METCALF URGES ELECTION OF J. G. TOWNSEND

Rhode Island Senator Lauds Record As Governor; Says Choice Necessary For Tariff Protection

VITAL TO BUSINESS

Ex-Governor John G. Townsend's election to the United States Senate, was urged today in Washington in a statement issued by Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Committee.

"Governor Townsend has a record of distinguished service to the people of his State," Senator Metcalf said. "His record is one of constructive achievement. As Chief Executive of Delaware for four years he developed a good roads system that is unequalled. His work in expanding and improving the public school system, stands out also as a signal accomplishment. In these and other directions he has demonstrated his genuine interest in the welfare of his fellow citizens, and his record stands today as a credit to his state and the nation."

"By electing Governor Townsend to the Senate, to occupy the seat now filled by Senator Thomas F. Bayard, the citizens of Delaware will be serving their own best interests. The voters thus would give fitting recognition to loyal and faithful public service. I am confident, if he is elected, he will continue to serve the people with singular ability and fidelity. Delaware should give him one of the largest majorities ever given to a Senatorial Candidate in that State."

"Ex-Governor Townsend's election would give further assurance of harmony in government, by providing

WATCHMAN TO GUARD SCHOOLS

School Board Votes To Protect $300,000 Investment; First Month Records Excellent

At a meeting of the Board of Education, Newark Special School District, held Monday night in the school office, it was decided to employ a watchman to patrol and protect Newark School properties between the hours of 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. William Morrison was appointed to the post.

Besides patrolling the school properties to protect them from fire and theft, the watchman will have other duties to perform, such as starting the fires in the morning and other janitorial work. He will carry a time clock and punch it at various stations at stated intervals. The school properties represent an investment of over $300,000 and it was thought an economy measure to afford them this protection.

Superintendent of Schools Ira S. Baines submitted his report of the first month of school, for the consideration of the board. This report revealed that the enrollment was 1030, and that the average daily attendance during the first month was 94.5 per cent. The report showed only 7.5 per cent of unsatisfactory work in all the grades for the first month. This is considered a particularly excellent record.

The Board spent considerable time discussing problems which have arisen from the increased enrollment in the schools. The board voted to extend the use of the Newark School to the Delaware State Teachers' Association Annual Meeting, which will be held in Newark, November 8 and 9. Considerable work has been done on the grounds of the various school properties. The flower beds have been trimmed and rearranged and new shrubbery planted. Most of this shrubbery was raised on the school grounds.

AETNA AT WEST GROVE FIRE

The Aetna Fire, Hook and Ladder Company was one of the thirty fire companies which responded, last Thursday night, to help fight the $300,000 fire which destroyed the plant and lumber yard of the West Grove Mill and Lumber Company. Aetna left here about 9 p. m., with a piece of apparatus and did not return until 8 o'clock the next morning. The Newark ambulance was also called into service to stand by at the West Grove Hospital to transfer patients if the first threatened the building.

Register Saturday!

This Saturday, October 20, will be the last opportunity for voters, who have not already done so, to register for the privilege of voting at the coming general elections. The registration offices for the three local districts will be at the Deer Park Hotel, the Washington House, and Currinder's Store, Christiana. The offices will be open from 8 a. m. until noon, and from 1 p. m. to 7 p. m. Do not fail to register Saturday if you have not already done so on one of the two previous Registration Days.

4-H CLUB TEAM AT NAT. CONTEST

Delaware Judging Team At Memphis; Coached By George Worrlow

Delaware 4-H Club Work is represented in the National Dairy Judging Contest at the National Dairy Exposition held this week at Memphis, Tennessee, by a team of four Dairy Club boys in charge of George M. Worrlow, County Club Agent of New Castle County.

The Delaware team consists of Marvin Klair, Marshallton; Paul Hitchens, Hockessin; Allison Davis, Farmington; and Lyndon Caulk, Woodside. These boys won their right to the Memphis trip by winning out in a series of elimination judging contests beginning last July at the Kent-Sussex Fair. They received their preliminary training from their own County Club Agents, but during the last few weeks have been trained by Mr. Worrlow, who is an expert judge of dairy cattle. Splendid cooperation has been given by owners of dairy herds who have allowed the boys to use their animals for practice judging.

The boys left Newark Friday night on the Baltimore and Ohio on their 1200 mile trip. At Memphis they will be in camp with teams from about thirty states. Interest in the contest is keen because the winning team gains the right to represent the United States in the International Judging Contest in England next summer.

Finances for this trip were provided by a number of organizations and men who are interested in dairying, and who believe in training the boys of the farms in the details of this important industry.

FINDS BROTHER'S BODY

Robert McKay, aged 63 years, was found lying dead back of "Bob" Allen's store, on Cleveland avenue, yesterday morning. The body was discovered by the dead man's brother, William McKay. Robert Jones, deputy coroner, was summoned and removed the body to his Funeral Home. It is thought that death was caused by acute alcoholism.

Robert McKay had been employed for thirty years in the brickyard owned by Jonathan Johnson, where his brother is also employed. The two brothers had been together Monday night, but had become separated and it is thought that Robert went back of the store to sleep, and died in his sleep. It is said that he had been drinking heavily for some time. An inquest will be held, probably this week.

McKay has a wife and children and a sister living in Philadelphia. He has not been living with his wife for some time. No funeral arrangements have been made as yet.

EARLY FALL MUSICAL

Among the outstanding musical events for the early fall season, will be the organ recital on Thursday evening, November 1st, at 8:15 o'clock, by Mr. Firmen Swinnen, in St. Stephen's Evangelical Lutheran Church, 13th and Broome streets, Wilmington, under the auspices of the church choir.

Mr. Swinnen is an organist of unusual ability, and once heard, creates a desire to hear him again. He is a master of the organ and thrills his audience.

This recital will be given by Mr. Swinnen on the new Kilgen organ in St. Stephen's Church.

Worrell, of Kennett Square, died Monday in the Homeopathic Hospital, Wilmington, of injuries received the day before, when she was struck by an automobile driven by Harvey Guthrie, of Kennett Square. It is said that the young girl stepped from behind another machine and into the path of Guthrie's automobile.

Baker, Chestertown, Maryland, one of the foremost turkey growers in the United States and a visit to the Burrows and Phillips Poultry Farm near Christiana, where a large flock of turkeys have been grown by artificial brooding and on restricted range, will be among the features of the first day of the third annual poultry tour which will be held on October 25 and 26.

On the second day the poultrymen will visit a number of poultry places in the lower part of Sussex County, ending that evening at Milford with a banquet. This tour is being conducted by the Delaware State Poultry Association, State Board of Agriculture and the Extension Department of the University of Delaware. County Agent, Ed. William, Jr., of Newark has assisted with the arrangements for the tour in the northern part of the state. He invites every poultryman in the county to attend on the trip.

The tour will start at 9:30 a. m. at the Mason Alfalfa Process Co., about seven miles south of Wilmington on the du Pont Highway. Here the poultrymen will be greeted by Dr. H. E. Kiefer, vice-president of the Mason Process Co., who will show the visitors over the plant and explain

RADIO AUDITION WINNER

It was announced Saturday night that Edward Scanlon, of Dover, and Miss Helen Knowles, of Seaford, were the winners of the Delaware State Contest of the Atwater Kent Foundation Radio Audition. These two singers will compete in the Sectional Contest to be held in New York, some time next month. The National contest will be held from Station WEAF, New York, December 16.

Miss Helen Gregg and Kennedy Fell were two of the nine contestants who took part in the Delaware State Contest held from Station WDEL, Wilmington, Saturday, October 6. Miss Nell Wilson was a member of the State Committee and a judge of the contest. The contest was decided by a judges' decision, which counted 40 per cent, and a vote of listeners, which counted 60 per cent.

TAKES NEW POSITION

T. C. Ryther, who for the past two years has been shop foreman at the Delaware Ledger, has resigned his post there to take a position in the State Printing Plant at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas. He will report for duty in Lawrence on November 1. Mrs. Ryther, who is attending the Women's College, University of Delaware, will remain here until the end of this semester. Mr. Ryther's position at the Delaware Ledger will be filled by Mr. L. G. Cutler. The Rythers came to Newark from Kansas.

DR. SYPHER SPEAKS

Dr. W. Owen Sypherd, head of the English Department, was the speaker at the University of Delaware "College Hour," held at 11 o'clock this morning in Wolf Hall. Dr. Sypherd's subject was "Fifteen Months in the Libraries of Europe with Old Jephtha and His Daughter."

Red Cross Donations

Mrs. Ernest Wright, chairman of the Newark Chapter of the American Red Cross stated today that over $400 in cash had been received by the local chapter for Florida relief, besides a large quantity of clothing. The Delaware quota has been passed, but further appeals are being made from the devastated sections, and further contributions of money and clothing are urgently needed.

Through the medium of The Post, Mrs. Wright wishes to thank all contributors to the Florida relief drive, and to particularly mention the generous contributions of Louis Handloff, who has given a large quantity of new clothing from the stock of his store as well as a large box of new shoes of various sizes.

Rubbish Collection

Today and tomorrow are the bi-monthly rubbish collection days. It is planned to service all of the town west of North and South College avenues, today, and the remaining portions of the town tomorrow. Have your rubbish out early in the morning. See that it is placed on the curb as the collectors will not go inside fences or hedges to collect. No newspapers will be taken.

WRONG EATING MORAL MENACE

Mrs. Daugherty Cites Authority To Show That Diet Has Effect On Behavior of Youth

Mrs. Kate Henley Daugherty, County Home Demonstration Agent, furnishes the following article from the Educational Information Service in which she says that all mothers with young children will find food for thought.

An interesting observation that probably lacks clinical proof, but is nevertheless indicative of the variety of angles to the subject of food is made by Judge Lindsay in his Revolt of Modern Youth:

"The first thing I have to look into and correct in the case of most incorrigible children is their health—and nine times out of ten, wrong eating is back of their bad health... nervousness, etc."

"I have observed another thing which connects itself in my mind with ill health, and that is that an abnormally early arousing of the sexual instincts, seems frequently to be associated with malnutrition."

"The ordinary American meal is a dietetic horror, not merely as a result of bad cooking, but also as a result of wrong food combinations, commercial refinements and adulterations, and the like."

"Meat, boiled potatoes, white bread and white sugar are the four corners of our dietetic temple. We are a nation of starch drunkards, we carry an overload of refined demineralized carbohydrates which, reckoned in calories, ought to run a steam engine; and when we aren't stuffing the firebox with energy producing carbohydrates, we are filling it with an excess of meat proteins which is even worse. Milk we use stingily; whole grain cereals we use hardly at all; salads we nibble at; fruits and natural sweets we consider a luxury more expensive than a doctor's bill; vegetables we eat sparingly after we have boiled the organic salts out of them and poured the precious liquor down the drain."

