

Dam regulations include city reservoir

elaware Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control Secretary Collin P. O'Mara has issued a Secretary's Order approving Delaware Dam Safety Regulations for the state's 53 publicly-owned dams with high or significant hazard classifications.

The designation is related to the potential impact of a dam failure and not the actual condition of the dam.

The order adopts the final regulations and becomes effective on Dec. 11.

Structures covered include the Newark Reservoir dam. The safety issue surfaced in a dispute between the City of Newark and a contractor for the reservoir. A financial settlement was reached and the reservoir was later completed by another contractor. The city insists there are no safety issues with the reservoir.

"Delaware Dam Safety Regulations address the 2004 legislative mandate (House Bill 514) that established a program and required regulations that detail the requirements and responsibilities of public dam owners to keep their structures in a safe condition," said O'Mara. "With the increasing impacts from floods and rising sea levels expected to stress the state's existing dam infrastructure, the regulations are extremely important to safeguard lives and property and protect our natural resources."

The new regulations establish requirements for proper design, construction, operation, maintenance, and inspection for dams subject to the regulations and enhance DNREC's authority to ensure the requirements are fulfilled. The regulations require dam owners and agencies to See RESERVIOR. 9

The Newark Reservoir's dam is one of more than 50 that will come under revised state regulations.

Winehouse doesn't want to be a tavern the Stone Balloon Winehouse, offers fine dining, it is, legally speaking, a tavern. Those under 21 are turned away.

For new Delaware residents, the unusual designation can cause confusion, since high-end restaurants elsewhere normally lack such restrictions.

The designation became legendary almost in Wilmington when the nowclosed Pala's, which car-ried the sign "World's Worst Pizza," routinely sent families away. Reportedly those turned away included Gov. "Pete" DuPont and family.

The license is also a legacy of the former Stone Balloon, a well-known night club in Newark, that featured performers like Bruce Springsteen. That building was razed to make way for the condo complex and the Winehouse, which opened Newark Police were called in for a property theft report at Toyota World, on Marrows Rd., last week. A transport truck driver, Bryan Dean, of Pequa, Pa., told police that someone had taken his wallet, iPhone, and yellow rain coat from his unsecured vehicle, as he was inside the business.

Video surveillance clearly showed a white male driving a blue Saturn Vue, pulling up to the driver's side of the truck and opening the door. The Saturn then pulled forward and backed up to the passenger side door to open it. The Saturn pulled off the lot and exited onto Marrows Road.

As Dean was calling his bank to cancel his credit cards, he received a notice of a purchase for $970.93 at the K-Mart at College Square Shopping Center, located across the street from Toyota World. Police waited in the parking lot, near the Saturn, to question its owner, Edward Geller, of Newark. Police questioned Geller and searched his vehicle, revealing several stolen items, including store merchandise and Dean's wallet, and the receipt for the $970.93 purchase. Geller stated that his girlfriend was still in the store. Police picked up the woman, Diane Bryant, who was discovered to be Geller's older sister, not his girlfriend.

Police questioned her and performed a personal search, which revealed several stolen items of jewelry and Dean's stolen credit cards. A background check on Bryant showed she had two active capiases from Courts 10 and 11 for missed court dates and payments. Geller claimed that he had permission to get the wallet and that the matter was a matter of miscommunication.

An additional search of his car revealed two GPS monitors that are believed to be linked to vehicles thefts near Geller's residence. Geller was charged with Burglary Third Degree, Theft Under $1,500, and Unlawful Use of Credit Cards Under $1,500. Bryant was charged with Shoplifting Under $1,500.

Dining manager robbed

University of Delaware Police are investigating the robbery of a Dining Services manager that occurred at approximately 11:20 p.m., Wednesday, near the Morris Library.

The manager was leaving the Bleecker Street Café in the library with the nightly receipts. As she unlocked her van door, a man approached her from the south part of the parking lot and demanded the money bag she was carrying. She turned over the bag, which was unsecured and contained an undisclosed amount of cash. The suspect fled west on foot. The victim was not injured.

