BALTIMORE FIRM GETS CONTRACT FOR NEW SCHOOL

Northeastern Construction Co. Awarded Actual Erection Work for $181,000

TOTAL COST $247,000

Two Wilmington Firms Get Plumbing and Electrical Contracts on Building

Contracts were signed yesterday afternoon in the office of the Delaware School Auxiliary in Wilmington for the erection and equipment of the new School building for the Newark School District. After many months of waiting, residents of the town and community, as well as the members of the local board expect to witness the actual beginning of the work in the course of a week or two. The building will be located on Academy Street, south of Delaware Avenue.

The contract for the actual construction of the building was awarded to the Northeastern Construction Company of Baltimore, Md. Their bid was $181,000 even.

Contract for installing of plumbing and heating equipment for the building was given to T. J. Weldin and Son of Wilmington, Delaware, and another contract for electrical wiring and equipment was awarded E. F. Higgin and Co., also of Wilmington.

Contracts were signed and delivered to the respective parties at the meeting yesterday afternoon. Among those who attended were Dr. Joseph H. Odell, director of the Service Citizens; A. J. Taylor, engineer; Dr. Walt H. Steel, president of the Newark School Board; J. Herbert Owens, secretary of the Board and Superintendent of Schools here; R. S. Gallaher and Harrison Gray.

The total cost of the building, according to the contracts awarded yesterday will be about $247,000, including walks, grading and seeding of the lawn.

One local bidder, James H. Hutchison, was represented among the eight or ten competitors for the construction work. Mr. Hutchison stated that the Baltimore firm is highly regarded in building circles and that they will beyond doubt complete the work satisfactorily.

With the signing of the contracts yesterday the final episode in the long and strenuous campaign for a new school in Newark was brought to a close. The Board of Education has been intensely active in pushing to a successful close the preliminary work. Beginning with the School Referendum taken here, the Bond Issue vote, the sale of the bonds and the drawing up of the plans, the members have devoted a great part of their time to the project.

With the completion of the new building, the serious congestion now apparent in the school rooms here will be permanently relieved.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

Announcement was made today that the Faculty Club Christmas Party will be given on Monday evening, December 17th, in the club rooms in Old College Hall.

MARYLAND ELECTRIC POWER FIRM MAY EXTEND LINES INTO DELAWARE

With the announcement made a few days ago to the effect that the Eastern Powers Company, a big concern owning plants throughout lower Chester County, Pa., and Cecil County, Md., is planning to run lines down through the Eastern Shore, is causing considerable interest among nearby residents.

Farmers living in Pencader Hundred have hopes that a line will be run across the upper part of the county to Middletown, and that they may be connected with the current. Likelihood of the Company to run lines through the Iron Hill and Cooch's district is not probable, however, according to word from their Elkton office.

Instead it is planned to run two lines down the Shore, one by way of Chestertown and the other by way of

COMMUNITY TREE PRESENTS PROBLEM

Disbanding of Choral Club Casts Newark Custom Into Doubt—Stirring Up Interest

With the approach of the holiday season, the question of whether Newark shall have another community Christmas tree on the Academy lawn has been again agitated.

At the regular meeting of Council held Monday evening, a letter was read from E. H. Vogt, one of the original boosters of the community tree idea. In the letter, he called attention of Council to the fact that no provision has been made for the renewal of the custom; and that with the disbanding of the Choral Club, no way has been left open through which to push the project successfully. Council was asked to financially back the erection of the tree. After a lengthy discussion, the Councilmen decided that in view of the heavy expenses of the past year, they would not be equal to assuming the entire bill, but would be glad to contribute to any fund being raised.

Century Club May Aid

The ladies of the New Century Club have a choral club in the making and expect to give a concert soon. Mrs. J. P. Cann, who is leader of the club, assured Mayor Frazer Monday that the ladies would be glad to arrange for the services under the tree and form the nucleus for the celebration. Mrs. A. D. Cobb is in charge of the singers and Mrs. W. E. Holton is accompanist.

James C. Hastings, president of the Chamber of Commerce, when asked about the proposed community tree, stated that he thought the custom should be continued, but could not speak authoritatively for the Chamber as the matter has not been brought to their attention. He said, however, that he felt sure the organization would contribute.

The estimated cost of the erection and lighting of a suitable tree, based on last year's figures, would be about $50.00.

HOLSTEIN HARVEY CLUB IN MEETING

Opera House Jammed With Householders Monday Evening Last

The second meeting of the Holstein Harvey Cooperative Consumers Club of Newark was held last Monday evening in the Opera House. The auditorium was packed and jammed with householders, and long before the doors opened, the lobby and pavements outside the building were thronged with people.

Following a personal canvass by Holstein Harvey salesmen throughout the town, going from door to door in the interests of the club, an effort was made to organize at Monday's meeting. Membership cards were passed through the audience, and they were urged to become members. The exact number of signatures obtained has not as yet been learned.

During the course of the meeting about twenty or thirty free prizes were awarded to persons holding lucky numbers. The prizes consisted of market bags filled with several well known household articles.

The meeting was addressed by J. R. Richardson, vice-president of the Holstein Harvey organization, who also presided. Four Elkton ladies occupied seats on the platform. The Elkton club was organized recently and is going strong, according to reports.

The club, it is understood, has been started here in order that the householders may take advantage of a certain discount by purchasing commutation grocery books, from recognized H. H. dealers.

The "Happy Four" indulged in some musical acrobatics during the evening, much to the delight of the audience. Several selections were also rendered on the piano by one of the Holstein Harvey girls.

Fall Manoeuvres On Campus To Be Attended By Many Visitors

ADJ. GENERAL COMING

The fall parade and review of the R. O. T. C. Corps of the University will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, on the campus fronting Wolf Hall.

Major L. B. Row, commanding the unit here, stated yesterday that several visitors from Wilmington and Fort DuPont, many of them officers, will be present to witness the results of the fall training period. Drill will be discontinued at the University at the close of the parade, and will not reopen until next spring.

Adjutant General J. Austin Ellison, of Wilmington, head of the National Guards in this State, will be present and review the battalion.

A feature of the program will be the Freshman Competitive Drill. In this drill, Freshmen from the three companies will compete for honors. The movement will comprise Platoon, Section Squad and Company Drill. Keen interest has been aroused among the first year men of each company and it will serve a way in which to judge their proficiency for the first three months' work.

The review will be held shortly after noon, and the townspeople and residents of the community are cordially invited by the Military Department to attend the ceremonies.

UNIVERSITY FACULTY AND STUDENTS TO START DIGGING FOUNDATIONS TUESDAY

P. S. duPONT EXPECTED TO TURN FIRST SPADE

Pierre S. duPont is expected to be in Newark next Tuesday when the first work will be started on the new Library. Mr. duPont, it is expected, will turn over the first spadeful of earth in the foundations. He is the largest single contributor to the Library Fund, and has always taken keen interest in the affairs of the University.

It is also being arranged that a guard of honor, composed of local ex-service men and members of the Rehabilitation Unit escort Mr. duPont during the ceremonies.

Announcement has been made that the first actual work on the new State War Memorial Library to be erected on the campus of the University, midway between the Men's College and the Women's College, will begin on next Tuesday, December 11th.

At a meeting of the faculty of the Men's College, held Monday afternoon, it was decided that all members of the staff take part in the digging. Students are already preparing for the novel event and great interest has been aroused in other student bodies. It is possible that the Women's College girls will be on hand with hot coffee and sandwiches for the volunteer laborers.

Engineers from the Delaware School Auxiliary have been busy this week surveying the site of the building and marking out the foundation plans, in preparation for the army of diggers which will bear down upon the spot Tuesday.

Classes will be suspended all day Tuesday, and while there is no compulsory rule in effect which would require 100 per cent attendance, it is believed that every student will be on hand ready for work. The problem of supplying shovels, picks and wheelbarrows appear to be the main problem just now.

Many members of the faculty will be the cynosure of all eyes as they delve earnestly into the earth during the day. Everyone connected with the University is quite in favor of the scheme for volunteer work, and Tuesday is shaping up as a most important day in the history of the old College.

Permission was granted by the Levy Court yesterday morning to the Delaware School Auxiliary to open the bed of Academy Street, lying outside of the town lines of Newark, in order to make water connections required for the new library.