"I am not raising the point here because I am a dietetic crank, but because of the effect I see it having on Youth."

COMPLETE STREET PAVING

Yesterday the A. Petrillo Company finished the paving of South College avenue, which with the exception of a few small spots on West Park Place and the extension of West Park Place, completes the paving program of the Town for this year. The original program included the paving of Orchard Row, South College avenue from the old town line to the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Park Place from Orchard Row to Academy street. Later when the Levy Court decided to pave Park Place from the Town line to Elkton Road, it was voted to complete the paving of Park Place from Orchard Row to the Town line. This extension was awarded to the Petrillo Company on a unit basis. Work was started on it yesterday. The Levy Court will probably award a contract today for the paving of Park Place to Elkton Road.

AMBULANCE CALL

Last Saturday Florence Carlyle, a student at the Women's College, was taken to Wilmington in the Newark Ambulance for a blood test and then taken to her home in Milford. Charles Hopkins made the trip to Wilmington and Horace Null drove from Newark to Milford. County Constable and Newark Special Officer William Wideman escorted the ambulance on his motorcycle.

WHEN IS A HOST?

After a careful check of the facts of the situation, we find the following social item to be correctly stated:

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Emack, of Woodridge Farms, Huntingdon Valley, Pa., spent the week-end in Newark, as the guests of W. H. Walker, Jr., while W. H. Walker, Jr., was spending the week-end in Dover.

WORKERS CLOSELY BUNCHED AT CLOSE OF BIG DOUBLE CREDIT PERIOD SATURDAY

Race For Buick, Durant and Other Valuable Awards Waxes Warm As Workers Fight For Leading Positions

500,000 EXTRA CREDITS THIS WEEK

Extension Subscriptions Offer Unusual Opportunity To Greatly Add To Credit Total As End Draws Near

Fervish activity and a whirlwind finish marked the close, Saturday night, of the big double credit period of the Newark Post's "Help Yourself Travel Club" campaign. Several workers began the week closely bunched for the leading positions, and after the last report was in Saturday night some of them were even more closely bunched, a condition which reports of Monday and Tuesday did not change. Truly this is becoming an exciting race and the winners will no doubt be decided by a close margin. A half dozen subscriptions—or even only one—may decide who will own the Buick and Durant cars.

The workers are extending every effort to win the 500,000 bonus credits for the most subscriptions secured in Schedule B this week, hoping thereby to improve their position in the Special Bulletin next Monday. It is still "Anybody's Race," but every minute counts now as the end draws near.

Club Members Are Awake!

The liveliest part of the campaign is now at hand, with tremendous efforts being made by all club members to pile up credits, well knowing that to overlook the importance of doing business by volume from now until the close of the Campaign will bring disaster to their ambition and to their pride.

Watch the Credits Climb!

So the credit scores of the workers are going up at tremendous rate, and the amount of business being done now, indicates the sky will be the limit when the final count is made.

A Fight To The Finish

No one has won the Buick yet, not by any means. And while heading the list is a position always to be coveted there is still opportunity for any worker by a burst of speed to overtake the leaders and entirely change the completion of the race. So the big warning to Club Members is "Don't slacken your pace, but hustle, hustle, hustle!" The hard part of the campaign is just now starting, the part that will test your mettle and try your courage, but oh, what a reward for the winners!!! There is only a little over two weeks to decide the winner, and it means WORK, WORK, WORK to the candidates who expect to drive the cars on the morning of November 4th.

GUESTS OF OPERA STAR

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Daugherty and Professor Carl Rees were the guests Monday evening of Chief Caupolican at the performance of La Gioconda, at the American Academy of Music, Philadelphia. The Chief sang an important role in the opera. Miss Kathryn Ross, of Wilmington, scored in the title role of the Ponchielli opera. Last year, through the efforts of Mr. Daugherty and Professor Rees, Chief Caupolican gave a concert at one of the University "College Hours." This season the Chief will forsake grand opera to appear with Eddie Cantor in a Ziegfeld musical show.

METHODIST MEN'S LEAGUE

The Methodist Men's League held their regular monthly meeting last night. There was a good turnout and much business was discussed, and many plans laid out for the coming winter months. On November 27 a Thanksgiving supper will be held. Further details will be announced later. Just before the meeting adjourned refreshments were served.

CANCELS TRIP ABROAD

Last Thursday Dr. Walter Hüllihen cancelled a trip to France because of the serious illness of his mother, who lives in Staunton, Va. Dr. Hüllihen, accompanied by Mrs. Hüllihen was to have sailed the next day for a six-weeks trip in the interest of the Delaware Foreign Study Plan.

THE RACE IS GETTING "HOT"

With only two and a half more weeks to decide who will get the Buick, and other valuable awards; with another decline in credits next Wednesday night; and with 500,000 extra credits at stake this week for the most subscriptions secured in Schedule "B" this promises to be the hardest fought week of the campaign to date. Several workers are still closely bunched—entirely too close to be comfortable—and it is still "Anybody's race."

We cannot emphasize too much the importance of going after those BONUS credits for subscriptions in Schedule B this week. 500,000 is a lot of credits and no possible effort or trouble should be spared to win them.

EXTENSION CREDITS

Workers should not overlook the EXTRA credits they get for EXTENSION subscriptions. Many who have already given you a one or two year subscription will gladly give you an extension to give you the advantage of the larger credits allowed on the long time subscriptions. Remember an extension will give you the same large credits which would have been allowed had the long term subscription been given in the first place.

U. OF D. BEATEN BY MT. ST. MARY'S

Fast and Rugged Team Plays
Blue and Gold Off Its Feet;
Score 31 to 0

On Saturday, the University of Delaware lost its second football game of this season, 31 to 0. "Brick" Malloy's Mt. St. Mary's team had weight, speed and 5 touchdowns more football than Delaware, and after the first touchdown it ran roughshod over the Blue and Gold. This was the last game Delaware will play on Frazer Field until November 10.

As the game opened Delaware looked as if it would hold its heavier opponents on even terms. Rothrock's reorganized line stopped the vicious line bucks that the Mountaineers threw at it and all seemed to be going well. It was but a short lived illusion, however, and St. Mary's opened up a passing attack that Delaware couldn't solve and didn't solve, and the first period ended 7 to 0 in favor of the visitors. The first touchdown was made with a long pass and a series of line bucks. From then on Delaware had its back to the wall. The Blue and Gold made four first downs and that's about all the offensive gesture it did make.

The second touchdown was a gift from the Delaware center. Delaware was backed up near its own goal line and Taylor fumbled a bad pass from the center. He was forced to drop on the ball to save it and it cost Delaware 10 yards. Hubert stepped back to kick and the ball was rolled along the ground to him. This delayed his kick which was blocked and Ryscavage, St. Mary's end, fell on the ball as it rolled over Delaware's line.

Delaware did show some good football during the afternoon, but it was individual work. Teamwork was lacking, and it seemed as if the huddle system was responsible for this. The Delaware line did not seem to be set for the plays and, particularly on the kicks, the St. Mary's linemen and backs sifted through the line at will. The shifting of Captain Glasser from end to tackle showed on the left side of the line, which was noticeably stronger. Draper started the game at center, a new position for him, and his passing was bad. He was relieved by Waddington, who was a slight improvement in that department of the game. Reese played a great game at guard.

di Joseph was the most energetic back in the game and was in every play. He threw himself headlong at the St. Mary's line time and again, but couldn't pierce it. In fact Delaware made only one substantial gain through the line, when Hubert smashed through for a first down. This was expensive, however, for he gained further injury to his crippled shoulder. Taylor dodged and twisted desperately in attempting to get off on the wings, but he had no interference and he was boxed nearly every start. He got away once in the first quarter for 15 yards.

Ryscavage, McCall, Russo and Connell stood out on the St. Mary's team, and it was this quartette which contributed most richly to Delaware's downfall. Wolf, a weighty back also did some great line plunging.

Delaware rooters, who came early, had the pleasure of seeing the Delaware Junior Varsity give West Nottingham Academy a 25 to 0 lacing. The Jay Vees played a nice game. The backfield included Hoffecker, Warren, Morris, Heister, Holt, Conway, Orth Rigen and Steele; and the line, Fox, McCarthy, Snowberger, Osinski, Tunnell, Manns, Wardell, Boggs, Neave, Kohl, Rosenblatt.

This Saturday, Delaware will play Ursinus, at Collewit.

INDIA AND THE COW

The fact that the cow is a sacred animal in India contributes much to the abject misery and poverty of the 316,000,000 people of the country. It is estimated that there are a million useless cattle in the Bombay Deccan alone. The animals have to be fed, but cannot be used for food. The people are mostly vegetarians and approximately 225,000,000 of the inhabitants of the country are directly dependent upon agriculture.

Football Saturday

On Saturday afternoon the Newark High School football team will dedicate the new school athletic field to football by meeting du Pont School in a D. I. A. A. game. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:15. WESLEY BEATS NEWARK, 13 TO 0

High School Puts Up Good
Fight, Shows Good Football

The Newark High School football team lost a game to Wesley Collegiate Institute at Dover, last Friday, but gained something in prestige in the plucky fight it made against its heavier opponents. The final score was 13 to 0, Wesley making touchdowns in the first and last quarters.

Newark received the kickoff and made two first downs in succession. After an exchange of kicks, Wesley got the ball over the Newark line with a series of line smashes and a twenty yard run. The kick for extra point failed. The teams battled on fairly even terms for the second period.

Newark came back with a rally in the second half that looked good for a score, but the local team did not have quite enough power to shove the ball over. In the last period Wesley marched the ball to Newark's ten-yard line where Newark held for downs and took the ball. A fumble behind the line, which Hancock of Wesley dropped on, gave Wesley its second score.

IRELAND-GENTILE TOP ELAM'S OPENING CARD

Jimmy Ireland, of Wilmington, and Jack Gentile, of Philadelphia, will be thrown into the new ring of the Elam Athletic Club, for the main ten-round go at the club's opening, tomorrow night. This will be a return engagement for the boys as they furnished one of the most torrid scraps that ever went on at Shellpot Park, last season. Ireland got a scratch newspaper decision. The Elam Club is seven miles from Wilmington on the Concord Pike. Two judges and a referee will render decisions under the rulings of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission.

Four six round bouts will precede the main number. Ray Romney, of Wilmington, will have his hands full in a return bout with Joey Blake, of Conshohocken, in the semi-windup, and a real warm battle is expected in the main preliminary which will bring together Tommy McConaghy, Kensington clouter, and Lew Searles, of Chester. Tommy Gleason and George Tully will meet in the second bout and Johnny Cleary and Davey Brown will open the show. Reserve seat tickets are on sale at the Huber sport goods store, Tenth and Tatnall streets.