Before the report of the incident, a UD police officer assigned to the library observed a man who matched the suspect's description run across South College Avenue to Winslow Road, where he got into a dark colored vehicle, which made a U-turn and fled the area

The suspect is described as a black man in his early 20s, approximately 5 feet 9 inches to 5 feet 10 inches tall, with an average build. He was last seen wearing a dark colored hooded jacket of material heavier than a hoodie. He seamed to have his head cocked to the right, as he had either ear buds or a Bluetooth device. Anyone with information is asked to contact University Police at (302) 831-2222

Suspects take backpack

Newark Police are investigating a daylight robbery that left a student without a backpack.

On Monday at around 1:25 p.m., a University of Delaware student was walking on the sidewalk along South College Avenue near Winslow Road, in the area of the University's Morris Library.

Without any warning or conversation, and without the victim being aware of their presence, two people approached him from behind and pulled the backpack off his back. The suspects ran onto Winslow Road and cut into back yards of houses along the street. The victim gave chase, but lost sight of the suspects while they were in the yards. A K-9 from the Delaware State Police assisted with a track, which ended unsuccessfully near the intersection of Orchard Road and Kent Way.

The backpack contained a laptop computer, a text book, calculator, and other school supplies. The estimated total value of the stolen property is $1,320.

The two suspects are similarly described as white males, 20 to 24 years of age, around 5' 9" tall, weighing 160 to 180 lbs, with average builds. Both were described as "scruffy", or having short beards. One wore a baggy black sweat suit; the other a baggy brown sweat suit. Both wore knit winter hats.

The victim, a 19-year-old male, was not injured.

Bank robberv arrests

A Wilmington man has joined a Newark resident in arrests related to the robbery of a WSFS Bank branch on Concord Pike in north Wimington on Nov. 2nd.

Suspects were identified as: - David Elswick, 34, of 233 South Dillwyn Road, Newark. - Joseph Donahue, 34, of S. Elizabeth Street in Wilmington, Delaware. Delaware State Police reported their investigators have been working to bring this case to a close, and Wednesday, the second suspect was arrested. On the day of the incident, a white male entered the bank and Donahue presented a demand note to the victim / teller. The teller complied and the suspect fled the bank with an undisclosed amount of money.

Tips were received by investigators over the coming days and Elswick was arrested on November 5th. He was formally charged with Robbery and Conspiracy (both felonies). He was committed to the Howard Young Correctional Institute in lieu of a $12,000 secured bail.

As the investigation continued, it was later learned that a second suspect was involved-Joseph Donahue. Donahue was allegedly the get-away driver and used his wife's Volvo to drive Elswick to and from the bank

On December 2nd, Donahue was located in the parking lot of Cosmos Diner on Maryland Avenue, near Wilmington. He was taken into custody without incident and transported back to Troop 2, Glasgow, for processing. He was formally charged with Robbery and Conspiracy (both felonies). He was committed to the Howard Young Correctional Institute in lieu of an $8,000.00 secured bond.

Thefts of opportunity reported

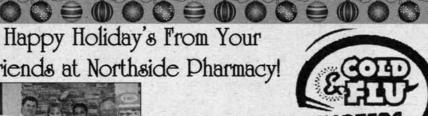

Investigators from the Delaware State Police Auto Theft Unit have noticed that many stolen vehicles are being taken with a key left in the vehicle.

Similar reports have been cropping up at other departments.

In a related matter, Newark Police reported that 10 parked cars had windows broken over the weekend, perhaps due to sought-after items being in plain view.

Italian-born conductor steps up to podium

In its quest to find a replacement music director for retiring Maestro Roman Pawlowski, the Newark Symphony Orchestra is set to showcase the 2nd of four Guest Conductors on December 13. This time Italian born conductor, composer, musicologist, and vocal coach Simeone Tartaglione will take the baton.

Born in Agrigento, Sicily, Simeone has been studying music for three decades and has been a conductor since 2003. He trained in the European tradition for ten years at the St. Cecilia Conservatory in Rome to earn the title of conductor and spent two years at the Peabody Institute in Baltimore refining his craft.