NO AMERICANIZATION SCHOOL THIS YEAR

Lack of Students Makes Institution Impossible; Two In Wilmington School

There will be no Americanization school in Newark this winter, according to an announcement made today by Mrs. A. D. Cobb, former director of the school here. Mrs. Cobb stated that there were but three or four men and women in the community who would enroll, and that the prospects looked so dismal that it was decided not to start the classes. Foreign residents have become scarce in town, owing to the closing of the B. and O. workmen's camp here and the curtailment in the force working as section hands on the Pennsylvania tracks. Two men, however, who were enrolled with Mrs. Cobb last year are continuing with their work in the Wilmington School, while a woman is taking private lessons.

TOWN COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

Routine Business Transacted At Quiet Session—Tapping of Sewers Being Watched

WILL NOT RENT ROOM

Upper Floor of Town Hall Not To Be Used For Regular Meetings, Is Decision

With the Mayor and Councilmen Widdoes, Grier, Wilson and Beales present, Town Council held its regular December meeting in the Town Hall Monday evening of this week.

Routine business was transacted covering several matters of general importance, but nothing in the way of a major problem confronted the body at this meeting.

Dr. Walt H. Steel, president of the local Board of Education, appeared before the Councilmen and again urged them to reconsider their recent decision withholding the use of the upper floor of the building by the school authorities in order that the crowded conditions of the Grammar School might be remedied. Council put forth a suggestion that the School Board make an effort to procure a room in the old Curtis house opposite the Academy.

In upholding their former decision, Council again called attention to the many objections which, they said, would render the building unfit for school use. Dr. Steel stated that he would follow up the suggestion concerning the Curtis house, now owned by S. J. Wright, but in case that failed, would again come before Council.

In connection with the problem of disposition of the upper floor of Town Hall, requests were received by Council for permission to use the rooms for regular meetings by the Boy Scouts and the Girl Reserves.

A motion to the effect that the room shall not be rented for any regular meeting night to any organization, but that it shall be open for use for any group or organization which meets at other than regular periods, was made and passed by Council. A fee of $2.00 will be charged for the use of the room.

Plumbers In Wrong

On complaint of several Councilmen and Mrs. Hossinger, secretary, who handles the bills for sewer frontage and permits, local plumbers were ordered to be warned in a letter from Council, calling attention to the fact that they must receive a permit from the latter body before tapping a sewer or water line for a new house or building. It was asserted by those present that several violations of this rule had been made by the plumbers.

The milk report for November was read and approved. Every dealer's product showed high percentages of butter fat and low bacteria count. It was the best report submitted for many months.

After other minor matters of routine business had been completed, Council adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

The spectacle of a plum tree blooming in December is a most unusual sight. The tree has been the object of interested inspection by many members of the neighborhood.

J. D. REYNOLDS OF MIDDLE-TOWN APPOINTED FARM BUREAU MEMBERSHIP DRIVE MANAGER

Frank F. Yearsley, of Marshallton,
President of the New Castle County
Farm Bureau, appointed Mr. J. D.
Reynolds of Middletown County Manager of the Farm Bureau Membership Drive. This appointment was at the monthly meeting of the Executive Committee of the County Farm Bureau held last Saturday afternoon in Wilmington. The date of the drive was set for the week of January 14th to 19th. Mr. Reynolds has already arranged a series of meetings the week of the membership campaign.
At least one meeting will be held in each community. He is negotiating with a prominent farm bureau man of Maryland to speak at these meetings. Mr. Reynolds himself will discuss activities of our local Farm Bureau. County Agent R. O. Bausman will speak on the activities of the County Extension Service. In addition to the speakers, two motion picture reels have been secured to be used at these meetings. The reel
"Forward Farm Bureau" is provided by the American Federation of Farm Bureaus, and has attracted nationwide interest. The second reel, "Agriculture in one Lesson," is a comedy which provides ample entertainment.

The present County Farm Bureau membership exceeds 700 and Mr. Reynolds confidently expects this membership to be increased at least 50 per cent in the coming campaign.

The annual meeting of the New Castle County Farm Bureau will be held in Old College, Newark, Thursday, December 20th. Lunch will be served in the College Commons. Mr.
Howard W. Selby, Director of the Eastern States Farmers' Exchange, and Mr. M. M. Stewart, Secretary-Treasurer of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, have been asked to speak. In addition to this program the Farm Bureau officers will make their annual reports, summarizing activities of the organization during the fiscal year.

LIFE ACCIDENT HEALTH

THERE IS AN OLD ADAGE that says, "It is too late to lock the barn after the horse is stolen." Likewise, it is too late to get your automobile insured after the car is stolen or been ruined in an accident.

Why not let me show you what is possible in the way of complete protection at a surprisingly low cost to you.
It is much better to be safe than sorry, and much cheaper for you in the long run, because automobile accidents will happen, and sometimes with disastrous results to the financial welfare of the owner, when he is not covered with reliable insurance.

BUSINESS AS USUAL

Despite the fact that his store was majestically rolling up the center of Main Street, drawn by a motor truck and perched upon beams and rollers, Charles P. Steele was ready all day Monday to accommodate any customers who may have wanted some of his choice meats. The contents of the store remained inside during the joy ride.

George Moore and his assistants moved the entire building for more than a block without mishap, dodging poles, trees, and wires with remarkable dexterity. Its majestic progress up the street was an object of great interest to many townspeople.

CORNELL AND YALE

By Mr. J. Spivus
(Written Especially for THE POST)

Some fellow who is scared to sign his name to what he writes for the press has a article in a Phillydelhy paper in which he states, viz:

That the football team from Yale College is better than the football team from Cornell College for seven separate and distinct reasons. The writer gives each reason, all right, but that ain't enough for yours truly. I could give 17 reasons why women should stay home and tend to their men folks and children instead of rampaging all over the county attendin special meetins of "The This and That Society." But what good would that do. They would only put on another notch of speed.

And so it is with that fellow up in Philly. Pussonally, I think them Yale boys is goin too strong on the whistle, and bimeby they won't have enough steam left to run the durned machine. Likewise and opposite, Cornell didn't say much but they did a whale of a lot of scoring. See records.

And so in ending up my argument, I would say that since the Yale boys and the Cornell boys didn't play this year, better hang the bacon high enough so that neither of them can reach it.

But we sporting writers must have something to do in off seasons. So this fellow up in Philly got into an argument with himself. Leastways, he didn't do no one any harm.

And as long as he's from Philly there's no danger of him hurtin anyone anyhow. So we'll let it go at that. (The end.)

WE PICKED THE WINNER

We had confidence in Newark. Of course, that didn't have a thing to do with the result of the Turkel Day game here, but in a small way it upheld the contention of this column that Newark could beat the Maryland bullwackers if they ever could be induced to battle.

There is no reason why this game cannot become an annual affair. Each year potential stars are developing in each town and can take the places of old warhorses who have had their fill of football. Two towns like Elkton and Newark can stir up an astounding amount of rivalry over a football game, and we, for one, want to see it repeated each year.

Thanksgiving Day's game surprised everyone but staunch Newark rooters and the team. Elkton, with a heavy, veteran team could not stir up the power. Newark, with a more or less checkered season behind them, played a better brand of football than most people thought they knew. They just wouldn't be beaten. And when a team gets this urge in their systems, you have to beat them into the ground to drive it out.

Manager Jester, Coach Holton and the entire team have the thinks of the town for their well-earned sportsmanlike victory.

NEWARK DOWNS ANCIENT RIVALS, ELKTON, IN THANKSGIVING DAY BATTLE, 19-7

"Jim" Keeley, Hopkins, Steel and Seeley Star in Notable Victory for Coach Holton's Team—Big Crowd Witnesses Fray

PRESTON, PURNELL, AND SCHAFER ALSO STAR

In one of the best semi-professional games ever witnessed on local grid-irons, Elkton went down to defeat before a rejuvenated Newark team on Thanksgiving day by the score of 19-7. Both teams had pointed to this as the most important game of their respective schedules. In view of the intense rivalry between the two teams a crowd estimated at about 700 people was on hand and they were not in the least disappointed.

Newark presented its regular lineup, and played as if inspired. The offense showed wonderful improvement. Time after time, the local backs ripped through the heavy Elkton line for big gains. The team played steady, brainy football and deserved to win. As a result of the victory, Newark grabbed off the entire gate receipts as stated in the contract between the teams.

