488 Students Claim Dean's List Rating

Seniors, Juniors Finish In First, Second Spots

The Dean's List for the first semester of 1948-49 includes 488 students, about 22 per cent of the entire student body.

Eighteen of these students had scholastic indices of 4.00, equivalent of a straight "A" average. A record averaging at least 3.00, or "B," for all subjects is necessary for inclusion on the list.

Veterans more than held their own with non-veteran students. They constituted 45 per cent of the student body last fall, but the 243 veterans who are on the Dean's List are almost exactly 50 per cent of the total named.

There were 189 seniors, 140 juniors, 72 sophomores and 87 freshmen on the honor list. The School of Engineering, with 165 on the Dean's List had a greater percentage of its students named. The nearly 25 per cent in Engineering was followed by nearly 23 per cent for the School of Agriculture; 21 per cent for Arts and Science; 20 per cent for Education, and 16 per cent for Home Economics.

Schools of Wilmington and New Castle County whose former students were named on the list were: Pierre S. duPont High School, Wilmington High School, Conrad, Alexis I. duPont, Salesianum, Ursuline, Friends, Tower Hill, Brown Vocational, Claymont, Archmere, Newark, William Penn of New Castle and Middletown.

Kent County Schools whose graduates are named are: Dover, Caesar Rodney, Felton, Harrington, and John Bassett Moore at Smyrna, while those of Sussex County are Greenwood, Milford, Seaford, Selbyville, Rehoboth, Lord Baltimore at Ocean View, Lewes, Laurel Georgetown, Delmar, and Bridgeville.

Eleven New Freres Obtain White Stars

Sigma Nu initiated eleven new brothers last Saturday afternoon at the Sigma Nu House. Pinned with the white star during the afternoon were E. Paul Catts Jr., Cranford, N. J.; Joseph M. Lank, Milford, Del.; James R. Jones, Seaford, Del.; Charles L. Carr, Mat-vern, Pa.; John D. Clemens, Newark, Del.; Charles E. Lloyd, Wilm., Del.; L. William Haines, Ocean City, N. J.; Victor P. Belinger, Wilm., Del.; John M. Thompson Jr., Newport, Del.; James P. Dimond, Ocean City, N. J., and E. Jacques A. Pernikoff, New York, N. Y. A well practiced alumni initiating team performed the rites and brought the group into the fraternity. Due to unavoidable circumstances it was necessary to postpone the traditional initiation banquet to a future date.

Drexel Prexy Condemns Unbalanced Education

Dr. James Creese, President of Drexel Institute of Technology, was the speaker on Wednesday, March 16, at a joint dinner meeting of the Delaware Student Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the society's Wilmington section, held on Old College.

Calling them public issues of deep importance, Dr. Creese named the major dilemmas facing the educational administrators of today as being those of:

"Specialization—the bugaboo of developing a fractional instead of a whole citizen; vocational training—the question of how far an institution may venture from a balance between general studies and studies of a practical and applicable nature; enrollment—the question of making higher education available to a 'select' minority or to all who are intellectually fit; and the dilemma of imposed authority—the question of the status of really free investigation and conclusion, in the face of finger-shaking by a multitude of public and private reporting of bodies."

Dr. Creese said that while the rise of industrialization came with the application of scientific knowledge and brought with it great economic and social change, a tendency to "pickle" the status and obligations of institutions of higher learning in their Nineteenth Century forms has not helped these institutions find their proper place in our industrial civilization and has added another dilemma to the schoolman's list.

"The remarkable growth of industrial research since the war," he said, "has made plain that modern changes in industrial production will intensify the need for business officers who have learned how to think in engineering terms, who understand the sciences that control modern production, and who are as much at home in the laboratory or in the shops as they are in the front office."

Large-scale production and distribution is causing the rise of new

Rabbi Drooz Talks At Vesper Service

Rabbi Herbert E. Drooz of Temple Beth Emeth, Wilmington, spoke at the University Vesper Services held at Old College on March 20.

The theme of his talk, on the subject "Religion and Science Can Meet," was that for the first time in generations, a reconciliation between science and religion can be envisioned.

Rabbi Drooz pointed out that "there has been a centuries-old warfare between science and religion, with blind hatred on both sides which has been a credit to neither. Religion has often violently resisted the facts revealed by the laboratory."

"Science has often dealt arrogantly and most unscientifically with matters of religion, while religion has formulated its doctrines on the basis of the science of ancient Babylon and Greece. The realm of facts and their relationships (of science) and the realm of values (of religion) have invaded each other's territory."

Rabbi Drooz stated that the fact that a reconciliation may be in the offing traces to "Hitlerism and the atomic age, which shattered the scientist's overwhelming self-confidence, and sent them out to evangelize the world with a message of damnation. May this reconciliation," he added, "come speedily so that the temple of religion, which suffered heavily in warfare between the two, may be rebuilt in time to save mankind from itself."

Arm Swings Gavel At ASME Confab

Dean David L. Arm of the University of Delaware's School of Engineering was chairman Monday night, March 21, at the annual education conference of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, held in New York City.