"Since I was a child I always looked to the U.S. as a fascinating country full of opportunities, enthusiasm, freedom, courage, a place where it matters what you are able to do, not who you know, to help your career. Italy is a beautiful country, but conducting jobs are not many and the few of them are not even posted, but assigned mainly by politicians and, unfortunately, not always according to musical qualities. So I started to think to move on this side of the ocean. In 2004 my best friend heard about a conducting position in Denver and he applied for the two of us. I won and here I am. I never forget the generosity of a true friend ... "

Simeone and the other guest conductors, Nicole Aldrich, Dimitar Nikolov, and Jeremy Gill, started the application process early in 2009 when they, along with a large number of other hopefuls, submitted their resumes and supporting materials to the Newark Symphony Orchestra. The four chosen candidates will each conduct a symphony concert during the 2009 – 2010 season. A new music director will be announced in the summer of 2010.

"Conducting is connecting with people through emotions mostly without words. It is almost magic, there is such energy while playing together that I cannot find in any other activity."

While Simeone views the NSO as "being a strong protagonist in the community and an extremely successful reality", he feels that he has something to offer to the Orchestra itself if he is selected. "I think I can bring something interesting that can combine American and European traditions. The principal purpose of an orchestra is always to elevate the audience's spirits in the community and connect to Good and Beauty. I will be happy to further develop the orchestra image and impact in DE. I have several ideas for collaborating with other local institutions that share the love for Arts and common benefit. I am a strong believer and enthusiastic supporter of educational and outreach programs. In my past experience, projects that involve young generations are of enormous value, extremely rewarding and, in the long run, secure audience and orchestra stability. I have seen many NSO members sharing this belief and love,. If I'll be the selected one, I am sure together we could develop memorable programs that will benefit our area in many ways." Simeone has enjoyed the three months he has spent with the Orchestra. He is having fun and says "The enthusiasm, joy of playing and will to improve is really amazing me. Even if we work very hard for two and one-half hours at the end, I see smiling people, players who still ask about the pieces and a contagious joyful atmosphere. I like so much to see how everyone works honestly to make things better and easier without the dangerous competition and stress I've seen in other orchestras."

The NSO will be performing on December 13 at 3 p.m. at the Independence School in Newark, DE. The concert will consist of The Moldau which is one of the most famous pieces with an unforgettable romantic melody; the beautiful and seldom performed Gliere's horn concerto which combines influences of Tchaikovsky and

Word needs to get out on foreclosure program

To: Editor

From: John Kowalko, State Rep., Newark John.kowalko@state.de.us

The number of mortgage foreclosure complaints in Delaware is expected to total over 6,000 in 2009 and estimated to exceed 7,000 next year. This is an alarming number, frightening for those homeowners and devastating to the economic stability of the state.

Fortunately in Delaware, responsibility responsibility has been accepted notably by Superior Court President Judge James Vaughn and his colleagues. On November 17, the New York Times published an article on the mortgage foreclosure crisis in Philadelphia and a program implemented a year ago that brings "the mortgage holder and the lender to the table" with the borrower and housing counselors. Other cities such as Pittsburgh, Chicago and Boston are considering similar efforts.

The good news for Delaware is that on August 31, Judge Vaughn signed an administrative directive of the Delaware Superior Court to implement a very similar program here. This program was a result of an intense nine-month series of meetings to ensure that the final product would include input, compromise and general consensus among a varied group of participants, including community activist groups, bankers, lenders, housing counseling agencies, the sheriff's departments from all three counties, legislators and other stakeholders. Delaware ACORN was instrumental in bringing all parties together with a determination and a singular goal of helping those who most needed help.

The final product was a result of intense negotiations, compromises and some critical innovative thinking in order to satisfy the challenge Judge Vaughn laid before us. The program applies to mortgage foreclosure actions filed on or after September 15, 2009. The property subject to foreclosure must be the primary residence to qualify, the borrower must show that the borrower can make monthly payments on the mortgage that do not exceed 38 percent of monthly income. In order to do this, the housing counselor can lower the percentage rate on the mortgage to as low as 2 percent and extend the term of the mortgage to a maximum of 40 years.

Unfortunately, the message that there is such a program available, at no cost to the taxpayer, has not resonated with those homeowners affected. In spite of hundreds of notices being sent out each month and posted on the doors of the residencies facing foreclosure the participation rate has been two in September, one in October and two in November.