Elkton Fights Hard

Be it said for the invaders that they fought a good fight all the way through the four periods. In the third session they outplayed Newark clearly and carried the ball over for their touchdown on the crest of an offensive wave which swept them from their twenty yard line, 80 yards down the field. The lone score came as the result of a clever forward pass from Preston to Schaffer. The latter leaped high and speared the ball behind the goal with several Newark players surrounding him. The Elkton field general fooled Newark on this play, the locals fully expecting another drive into the line from the five yard line.

On this offensive Preston carried the ball most of the time. The big halfback seemed untirable. While hampered somewhat by slow interference, when once he struck his pace at the line of scrimmage, he was a hard man to stop.

Newark Scores First

Elkton kicked off to Newark to start the game. Keeley returning the ball ten yards. Then started a march to the goal. With Steel, Keeley and Hopkins doing most of the rushing, the ball was carried to Elkton's ten yard line. Then Hopkins was given the ball and plunged off tackle for the first score. Steel failed at goal point.

The early score aroused wild enthusiasm among Newark rooters. "Biff" Hopkins again came into the limelight in the second period. Elkton had the ball in Newark territory. Three plays at the line were turned back by Seeley and the Cornog brothers and Preston heaved a pass on the fourth down. Hopkins was alert and snared it out of the arms of Schaffer, and raced down the field. Elkton failed to "backup" the pass and as a result not a tackler laid hands on the Newark back on his journey. This time Steel got away a good drop-kick for the goal point.

Instead of giving up the well-known ghost, Elkton redoubled her efforts to score.

In the fourth quarter, Steel, who had been carefully watched throughout the early part of the game by Elkton, got loose three times for good gains. Once the irrepressible "Doc" caught a punt in a nest of tacklers. Evading two of them he cut down along the side line and made thirty yards before being thrown out of bounds. The last period saw most of the game's punting. Incidentally, the kicking was very poor on both sides. Linemen were in on the booter every time, and hurried him continually. Of the two punters, Steel had the slight edge on Preston.

The final score came as the result of a peculiar play. Steel on receiving an Elkton punt in midfield, immediately returned it, giving Elkton the ball on their own 15 yard line. Failing to gain, the visitors punted and Steel ran it back ten yards. From the thirty yard line Newark took up the march for another score, and in a few minutes Hopkins ripped through center for a touchdown.

Both towns were well represented by rooters and they made the air hum with a continual burst of noise. The play was clean and hard at all times. Few penalties were inflicted by the officials and the players of both teams showed splendid sportsmanship. Several minor injuries were suffered by players, but no one was seriously hurt. The score:

DELAWARE FIVE STARTS SEASON

Practice In Gym Started Monday of This Week—Bright Outlook For Team

Coach McAvoy had his Blue and Gold basketball candidates out for the first regular practice Monday afternoon. The practice on the opening day, as will be the rule for the week, was light and served to give the Coach and Captain France a line on the new material from the Freshman class.

Delaware faces a hard schedule again this year, and the short interim between the football and basketball seasons was cut even shorter this year to enable the men to be whipped into shape for their first game with Philadelphia Dental College before the Christmas holidays begin.

The prospects for the team look fairly bright at this writing. With four of last year's regulars on deck and fit for another season and with several reputed stars in the Freshman class ready to give all comers a fight for positions on the squad, it looks like a big year for Delaware on the indoor court. Coach McAvoy seemed particularly pleased with the outlook and Captain France, one of last season's outstanding performers, was also confident that a creditable team would be placed on the floor.

"Jack" Williams, one of the highest scorers last year, will be back for his last year at center. Williams is a consistent scorer and was captain of last year's team.

"Sook" Jackson, who played a forward position, will also be back. Jackson received a broken arm during the football season but it is thought that this will not handicap him in his floorwork.

"Bill" McKelvie who also played forward, will be back in cage togs. McKelvie has a bad hip bruise received in the George Washington University football game, but this will be quite cured by the time basketball gets going.

The most promising candidate among the Freshmen this year is Paul Garvine, Grace Church and Perkiomen School star. Garvine is one of the best forwards in the city of Wilmington, and he should have little trouble in making the Delaware team. Garvine is an excellent shot from the field and is a fast floorworker.

Louis Kramer and Earle Weggenmann, two men who did not even try last year, expect to make a hard run for the first five. Kramer and Weggenmann are both going out for guard positions. Weggenmann formerly starred with New Castle High and last year played with Brandywine, champions of Wilmington Church League. Other candidates are Prettyman, Johnson, Mannix, Jacobson, Simon and Nutter.

PETER MOZART SOLD

Peter Mozart, the splendid black stallion, formerly owned by J. Wirt Willis, of Glasgow, and which was quartered at his stables for a year or more, was sold in New York last week and will be sent to Europe and placed at stud by its new owners. The price paid was said to be $1600.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

Sets Aside Week of December 9th to 16th As Harding Week

Warren Gamaliel Harding, twenty-ninth President of the United States, died in the service of his country. He exhausted himself in effort to solve the post-war problems that beset all civilization, and wore himself out in performing the onerous and ever multiplying duties that have fallen to the lot of our Presidents.

An association of citizens of the United States, including the President and his entire Cabinet, has been incorporated for the purpose of erecting a suitable memorial to our late President.

The three-fold purpose of this association is to erect and maintain in perpetuity a mausoleum wherein to place the remains of the late President, to acquire his home in Marion, Ohio, for conversion into a shrine wherein all his personal effects, books, speeches, mementos and belongings, together with a roll of the names of all those who contribute to the fund for these purposes, may be preserved in affectionate memory and understanding; and to endow a Warren Gamaliel Harding Chair of Diplomacy and the Function of a Government in connection with some existing university.

I am confident that it is the desire of all good citizens of this State to assist in perpetuating the memory of the man who has held the high office of the President of the United States and commanded so universally the affection and respect of those for whom he labored and laid down his life.

Now, therefore, I do hereby proclaim for this purpose the week of December 9 to December 16 Harding Memorial Week and further urge all religious, business, social, fraternal and civic bodies to commemorate our late President in a fitting manner at one of their regular or special services or meetings, and to contribute to this memorial according to their means and inclination.

WILLIAM D. DENNEY,
Governor of Delaware.

LOCAL MEN AND LEVY COURT ARGUE

Conflicting claims as to the legality of a curb placed on Nottingham pike, leading from Newark toward Appleton, were discussed by Levy Court, sitting as committee of the whole, for nearly an hour yesterday. Among the property owners who appeared were Frank Fader, Rev. MacMurray and Frank Collins.

It was alleged that the curb and gutter put in by Mr. Fader are on county property and that a permit was not obtained. The curb is said to obstruct the flow of water in the gutter, and to cause conditions forming a menace to health. The matter was referred to the County Engineer, who was directed to continue the work of placing a pipe in front of the property to carry off the water.

SAYS DELAWARE NEEDS BIOGRAPHERS TO TELL OF ITS WONDERFUL HISTORY

Lawrence Abbott, Son of Late Lyman Abbott, Contributes
"Little Delaware" to The Outlook

That little old Delaware, nestled as it is, out of the main arteries of trade and away from the rush and confusion of the high speed march of events, should have some man or group of men to tell the real story of its life as a State and to set down for generations in the future the great deeds of its famous citizens who lived in the past, is the subject in brief, of an article appearing in the Outlook for November 28th. Lawrence Abbott is the writer. Mr. Abbott lectured last Summer in Wolf Hall under the auspices of the Service Citizens of Delaware. He is a son of the late Lyman Abbott, founder of the Outlook.

In part the article says:

"Delaware is a small State—the second smallest in the Union. Indeed, the only possible boast it may make of physical grandeur is that it is nearly twice as large as Rhode Island. At that its greatest length is less than a hundred miles and its greatest width thirty-five. At one point it narrows to a breadth of nine miles, where a good walker may cross it on foot in three hours' time. Its political and personal history, however, is only another proof that the spirit of man cannot be estimated by linear measure or confined by geographical limits.

"One of the most famous books of science, Gilbert White's 'Natural History of Selbourne,' describes the flora and fauna of a little English parish; and a delightful classic in the literature of travel, Xavier de Maistre's 'Voyage autour de ma chambre,' was written within the confines of a bedroom. By the operation of this same mysterious intellectual force there have been produced in the little tract of country called Delaware, with a population today of only about 200,000 some of the finest statesmen that have been bred in this country. I have passed through the State scores of times on a railway train, but for the first time I have just paid it a real visit, during which I had the pleasure and honor of meeting one of its statesmen of whom I wish to speak a little later in this article. It was this visit that turned my attention to the remarkable part which Delaware has played in the political drama of the United States and impressed me with the truth, which is of course revealed everywhere in history, that diminutive physique is no measure of spiritual power.