Dean Arm, who is chairman of ASME's Wilmington Section, also served as chairman of the conference last year. He recently was appointed to a five-year term on ASME's education committee, which sponsors the conference.

Principal speakers at the session, held at the Engineers' Club, were Dr. H. P. Hammond, Dean of Engineering at Pennsylvania State College, and L. J. Fletcher, Director of Personnel and Public Relations for the Caterpillar Tractor Company. Representatives of eight other professional societies were invited to participate: American Society for Engineering Education, American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, Society of Automotive Engineers, American Society of Refrigerating Engineers, American Society of Agricultural Engineers, Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences, American Society of Tool Engineers, and the Instrument Society of America.

Tickets on Sale For Engineers' Ball

Announcement of the Engineers' Ball to be held on April 9, has been well received. A ticket selling table has been set up in Evans Hall and students of all classes have shown considerable interest. At present it appears that a large majority of engineers will be on hand with their dream girls.

The last announcement by Chairman David Rosenblatt disclosed that a television set will be in operation in addition to the side attractions of such engineering devices as Kiss-O-Meters.

Writing Contest Opens This Week

April 15 Deadline For All Contest Entries

The fourth annual Creative Writing Contest, sponsored by the English Department of the University of Delaware as its contribution to the Delaware Festival of Arts, opens this week. All entries in the contest must be submitted to the contest committee on or before April 15.

Any undergraduate student enrolled at the University may submit material, which may represent any field of creative writing. Prizes will be awarded to the best works in each of four fields: poetry, fiction, non-fictional prose, and drama. Each student may submit as many manuscripts as he wishes, but is eligible to receive only one prize. The contest committee reserves the right to withhold awards in any field where no entries meet the standards of the judges. The prizes, books bearing plates with the seal of the University and the student's name, will be presented at the annual Honors Day program on May 19.

Rules for the contest are as follows: (1) Manuscripts must be typed in triplicate on regular 8 1/2 x 11 inch paper; (2) manuscripts must be accompanied by a title page bearing the title of the work, the author's name, and the author's post office box number; but the other pages of the manuscripts must be left unsigned; (3) manuscripts must be received by the contest committee on or before April 15; (4) manuscripts must be delivered to Room 316, University Hall.

The prize-winners in last year's contest were Robert E. Howell, First Prize; John M. Pursell, Second Prize; Bruce G. Laird, Third Prize; Peggy Anne Munoz, Fourth Prize; and Anne J. Perkins, Fifth Prize.

The contest committee is comprised of Mrs. Thomas Rogers, Miss Anne Weygandt, and Mr. Edwin Heinle, all of the English Department. Judges for the contest will be announced soon by the committee.

Series of Lectures Given at Edgewood

A series of six lectures, principally dealing with national and international problems, is being presented this spring by University of Delaware faculty members to officers at the Army Chemical Center, Edgewood Arsenal, Md.

The lectures were arranged at the request of the Troop Information and Education Office of the center, and are an integral part of the troop information program there. Hour-long addresses are presented to 400 officers, and the visiting lecturer also has an informal meeting with the officers who are particularly interested in his field.

The lecturers and their topics are:

Dr. L. A. Stearns, professor of entomology, "Iran—The Critical Point in the Middle East."

Dr. G. Gorham Lane, assistant professor of psychology, "Contemporary Problems in Industrial Psychology."

Frank Zozzora, associate professor of engineering, "Technical Illustration."

Dr. Walter Kirchner, associate professor of history, "Recent Internal Developments in Russia and Their Significance Abroad."

Dr. Charles N. Lanier, Jr., professor of economics, "Law and Labor Relations."

Earl P. Hanson, professor of geography, "New Worlds Emerging."

MARYLA JONAS

Jonas Concert Set For April 7, Here

Renowned Pianist Draws Attention Of Billy Rose

On the night of April 7, the celebrated pianist, Maryla Jonas, will present a recital in Mitchell Hall under sponsorship of the Artist Series. In a recent edition of his "Pitching Horseshoes," Billy Rose devoted his entire column to Miss Jonas. By special permission of Mr. Rose, The Review is able to reprint the column because of its special interest to the University community. Reserved seats for Miss Jonas' recital are available from the Committee on Cultural Activities in Room 202, University Hall.

As of right now, a girl in my office is tying pretty red ribbons around a quart of vintage champagne and a pound of Romanoff caviar, and before I finish pounding out this column, the goodies will be delivered to a bigish blonde who plays the piano. Don't go snitching to Eleanor—she knows all about it. The fizzwater and fish eggs are just my way of saying "Thank you" to a lady who gave me bubbles in the blood last Saturday afternoon at Carnegie Hall.

Yep, I said Carnegie Hall, and to ing but, the piano player is Maryla give you the whole truth and nothing but the truth and nothing but the truth, whom Jerome Bohm, of the New York Herald Tribune, once called "the first woman pianist since Teresa Carreno."

Of course, I don't want you to get the idea that I'm going long-hair on you—as a matter of fact, I only went to Carnegie Hall because I knew the story behind Maryla Jonas, and I was curious to see the lady whose case history reads as if it were written by Hemingway in collaboration with Sigmund Freud. Maryla (accent the middle syllable, please) Jonas was born in Warsaw in 19—none of your business. At seven she played the piano so well that the neighbors stopped complaining, at nine she made her debut with the Warsaw Philharmonic, and at eleven she became the pupil of Paderewski.

