NEWARK CELEBRATED Halloween in style this week with a parade and trick or treating on Main Street.

"We were thrilled with the turnout at the Halloween Parade on Sunday," said Carol Houck, coordinator for Newark Parks and Recreation. "Over 1,500 people participated and we estimate 5,000 to 7,000 people watched."

Houck said the recreation department has been getting a lot of calls from people who said how much they enjoyed the parade. "The weather and everything was perfect," said Houck.

On Monday night, Main Street was alive with every conceivable Halloween fantasy as parents and children descended on local businesses for the annual Trick-or-Treat Main Street.

Cole VanGlider of Newark Camera admired "quite a few good costumes." He added, "It was bigger than last year. We gave away all the candy we had."

Marilyn Dickey of Grass Roots said "We had 1500 spider rings and they lasted to 7:15 p.m. It seems to get bigger every year."

Some of the business owners wore costumes also. "I was dressed up as a gorilla," said Wes Singleton at Happy Harry's. "There were lots and lots of kids. I saw a lot of Power Rangers. It was a great time."

According to Deirdre Peake, economic development director for the Newark Business Association, everyone was happy with the event. "We think it was the largest crowd ever," she said. "Based on the treats handed out we estimate over 2,000 children."

"It was fantastic," said Richard Handloff, area developer and co-owner of the National 5 & 10. "It is always great to see so many people from Newark coming down to Main Street."

Concrete to be poured before winter arrives

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Following his successful presentation at the last Newark city council meeting, developer Gibbons Young said he and his partner, Richard Handloff, are moving ahead as quickly as possible with the new Traders Alley complex on Main Street.

"We hope to have all the concrete work done before cold weather sets in," he said. "We can work through the winter as long as the concrete is done and it's under roof."

Subdivision and rezoning for a 17,582 square-foot building together with parking lot were approved at the Oct. 23 meeting.

The planned complex will include new and existing buildings at the site with commercial and residential uses.

Young would not comment on rumors that a Brew Pub might be part of the plans but stated that he expected "all the (commercial) leases to be done by next week."

According to the developers, the new two-story building will have five 1500-1700 square-foot retail "suites" fronting on Main Street. Four smaller suites of about 400 square feet each will front on a new sidewalk facing the existing Trader's Alley building.

Eight two-bedroom apartments are planned for the second floor. The 750 square-foot suites will have cathedral ceilings and skylights in their living rooms.

The new parking lot will have entrances on both Main Street and Delaware Avenue.

Young said the developers still plan to have the complex ready by April 1996.

Wet paint good sign at Chrysler

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Chrysler Assembly plant in Newark has no plans to close soon. That's the message between the lines in their recent groundbreaking for a new paint facility.

"It's costing an arm and a leg," said Roger Walker, facilities manager for Chrysler, "but we have no choice."

Walker explained that under federal standards for air emissions, the plant would not be able to meet requirements for air quality permits in 1997 with the present paint shop. "We have to go to a whole new system," Walker explained.

Walker said the old paint shop was not big enough for the the equipment in the new system and the "downtime would be prohibitive" in any renovation.

"We've been promised a new model line and the plant will have to be down for that," said Walker. "At that time the old paint shop can be switched over and refurbished for a new use—possibly for trim."

According to Walker, under the system now being used in the old paint shop, Chrysler has been able to "reduce hazardous airborne chemicals (outside the plant) by 95 percent and VOCs or volatile organic chemicals (inside the plant) by 30 percent."

"Once the new paint facility is finished and the new system is in place, the VOCs will be reduced 100 percent. No more problem," said Walker.

Presently solvent-based paints which cause the VOCs are used in the plant but soon water-based paint will be used with a solvent-base topcoat.

"After 2002, we will use a water-base topcoat as well," said Walker. "The interesting thing is, water-base topcoats give a better luster to the car finish. It's a win-win situation."

Chrysler had to obtain a height variance from the city of Newark to build the new shop. "We're enclosing the air housings on the roof to eliminate dirt in the paint powder system, and to protect the workers when they have to go up there," said Walker. "It also makes the roof line more attractive."

According to Walker, only the four Chrysler sites at Belvedere, Sterling Heights and St. Louis-North and South have the new paint system, but eventually more plants will have to switch.

"All plants, even those in Mexico and Canada, that handle the same models will have to go to the system," said Walker.

Site preparation for the 800,000 square-foot facility has started and the shell is expected to be completed in the spring of 1996. "We won't be ready to launch it until the summer of 1997, though," said Walker. "There's still a lot more to do after (the shell) and we need to put in the equipment."

Lumbrook lot owner loses out

The request for subdivision of 11 Orchard Avenue in the Lumbrook section of Newark fell before intense opposition from neighbors at Newark's council meeting on Oct. 23.

"Lots in this area are much larger than this lot would be," said John Wertman, owner of the adjoining property. "What would be built on a lot like this? . . . Why was this (property) bought and why is there such a hurry to subdivide?"

The application for subdivision was presented by William Murray on behalf of the estate of J. Reese Sheats although the property has now been sold to Max Walton. Walton was not mentioned in the documents presented with the petition and it was unclear whether Murray now represented Walton who will benefit from any subdivision.

According to Murray, although there were no present plans to build, the owner wanted to reorient the site so that a single-family home could be built on a new lot facing Woodlawn Avenue in Lumbrook. Zoning in Lumbrook requires a minimum lot area of 9000 square feet and a lot width of 75 feet.

Because of the positioning of a garage on the existing lot on Orchard Avenue, the new lot can not have sufficient building space unless it is realigned in a modified

Locals turn Halloween around

Practically everyone likes to dress up and act silly on Halloween, even long after our trick-or-treat days are past.

For the staff at Oncology Care on Main Street, the holiday presented an opportunity to do both and also furthered their goal of "making a significant difference in people's lives."

"We wanted to participate in national 'Make a Difference Day,'" said Meg Mayley, director. See REVERSE, 3A ▶

Barn burns

The Christiana fire department responded to a barn fire in the vicinity of Howell School Road in Kirkwood at 1:58 a.m. on Oct. 28. Assistant fire chief Tom Darling reported that the barn was totally engulfed in flames. There were no injuries in the early morning blaze which took 20 firefighters about an hour to extinguish. Water had to be shuttled from a hydrant a half mile away at the entrance to Lums Pond Estates. The barn, which was empty, was completely destroyed. The Delaware state fire marshals are continuing to investigate.

Pants dropped

A 27-year-old white male exposed himself to a Newark resident on Oct. 29 at 9:05 p.m. on Elkton Road, Newark police report. The resident reported walking on Elkton Road when she saw a man in front of a house. The suspect then dropped his pants and underwear. Police are still investigating the incident.

Shoplifter nabbed

A 17-year-old white female was arrested for shoplifting on Oct. 27 at the Pathmark in College Square Shopping Center, Newark police report. Pathmark security observed the woman trying to remove seven packs of cigarettes from the store. When apprehended, three packs of Newport cigarettes, three packs of Marlboro box cigarettes and one pack of Camelton her person.

Meats stolen

Newark police state that two Wilmington residents were arrested for shoplifting at the Pathmark in College Square Shopping Center on Oct. 23 at 10:55 p.m. Gary Potter, 42, from Wilmington and Frederick Hazzard, also from Wilmington, were arrested and charged with shoplifting after they tried to leave the store with various meat products such as ham, beef and pork.

Assault on Thorn Lane

Newark police report that on Oct. 22 at 8:30 p.m. on Thorn Lane an unknown suspect struck a victim in the back of the head and neck. The suspect then kicked the passenger side of the victim's vehicle, damaging the vehicle, after the victim had retreated to their car. The suspect then threw a beer can at the passenger side window. Police are still investigating the incident.

Paint poured

Newark police report that on Oct. 27 at 11:00 p.m. unknown suspects poured a gallon of paint on a victim's home on Connell Circle. The victim reported that suspects had emptied the paint on the roof of his residence. A paint can was recovered in a neighbor's back yard and placed into evidence. No suspects have been named, and police are still investigating the incident.

Construction trailers robbed

Newark police state that five different construction trailers were broken into on Oct. 26 and 27 on White Chapel Road. The trailers were in the area because of the construction of the Newark Senior Center. The value of items stolen were said to be in the excess of $1700. Police are still investigating the incident.

Meters missing

Newark parking enforcement officers reported to work on Monday to find that their services were not needed.

Enforcement officers reported Monday that when they went to check meters located on the one way street, 38 were missing.

Newark Police officer Curt Davis said that the meters were removed using a special tool and that on Oct. 27, eight meters were also taken from South College and Amstel Avenue.

Each of the meters is estimated to cost $100, and police state that parking in the area has been free since the meters were stolen.

Police have no suspects and are currently investigating the incident.

Lumbrook lot owner loses out

► ORCHARD ROAD, from 1A

L-shape facing Woodlawn Avenue. Faye Brown lives across Woodlawn Avenue from the proposed new building site. "This property is directly in my face," Brown said. "I just don't see it with a garage where it is. If they want to tear the garage down, then it would be OK."

In recommending the application, the planning department noted that "homes located on the south side of Woodlawn Avenue across from the 11 Orchard Avenue property occupy lots that meet the RS Zoning area requirements."

Councilmember Irene Zych observed that "it sets an ugly precedent for the city of Newark if we gerrymander this in order to squeeze out a few more feet (to build)."

Councilmember Hal Godwin ultimately asked the decisive question, "Why, since the property has been transferred and there are no plans to build—why do you want to subdivide?"

Godwin also noted that generally when council reviewed a subdivision proposal they were given the plans for its development. "If you have no plans to build on it, do you plan to sell the property for someone else to build on?"

Walton conceded, "Eventually." Godwin responded, "Maybe we need to wait until there are plans to build before making any subdivision decision."

Locals turn Halloween around

► REVERSE, from 1A

"We came up with the idea of Reverse Trick or Treating."

Last Saturday, the staff and their families, dressed up and took Halloween baskets with treats to the homes of nine of their home care patients.

The staff personalized the treats in the baskets with "inside joke" gifts, soaps and toiletries, potpourri, baked goods and a card designed for each patient. "We also took sculpted pumpkins and sang a silly song to the theme of the Adams Family," laughed Mayley. "That sent them over the edge. It got a lot of belly laughs."

Mayley pointed out that many of the patients had few visitors since their illnesses and remarked on one lady who still talked about carolers who came to her home two years ago. "We always want to do more for more people," she said.

Together with home-health aides, therapists, a social worker and a nutritionist, nurses at Oncology Care specialize in the care of cancer and HIV patients in their homes. "Those two illnesses require similar nursing skills," said Mayley.

Mayley said insurance companies want people to go home sooner to save on costs, so families are expected to learn to do a lot of what nurses traditionally do in the hospital. "Some people can't," she said.

“ This is a really embracing community. **”

MEG MAYLEY
DIRECTOR, ONCOLOGY CARE

"Then the patient is right back in the hospital and nothing is saved."

Mayley said there's "a huge focus on comfort" in what they do. "We show them how they can achieve a little normalcy in their lives at a stressful time."

"Our job is to encourage families to learn how to care for the patient themselves as much as possible," Mayley said, "but we don't leave them feeling alone. We continue to monitor and assess the situation and do the skilled things only we can do."

Some patients improve to the point where the home nurses are no longer necessary. "This is a rejoice day," said Mayley. "We tell them 'now we can just be your neighbor again.'"

The group offers a free bereavement service for families following the death of a patient. "We're available for up to a year to help them in any way we can," Mayley said they consider this a part of their mission also.

Looking out at Newark's downtown from her office window, Mayley commented that the group was particularly happy in their new offices there. "This is a really embracing community," she said. "We love being on Main Street."

Sister Veronica shares a happy moment with an elderly resident and a small Halloween visitor.

'Home sweet home' at Little Sisters of Poor

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

THE SIGN OVER the fireplace in the reception area of the Jeanne Jugan residence on Salem Church Road said "Home Sweet Home."

"We like to make our residences real homes," said Sister Joseph, spokesperson for the Little Sisters of the Poor who run the retirement/nursing home.