Many Statesmen; Few Biographers

"Perhaps one reason why the romance of the history of Delaware is not better known is that she has produced no great literary genius to portray it. She had in Revolutionary days a Paul Revere of her own, but no Longfellow to sing his praises. She has a family of statesmen, the Bayards, of which the great-grandfather, the grandfather, and the father of the present Senator Bayard have all sat in the United States Senate, but none of them has immortalized the family in literature, as Charles Francis Adams and his brother Henry have immortalized the four generations of the Adams family in Massachusetts. Senator James Asheton Bayard, the great grandfather of the present Senator Bayard, was elected to Congress in 1796. He was a Federalist, but that did not prevent him from influentially espousing the cause of Jefferson for the Presidency in the deadlock between the great Democrat and his gifted but unscrupulous rival Aaron Burr. It is conceivable that the whole course of American history might have been changed—certainly not for the better—if Burr had been placed in the White House. We may therefore owe much that we owe not of to that Delaware statesman. His grandson, Thomas F. Bayard, is of course better and more widely known. He was Secretary of State and Ambassador to England under President Cleveland and contributed dignity to both high offices.

"The du Pont family is another remarkable development of Delaware life. Its founder Pierre Samuel du Pont de Nemours, was a French statesman, economist and educator. He was a liberal, but not a radical, in the French Revolution, and carried on a most interesting correspondence with Thomas Jefferson, in which he outlined a plan of National education for the United States. He finally came to this country, settled in Delaware, and with his sons established a powder works, which has grown into one of the great industrial organizations of America. His lineal descendant in the fifth or sixth generation is one of its chief executive heads. It is an interesting fact that the present Pierre du Pont is as deeply interested in education as the founder of the family, the friend of Jefferson, was more than a hundred years ago. The 'Service Citizens of Delaware,' an incorporated organization of which Mr. Pierre du Pont is the President and, I believe, the founder is backing and aiding the public school system of Delaware in an original fashion, which it would take an entire newspaper article to describe.

Three Signers of Declaration

"But before the Bayards and the du Ponts little Delaware put her stamp upon the structure of the United States. She furnished three signers of the Declaration of Independence—Thomas M'Kean, George Read, and Caesar Rodney. It is a matter of history that Read was at first opposed to the Declaration; it is a matter of tradition that Rodney rode post-haste on horseback the hundred miles from the southern extremity of the State to Philadelphia in order to affix his signature to the deathless document and thus record his State as an advocate of liberty. Speed was necessary—and in those days the bridled and saddled horse was the speediest machine of transportation—for in this great act the representatives in this Continental Congress voted under the unit rule. It is certainly not beside the mark to say that this ride of Rodney's is, in a way, comparable to Paul Revere's.

ELKTON BANK IS HUNTING DEFAMERS

Elkton Banking and Trust Co. Brands As False Charges Made Against It

A wave of intense excitement which swept over Elkton and Cecil County last week, when reports were spread to the effect that the Elkton Banking and Trust Company, with branches in Cecilton, Rising Sun and Chesapeake City was "shaky," has in a great measure quieted down at this writing.

Bank officials branded as false all the inferences made and assert that but a scattering few accounts were withdrawn from the bank, and that practically all of them had been reopened.

A reward is being offered for the arrest and conviction of the alleged defamers, but it is not believed likely that they will be apprehended. Persons who speak with authority state that the matter will probably blow over without further developments.

Assertions that the last statement of the bank made public was not as strong as in past months were also branded as false by the officials.

ALLEGED THEFT OF BOAT SETTLED IN COURT

Newark Boys Arraigned Before Magistrate Thompson Monday Evening

Five young Newark boys, who, it is alleged, removed a row boat belonging to Robert Reed from near the Old Mill at Cooch's Bridge, and, with the aid of a confiscated horse and wagon, hauled it to Newark and later to the banks of White Clay Creek near town, were arraigned before Magistrate Daniel Thompson last Monday night on warrants sworn out by Mr. Reed.

The boys involved in the case were Oram Smith, William Taylor, James Taylor, Raymond Widdoes and Thos. Morrison. Fathers of the boys were also present, and before the case could be called to trial agreed to settle with Mr. Reed for any damage done, and to have the boat returned. The boys after taking the boat, faithfully painted it, and launched it into the turbid waters of the White Clay. The theft was discovered by Mr. Reed three weeks ago, and he had been hunting high and low for his schooner.

A Letter to The Post

By E. L. Vallandigham

Granada, Nov. 9.
From Madrid to Granada is a twelve hour ride by first class "rapide," which means, when the time for stops is taken out, perhaps an average of nearly twenty-five miles an hour, and in places a maximum of above forty miles an hour. Both trains (we had to change cars after the first seven hours, though that we learned not officially, but by accident) were comfortable, and one was not only pretty clean, but tidy. The toilet accommodations do not admit of frank description. They seldom do anywhere in Spain. Nevertheless the midday meal, a full dinner, was excellent from start to finish, served with skill, courtesy, and celerity, and cheap as such things go—not so cheap as the excellent midday meal served aboard the Baltimore and Ohio express trains, but at least twice as filling. The Spaniards will put up with almost anything but bad and insufficient food, but at no restaurant or hotel in Spain have I had meals to equal those of the dining cars.

If Spanish railways did everything as well as they do the purveying of food to customers they would be models, but that seems to be the only place where their economies do not hinder efficient service. We reached the station at Madrid shortly after nine in the morning to take a train at ten. One member of the party stood in line for tickets, while the other two looked after baggage and other matters. Half an hour saw us in possession of tickets. We then followed the porter, who had been waiting all this time, to have three out of eleven bags, the largest three, "registered," which means checked. One of these bags we have named "The Assassin" because it tumbled from a rack upon the head of its owner, who grieves to own that he escaped alive merely through a providential thickness of skull. Since that incident "The Assassin" and his two large fellows are checked when checking is possible. That business took another fifteen minutes. The capable porter then ushered the passengers and eight bags of moderate size and without criminal instincts, through the gate and into a first class compartment. As he had done for us with efficient cheerfulness for the better part of an hour, we gave him a tip that made him our friend for life. But for the intelligence of porters the Spanish railroads would suspend business in three months.

Ten at night saw us in Granada, and a ride of nearly an hour, mostly up hill, and partly through the dense shade of huge trees that clothe the precincts of the Alhambra; and next morning revealed our superb site. Imagine a small plateau commanding two-thirds of the visible horizon, with Granada's serried tile roofs paying a considerable area far, far down, the huge forested area about the Alhambra a third of the way below, a vast, and rich plain 800 feet down in front, and behind all, encircling mountains, those on the left rising to more than 11,000 feet, and glorious beneath the sun with dazzling snow fields.

Granada is a busy modern city in an ancient setting, with some primitive inherited traditions, and customs. All about us here on the hill are cave-dwellers, hundreds of them within the visible area, perhaps thousands within a few miles. They are an amiable folk, who pay as high as two dollars and a half a month in rent, though many pay less than fifteen cents a week. Goats, sometimes pigs and chickens, share a cave with a family of five, six, seven or more. The cave dwellers look up to those glorious heights, and down to the great, rich plain, where land fetches $1200 an acre, and they seem content.

The South of Spain, as it gradually opened out to us on our railway journey developed a richer soil, better villages, and an even more thorough and careful cultivation than the North works miracles with his wretched appliances and rainless skies. Instead of slow oxen the Andalusian farmer plows with large mules or well grown horses. His dwelling is better than that of his Northern brother, and although Andalusia too is dry, it shows more shade trees than the once almost treeless North below the Basque Provinces. Houses are usually white, and villages are large, with smoke stacks that speak of manufactures. All about Granada there are lovely ornamental gardens, with iron gates that give the passerby blissful glimpses of broad, smooth paths leading up to doorways half smothered in vines and semi-tropic trees and plants—the palm, the fig, the tall and stout bamboo. Half a dozen such places that I have looked into suggest the paradises, little or big, that the Moors of 600 or 700 years ago created for themselves, paradises with tinkling fountains, fruits to be plucked by hand far into the autumn (fresh peas are just coming into market), flowers that bloom long after frost has stricken our home gardens dead.