At fifteen, her first Berlin concert was a four-star success and, from then on, life was a succession of bravos, bouquets and beaucoup money. Between triumphs, the pianist married a distinguished criminologist and, for the next few years, the couple honeymooned in one of the finest homes in Warsaw.

Then one morning a gent named Hitler announced that powerful Poland was planning to attack poor little Germany, and by the time his announcement was on the radio, the planes with the swastikas were over Warsaw. A few weeks later when the Nazis entered the

THE GEYSER

By JIM REAGAN

Spring fever has struck again. We've been searching through the files for last year's spring fever column—realizing that you'd never remember it, we felt safe—but the files have disappeared through the years. Honestly, people, you don't have to hang the things on the wall—especially with a hangman's knot.

Sometimes we really strain ourselves, wondering what to do when we are dry—whether to copy stuff from some other college ray or Lib

Houston or make up our own humorous jazy; of course we prefer ease to effort. Sometimes we really go off our rocker and get ideas like writing a paragraph and letting you fill in the punctuation. How low can you stoop—() ?

Our best advice is for you to check in on Hartmann or the tank this week—because we'll be rambling on about nothing until we reach our quota—our spies have got the sack bug too. Sleep—it's wonderful.

Vacation time enters the scene real soon—stopwatches are out, bags are packed, the gas is bought. Even the Sigma Nus are slacking off on Don Christ. The poor boy has been hearing that this new convertible wouldn't help with Rita—and hearing it until his ears were as red as the car. That's all right, son. We all have troubles.

Take Will Fisher, for instance. The lad lost his keys in the Barclay and didn't get to the Sussex tea dance until 5:50. With ten whole minutes to kick away, our boy Will went mad.

We hear KA got an invite to the Delaware State Senior Invitational Tournament—all they have to do is beat St. Mary's, Kings College, and a few other teams. Ought to provide a few minutes amusement for the boys, anyway.

The engineers are really putting out for their ball. If the rest of the thing is as well done as the posters, it'll really be a major production. Judging by the way the slide rule madmen are gadgeteering, it ought to have all the excitement of life in the jungle, at least.

Well, it's time again, so here's the Scoop on the Group: Frank Locke saving his beer money by saving his frat pin. . . . Sussex girls making the most of the tea dance—how many corners can you find? . . . Jim Russell climbing back on the wagon again. . . . Krud Phil Krud visiting Katie's and the Clover Leaf—DTD's squiring. . . . Marcia Salkind gyrating Turkish style. . . . B. J. Kinder looking the part as the Wolf Gal at KA's shindig. . . . Jane Adair and Ruth Smoyer Lehighing for the weekend. . . . Bob Billingsley getting a Sussex serenade instead of a serious talk. . . . Don Huston resting on Jane Raymond's time. . . . Parke Perrine and Mandy Abbott missing last week's item. . . .

We warned you, chillun. We're away to nostalgia and sack. Have fun and rest next week. See ya.

WITH THIS issue of the Review your boys quietly hang themselves on a rusty nail (cheers in the background).

Yep, we've both had a pretty good time on this job despite the various irritating setbacks. What are they? — Ah-a—well, you don't want to hear about those—trivialities. You insist? Well, here goes.

FLUSH'S STORY—(with deep emotion and fear)

"Several weeks ago a big black Packard sedan with English Department markings (an ugly King Cobra painted on the driver's door) visited my house. . . . I don't like to talk about it. . . . Cough! Cough! —O. K. I'll go on. My achin' Hump—it was horrible. The occupants in the car were inconceivable—fangs, black piercing eyes, drooling mouths—like the mugs against Buck Rogers now. Cough! The Kinder Garden

By B. J. KINDER
A FISH STORY . . .

Once upon a time, a very wise and enterprising young man who was quite interested in fishing invented a new kind of lure for those elusive creatures—fish, that is. He had trained himself, after long study, to even think like a fish. He then thought to himself, "What is most tempting to me?" Now, of course, if he was not thinking like a fish, we could expect many answers, but as it happens, he was definitely being fishy. Well enough digressions—he figured out a lure that positively made him feel wild—this was good. Then he set about to create this enticing bit of fish appeal. When he did finally finish it it was the acme of perfection as far as lures go—for fish, that is.

Otto George Sands felt that he had made his fortune, and soon after, these lures went on the market and came to be called Ogs, after the initials of the inventor. Production was very small on these objects so there was a very limited market.

At this time a very rich Dirty Capitalist came into view, and like a Dirty Capitalist, he bought up all the available stock of Ogs. One thing to be said for the capitalist, however, is that he was an interested fisherman, himself. So, after he bought these lures, which numbered twenty, he decided to try them out. He was particularly interested in catching bass, so he went to the best possible place with his Ogs, and proceeded to find out how they worked. They worked like magic—the fish hardly waited for the lure to be tossed into the water, when they would leap up and make fools of themselves over the Ogs.