We are currently left at a critical juncture that will require a public awareness campaign - through the media, word of mouth and a good neighbor policy - that encourages you to talk to your neighbor who is in this position. Let them know that there is such a no-cost program available that might ultimately allow them to keep their home. Let them know that there is no risk and there is a glimmer of hope. The ultimate success can only be realized if they participate.

Waiting out the fate of Notch Babies

By ELBERT CHANCE

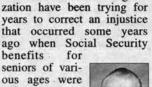

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

Editor's note: Chance is a longtime columnist for the Newark Post

Do you know what a Notch Baby is?

For several years now, I have received mailings from the The Senior Citizens League, a national organization with its principal office in Alexandria, Virginia. Notch Babies are among its major concerns.

TSCL officials, through lobbying and the dissemination of relevant information, attempt to ensure that governmental units such as the Social Security Administration and the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid meet their commitments than those assigned to other seniors who have similar work and earnings records. It has long been recognized that this difference is unfair, but concerned citizen groups have been unable, and Congress has been unwilling, to correct the discrepancy.

cers of The Senior Citizens League have persuaded members of Congress to introduce bills in both the House and Senate that address this inequity in benefits through either a lump sum or an appropriate increase in Social Security payments. A number of senators and representatives appear to recognize the fairness of the proposed adjustments and, in the last session of Congress, 126 members signed on as co-sponsors of a bill authorizing the settle-on the unrealistic hopes of vulnerable elderly citizens.

Perhaps we should not be surprised. There do not appear to be many "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" type legislators in Washington willing to put their careers on the line for a good cause. Those who inhabit the halls of Congress undoubtedly realize that all they have to do is lend a sympathetic ear to supporters of the cause, offer encouragement and wait. Victims are dying off rapidly. The few who remain have little voting power and, consequently, relatively little influence. And, after all, the money that would undoubtedly help deserving citizens in our own country would then be available to pour down another Middle East sinkhole.

demonstrate that dams are being properly maintained and meet modern safety standards and include specific responsibilities a dam owner must implement to ensure ongoing safety.

Under Delaware law, only publicly-owned dams with high or significant hazard classification are subject to the regulations.

In 2008, a Delaware Dam Inventory was completed and used to determine that 53 of the state's publicly-owned dams met the classification requirements for regulation under Delaware law.

Modeled after national dam safety program guidelines, the new regulations were developed with guidance from a 17-member Dam Safety Regulatory Advisory Committee, comprised of federal, state and local agency experts and dam owners. As required by the Delaware Dam Safety Act, four meetings with the regulatory advisory committee were held, as well as, a public workshop on Dec. 11, 2008 and a public hearing on April 27, 2009.

In 2007, the agency was awarded state funding to develop Emergency Action Plans for Delaware's highest priority, state-owned, high hazard dams. The Emergency Action Plans for these dams will be completed in 2010.

What goes under the tree in a tough economy?

By MARIA PIPPIDIS

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

It is hard to wrap up that new roof, refrigerator, or bookcase and put it under the Christmas tree or in the stocking. Many people I have talked to are putting their money into home projects or toward goals they have set, and are downsizing holiday spending. So how do you make the holidays special when the "big" gift isn't a surprise? As I talked with friends and colleagues, they had a variety of fun and creative answers.

"Make memories!" was one person's answer. When we think back to happy holidays in the past, do we remember the food and presents or the people and happenings? No, most of us remember the traditions, people, and the experiences we had. So when thinking about how to make the holidays special, continuing traditions like caroling as a family or driving through the neighborhoods that are all lit up can be inexpensive ways to spend quality holiday time together.

If you don't have traditions, start some. Ask your partner what they'd like to do. You may be surprised what comes up as important or as an idea for just you two or as a whole family activity. You could put some parameters around it like: it should be something new, or no kids allowed, or it needs to be something outdoors, or adult friends can be invited. It could be volunteering, spending time together decorating, making ornaments, writing the family holiday letter, hanging the lights, baking cookies for the neighbors and delivering them, taking a walk at the park, creating holiday cards, or making gifts for others.