The other side of this picture is seen in the relations of employer and employee. The mistress of our pension has been reproved for spoiling the labor market, because she pays her little maids what amounts to a trifling under $2.75 a month each, when the current local rate with the Spanish housewives is less than $2.25 in our money at the present rate of exchange. The upper classes of Spain are singularly kind and courteous, as, indeed, are all classes, but they have an ingrained dislike of doing aught for themselves. Their servants, paid even in Madrid at a beggarly rate, GAL 2 ART. 1 Vallandigham 11.30 K rise early, and can not go to bed before master and mistress are at home, which may be an hour or more after midnight. If a lady wishes anything done for her at that hour—chocolate, a cold luncheon, what your will, she keeps the servants up to do the work. No such woman carries any kind of bag or bundle in public, nor does any Spanish gentleman consent to serve himself in such a matter, and mere girls in the pensions are shocked when an American insists that they shall not handle his heavy luggage. Can he be a Senator, they wonder?

FARM BUREAU PLANS PRIZE ESSAY CONTEST

Elementary and High School Students Eligible to Enter Closes Dec. 22

The Delaware State Farm Bureau Federation plans to conduct a statewide membership drive, beginning November 28th, and each county organization is requested to share the responsibilities in making this a successful campaign.

In order to encourage interest in the Farm Bureau movement in New Castle County, the Executive Committee of the County organization has decided to conduct an essay contest among the elementary and high school departments throughout the county. The subject will be: "Why My Dad Should Join the Farm Bureau."

Prizes of $10.00, $5.00 and $2.50 will be given for the first, second and third best essays in each department. For the contestants in the elementary schools each essay should not exceed 400 words, and for the high school pupils each essay should be from 900 to 1,000 words.

All essays must be in the office of the New Castle County Farm Bureau, Newark, Del., on or before December 22, 1923. Essays received after this date will not be considered. These essays will be judged by a committee of three represented by the State Department of Education, the New Castle County Farm Bureau, and the Agricultural Extension Department of the University of Delaware.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Rose, of this place, left Sunday for West Palm Beach, Florida, where they will spend the winter months. Enroute, they will stop off at Daytona for several days before continuing to their destination.

TEACHING OF CONSTITUTION

By Josiah Marvel

By a recent act of our State Legislature it is required that the Federal Constitution shall be taught in all Delaware Schools. The purpose of this act has many times been questioned. Occasionally it has been criticised upon the ground that it was who had not intention of becoming lawyers.

Such critics have lost sight of the fact that the fundamentals of right living has been taught to our children without intending that they should become preachers; that the fundamentals of scholastic education have been taught without intending that they should become teachers, and that the fundamentals of health have been taught without intending that they should become doctors. For the same reason our Legislature has thought it wise that our children should be taught the fundamentals of our government without planning to make judges or lawyers. A man may be morally clean, mentally alert and physically strong, but fall far short indeed if he fails to know the source and privileges of his American citizenship.

To have him know the spirit as well as the letter of our Constitution, we must go back at least as far as July 4, 1776, when our forefathers out of their wisdom declared:

"That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

For four thousand years the rights and liberties of the individual had been generally thought to rest in the hands of a king, czar, emperor or other potentate to whom the people were expected to petition for the purpose of having granted to them rights, liberties or privileges. Our forefathers reversed this situation.

This revolutionary thought in government was sustained by a bloody struggle. It was afterward maintained by a written constitution which created a government with the exact powers desired to be given by the people governed and with strict prohibition against the use of any other powers by said government and especially reserving all powers not granted to the people or to the states. While it is useful to know the extent of the powers granted to the government, it is especially important that attention should be called to the exercise of powers that are prohibited.

TEACHING OF CONSTITUTION

By Josiah Marvel

The Constitution provides that Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press. It protects every citizen in the privacy of their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures. It provides that he shall not be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb, or be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, or deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor that his private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

These provisions guarantee to every individual the right of laboring to secure property for his use and protecting him in its use against even the government itself.

They provide for the sacredness of a man's home that enables us all to call our home our castle no matter whether it be a hovel, a cottage or a palace. They provide that every man may speak and write freely having due regard to the rights of others, and that he may worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. These privileges ensure to every American citizen; rich or poor, black or white, Gentile or Jew, Protestant or Catholic. These are the privileges that enable an American citizen to say that he lives under a government which guarantees him liberty regulated by law and not by the whims, feelings or prejudices of men. These are the things that every American citizen should know and appreciate in order that he may boldly stand forth and say that these things in the light of the experience of the American nation produce the best results for the welfare of human kind and that he resents the proposal from any source that these liberties, rights and privileges shall be in any way changed or modified except strictly in accordance with the method provided in our Constitution for making such changes.—Morning News.

ISSUE NEW DOLLAR BILLS AT WASHINGTON

Danger of Counterfeiting Rendered Doubly Hard In New System of Printing

Hereafter all bills of the same denomination will look exactly alike, but will be almost entirely different in appearance from bills of other denominations. Thousands of new $1 bills will be placed at the disposal of banks in a few days.

The object of the change is to make counterfeiting doubly difficult. Under the new system it will be almost impossible to raise a $1 bill to a $10 bill or a $2 bill to a $20 because of difference in appearance.

The new $1 bill bears the picture of George Washington where the picture of the eagle now is. The eagle has been taken off. The new bills start with the number A-1-A. The first bill A-1-A will be presented to President Coolidge.

HARDING WEEK TO BE OBSERVED IN STATE

Governor Denney Issues Proclamation Calling Attention to Memorial

Delaware will join with the other States in the Union in observing Harding Memorial Week from December 9th to 16th next, according to a proclamation signed by Governor Denney in Dover last Saturday. The Memorial Week is nation-wide and has been instituted by the Harding Memorial Fund Committee. Services and meetings of respect to the memory of the late President will be held all over the nation, and all citizens will have a part.

The Governor urges all religious, business, social, fraternal and civic bodies to commemorate the late President at one or other of their meetings during the week, and suggests that citizens and associations contribute to the memorial fund. In his proclamation he outlines some of the acts passed by President Harding while the nation's chief executive, and states the purpose of the Harding Memorial Fund.

TOWN TEAM PLAYS SOLDIERS SATURDAY

Local Team Clears About $100 From Elkton Game Thanksgiving Day

Newark's powerful town team takes on another hard assignment next Saturday, when they entertain the 49th Aero Squadron from Aberdeen Proving Grounds on High School Field. The game starts at 2:30 and promises to provide plenty of good football for local fans. The soldier team has been giving all opponents this year plenty of opposition. The eleven men are well trained and have had ample opportunities for practice. The regular Newark lineup will be on the field, according to the manager, H. D. Jester.

The financial standing of the local team was placed on a more solid footing as the result of the Thanksgiving Day game with the Elkton stalwarts. About $100 was cleared from the proceeds after all expenses had been paid, and for the first time in several years, the town team is enjoying relative prosperity.

REPAIRING HARD SURFACE PAVEMENTS A NATION WIDE PROBLEM

Highway engineers in various parts of the country are finding it advisable in a greater degree to repair concrete roads with asphaltic materials. This is true particularly in Maryland, New York, California, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Michigan, Ohio, Kansas, Iowa, Colorado, Texas and Canada.

Concrete roads are prone to develop longitudinal and transverse cracks. Everywhere these cracks are being filled with asphalt. Maryland has been resurfacing some of its concrete roads laid in 1913 and 1914, by means of asphalt. Among these is a two mile stretch of the Baltimore-Washington Boulevard near the Baltimore city limits that was built in 1913, of Portland cement concrete and resurfaced with asphalt in 1919. The road from Baltimore to Camp Meade, built in 1914, of compressed concrete, was resurfaced with asphalt also in 1919. In Baltimore city it has been found necessary to give some concrete a flush coat of bituminous material covered with gravel.