Then, just as quickly as the fish leaped for the bait, a storm came up, and the Dirty Capitalist who had spent all his money on the only Ogs in the world, was swamped as he sat in his boat. The lures which he had put into his fishing kit were washed overboard, and the Dirty Capitalist was ruined.

MORAL: If you are going to be a Dirty Capitalist, don't put all your Ogs in one bass kit.

The other day we received a C.O.D. letter from Comrade Pinkus Siltcheimmer of the Maryland Young Communists League. Comrade Siltcheimmer is editor of the leftist publication "The Weekly Crop-Sharer," and for the past six years has been trying to instigate a boll weevil revolution among the bollshevists of northern Alabama.

Siltcheimmer explains that the only reason for his prolonged failure is that the boll weevils refuse to settle down to serious business due to the distracting influence of cotton gin.

While paring our nails in a sociology class called "Mating Techniques of the Neanderthal Weasel," a pre-requisite course for all students majoring in Corporation Embezzlement or Business Degeneration, a blinding flash of genius crossed our weary brows; hence:

Ferrier Concert Is Enormous Success

Recital Includes Works Of Brahms, Bach, Handel

On Monday night, March 21, in Mitchell Hall, the music lovers of Newark were given one of their finest treats. Seldom is one privileged to hear so gorgeous a contralto voice so beautifully handled. It is difficult not to deal in superlatives.

Kathleen Ferrier, a newcomer to the American concert platform, is a British girl brought to this country by Bruno Walter to sing in Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde" with the New York Philharmonic. Miss Ferrier is in complete command of her voice. It is rich and flawless throughout her entire range. Her breath control, the basis of all good voice production, is outstanding. Her stage presence is dignified and gracious. Good to look at, Miss Ferrier "sets the stage" for each song before she starts to sing, and holds the audience from beginning to end.

We all expect a good program to begin with Bach and Handel, but Miss Ferrier made her first group of songs live as they too frequently fail to do. It was a fine touch of programming to put "Have You Seen but a Whyte Lillie Grow" in this group.

German Leader is something that all vocalists feel are a must in a program. How seldom have we heard it as we did on Monday night! It made us feel that we had been missing something all these years.

Brahms is never easy to interpret, but Miss Ferrier took us into the realm of pure music with the Brahms group of Four Serious Songs. She gave us much food for thought, and even the least trained musician was impressed by the artistry and soul displayed in this group.

Miss Ferrier's last group was in a much lighter vein, but here again her sheer musical genius was displayed. She carried us all with her into the mood of each song. Her encores, so graciously given at the end of her program, kept us on the same musical plane. We came away feeling that we had

Newman Clubites Hold Meeting

Last Tuesday evening in the Lounge of Old College, the Newman Club held its regular weekly meeting. Corrine Russo, Joan Wallace, Joe Kwiatowski, Jack Yasik, and Father Thomas Carlin participated in a panel discussion on the topic, "Looking Toward Marriage." After the subject was covered by these experts, questions and comments flew fast and furiously from the other students attending the meeting. By the time the arguments had been settled and the discussion had ended, everyone was well-informed, but still curious about the complexities of wedded bliss. After refreshments were served, everyone started dancing to the wonderful records from Jack Yasik's collection.

Genial Ed Vaklyes, who tried so hard to tell some funny jokes at the St. Patty's party, is still searching for a new joke book with absolutely sure-fire material. Archie Rapposelli, the gorgeous hunk of man from the Training House who won the beauty contest at the party, is being convinced that he should enter this year's Miss America Contest as an added attraction.

The next meeting of the Club will be held on Tuesday, April 5, at 7:45 p.m. in the Lounge at Old College. On April 24, after the nine o'clock Mass at St. John's Church, a communion breakfast will be held in Kent Hall.

professional groups in the business offices and in the sales offices as well as in the strictly technical departments.

"The days of the owner-manager have passed," Dr. Creese said, "and the days of management by an owner's lawyer or his banker are passing. In great and small corporations, at every level of business, the professional manager trained for technical responsibilities as well as for business and financial operations, is steadily gaining authority. His training in college and in professional schools of business should be no less the responsibility of the faculty of a college of business administration. The subjects presented by the two faculties cover the great range of industrial and commercial interests characteristic of the present time."

Dr. Creese was introduced by Harold A. Birkness, associate professor of mechanical engineering at Delaware, who is a member of the Wilmington section's program committee. Dean David L. Arm of the School of Engineering of the University of Delaware, the chairman of the Wilmington section, presided. About 100 students and practicing engineers attended the meeting, which is arranged annually to familiarize the engineering students with the ASME and some of the activities of the national society.

Mermen Capture Season's Honors With 7-2 Record

Rawstrom Leads Team to Success

The annual post-mortems that run concurrently with the close of any of the chronological divisions of athletic schedules reveal that the University of Delaware swimming team topped the winter sports calendar with a 7-2 record and some assorted hardware for the higher echelon stars at a couple of extra-curricular conference meets. And for all practical purposes, that item can be dismissed after proper notation by the local newspapers and the entry of the hard facts into the records. But there has been a singular development among that particular group that comes close to running counter to the current production-line trend that guides much of the thinking in intercollegiate athletics. The Hen swimmers have found something besides the foreman in Harry Rawstrom.

