Historic Dayett Mill added to state open space along the Christina River. Reopening of mill, eateries, shops possible.

THANKS to the concerted efforts of a multitude of local and state people, including one owner who refused to give up on it even after filing for bankruptcy, a Newark landmark with significant historic and environmental value has been saved for posterity.

Raynor Johnson, a former owner of Dayett Mills located off Old Baltimore Pike adjacent to Cooch's Bridge, spearheaded a four-year struggle to preserve the unique facility from creditors and indiscriminate developers.

In December, following lengthy negotiations, the mill property was purchased by the state of Delaware for $530,000, according to John Carney, assistant chief of staff for Governor Thomas Carper.

"State representatives Bruce Ennis (D-Smyrna) and Bill Oberle (R-Beecher's Lot) first contacted the governor's office about this as an historic property," said Carney. "Dan Griffith from the state office of historic and cultural affairs went out with me to visit the site to estimate possible renovation costs and see if it would fit into our state program."

Carney continued, "We saw that Dayett Mill had historic value as part of the Cooch's Bridge Historic District and, although small, fit in with the state's longterm interest in preserving open-space. It just made sense to try to acquire it."

Slots open at Park

When 300 visitors rode the escalator into Delaware Park's former second-level grandstand at 8 a.m. last Friday, seeing a wide array of video slot machines in a parlor renovated with a Victorian flair, some may have thought they were entering an Atlantic City casino.

This was the very image Delaware Racing Association President William Rickman Jr. wanted to impress.

By authority of House Bill 682, when the Park reopened with 715 computerized machines, Rickman saw the beginning of Delaware's thoroughbred horse racing's long-awaited revival.

With fierce gambling competition in neighboring states, park owners Rickman and his father

Schools planned

By 1999, the Christina School District plans to have an additional 1000 spaces for elementary students in the Bear-Glasgow area, according to Dr. Capes Riley.

Riley, assistant superintendent for district planning and facility management, said the district hopes to break ground in the fall of this year on a new Leasure Elementary School at the intersection of Church Road and Route 40 on the recently approved Queensbury Village site.

"We hope to meet with Greg Pettinaro within the next week to move this forward," said Riley.

Queensbury coming in 1997

At their final meeting of 1995, New Castle County Council approved rezoning for Greg Pettinaro's planned Queensbury Village development at Church Road and Route 40 in Bear.

Approval came following meetings between Pettinaro, the Delaware Department of Transportation, local legislators and residents.

Pettinaro agreed to deed restrictions and construction phasing for the 148-acre site in order to satisfy residents' concerns about traffic congestion in the area. In addition, Pettinaro will help fund an estimated $500,000 in highway improvements for Route 7, Walther Road, Route 40 and Porter Road. Cost of upgrades for roads immediately adjacent to a property are already paid for by the developer of a site.

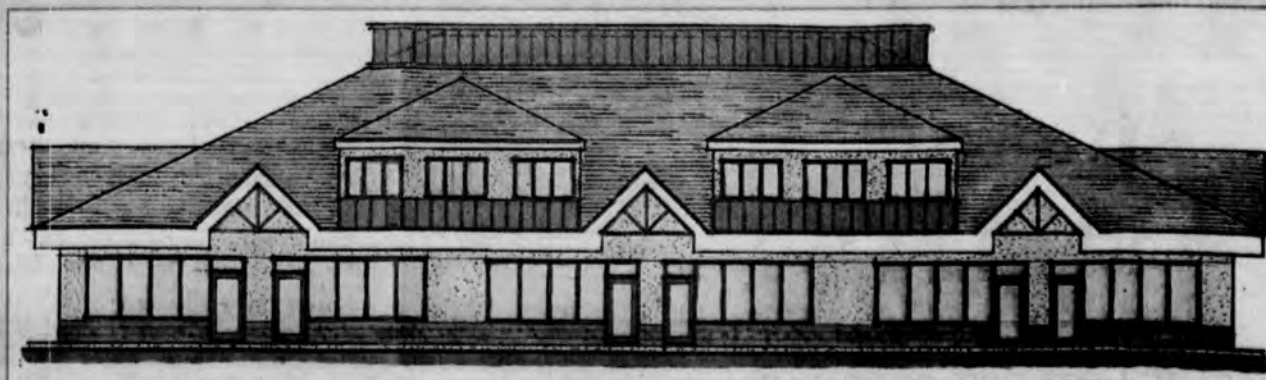

Plans for the property include 160 single-family homes, 400 townhouses and/or apartments and 240,000 square feet of office space.

Deed restrictions include no construction until 1997, no occupancy of Phase II townhouses or apartments until the year 2000, only six town-

The Traders Alley complex rising on Main Street will include Newark's first brew pub, the Iron Hill Brewery & Restaurant, according to developers Handloft/Young Properties, which released this architect's concept drawing. Planned to open in June, 1996, the pub will be the first operated in the state by C&D Brewing Co. of Delaware. Kevin Finn, a partner in C&D, said the company chose Newark "because we feel our concept can be an important part of the renaissance on Newark's Main Street." The brew pub and full-service restaurant will serve fresh, hand-crafted beers in small batches directly to the public, Finn said.

The other suspect, wearing a yellow and black "1st Down" coat, appeared between 18 and 24 years of age, about 5 feet, 4 inches tall and 140-150 lbs. Anyone with information should call Newark police at 366-7123.

Charges pending in local homicide

Newark police and the state attorney general's office are continuing their search for two suspects and investigation of the shooting which took place in an apartment house at Elkton Road and Delaware Avenue on Christmas weekend.

According to Lt. Roy Clough, Newark police have a "possible ID" on one missing suspect and are looking into leads on the other. Police have already arrested Saad Soliman, 17, of Newark in connection with the Dec. 23 shooting which killed 17-year-old Gary Robinson also of Newark. Soliman has been charged with robbery and weapons violations during the commission of a felony.

Clough said police are still questioning residents of the house where the shooting occurred. Additional charges in the case are pending the completion of the investigation and apprehension of remaining suspects.

Schools planned

► NEW SCHOOLS, from 1A

"We've already done all the environmental studies and determined that it is suitable for a school site."

The school, which replaces the present 660-student Leasure school at the intersection of Routes 7 and 40, will open with 840 spaces in the fall of 1998. The district decided to close the present Leasure school because development at that location has made the site unsuitable for school use.

Riley said that the district is also planning a new elementary school on the Glasgow Commons site being developed by Capano Brothers at the intersection of Routes 40 and 896.

"We're still doing the environmental studies for that site," said Riley, "but it seems we're in agreement on that and it will be acceptable."