Quite a few fans availed themselves of the invitation to visit the new club on Saturday and Sunday and all came away favorably impressed and enthusiastic over the place as a fight arena. A special bus service at reduced rates for the fights will be operated by the Chester Valley Line.

One of the first schools to be organized into Bands of Mercy this season is the Sehome School, Bellingham, Washington, where 153 members have been enrolled. There is one Band in each of the six grades as reported by the principal, Arthur E. Bowsher.

Girl, Pursued By Jealous Man, Dies In Crash
Say Cecil Negress Thrown Through Windshield After Path Was Blocked
SEVEN NEGROES ARE JAILED AT ELKTON
As a result of fifty-mile pursuit by an alleged jealous admirer, Elva M. Rabin, age 22 years, a Negress of Warwick, is dead from serious cuts suffered when she was thrown through the windshield of an automobile, and seven Negroes, including Preston Lambert, the alleged admirer, are locked up in the Cecil County Jail at Elkton to await charges that are to be preferred later. The companions of the woman told officers that the machine in which Lambert and four other Negroes were pursuing them was thrown deliberately in front of their path near the Bohemia River bridge, causing their machine to run into an embankment. According to the Negroes who were with the woman, the latter was badly cut about the arm and body after she was thrown through the windshield, but that she was in such fear of Lambert that she arose from the ground and ran for about a hundred yards before she dropped dead, either from loss of blood or heart attack. Officers arrested Gilbert Hollingsworth and John Stewart who were with the Negress, and who suffered slight injuries Sunday, and rounded up Lambert, Isaac Harris, Edward Dorsey, James Jenkins and Samuel Simpson, who were alleged to have been in the pursuing machine, Monday. The Negress left her home Saturday night, but it was not until later that Lambert is alleged to have recruited his friends and started out in a mad pursuit which took them through Middletown, St. Augustine, Cecilton, and other places, until they finally overtook their quarry crossing the Bohemia River bridge. Harris was driving the car, it is alleged. After passing over the bridge, the pursuing car according to occupants of the car in which the girl was riding, veered and passed them. Hollingsworth and Stewart charge that the car was then thrown directly in their path so quickly that they were compelled to make a quick turn which ended them into the embankment, throwing the Negress who was sitting in the front seat through the windshield. After Lambert and his friends saw a woman drop on the road after being away, the other Negroes say, fled from the scene. Hollingsworth and Stewart then summoned medical aid, but they say the woman appeared lifeless by the time they had reached her side. Coroner Green summoned a jury of inquest which viewed the body, and Tuesday night, at a hearing, rendered a verdict that the deceased came to her death by being thrown through the windshield of an automobile driven by Hollingsworth. The parties are not held responsible by the jury, but the motor cop who arrested them told them for reckless driving and stopping to give aid in case of an accident.

The Man Without A Country

By far the biggest and most patriotic act which the un-registered Delaware voter can perform this week is to register on next Saturday, the last registration day, and qualify himself, or herself, for full participation in the great national and State election on November 6.

History has shown that one of the most miserable persons on earth is the man without a country.

In a government such as we have in the United States, the man without a country is the man without a vote, and the man who neglects to register himself as a voter and who thereby debars himself from the polls in November, is doubly culpable because he is a man without a country by choice and not by compulsion.

It costs nothing to register, but it costs the loss of a large amount of self-respect to refrain from registering. That statement holds true with respect to both men and women.

Therefore, if you be not registered already, go to your registration places on next Saturday and have your names placed on the list.

When you emerge you will feel that you have had a delightful bath in the waters of good citizenship and patriotic devotion to your country's best interests.—Wilmington Evening Journal.

Government

It has been thought a considerable advance towards establishing the principles of freedom to say that government is a compact between those who govern and those who are governed; but this can not be true, because it is putting the effect before the cause; for as man must have existed before governments existed, there necessarily was a time when governments did not exist, and consequently there could originally exist no governors to form such a compact with.

The fact therefore must be that the individuals themselves, each in his own personal and sovereign right, entered into a compact with each other to produce a government; and this is the only mode in which governments have a right to arise, and the only principle on which they have a right to exist.—Thomas Paine.

A COUNTY VIEWPOINT

The following editorial from the Salisbury (Md.) Advertiser was given us by Mayor Frazer, who thought it a strong and reasonable argument for tolerance.

Under the amber sunset glow of late September the cold outlines of the stone which hides our Unknown Soldier's form. Loosed from the over-present tokens of love, rampant leaves caressed by the breeze rustle over the granite. From the Capitol drifts the murmur of the tide of life at the home-coming hour.

Shuffling feet of age timidly approach the stone, and from beneath the Roman's shawl which covers the gray hair dark eyes, filled with pain and longing, strive to see beyond the sealed portals and a withered hand makes the sign of the cross. Shadows fall across the stone and each, leaning on the arm of Jacob, mourns and will not be consoled.

The story of vibrant womanhood and a boy's questioning voice, "Do you think he might be daddy?" A stifled sob and the answer, "Hush, dear. Nobody knows—only God." Pure passion leaps a rose upon the stone, and in the last rays of the sun its crimson warmth seems to touch the stone as gently as the first kiss of love.

Who was this Unknown Soldier? Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic? Or one of those who found life and service religion enough and the glory of God greater than the glory of creed? One thing we know—that he gave all that he had and was and hoped to be in order that "this government of the people, for the people and by the people should not perish from the earth."

None in the living time who press close to his cooling face take the question, was he Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic, because love leads them there—and love is kind.

When he whose name now marks the trail's end for the feet of the nation, stood at attention in the ranks for the first time, did lifted eyebrows mark his declaration of religious faith? Or, when in the silent watches of the night he crunched in cramped fashion with death at his elbow in the "insuring post," were those he guarded doubtful because of his religion?

When the segment's whistle stilled at the "zero hour" and our Unknown Soldier charged through the flames that soared in "No Man's Land," did any hesitate to lend or to follow him because he had learned his childhood prayers in a different fashion? And when his soul had passed on into the purple mists of glory and stood before his Creator did God ask, "Are you Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic?"

And yet—and yet, to our shame—today here in Wisconsin County a man's fitness for high office is being questioned, not because he is mistakenly unprepared to mutually understand—but because he is a Catholic.

Alfred E. Smith, Democratic candidate for President, with an inspiring record of twenty-five years in the service of his State and people, and endowed with the God-given quality of leadership which has brought to his support the progressive men in all parties—is safe and sound to guide the destiny of this nation—because he is a Catholic.

What a commentary upon our Protestantism which has existed for hundreds of years! How easily we harbor the torchlight Thomas Jefferson gave us—for a mass of political portage.

What is more serious, if that is possible, are the countless and senseless accusations made against this man Smith by women, wives and mothers, from whose lips little children must get the foundations of their knowledge of right and wrong, and all because Smith is a Catholic.

Can there be any greater injustice done to childhood than to teach it to hate when the very being of a child demands love?

SMALL TOWN FIRE FIGHTERS

A destructive fire in a somewhat isolated Chester County town a few days ago, demonstrated how well the smaller communities are equipped to meet such emergencies. In less than half an hour after the alarm the fire engines from other towns were at the scene, with streams on the building and their efficiency doubtless averaged much greater than the value of the entire paraphernalia.

The cause demonstrated that every community of a thousand or two people had made provision for just such disasters and the spirit of helpfulness seems to dominate the activities of all such fire fighters. The use of gasoline to drive the engines has made them almost as effective as the apparatus of the big cities and some of the "ladies on their marchers" covered 20 or 30 miles in a jiffy.

The country over, from these days know their job, and they indeed are loyal watchmen in the towers against the ravages of flames, fully deserving of the relatively big sums of money contributed to their support, most pleasantly, through fairs and similar annual gatherings.

One town, in that connection, returned $10,000 through a carnival, and the money served the double purpose of uniting the community in the good work of understanding and giving the firemen to understand that their work is appreciated.

In another country five fire fighters found themselves almost half a mile from water supply, but they quickly relayed it through a series of spliced hose and won the fight.

A fire in small communities comes to be an affair that affords more or less diversion. We read in one of the reports that as soon as the engines began throbbing their streams on the flame, the women of the town started up the fires in their stoves, and unlocked the pantries, so that the busy, excited men were stimulated with coffee and their innards braced with just such sandwiches and pies as our mothers used to make while the younger of the feminine contingent cheered their heroism in battling flames.

One is almost tempted to add, in the language of the early chroniclers of the social doings—"An enjoyable time was had by all."

TURKEYS WILL BE FEATURE OF POULTRY TOUR

how fresh cut alfalfa and other hay can be cured and dried by artificial heat, and then made into a high grade alfalfa meal suitable for poultry feed. One hour will be devoted to this first stop of the day's events.

From here the caravan of motor tourists will proceed to the Burrows and Phillips Poultry Farm, one mile west of Christiansa, on the macadam road from Christiansa to Cooch's Bridge. The tourists will go by way of the State Road police station via Bear, turning to right at Bear school house on road to Christiansa. At silent policeman in Christiansa the group will turn left on Cooch's Bridge road.

With the interest in turkey raising which is apparent on the Del-Mar-Va peninsula in mind, the poultrymen will welcome a chance to find how turkeys can be grown under confinement. This chance will be given them on their stop at the Burrows and Phillips farm. Here a flock of turkeys has been grown in a confined space of about one-fourth acre. A broiler house 20 x 200 ft. is under construction at this place. Last year the proprietors of this plant sold over 12,000 broilers. The tourists will leave this place at 12:30 noon.

Going by way of the historic Cooch's Bridge and the mill which dates back to 1782, the poultrymen will visit near the University of Delaware Poultry Plant near the Pennsylvania Railroad Station, south of Newark. The poultry farm is under the supervision of Mr. Carroll W. Mumford. It is here that Mrs. Helen M. Baker, eminent turkey raiser of near Christiansa, will give her talk on "Modern Methods of Growing Turkeys." Mrs. Baker has a flock of about 1,000 turkeys on her place.

Probably the first thing on the visit at the University of Delaware Poultry Farm will be lunch which all visitors are asked to bring with them. Hot coffee will be served free. Other things of interest to be noted at the Poultry Plant will be types of laying houses and fixtures; yard rotations to control diseases and parasites, and feeding and breeding experiments.

At 2:00 p. m. the group will move to the Pendergast Poultry Farm, owned by J. W. Suddard and Son, 1 1/2 miles south of Newark. Mr. Suddard has several features which should be of much interest to the people on the tour. At this place all pullets and layers are fed on the all-mash feed. Automatic clocks for turning lights on, dimming and turning them off as well as automatic water fountain arranged to prevent freezing will be seen.