When the balding Jerseyite arrived on the scene in 1946 to coach a sport that had alternately run very hot and very cold in its sixteen year history at Newark, the smart boys on the inside were wondering whether he would ever turn out a winning team. Everyone was pretty well convinced, and rightly so, that swimming involved nothing more than a year round diet of carving out a channel in grimy Taylor Pool, a very odious task what with the little enthusiasm that greeted any successful applications of this policy on Saturday afternoons. And it took somewhat of a dictatorial strong man to get Hen swimmers to work the way college swimmers should work. Rawstrom was simply too nice a guy.

There have been plenty of nice guys in the coaching world, but there have also been plenty of athletes who would take advantage of them. Like the Army, it was a type of leadership that was guided by the "familiarity breeds contempt" theme, and if you could get results on the "nice guy" basis, it meant that you were the essence of nicety. Essence is usually pretty hard to extract, but fortunately for the Athletic policy at Delaware, Rawstrom oozes it like a sponge.

If you like to call a spade a spade, you'll admit that a good high school swimmer in these days sells for more than a carton of Luckies in Berlin. As soon as a boy cracks so many seconds in the "100", he can name his own terms, and enough colleges are shopping for swimming teams today to make it pretty rough on the schools that can't write their own check. And when you're coaching swimming on a simon-pure basis in a state where most of your talent develops in the Brandywine, you can rest assured that success comes the hard way. It's come hard for Rawstrom, but the product has shown up in other places than on a stop watch.

The ex-All-American from Springfield has built up a spirit of loyalty, sacrifice, enthusiasm, and sportsmanship among a representative cross-section of the student body that seems to recall the original ideals of amateur competition. Unlike the majority of collegiate sports, swimming requires plenty of hard work on an individual basis in a very specialized slice of competitive activity. The swimmer must be tuned like a piano, must hurt himself almost to the limit of the pain-bearing facilities, must shut himself off from the opposition in his race and think in terms of tenths of seconds and kick and turns, pace and stomach, arms and start. In short, it was not intended for the character who likes to physically subdue his opponent to the accompaniment of a blood-thirsty crowd. Not having that reward to offer makes it often tough for a coach to generate the enthusiasm that goes with any sort of voluntary contribution of time and effort.

Rawstrom has combined a thorough knowledge of the game with a sprinkling of paternal affection, bedside manner, amateur psychology, and a penchant for asking rather than commanding to illicit that very contribution from among his swimmers. Utilizing the zeal of a circuit-riding preacher, he has convinced most of them that the thing can be licked, that the old formula of "hard work plus hard work equals success" is worth something after all, and that college age is never to late to start. Most of them get pretty sick of the routine after eight months of daily practice, but after the customary three week layoff in March, Rawstrom will start lighting fires about the latest conditioning theories, and spring practice gets off with a bang. Most of them swear off even shower baths after the season, but Rawstrom will be feeding them a diet of mile swims three weeks later. To work with Rawstrom leaves you convinced that a castor oil salesman could become a hero on a kiddies hour.

The whole thing has come a long way since he issued his first call in '46. Many of the college records have been assaulted at least once; the times have improved; things are looking up on the freshman level; the team is getting bigger; and they're moving up into higher competitive brackets and getting proportionately more recognition. But more than that, Rawstrom is giving them a competitive legacy that will stand up well for some time. He's directing effort in such a way that it leaves his charges convinced that they can take two strikes and still knock off the big guy with some concentrated effort. And if you can take a willing college athlete and show him how to be a giant-killer without sneaking up from behind, you're contributing something more to the program than a string of scalps. Harry Rawstrom is spreading that kind of gospel.

Ingenuity No. 8

The anagram in last week's column stumped many knowledge knowers but also received the following terse comments: (Incidentally, these bits of conversation were recorded at 9:59 p.m. behind the trees in front of New Castle, Sussex. THE SPORTSMAN

By DICK WELLS

Varsity and Freshmen sports activities have struck a new low, so on to cleaning up before springtime at-letes take over the page.

Attention has been called to last week's basketball summary, in which attack power only was pointed out. Let it be noted that several Hen passers frequently played a powerful defensive game that didn't show up on the score card. Art Sullivan, Joe Kwiatkowski, and Ed Clark were more valuable to the team than their offensive scores indicate. Dick Grossman, Frank Albera, and Fred Kelleher often mixed a good defense and attack effectively. Bill Nash and Ace Hoffstein specialized in feeding scorers along with being consistent point contributors. Their assists were definitely part of the offense, or attack, which led to many Delaware field goals. The score card doesn't register them—the professionals do.

Three University of Delaware entries in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Meet at Princeton's new Dillon Gymnasium Pool were eliminated in the trials last Friday and Saturday as the Yale University mermen swept most of the events and the mythical team laurels. Lew Ward went out in his backstroke heat; Bauduy Grier was eliminated in the first round of the diving; and Jack Smith failed to crack the finals in both the "50" and "100".