Throughout the home, rockers and easy chairs sit in cozy corners together with pictures and plants and tables.

Although the floors are tiled for efficiency, color and pattern are used on the walls and doors giving the two-story residence the look of a well-run hotel.

At present the residence is home to 80 persons, most of whom have private rooms. "A few brothers are together and we have some married couples," said Sister.

Potential residents are invited to spend up to five days at the home before making a decision to move in. "We only take persons 60 years or older who are of modest means," said Sister. "We have a three-year waiting list."

Among the variety of living arrangements offered at the home are 11 independent-living apartments. "The residents have security here, and can come for meals if they want," said Sister. "Otherwise, they're just like any other apartments."

Those in the residential rooms have a communal dining room and sitting areas. Their rooms are cleaned for them each day but they make their own beds. "We can also do their wash or we have a little laundromat that some use," said Sister.

Intermediate and skilled nursing for elderly sick or disabled is provided in a wing with another dining and sitting area as well as a physical therapy room and examination rooms used by physicians and staff nurses.

The home also has a small library, tea room with beverages and cookies which residents can share with visitors, beauty and barber shops, a smoking room and a coun-also like to sit out on the balconies," said Sister.

The Little Sisters of the Poor were founded in France by Jeanne Jugan, who started taking elderly poor and destitute into her home in 1839. Eventually other women joined her and today the order has 32 homes in the United States and over 250 in 30 countries worldwide.

Residents have lived with the sisters as long as 35 years. "Some actually improve in health and live longer when they come here," said Sister.

When a resident is dying, the Sisters take turns sitting with them night and day until the end. "I've learned a lot about dying while doing that," said Sister. "We all consider the duty a particularly beautiful one and many of us actually look forward to it."

Most of the funding for the homes comes from donations. "Sometimes we don't know where the next payroll is coming from," said Sister, "but it always does—it's divine providence, really."

Among the order's local benefactors are Chrysler Newark Assembly and many supermarkets which allow the Sisters to solicit at their locations. "We also get funds from Medicare and legacies," said Sister.

Tomorrow, the Sisters will hold their annual Spaghetti Dinner and Mall Boutique at the home from 2 to 7 p.m. In addition to the meal, catered by Plane Caterers of Wilmington, there will be hand-crafted items for sale and a raffle for a furnished doll house valued at $1000, a wagon of cheer, a carload of groceries and a handmade quilt.

Tickets are $7 for adults and $4 for children. For more information, please call the Sisters at 368-5886.

try store with toiletries, candy and other small items. "We try to have things they might not be able to get out and buy for themselves," said Sister.

The home has both a chapel and an interfaith room where the multi-denomination community can worship as they choose.

Everywhere there are windows which bring in views of the Delaware woods and small courtyards with seats. "Some residents

BUILDING ON SENIOR CENTER SITE

Main Street to welcome new tenant in familiar space

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

THE NEW ARK United Church of Christ has been meeting and serving in the local community since 1979, but they won't have a home of their own until the summer of 1996.

"We envision a place that can be used by the community," said the Reverend Peter Wells, pastor for the 150-member congregational church. "Our members believe that is part of their mission."

According to Wells, the congregation spent over six months raising the $330,000 in their capitol campaign and even longer searching for a site. "We looked everywhere!" said Wells.

Next spring, following relocation of the Newark Senior Center, the church members will begin renovations at the old waterworks building in downtown Newark.

"The congregation wanted to be able to stay in a community and an area that's rich in opportunity," said Wells. "We're very excited about being on Main Street."

Details of the renovations are still incomplete, but Wells said the roof of the building will be raised and the central part will become a worship area together with a reception area, Sunday School rooms, offices, and a fully equipped kitchen.

"We hope to be able to offer use of our site for things like small community forums, conferences and monthly meetings of local organizations," said Wells. The worship area will not have fixed pews but will be an "aesthetically pleasing and flexible space" for church services or other gatherings, according to Wells.

The congregation presently uses office space leased from the Unitarian Universalist Church on Willa Road and worships at the Masonic Lodge on East Delaware Avenue. In addition to the church building, ten percent of the capitol will be used to start the church's "Home Again" project.

"We've set up the New Ark United Housing Ministries Corporation to buy and administer transitional homes for families who are at risk of separation due to lack of housing," said Wells.

The congregation plans to start with two homes and see how it works.

"We will house families for a year or longer," said Wells, "until they can work out a plan with the help of case workers and other community support."

One of the architectural designs under consideration for the future New Ark United Church of Christ shows the church entrance on the side of the present building on Main Street.

New deputy solicitor named

At their last meeting, Newark city council announced the appointment of a new deputy solicitor to assist Roger Akin in the city solicitor's office.

According to city manager Carl Luft, Bruce C. Herron, Esquire, of Sawyer, Akin and Herron will take over the new post.

"The arrangement was for Roger Akin to try doing everything himself," said Luft. "When he took over he said he wanted to try it for six months."

Akin was appointed by council in December of 1994 and became solicitor in January of this year.

According to Akin, Herron will assist him in non-criminal work in the city solicitor's office. In addition, both Akin and Herron will handle criminal prosecutions and court appearances for the city as necessary.

Something that works

ANY DISILLUSIONED VOTERS in Newark received a "wake up" call earlier this year when a mere three votes separated the winner from the loser in one city council race. Every vote counted and individuals clearly affected the election results.

Such is the case often in the operations of Newark's city government and there was a good example of this last week.

While we believe the city manager, department heads, city employees, mayor and council members are well-intentioned and conduct the city's business in a responsible manner, we are no different than you. Sometimes we take issue with a certain law, procedure, tax, contract or proposal. We've said so in this space. You've stated your feelings in letters to the editor and directly to the city administration and council members. The good news here in Newark is that our opposition usually is welcomed, often understood (but not necessarily agreed to) and almost always taken into consideration.

We really liked what we saw last week at Newark's city council meeting. It was government, at a level closest to the people, operating at its best. We applaud all the involved parties.

During the often-heated process that led to Newark's new Historic Preservation Ordinance earlier this year, critics complained that the city power structure often steamrolls a proposal through without considering public opposition. Some complained that the council simply rubber stamps the actions and recommendations of the planning department and commission.

Last week, after processing through the city's planning department and gaining the approval of Newark citizens that sit on the planing commission, the Traders Alley project came before the city council for its approval.

Most agree that the project across from Klondike Kate's is a desirable one. Our opinion in this space last week praised its cooperative nature. Nonetheless, the project received the usual intense scrutiny of the planning and public works offices and similar close examination by the planning board. But, as our front page story last week detailed, the council was far from quick to adopt the proposals.

It was clear to us that the council members — like the city staff and citizen board members — had carefully read and dissected the proposal. We saw not a cursory look at the final plans but rather an honest attempt on the part of council to be clear about every detail of the unique project. They liked the plan but extended the already lengthy meeting another hour to get answers to questions, questions that ordinary citizens might ask. They examined citizens' concerns and those of adjacent property owners. They heard the pleas of the developers to not delay the project any longer.

Summed up, the council, the city administration, the planning commission, the applicants and the public, each in their own way, did their jobs to make government work in Newark.

THE CHRISTINA District Community Consensus Task Force met on Thursday, Oct. 19 to be brought up-to-date on implementing Choice and Charter legislation and to review feeder patterns and other issues of concern in Christina District. We have been meeting for well over a year trying to reach consensus on how best to serve all of the district's children since the lifting of the desegregation order.

I'd like to share my personal thoughts of these meetings and how I envision the role of our Task Force as we go forth. It has been rare that I have left these meetings feeling productive or have been completely happy with its outcome. We wasted much time with people signing on to the committee, attending only one or two meetings and constantly had an influx of people who came one night, signed up and never came back. Each time someone new came in, we had to start over again in reviewing information to get them up-to-speed on where we were. We also had to spend considerable time for people who, in my opinion, were solidly entrenched in their narrow opinions and refused to even listen to other ideas that were being asked to be considered.

I have been very proud to serve on this committee and I have

'They didn't call it Bear for nothing'

By GAYLE K. HART

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

MY MOTHER GREW UP on a fifty-acre farm in Bear when neighbors were a field of corn, a vegetable garden and a crop of alfalfa away.

In 1949, it was commonplace to hear the owner of an adjacent farm say, "you can't talk bad about him, he's your neighbor."

In 1970, my mother's father, Jack Kennedy, died leaving my grandmother to live alone on the farm down Old Porter Road. Soon after his death, my Nana moved in with my mother's sister leaving the farm unguarded and unprotected from people who did not love the land.

Five years later vandals had stripped the farm house of all of its treasures and set fire to the place my mother called home. The house and barn burnt to the ground in a reckless blaze.

Much was lost in that fire, things that can never be regained or restored, but my mother's memories live on and I love to hear her tell tales of the days when Bear was unscathed by modern man.

My mother was eight when her family moved from Wilmington to the wilderness of Bear. The Old Porter Railroad Station had been moved from the railroad tracks to the farm and that is where she lived until her father finished building their new home.

The old railroad station had only two rooms and a hand pump in the front yard for running water. Coal oil lamps hung from the ceiling and a ticket booth with a window adjoined the two rooms. My grandmother cooked on a wood stove which was situated next to the bathtub basin. Everyone used the out-house rain or shine, in the cold and in the heat.

My mother 'heard tell' that in 1929 that same railroad station had become a shelter for a trainload of travelers who were stranded in a harsh snow storm.

In the summer, my mother remembers, scores of mosquitoes would be let in through the torn and tattered screens making sleep difficult. Mice were also common visitors to the railroad station.

My grandmother was terrified of mice but she wasn't offended by snakes in the least. To rid their temporary home of the intruding rodents, my grandmother caught a six-foot black snake and put it up in the rafters to feed upon the mice. Periodically the snake would curl his long body around a rafter and

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week, our "Out of the Attic" photograph shows the Aetna fire station. Erected in 1922 this building on Academy Street is the second station built by the Aetna Fire Company. The building includes a banquet room with kitchen facility, engine bays, a meeting room on the second floor and attic. The second floor also once included an apartment in which the caretaker resided. In 1953 the siren tower from the ammunition storage area formerly located south of Newark was relocated to the Academy Street site for use by Aetna. The building is one of approximately thirty buildings in Newark on the National List of Historic Places. The photograph is from the collection of Bob Thomas who provided the research for the Newark Historical Society. In an effort to provide more complete descriptions of our "Out of the Attic" photographs, volunteer historians of the society are identifying and researching the historic shots. Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post. Special care will be taken. For more information, call 737-0724.

President installed with impressive ceremonies

With impressive formality, in the presence of hundreds of alumni, friends of the college and distinguished visitors from other colleges, Dr. Walter Hullihen was installed president of Delaware College last Saturday. The ceremony took place in front of Old College which presented a holiday appearance with decorations of blue and gold.

The college orchestra was stationed on the landing and furnished music for the imposing processional.

Women's college observes sixth anniversary

The cold winds which had marred the exercise at Delaware College, had subsided by three o'clock and the sun shone warmly during the celebration commemorative of the Sixth Anniversary of the founding of the Women's College.

Dickinson boosters raise labor of love

The John Dickinson High School Boosters undertook a big job on the school's behalf recently. Under the guidance of Donald Eastburn, president of the boosters, they negotiated with the University of Delaware last October and managed to acquire the old Delaware scoreboard.

From acquisition to final installation the scoreboard and spotter's booth, which the boosters built, required long hours on weekends, holidays and nights.

Dr. J. A. Monroe to speak

Dr. John A. Monroe, noted scholar and H. Rodney Sharp Professor of History at the University of Delaware, will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the New Castle Historical Society on Thursday evening, Nov. 19.

The address of Dr. Monroe is entitled "Caesar Rodney, George

The race for the 23rd district which covers west Newark, pits incumbent Ada Leigh Soles, of Newark, against retired physician Dr. Paul Morgan, of Newark.

Ada Leigh Soles says she is running on her record of effective and responsible good government.