Funds for the land and building of Leasure school, and the land for the Glasgow school, are part of the Phase I bond monies requested by the district. Money for construction of the school building in Glasgow, planned to start in the fall of 1997 and open in the fall of 1999, will come from Phase II monies.

The new buildings will be the largest elementary schools possible, said Riley. "Both will have room for 840 students," he said. "We have committees working on designs for each school which will be similar to the Thurgood Marshall school plan but with improvements."

Students for the new Leasure school will come from the present feeder area of the old school. "We'll need to do some minor redistricting to develop feeder patterns for the school in Glasgow," explained

Slots open at Delaware Park to mixed reviews

► SLOTS, from 1A

William Rickman Sr. needed to invigorate horse racing's popularity in Delaware.

By introducing slots, they hoped to draw new faces into the equine parks and preserve the die-hard followers. Rickman envisions Delaware horse racing as a strong player within the expanding Delaware-Maryland-Pennsylvania-New Jersey gambling market.

Saying Delaware Park now offers a "good entertainment value in this region," Rickman sees the state-of-the-art slots and racing combination in a "warm facility" as the sure bet for success.

Park marketing representative Drew Burslem said the Park is the first Mid-Atlantic track to use slots. From this point in time, Burslem affirmed, "[We] anticipate a very strong attendance and handle [increased bets] for the live meet. The best part about it is we'll be able to take a portion of the profits and put them into purses for better horses and better quality fields."

Newark residents John and Mary Bryans are long-time horse racing fans. In addition to visiting tracks all along the East Coast and Puerto Rico, they have traveled to casinos in Atlantic City, Reno, Lake Tahoe and Las Vegas.

Their first impression of Delaware Park's new gambling opportunities and facilities were "Great. Fantastic. They did a great job [of refurbishing]." Compared to other casinos, whose flash and glitter tends to make them appear cheap, the Park's atmosphere, they said, is relaxed, warm, toned-down and inviting.

Mary Bryans said the parlor's "paneling has a nice 'executive' touch."

Opening day impressions were not all favorable, however. Of the estimated 3,000 people who visited by mid-afternoon, Carol Smith was not overly impressed.

Experiencing one of the bugs Burslem anticipated on opening day, Smith claimed she made a triple-seven strike by placing $4 into a machine requiring only $3, but registered only $2. After making a jackpot on "the first triple-sevens of my life," officials refused to honor Smith's $500 strike since she made it on a defective machine.

Smith said her impression of the Park was that the state had not done a thorough job of inspecting machines before opening day. Sean Collins, also of Newark, first came to Delaware Park with his parents when he was a child. He has been a horse racing fan since then.

Compared to the old grandstand, Collins said the parlor's new appearance is a great improvement over tile and absence of decor.

Collins said more machines would be handy since he waited three hours but had not yet found one available. Despite this, he said the new venue will attract new racing fans.

Collins saw many people at simulcast windows who did not seem familiar with wagering procedures. To him this was evidence that the Park had already begun introducing new faces into its circuit.

In addition to slots linked by computer to Dover's Delaware Lottery offices which monitor state gambling enterprises, the parlor also features 200 tables with individual monitors for simulcast thoroughbred and harness racing from across North America; a 180-seat restaurant with full-service bar and raw bar; a 200-seat New York-style deli and a gift shop.

Delaware Park's regular track season will resume next April.

Rowan Hopkins, left, and William Rickman Jr. were all smiles on opening day at Delaware Park for the new slot machines. Hopkins, the vice president of slots, has set up slot operations in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Mississippi. Rickman is the president of the Delaware Horse Racing Association.

Creative minds lead to state purchase

► DAYETT, from 1A

In addition to the four-story mill, the property includes approximately 32 acres of land adjacent to the Christina River, outbuildings, a grain elevator, shop, barn, helicopter pad and access to railroad.

Funds used in the purchase came from the Division of Historic and Cultural Affairs as well as commitments of legislators' suburban street monies, said Carney. "This project definitely showed a positive and constructive relationship between the state legislature and the governor's office," Carney said.

The state plans to set up a non-profit agency for the site and lease the mill, one of only two mill race operations still functioning in Delaware, and other buildings to private operators to help pay for the cost of renovating and maintaining the property, said Carney.

Johnson said numerous commercial possibilities have been suggested for the mill. "We've heard from people interested in a craft center, an antique center, a restaurant which might serve food like 'slick dumplings' unique to the area and using flour from the mill, and a large nursery like the Waterloo Gardens in Pennsylvania," said Johnson. "We've even heard from someone with the idea of a micro-brewery using the mill to grind grain for mead," Johnson said none of the ideas are definite.

The purchase also includes water rights on the Christina River contained in the chain of title for the use and supply of the property which would allow the mill to continue operation possibly as an historic or museum attraction.

"We'd like to clean up the sedimentation in the river, also," said Johnson. "Four or five years ago you were likely to see 10 or more cars parked along the stream in the evenings and people fishing—but not recently."

According to Carney, studies done for the state prior to the purchase show that environmental cleanup of the property should be less than $100,000.

Both Carney and Johnson stated that other uses of the property like picnicking, hiking, and nature trails were feasible. "Eventually we'd like to see public open space extending all the way from Iron Hill to the mill site," said Carney.

According to Carney, the state submitted a lower bid to the bankruptcy court in early December but the bankruptcy trustee had accepted an alternative bid. With approval and funding from the Open Space Council, the state increased their bid and successfully purchased the site on Dec. 22. Settlement is planned for mid-January.

Among others lending their voices and time to this project were state senator Steven Amick (R-Newark West), state representatives Stephanie Ulbrich (R-Newark South), Vince Lofink (R-Carvel Farms), and Timothy Boulden (R-Newark). Hal Godwin, Newark city councilman for District 1, Newark city manager Carl Luft, Bernard Dworsky, administrator of the Water Resources Agency for New Castle County, and Bob Thomas, president of the Newark Historical Society.

houses per staggered unit, and no structure over four stories or 50 feet high in the development.

Janice Hawkinson, chair of the planning and zoning committee for the Bear/Glasgow Council of Civic Organizations, said the group had done "everything they could" to get the best development possible at the site for the "greater community."

"We had over 26 meetings with people affected by this development," said Hawkinson. Many people in the local community don't understand that they have to look at more than just the immediate geographic impact of a development, said Hawkinson. "We got significant concessions and promises from Pettinaro and DelDOT between the time of the first meetings and the end," she explained. "We also got Greg to eliminate commercial business entirely which would have meant a lot more traffic."

According to Pettinaro, the Christina School District plans to build a new school on 18 of the 25 acres he has set aside for public use. He is uncertain of how the remaining public land will be used.