From a Delaware point of view, the performance of Smith was the highlight of the day. The burly Hen co-captain ripped off a 24.5 seconds race in the 50-yard dash and a 53.8 hundred, both well under the school records in those events.

The swimmers will take a well-deserved rest for two weeks, but will continue vigorous workouts after spring recess with a determined eye on next year's schedule, which will undoubtedly be one of the toughest a Delaware tank team has ever tackled.

Delaware gridhens, who have been rocking the walls of Frazer Field for the past three weeks, will wind up the first half of the spring program on some foreign battlefield this Saturday. Where, has not been disclosed by the gridiron chief. Rumors are flying but none of them count. For those who persist, Southern Cal, Texas, Michigan, also Navy and Villanova may be eliminated as possibilities.

Freshmen and others from the junior varsity will continue the scrap for recognition for an additional three weeks period after the holidays. Several have already threatened to jeopardize varsity positions. Ensuing dub scrimmages should bear a lot of weight in determining next season's playing personnel.

Latest flash:

Gappy Fierman led his Sigma Nu mates to cup honors in the Inter-fraternity swim meet by taking firsts in the 50-yard dash and diving events, and anchoring their victorious relay quartet. Kappa Alpha finished second and Theta Chi third in the spirited meet.

Youngling the Delhen, means ticks for me.

All his opponents, when quoted have said,

"I'd rather be with Russell than Ted."

Both of these were second entries for the contestants. Keep punching fellows. And our old stand-by Bernie Shames gave it another whirl this week (his third). The odds are going down, man, keep at it!

Now to DELHEN NO. 8. Follow the directions closely.

I Take out a sheet of paper and number down the side from one to nine.

II Take the first letter from the suggested word and write it next to the number. For instance (we'll give you a start)

1. is the opposite rooster (hen) so you write an "H" next to number 1.

2. What hit Newton on the head?

3. Not much good without bolts

4. Sometimes you have to be in the

5. All that meat and no—

6. Ben Franklin wrote one

7. We'd all like to be—

8. We're running out of—

9. "It's—Again!"

Your poems must be in the University mail in time to be judged on Monday evening, April 3. Send Review Delhen. Remember your mail-box number. We made the contest hard this time so you'd have something to do during the vacation. Be good. Stay out of trouble and jails and remember: "It must be jelly 'cause jam don't".

Jonas Concert Set

city, a Gestapo agent found Maryla in what was left of her bombed-out home.

"You shall give concerts in Berlin," he told her. "Who knows—the Führer himself may attend."

There's no verbatim record of Maryla's reply, but it won her an honored place in a concentration camp.

Seven months later, a German officer stopped her one night and whispered, "I once heard you play in Berlin, Fraulein, and it was something I shall never forget. According to the dossier, you have a sister in Rio de Janeiro, and if you can get to the Brazilian Embassy in Berlin, it's my belief they will help you get out of Europe. I'll send you out in the fields with a work gang tomorrow. Don't bother coming back."

Maryla says she doesn't know how many weeks it took her to walk the 325 miles to Berlin, sleeping in ditches, hiding in the woods and eating less than occasionally. At the embassy, an attaché forged a passport for her, smuggled her to Portugal, and then to Rio de Janeiro. Here, on her arrival, she learned that her husband, her parents and a brother had been killed in Poland.

After several months in a sanatorium—both her nerves and talent had gone to pieces—Maryla went to live with her sister, but she would never go near a piano, and no amount of pleading could make her change her mind.

The following year Artur Rubinstein, another of the great Polish pianists, came to Rio to perform at the Municipal Opera House. He called on Maryla and tried to persuade her to return to the concert stage, and when she told him that she was afraid of the piano, that her fingers were stiff and she could no longer play, he went to see her doctor. The medico explained that the girl had a guilt complex—in spite of all her sufferings, she knew her family and friends in Warsaw had suffered more, and her subconscious kept telling her that by staying away from the piano, she might match their sufferings. Only a trick or a miracle, he said, could overcome this psychosis.

Rubinstein got an idea, and the day of his concert he asked Maryla to come to the Opera House with him while he tested out the acoustics. There, after a few practice runs on the Steinway, he asked the girl who was sitting in the empty hall to come up on stage and strike a couple of chords while he checked the sound in various parts of the house.

"Oh, no, I couldn't," Maryla said. "Please," pleaded Rubinstein. "You would be doing me a great favor."

Still protesting that her fingers were stiff, Maryla sat down at the piano and struck a couple of chords. And then what Rubinstein had hoped would happen did happen—the mental wall she had built between herself and the instrument crumbled. Five hours later, as the audience was beginning to arrive, she was still at the keyboard, again "the first woman pianist since Teresa Carreno."

In 1946, Maryla gave her first concert at Carnegie Hall, and it wasn't the triumph the movies are always picturing. Hardly any one came and, to make matters worse, she had a toothache. But in the tiny audience was Jerome Bohm, and his rave the next morning earned her a second appearance a few weeks later. This time she played to a packed house and this time MGM couldn't have done it up better.

And that's the story behind the blonde lady who carbonated my blood stream last Saturday afternoon. Maryla Jonas is going to do a lot of touring this winter, and if you see her advertised in your neck of the woods, I would suggest you get your tickets early.