Police get flood of applicants

The Newark Police Department had a record number of applicants this year for the position of police officer, according to Carl F. Luft, city manager. The city accepted 139 applications in September 1990, nearly a 22 percent increase from the 114 applicants in 1989.

"We're doing what we can to ensure we bring quality people on board," said Newark Police Chief William A. Hogan, who joined the department in Aug. 1987. Of the 139 applicants this year, 85 participated in the physical agility test, the first phase of testing.

Task force is hard at work

enjoyed meeting many people who are committed to all Christina children receiving a quality education. As stated, the debate at most meetings were oftentimes heated and passionate.

The decisions that must be made as we go forward in implementing education reform in Delaware is an enormous undertaking that this committee is taking quite seriously.

I have always strived to keep an open mind at these meetings and really tried hard to work toward consensus. Like others in the group, there are some issues that no matter what is said, it goes against my core values and we can't reach consensus.

The role of personal parental responsibility is where no one can make me budge. As I have stated time and time, whether a child goes to school next door or is bused 50 miles from home, the children will not succeed in school unless they have support at home helping the student, advocating for him, setting the proper example and assuming responsibility for that child's actions.

Whenever race is brought into this, it really infuriates me because it is not a race issue, nor is it an economic one. The bottom line is a parent is either responsible or not. Rich or poor, black or white doesn't matter.

The residents of Christina have had many opportunities to gather the information they will need to enable them to make the right choices for their children. Many don't pick up a newspaper. Public meetings have been held on many nights addressing key issues with very few in attendance. We don't have the money or the manpower to come to each house, so what are we to do?

When I see the apathy in our communities, it is appalling to me. Don't you want what's best for your children? Do you think about what will happen to your children if something were to happen to you. At the rate many of us are going, our children will not be living too well in the future, because their standard of living will definitely mirror their level of education.

I don't know about you, but this scared me.

I love my daughter enough that her upbringing and preparation to be a contributor to society are my most important job. I want to know that if something happened to me, she will be capable of caring for herself and will not be a burden to society.

The role of task force members now is to carry the word out to the residents of Christina with a united voice. Sadly, many focus on single issues and can not or will not look at the total picture or beyond what's in it for their own children.

The other thing that really discourages me is the lack of trust there appears of our school board and administration. We elected these folks to serve us and Dr. Metts is only carrying out what the board instructs her to.

Sometimes I feel that I stand alone in having faith and trusting that the district is doing what is in the best interests of all children.

I will continue to do so, always keeping my eyes open ready to pounce should they ever lose their focus.

In her recent column, (Newark Post, Oct. 6, Opinion Page), your reporter Mary Petzak not only jumps to conclusions about our September Council meeting, her article lacked factual information about our long range plan public process.

For its 24-year existence, WILMAPCO has been developing long-range strategies, or plans, to improve transportation systems and to guide federal investment decisions for our region.

The last long range plan developed by WILMAPCO, in 1988, was merely a map filled with lines of 'wish list' projects. No financial costs were attached and the document had little meaning to most citizens; they were expected to react to a map!

Two years ago, the WILMAPCO Council, in a bold move, reinvented the planning process. New leadership, fresh ideas, and a more open process have become the driving force of a refocused WILMAPCO. Today, WILMAPCO is becoming better known. Significant emphasis is now placed on broadening community participation to include key stakeholders who have not traditionally been involved.

This challenges transportation and planning professionals and elected officials because meaningful engagement of diverse interests can be difficult. However, citizen participation ensures that decisions will be more responsive to local needs. This, we believe, is the democratic way.

WILMAPCO has devoted much of the past two years to creating a new long range plan that for the first time sought a fully integrated 'intermodal' system that would lead to greater mobility for all. Our governing Council, our community and technical committees, and several thousand citizens have attended open houses, conferences, focus groups, and committee meetings, all to establish a more comprehensive transportation planning framework.

Rather than rely on an unfriendly technical document, WILMAPCO sought a new user-friendly format to help citizens 'get close' to the new strategies. This took the form of an easy-to-grasp summary using graphics, photographs and even a glossary of terms to demystify the typical one-inch thick technical document that only an engineer could love!

The first document of its kind in the region, the summary is successfully eliciting community response. Hundreds of people have attended public events and regular monthly meetings concerning the plan and written letters or filled out comment cards. We are now witnessing a more democratic process.

Ms. Petzak said the plan was poorly scrutinized before its release. If she were more familiar with our process she would know that the plan was a draft and a summary of strategies that had been previewed and approved by both the Public Advisory Committee and the Technical Advisory Committee at their September meetings.

The Council had also reviewed the draft and voted to approve it under condition that the public comment period be extended. Elected officials were invited to a number of receptions to review the summary draft, a timeline for adoption was widely distributed, and the concepts have been widely expressed in numerous publications, on radio and television programs, and in our own newsletter.

Ms. Petzak stated that Mayor Ronald Gardner, Council chairperson, said at the meeting he "could not vote for the plan, as listed on the agenda, but could only vote for a draft plan."

If she were more familiar with the process she would know that only a draft plan was under consideration. The reporter refers to Council members who "chimed in" saying they were glad to extend the public comment period; this sarcastic tone not only trivializes the role of the Council but also the democratic process.

Ms. Petzak was surprised that Alex Taft, executive director of WILMAPCO, said the public comments sought more specific information, and that "only an outline" of the plan was presented. She missed the point. Mr. Taft was noting correctly that people were seeking further information, a fact that demonstrates WILMAPCO is achieving its goals of greater citizen involvement. Again, democracy in action.

The meeting, led by Mayor Gardner, was controversial and oftentimes spontaneous. But, it was democracy in the raw.

What's more, Ms. Petzak seems to be missing the whole point. It is precisely because of the democratic, open, and, yes, spontaneous nature of its meetings that WILMAPCO is now taken more seriously than at any other time in its history.

hang down to take a peek at the busy household. Friendly neighbors stopping by would often be startled by the social reptile. My mother would casually inform the frightened guests, "that's my mom's snake. He's here to catch mice."

About four years later my mother met a 90-year-old woman who was visiting a neighbor. The woman had lived on the farm prior to the Kennedy family in a log cabin. The cabin was no longer on the property because it had caught on fire and burned to the ground. The woman's parents had been out when the fire ignited and she had pulled her sister out of the burning house to safety. My mother asked the woman why the railroad station had such large shutters. She replied, "they didn't call it Bear for nothing. It was wild out there then, honey!"

When the barn was constructed and barbed wire laid as fencing, my mother and her sister each got a horse, a goat and a collie. There had to be two of everything since they were identical twins.

They often rode their horses down Porter Road when it was also known as Nine Foot Road. My mother remembers the state cutting the grass on the sides of Porter Road with teams of horses hitched to mowers bars.

By the age of 14, the twins liked to ride down the middle of Route 40 on the grass median to Glasgow. They would tie the horses to a tree behind the shop where they stopped for ice cream. In Glasgow at that time the town consisted of two restaurants and their favorite ice cream shop. With sticky fingers, the two sisters would ride four miles back to the farm.

My grandfather never completely finished the large farm house which incorporated the old railroad station. The fire reduced his sweat and tears to ash but the foundation still remains. After my grandmother's death last May, the farm was willed to my mother and her sister. Together we have silently vowed to reclaim the farm house and reconstruct from ash the place my mother once called home.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To: The editor

From: Anita Puglisi,
WILMAPCO Public Advisory Committee member

Contrary to popular opinion, it is not business as usual at the Wilmington Area Planning Council (WILMAPCO). The old process, prior to the current approval process, consisted of the presentation of a preliminary finalized plan of future highway and transit projects shown on a map by colored and broken lines depicting various stages of completion. The public had little input into the designing of the plan, and was merely reactionary.

Bound by new regulations and edicts specified by the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 (CAAA) and the Intermodal Surface Transportation Act of 1991 (ISTEA) regional planning agencies serving urbanized areas must provide a plan to "include both long-range and short-range strategies that lead to the development of an integrated intermodal metropolitan transportation system that facilitates the efficient movement of people and goods."

All of this is driven by air quality standards of the CAAA. Because we are within a severe nonattainment area we must reduce emissions (from a 1990 baseline) 15 percent by the year 1996 and 3 percent/year thereafter to the year 2005. Failure to comply by a combination of containment policies related to transportation management will result in sanctions translated into highway funding restrictions.

WILMAPCO, once a weak regional planning agency, rubber stamping projects initiated by the State, became a key player, bringing all the major players to the table to talk about and sometimes haggle about how we can best manage our transportation system with dwindling dollars and restrictions on how we can spend these dollars.

In one sense there was more freedom to decide what mode of transportation to spend these dollars on and in another sense there was less freedom due to a wide variety of environmental, energy, transportation, land use and economic issues to be considered. Not only do we need to relieve and prevent traffic congestion but we must consider the effect of transportation on land use and encourage the use of alternative modes of transportation to the automobile such as bus, rail, bicycle and pedestrian.

So, WILMAPCO is moving ahead with a "new vision" for our region in 2020—"Connections to the 21st Century." Most professionals, politicians and citizens don't disagree on the vision, it's how to create this vision, the implementation, and parameters. Can we make adjustments in our lifestyle and still maintain a livable community? Do we have to give up that two-car family, home in the suburbs and green space to achieve this new vision?

I don't think so. I think it's saying that whenever feasible, we must leave that car at home and take a different mode of transportation to our destination or for some part of the trip we must elect to ride in comfort on some form of mass transit or in a car or van pool. It's also saying, if I'm willing to take this route the options for travel ought to be there. We have to promote an "intermodal" system.

How do we create sustainable communities that manage growth but accommodate people? Tough question, but one WILMAPCO is attempting to address. With the input of consultants, transportation and land use planners, officials and the public, a plan, developed over a two-year period, has been fashioned. It is not written in stone and must be considered a living document to be amended as needed.

There are a number of ongoing studies that are part of the 2020 plan, one being the Newark/Elkton Intermodal Plan. The Newark plan, embraced by WILMAPCO, was commissioned by the persistence of Mayor Ronald L. Gardner and city officials and staff. It is recognized that a "solution" to Newark's problems will involve a combination of short and long range options to both mitigate and offer new solutions for traveling in and around Newark.

The short range options, such as signal synchronization and a bikeway plan, are very much in progress, however the long range options are still at the suggesting stage. They are hamstrung by both Maryland and Delaware coming together and bargaining in good faith for the good of all citizens. As a twenty-five-year resident of Newark who lives on the west side, I am well aware of the continued increase (about 30 percent of the Cecil County workforce) in travel by Maryland residents into Delaware to work and patronize our retail establishments.

WILMAPCO, as the regional planning body, is the appropriate place for all parties to come together and explore all possible viable options via a major investment study (MIS) including modification of existing roadways and possible construction of new ones, mass transit options, and I-95 modifications.

But first we must embrace a "vision" or "strategies" for the future that will guide us in the rest of our decisions. A first step in this process was the input of nearly 1,000 citizens in the structuring of a draft plan for the future. A concurrent step was soliciting the input of technical staff, consultants and elected officials. Third, a "glossy" brochure was created to distribute to the public for their input in subsequent public workshops. A more detailed document is also now ready for public review. The intention with the brochure was to create a document that would capture public attention and present the aspects of the plan in an easily read form. Finally a proposal to accept the "draft plan" was fashioned.

The time frame for acceptance has been modified several times due to input from the public, the Public Advisory Committee and DelDOT. I take this as a positive sign that business is not being conducted as usual. The door is open. If you have some input you will be heard. As a Public Advisory Committee (PAC) member I am open to listen to anyone who would like to comment or just discuss and clarify. Copies of the plan are available for review at the City Municipal Building in Newark or WILMAPCO. The public comment period will begin sometime early in November and run for 30 days. The PAC will hold a public meeting on the 2020 plan midway through the comment period where the public can give comment to be heard and discussed by the PAC. It is slated to be held sometime in late November or early December. Additional chances for input include:

WILMAPCO plan available for review

The Newark Planning Department has received a copy of the "mammoth draft WILMAPCO Metropolitan Transportation Plan for the Year 2020," according to the department's administrative report of Oct. 18.