In New York a number of concrete roads have been resurfaced with asphalt. All told, up to 1921, eighty miles of concrete roads laid in this state from 1912 to 1914 had been so resurfaced. Among these were the Cicero-Brewerton road in Onondago county, four miles long, and the Moravin Lake Road in southern Cayuga county. Eight miles of concrete road in Suffolk county have been resurfaced with asphalt. Port Chester, N. Y., applies asphalt and grits to old concrete pavements. In Waverly, N. Y., it is the practice to cover concrete with bituminous macadam and gravel. California has resurfaced a large mileage of its concrete roads with asphalt. From the beginning it has been the plan of the State Highway Commission ultimately to cover all its concrete roads with bituminous materials. In New Jersey, at Camden, it is the practice of the engineers to lay a complete asphalt top with binder on concrete pavements. Roselle

California Now Leads in Asphalt Roads

A statement compiled from the public records of the five Pacific coast states—California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona—shows that California laid more than twice as much pavement during 1922 as all four of the other states combined. Contracts were awarded for a total of 161,754,852 square feet—109,192,174 square feet of which were within the state of California.

The asphaltic types of pavement were well in the lead, representing 66.7 per cent of the total for the five states. Seventy-eight per cent of California's new pavements were of the asphalt types. This is by far the biggest year on record in that territory for pavements using asphalt in their construction.

Asphaltic concrete pavements have been laid on the Pacific coast since 1894, and the steady increase in their construction each year over the previous year is due to the unparalleled record for durability and low maintenance demonstrated by this type.

One notable feature in reviewing the last year's record is that the cities and counties which have laid asphaltic concrete in the past and which have had an opportunity closely to observe its durability, are specifying asphaltic concrete for new pavements. This seems to indicate that the tremendous increase during 1922 has not been due to a temporary rush to a new and experimental type, but rather to records demonstrated by a tried and proved pavement.

MAY USE OIL FOR HOUSE HEATING WITHIN A FEW YEARS, IS PREDICTION

Fuel Oil Instead of Coal and Wood Discussed at Important Meeting in Philadelphia This Week

Oil burning for house heating is here to stay, and it is going to grow and become a permanent part of the oil trade, according to speakers who took part in a discussion on the subject at a meeting of the Oil Trades Association in Philadelphia, Monday.

Leaders in the industry said the only drawback at the present time is a proper type of equipment. In this connection Henry Loebell, president of the Combustion Utilities Company of New York, said that of 1500 different makes only a few were good and some others had possibilities.

The speakers dwelt on the necessity of having proper equipment; preferably a non-gravity burner, and it was urged upon the oil industry to begin a plan of education as to what is a good burner.

Henry L. Doherty, president of the Cities Service Company of New York, made an appeal for a burner designed to use the heaviest possible oil as a means of providing the cheapest fuel for the householder and removing the fire hazard.

The expense of delivery will count in the future development of the trade according to R. D. Leonard, vice-president of the Atlantic Refining Company, who suggested household storage tanks of 1000 gallons capacity. He said that in Philadelphia there are 100 buildings, and from 500 to 600 homes heated by oil.

Mr. Loebell pointed out that the same amount of heat can be procured from 110 gallons of fuel oil, at 10 cents a gallon, as would be produced by a ton of anthracite coal costing $15. Stewart Jellett, chairman of the fire prevention committee of the Chamber of Commerce declared "that in the use of fuel oil you burn more dollars, but get more comfort, etc." He estimated 165 gallons as the amount of oil necessary to produce the same heat as a ton of coal.

Fire Marshal George Elliott said he believed in oil as a household fuel where the standard fixed for apparatus is right. He urged the elimination of all dangerous equipment.

ment. "Nor ordinances have yet been passed regarding equipment," Mr. Elliott said, "but there will be as soon as the right standard is fixed."

It was the general opinion of the gathering that some one, whether the oil companies or the equipment manufacturers, must accept the standardization of equipment responsibility, and that there must be established some agency to control equipment.

CORN GROWERS TO EXHIBIT

17th Annual Corn and Grain
Show January 2-4—$500
in Prizes Offered

The Delaware Corn Growers' Association will hold their Seventeenth Annual State Corn Show and Grain Exhibit in the Auditorium at Wilmington on January 2nd, 3rd and 4th, co-operating with the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, who are in charge of local arrangements. The premium list which will soon be distributed shows that the $500 in prizes appropriated by the State make up 150 premiums covering corn, wheat, soy beans and other field seeds, as well as grain and forage in the bundle. In addition to the cash prizes mentioned above the Dover Rotary Club is offering a fine silver cup for the best ten ear exhibit of corn grown in Delaware the past season. After the show the Rotary Club plans a special meeting at Dover to award the cup and entertain the successful winner. Another cup to be competed for by the members in the Boys' Corn Clubs of the State is the Association Challenge cup awarded to the best boy corn judge annually and now in the hands of W. Burnham Simpson, of Houston. The Houston boys have issued a challenge to the other boys of the State through their motto, which is "Keep the Cup at Houston."

One of the most interesting classes at the show, not only among Delaware corn growers, but those outside the State as well, is the Interstate Class open to our neighboring states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia. All first and second prizes in the ten ear classes from Delaware at the State Show will compete in the Interstate competition. Delaware corn growers through this class hope to test their skill as growers and exhibitors with that of their neighbors. Through this exhibit the rival states may test out the quality of their various strains of corn and through it the states should be able to bring up the level of all their corn by means of seed selection based on higher standards. All of the neighboring states have responded by saying they would be represented with exhibits from some of their best growers. This feature alone should make this year's show far superior to any hitherto held and should attract wide attention among the people of Wilmington, Maryland will be represented and it will be remembered she took the blue ribbon in her district at last year's International Grain and Hay Show, held at Chicago.

The Grange exhibits of three ten-ear samples grown by three members of a Grange arouse close competition each year and will no doubt create much competition at this year's show.

The soy bean growers promise the most extensive exhibit this year that has been seen at any previous show. The Association has had much to do in stimulating the soy bean industry in Delaware which is growing faster than any other farm crop in the State and which is adding much new wealth to the farmers of lower Delaware. Sussex County is the largest producer of Wilson soy beans of any county in the country and some of these will be shown at the State Show.

The prizes for corn are offered in classes of single ear, 10 ear and 50 ear exhibits of white, yellow and white cap corn. The 20 ear class has been discontinued this year. The Association makes two divisions of exhibits, amateur and honorary. The former are the new exhibitors and the latter, who have won a first prize in a previous show, compete among themselves.

The officers in charge of this year's exhibit are: President, Dewey Sapp, Houston; vice-presidents, New Castle County, Paul Mitchell, Hockessin; Kent County, Stanley Short, Cheswold; Sussex County, Harry C. Dodd, Lewes; and secretary, M. O. Pence, Newark.

COOPERATIVE PRODUCTION AND MARKET- ING LAUDED

Co-operative marketing processes are in a large measure dependent upon such organization of the production behind them as will permit of securing the advantage of handling a standard commodity, says a report recently adopted by the Production Committee of the Wheat Council of the United States.

Co-operative associations should be an important factor in securing the application of standard methods and practices to production, the committee states.

"They represent the most feasible medium of reaching the individual farmer for the purpose of securing better and more standard practices and methods."

The committee believes that the development of farmers co-operative elevators and co-operative selling associations in this country has resulted in demonstrable advantage to the farmers. It seems clear, however, that the full advantage which has been secured in certain other commodities in this country and particularly in co-operation abroad has not yet been secured in wheat production and marketing, the report says:

"A survey of co-operative organization in this country and abroad indicates that successful co-operation has been founded upon the ability of these co-operatives to accomplish certain definite objectives. These are, first, the reduction of varieties and the standardization of the product with reference to consumer demand; second, the adoption of a policy on the part of the co-operative which would insure uniformly a standard product; third, ability to secure the adoption of specified methods of soil preparation, fertilization, seed selection, cultivation and harvesting together with adoption of necessary methods for the prevention or control of plant diseases or insect pests; fourth, some form of production control or regulation sufficient to enable the selling association to prevent depressing the market through the offer of a supply in excess of demand.

"The assurance of permanent advantages in co-operation rest upon the same kind of organization and the same development and improvement of quality, standard and merchandizability which have characterized industrial organization. These advantages flow from the ability in industry to bring large amounts of capital under administrative direction and to secure low costs of production through volume operation and improvement of method, standardization of product, and organized selling campaigns. This industrial organization gives advantage to the industrial producer in three major respects: First, through enabling him to oppose an individual buying power against an organization buying power on the part of the farmer; second, through the ability to resist price declines through prompt curtailment of production; third, to extend the outlet for his product by well defined advertising and merchandizing methods.

"If the co-operative movement is to succeed in securing for the farmer that measure of economic reward to which he is entitled, there must be a clear perception on the part of the organizers, managers and members of co-operative associations of the elements essential to their permanent success and the application of these essentials as fast as the sentiment necessary for their adoption can be developed in the farming community.