On Friday, October 26, the tour will begin at 9:30 at the Machinery and Farm of W. V. Sneed's, Dagsboro. The special features of this visit will be: 1, storage brooders for young chicks, now in operation; 2, summer houses for pullets; 3, up-to-date laying house, 16 x 100 ft., with special ventilating shafts and water arrangement; 4, layers trapped under E. G. P. supervision. At 11:15 to 11:45 the poultrymen will visit Edmunds and Long's Poultry Farming Plant, Dagsboro. The special features of this visit will be: 1, large new fattening house equipped with the latest style fattening brooders; 2, how birds are fed and cared for; 3, at 12:30 to 2:00 p. m. the visitors will visit the Mares Poultry Farm, 4 miles west of Georgetown. The special features here will be: 1, dinner served by Georgetown Grange; 2, new 20 x 20 ft. all-purpose poultry house with four-part rotation system; 3, plan of breeding to improve Standard and Production qualities of Bantam Bantams; 4, all layers trapped under E. G. P. supervision. At 2:00 to 4:00 p. m. the poultrymen will visit the Swanson Poultry Farm, two miles west of Milford. The special features of this visit will be: 1, broiler house, 20 x 200 ft., equipped with long-pipe hot water brooding system; 2, home-made feed mixer; 3, overhead tank and automatic water fountains. At 4:30 to 5:00 p. m. the tourists will visit Fred G. Smith's Poultry Farm, one mile west of Milford. The special features here will be: 1, storage brooders for chicks; 2, large flock of mature pullets that were grown from three weeks in the storage brooders; 3, new type dropping boards. At 5:00 to 5:30 the tourists will go to Milford Grange Hall. The special features here will be the annual banquet for poultrymen and their wives. From 5:30 to 7:00 p. m. in Milford Grange Hall there will be a business meeting and election of officers. A lecture on "Training Poultry for Universal Poultrymen" by Dr. Maurice Hall, chief of the Zoological Division, Bureau of Animal Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Dr. Hall developed the treatment for hook worms of humans that has proved so successful.

REVISE PLANS FOR POSTOFFICE

the original plans, and five companies bid on the supplementary plans Friday. J. P. Foley & Son, of Boston, made a lump sum bid of $52,220, but this was disqualified because the time limit had expired on lump sum bids. The other four bidders were A. H. Alcott Company, Wilmington, Del.; Charles Weiss and Sons, Des Moines, Iowa; the English Construction Company, Washington, D. C.; and Agustin Bros., Norfolk, Va. Of these last four, it is understood that the Alcott Company was the lowest bidder, and that its bid was under the appropriation by several hundred dollars.

The only apparent reason for not awarding the contract to one of these bidders was that the equipment of the office and the supervision of the construction by Government inspectors is included in the sum named, and this would not allow the building designed to come within the appropriation of $50,000.

ARRESTED FOR DRIVING AFTER CARD REVOKED

Edward Larrimore, Jr., Fined $150.
Appeals Case: Other Traffic Offenders

Edward Larrimore, Jr., was arraigned before Magistrate Thompson, Friday, charged with operating an automobile during a period of revocation of operator's license. He had been arrested by State Highway Officer Knecht. He was found guilty and fined $150, but appealed the case to the Court of General Sessions, and was released when his father provided $500 bond. Last July young Larrimore was arrested in New Castle and convicted of driving a car while under the influence of liquor. His license was revoked at that time.

Last Wednesday afternoon Willard E. Marshall, of Newton, N. J., and J. E. Barker, of Birmingham, Ala., followed State Highway Officer Jewell to Magistrate Thompson's office. They were both guilty of reckless driving and paid fines of $25 and costs. On the same afternoon, Officer Ederick brought in Harry Weldon, of Philadelphia. Same charge and fine.

Last Thursday afternoon, William F. Vinkers, of Dagsboro, was brought before Magistrate Thompson by State Officer Beyer, for hearing. He had been involved in an accident on October 16, was found guilty of reckless driving and fined $25.

Friday, William Riley, of Newark, was arrested by Officer Beyer for driving an overloaded truck. He was fined $10 and costs by Magistrate Thompson.

On Saturday Officer Beyer arrested H. E. Davis, of Wilmington, and Harvey Moser, of Pottersburg, Ohio, and brought them to Magistrate Thompson for hearing. Davis failed to come to a stop when entering a highway, and this evening sent him $25 and costs. Moser was exceeding the legal limit and was assessed the usual $25 and costs.

Monday evening State Officer Ederick followed a low slung Lincoln sport car that was purring along at 64. Ederick opened up his bike, and took Edwidge Jordan, of Washington, D. C., to Magistrate Thompson, where Jordan permanently deposited $25 and costs.

Last evening Guide Glantz hurried through Delaware at a mile each minute to reach his home in Philadelphia. Officer Workman caught up with him, escorted him to Magistrate Thompson, where Glantz donated $25 to the State.

CHORAL SOCIETY DANCE

The costume dance and concert to be given by the Choral Society of the Newark New Century Club on Tuesday evening, October 30, at 8 o'clock, promises to be a very picturesque affair. Halloween costumes and decorations will be the keynote of the evening.

The Choral Society will give a program, with Dr. George H. Ryden, visiting soloist. Members of the society who will take solo parts are Mrs. P. K. Musselman, Mrs. J. P. Cann, Mrs. E. E. Price, Mrs. James Hastings, and Mrs. Thomas Mallin.

Other features of the evening will be dancing from 9 to 12, a good orchestra furnishing the music; and for those who prefer, tables for cards will be provided. In all a very interesting evening is promised by the Choral Society.

HOW INDIAN TEXTILES ARE TIED AND DYED

The beautiful "tied and dyed" textiles originating in India have also been found in other countries. The Japanese color silk fabrics in the same laborious and complicated manner, but use only small cloths and wear the finished article as bright ornaments in the hair. The same type of textile has been found in a small mountain town on the Island of Cyprus where the women still make the fabrics for scarves for their own use, not for commercial gain—though the custom is dying out.

The women of Northern India have made the coloring of these fabrics a thriving industry. They start the process with a piece of cotton or silk of one color, pulling out small folds and tying each fold with a thread or fine string. When a number of folds have been tied up following a certain design the whole piece is dipped in a dye of a second color. The part covered by the string retains its original color, forming a circle or dot. Then more folds are tied and a third color is used. By continuing this process the most intricate designs are made and the result is an elaborately figured textile.

Such fabrics, because of their lightness and delicacy, are sometimes called "running water," due to the fact that they can hardly be seen when placed in a stream, or "floating air," being so light and transparent when tossed in the wind.

Christian Science Churches

"Are sin, disease and death real?" was the subject of the lesson-lesson in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 14. The golden text was from Jer. 17:14: "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed, save me, and I shall be saved; for thou art my praise."

Among the citations which summarized the lesson-lesson was the following from the Bible: "And God saw every thing that he had made, and behold it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day." (Genesis 1:31.)

The lesson-lesson also included the following passages from the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sin, sickness and death have no record in the Elohist introduction of Genesis, in which God created the heaven, earth, and man. Until that which contradicts the truth of being enters into the arena, evil has no history, and evil is brought into view only as the unreal in contradistinction to the real and eternal."

"When thinking men generally come to realize that the responsibility is up to them to take the initiative in law observance, then and not until then will the Eighteenth Amendment be given a fair trial."—W. C. Durant.

LATER DAYS AT THE FARM

As the little girl grew older she could not go to the farm so often, partly because she took a full-time ticket now, and partly because her mother needed her at home, but always, when she did go, she and her grandmother had the same old good times together, and Margie was as happy there on the old mountain farm than anywhere else in the world. She seemed to love her grandmother better now than she ever did enough to think about her home. The grandmother had some funny ways. For one thing, she would never sit in a straight chair at the table, but always in a rocker. She would eat a little, and then sit back and rock a little, and sometimes, after meals, she would fall asleep while she rocked, but she would never allow herself to nap a minute, not even for as you might, you could never get your grandmother to present that she would keep. She loved dairy things, but the prettiest gift she ever received would fall to thinking how much she would please someone else, and so presently away it went. If the girl happened to find her out, she would hang her head and look ashamed of herself, but all the time her eyes would be roguish. All the family teased her and she teased them. She would have walked miles for the sake of a joke on any one of them, but her fun was always kind. One dearly loved joke she played every year. In October, when the mountains were wonderful in the big autumn weather and the tang of burning leaves was in the air, a big family of Margie's cousins used to come from their town house to the old farm for chestnuts. For days before they came the grandmother and Minnie (the little Dutch maid) would gather every chestnut and put away the treasure in a big bag. On the morning of the children's coming, the grandmother was always to be seen scattering the husked chestnuts everywhere. Later in the day, when the children were shouting over the windfall, she would shake a chestnut bag finger at the grandmother and Minnie if they dared to chuckle.

So the little girl's visits to her grandmother came to an end. Her beautiful book read through. It though it is never the same as at first time, one may read a book over again. The little girl has been grown up for a long time. . . . But sometimes she turns back the pages of her memory. She is sitting on her grandmother's lap on the porch in a summer twilight. Her grandmother is slipping to her, and the great sea is rising behind the chimney—Wendell Kirkland, in "A Little Girl and Her Grandmother."

Madame Karv-Tu—You know my thing she could to coming a singer. Critic—Well, she deal of comfort in advice was taken.

VALUE OF PETS

Perhaps the sweetest recollections of childhood are those connected with a pet—some frisky, affectionate little animal or gay little bird loved and tended in the faraway golden days. Pets are an endless joy to children. They lend themselves readily to every kind of make-believe, and are always available as playthings and consolers of woe. Talking it over with a cat, a dog, or a bird, has a soothing power not at all times attainable through human agencies.

"My pony is so sympathetic," said a little girl, and "has such a sense of humor." The pure delight afforded by these cherished friends in feathers and fur is sufficient reason for their presence in every household. Parents sometimes complain that they are such a trouble, are in the way, and require so much care. Could they realize thoroughly their value as a source of happiness and a means of education, these objections would forever cease. Childhood without pets is bleak and barren and altogether incomplete. Like a vine in the desert with tendrils blown in every direction because there is no object to twine around, the child without some dumb creature to love and protect finds his bubbling impulses and loving longings crushed to earth. He needs to lavish his growing and expansive affection upon some suitable object, otherwise he loses more than can be counted and weighed.

What the child loves he will most observe and study. Some knowledge comes concerning the habits and ways of the little creatures that share his life; and personal affairs are inseparably arranged so that there will be time for everything—for play, for stories, for work.

Children, like most savages, are frequently cruel. Animals that are dependent have a civilizing influence upon the child, for the savagery of children is that of ignorance, not of malice. The many wants of pets, their helplessness, awaken a sense of moral responsibility. A living creature cannot be neglected without pain and suffering following. Very different is the condition of the book or toy that is forgotten and left out in the rain. It is spoiled, and the loss is the child's own. In a measure he is responsible only to himself for the welfare of inanimate possessions. But a sentient being who can repay love with love has a deeper claim. Things that feel have rights. Even young children recognize this, and learn through affection for their four-footed friends to recognize this claim to health and happiness.