The draft can be reviewed on request in the planning department during the public comment period through Nov. 20.

The planning department is on the second floor of the Newark Municipal Building on Elkton Road. At the request of Mayor Ronald Gardner, chairman of WILMAPCO, Newark City Council will have a presentation of the plan on Nov. 27 at the municipal building.

Following the public comment period, WILMAPCO committee members and other staff will submit reports to the WILMAPCO board with any recommended changes.

The board plans to meet to adopt the final version of the plan at their regular meeting on Jan. 4, 1996.

Musical chairs at City Hall?

Unless you're a faithful attendant at Newark city council meetings, you may not have realized that councilmembers were in different seats at the most recent meeting.

According to city secretary Sue Lamback, almost two years ago the city council decided to change their seating positions periodically.

"They asked me to reassign the seats every six months," said Lamback. "They wanted to have an opportunity to get to know each other better and they could only do that if they sat next to each other."

Lamback said she is the only one who knows the system used to rearrange the seating. "Tony Felicia has been trying to figure it out," laughed Lamback, "but I won't tell him."

Lamback added, "The council members are just as surprised as everyone else when they come in and have to find their new places."

THE NEWARKER

Beware of item peddlers

By JULIANNA BAGGOTT
NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

IT'S BEGGING time again—the children have been corralled into schools, bands, little leagues, scouts—and they've been given the sales quotas and the cut-throat pitches. Now they attack at mini-malls, linger menacingly around the carts in grocery store doorways, smile up at you from your own front step. They've just come off the begging high of Halloween and they're still reeling, not too mention crazed on sugar.

My nephew, Jimmy, just started Catholic school. Although it's a well known fact that Girl Scouts lead the pack (rumored to eat Catholic school kids for breakfast when it comes to raking it in on fundraisers), Catholic school kids are no slouches.

Now, Jimmy while new to Catholic school—the itchy knickers and kneesocks—is not new to salesmanship; his great grandfather was a pool hall hustler, so there's something in his blood. He also shares my double-edged gift for finding small bills in public: a trait obvious in its benefits which is also a curse. The time I found twenty bucks on a barroom floor in college, for example, has rendered me forever stooped in any bar-like setting, staring at feet, kicking hopefully at gummy beer labels. Once you've found money, you're hooked.

In any case, Jimmy sat outside this summer in the steaming heat selling painted rocks to unwitting college kids who were suckers enough to find his hand-painted sign and glum collection of wares cute. He made all of about $2.50, which is not bad for a six-year-old who only invested a handful of gravel and last year's birthday-gift art set, and had the tough target market of impoverished college kids.

Knowing this about Jimmy, I felt I was wise to him when he approached me at my parents' house. "Want to buy some items?" he asked. "What kinds of items?" I asked through a yawn, feigning disinterest.

He shrugged exaggeratedly. "Items," he repeated. "Can I see them?" I asked.

At this question, he rushed into a long discourse about what he would win if he sold 25 and then 50 and then 100 items which was something about a drive-thru at McDonald's and a chauffeured limo; this thrilled him. It was a speech in pure first grade fashion, jumbled, exciting, specific yet with no overview and an abrupt ending.

I decided that his teacher hadn't wanted to burden the first graders with details about the items themselves (like, for example, what those items actually were). And although this information may be of little interest to first graders, I was dying to know what he was selling. I prodded him with questions that seemed to always lead back to the McDonald's drive-thru and the limo.

No matter. By the time his mother arrived to drive him to his soccer game, I was fishing through my wallet, saying, "Okay, now if these items come in different colors, get me one in blue and one in green. Remember no yellow; it's not my color. In fact, get two in green."

And so I had fallen.

Since then cheerleaders have wrestled bills from my clenched fists, little football tykes have shaken me upside down to get the loose coins from my pockets.

In a few weeks, my house will be filled with wrapping paper, unwanted digests, cookies that I shouldn't eat and of course "items" which will probably only come in

A NOBLE EFFORT

JOHN B. DOWNES' STUDENTS TOPSY-TURVY OVER EARLY MORNING TUMBLING PROGRAM

By DAVID G. W. SCOTT

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

EARLY IN THE MORNING before the pledge of allegiance, before attendance, before many of the other teachers arrive at Downes Elementary School, Neal Noble is putting in overtime.

He doesn't get any more pay. He's there because of the children who are learning to tumble rather than watch television. He's there because these children only see "Mr. Noble" for one physical education class each week. This frustrates him.

Noble is a frustrated teacher. He claims that if he could teach these students four or five times each week, their development would amaze people.

But Noble is not about to be frustrated by a school system that sees physical education teachers as second class citizens. He has set up an early morning tumbling program at Downes, and the children love it. So do the parents.

Connie Kowalko brings her son John to tumbling three times a week. John gets antsy if they are running late. He likes to be there ten minutes early.

"The kids talk about the (tumbling) program more than they talk about their regular classes," Kowalko said. "Mr. Noble is one of the most important teachers John has."

Gale Johnston is a physical education teacher in the Red Clay school district. She brings her daughter Sarah to learn about health and a healthy lifestyle.

"Neal is an excellent role model for children. He believes anyone can do anything as long as they try," said Johnston. "He is nurturing, encouraging, and he wants them to work to reach their potential."

At 7:45 a.m., the children arrive at Downes school. Noble is there waiting for them.

He has already pulled the mats from the back room which is filled with the brightly colored tubes, cardboard cylinders, plastic bottles and wood dowels.

Noble calls it recycled physical education. He made and painted almost every item in the equipment room himself.

He doesn't teach children about football, basketball, baseball and soccer. He teaches them how to move in space. He teaches them coordination. He teaches them to respect their bodies. And the children listen.

Denise Yearian, one of Noble's former students at Downes, sends her daughter Bethany to Noble's Tumbling Club. Yearian remembers the fun, but now she understands what Noble did. He "instilled in us a lifelong passion for good health." To this day, Yearian stretches in the name of good health. Lessons learned from Noble.

The children enter the brightly colored Downes gym and read the many posters on the walls: "Perfect practice makes perfect," "The best kids in the world play here," "From the smallest acorns mighty oaks grow." Everything in the gym has a function.

"The more senses involved, the greater the learning," said Noble.

Noble doesn't stop after his early morning class. He teaches the kindergartners on his planning time. He guards his time with the children jealously and he won't be flexible. "I don't want anyone taking the kids when they are supposed to have class."

But while he is frustrated with the system, he admits that physical education teachers as a group have not always done a great job. "Too often we put the children in positions where they are likely to fail," Noble said. "We need to create a circle of success instead of competition." Noble's competitive games almost always end in ties. That way participating is important, winning or losing is not.

He said, too many parents grew up in physical education programs where the teacher just rolled out the balls. This has created what he calls, the "Little League syndrome." This is where under-qualified parents, in an honest effort to make up for the deficient programs in schools, spend their free time coaching. Very few of these parents understand child psychology or have studied the best ways to teach children how to perform the tasks at hand.

"How much training do these people have?" Noble asks. "The kids would much rather look at the sky and imagine clouds that look like sheep, or listen to the birds sing. They do not all have to be athletes. They need to be coordinated, and be in good physical shape."

But for all the children he reaches with his tumbling program, Noble knows the system is failing kids that it may most need to reach.

"What about the kids in Wilmington, or the kids whose parents work, or live far away to get here in the morning?" Noble asked. "Those are the kids we need to get to."

He said he's not a hero, and he might not be. But Noble Noble isn't at the Downes gym early in the morning to win awards, or to get pats on the back, or to have people think highly of him. He's there for the children he loves and from whom he learns.

"The day I walk out that door will be the day I should begin teaching," the 61-year-old Noble said. "By then, I'll have learned enough to be a good teacher."

Building a parent's discipline tool kit

NEWARK OUTLOOK

FROM THE STAFF OF THE COOPERATIVE EXTENSION OFFICE AT UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE

CONSIDER THIS example. Jamie and Cindy (both 3 years old) are playing quietly with Jamie's stuffed animals in the living room. Mark, Jamie's father, is in the kitchen reading the paper. Suddenly, Jamie begins to scream "Give me Teddy... give me Teddy." There is a moment of silence. Then an outburst of crying by Cindy. Mark, arrives and sees Jamie clutching the teddy bear. Cindy sits nearby sobbing uncontrollably. A bright red bite mark is visible on her arm. This is certainly an opportunity for discipline.

Although discipline is often associated with punishment, training and obedience, the term originated from the Latin words disciplina and discipulus meaning instruction and student. So "to discipline" means to educate, especially in matters of conduct.

For many parents the word discipline may invoke vivid memories. Such memories have a significant effect on how parents view discipline and use influence and power to guide their children. Responsive discipline can be used by parents when they make a decision about how to prevent or respond to their children's misbehavior.

Responsive discipline is a process we can use as parents to respond to situations where discipline is needed. It is a four step sequence. The first step is to stop, pause for a moment and cool off if you have to. This is the time for preparing yourself to make responsive decisions. In our example, Mark would pause for a minute before rushing in angrily.

The second step is to look and listen. Reading a situation quickly is an important step. Mark needs to gather information. What really happened here? What did each child do? Why did Jamie bite Cindy? As Mark gathers the facts he begins to form explanations about the causes of the problem. He tentatively concludes Jamie bit Cindy because she grabbed the teddy bear.

He recalls that Jamie is possessive of the bear. Mark quickly eliminates other possibilities. Jamie is not sick and Cindy didn't bite Jamie first. As Mark talks with the children about what happened he notices that Jamie is rubbing his eyes. Mark realizes Jamie missed his nap and that because he is sleepy he might be having a difficult time managing frustration.

The next step is to think about the problem. Mark has gathered the facts and must now think about the problem, his purpose and targets and his alternatives for responding to the problem. Evaluating the problem means deciding if a problem really exists. Sometimes this is difficult for parents and they will make two types of mistakes.

The first is reacting as though something is a problem when it really isn't. Mark avoids the "something is a problem when it is not" mistake by understanding what is reasonable and unreasonable for children his son's age.

He knows that biting cannot be accepted. There is a real problem here. The second mistake is when parents react as though something is not a problem when it is. If Mark continued to read his paper and ignore his son's biting, he would be making this second type of mistake.

To use discipline effectively, parents must have targets or a purpose - a set of long range goals they hope to achieve with their children. A parent's purpose will reflect their priorities and will serve as a broad guide for discipline. Without purpose, discipline becomes aimless.

In this example, Mark feels that biting is an unacceptable behavior and that, as a parent, he must respond to Jamie's harmful behavior. Mark's purpose may be to help his son learn to express his anger with words, to seek adult help when he feels frustrated and to understand the results of hurting others. Setting targets will help determine the disciplinary action that needs to be taken. Targets should be reasonable for the child's age and

'Two-fers' at the Grand

THE ARTS

By PHIL TOMAN

DO YOU LIKE "two-fers," two for the price of one? In today's economy I am always interested in at least looking at them. When the two are world class performers, the "two-fer" becomes even more interesting. There is a great one due at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday, Nov. 7, at 8 p.m.

On stage will be the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra under the baton of Vassily Sinaisky and the piano soloist is the fine young Irishman who won the 1986 Tchaikovsky International Piano Competition, Barry Douglas. It is not always the case that a touring orchestra is able to land such an internationally famous soloist for a visit to the Grand Old Lady of Market Street. I first became aware of the many talents of Barry Douglas thanks to Peter Elliott, a friend at RCA Victor. His style has a direct emotional appeal with technique far beyond his calendar years to back it up. Our first meeting in Dallas was a bit of a surprise. After hearing the passion of his playing, I met a quiet yet dynamic young man who quickly entered into a conversation and made me feel like an old friend very quickly. Eugene Ormandy was a musician who also did that very well!

Barry was the first Westerner since Van Cliburn to win the Tchaikovsky International Piano Competition. Since that time he has performed on five continents and with some of the greatest orchestras on those continents including the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Cleveland Orchestra, the Berlin Philharmonic, the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, the Israel Philharmonic, the Tokyo Symphony — on and on the list goes, and it is growing! Likewise his list of conductors which I will shorten to only four as examples, Sir Colin Davis, Kurt Masur, Mstislav Rostropovich and Leonard Slatkin.