History of Dayett Mills

ACCORDING to the Delaware Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs, mills have existed on the Cooch-Dayett Mill site since the 1700s. The present Dayett Mill, built in the early 19th century by either William Cooch Sr. or Jr., was the third grist mill built on this stream by the Cooch family. Remodeled in 1884, it was sold to John W. Dayett in 1894. Although gutted by fire in 1916 and 1933, the mill was restored and continued flour milling operations each time, using water power from the Coochs' 1792 dam on the Christina River and a smaller dam on Purgatory Swamp.

Original brick walls taper from approximately four feet in thickness at the base of the mill to 18 inches at the third floor. The circa 1918 water turbine and other century-old milling equipment are still operational. The mill structure was built on logs which displace the weight over a shifting foundation of sandy soil.

In 1947, Dayett's son, Jonathan, sold the mill and its water rights to William A. Johnson, Charles H. Golt, and Alberta C. Johnson. Profitable until the mid-1980s, the mill's owners filed for bankruptcy in 1991.

One-armed entertainment

We had a chance to visit Delaware Park on the first day of slots in Delaware.

It is a nice place, with valet parking and a decor so reminiscent of Atlantic City that we looked in vain for a lounge with a singer doing a version of "My Way."

It was also like a mobbed restaurant that had run out of the catch of the day. Many of the slot machines were out of order as the system continued to struggle with a computer system that reports relevant information to that mother hen of the state's "gambling system," the Delaware Lottery.

We expect the early mob scene will settle down as the bugs are worked out and Delaware Park staff gets more experience under their belt.

We still believe the slots are the last and best hope to save horse racing in the state. It is also clear that the state is placing too heavy a hand over the operation of the slots complexes at Delaware Park and Dover Downs, due to lingering concerns about the effects of gambling.

The fact of the matter is that Delaware has embraced gambling and will end up continuing to deal with competition from Atlantic City and quite possibly, Maryland.

Slots will prove to be a one-dimensional experience and pressure will grow for full casinos.

The Las Vegas and Atlantic City glitz will remind patrons that those venues have sports betting and blackjack tables. It also appears Atlantic City is on the verge of another building boom that will give patrons another excuse to hop on the buses.

Gambling has arrived and (pardon the expression) one-trick ponies won't hold the attention of players forever.

Gone, but not forgotten

By ELBERT CHANCE

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

THE RECENT REPORT of the tragic death of Butterfly McQueen following a fire in her Augusta, Ga. home inevitably triggered memories of her best-remembered screen role in "Gone With the Wind" more than a half century ago. Ms. McQueen portrayed Scarlett O'Hara's flighty young maid, Prissy, in the motion picture version of Margaret Mitchell's best-selling tale of the Civil War.

What may have been forgotten by older local residents and may be unknown to others is the stir created when it was announced that the film was to be produced. The furor began with a widely publicized search for an actress whose tiny waist, acting ability and appearance would match the author's description. English actress Vivien Leigh eventually was selected to play opposite Clark Gable, who had been cast as the dashing Rhett Butler. The highly regarded Leslie Howard was chosen to play the supporting role of Ashley Wilkes.

Of particular interest to Delaware residents were local ties to this

David O. Selznick extravaganza. Former Wilmingtonian John Marsh was Margaret Mitchell's husband, and Alicia Rhett, cast as India Wilkes, was a niece of Mrs. Francis I. du Pont. Miss Rhett had been "discovered" by a Selznick talent scout while appearing at the Dock Street Theatre in Charleston. Part of her childhood had been spent in a home at 1623 Rodney Street, but she had moved to her family's ancestral home in South Carolina following the death of her father.

The Rhett family had deep roots in the South, having come to the American colonies in 1690. Alicia's great-grandfather, Robert Barnwell, was an outspoken advocate of the Confederate cause and was called the "Father of Secession" while serving in the U.S. Senate. It has been suggested that the prominence of the Rhett family motivated Margaret Mitchell to choose the name Rhett Butler for her fictional hero.

The world premiere of "Gone With the Wind" was held in Atlanta on December 15, 1939. It was a major social occasion as well as an artistic success, and it whetted the appetite of moviegoers throughout the nation for the simultaneous opening of the picture in 50 major cities on January 26, 1940.

In Delaware that memorable preview was held at Loew Theatre at Delaware Avenue and Adams Street, a building razed in 1962 to make way for the Adams-Jackson Street corridor of I-95.

So great was audience enthusiasm that the theatre management accepted orders in advance. Adult tickets for the evening performance sold at the unheard of price of $1.10, but the high cost did not adversely affect sales. Instead, lines began to form outside the box office an hour and a half before the announced starting time, and they eventually extended almost to Tenth Street Park.

Prior to the showing about 130 distinguished community leaders and guests with Southern roots attended a dinner at the Hotel DuPont. The audience of 1,000.

EDUCATIONAL PERSPECTIVE

Too old, too young, too crowded

By JACK BARTLEY

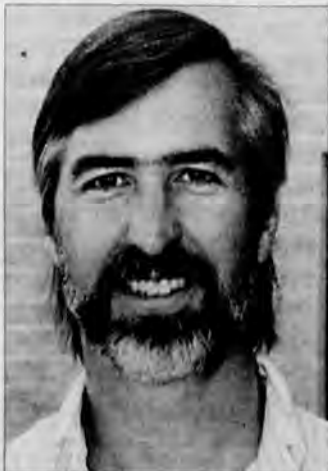

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

IN MY LAST COLUMN I spoke of problems, er, opportunities that public schools face as a result of the recent Choice and Charter bills approved into law by our legislature. I realize now that we do, indeed, have an opportunity as a result of the Charter legislation.

Our schools face severe overcrowding problems. Large populations and over-crowded conditions are prime contributors to discipline problems within schools. Last week's Newark Post described yet another developer's plans to improve the Bear area with 160 new single family homes and 400 town-houses.

Now, I used to live in Bear, and I thought that it really did not need any improvement. Nature and farming had developed it just fine, thank you very much, and the stealth-like encroachment of urban/suburban blight had not yet sunk cemented roots into Bear soil to any great extent. When it did, we left.

What does development in Bear and other communities have to do with charter schools and overcrowding in schools? Everything. Where will all the children go to school? Except for Newark High, most of our schools resemble not neatly packed sardine cans, but ones botulistically bursting at the seams with biological multiplication out of control. School choice is not much of an option since every school within a reasonable distance is already packed. What to do, what to do? Here is where the charter school idea comes into play and creates an opportunity to alleviate population woes and one other problem: 9th graders.