Pets have also a hygienic value, many of them requiring fresh air and exercise at regular intervals. This necessarily takes the child out of doors, in sunshine, on dark days, and in all sorts of weather. It gives an object of interest to what would otherwise be a dull performance. Many a restless girl who would rebel at rubbers and raincoat, glides into them smilingly when it is a question of a walk with "Rover" or "Fido." How willingly these burdens are borne for a dumb friend! Who gains most in the frolic and romping? Perhaps the one who gives the most.—Julia W. Wolfe, in "The R. S. P. C. A. Journal."

Sugar and Heroism

The amount of sugar in our blood is the measure of the courage which we will display, according to Dr. Edwin E. Slosson, Director of Science Service, Washington, D. C. A variation of a few hundredths of one per cent in the glucose of our blood, he says, may make all the difference. In moments of great excitement the secretion of adrenalin is stimulated and this causes more sugar to be released to the blood and so stimulates man's strength and courage.

This must be true. England's pitiful little army, the "Old Contemptibles," which grew to such mighty proportions by the end of the World War, thrived and fought valiantly on huge rations of jam.

Courage in Cans

If courage is concealed in cans of sweetness, this country is fully prepared in that respect for the next war. The kinds of sweet foods preserved in cans in this country include not only fruits, but jams, jellies, marmalades, milk, molasses, fig and plum puddings, syrups, fruit cake and several more.

Here is a recipe to keep up courage. Tell your boy it will make him play good football.

Marmalade or Jam Shortcakes: Split tea biscuit in halves and spread generously top and middle with raspberry or apricot or peach jam. Top with whipped cream or serve with a marshmallow sauce, made by cutting one-fourth pound marshmallows in pieces and melting in double boiler. Dissolve one cup confectioner's sugar in one-fourth cup of boiling water. Add to the melted marshmallows and stir until blended. Cool and serve.

YARD, PLANT AND FLEET OF OBERLY BRICK COMPANY AT WILMINGTON

The illustration gives an idea of the equipment of the Oberly Brick Company, at Thirty-sixth and Broom streets, Wilmington, Del., the largest concern of its kind in the state. At the left is a storage building, while at the right are the kilns.

The concern, which was founded 40 years ago by James P. Oberly, is now operated by his sons, Charles M. Oberly, who is president, and Howard M. Oberly, vice-president and secretary. All grades of building brick in red or brown shades are made.

The large trucks at the left are of the latest dump body type, and have capacities of 2,000 brick each. Not only are the brick automatically deposited on the ground, but are neatly piled up. The smaller trucks are used in delivering to minor building opera-not waiting for Old Man Jack Frost to catch them, but are having new installations and repairs done now. Very few people recognize what there is to good plumbing, just a few pipes and joints, but if you could look behind the walls of your house you would be greatly surprised at the out of sight valves, etc.

These mechanical contrivances must operate each and every day without giving any trouble and they must never leak. If anything ever goes wrong with these valves it might mean tearing out part of your wall and perhaps that is a tiled wall, and you quickly can see what this means in the way of expense. The worst is that perhaps you do not know of this leak until after a ceiling or perhaps a wall is ruined.

When you build or when you install new plumbing fixtures, it pays to go to one who is reliable, and again to a man who can serve you at any time, night or day. Such a reputation Mr. Dean has established for himself in Newark.

This program means that when the bookkeeper or the stock room keeper forgets to order those forms in time, that this error can be overcome by just phoning 6260 Wilmington and the job is started on at once. You do not have to wait for the shop to open at 8 o'clock, because it is always open and work is on the go. NEW YORK RESTAURANT THE PLACE TO MEET

Newark People Make It a Rendezvous To Join Friends In Wilmington

It is getting to be a well-known fact, that if you spend the day in Wilmington, you will find more New Yorkers dining at the New York Restaurant than any place else. So the New Yorkers are saying if you want to see who's in the city go to dine at the New York Restaurant, for there you will surely find them.

The proprietor is a real fellow, who recognizes the wants of the individual when in town, they generally want what is difficult to prepare at home or is unhandy to obtain. There is no place in town where better fish and oysters and clams can be had. The clam chowder is the real stuff, it has built a reputation for the restaurant. The fowl and meat are the best the market offers, and not only that—it is cooked the right way.

SOFT DRINK SEASON

Mr. H. A. Mandorff, the bottler of Wilmington, says he remembers well when the soft drink season was considered over when September started to get a few days old.

However, such is not the case today, there is a regular all the year round market for a pure and wholesome drink. In fact it is looked on as a food drink, is served with meals regularly and is considered a refreshing part of the meal. Children in particular are fond of Mandorff's drinks, they find them good to the taste and the parents are not afraid to let the children have them for they are healthful. The child, like its grown up parent, craves something to drink after the meal, coffee is harmful for children, but a good pure soft drink represents a liquid food.

JEWELRY PROMISES TO BE THE IDEAL HOLIDAY GIFT

It seems to be a long time off till Christmas, but Mr. Parrish, the jeweler on Main street, is thinking of it. He finds that his years of experience is going to mean a large saving in dollars and cents to his customers. Never before did the jewelry manufacturers offer the large lines of jewelry as shown for the coming season.

It is right here that the experience of years counts, as there are many good-looking but cheap imitations offered. It is only in knowing from experience and having the knowledge and acquaintance of reliable manufacturers that will protect the jeweler this season. Mr. Parrish's long years of knowing the jewelry market is going to bring to his customers the latest in designs and the best in quality at the lowest price. It would be well to stop in and have a talk with him, by so doing, you can find a way of making two souls happy for Christmas, that is yourself and the recipient of your gift. Gifts will be laid away for you on a deposit and arrangements can be made whereby you can have the gift fully paid for by Christmas.

Brer Fox Seeks Sanctuary

B. F., in Christian Science Monitor.
The gate of the paddock on Archibald's place commands a view of the Sussex country, charming as well as extensive. On a certain day in early spring, I stood with Archibald at the gate of the paddock.

It was a scene of refreshing calm to one like myself fresh from the London clamor, and in deep content I gazed at it all, only vaguely conscious that Archibald was telling me something about his poultry. My thoughts were blending with the song birds and my eyes following the flight of the cawing rooks, when Archibald nudged my arm and pointed toward a near-by patch of woodland. Looking where he pointed, I saw a number of horsemen emerging from the wood, two or three in scarlet coats leading. To my ears came faintly the sound of dogs' voices.

"That's the Pudboro Hunt engaged in its strenuous work of protecting my chickens," said Archibald with mild sarcasm.

"You are fond of sport, Archibald," I said, "but you never follow the hounds—why is it?"

"You have answered your own question," he replied.

"You mean—"

"I mean that my ideas of sport do not synchronize with fox hunting."

"Please pardon a non-rider's Londoner's ignorance, but if fox hunting isn't sport, what is it?" I asked.

Archibald did not answer at once. His eyes were fixed on the hedge at the bottom of the meadow. Following his gaze, I saw something slowly creeping through the hedge. "Rusty," Archibald's Airedale, standing with us at the gate, saw it too, and made a leap forward, his muscles tense and quivering, but a sharp word of command from his master caused the dog to halt, and it came back and crouched at our feet.

The something struggling through the hedge resolved itself into the slim, reddish form of a dog fox. Slowly it dragged its way up the meadow, making for the gate where we stood. It was gasping and well-nigh spent. Suddenly it caught sight of us, veered to the left and with what seemed to be a despairing effort, crushed its way through the hedge into the open door of an outbuilding where the gardener kept his tools.

With a low whistle to Rusty, Archibald ran quickly across the barnyard, closed the door of the tool house and placed the dog on guard. The intelligent Airedale sniffed at the closed door for a moment, then turned and stood like a statue facing the uncon-ing hounds and riders who had reached the bottom of the meadow and were making more or less successful efforts to negotiate the hedge.

A stout, red-faced man whose coat matched his complexion, and who was evidently the individual known as the Master of the Hunt, rode forward to where Archibald and I were standing. His face was familiar to me, but for a moment I could not remember his name.

"Ah, Plumpton," he said, addressing Archibald, "I'm sorry we have had to invade your premises, but I fancy your quarry has entered your barnyard."

"Quite right, Colonel Roarington," replied Archibald, "he has taken refuge in my tool house, and I've closed the door on him."

"Good!" exclaimed the Colonel, "we'll have him out in a jiffy. Jolly kind of you to have caged him." He motioned to the huntsman controlling the hounds.

"Just a moment, Colonel," said Archibald, holding up his hand, "I presume you have had a good run?"

"One of the finest runs we've had this season," replied the Colonel, "we found him near Pilker's mill, about fifteen miles back, and he's given us the best cross-country chase I've had for months. He's certainly been a game chap, but we've got him at last."

The other riders, about a score in number of men and women, had by this time drawn up close behind the Colonel. Archibald leaned with his arms upon the gate and gazed up into the face of the Master of the Hunt.

"Don't you think, Colonel," he said quietly, "that since all of you have had such a jolly, good run after such a splendid, game fellow, er—wouldn't it be a trifle more sporting if you allowed him to live, and—er—just called the run finished?"

"Nonsense, Plumpton," replied the Colonel, flushing a trifle redder, "a run is never properly finished without a kill when the fox is within our grasp."

"But in this case it happens that the fox is—er—within my grasp, not yours," said Archibald, still quietly.

"Do you mean to say that you are not going to let us get at him?" asked the Colonel, raising his voice, while a murmur spread among the assembled riders.

"A terrified, exhausted, suffering creature has sought refuge on my property," said Archibald, slowly and incisively. "My tool house has become a place of sanctuary." He pointed to Rusty standing motionless at the door. "A dog not trained in the art of killing for sport is on guard. May I suggest that pity and mercy are not incompatible with true sportsmanship?"

There was an impatient babble of voices from the riders, and Colonel Roarington spoke loudly and irritably: "You forget, Plumpton, that we are doing this for your benefit. Where would your poultry be if we didn't exterminate the foxes?"

"I do not remember that I have asked the protection of the Pudboro Hunt for my poultry," replied Archibald with a slight smile, "but if your organization exists mainly for chicken Brer Fox Seeks—Continued — — — preservation, don't you think the results you achieve are a little out of proportion to the strenuous efforts and expense involved, particularly since it is well known that you raise foxes for the purpose of exterminating them?"

"I'll not argue that point," replied the Colonel impatiently. "We are aware, of course, that you do not follow the hounds, but I am surprised that you should show such fanatical opposition to a time-honored English sport. However, it is plain to be seen that you intend to spoil the finish of our run, so I presume there is nothing more to be said."