In addition to this 13-city tour with the Moscow Philharmonic, he will perform with the Philadelphia Orchestra in this country. He will also appear throughout Europe and in Australia, New Zealand and Singapore around the Pacific rim.

He records for RCA Victor Red Seal and his discography includes the complete Tchaikovsky concertos, Concert Fantasy and Sonata; the Brahms No. 1; Liszt's Nos. 1 and two and Hungarian Fantasy; Rachmaninoff's No. 2 and selected Preludes; Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition; two CDs of Beethoven sonatas including the "Hammerklavier;" Prokofiev's Sonatas 2 and 7; a Liszt, Berg, Webern CD and the Brahms Piano Quintet with the Tokyo String Quartet. His next release is the Corigliano Piano Concerto No. 1.

On the more personal level, this native of Belfast is now based in Paris where he lives with his wife Deirdre and their newborn daughter Saoirse. He has never forgotten his roots and is a frequent visitor to Ireland.

On Nov. 7, Barry will perform Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 with the Moscow Philharmonic under Sinaisky. Also on the program that evening is Tchaikovsky's "Marche Solennelle" and Sibelius' dramatic Symphony No. 1 in E minor.

This combination of a young pianist and a young (by orchestral standards) orchestra is very interesting. The Moscow Philharmonic was formed in 1951 by Samuel Samosud. It was planned to offer an opportunity to younger Soviet composers to have their orchestral and operatic works heard. They offered rarely heard works to the citizens of the former USSR and quickly became very popular.

Vassily Sinaisky has conducted the Montreal Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, at the Metropolitan Opera, Hollywood Bowl and the Ravinia Festival on our continent. He was named Music Director and principal conductor of the Moscow Philharmonic in 1991.

To help make possible the visit of these two great musical forces, E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., Inc., is sponsoring the event. The company has been intimately connected with the Grand since it was reclaimed from oblivion in 1976. One of their contributions helped save the cast iron facade of the great old building.

Tickets for this concert range from $33 to $48 with discounts for senior citizens, students and groups. For information or to reserve tickets, you may call the Grand at 302-652-5577 or 800-37-GRAND. If your travels take you into downtown Wilmington, you may stop by their lovely new box office in the 818 Market Street Mall building! Just look for the building with the cast iron front, it's hard to miss!

There is plenty of parking available in the area and the lot at 9th and Shipley, the closest, offers a low rate for Grand-goers.

► OUTLOOK, from 8A

needs to be taken. Targets should be reasonable for the child's age and personality. Mark may want to immediately stop the fighting, calm both children and get his son to listen. He also wants Jamie to realize that he hurt his friend. Each of these targets is consistent with his purpose.

Considering the alternatives is the next step in thinking about a response. Mark considers many alternatives, both good and bad. He could bite his son back or spank him. He could make him apologize or separate him from Cindy.

He could send Cindy home or take Jamie's teddy bear away as punishment. Or he could give Jamie a time out, reason with him or simply remind him of the no biting rule. Each parent has a discipline tool box. When considering the alternatives it's important to use the tools that will shape and nurture your children.

Mark wants to convey how strongly he feels about hurting someone and he wants to protect his son's self-esteem. Now that he has thought this through he's ready to take action.

The last step in the responsive discipline process is to take action. After stopping, looking, listening and thinking, Mark can make a decision and act.

Before separating the children, he will show Jamie the bite mark on Cindy and impress on him how much he hurt her. Mark will emphasize in the strongest terms "No biting" and use words to express how he feels.

Because Jamie is so tired and upset, Mark calls Cindy's mom and asks her to come and take her daughter home.

After Cindy has left and Jamie is tucked in for a rest, Mark reflects on the events and decides he needs to better remember Jamie's sleep needs and thinks of a few ways he can teach Jamie how better to share with his friends.

There are several key ingredients to responsive discipline that make this approach to discipline unique.

First, responsive discipline is a thoughtful decision made by parents.

Second it is based on alternatives. It also promotes responsibility in children and is based on the belief that parents are capable and loving.

Any parent can make hasty mistakes in discipline when overwhelmed by the pressures of balancing work, family and household.

Parents under stress can become confused about their alternatives for responding to their children's misbehavior.

Instead of emphasizing a specific technique, responsive discipline offers a variety of tools for promoting self esteem and responsibility in children. Use it to fill your discipline tool box.

Memorial service

A memorial service will be held for William W. Breslin, III on Nov. 5, 1995, at Clayton Hall, University of Delaware, 1000 University Hall, at 3 p.m. In Mr. Breslin's memory the family suggests contributions to the American Cancer Society or to the University of Delaware's William W. Breslin, III Memorial Fund for Student Scholarship. Send contributions for the fund to Mr. Joe Bradley, University of Delaware Development Office, Newark, Del. 19716.

Joyce L. H. DeWolfe, choir member

Glasgow resident, Joyce L. Hartnett DeWolfe, was pronounced dead Oct. 13, 1995, in Christiana Hospital, where she was flown after she was struck by a vehicle as she attempted to walk across U.S. 40 at Porter Road to catch a bus to work, early that morning near her home.

Mrs. DeWolfe, 48, worked at Seymour's Cleaners in Wilmington for the past year and a half. She sang in the choir at St. Thomas Catholic Church, Wilmington.

Her husband, Harry DeWolfe, died in 1986.

She is survived by a son, R. Keith DeWolfe, with whom she lived; and a sister, Margaret Deppish of Newport.

A service was held Oct. 17 in Mealey Funeral Home, Wilmington. Burial was in All Saints Cemetery.

Edna M. VanDyke, enjoyed flowers

Newark resident, Edna M. VanDyke, died Oct. 14, 1995, of respiratory failure at home in Churchmans Village, where she had moved from Brandywine Nursing & Rehabilitation Center.

She had lived in Newport for 37 years before moving to Brandywine two years ago.

Mrs. VanDyke, 80, a homemaker, was a nanny to many friend's children in the Newport area for about 15 years during the 1960s and early 1970s. She enjoyed growing flowers.

Her husband of 18 years, Colonel Jackson VanDyke, died in 1941. She is survived by two daughters, Peggy Dougherty of Georgetown and Cassie Williamson of Elsmere; a brother, Frazier "Short" Caudill of Newport; a granddaughter, Repunzel Atallian, who helped care for her, and seven other grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

A service was held Oct. 18 at Nichols-Gilmore Funeral Home, Newport. Burial was in Silverbrook Cemetery.

Rose F. U. Lorenzoni, avid archer

Newark resident, Rose F. Urbanski Lorenzoni, died Oct. 13, 1995, of cancer at home.

Mrs. Lorenzoni, 73, had been a secretary and clerk for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad at Wilmers yards, Elsmere, from the 1940s until retiring in 1984.

An avid archer, she was a life member of the National Field Archers Association.

Her husband, Anthony Lorenzoni, died in 1978. She is survived by a son, David E. Nesler of Newark; two daughters, Barbara Iles of Middletown and Judith McKinnitt of Earleville, Md.; a brother, Casimir R. Urbanski of Harbeson; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

A memorial Mass was offered Oct. 20 at St. Hedwig's Catholic Church. Burial was private.

Obituaries

► OBITUARIES, from 12A

Delaware Hospice, Georgetown.

Robert G. Alleman, WW II veteran

Newark-area resident, Robert G. Alleman, died Oct. 22, 1995, of cancer at home.

Mr. Alleman, 79, graduated with a BS degree in Chemical Engineering from Lehigh University and was employed by the DuPont Company for 43 years.

He had assignments in research, nylon manufacturing in Seaford, and personnel relations in Wilmington. His last assignment was helping to establish an outplacement function to assist those leaving DuPont.

During World War II, he served with the Eighth Air Force based in England.

Mr. Alleman was former board member of the Mental Health Association of Delaware, former Vice President of the Middle Atlantic Placement Association and a member of the Sky Top Club.

He is survived by his wife, Ida L. Alleman; a son Robert Spencer of Essex, Mont.; two daughters, Katharine Gillfillan Alleman of Falls Church, Va.; and Ida Monroe Alleman of Prince George, British Columbia.

A service was held Oct. 26, at Brandywine Valley Baptist Church. Burial was private.

Helen B. Armstrong, member Newark Century Club

Newark resident, Helen B. Armstrong, died Oct. 21, 1995, of heart failure at home.

Mrs. Armstrong, 78, was a homemaker. She received a B.S. in Elementary Education at the University of Arkansas and taught in Missouri Public Schools for 10 years.

She moved to the Newark area in 1960. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church of Newark and was a Circle Leader. She was a member of the Newark Century Club.

Her husband, Robert John Armstrong, passed away in 1988. She is survived by a son, Robert C. of North Andover, Mass.; a daughter, Martha S. of Wilmington; and a sister, Hilda B. Roark of Tulsa, Okla.

A service was held Oct. 24 at the Robert T. Jones and Foad Funeral Home. Burial was in the Head of Christiana Church Cemetery.

The family suggests contributions to the Alzheimer's Association.

Robert Masche, retired DE Turnpike maintenance

Former Newark resident, Robert

Masche, died Oct. 22, 1995, of heart failure in Millcroft Nursing Home.

Mr. Masche, 70, a maintenance worker for 24 years for the Delaware Turnpike, retired in 1989.

He is survived by a half brother, Douglas Gledhill of Mesa, Ariz. A graveside service was held Oct. 26 in Riverside Cemetery, Shelton, Ct.

Thomas E. Super, trained for boxing competition

Newark resident, Thomas E. Super, died Oct. 21, 1995, after being struck by a truck while attempting to cross Route 40 near Fox Run Shopping Center.

Mr. Super, 23, was born in Philadelphia and moved to the Wilmington area five years ago.

He attended South Philadelphia High School. He served as a member of the JOB CORPS in Red Rock, Pa.

He used to train and box at Mickey Rosatti's Gym in South Philadelphia where his goal was to win the Golden Gloves Championship.

He worked for the past year as an apprentice at Quality Heating and Air Conditioning in Wilmington.

He is survived by his parents, John M. Forbes and Rosemarie Mary Super; two brothers, John William of Newark and John Ward Forbes of Clayton; two sisters, Margaret Ann Super and Maria Forbes Marra, both of Newark.

A Mass of Christian Burial was offered Oct. 26 at Holy Family Church. Burial was private.

Richard Allen Lewis, Veteran Vietnam War

Newark resident, Richard Allen Lewis, formerly of Chester, Pa., died Oct. 23, 1995, of heart failure in Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Elsmere.

Mr. Lewis, 49, was an operator at Chrysler Corp.'s Newark assembly plant for 28 years.

He was a Navy veteran of the Vietnam War.

He is survived by a son, Erick of Chester, Pa.; three daughters, Angel Lewis of San Diego, Calif., and Risha and Colleen Lewis, both of New Castle; his mother, Anna Lewis of Chester, Pa.; two sisters, Kathryn Simmons of Kennett Square, Pa., and Brenda Fitzgerald of Chester, Pa.; and two grandchildren.

A service was held Oct. 28 at Zion Baptist Church, Chester. Burial was in Greenlawn Cemetery, Chester Township, Pa.

Thomas E. Super, apprentice

A Mass of Christian Burial was offered Oct. 26 at Holy Family Catholic Church for Thomas E. Super.

Mr. Super, 23, of Newark, died Oct. 21, 1995, when he was struck by a pickup as he walked across U.S. 40 about a mile north of Glasgow, state police said.

He was an apprentice at Quality Heating and Air Conditioning Co., Wilmington.

He attended South Philadelphia High School and graduated from Red Rock, Pa., Job Corps.

He is survived by his parents, John M. Forbes and Rosemarie Mary Super of Newark; two brothers, John W. Super of Newark and John W. Forbes of Clayton; and two sisters, Margaret Ann Super and Maria Forbes Marra, both of Newark.