"The further development of co-operation on the part of wheat farmers could be worked out as a part of a long time program for the improvement of the production and marketing of his product and should not be expected to bring about an immediate adjustment of the discrepancy which exists between the prices which farmers receive for what they sell and the prices which farmers pay for what they buy."

Her Finish

"Your daughter recites very well," the pastor's wife remarked to Mrs. Muddleby at the church social. "Yes," said Mrs. Muddleby. "I'm going to give her a course in elocution." Then she smiled, and added, "I'll sort her out for you, you know."

A HISTORY OF BANKING IN THE UNITED STATES

By V. B. DEYBER
President Second National Bank, Washington, D. C.

After three years of distress, and Congressional and political debate, the second Bank of the United States was created by Federal enactment and began operations January 7, 1817. Its charter was for twenty years; its capital $35,000,000 of which the government was to subscribe $7,000,000. The bank was poorly managed; the directors speculating in its stock, etc., bringing upon them much criticism. In 1823, Nicholas Biddle was elected its President, and the institution prospered from then until 1835; the national debt was paid, and the bank's stock rose to a premium of 20 per cent.

President Jackson's opposition to the bank and its re-charter was very marked, apparently on the ground that it was a monopoly and was so successful that the re-charter was refused. The bank did not wind up its affairs, but applied for and obtained a charter from the Legislature of Pennsylvania, granted February 18, 1836, thirteen days before its government charter expired. The history of the Bank of the United States under its Pennsylvania charter was a most disastrous one. It suspended specie payments during the ticklish period of 1837 to 1841 and made a final assignment in September 1841. It paid all its liabilities in full with interest, but the $28,000,000 invested by the shareholders was a total loss.

Both the first and second Banks of the United States were killed by the prejudice against banks which then existed, and the fall of the latter institution was hastened by bad management. As stated the second Bank of the United States ceased its function as a Federal Government institution in March 1836, and from this date the fiscal affairs of the government were carried on through the state banks, known as "Pet Banks" with very disastrous results to these banks and to the very verge of bankruptcy of the government until July 1840, when the Act was passed authorizing the Independent Treasury. Under, vaults and safes were provided in the Treasury in Washington, and sub-treasuries were established with proper accommodations at New York, Boston, Charleston and St. Louis. The mints and their branches were also made places of deposit. An important provision of the law was the requirement that after June 30, 1843, all payments to or by the United States, should be in gold and silver exclusively. The state banks perceived that when this specie-paying and receiving clause went into effect it would cause an abnormal redemption of their notes, lessen their profits on circulation, and otherwise disturb their pet schemes. As earnestly as the state banks had aided Jackson in pulling down the power of the Bank of the United States, they now with equal energy, fought against the Independent Treasury. The election of Harrison in 1840 to succeed Van Buren, was accomplished by all the dissatisfied elements in the country, and that campaign will long be remembered as a popular upheaval.

The Independent Treasury Act was repealed August 13, 1841, about thirteen months after its passage or five months after Harrison's inauguration.

The sudden death of Harrison in April 1841, and the accession of Tyler to the Presidency, a man of very narrow and mediocre character and subject to all the wiles and influences of the politicians, developed a most serious and confused condition in the fiscal arrangements of the government, which required twenty-two years to thrash out, or until 1863 when the National Banking Law was enacted.

I will now endeavor as succinctly as possible to relate some, at least, of the salient features of the law—its advantages and its limitations.

The primary and distinctive principles underlying the National Banking System are: Government supervision of the operations of the banks, and a circulation based directly upon the securities and the guarantee of the government. These principles were adopted as the result of long and varied experience in banking in the United States and the several states; it was the meeting of many minds, and its authorship did not spring complete from the brain of any one individual.

January 1863, there were about 1,466 banks in operation in the United States, with a capital of $405,045,829, and a circulation of $228,677,218. Hugh MacCulloch was the first Comptroller of the Currency, resigning the Presidency of the State Bank of Indiana to accept the appointment. His report to Congress was made November 1863, at which time 134 banks had been organized under the new system, the first one to begin business being the First National Bank of Philadelphia. The system grew rapidly, 1,601 banks being in operation by the end of the year 1865. However, imperfections in the system began to develop, one of which was the insufficient provisions for the prompt redemption of the National Bank currency and also the ever-present and vexatious question of taxes on circulation, capital, etc. By 1868 fourteen national banks had failed and a number had voluntarily liquidated.

The original law required that reports of conditions be made the first Mondays in January, April, July and October, which was taken advantage of by many banks to put themselves in good condition just previous to these dates, and then be careless in the intervals. This was corrected in 1869 by legislation requiring reports of condition on some past date five times during the year. During this same year many other corrections were made in the law, materially strengthening its provisions for supervision, such as forbidding the certification of checks unless the funds were on deposit to meet them.

For fifty years the United States lived very happily under the National Bank Act, born in the strife of the Civil War and developed in the period of our greatest expansion and growth. It was a great piece of constructive legislation; and its preservation under the Federal Reserve Act almost intact is a recognition of its value. The National Bank Act removed the ills of "wildcat" money, furnished an absolutely safe form of money, made possible enormous expansion in banking facilities, and in spite of the abuses heaped upon it has been reasonably satisfactory in operation. The material growth and prosperity of the nation are conclusive evidence that it is fundamentally sound. Dovetailed with the Federal Reserve System as it is now, the United States is unquestionably provided with the soundest, most elastic and safest banking system in the world today.

Designed for the purpose of encouraging a system of independent banks, the act has been responsible, both directly and indirectly for the creation of some 25,000 banking institutions in this country, all of which are practically independent of each other; it is a system sprung from the people and closer to them than that of any other country. Banking is not a monopoly in this country, one of its strongest features being the fact that the Boards of Directors who pass upon the loans and manage their affairs, are business men upon whose judgment, foresight and conservatism depends the future of our Republic.

Although the national banks comprise only about one-third of all the banks, they have nearly one-half the aggregate resources of all the institutions of the country, and they occupy a position of supremacy.

Panics are psychological phenomena; they are akin to a stampede in a theatre, as both are due to a latent belief, suddenly aroused, that the disturbance means disaster to all within its reach. It is usually slow in its making, and may be due either to commercial or financial "Hurricane," the new play written by Olga Petrova, comes to the Playhouse, Wilmington, next Friday and Saturday, with Petrova herself appearing in the leading role.

In current periodicals Madame Petrova's ironical fiction and verse, as well as her first published play, have won a distinct place for the actress in the literary world. In her latest play, "Hurricane," the riddle of life has become transmuted and ennobled. Hand in hand with her leading character, Petrova has gone down into the darkest places of vice and sublimity, and out of this girl's struggle to avoid a repetition of her mother's sordid existence—house work and ranch work—babies every year whether she wanted them or not—"thirteen kids in fifteen years"—and her determination to deliver her crippled sister from similar bondage and provide her with the protection of a career—she has woven a passionate symphony, charged with a hurricane of emotion that rises to heights of intense terror and tenderness.

An adequate cast will support Madame Petrova in the new play including Lewis Willoughby, Patrick S. Barrett, Camilla Dalberg, Katherine Roberts, Manuel A. Alexander, Dorothy Ellen, Joseph Granby and Percy Carr.

RETURN TO WORK

Several local people employed in the Supervisor's office of the P. R. R. in Newark returned to work Monday of this week. Members of that department, as well as a majority of the maintenance and repair crews of this division, were idle for about ten days as the result of a general order from the headquarters, and which affected every division of the Pennsylvania.

excesses. Commercial crises cannot be entirely avoided by any banking legislation; they have occurred in all countries. Financial panics can, to a large degree, be prevented or their effects greatly minimized. Six panics have afflicted our country in the past fifty years—those of 1873, 1884, 1890, 1901, 1903, and that of 1907, most of which were financial convulsions, not inherent in unsound business conditions, but due to defects in our banking system and the unwise policies pursued as a result of them.

A lack of central control has been one of the most serious defects in our banking system; there has been no strong, quieting hand which could enforce united action by the banks along intelligent lines. There has been no power to control the aggregate amount of bank reserves, and we have permitted these conditions to go on and at periodical intervals, we reached the peak of the load, conditions became top-heavy, and the crash was inevitable.