"Colonel," replied Archibald, smiling, "when the Pudboro Hunt follows the aniseed bag instead of the fox, I'll join you with pleasure."

"Aniseed bag!" exploded the Colonel, raising his riding-crop in a gesture of despair, "what is England coming to?"

"Her enlightened senses, of course!" replied Archibald, with a chuckle, but the Master of the Hunt shook his head and dashed away to join the others.

Archibald came back to the gate and whistled to Rusty, who left his post at the tool house door and came to us.

"Open the door, old chap," said Archibald to me, "and see what happens." Nothing happened for a few moments after I had opened the door and rejoined Archibald and Rusty at the gate. Then the head of Brer Fox appeared at the open door. Cautiously he surveyed the outside, little by little the rest of his slender body appeared until he stood fully disclosed, his splendid brush drooping behind. Silently we stood watching him. Rusty quivering with pleased excitement. Then suddenly Brer Fox caught sight of us. For a long moment his gaze fastened upon ours, then he turned and trotted quite leisurely to the corner of the tool house. Here he paused, turned again, and faced us, and it pleased Archibald and me to think that the wave of his brush before he disappeared round the corner was a grateful gesture of thanks for services rendered.

"A few minutes ago," said Archibald thoughtfully, "you asked, 'If fox hunting isn't sport, what is it?' It's a tradition, handed down from generation to generation, and a tradition is something you just accept, you don't argue about it. Just the moment you begin to give serious thought to a tradition, you knock it endways. It becomes either a concrete fact or an egregious fallacy. That's the trouble with Colonel Roarington and the rest of our friends of the Pudboro Hunt. They have never given the tradition of fox hunting as a sport serious thought. When they do (and they will), hunting Brer Fox as a sport will no longer be time-honored."

"But what about your chickens in the meantime?" I asked.

"As a matter of fact, old chap," said Archibald, taking my arm as we strolled toward the house, "my chickens are seldom disturbed by the foxes. There exists no diplomatic treaty between Brer Fox and myself, no Locomo pact; it seems to be just a gentlemen's agreement, pure and simple, unwritten, unspoken. Sometimes I am inclined to think that animals know how to 'play the game' as well as we do. There are, no doubt, quite a number of blots on Brer Fox's escutcheon, but the motto 'Noblesse Oblige' may not be entirely obscured, what?"

WORD "BOYCOTT" WAS THE NAME OF A MAN

The term "boycott" has crept into use generally only during the last few years. Few people realize that this word originally was the name of a man.

Captain Charles Cunningham Boycott was the agent of an estate in Ireland. His harsh methods of collecting the rent from the tenants caused him to be unpopular. In 1880 the tenants, feeling that they were overburdened with high rents, banded together and fixed the rent at prices they could pay. Boycott refused to accept the new rates. As a result his life was threatened, his food supply interfered with, his fences torn down, his letters intercepted and his servants compelled to leave him.

All those who were found helping Boycott in any way were ostracized by the tenants. As a result when harvest time came there was no one to gather Boycott's crops. He was forced to apply to England for help and his harvest was gathered by a crew of "emergency men" sent to him.

This campaign of persuasion was later adopted by the Irish Nationalists. The term "boycott" soon came into common English use.

"A wise woman can make a success of marriage out of the most unpromising material. My wife has," J. A. R. Cairns.

Cattle of Many Lands

William Thompson, F. R. G. S., in Our Dumb Animals

Cattle, a name given to many varieties of domestic animals belonging to the genus, Bos, also known as oxen, are represented by two groups, the one the humped or zebu of India and Africa, and the other the straight-spined species which are common the world over.

The oldest known records of the Hebrew and Hindu peoples mention them as being used as beasts of toil even so far back in history as 2,000 years prior to the Christian era. The head of the animal was also a very common figure on sculptured antiquities both of the Greek and Roman periods.

The ox was used as a symbol of sacrifice by the Huns many years before Christ, and was also portrayed on the earliest known examples of Egyptian monuments.

In the Swiss lakes the remains of once domesticated specimens have been found, together with implements of stone of the time when Neolithic man roamed the southern continental areas of Europe.

In early times a man's wealth was determined by the size of his herd, and among many of the pre-historic races of Africa cattle formed the medium of exchange between peoples or bands. The ox also appears on many ancient coins of both the Greek and the Roman mints. From the word "pecus," i. e. cattle, came the Latin word "pecunia" and our word "pecuniary."

The bull appears more than any other animal in Greek mythology. To kill the ox was a great crime, and the Jews were forbidden to put any form of muzzle upon it when treading corn. To kill it was punished by exile. The Hindus believe the bull was the first animal created by the trio of divinities who were directed by the Supreme Being to inhabit the earth. Among the Egyptians the bull figured in the Signs of the Zodiac.

Anson, in his work on early voyages, mentions great herds of wild cattle roaming in the Ladrone Islands, their characteristics being the same as those of the white herds of Italy, that are used both for labor and food. This type seems best adapted for work in the fields, and was introduced into the Falkland Islands from La Planta, South America.

There is a very close resemblance between the Italian white cattle and those that were common in Wales during the tenth century. The black of Spain are no doubt the same breed as the black species, one hundred and fifty of which a Prince of Wales demanded as compensation for an injury that occurred nearly a thousand years ago.

The ancestors of the Spanish herds were from Friesland and Holstein, a very large breed, the first introduced into Spain by the Goths. Later they were taken to South America. One authority asserts that the millions now roaming the pampas of South America sprang from seven cows and one bull taken from Seville to the city of Asuncion in Paraguay about 1556.

The great number of black bulls that are reserved for fighting purposes in Spain and Portugal increases the price of meat, thousands being conserved in various parts of Spain only for the amusement of those who are patrons of the most brutal and unfair sport which has been for some the delight of the Spaniard.

The Portuguese herds and many of the cattle of Spain possess very long horns like the Hungarian, often measuring five feet from tip to tip, but in size the cattle are unlike the Hungarian which are a very large breed. The Portuguese oxen used in the vineyards and for general agricultural purposes are smaller than the smaller breeds of their American progenitors.

The best pasturage lands for rearing bulls are along the low banks of the Tanguis. These districts are noted for the quality of bulls they produce, many broups for bull-fights going from here every year to Madrid and other Spanish towns.

As compared to the horse, the ox has greater powers of endurance, and is very little lower in the scale of intelligence. The lion, misnamed the king of beasts, finds his master when put into the ring with the highly bred fighting bull of Southern Mexico. There is no record of a victory by a lion over a bull, whose attacks are received with supreme evidence of terror, cowering before the charge of the bull like a pigmy before a giant.

The primitive animal must have chosen the rhinoceros and elephant as his most congenial companions, as remains dating from very remote geological periods have been found with those of the greater beasts.

And considering with abundant pity the beginning of all things created, he (St. Francis of Assisi) called even the least creatures by the name of Brother and Sister, because he knew them to have one and the same beginning with himself.—St. Bonaventura.

What News Is News?

By J. Roscoe Drummond

Mr. Drummond is a member of the staff of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and was the winner of the prize for the best editorial printed in a daily newspaper on "The Value of the Cologne Press Exhibition to America," sponsored by the American committee of the exposition.

Cologne, Germany.
In the days when dueling was in flower and when the New York Sun was shedding the first faint rays of its brilliant career, corrupt newspaper advertising received one of its earliest blights. In 1835 George W. Wisner, then co-owner of the Sun with Benjamin H. Day, was challenged by a quack dentist whose medicines the Sun had exposed and banished from its advertising columns. Newspapers fought even their private battles on their front pages in those times, and the Sun announced editorially that Wisner had accepted the challenge, and that, having the choice of weapons, he would elect syringes charged with the dentist's own medicines, the distance five paces!

The fine ethics which the Sun exemplified in this incident of courageous ridicule have today permeated to virtually the entire daily and periodic press. The International Press Exhibition gives to advertising many of its most illuminating exhibits and accords to advertising ethics a well-deserved tribute. A painstaking investigation was made into every branch of commercial advertising, and of all the requirements essential to an effective advertisement, Pressa puts the following foremost: "Above all things an advertisement must be true. Without truth there is no permanent success."

The ideal of clean and truthful advertising has found almost universal acceptance. The corrupting advertisement, dissembling both the producer and the consumer, has been disinherited by every newspaper which has any pretensions to integrity. The press rarely permits its readers to be the prey of misleading and obnoxious advertising material, and in the high ethical practice which the advertising fraternity has set, it holds the light of progress to the writers and editors of the news.

Advertising columns, having substantially purged themselves of the baneful influences which sought haven there when the newspaper was in its infancy, may justly pause and glance about at their associations. Too often the suburban home for sale will find itself resting beside the latest divorce scandal, and a page of school announcements in company with the harrowing details of crime. The newspaper editor pleads reader interest, but the newspaper advertising manager is convinced that the display of only worthy products can fairly serve advertiser and reader alike.

It is apparent that clean and truthful advertising not only accords with a high ethical code, but achieves its greatest commercial value in the practice of that ethical code. The varied data presented by Pressa show that such an advertising standard is as economically sound as it is socially right. The rapid growth of advertising has been consonant with its purification.

Appreciation of the newspaper as an integral part of the community and the nation in which it functions is the outstanding note which is discernible throughout the entirety of the press exhibition. And it is because the newspaper affects so much of human existence and must measure its acts in the light of public responsibility that the policies which govern the news content of the press concern the public as a whole. Whether anti-social news, that is, news of crime, disaster and scandal, shall consistently occupy the favored position in the mirror of the press offers a question for the solution of which much more must be considered than merely reader interest. On this point, indeed, to recur to advertising, the studies made by Pressa indicate that readers prefer to be associated with the pleasant and the worthwhile affairs of human existence. If good advertising pays, why not good news?

Reader interest is only a single factor in the larger equation of news policy. Throughout the long evolution of news and the newspaper, Pressa has exhibited the close connection between the printed word and the accomplished fact. The first act of the dictator is to close the columns of the press to everything but that which he would have the people believe. The militarist turns the newspaper into an instrument of war, and there is war. The printed word is truly a combustible commodity, and it can no more be dissociated from the act which it describes than cause can be dissociated from effect.

The frequent public protest which has arisen against the over-accentuation of crime news is based not only on the increasing percentage of the reading public who would willingly have less of crime and more of the constructive in their newspapers, but also on the conviction that crime news, glorifying the criminal with fond and picturesque phrases, is an incentive to crime. This protest is reflected at Cologne by the emphasis which the German press exhibit places on the fact that one of Germany's leading newspapers carries only a fraction of one per cent of such matter and on the manner in which crime news is consistently played down by this periodical. To this end the New York State Crime

Commission has publicly declared that "the constant publication of detailed news of crime suggests criminal practices to persons who, because of these suggestions, develop criminal tendencies themselves."