Sally Cook Andersen, Newark High teacher

Newark resident, Sally Cook Andersen, died Oct. 14, 1995, of breast cancer at home.

Mrs. Andersen, 71, was born in Georgia, where she attended Shorter College. She was a substitute mathematics teacher for Newark High School during the 1950s. She was a volunteer for the Winterthur Museum and won a State Award for Best Amateur Actress.

She is survived by a daughter, Mary Peniston, Colts Neck, N.J.; three sons, Sigurd L. of Newark, Ellis L. of Elkton, Md., and Erik L. of Bethel, Colo.; a sister Catherine C. Fokes of Moultrie, Ga.; and a brother, Paul P. Cook of San Antonio, Texas; and six grandchildren.

A memorial service was held Oct. 21 at Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Newark. Burial was in Georgia.

The family suggests contributions to the City of Newark Parks & Recreation Dept.

Diana D. Flair, avid bingo player

Diana D. Flair, 57, previously of Liberty Terrace, died Oct. 24, 1995, of kidney failure in Emily P. Bissell Hospital where she was a resident for the last two years.

A native of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., she moved to the Bear area in 1965.

She was a waitress and cook for 20 years at Peggy's Truck Stop, retiring in 1984 due to illness. She was an avid bingo player and enjoyed other games and cards.

Her husband of 15 years, Charles Flair, died in 1980. She is survived by her best friend, Bertha Humphrey.

Services were private. Contributions are suggested to Compassionate Care Hospice of Delaware.

Local obituaries are printed free of charge as space permits. Information usually is supplied to the paper by funeral directors. For more information, contact editorial assistant Gayle Hart at 737-0724.

'Kid's Tri' for fun at YWCA event

The Sixth Annual Bill and Vieve Gore "Kid's Tri" for children ages seven to twelve held recently at the YWCA in Newark was a great success according to organizers.

"It went real well," said Maggi McNutt, marketing director for the YWCA. "A lot of kids participated. Even the shirt which every finisher got was designed by a kid."

The triathlon, which concluded the "YWCA Week Without Violence," required each child to compete in swimming, running and biking events.

Among the winners from Newark were:

Katie Davis, first place and Katherine Mazur, 3rd place, Girls 7-8 years.

Jeffrey Boehmer, first place, Christopher Lang, second place and Bradley Foresman, third place, Boys 7-8 years.

Laura Jane Pennys, first place and Alexandria Albright, second place, Girls 9-10 years.

Matthew Richards, first place and Rory Connell, second place, Boys 9-10 years.

Stephanie Baird, second place, Girls 11-12 years.

David Pennys, second place and David Bailey, third place, Boys 11-12 years.

MBNA and other volunteers from the community helped organize the triathlon which was directed by Lynn Brooks, a professional race coordinator.

At sixteen runs, Brooks holds the record for completing the most consecutive Ironman Triathlons which are held in Hawaii.

-Mary E. Petzak

It's that time of year!

PLUMP and juicy apples are ripe for the picking in orchards and farmstands. There are many ways to enjoy these delicious fruits, but none more seasonally appealing to both children and adults than a juice-sweet caramel-covered apple.

With the help of the microwave and a bag of caramels, it's a cinch to whip up a batch of these classic autumn treats.

Simply "zap" the caramels with a bit of water and peanut butter in the microwave and dip the apples into the rich-smooth sauce.

The crisp texture of the tart apple is a perfect complement to the creamy taste of the rich melted caramels.

CARAMEL APPLES

Prep time: 20 minutes plus refrigerating
Microwave cooking time 3 1/2 minutes or

Top of stove cooking time 15 minutes

4 or 5 medium apples
Wooden sticks
1 pkg. (14 oz.) caramels (48)
2 Tbsp. creamy peanut butter (optional)
2 Tbsp. water
chopped peanuts

■ Thoroughly wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple.

■ Microwave caramels, peanut butter and water in small deep microwaveable bowl on High 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 minutes or until smooth, stirring every minute. (If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples.)

■ Dip apples into hot caramel sauce; turn until coated. Scrape excess sauce from bottom of apples. Dip caramel-coated apples in chopped peanuts. Place on greased wax paper. Decorate with candy, if desired.

■ Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften.

Makes 4 to 5.

TOP OF STOVE

■ Wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple.

■ Melt caramels with peanut butter and water in heavy 1 1/2 quart saucepan on low heat, stirring frequently until smooth.

■ Continue as directed.

Bill and Jude's Natural Foods

Bill and Jude's Natural Foods is more than a collection of made-fresh daily sandwiches and gourmet dishes, it's a philosophy of living and eating to counter this fast-paced, high-stressed world. As the free time we have erodes, as our lives become more complicated, the lure of fast food becomes stronger. Now we can have fast food and still eat healthily! Because Bill and Jude's Natural Foods makes low-fat, low-sodium, high-energy food in a variety of gourmet vegetarian categories - ovo-lacto, vegan, whatever! Bill and Jude's Natural Foods uses only the finest ingredients. And, whenever possible, Bill and Jude's Natural Foods finds locally and organically grown ingredients, free of residual pesticides. And it's made fresh each day.

It's about living right, treating yourself-right when everything else seems to be treating you wrong.

Bill and Jude formed their partnership in August of 1995 because of their mutual belief in this idea that we can eat right, even when we have no time to cook. We can have food that is fast, without the fat! Bill and Jude's Natural Foods doesn't need to hide its ingredients behind the gimmicks of the fast-food chains, because Bill and Jude's Natural Foods is good for you.

Newark Camera

For at least sixty years, Newark Camera Shop has been a part of Main Street. Owner Al Romagnoli has been able to trace it back that far, but doesn't know when it actually was founded.

He has been there since 1959, when he became manager of the business owned by his family as part of their Repro Corporation. He and his wife, Sue, purchased Newark Camera Shop in 1987.

One of the first things they did after purchasing the store was to introduce 1-hour photo processing. They've been through two sets of equipment since then, upgrading each time to maintain the highest standards of quality. They pride themselves on their attention to detail and the quality of their photo finishing. As part of the Kodak Colorwatch system, they adhere to rigid standards. They make daily quality-control checks and report the results to Kodak.

They've also brought the Kodak Create-A-Print System to Newark, allowing customers to make enlargements of their photos in minutes.

Newark Camera Shop carries cameras, film and accessories for all photographers, beginner to expert. They also carry frames and pre-cut mats to display your favorite photos.

Newark Camera Shop is also the place to go to have holiday greeting cards made with your favorite photo.

Intensity is key to his game

After the Glasgow-Newark soccer game on Halloween night, one Newark player stood around and sucked on a lollipop.

His feet and legs were still swaying back and forth and his eyes still burned with intensity.

Intensity, or Tim Conley as his parents named him at birth had just finished containing another opponents star player in Newark's 1-0 loss.

Intensity talked about himself and how he had mirrored Glasgow's David Hudson.

"That's what my game revolves around," said Conley. "Getting pumped up."

Newark needed more players like Intensity on Tuesday. When the ball was coming Hudson's way, Intensity found that little bit extra to make the play.

Guarding the opponent's stars is his job on the field.

Even though he would prefer to play offense, Intensity often finds himself elbow-to-elbow, trying to keep the Hudson's of the Delaware high school soccer world at bay.

Intensity starts his preparation the minute he gets off the field, from playing the last game. "When they assign me to a player it just gets me nuts," said Conley of his pre-game tactics. "As soon as our last game was over I started to get focused on Hudson because that's all that mattered."

Conley said he doesn't go to the opponents games, watch films or even study their movements. Intensity just gets intense and then plays the game. "People tell me what players are good at and I just get prepared mentally," said Conley who anchors the Newark defense with Colin Carew, possibly the best player in the state. "I knew that he [Hudson] was faster than me, I just tried to get myself into a position where I could beat him to the ball."

Intensity likes to rely on frustration whenever possible. "That's usually one of my goals," said Conley. "If I know the type of player that I'm guarding and I can get under his skin I'll just nudge him and finally he'll get himself thrown out of the game."

Intensity has built a career around mirroring other players, it's not something that he is in favor of, because Intensity wants to play on the other side of the ball. "I don't like playing other players that much because it throws me off my game."

But on Tuesday Intensity held Hudson to zero shots on goal, and

Dragons, 'Jackets share crown

By DAVID G.W. SCOTT

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

As fans and players pulled away from Glasgow High on Tuesday night, the stadium lights were still burning, yet there was still a sense that something was left undone.

Glasgow's 1-0 victory over Newark secured the schools first Flight A championship since 1984, but it is a championship they share with the Yellowjackets, who only had to tie to have the crown outright.

Both teams eagerly await the state tournament pairings which will come out on Monday.

As high school soccer games go, this one was a beauty. The moon shown through the clouds like half a soccer ball. Newark fans were on one side, Glasgow fans on the other.

The game boiled down to Newark's defense against Glasgow's offense. Newark had only given up five goals in 15 games while Glasgow's offense comes from all over, swarming a defense until it breaks down.

Last Saturday's 5-0 win over Archmere was evidence of their scoring power.

The game was decide with just under 16 minutes remaining in the second half.

David Hudson, who had been shadowed by Tim Conley the entire game, broke free down the left side. He cut his left-footed cross back against the Newark defense. After two Newark players had slipped, the ball ended up on the foot of Matt Hasty. The senior co-captain pushed the ball to his right and fired a low shot that beat Newark keeper Eric Suro.

But as he had the entire game, Colin Carew came up with a save off the line. Unfortunately, if you're Newark, fortunately if you're Glasgow, he cleared the ball right to Glasgow's Marc Iocono. Iocono calmly tucked the ball in the net.

"I was in a good spot and just put it in," said Iocono.

Glasgow coach Bob Bussiere agreed. He said Iocono was an in-the-right-place-at-the-right-time player.

"We point to this game all season," Bussiere said. "Once we scored the goal, I knew we had it."

Newark coach Hugh Mitchell said the goal woke his team up.

"If we had played the entire game the way we played the last 15

Newark runs for the title

By ERIC FINE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

NEWARK HIGH's football team will put its seven-game winning streak on the line against No. 1 William Penn.

The Friday night game at Hoffman Stadium in Newark should determine the winner of the Blue Hen Conference Flight A. The survivor of this football season's version of a world war can probably count on drawing the No. 1 seed in the state tournament, which begins later this month.

The matchup pits the No. 3 Yellowjackets and their big-play backfield against the Colonials, which rely on quarterback Rahsaan Matthews and a core of players returning from '94.

William Penn lost to eventual champion Christiana in the semifinals last season, but some are touting this year's edition as being among the best in the school's storied football history.

Both teams are coming off solid efforts. Newark defeated Mount Pleasant 54-6 and the Colonials threw a 28-0 shutout at Brandywine. The two teams have strong offensive lines, but they are used differently.

The 'Jackets' line opens holes for running backs Butch Patrick and Butter Pressey, who could become the only two backs to each rush for 1,000 yards in the same year in Newark history.

The 'Jackets' dynamic duo has made the long run a staple in the offense all season — and their success Friday night will be even more crucial. Quarterback Scott Hunt has thrown 16 touchdowns this season, but he's only attempted 77 passes in eight games. Newark coach Butch Simpson said his offense will function in the same way. So don't look for the 'Jackets to go to short plays in an attempt to grind out yardage and monopolize both the ball and the clock.

"They're a smothering defensive team," Simpson said of William Penn. "Without a doubt." Hopefully, he said, it will be business as usual. Patrick and Pressey each mixing in a couple runs of 50 yards or more, and touchdown specialist Sean McCullough, whose caught nine passes in the endzone, finishing things off.

"That's the way we score," Simpson said. "We have to score by the big play. That's how we're going to live. If somebody takes that away from us, they're going to win. ... We're not going to grind the ball down the field."

William Penn, in contrast, is less flamboyant.

"They're more of a ball-control type offense," Simpson said. "They're going to eventually just

St. Mark's spikers slam their way up rankings

St. Mark's showed up and Christians didn't.

The Spartans romped past the Vikings 15-3, 15-3 Monday in a non-conference volleyball match that probably dropped Christiana from the running for the No. 1 seed in the state tournament.

