comes the suggestion that this experience in court could safely be allowed to stand by itself as a lesson without the usual additional reminder. One youth, found guilty of running with inadequate lights, suggested that if he did not have to pay a fine he would use the money to get his battery fixed.

"Young man," observed the Judge, "You'll do both. Ten dollars fine."

LITERAL CHILDHOOD

I remember the surprise the stars were to me, seen for the first time. One evening, just before I was put to bed, I was taken in somebody's arms—my sister's, I think—outside the door, and lifted up under the dark, still, clear sky, splendid with stars, thicker and nearer earth than they have ever seemed since. All my little being shaped itself into a subdued, delighted "Oh!" And then the exultant thought . . . "Why, that is the roof of the house I live in." After that I always went to sleep happier for the feeling that the stars were outside in the dark, though I could not see them.

I was quite as literal as I was visionary in my mental renderings of the New Testament, read at Aunt Hannah's knee. I was much taken with the sound of words, without any thought of their meaning—a habit not always outgrown with children. The "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals" for instance, in the Epistle to the Corinthians, seemed to me things to be greatly desired. "Tinkling cymbals" one could make music with. I wished I could get hold of them. It never occurred to me that the Apostle meant to speak of their melody slightly.

At meeting, where I began to go also at two years of age, I made my own private interpretations of the Bible readings. They were absurd enough, but after getting laughed at a few times at home for making them public, I escaped mortification by forming a habit of great reserve as to my Sabbath-day thoughts.

When the minister read, "Cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?" I thought he meant to say "eu-cumbereth." These vegetables grew on the ground, and I had heard that they were not very good for people to eat. I honestly supposed that the New Testament forbade the cultivation of cucumbers.

And "Galilee" I understood as a mispronunciation of "gallery." "Going up into Galilee" I interpreted into clattering up the uncarpeted stairs in the meeting-house porch, as the boys did, with their squeaking brogans, looking as restless as imprisoned monkeys after they had got into those conspicuous seats, where they behaved as if they thought nobody could see their pranks. I did not think it at all nice to "go up into Galilee."

A little later, I was much puzzled as to whether I was Jew or a Gentile. The Bible seemed to divide people into these two classes only. The Gentiles were not well spoken of; I did not want to be one of them. They talked about Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and the rest, as if they were our forefathers (there was a time when I thought that Adam and Eve and Cain and Abel were our four fathers); and yet I was very sure that I was not a Jew.

The Sabbath mornings in those old times had a peculiar charm. They seemed so much cleaner than other mornings! The roads and the grassy footpaths seemed fresher, and the air itself purer and more wholesome than on week-days. Sabbath morning would not have seemed like itself without a clean house, a clean skin, and tidy and spotless clothing. . . . Then it was so still, both out of doors and within. The town itself was so quiet that it scarcely seemed to breathe. The sound of wheels was seldom heard on the streets on that day. . . . If we heard it we expected some unusual explanation.—From "A New England Girlhood," by Lucy Larcom.

FIND BODIES OF 81 BUDDIES IN RUSSIA

Of the 128 bodies of American war dead buried in unknown and unidentified graves in the Archangel area or north Russia, 81 have been recovered by October 1st by a commission made up of members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

This information was received at national headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States in a cable message from Captain Edwin S. Bettelheim, Jr., Washington, D. C., chairman of the commission that has been in north Russia since early in August.

One group of searchers under Bettelheim's command had recently returned to Archangel, after a fifteen day cruise up the Dvina and Vaga rivers, in a chartered boat, christened "The V. F. W." This searching party succeeded in finding the graves of seventeen men of the 339th Infantry, a Michigan outfit, killed from ambush by attacking bolsheviks in 1918.

Walter Dundon, Detroit, president of the Polar Bear Association, composed of World War veterans who served in Russia and Serbia, headed another group of searchers working under Captain Bettelheim. Dundon's party returned with eight bodies in the Lake Onega area. Other bodies have been recovered thus far in the crude cemeteries of eight different villages.

Bettelheim's cable stressed the splendid cooperation being extended to his committee by Soviet authorities in the search for remains of missing veterans. A river food boat has been turned over to the Americans by the Soviet government and this forms their source of supplies in moving from village to village.

Rumor is like bees; the more you fight them the more you don't get rid of them.—H. W. Shaw.