We need to build a new school, a charter school, that houses and ostensibly attempts to educate ninth graders. Think back to when you were in 9th grade. Okay, those of you as old as me, try again. What was it like? Girls were frequently taller and more mature than boys which, in turn, caused severe male insecurity problems. Girls still are and still do.

At least when I was in junior high school, which ran from 7th to 9th, the 9th grade guys were the oldest in the school and were able to save face by intimidating 7th graders and impressing (so we thought) the girls with loud belches and other noises.

With our present situation of high schools running from 9th grade to 12th grade, the pubescent 9th grade males resort to shoving match displacement activities and stupid insults about each other which are inevitably followed by such clever repartee as, "Oh, yeah!" and the ever popular, "Your mom!" OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week's Out of the Attic photo shows the Radner Pulp Mills of Elkton, Maryland, which were located in the southwest area of the town on the banks of the once navigable Elk River. The Radner Mills are said to have had a significant impact on the economy of northern Cecil County for many decades as well as on the development of the town of Elkton. The photograph which appears to have been taken prior to 1920 is from the collection of Bob Thomas with research provided by Hal Godwin for the Newark Historical Society. In an effort to provide more complete descriptions of our "Out of the Attic" photographs, volunteer historians of the society are identifying and researching the historic shots. Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post. Special care will be taken. For more information, call 737-0724.

Newark man victim of hold-up

George Jarmon, a well-known farmer in this vicinity, was the victim of a sensational hold-up last Saturday night on the Lincoln Highway, the fifth that has occurred in that immediate locality recently. Mr. Jarmon was returning from Philadelphia with a pair of mules which he had purchased there that day.

At one point on the highway he was accosted by three men who ordered him to throw up his hands. He felled the nearest one with a heavy blow of a stick which he had previously picked up to urge the mules.

One of the men shot at Mr. Jarmon, the bullet penetrated his coat and grazed the flesh. Mr. Jarmon was carrying no money but the thieves secured his gold watch.

Flu-like virus grips the area

Have the holidays left you feeling a little under the weather? Many folks may be complaining about "the flu that's going around," but Delaware health officials have no confirmed cases or reports of the influenza virus. Doctors say that many times people come in complaining of the flu but in fact they are suffering from upper respiratory or gastrointestinal viral infection. Doctors describe influenza symptoms as being typified by very high fevers, severe muscular aches and fatigue, all of which can leave you out of commission for over a week or more.

Merchants report mixed Christmas sales

The sagging economy has hurt Christmas sales at some Newark area stores, but other merchants have said they have had a good year. Sales at Silverworks on Main Street in Newark were down this year.

Manager Jody Ellis said that people were spending less. Business was also down at the Christiana Flower and Gift Shop in Churchman's Plaza. Sales at the Christiana Mall were up slightly from last year, said Ron Williams, regional manager of the mall.

Belles blossom, dance at 'Ball'

By HEATHER LYNCH
NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

LOCAL TEENS FROM Glasgow, Newark and Christiana high schools kicked up their heels at the annual Belle's Ball Dec. 28.

For some students, the event was special reunion for girls who met in junior high but were separated by different high schools. "It was neat because I saw a lot of friends I haven't seen in a lot of years — it was a lot of fun," said Christiana junior Laurie Lingafelt.

Hundreds of high-heeled young ladies, clad in various shades of satin, velvet and crepe, straggled through the ice on the arms of their dates to University of Delaware's Clayton Hall for the event.

Belle's Ball originated as a Newark debutante ball. The three high schools, Glasgow, Newark and Christiana decided to merge and host the event.

To qualify for invitation, female juniors and seniors must have a 2.5 GPA and participate in two extra-curricular activities. The attendees are selected by local anonymous parents and one student from each high school who are selected from the previous year's attendees.

The parents and selected students pick the qualifying females from a list supplied by the schools.

Over 300 girls accepted invitations this year, bringing the attendance with their dates to over 600.

"This is the largest crowd we've had," said a Belle's Ball spokeswoman.

The young ladies enjoyed themselves while cutting a rug to music from "The Selectrons" and catching up on the latest with old friends. "There was a lot of rap but there was some good dancing music," said Newark senior Heidi Scott.

"It's really nice for them to have something for the girls to recognize their achievements," said Newark senior Heather Harder.

As the couples arrived, they proceeded to a long line to have their pictures taken.

The women received a keepsake bell to remember their special night.

Free ride home

Home for the holidays is a phone call away for local families around the nation this year under a unique service offered by Greyhound Lines, Inc. and the National Runaway Switchboard (NRS).

With the assistance of the NRS, Greyhound will provide a free ride home for runaways through its Home Free program started in 1984 by Trailways Bus Lines. Greyhound purchased most of Trailways assets in 1987.

"It's heartwrenching to think that hundreds of thousands of runaway children are living on the street, especially during the holiday season when most of us are with family and friends," said Craig Lentzsch, president and CEO of Greyhound.

Police officers, social service agencies, parents, or runaways themselves can begin the road back home by calling the NRS at its toll-free number. Around the clock volunteers will verify that the child is a runaway and then contact the family and Greyhound to arrange the trip.

Lora Thomas, executive director of the NRS, said there are an estimated 1.3 million runaways on the streets of our cities and as many as 5,000 of them die each year from assault, illness or suicide. Thomas said the Greyhound program helps children who want to go home but "just don't have the means to do so."

Pat Gioffre works the line at the recently opened Fatty Patty's on Main Street in Newark.

Fatty Patty's has a mission

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

NEWARK NATIVE PAT Gioffre is the Fatty Patty and he doesn't mind telling you so. Fatty Patty's, his new business which recently opened on Main Street in the old Scott's Gourmet Ice Cream location, is the result of extensive planning on his part.

"I created the concept over almost a year of thinking," said Gioffre. "I was starting to look at locations when Scott's closing just came up."

Fatty Patty's 'mission' according to Gioffre is to sell the best subs and steaks in the area. "A lot of restaurants sell everything under the sun," he explained. "They try to do too much and offer pizza, subs, steaks, ice cream, Italian food and wings."

Gioffre, who graduated from the University of Delaware with a degree in hotel and restaurant management, said he definitely wants more outlets in the future for a line of Fatty Patty's shops.

"I even have a flagship sandwich called the Gut Buster," Gioffre said. "I want it to be as well known as a Big Mac or Whopper."

The shop's eye-catching exterior has gotten a lot of notice on Main Street. "I wanted 'happy and bright,'" said Gioffre. "I eliminated most colors for different reasons and I was left with yellow and purple."

While Gioffre was painting the front of the shop a passing shopper asked him why he was using those colors? Gioffre retorted, "Would you have stopped and asked that if it was brown?" Getting a negative response, he said, "Well, there you go."