The tournament begins tomorrow.

Christiana (15-2, 13-1 in Flight A) clinched first place in the Blue Hen Conference Flight A last week on the strength of 14 consecutive wins. The Vikings merited strong consideration for the top spot after St. Mark's upset No. 1 Ursuline on Oct. 24.

But their collapse against the Spartans will probably drop Christiana to No. 3, and left the team groping for answers to the question, What happened?

Meanwhile, St. Mark's (15-3, 6-2) finished the season tied for first place in the Catholic Conference with Ursuline and Padua.

"We've been notoriously slow starters," St. Mark's coach Dave Stover said. "This is the best match we've played from beginning to end."

Kristen Darby (6 kills, 4 digs), Kate Hubbard (5 kills, 4 blocks, 3 digs) and Toni Swan (14 assists, 4 digs, 3 aces) led the Spartans.

"We kept the pressure on them to

FORMER CHRISTIANA ASSISTANT

Newark names hoops coach

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Greg Benjamin is taking his basketball down the road from his assistant coaching job at Christiana High.

It's just a short drive down I-95, but Benjamin will be filling the Newark High basketball head coaching position left open by the resignation of Jim Doody in September.

Doody left the position after 18 years and three state titles so that he could pursue business interests.

"The selection committee chose him [Benjamin] because of his strong emphasis on the part of student in student-athlete," said Newark High Principal Frank Hagen. "His focus is not only on basketball but going beyond that in life and preparing our students for the future."

The selection committee consisted of Hagen, athletic director John Holland and two parents from the basketball program.

Hagen said Benjamin stressed academics as a key part of what he hoped to emphasize when instructing the players for the Yellowjackets.

Benjamin is currently active as a advisor in the Alternative Education Program at Christiana High and at this time will remain in the program at Christiana while coaching Newark.

"I'm going to have to wear my Newark tee-shirt on top of my Christiana tee-shirt," said Benjamin about working for both schools.

As far as basketball and life goes,

Benjamin is all about winning.

"I'm a winner and I'm going to take that winning attitude with me over to Newark High," said Benjamin, a Newark resident. "I'm going to stress winning on and off the court because I'm tired of seeing our young people play four years of high school basketball and have nothing to show for it."

For his own personal career, Benjamin has played high school and college basketball and then became the assistant coach at Christiana. He agreed that this is the next step on his ladder.

Benjamin said he likes the full-court defense and the run-and-gun offense when it comes to on court performance, and off the court he hopes to develop "productive citizens."

wear you down. They don't turn the ball over. They don't make mistakes."

Simpson dismissed any suggestion that the Colonials offense starts and ends with Matthews, who has garnered respect as both a passer and a runner.

"Their weapons are many, and therefore you cannot just come in like we can many weeks and just say, 'Let's stop this first and this second and if we do that, we're pretty much in the ballgame.'"

To their credit, William Penn's player are not taking the game lightly.

"They've always been in the back of our minds as a tough opponent down the line," Matthews said of Newark.

"We know they're riding high," said split end Terrance Dendy, one of Matthew favorite targets. "We just got to come in ready to play."

And the big games being turned in by Patrick and Pressey are no secret to the Colonials.

"They're good," said safety Damon Parker. "They're probably the best two backs we've played against this year."

Parker, the only returning starter in the Colonials' secondary, said he expects Newark to them deep as other teams have.

Nose guard Lavar Carter and defensive tackles Damian Brooks and LaVon Pender see the early part of the game as being important — a notion the "Jackets players and coaches reject."

"I guess it's our line against their line — our 'O' line against their 'D' line, our 'D' line against their 'O' line," Pressey said. "It's a battle of the trenches. It could be one early, but I doubt that because they're a good team, and we're a good team."

"I think eventually (our) speed's going to get them," he said.

Both Pressey and Deuorn Harris believe stopping Matthews will be the key to winning.

"Rahsaan Matthews is more of a threat than anything else on that offense," said Harris, who lines up at tackle on both offense and defense for Newark. "He's got a good arm. He can throw the ball and he can run the ball. Anytime you can find that in a quarterback, it makes it a difficult game."

Moreover, Harris said his team better prepare itself for the long haul come Friday night.

"Personally I think it's going to be a war all night," Harris said. "...We're both equally good teams. All it is is who's the best prepared

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

ST. MARK'S Kristen Darby will remember the 1995 volleyball season as the year the Spartans knocked off No. 1 Ursuline in the next to last week of the regular season.

Darby, a junior middle hitter, will also remember gritting her teeth to play through the pain caused by tendinitis in both knees and shin splints.

But she will look back at the season with pride. She led the Spartans in scoring against Ursuline and also against Christiana, which they beat on the last day of the season.

The Vikings hadn't lost since the second game of the season and had their hearts set on the No. 1 seed after St. Mark's upset Ursuline. But Darby and company canceled that dream Monday.

Despite the enormity of that achievement, she kept coming back to the importance of the Ursuline game. The Raiders swept the Spartans in all three games during her freshman year. They took two of three from them en route to a state championship last year.

And Ursuline had beaten them twice this season.

"We feel like they've been our main competition for years," Darby said. "It does put us on a high for the tournament, but I don't feel we're going to be so big-headed that it's going to bring us down."

"I think we've been having a more diverse offense and have a lot of hard practices. We've been pushing ourselves for the big games." And St. Mark's saved its best for last against Christiana.

"We came out hard and played hard all the way through," she said. "We expected a closer match, but we came like we did against Ursuline. We were just really pumped. It was our last regular-season game, and we wanted to finish it off right."

Darby refuses to let pain get in the way of her role with the team. Her daily regimen includes whirlpool treatments, stretching "and a lot of Advil."

"I can't imagine coming off the court because of pain," she said. "You work through the pain. When it's over, I feel like I've overcome a lot of challenges."

Beginning with Ursuline and ending with Christiana.

the point where they couldn't make the transition from defense to offense," Stover said. "We never had a stretch in the game where we eased up."

"Tonight there were no lulls. We jumped on them early and never let up," he said. "It was good for our self-confidence. They're pretty relaxed at this point. They're having fun. They know what they're capable of doing in a match."

"Right now we're just playing very good."

Christiana's Sharma Gray paused a long time before trying to explain the disappointing defeat.

"I don't think we were ready," said Gray, a junior middle hitter.

"We were psyched, but when the game started it left."

Gray shook her head, then said: "I don't know what it was. Everything just fell apart."

"We messed up," said Deanna Pruitt, a senior middle hitter. "They gave us the ball, and we didn't do anything with it. We gave up."

Christiana coach Kim Huggins was baffled by her team's inability to generate any offense, saying it was a case of an entire team having its worst possible day.

"They had a real good practice after school," she said. "Up until they got on the court, they wanted this game more than they wanted any other game. Our whole game wasn't there."

"We had five kills total — Most of our player average five kills."

But Huggins put the loss in perspective: Tournament time means a whole new ball game.

"Every team starts at zero," she said. "You got to win two matches to get to the semi-finals, and one more to get to the finals. You lose the first match in the state tournament and you're finished."

"It doesn't matter if you're 15-and-one or seven-and-seven. You could have a .500 season; you could have a .900 season — When you get to the state tournament, it's do or die."

The one-sided nature of the match left a few St. Mark's players scratching their heads.

Senior middle hitter Kate Hubbard said she anticipated a showdown.

"We thought they wanted to prove that the Flight A was just as tough as the Catholic Conference," she said. "I think we just came out strong early. That motivated us. Everything worked. Everyone contributed."

Hubbard also cited the "Ursuline factor" that should give St. Mark's a major boost going into the state tournament. She said the momentum helped carry the Spartans past a pretty good Archmere team last week and psyched them up for Christiana.

"We knew we could beat Ursuline, but we had to prove it to ourselves. Then when we did, we knew we were one of the top teams in the state," she said.

"We know we can play, and we know other teams know our ability."

The Christiana High soccer team finished up its regular season on Tuesday when the Vikings defeated Concord 3-1 in Blue Hen Conference Flight A play.

Tim Fassette scored the first goal of the game, and added an assist on the second as Christiana, ranked No. 7 in the state, improved its record to 11-2-3.

Fassette scored off a corner kick from Corey Eagles. As Eagles booted the ball to the front of the net from the left side of the field, it seemed as if the ball landed right on Fassette's foot which directed the ball out of the reach the Concord keeper and into the back of the net.

The Vikings next goal of the first half came from Kakwa McClain. Fassette kicked the ball to the middle of the field in front of the net and McClain simply pushed the ball in past the diving keeper.

The last goal came with about 15 minutes left in the game. Doug Clark headed a corner kick past the keeper and secured the win.

The offense was moving the ball on the ground and in the air, but according to Viking head coach John Kendall, the defense was painful.

"We were up 2-0 in the second half and they began to slack off," said Kendall whose team will spend the next week preparing for the state tournament that begins Nov. 7.

Christiana failed to qualify for the tournament last year, but this year with a impressive record and an even more impressive win over Glasgow on Oct. 24 the Vikings have reserved themselves a spot in the big dance.

The main problem that remains for Kendall is on defense.

First, the Vikings must regain their composure in this area of their game and develop into a solid defense.

In the Brandywine game on Oct. 27, a 2-0 Bulldog win, Kendall said the defense gave up goals that should have been stopped way before they began. Then in Tuesday's win over Concord, the defense gave up a easy goal that could have been avoided by a simple clear.

The next problem lies in the keeper position.

Senior Chris Gioso had the spot at the beginning off the season but then suffered a hip-pointer injury in the second game of the season against Middletown.

At the half of that game, Kendall asked the senior keeper if he wished to return to action, but he denied citing the best interests of the team.

Welcome please, junior Steve Thompson.

"I put Steve in and he just played way above himself," said Kendall.

"We never thought that Steve could play that well. He has just gotten better and better as the season went along."

Because Thompson has played so well in the starting position, and has stayed under the "three-mistake" limit that Kendall has set from his keepers, the problem now arises who will be between the pipes come Nov. 7.

Gioso started and finished the Concord game, partly because it was senior day and partly because of his desire to play.

But now, as with the playoffs in full-sight, the Vikings keepers will have to battle it out to see who starts.

"They're going to have to battle it out in practice," said Kendall. "We'll see who the best one in practice is, which one plays the best in practice. Whoever shows me who wants to play is the one that is going to start."

Kendall has set the lines for his keepers, and this week he will no doubt make his intentions known to the defensive players.

The only other mark on the Vikings game comes from losing foreign exchange student Gunnar Strangeland.

Strangeland has been suffering all season with a lumbar injury and Kendall said Tuesday that it is unlikely the foreign kicker will return for post season action.

Hens look for tough test

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

If you've been following the Delaware football team this season, the statement that head coach Tubby Raymond made in Monday's weekly luncheon will not surprise you.

"I believe that this game, this weekend, is one of the most important that we will play all season," said Raymond, whose team improved to 8-0 with a 61-0 thrashing of Maine last Saturday.

Raymond has made a habit of giving opposing teams credit throughout the season, only to have his team man-handle them in week-end competition.

It all started with the season-opening West Chester game where Raymond was worried the Hens last preseason scrimmage was a indication of how the game would go.

Raymond called the preseason game "poor" and felt the Hens were overconfident and not ready for the game. The next week, as the Hens prepared for rival Villanova, Raymond down-played the West Chester win, saying all the good teams get better.

"I regard this as a foundation for the season," Raymond would say about the West Chester game. The Villanova game had become a game where Raymond's team would either improve or dig itself a hole.

Delaware won 28-7.

Then as the Hens readied for two away games that would take them to Boston, Raymond spoke of the Boston University run-and-shoot offense and how he worried his defense would have problems with it.

"We're just going to have to meet strength with strength and cover the guy they throw the ball to," Raymond said.

Even though the Terrier quarterback threw for 439 yards in that game, the Hen offense put up 41 points to Boston's 29.

Delaware wins.

The second trip to Boston to play Northeastern had Raymond concerned about returning to the same place about two weeks. Raymond mentioned that Northeastern was a tough team that could beat Delaware if the Hens were not focused.