And at the end of the concert when you stand up and yell, "Bravo!" it might not be a bad idea to give out an extra yelp and say "This one is for Rubinstein."

BRASS SEXTET

Sextet to Entertain In Hometown Territory Trip

The University of Delaware's Brass Sextet will visit several lower Delaware schools on April 4, 5, and 6 in company with the A Capella Choir. Of the six members, five are residents of Kent and Sussex Counties.

Seaford claims John Schmidhauser, who plays the French horn in the sextet. From Bethany Beach comes Peggy Munoz, trumpet player. A native of Dover is John Clough, trombonist, and the town of Wyoming has two favorite sons in the sextet; Gordon St. Mary, trombonist, and Donald Clark, who toots the tuba. Lance Boyce of Wilmington, trumpeter, is the only member of the group from outside the two lower counties of the state. J. Robert King, director of the sextet, has announced part of the group's repertoire for the several programs to be presented in the three days. The selections will include: "Tall Tale," by Cowell; "Moods" by Borowski; "Sextet in E Flat Minor," by Boehm; and some Sixteenth Century music, featuring two pieces by William Brade and Reiche's "Sonata No. 24."

The Brass Sextet and 38-voice A Capella Choir will present public concerts at Lewes on the night of April 4, and at Laurel on the night of April 5, while school assembly programs will be presented at Lewes, Lord Baltimore, and John M. Clayton on the 5th, and at Bridgeville, Greenwood, Dover and Smyrna on the 6th.

Dogpatch Days On Amstel Ave.

The annual KA pledge house party for the members was given Saturday night, March 19, from 8 to 12 at the fraternity house. The decorations and costumes were designed to correspond with the clothes and surroundings of Li'l Abner and his associates in Dogpatch.

The rendition of Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, by a group of pledges, was calculated to cause Old Will's bones to spin. A dialogue featuring Marryin' Sam, Gus Goosegrease, Lena the Hyena, and Lena's father was ably presented by the KA Pledge Players. It is to be hoped that such costuming ingenuity and acting ability, as exhibited on Saturday night, will not be allowed to go uncultivated.

Classical Group Has Social Evening

The Classical Music Listening group held its second social of the year, March 21. A contest was held to determine who in the group could best detect the themes of various selections which had been played previously on Sunday evening concerts.

The team of three comprising Miss Peggy Munoz, Mr. Takhis Lambropoulis and Mr. Yonkers won the first prize (Tchaikowsky's Piano Concerto album) by obtaining 34 points out of a possible 42. Refreshments were served.

The next meeting will be on the first Sunday evening following Spring vacation. The program will be Beethoven's "Emperor Concerto" and Sibelius' "First Symphony."

NOTICE

Notice To All June Graduates: Forms for the rental of Caps and Gowns must be filled in before March 26, 1949. Blank forms may be obtained from the Bookstore.

Textile Designs On Display in Gallery

The exhibition of modern textile designs now on display in the Art Gallery of the University's Memorial Library will remain on exhibit until April 4. The display, circulated by the Museum of Modern Art, New York City, includes examples of hand-woven, hand-printed machine-woven, and machine-printed fabrics.

There are in this exhibit 27 panels of fabrics, plus a number of unmounted textiles and photographs showing the use of fabrics in modern interiors. All were chosen to emphasize the value of well-designed textiles in the modern interior. Work by leading professional designers and students of several colleges and academies is shown.

The exhibition is open to the public during regular library hours.

SGA Notes

The first issue to be covered at the SGA meeting was that of settling the date of the Freshman Dance as April 30 and the May Day Dance as May 14.

April 5 in Mitchell Hall, football pictures highlighting some of the away Delaware games of this past football season will be shown.

Coach Murray requested that the idea of a human "blue-hen" for football games be adopted. The hen costume will be made of canvas and will be similar to the Maryland "turtle" which was seen at the Maryland game last season. The canvas costume will be worn by a student. The idea was approved and the athletic department will pay the expense.

The SGA will permit the Senior Class to mimeograph programs for their senior weekend and will pay for it.

Jim McFadden, Dick Wells, and Nancy Jernee have been appointed to work out a system of petitions, ballots, etc. for SGA elections which will be here April 29.

CAREERS AT GENERAL ELECTRIC

General Electric is not one business, but an organization of many businesses, offering opportunities in virtually all the professions. Here three G-E men brief the career possibilities for the marketing specialist, the accountant, and the manufacturing trainee.

FUTURES IN MARKETING

C. H. Lang (Michigan), Vice Pres: responsible for Apparatus Sales: "The need for increased sales efforts to maintain the current high level of business is opening broad opportunities in all phases of the marketing of industrial products—selling, application and service engineering, market analysis, and advertising and sales promotion."

CAREER IN FINANCE

H. A. MacKinnon, Assistant Comptroller: "Part of my job is the direction of our Business Training Course and travelling auditors staff. Since 1919, these two have been providing direct channels through which young men have progressed into all types of accounting and financial management positions with General Electric."