According to Gioffre, the business has been wonderful. "I've been getting a lot of university students and people from Main Street businesses," he said. "I don't want Newark residents to think of us as just a university place, though."

In keeping with his plans to get more residents familiar with the shop, Gioffre hopes to expand into delivery service in the spring. "Also, I've tried to keep the prices competitive so people can come in everyday," Gioffre explained.

Fatty Patty's is open Sundays 11-6, Monday through Wednesday 10-10 and Thursday through Saturday 10-11. For pickup orders call 738-4758.

He pounced on the critter,

■ Author's note: Lunacies like these have been inflicted on my poor wife, children and colleagues for years. They have been greeted by both groans and guffaws — the latter, perhaps, to pacify the punster and offset a further barrage. To its victims, punning can be seen as a disease, since any laughter, however sparse, can be contagious. I hope Newark Post readers will tackle this word-play nonsense with zest, thereby assuring them Eternal Joy and a letter from Ed McMahon.

CUTTING BACK ON BUSY SCHEDULES

Children need time away from activities

NEWARK OUTLOOK

FROM THE STAFF OF THE COOPERATIVE EXTENSION OFFICE AT UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE

THE HOLIDAY SEASON offers a break in the routine for most of us, and for most of us that is a welcome break indeed. The holiday season is very busy. Family activities, shopping, visiting friends and going to parties are the norm instead of the constant running around to the various activities that our children are involved in.

Many parents are caught up in what has become known as "activity inflation." Simply put, kids are involved in too many activities.

When most of us were growing up, there simply weren't that many things to become involved in. Also, transportation was a problem. Back then, families put a much stronger emphasis on family activities as opposed to activities that only the kids were involved in.

Today, there is a plethora of activities and kids want to try them all. It's common for kids to be involved in as many as three sports at once besides other activities.

Many kids today are simply doing too much. Ask any 4-H leader or Little League coach and I'm sure they'll tell you the same thing.

Many kids today are setting a pace that is simply wearing them and their parents out, and as a result an undue amount of stress is put on the family. It's awfully easy to rationalize that the kids will benefit from being involved in each new activity. Everyone wants their kids exposed to as many new ideas and situations as possible. The problem is that there are so many good activities coming along these days, and many of us have a hard time saying no.

It's easy to say no when the issue is money. Kids accept that the family budget won't allow something, but how do you explain that there's simply not enough time to fit another activity into the schedule?

The problem really becomes acute when you have more than one child. If you did something for one, then you simply must do it for the rest, right? Wrong! Saying no does not make you a bad parent, in fact it more than likely makes you a good parent. There are some things you can do to get control of the situation.

Every family is busy these days. If your family doesn't eat dinner together at least once a week, then you're over scheduled and it's time to set limits. Here are a few things you can do to get a handle on this problem.

Try the add one, subtract one method. If your child wants to add an activity, make them drop an activity with an equivalent time commitment. This will help kids set priorities and choose activities they really want to be in.

Believe it or not, some kids sign up for activities only because their friends are in them. Also, if the activity the kids are involved in has a season, make sure they understand that they have to fulfill their commitment. Don't cave in and sign kids up for something on the spur of the moment. Try to determine exactly why your child wants to be involved. If the motivation is there, the kids won't mind waiting until the next sign up or season to try it out.

Kids and parents need down time. Kids need one or more nights a week when they don't have to worry about anything except homework or taking out the trash. It may seem as if kids have boundless energy, but they really don't. Sometimes kids are so busy and worn out, that the only place they can rest and relax is in school. If that's the case, then we have another problem. Families need time together, and kids need to spend time with their brothers and sisters.

Cutting back on activities might seem cruel at first, but in the end it's best for the child, the parents and the family.

Masterprint exhibit opens at Art Museum

HAPPY NEW YEAR! May 1996 be filled with love, joy and especially peace for you.

A brand new year is with us. It holds many joys for those interested in the fine and performing arts and I would launch right into things with a reminder that you have only until Sunday, January 14, to see one of the finest traveling exhibits ever offered at the Delaware Art Museum. The exhibit is "Toulouse-Lautrec to Picasso: Masterprints from Winterthur, Switzerland." Now don't read that title too fast, the exhibit is not from "our" Winterthur on the Kennett Pike, but from the one in Switzerland!

This exhibition, soon to leave us, is drawn from the most impressive collections of the Oskar Reinhart Foundation and the Gottfried-Keller Foundation both located in Wilmington's "sister city," Winterthur, Switzerland. We are all in their debt of letting us share from their collections.

"Toulouse-Lautrec to Picasso" features 150 works from the second half of the 19th century and from the early years of this century. It is the first time these works, in this combined format, have ever been shown outside of Switzerland. This is a true artistic first and we have it right here in our area.

Among the artists represented in the show are Jean-Francois Millet, Felix Braquemond, Pierre Bonnard, Charles-Francois Meryon, Camille Corot, Honore Daumier, Camille Pissarro, Paul Cezanne, Edouard Manet, Pierre-Auguste Renoir, Paul Gauguin, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, Edouard Vuillard and Henri Matisse.

According to my never ending source for information d'art, Lise

Monty, "The late 19th and early 20th century witnessed an explosion of interest in printmaking. Many artists explored a variety of techniques including etching, woodcuts, linoleum cuts, aquatints and color lithographs while working concurrently on their paintings." She went on to tell me about a group in France called, "...pierre-graveurs" who considered prints to be as important as paintings. Although most of these artists are known mainly for their paintings, their graphic works depict the adept compositions and technical acuity that gave these artists the label of "master."

The current show demonstrates well the mastery and creativity of these artists and includes some truly rare and remarkable prints. There is a complete album of Gauguin's lithographs known as the Volpini Suite, dating from 1889. Toulouse-Lautrec's complete "Elles" depicting night life and life in the brothels of Paris and dating from 1896 is on exhibit as well as the famous "La Grand Loge" published in an edition of only twelve copies! In addition to all that, 50 prints made by Pablo Picasso are also in DAM until January 14. That ought to whet some artistic appetites in this new year.

THE ARTS

By PHIL TOMAN

Long-time residents have heard this next part of my column for today over and over, but bear with me for the sake of newcomers to the area. It is about the name of the Swiss city and the magnificent museum and gardens on Route 52. The Swiss city of Winterthur, about 20 minutes north of Zurich, is the ancestral home of James Antoine Bidermann who married Evelina Gabrielle du Pont, daughter of Du Pont Company founder E. I. du Pont de Nemours. In 1839 Bidermann built the first Winterthur residence that is today part of our national treasure, Winterthur Museum and Gardens.