Further in its analysis of the causes of crime the commission declares that there are newspapers which "establish in the public thought a false impression of the amount and importance of crime." This statement comes closest to touching the condition which it is in the power of the press to remedy. The most objectionable aspect of crime news is not its quantity, but the manner in its treatment and display.

Studies recently made in the United States showed that only about 1.4 to 1.50 per cent of the news space of the average newspaper is devoted to crime, divorce and scandal, but this same survey reported that in inquiry among a cross-section of readers revealed that their estimates of the amount of crime news ranged from 25 to 50 per cent.

Such a finding is misleading. It discloses that crime news is given such prominence that to an average reader it is magnified many times its actual size and importance, and substantiates the view that it is the glorification of crime and its disproportionate display which makes of it a public menace.

Since Pressa opened its gates to the world three months and a half ago, more than 3,500,000 persons have passed within its halls. These persons have received a larger concept of the newspaper as an instrument of welfare to its community and a utility of friendship among nations. A clean press is an essential part of that concept. Constructive journalism has received an impulse which is certain to spread its effect long after Pressa will have closed its doors.

LEST WE FORGET

Not the least important thing in these days of political campaigning and dissemination of authorized and unauthorized propaganda in the form of speeches and printed matter, is to take care that the really important issues of the campaign in the United States are not confused with those which have no actual bearing on the question to be determined. There is no dearth of the former. Surely there is an abundance of the latter. What is it, after all, that the American people, almost unanimously, most desire?

First, it may be said, they hope to assure a continuance of that general prosperity which they have learned to enjoy and adequately appreciate. Any minor consideration—any lesser ambition or personal gain—can in no way compensate for the temporary destruction of the condition which is reflected in millions of homes throughout the length and breadth of the land. And so it is that the average voter and citizen, looking about him, is careful to discover if there is a possibility that a yielding to some prejudice or the desire for a "change" may have the result of bringing to established industry a reversal of those conditions which he himself has aided in making possible.

It was inevitable, of course, that the farm relief issue, so called, should be made to loom big in the campaign waged in the agricultural states of the middle West. Upon no other subject could there be presented so many specious arguments by those purposefully appealing to prejudice. The effort seems to be to make it appear that the present Administration in Washington has ignored the need of remedial legislation and remained unmindful of the plight of the farmer. Those who have carried this misleading message to the people of the wheat and corn belt have avoided any reference to the constructive and possibly more effective method proposed by Republican leaders on Congress with the approval of the President and the Secretary of Agriculture. They have failed to disclose the admitted fact that the intention of those who voted for the enactment of the much discussed McNary-Haugen bill at the last session of Congress was to embarrass President Coolidge and his Cabinet. The certainty that the measure would be vetoed in the form in which it was written was never doubted by those who had read the previous veto message.

Senator Borah, in addresses delivered in western cities within the last fortnight, and Ogden L. Mills, speaking recently in Boston, have counteracted the Treasury, viciously controverted the arguments presented by those who seek to emphasize the alleged unfriendly attitude of the Republican Party leaders toward agriculture as an industry. There is no such antagonism, even in the so-called industrial East. There is no opposition by the advocates of the protective tariff policy to imposing tariff duties on the products of the farm. But that is not the method proposed by the champions of farm relief legislation as outlined by the McNary-Haugen bill. That method, according to Mr. Mills, would, in effect, attempt to stabilize prices by a fictitious tax levied upon the product itself, to be paid, finally, by the consumer in the United States.

It is because of this and other reasons that the bill has not become a law. Because it has not, the champions of the measure now seem to have confused the theory of farm relief with the method by which it was sought to bring it about. There is no difference of opinion between leading Republicans and leading Democrats as to the necessity, from an economic standpoint, of stabilizing production and assuring a satisfactory market for the products of the farms. There remains, apparently, a difference as to methods, but this is hardly a political issue except as it is made so by those who choose to emphasize it in appealing to partisan prejudice.—Christian Science Monitor.

EAGLES FIGHT HUMAN FLIERS

The accompanying perils to those who wish to fly are quite apparent, to say nothing of the thrill that comes when certain stunts are persistently performed. But the thrill of flying over the Bernese Oberland of Europe has been considerably enhanced on several occasions by decidedly dangerous and doubly disconcerting attacks by eagles, according to those who have passed through these experiences.

Swooping from the rocky crannies behind Athens are huge eagles which seem determined to wage war upon any flying machine which dares to soar to their lofty domains; or presume to hover too closely to their proud preserves. Not long ago several attacked a high flying craft, one bird being struck by the propeller and killed. The impact so damaged the plane that the fliers were compelled to make a hurried flight to earth.

In another instance, assailed fiercely by an eagle, a pilot had one of the struts between his wings smashed and had to make a rapid as well as a perilous descent. In consequence of these frequent happenings, all air-men are being continually warned of this paramount danger when flying over the mountains.

While a pilot was crossing above the Pyrenees in a flight from Paris to Madrid not long ago, a very large eagle soared up and flew around the plane as though looking for a favorable place and possibly a vulnerable spot to attack, in this strange and noisy intruder of air and space. A movement of the pilot's head caught the bird's eye, when suddenly it swooped into a scrap, and was about to begin a battle. The airman had by this time drawn a pistol from a locker in his cockpit and as the bird darted in he fired at it. However, he did not hit the eagle, but he evidently disconcerted it, for the bird swerved off and dived out of sight. It will be remembered that once Lindbergh rapidly buckled a belt with a revolver in his pocket about him, when he was about to take one of those doubtful and dangerous flights to distant parts. Many wondered why, but probably he knew about these dangerous attacks and one needs to be prepared.

In another case an airman was attacked by an eagle at 8,000 feet. The infuriated bird followed him down to 2,000 feet and then charged at the plane pell-mell. The eagle's neck was broken by its contact with a wire and it fell dead in a field, while the airman gliding down, retrieved it and had it stuffed as a memento.

Not always are these lords of the mountains in a pugnacious mood. Some, when they sight an airplane, seem merely curious, while one, after flying level with a machine for some time and scrutinizing it closely, appeared to the pilot to challenge him to a high-flying contest. Up and up, at any rate, soared the splendid bird, and up, too, soared the human flier. Higher and higher they climbed, bird and plane. But at length the wings of the eagle seemed to flag, yet still the gallant birds struggled upward. Before long, however, he apparently reached his limit and ceasing to beat his wings, but holding them out stretched, he glided silently away, leaving the human flier master of flight and the airplane monarch of the air.

FEDERAL OFFICES ARE NOT INSURED

The United States Government does not carry fire insurance on any of its numerous buildings, such as the post-offices, army stations, forts, supply houses, the Treasury Building and all the other official buildings in Washington and throughout the country. Its holdings are so large that it is cheaper to rebuild those wasted by fire than to pay the premiums on the insurance.

This saving can be made by the Government because its property is so vast and because it is scattered over the entire country. While for the average company one fire might destroy the entire property or a large part of it, there would have to be many of them to cause as large a percentage of loss to the Government.

A Doubtful Compliment

An eminent gentleman was the guest of honor at a dinner party in one of our cities. The mayor presided, and when the dessert was being served he leaned over and touched the gentleman, saying: "Shall we let the people enjoy themselves a little longer, or had we better have your speech now?"—Clipped.

If girls realized how golden is refinement they would certainly retain their natural unaffected ways.—Miss Fay Marbe.

Charles Dickens, Animal Lover

In a very interesting article in The Times (London) on Charles Dickens by his sixth son, Sir Henry Dickens, K. C., Common Sergeant in the City of London, there appeared these paragraphs:

"I had an extraordinary letter only a short time ago in which I was seriously asked if it were true that my father had an objection to all animals except horses. A preposterous question. Nothing could be farther from the truth. He loved all domestic animals. So far as dogs are concerned, there were 'Turk,' the sweet-tempered mastiff; 'Linda,' the St. Bernard, who was brought, when a puppy, straight from the St. Bernard monastery, a gift from Albert Smith, who was at one time an Alpine climber; 'Bumble,' the Newfoundland, whose ludicrous blundering antics as a puppy used to convulse us with laughter; and 'Mrs. Bouncer,' the Pomeranian, who was his special favorite. There was another dog, 'Sultan,' an Irish bloodhound, given him by Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, whose end was tragic. He turned out to be very dangerous, and so had to be muzzled. His pet aversion was anything red; and when we met on the high road a company of soldiers marching from Gravesend to Chatham he used to dash into the midst of them and scatter them all over the road, though, being muzzled, he did them no harm. It was in consequence of this propensity that my father dubbed him 'The Fenian.' At last a little girl getting within reach of his chain in the yard, he made a ferocious dash at her, that it was impossible to keep him, and he had to be shot.

"For cats we had a delightfully companionable one called 'Wilhelmina,' who used to follow us in our short walks in the country lanes and run ahead of us like a dog.

"The horses comprised a strong horse, who used to do the heavy work, and the sprightly 'Newman Nogg,' with a hogged name, who was furnished with a set of bells, which used to ring a merry jingle as my father drove him along the country-side.

"For birds there were not only 'Grip,' the raven, and the goldfinch, but also a canary, who was buried in the garden with a headstone, which I hope still remains there, 'In memory of Dick, the best of birds.'"

Sir Henry says that it was his father's custom to spend "half an hour in the garden, smoking his cigar before settling down to work, looking at the flowers, playing with Mrs. Bouncer," my sister Mamie's dog.

"At some such idle moments, or rather, later in the day, I have stood beside him watching the trial of will between the raven, 'Grip,' the mastiff, 'Turk,' and the mastiff, 'Turk.' It was amusing to watch the triumph of one over matter. When the trial of will was brought to the dog, the raven, alert and waiting, would hop at once on to the dish with his eye fixed sideways on the dog and take his food entirely undisturbed, while the dog did not approach the tin until 'Grip' was an air of triumphant repletion, had nipped away. The raven, indeed, was a source of perpetual amusement to us. It was delightful to watch him going through the most absurd pretense of busily burying something in a particular spot, knowing well that we were watching him, covering the hole with earth in order to deceive us, and then surreptitiously burying it in an entirely different place."

Everyone knows of the fondness of Dickens for long walks with his dog. "He rarely went out without his dogs," says Sir Henry, "and I remember the villagers used to talk about Mr. Dickens with his roost of dogs, a quaint expression in that connection."

A Record Which Merits Continued Confidence

UNDER Republican administration for more than a quarter of a century, Delaware has taken her rightful place as one of the most progressive States of the Union.

Especially in Public Schools and Good Roads has this Commonwealth set a standard which has attracted nationwide attention and commendation.

Among her sister States, Delaware commands respect and admiration also because of what has been done for Public Health, for Public Welfare, for Public Libraries, for State Colleges and for various other purposes beneficially affecting the lives and the well-being of the people of Delaware.