MANUFACTURING TRAINEE

Dick Saunders (Rochester): "As a member of the G-E Manufacturing Leadership Program, I'm gaining first-hand knowledge of all the phases of manufacturing from machine tools to labor relations. The Program provides that each of us serve personal apprenticeships to seasoned managers in a number of different fields of manufacturing."

For further information about a BUSINESS CAREER with General Electric, write Business Training Course, Schenectady, N. Y.—a career in TECHNICAL FIELDS, write Technical Personnel Division, Schenectady, N. Y.

Two recent table tennis matches found Delaware's informal Table Tennis Team on the short end, and then for a happy reversal, on the long end of the score of two bitterly fought and well played table tennis matches. The first match was lost to the strong Temple University Team on February 22 in the Taylor Gymnasium by the score of 10-3, while the second match was won from the Wilmington Y.M.H.A. by the University boys by the score of 10-3 on March 17th in the basement of Brown Hall.

The very strong Temple University squad—one of the best in the East—had more trouble brushing off the Blue Hens than the score might indicate, and all of the matches were hard fought up to the last point. One of the finest matches of the evening saw freshman Terry Schall beat Tom Seaborn, holder of a two-year unbeaten streak, in a very thrilling contest.

The match played with the Wilmington Y.M.H.A. saw a completely changed picture. This match found both Dick Edwards and Terry Schall undefeated at the close of the evening with each of the other Delaware players losing only one match each.

Malick Club Wins In Chess Tourney

The Delaware Chess Club held its first inter-club chess match last Friday night and the final score found the team led by Mr. Malick ahead by 4½ to 3½. The results of the individual matches were as follows:

Mr. Hart's Team	Mr. Malick's Team
William Hart 1, beat	Karl Cassaboon 0
George Hudson 1, beat	Donald Malick 0
Jim Michael, ½
drew with Terry Schall ½
Robert McFarland, 1 beat	Bob Caulk 0
Robert Harley, 0 lost to	Harold Wilson 1
William Mooney, 0 lost to	Charles Rudolph 1
Ernest Korber, 0 lost to	Donald Miller 1
Robert Caulk, 0 lost to	Gabriel Cuchani 1
Totals 3½	Totals 4½

This week the meeting will feature a match between the Wilmington Chess Club and the Lancaster, Pa., Chess Club. This match will be played on Friday, March 26, in the Old College Lounge and should produce some very skillful play. Anyone interested is invited to attend this match.

Dr. Dildine Speaks In Graduate Series

Dr. Glenn C. Dildine, associate professor of education at the University of Delaware, delivered an address entitled "Implications of Social Change for Higher Education" on Monday, March 22. The following are quotations from Dr. Dildine's speech, one in the series of Graduate lectures.

"Because humans are born so unpatterned and flexible, each society has to teach its young people a socially-inherited pattern of behavior or culture in its broadest sense.

"So, individuals in any society can only develop their own capacities through an educational program, under the control and with the limitations of the way of life of their group. It follows that education—the process of learning to become human—is inseparable from the society in which educators and students live and operate. An understanding of society is therefore of fundamental significance to education."

The speaker was introduced by Dr. W. Earl Armstrong, Dean of the School of Education at the University. In the next of the public lecture series, on April 18, Frank H. Sommer will speak on "Some Recent Development in Prehistoric Archeology."

Sgt. Sofka Ordered To Overseas Duty

Master Sgt. John Sofka, senior member of the University of Delaware's ROTC military staff in point of service at Newark, has been ordered by the Department of the Army to duty overseas. He will leave April 5 from New Orleans for Puerto Rico.

Sergeant Sofka has been at the University since September 1945, during the ASTB period, and remained during formation of the post-war ROTC. He has been supply sergeant in charge of all military property furnished by the Army to the university for training purposes. Replacing him in that assignment will be Master Sgt. Myron E. Jacques, who has been assistant in the position for the past year.

The departing sergeant is a member of VFW Post No. 475 in Newark, and Hiram Lodge No. 25, A. F. & A. M. Mrs. Sofka and their daughter, Linda, 5, will go to Puerto Rico soon after his arrival there.

To keep the military staff at its authorized strength, Master Sgt. Gaines G. Wicker has been assigned to the University from the Delaware Recruiting District headquarters in Wilmington. A Texan, Sergeant Wicker is a member of the old Cavalry. He served in Europe with the Fifth Division in the recent war.

Del. Artists Attend N. Y. Conference

Three faculty members and three students of the University of Delaware's Department of Art attended the seventh Conference of the Committee on Art Education at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, March 18 through 20.

One of the students, Miss Rita M. Patnovic, a senior art major from Newark, was one of two student speakers on the program. She spoke Saturday afternoon on her experiences in practice teaching last fall with Miss Stella Balderston at Claymont High School.

Also attending the conference were Miss Harriet T. Bally, chairman of the Art Department; Miss Jane L. Gardner, associate professor; Mrs. Margaret P. Allen, instructor; Miss Mary Lou Richardson, Claymont; and Miss Jane Gordon, Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania.

NOTICE

Varsity Tennis practice will begin on Monday, April 4th, the day following vacation. The first match will be April 16 with Western Maryland at home.