The Delaware Art Museum is located at 2301 Kentmere Parkway in Wilmington. It is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and $2.50 for children and students with proper ID. For more information you may call the museum at 302-571-9590.

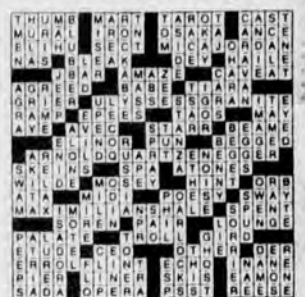

As with any trip to DAM, be sure to check out the other galleries and the Museum Store located just off the entrance lobby.

I will close with a more personal topic. It is a "Thank You" to those kind readers who let me know how much my 'Tis The Season series was appreciated. I am always happy to share information about things to do and see related to the fine and performing arts in our area and especially during the Christmas season.

Keep The Arts in your life during 1996!

Car dealer shows off local artists

Showroom windows at Newark Toyota on Marrows Road glowed with holiday color and merriment this year courtesy of local art students.

"Ed Guringo, a sales associate with Toyota, invited art students from area middle schools to come in and decorate the windows," said Karen Yarnall, an art teacher at Gauger/Cobbs Middle School.

"We wanted to do something to support the community and couldn't come up with a better way than through the youth of the community," explained Guringo.

Bob Winter, the general manager at the dealership, wanted window art "like they used to have on Main Street," so Guringo asked the district for possible artists.

Students from Kirk and Gauger-Cobbs middle schools spent three days at the dealership working on the panels. "The kids were a pleasure to have here," said Guringo. "We even brought in pizza and soda for them and they sat down with their teachers in the middle of the showroom and ate their lunch. Bob Winter was really pleased with how it turned out."

Yarnall said the kids worked hard and had a great time on the project which Guringo said Toyota would definitely like to repeat.

"We had people coming in to see their grandchildren's paintings," said Guringo who retired in 1991 after 31 years as a teacher and principal, primarily in the Red Clay district. "There have been all kinds of positive comments from customers. It's really been neat."

Student artists pose proudly in front of the window decor they helped to create. Charcoal Pit at Fox Run: 39 years new

THE CHARCOAL PIT at Fox Run Shopping Center on Route 40 has a tough reputation to live up to as the third restaurant in a chain that has become a virtual Delaware institution. But although the restaurant's leatherette booths and light gray interior are free from the wear of time, and the individual booth-side juke boxes are made of molded plastic as opposed to the older chrome models, the Charcoal Pit at Fox Run still boasts the same kind of menu that drew a loyal following to the original Pit on Concord Pike in 1956.

The Charcoal Pit prides itself as being "home of the original 1/4 pound hamburger." At $2.35, the quarter-pound hamburger is an example of the Charcoal Pit's commitment to serving reasonably priced, quality food. The Pit's burgers have been recognized by Delawareans for the past ten years in numerous "best hamburger" competitions. They are freshly made daily with a secret blend of seasonings.

The trademark hamburgers are seconded in popularity by the Pit's homemade soups. The giant wooden soup bowl that is suspended in the restaurant is a familiar copy of the soup bowl that hangs in the Concord Pike store. It represents another long standing tradition of good food, whether it advertises a daily special of chicken noodle, chunky tomato, or bean with bacon.

Although the menu is relatively simple, Fox Run Charcoal Pit has recently added a selection of $1.99 kid's meals. According to manager George Wright, the Pit's simplicity is an important source of its success.

"Our menu is basic. It's reliable. People know what to expect when they come here. We have years of experience in preparing what we sell."

"The High School Sundaes are a favorite," said Wright, announcing that three new combinations will be added to the list to recognize Newark area high schools soon. Of course, nothing rivals "the kitchen sink" for $11.75 which is a 20 scoop mountain of ice cream topped with bananas, chocolate syrup, crushed pineapple, cherries, walnuts and whipped cream. As the name implies, it comes with everything but the kitchen sink and the four appetites necessary to make it disappear.

Baby back ribs came to the Pit this year. If you like the ribs at Allyson's Family Restaurant, you'll find the same recipe at the Pit. Both restaurant chains are eager to promote this delicious signature entree.

In keeping with changing dietary trends, the Charcoal Pit offers charcoal broiled chicken breast sandwiches starting at $2.95. You didn't see them on the menu 39 years ago, but their flavor is as finely tuned as any other offering.

"This is a family restaurant for all ages," said Wright. "We have people who used to go to the

Charcoal Pit on Concord Pike who bring their grandchildren to the restaurant now. I used to hang out there when I was a kid and a student at P.S. DuPont High School. I'd stay until they kicked me out."

The Charcoal Pit seats about 150 comfortably in booths and it is a popular location for children's birthday parties. Yes, the 40 person staff can handle about anything.

The Charcoal Pit is open from 11 a.m. until midnight daily.

Hens grow up with hard games

By ERIC FINE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

There's no more room for moral victories.

That's the slogan that University of Delaware Coach Mike Brey will carry into 1996. The Blue Hens' North Atlantic Conference season opened on the road this week, with games at the University of Maine and the University of New Hampshire tomorrow.

"We're in the middle of it now," said Brey, 36, who learned his craft as assistant to coaching legends Morgan Wootten at DeMatha High School and Mike Krzyzewski at Duke.

Brey's review of his first head coaching job could be summed up by the old catchphrase, "So far, so good." The Blue Hens' record stands at 4-4, which is good considering three of the losses came at the hands of powerhouses Indiana, Duke and Villanova.

"I really like our team right now, but I love where we can be in two months," he said. "December was a phase and it's over now. I think we're going into the NAC schedule in a good frame of mind."

As a team, the Blue Hens are shooting 48 percent from the floor and 40 percent from the three-point line. Their 75 percent free-throw shooting is tops among NAC teams.

Brey said the key has been the players' willingness to recognize their roles. In other words, the right players are taking the right shots, and they're all playing well defensively. But he wants to see his team take more trips to the charity stripe—a burden that will fall on his guards.

A former point guard at Northwestern (La.) State and George Washington, Brey wants his little guys to go to the basket more and get the ball to the big men—err, bigger men in Delaware's case—down low. Though he still spoke of the disappointing loss to No. 8 Villanova last Saturday, he was upbeat about the impact of playing against three of the nation's top programs.

"I thought it would help us, and I think that's true," he said. "I think we feel good that we competed on the road with some real good teams. I believe it will be a positive factor for us when we get on the road in this league."

Against the Wildcats, Delaware took a surprising 33-28 lead into halftime. Though they went on to lose 71-58, the Blue Hens' aggressive play limited Villanova star Kerry Kittles to 12 points on just 5-for-15 shooting.