Decentralized reserves, immobilized commercial paper, inelastic note issues, and the absence of a central controlling authority, can, I think, be summarized as the chief defects which have existed in our banking system, and these are undoubtedly largely corrected in the present Federal Reserve System.

FOUR STATES DISCUSS IMPROVEMENT OF FERTILIZER METHODS

Many Conferences Held On This Important Subject

During the past few weeks conferences have been held at Richmond, Va., College Park, Md., Ithaca, N. Y., and State College, Pa., at which officials of the State colleges have discussed with eastern fertilizer manufacturers and their salesmen, existing fertilizer practices and means for their general improvement.

It has long been realized that one of the principal obstacles to further progress in the economical use of fertilizers was the needless lack of uniformity in fertilizer analyses and the confusing variety of brands, many having no distinct differences. During the past year, the college officials and fertilizer manufacturers have co-operated to clarify the situation. Today in practically every fertilizer consuming state, lists of "Standard" fertilizer analyses have been selected by the college workers and agreed to by the manufacturers. Both are now endeavoring to show farmers how and why it is to their advantage to limit their purchases to a few analyses rather than to spread them over a large number to no intent or purpose.

The meetings referred to were held primarily to enable the college workers to explain to fertilizer salesmen the lists of analyses which have been selected for each of the states mentioned, and to discuss the adaptation of the analyses to the soil and crop conditions in the states. The keynote of the meetings, however, was the need for more intelligent service to the farmer in order that he may realize the largest possible returns from his fertilizer investment. It is expected, as a result of these and other similar conferences which have been held in various sections of the country, that a much simplified and more economical fertilizer practice will develop rapidly among farmers generally.

KENNETT, PA., IS MUSHROOM CENTER

15 Tons Shipped From Pennsylvania Town In One Day

Fifteen tons of mushrooms were shipped from Kennett on one day last week, with the probabilities that the average daily shipments will increase rapidly as this is the beginning of the season. They were shipped by train and truck to the larger cities.

As showing the extent to which the mushroom industry has grown in the thriving borough across the line in Chester County, it is pointed out that last year the high day was a record of five tons in shipment.

The crop of several larger plants is just starting, and there seems little doubt that this year four times as much tonnage of mushrooms will be shipped from Kennett as were forwarded last year.

Hopkins' 45-3 Score Eliminates City From Play Season

Although not in the hands of handicappers, Newark's school football team was downed by the power of the City team last Wednesday for the second year in a row.

The game was played in Middletown and several hundred fans were present. The only score of the first period was a field goal by the City team.

Score Eliminates Capital
City From Race*PLAY SEASORD TODAY

Although not in the best of condition and handicapped by lack of weight, Newark's great little High School football team again brought joy to their loyal followers when they downed the powerful Dover High team last Wednesday afternoon in the play-off for the championship of the upper half of the State. The score was 6-0.

The game was played on the old ball field in Middletown and was witnessed by several hundred spectators. Newark was well represented by fans and they lost no time in showing the team that they were present.

The only score of the game came in the first period when "Biff" Hopkins, captain and fullback of the local footballers made a 45-yard run from scrimmage for the score. Beside this glorious feat, Hopkins played the best allround game of his career. Time and again he stopped a Dover runner when he was headed for a score, and all through the game he was exhorting his teammates to the battle.

Newark had their back to the wall on several occasions during the game. At one time they took the ball away from the Dover boys within the five-yard line and on another play, with the goal to go and fourth down, a Dover forward pass desperately thrown by one of their backs sailed over the nearby fence and out of the field.

Dover brought a confident bunch of rooters with them to the game. Their team is strong and well drilled, but they were no match for Newark when it came to desperate fighting. No excuses could be offered according to those who saw the game. Dover lost because they couldn't make the grade when they needed points, and Newark won because they played the better all-round game.

The game today in Milford, between the locals and Seaford High, champions of all they survey in Sussex County, promises to be one of the hardest fought High School games of the season. Both teams have been keyed to the proper pitch and both are in splendid condition.

Newark players and rooters left this morning just before lunch time for the scene of the battle. Coach Wilson, as he was leaving, stated that he had faith in his team, and would make either victory or defeat without murmur.

"If we are beaten today," he said, "it will be by a mighty smart team, that's all."

CHAS. W. STRAHORNTHIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR*POWER COMFORT*WHAT IS OLDEST KNOWN ROAD MATERIAL?

Asphalt Has Strong Claims as
First Binder for Stone

Doubtless the oldest material for a road was wood, in the form of branches laid across muddy stretches of paths, much as the familiar "corduroy" road is still made today in backwoods districts.

But the oldest hard road material is stone or brick, and among the claimants for hoary age in considering the first forms of built highways, is asphalt. Some commentators of the Bible claim that the word "slime" in the quotation "slime had they for mortar" to build the Tower of Babel, should be translated as "bitumen," which is asphalt.

However that may be, there is no doubt about the translation of an inscription found on a paving block in Babylon. It reads:

"Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, he who made Esagila and Ezida glorious, son of Nabopolassar, King of Babylon. The streets of Babylon, the procession Street of Nabu and Marduk, my lords, which Nabopolassar, King of Babylon, the father who begot me, has made a road glistening with asphalt and burnt brick; I, the wise suppliant who fears their lordships, placed above the bitumen and burnt bricks, a mighty superstructure of shining dust, made them strong within with bitumen and burnt bricks as a highlying road. Nabu and Marduk, when you traverse these streets in joy, may benefits for me rest upon your lips; life for distant days, and well-being for the body. Before you I will advance upon them. May I attain eternal age!"

Those who traverse smooth asphalt streets in cities are thus linked with an era of at least 500 years B. C. in the roads they use, although from ancient times until about 1855, asphalt, then to be obtained only from nature (it is now a product of petroleum manufacturing processes) was neglected as a road material.

The Newark Post

is a Country Weekly, published every Wednesday afternoon at the Shop called Kells, at Newark, Delaware. It is a country paper, neither pretending nor aping anything else. In fact it is proud to be known and read as such.

Our News

We feature news of Newark, surrounding country and neighboring towns. We advertise our town, tell its story and try to reflect the spirit of this good country side and the good folk living here. Along with the news, we write occasionally a story of yesterday and those heroes sleeping at our foot-hills. Every organization, society or individual, with an idea that would seem to help the town has our support. This policy is ours always, whether public or private. Whether we agree personally or not makes no difference in our news columns. Every one is welcome to tell his story and to use our columns to exploit his idea.

The Editor's Column

In our Editorial Column, we are, or, at least, try to be, economical with our opinion and comment. When expressed, however, it is personal, ours—and, we hope, honest. We reserve this right—to speak in commendation or condemnation of any man or men in their public words or deeds. We may be right or wrong as our point of view may direct. But this right we reserve—or rather take. This is granted by every real American—others don't count except as enemies of ours and free speech.

Speaking of enemies—we are proud of them. An active citizen, unafraid and trying to do his bit in life has them. They inspire us. "Give us this day an enemy,"—the Persian prayer makes an interesting slogan for civic doers and newspaper men.

So we take only what we give. Any citizen, man or woman, can write for our columns on any question of Public interest—if he signs his name. Others cannot. There are no cowards on our Staff.

Our Advertisers

The Post carries the largest amount of local advertising of any rural paper in Delaware. We make this statement advisedly. No rural paper in Delaware, according to the population of its territory, carries so much space of local advertisers as the Post.

We appreciate this confidence. But then it is not all confidence—it is business return based on experience. And pertinent too, the space used last month, the last six months, the last year, is more than at any time in its history.

Our price is fixed. No favors, no special rates, no special discounts—no return business agreement.

Our space is for sale at a fixed rate—and we do the fixing.

So This Is To Say

That the news in the Post is controlled by events—neither colored nor suppressed.

Our editorials are our own—neither suggested, dictated nor written by anyone else.

Our advertisers do business with us—on business principles, not for friendship nor for favors.

The Post is an Independent Paper printed in the Country, for the Country, by those who live and make a living in the Country.

"Print all the Truth you dare—and dare a little more every week" is a personal creed. Our Faith in Newark led us here and that Faith abides, still.

We offer our Time, Thought, Energy to this day and our country. "To spend and be spent" appeals to us as the Great American Game. To voice the life of this community, to be the medium of exchange for opinions, to record the deeds worthy, is the mission of the Post. To be lenient and honest, to be generous, and worth-while is our ambition. The Post is a part of Newark—its columns are yours. Use them.