Delaware won 37-10.

Then it was finally time for what Raymond called the "true test."

Defending national champion Youngstown State walked onto the Delaware Stadium turf and Raymond worried his troops would be beaten.

"We're moving into the big leagues now," said Raymond. "We've had a four-game preseason to get us ready. We're moving into the critical part of our schedule now. We're in right over our chins now. When people ask me about being real critical about winning, this is what I've been talking about. We were critical about those things that would not be good enough to play against Youngstown, and the best teams on our schedule. This is the true test to see how we've come along."

Delaware passed, winning 34-13.

The Hens had obviously come a long way.

Raymond tried to make excuses for the Hens next opponent, Richmond. Raymond said the Spiders had played a tough schedule and that if they come to Delaware and beat his team this year, the next year and the next year will be the same.

Delaware won 15-0. Next year will probably be different. The score that is.

This past week, as the Hens were preparing to play Maine, Raymond only mentioned that in last years game Delaware had been defeated because of overconfidence.

That, he said is enough reason to worry.

Delaware won 61-0, and after the game Maine head coach Jack Cosgrove called the game a "butt-kicking of dynamic proportions."

So why should this week be any different.

Tomorrow the Hens will face William and Mary, a team Raymond said is the best defensive team they have faced.

Raymond continues to worry week-to-week that of the remaining three teams left on the schedule one will spoil the perfect season.

Yet from the performances that his team has turned in this season, it seems that each week the only team that should be worrying is those playing against Delaware.

"When I saw the tapes of the JMU game I was scared," said Cosgrove after Saturday's 61-0 loss. "I wasn't surprised this is how it turned out."

Funny how two coaches can see two different pictures.

Patrick tops 1,000 yards

By ERIC FINE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Regardless what happens, Newark High's Butch Patrick will always have this football season to savor.

The No. 3 Yellowjackets take a perfect conference record into this Friday's showdown against No. 1 William Penn. And Patrick and running mate Butter Pressey have won recognition as perhaps the best high school backfield in the state if not on the planet.

Patrick reached another milestone in last Saturday's 54-6 bludgeoning of Mount Pleasant: running for 133 yards on only 12 carries gave him 1,017 total yards for the season. (He and Pressey also scored three touchdowns apiece.)

"For me it's very exciting," said the 5-foot, 7-inch, 154-pound senior. "I can't explain how good it feels."

So far, he's received letters from North Carolina State, Temple, Rutgers and James Madison, all of which have a history of solid football programs.

But Patrick knows where he is coming from. He backed up Daman Stuart during his sophomore year and got off to a slow start last season.

"I had a talk with coach (Butch Simpson) at mid-season," Patrick said. "He brought me back into the game."

Indeed, Patrick finished 1994 with a hand full of 100-yard games.

Simpson also switched Patrick to fullback, which allows him to run more plays up the middle — especially with the emergence of Pressey.

The Jackets other back is closing in on a 1,000-yard season of his own — he's run for 825 — after picking up 118 yards on a scant four carries against Mount Pleasant.

"I came in expecting big things of myself," Patrick said. "So far I'm fulfilling my expectations."

He is also careful to give his buddies on the offensive line plenty of credit for his success. "I'm just running the ball," he said. "They're making the holes. We seem like a family."

And a happy one at that.

minutes, we would have won," said Mitchell.

But Newark had to respect Hudson's speed. As good a job a Conley did, Carew came up big defensively on several chances.

"Colin has probably saved three times as many goals as anyone in the state has scored," Mitchell said. "That shows his value to this team."

Both teams played the type of hard, physical but clean soccer game that is a credit to players and coaches.

Senior co-captain Matt Lantagne talked about what the win meant.

"It's our senior year and it feels good to put the banner up in the gym."

As the state tournament approaches, both teams remember last year's quarter-final Newark victory in a shootout.

Still many people in the soccer community feel it would be nice to see these two teams settle a tie on the field.

Then they could turn the lights out at Glasgow Stadium.

kept the Dragon player who has 10 goals on the season quiet.

As Hudson moved up field to position himself for a pass, so did Intensity. As Hudson went to head the ball, Intensity was already in the air.

And when the game was over, Intensity could have played three more.

"I have so much energy now," said Conley who agreed that the more intense a game, the better he plays.

Conley believes that Newark needs more intensity if they are to perform well in the state tournament that begins Nov. 7.

"I'm waiting for the tournament so this team will have a lot of intensity," said Conley. "That's all this team is lacking is intensity."

When tournament time comes in two weeks, look for Intensity to be spreading a little of himself around to his teammates.

Kickers tie, win

The 84 DSB Kickers tied, then beat the CAA Crunch. The Kickers and Crunch battled to a 0-0 tie on Sunday Oct. 22. Then on Sunday, Oct. 29, the Kickers beat the Crunch 1-0 on a late goal by T.R. Herlihy. The goal was made possible on the midfield play of Ryan Edwards and Brian Vanderslice. Strong defense of Chris McNelis, Nate Phillips, and Kyle Mullin helped the Kickers to their second straight shutout. The Kickers and Crunch both play up one year in the NORDEL under-13 age group.

Tryouts slated

Tryouts for the DSB 81 Kickers players born in 1981 can tryout for the DSB boys soccer team on Sat., Nov. 4 at 12-3 p.m. at the DSB Club on Salem Church Road. The Kickers are current reigning state runners up in their age group. Call 834-5780.

League forming

Local girls between the ages of 6-18 that are interested in forming a girls softball league please call 737-7388 between the hours of 6-8 p.m. and leave a message confirming your interest.

Soccer league set

The Sports and Athletics Section of the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation will once again sponsor an adult indoor soccer league. A maximum of 28 teams will be accepted with divisional play starting the week of Dec. 4. An approximate 10-game schedule will be played with each team playing once a week at a cost of $375 per team. For information call 323-6418.

Youth programs offered

The Sports and Athletics Section of the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation is now accepting registrations for two youth programs. Practices will begin the week of Dec. 4 with Saturday games starting Jan. 6 and season ending March 1996. For information call 323-6418.

Hoops tourney

The Kappa Alpha Si Fraternity will hold a news conference at Newark High School at 3 p.m. on Dec. 6-9 regarding their annual basketball tournament.

Youth hockey

This winter the Sports and Athletics Section of the New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation will again offer an indoor youth instructional street hockey program.

Newark's magazine helps Delawareans eat smart

By MARTIN L. DUNCAN
NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

IN THESE DAYS of diets and the search for a healthier lifestyle, it sometimes seems as if remedies and warnings are shot out at the public that one wonders whether sanity is being sacrificed for trimmer thighs.

But there is hope for those health-conscious Delawareans who are only interested in the bottom line. From out of the confusing health scare headlines of "New Research Shows..." and "Doctors Warn..." comes Connie van Ogtrop and her Smart Eating... in the First State newsletter.

A registered dietician, van Ogtrop practices out of her office on Delaware Avenue. She began publishing the newsletter last year after noticing among her patients and public speaking audiences a great deal of puzzlement regarding nutrition.

"It became apparent to me that people were not as informed as they should be about nutrition or else were totally confused," she says. "It's simply because the media will take initial research results and write about it because it sells papers. People are real interested in whether or not coffee causes cancer, but they haven't had time to talk to the researcher and get all the information. The public then overreacts because it only knows a portion of the research."

Smart Eating... in the First State focuses on the facts of national nutrition issues and packages the information in an easily digestible format which explains how those issues affect the average Delawarean. As opposed to nationally circulated health magazines, van Ogtrop's newsletter, with its current subscriber circulation of 400 copies, reports on foods sold in local supermarkets and reviews the menus of area restaurants while also providing general nutrition news. At least half of each newsletter gives attention to local issues. When reviewing the fare of Delaware restaurants, Mrs. van Ogtrop actually sits down with the chef and asks him how he prepares his dishes and what type of changes he is willing to make for diners with dietary restrictions.

"They don't very often like to share their recipes," she admits, "and sometimes I even wonder if they have one! But we ask them, 'What kind of oil do you use?' or 'Can you suggest any lowfat entrees?' Then they will make recommendations. We think that's important for the consumer because people need to know where they can get good food and healthy food."

van Ogtrop, 55, has three daughters and one grandson. She has lived in Newark for 30 years and holds both a B.S. in Home Economics and an M.S. in Human Nutrition from the University of Delaware. But she credits her parents for having taught her how to eat right and about the importance of exercise, and still believes that the parental example is still the best preparation for a healthy lifestyle.

Despite having taught nutrition at the U of D and worked in a hospital, she still finds it easy to get across her message without using page after page of technical mumbo-jumbo. "We really try to talk about food and not just talk about theory and research," she explains. "We try to get it down to the level of what you're going to eat for breakfast tomorrow. People just want the basics: What do I eat?"

The newsletter tries to answer that question four times a year, though van Ogtrop and her permanent staff of one—her daughter Kristin is the editor—would like to see it appear more frequently. Smart Eating... in the First State is researched primarily by senior

University of Delaware dietetics students who help out to earn elective credits, but more staff is needed to increase its size and rate of publication.

Likewise, because the newsletter does not currently sell advertising space for fear of encountering conflicting interests, it depends entirely on subscribers for its revenue.

But according to van Ogtrop, the one thing which is not in short supply is news to print.

"Nutrition is a volatile field," she claims. "It's always changing and every single day every newspaper you pick up has information about nutrition. It's a hot topic and there's just so much to write about that there's not enough space. So I'd like to see it come out more frequently, maybe even monthly."

All indications are that this goal may not be far off.

"It's very self satisfying," she says. "I can see completion [in the newsletter] which I don't always see with patients. We think it's a good quality newsletter, but we have to be patient for it to become better."

Health conscious Delawareans and others throughout the region will probably be hoping that a better Smart Eating... in the First State will prove even more delicious and fat free than the appetizer.

BIZ BRIEFS

Dr. Woods on board

Tanya R. Woods, D.P.M., recently joined the practice of Dr. Raymond V. Feehery at New Castle Associates in Podiatry, Newark. Dr. Woods graduated from Newark High School in 1984 and received a B.S. degree from Pennsylvania State University in 1988. She completed podiatric surgery residency training in Delaware County, Pa., in 1994.

Liz Bayard has joined Placers' Talleyville office as a service representative. Bayard sold The Malt Shoppe in Dec. 1994. She is a 1991 graduate of the University of Delaware.

Stephen P. Rash, assistant cashier-Central Collections, recently was promoted to assistant vice president-Central Collections, Beneficial National Bank. Rash attended the UD and resides in Newark.

Greta Huegel, vice president and branch manager of MNC Mortgage Corporation's Newark branch, has earned the distinction of "Top Producing Branch" for the first six months of 1995 out of MNC's 25 branches.

Reynolds Recycling center in Newark recently sponsored a program called "Recycle & Win" game. Newark resident John Muller won a new Ford Ranger pickup truck by recycling aluminum cans at the Reynolds Recycling center, Marrows Road. In addition to earning cash for his recyclable aluminum cans, Mr. Muller was given the "Recycle & Win" scratch-off game tickets, one of which was the winning ticket. On the day that Mr. Muller received his winning ticket he had earned six dollars for recycling his aluminum cans. He is shown here with Reynolds' Chuck Johnson, left, and Ted Bailey, manager of the Newark center.

An Ad

- Start your ad with what you are selling.
- Be descriptive. List your item's best features.
- Avoid abbreviations. Too many abbreviations can confuse the reader.
- Always state the price of an item. If you are flexible on price, include "negotiable" or "best offer".
- Complete your ad with a phone number and the hours in which you will receive calls.
- Including the word "please" in your ad increases responses.

Ad changes and policies

Please check your ad the first day to see that all information is correct. This will ensure your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the very first day your ad appears to make any changes or corrections. By doing this we can credit you for the first day if an error occurred. The newspaper's financial responsibility, if any, for errors of any kind is limited to the charge for the space for one day.

The publisher wants to do everything possible within the confines of good taste and legal constraints to help you advertise your products or services to your best advantage.