"We're disappointed," Brey said. "We had a chance to maybe steal one. We had every reason to believe we could compete for another 20 minutes."

Time to win

Preseason polls put Delaware between fourth and sixth in a conference that figures to be led by Drexel and Towson State. Brey said the predictions were understandable but not binding.

"We're in a league where... I don't really think we're completely outmanned by anybody," he said. "Moral-victory time is over. I think our guys know that. They know that now we're at a level where we can beat anybody we play."

The Blue Hens' small front court—that relies on 6-foot-5 senior Patrick Evans in the post—is consistent with most NAC teams, he said. The coach expressed more concern over his backcourt depth.

Seniors Rob Garner (7.7 points, 5.4 assists), who went 40 minutes against Villanova and the led the team with 15 points, and Bruce McCullough (7 points) will continue to hold down the starting spots with three-point specialist

Huddling with the Hockenbrocks

By ERIC FINE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

When Jeff Hockenbrock helped lead William Penn to an undefeated season and to the state high school championship, he became part of a family tradition. Brothers Andy and Rob played for championship teams in 1987 and '91, respectively.

The Hockenbrocks grew up in West Norriton (Pa.) Township, which offered youth programs. Soccer, basketball, baseball and street hockey made sports a year-round way of life. A nearby firehouse had basketball courts, tennis courts and a large field.

There was also a couple of golf clubs that unwittingly supplied the brothers and their friends with yet another sports facility of sorts. "We played football in the fairways," said Andy, 25, who manages Save on Sneaks in Newark.

"It was big and wide open," he said. "When we got chased off, we would switch to another fairway until they caught us there."

He played CYO football, then two years at Norristown High School before transferring to William Penn after the family moved to Bear. He played on the Colonials offensive line where he earned honorable mention in the Blue Hen Conference Flight A during his senior year. The team went 10-2.

"I didn't stand out," he said. "I was just part of the team. These guys saw that. They knew that you waited your turn and you would eventually get a chance to play."

Rob, 22, learned the lesson well, becoming an All-State defensive end his senior year. The team went 11-1 that year; he also went on to compile an impressive record as a pitcher on the baseball team. He, too, remembers the 24-hour-a-day abandon in which the family approached sports.

"You got home from school and you had until dinner time...then until bedtime. It was just non-stop. I don't think we had homework back then," he joked.

Hackett handles the minor leagues

By ERIC FINE

MINOR LEAGUE baseball has lived up to its reputation for at least one Delaware prospect.

Jason Hackett, a left-hander in the Baltimore Orioles farm system, watched the tall grass in the outfield sometimes hide the ball in Johnson City, Tenn. During his first year in Sarasota, Fla., he played before few spectators.

"You played by yourself. There was nobody there. There were more scouts in the stands than fans," said Hackett, who graduated from Caravel in '93 and now lives with his brother outside Newark.

He rode buses that overheated going up hills. He got used to eating nearly all his meals at burger joints that advertised 5-for-$4.95 specials and killing nights watching ESPN or playing video games. And he learned to like it.

Hackett

But don't expect news of the Orioles spending a zillion dollars on Roberto Alomar, Randy Myers, David Wells and BJ Surhoff, among others, to blow his mind. It won't.

Like other prospects, Hackett cares about only one thing—getting to "The Show" and leaving all the other stuff behind in the dust of some rural interstate.

"Nobody really cares who they play for—as long as they make it," he said. "That's the whole point."

The Orioles made Hackett their fourth pick in '93, a disappointment at the time; as a left-hander with a fastball clocked in the high 80s in high school, he expected to be taken in the second round, the third at the latest.

But the All-State pitcher's velocity dropped off during his final season after he took it upon himself to carry his team, and he believes that scared off some scouts. He accepted a baseball scholarship to the University of Miami, but reconsidered after the school fired the coach who recruited him.

Setback won't slow Caravel

By ERIC FINE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

THE BUCCANEERS MAY have lost a battle, but they're winning the war.

The battle they lost was a heart-breaking 51-48 loss to Archmere last Thursday after blowing a 14-point halftime lead. But they're winning the war as evidenced by their impressive 3-1 record.

Caravel Niggebrugge inherits a team led by seniors Jon Markle and Jimmy Frazier and junior Jarett McDonald. Entering the Archmere game, the trio had averaged nearly 50 points in wins over Westtown (Pa.), DeLaSalle (Pa.) and Ferris.

Though small up front, the team shoots well with McDonald's 17.7 points-per-game average leading the way.

"We're looking for an up-tempo game," Niggebrugge said. "The guys are very interchangeable.

Offensively I'm pleased."

The Bucs need to improve their play on the other end, however. Getting good position under the basket is even more crucial because of the absence of a true big man.

"I think there's a lot of promise," the coach said. "The work ethic has definitely been there. Good bunch of kids."

The Bucs appeared on the brink of putting Archmere away en route to a 36-22 lead. But they came out flat, which gave Archmere the opportunity to use their superior size and long-range shooting to cut into Caravel's lead.

Turnovers, especially in the backcourt, hurt as did permitting Archmere to get back into its offense. Screens allowed shooter Mike Gordon (22 points) to spot up from the corners; his three-pointers helped break Caravel.

The Bucs appeared to be playing on their heels in the second half, which suggests a case of early-season fatigue.

"There was a lull if you will," Niggebrugge said. "We let them back in the game. We just could not hit any shots. We should have matched up pretty well. We got some good looks."

But, he added, turnovers led to some rather timid play down at stretch time. "We didn't take charge when we had to."

McDonald's second-half foul trouble didn't help. "Basically, we had a very small team in there," the coach said. "We got one shot in the second half."

But Niggebrugge also didn't want his team to blow one loss out of proportion.

"I don't want any finger-pointing," he said. "I don't want them to beat themselves. I don't want excuses. Every team has to go through these things. I want this to be a learning piece."

Markle led Caravel with 17 points and 8 rebounds, McDonald (10 points) and Frazier (9 points) also contributed.

Hackett handles minors

ound, the money the Orioles dangled wasn't too bad: a $70,000 signing bonus and another $80,000 for college. He came to terms with the Orioles in September 1993, and reported to his first workout at Camden Yards the following January. He immediately caught the eye of former Orioles General Manager Roland Hemond. But it wasn't because of anything he did with a baseball — he arrived at the ballpark wearing a Detroit Tigers hat. Hackett soon learned Lesson No. 1 after admitting to Hemond the Tigers had always been his favorite team. "Not anymore," Hemond told him. "Your favorite team is the team that pays you." His minor-league road got off to a rocky start in '94 after he was assigned to rookie ball in the Gulf Coast League. He was 0-8 with an ERA of around 8.00. But Hackett earned a promotion to the Class A California League last year after a nice showing in spring training. He hung out with former Orioles Harold Baines and Curtis Goodwin; he even pitched to Michael Jordan, who has since swapped his field of dreams for the hardwood and a much bigger contract.