Agriculture has not lacked for support, and the spending of $130,500 for Agricultural Purposes needs no other justification than the benefits derived by the farmers of Delaware.

A Proud Record of Accomplishment

To appreciate the growth in diversity and extent of Delaware's projects and activities—all for the good of the people as a whole—consider the difference between the meagre disbursement of $400,000 in 1900 (under Democratic rule) and the efficient and business-like handling of more than $8,000,000 during the last fiscal year by a Republican administration.

No better evidence of the changes in conditions in 1900 and 1928 could be offered than the data given in the table as follows:

1900—Democratic	1928—Republican	1900—Democratic	1928—Republican
$100,000 Free Public Schools	$2,500,000	$2,300 Public Health	$122,000
none New Public Schools	1,000,000	100 Public Libraries	10,500
none Improved Highways	2,500,000	1,500 Agriculture	130,500
55,000 Public Welfare	480,000	25,000 State Colleges	275,000

The Tariff Protects Your Pay Envelope

"The Republican Party has ever been the exponent of protection to all our people from competition with lower standards of living abroad. We have always fought for tariffs designed to establish this protection from imported goods. We also have enacted restrictions upon immigration for the protection of labor from the inflow of workers faster than we can absorb them without breaking down our wage levels.

"The Republican principle of an effective control of imported goods and of immigration has contributed greatly to the prosperity of our country. There is no selfishness in this defense of our standards of living. Other countries gain nothing if the high standards of America are sunk and if we are prevented from building a civilization which sets the level of hope for the entire world.

"A general reduction in the tariff would admit a flood of goods from abroad. It would injure every home. It would fill our streets with idle workers. It would destroy the returns to our dairymen, our fruit, flax, and livestock growers, and our other farmers."—Herbert Hoover's Acceptance Speech.

Christiana

The ladies of the Christiana M. E. Church are serving their poultry and oyster supper this (Wednesday) evening, beginning at five o'clock. These suppers have become famous for miles around. Always being well-cooked, well-served and most appetizing.

The Harvest Home service at Salem M. E. Church last Sunday afternoon was well attended, as such services generally are—giving as they do an opportunity to renew old acquaintances, recall old times and revisit old scenes. Rev. T. R. Van Dyke, of New Castle, was the special speaker for the occasion.

The members of the Presbyterian Aid Society and their friends were entertained at State Road Chapel by Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Dance last Wednesday evening. During the business session it was voted to donate ten dollars from the treasury to the Red Cross, for the benefit of hurricane sufferers in Porto Rico and Florida. Mrs. Frank Moody, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, presented the following program: Several songs by the society; recitation, Alice Walker; sketch, "Who's That Man?" by Mrs. Wm. H. McCoy and Mrs. Edward Weer; reading, Mrs. Dance; another sketch, "The Old Photograph Album," by Mrs. Moody and Mr. Thomas Appleby. The November meeting of the society will also be held at the chapel.

There was a good attendance at the annual Home-Coming service at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Charles H. Bohner, of Hanover Church, Wilmington, was the speaker, drawing a lesson, very appropriately, from the falling leaf. There was special music by Miss Heister and Mr. Crossan, both of Wilmington. The decorations, consisting largely of dahlias, zinnias and autumn leaves, were especially beautiful; they were arranged by a committee composed of Miss Florence M. Appleby and Miss Anna Moody. Many former members and friends of the old church were noticed in the audience, among them being Mrs. Mary E. Webber, of Wilmington, and her three daughters; Mrs. J. Ivin Dayett, of Cochr's Bridge, and Misses Elizabeth and Elsie Webber, of Wilmington; Mr. Thomas Donaldson, of the N. B. Danforth Co., Wilmington, with Mrs. Donaldson and her sister, Miss Beck; and Miss Nellie Appleby, of Hare's Corner.

Miss Edna Everson Cranston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson E. Cranston, of State Road, and Paul C. Millikin, of Reading, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Millikin, of Wilmington, were married in the Presbyterian Church at four o'clock last Saturday afternoon, the ceremony being performed by the pastor, Rev. Samuel L. Irvine. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Miss Mary Givison was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Helen Milliken, sister of the groom, Miss Nellie Cranston, of Stanton, an aunt of the bride, and Miss Eleanor Vinyard and Miss Elsie Hutch, of Philadelphia. The best man was Robert L. Millikin, brother of the groom, while the following acted as ushers: James Brown and Oliver Eperson, of Wilmington; Alvin Davis, of Chester, and Roger Cranston, brother of the bride. Miss Margaret E. Caulk, of Blackbird played the wedding march, and, preceding the ceremony, she also played "At Dawning" and "Indian Love Call." The church was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and bronze chrysanthemums. Following the ceremony at the church, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Millikin are now on a wedding trip in the South, travelling by motor; on their return they will make their home in Reading, where Mr. Millikin is Assistant Scout Executive of Reading and Berks County Boy Scouts.

A surprise party, in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Elizabeth Vincent, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Howell, last Saturday evening. The guests—children and grandchildren of Mrs. Vincent—were the following: Mr. Howard S. Vincent and family of Elkton, Md.; Robert H. Vincent, of Wilmington; Mr. John Hanna and family, of Christiana; Mr. Harry Appleby and family, of Red Lion; Mr. Homer H. Vincent and family, Mrs. Mary Rutter, and Mrs. Harry Cleaves and family, all of Christiana; and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howell and family. Mr. Alfred H. Vincent and family, also of Christiana, were on a motor trip to Niagara Falls and so were unable to be present. The party dispersed at a late hour, having spent a most enjoyable evening.

Mrs. James Appleby spent several days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Stille Chew, of Mantua, N. J. Mrs. Appleby was accompanied on her return by Mrs. Chew and Mrs. Cubit, an old friend of the family.

Rev. and Mrs. Clarence M. Prouse and daughters, Eunice and Doris, of Chalfont, Pa., were Mrs. Appleby's guests on Saturday. Mrs. Prouse will be remembered as Miss Priscilla Appleby, formerly of Christiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Smack and Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Waight, of Berlin, Md., and Mrs. C. A. Leasure, of Glasgow, were recent visitors at the home of Mrs. Leasure's daughter, Mrs. Olan J. Cleaver.

Moore, her son, John, Jr., her daughter, Elizabeth, and her mother, Mrs. Taylor, formerly of Holloway Terrace, motored to Washington, D. C., on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Cleaver and family were callers on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Birch, of Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ayars and son, Billy, were among the disappointed thousands who motored to Lakehurst, N. J., on Sunday, hoping to get a close-range view of the big German airship, the Graf Zeppelin. Mr. Ayars reports the worst traffic jam in his experience, with mile after mile of congested roads.

Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howell were: Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Howell and James Howell, all of Kemblesville, Pa.; Mrs. Harry Wiley, of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Calhoun, Miss Emma Calhoun, Miss Elizabeth Porter and Miss Mattie Jones, all of St. Georges.

Mrs. S. D. Moody and daughter, Ellen, of Bear Station, visited Mrs. George W. Davis on Tuesday.

Speaking of thrills—the people of Christiana had a real one on Monday afternoon, when the Graf Zeppelin passed almost directly over the village. Word had been received from time to time by radio of the giant ship's progress up the coast, so that folks were more or less on the lookout. And when it finally did appear, practically everybody was out-of-doors. The school adjourned to the cemetery across the road from the school-house, in order to get an unobstructed view of the huge airship, and excitement ran high among the pupils. It was a sight long to be remembered by young and old, and this part of Delaware was certainly fortunate in having so splendid a view of the great ship which thousands of people traveled so many miles to see.

Delaware with full Republican representation in a Republican Senate, working in sympathy with a Republican administration.

"One of the most important reasons for the election of Governor Townsend, and a Republican Senate, with a substantial majority is the maintenance of the party's policy of tariff protection. Ex-Governor Townsend is an ardent believer in that policy. Under such laws, Delaware has prospered.

"Without adequate tariff, many of Delaware's business enterprises would be ruined, the wages of its workers would be reduced, or entirely cut off through unemployment, and the living standards of its people would be seriously menaced. Deprived of protection, products of Delaware's farms and factories would suffer ruinous competition with similar products produced by foreign countries, with cheaper labor and at lower production costs than is possible in this country.

"A Republican Senate during the past eight years has insisted on preserving adequate protection, and will continue that policy as long as it has a majority in that body.

"The election of ex-Governor Townsend to the Senate, therefore, is vitally important to the citizens of Delaware, now happily and gainfully employed, as a result of the benefits protection has brought to industry, labor and agriculture.

"What would happen to Delaware under Democratic plans to revise the tariff downward? There would be an immediate decrease in market values of products of Delaware's farms, orchards, canneries, iron and steel plants, foundries and machine shops and fisheries, and scores of other business enterprises. Decrease in market values would force wage reductions and unemployment.

"A vote for ex-Governor Townsend will be a vote to keep out of American markets, low priced products made with cheap labor in foreign countries. It will be a vote to assure reasonable profits for industry, high wages for labor, and to preserve the high living standards which protection has made possible.

"The Republican policy of protection means that foreign manufacturers of similar commodities must pay a tariff toll for the privilege of selling in American markets.

"This is the foundation of the prosperity of our business enterprises. Protection, is, in turn, responsible for the ability of industry to pay good wages, permitting wage earners to live well, enjoy life and give their families the advantages that go with our standard of living.

"What would Democratic Senators do for Delaware's industries, farmers and wage-earners?

"Democratic Senators are perfectly willing to permit the sale of more foreign goods, similar to those produced in Delaware, by lowering the tariff. Clearly, if more foreign competition is allowed fewer goods made in Delaware will be sold in American markets. This would mean less work and lower earnings for Delaware's citizens. It would mean fewer wage-earners in Delaware and less wages to spend.

"A vote for ex-Governor Townsend will be a vote to protect the pocket-books of Delaware's business men, producers and workmen. A vote for ex-Governor Townsend will be a vote to sustain the protective tariff principle. A vote for Governor Townsend will be a vote against the plainly devised program of Democratic Senators to effect tariff reduction with all of its ruinous consequences."

with complete first-aid material and a well-stocked medicine chest. No one knows when the need will arise for their use. The vital few moments before the doctor comes may spell life or death.

In most instances the community drug store is the first to open in the morning and the last to close at night. Generally, the community druggist is prepared to answer night emergency calls just the same as a physician.

Every druggist has to keep on hand at all times hundreds of rare and costly drugs that may not be required for months at a time. The more valuable they are the more they must be guarded against deterioration. There are very few drugs that improve with age.

The druggist is the distributing agent of hundreds upon hundreds of articles that prevent disease. Insurance statistics prove that science has added eighteen years to the span of life. In this great work the druggist has played an important part. The community druggist is your friend in sickness and in health and he deserves the greatest confidence and continued patronage.