Pitching out of the bullpen for the High Desert Mavericks in Victorville, Calif., and later starting for the Bluefield (Va.) Orioles in the Class A Appalachian League, he recorded an impressive 88 strikeouts in 90 innings and cut his ERA in half (3.80).

If he remains in the bullpen, his goal for '96 is to pitch at least 100 innings. "That's darn good; that means you're getting a lot of work," he said.

Of course life in Bluefield has its quirks. With the border unclear between Virginia and West Virginia, there were homeowners unsure of which state they lived in. And the California League is a hitter's league, a launching pad for sluggers.

At 20, he is both low-key and candid. On pitching to Jordan, the high priest of hoops, the frugal Hackett was more concerned about the $25 fine a coach had levied against any pitcher who surrendered a hit to the superstar. (He coaxed His Airness into two ground-ball outs.)

And though he believes he can blossom into a power pitcher with his hard slider and decent fastball, he knows that hitting spots carries nearly as much weight as throwing hard.

"Everybody can hit a fastball," he said. "That's why they preach to us in the minor leagues. Location, location, location." An inch is the difference between a guy hitting the ball off the sweet spot and off the end of the bat.

Hitting spots, Hackett said, is also the difference between pitching in the Bluefields and pitching in the Baltimore. "We do it occasionally, [big-leaguers] do it consistently."

Getting to the Orioles' Double A franchise in Bowie, Md., by the end of the season would put the Chestertown native right on schedule.

ation was spent outside."

"I think sports drove our lives," Rob said. "They kept us out of trouble." Because trouble meant no competition. "Our punishment would be 'You can't go out today.'"

Even their sister Holly caught the fever, going on to earn All-State honors at William Penn in field hockey and softball.

After moving to Bear, the brothers put up a hoop and often played basketball at night using car headlights to illuminate their "court." The house has a large backyard that they used for volleyball and football.

Andy, an assistant coach at Mount Pleasant High School, had the experience of working with Dawna Smith, the first girl to play varsity football in Delaware. He would like to continue to pursue coaching.

As for Jeff, he may be the youngest but he is also the tallest. At 6-foot-6, he earned All-State honors as both a defensive end and a tight end. He caught 20 passes and scored 6 touchdowns.

He will spend the rest of the year deciding where to attend college. Right now, it's a toss-up between James Madison and the University of Pennsylvania. But that could change, he warns.

He credits his brothers tutelage, which began at a young age in the basement of the house. And the brothers always did their best to attend each other's games, which was another aid.

"With Rob being an All-State defensive end, he could see things from the stands that I couldn't see on the field," Jeff said. "He was able to guide me in what kind of rush I should take on passing downs — whether I should take an inside rush or an outside rush."

And with Andy being a coach, Jeff received tips about his overall game dealing with his stance and his blocks. And about his attitude.

"Knowing that Mr. Reynolds [the football coach] would be at William Penn for the next 70,000 years, we told him what to expect — and not to get down because you're fifth string," Andy said.

But Rob still likes to rub in the fact that as tight ends, they both caught long passes against Brandywine during their careers — but that his 60-yard play resulted in a touchdown.

Jeff ran 59 yards but was knocked out at the one.

"To him, that's his one moment of glory," Jeff said.

"That's something I can hold over my little brother's head for the rest of my life," Rob said.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Newark High's Butch Patrick proved he could run during the football season when he rushed for over 1,100 yards for the Yellowjackets.

But Patrick didn't leave his speed on the gridiron. On Dec. 27, he tied the state record for the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.48 seconds at the Diamond State Indoor Track and Field Invitational at the University of Delaware.

Perhaps football taught the senior how to deal with pressure. Patrick needed all the composure he could muster after three false starts.

"The second (false start) took a little out of me," he said. "I lost my concentration. I had to visualize myself going down the track" before his third attempt.

Butch Patrick

Like any perfectionist, Patrick believes he can do better. "I'm capable of running a much better race," he said.

How much better? Patrick's goal is to shave a full tenth of second off his time, knocking it down to 6.38.

He credits his success in the meet to a strict training regimen, including distance running and weight training. "Usually after football, people take time off, a couple of weeks to rest their bodies," he said.

But he ran steps and even the hallways of Newark High when the weather didn't cooperate with his schedule. He plans to continue competing in an effort to stay sharp for next month's state-wide indoor meet.

Hens grow up with schedule

► BREY, HENS, from 1B

Against the Wildcats, Delaware took a surprising 33-28 lead into halftime. Though they went on to lose 71-58, the Blue Hens' aggressive play limited Villanova star Kerry Kittles to 12 points on just 5-for-15 shooting.

"We're disappointed," Brey said. "We had a chance to maybe steal one. We had every reason to believe we could compete for another 20 minutes."

But the team's experience remains one of its strengths.

"I think one of the blessings of being a rookie coach is having five seniors," Brey said. "There is no question that Rob Garner and Pat Evans have held my hand in some ways and shown me the way. (And) the guys who are playing for us are men. They've been around."

Brey took over the program last April and remains content with the decision. The program's size allows him to spend more time with his family. And the school is in the heart of the recruiting areas he concentrated on at Duke.

"I'm excited as I was on April 12. The position takes a lot of energy, but it's something I love to do. I haven't been thrown a whole lot of curves," he said.

Being away from high-pressure basketball programs like those at Duke and DeMatha presents a nice change for Brey.

"It's a different level; you deal with different expectations," he said. "We don't have the same budget. We don't stay in the same hotels."

Nor are the Blue Hen expected to win every game. At Duke and DeMatha, he said, "I could count on one hand the number of times we were underdogs. The gun's been at my head for 13 years."

But the Rockville, Md., native said he is hungry to build a winner, to recruit players on the level of Spencer Dunkley and Anthony Wright who led Delaware into the NCAA tournament for the first time in the school's history.

For the time being, moving to a larger conference like the Atlantic 10 would be rushing things. Staying in the NAC, he said, "is just right for our program where it is now," he said. "Four or five years from now, it may be something to reevaluate."

WRITING An Ad

- Start your ad with what you are selling.
- Be descriptive. List your item's best features.
- Avoid abbreviations. Too many abbreviations can confuse the reader.
- Always state the price of an item. If you are flexible on price, include "negotiable" or "best offer".
- Complete your ad with a phone number and the hours in which you will receive calls.
- Including the word "please" in your ad increases responses.