Being creative was a big theme for those I talked to. "As the parents, we don't exchange expensive gifts, but we do wrap up something that expresses our love for each other," said one colleague. When pressed for an example, he said, "A special bag of coffee, a framed photo of a happy event that happened over the year, a little something that reflects a secret joke we have together, or a coupon for a back rub or running a hot bath." One year when they re-pointed the chimney, he received a BIG bow wrapped around fire starters for the fireplace.

"We treat ourselves to an evening out," said another. "We normally don't go out to the movies or out to an expensive restaurant for meals. We treat each other with a date night and plan on going after the holidays when we can really enjoy ourselves." This fits nicely into the idea of creating memories, and also provides some down and away time from the children and other household demands. "We exchange outrageous gifts. The idea is to see who can make the other laugh the most. We always set a dollar limit of $20 and then sometimes we set a theme like kitchen gadgets, artwork, most ugly item or "what the heck does it do." She went on to say that they surprise each other with that one thing under the tree.

"I have a spouse who says all he wants is to be together and really doesn't care what we do or where we go," said one woman in a recent workshop. "So I plan some activities that I know we both will enjoy; like going to Longwood Gardens or traveling to Rehoboth for a weekend in January. That way we've carved out time for just us and we're doing things we both enjoy."

All these ideas reflect the notion of reconnecting to what is meaningful and important for you as a couple and as a family. As you think about the holiday season and the love you have for your family and partner, coming up with original, fun and relationshipbuilding gift ideas won't be difficult. With a little creativity, these ideas can be "wrapped up" and presented during the holidays.

St. Mark's coach reflects on successful season

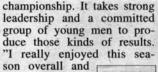

By JON BUZBY

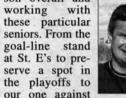

JONBUZBY@HOTMAIL.COM

Following its 27-20 loss in the Division I State Tournament finals, Spartans coach John Wilson reflected on the championship game and his team's season:

"As difficult as the loss was to Sallies, I left the field feeling very proud of the way our team fought until the very end.

"We are very proud of what our seniors have accomplished. In three years, this group has won 24 games, including three playoff games. They appeared in two semifinals and one state our one against A.I. to get us to the championship, our season was built on never giving up, even when the odds were stacked against us. I guess you can say this was a team made up of a lot of fighters and overachievers. We were never short on effort, and that is what I am most proud of." "Not winning the championship brings about a certain level of disappointment, but it is with greater disappointment that our journey with the players has come to an end."

Newark High's new coach gets first win

Winning always came easy for Shannon McCants as a player on Newark High's dominant teams in the late 1980s. His Yellowjacket teams made it to the semifinals of the state tournament in all four years he played, winning it all in 1987 and '90.

Last Friday night, Coach McCants picked up his first of what he hopes will be many wins back at his alma mater, leading the Yellowjackets to a 51-42 win over Howard Vo-Tech in both teams' season opener.

"I thought the game would never end," McCants said. "I was waiting for that final horn and when it finally sounded I felt so happy for the students, fans, players and community who came out to support us."

Senior forward Ronnell Hammond led the Yellowjackets with 12 points, while senior Brian Knight chipped in with nine. With his first win under with his first win under his belt, McCants can now focus on bigger dreams for his team on the court, like getting them back to the state championship-caliber level he experienced as a player. But the rookie coach is also smart enough to realize it's not all about wins and losses at this level.

"I have been preaching class work, teamwork, hard work and fun," McCants said. "For the season to be a success I would want the kids to say that they learned a lot from me and the coaching staff about how to be productive students on and off the court.

"Regardless of wins and losses, I want all the kids stay out of trouble and to think about going to college. That is the blueprint for trying to be successful young men."

wenty-one freshmen who enrolled in a University of Delaware First Year Experience (FYE) personal finance course, "The Most Important Grade You Ever Earn," received sobering advice about responsible use of credit cards during a presentation on by two officials from Bank of America on Thursday, Nov. 19.

The presentation by Lisa Thornton, senior vice president and business support executive, and Connie Montana, assistant vice president and corporate social responsibility project manager, started with a video clip from Saturday Night Live, "Don't Buy Stuff You Can't Afford," which emphasized saving for purchases instead of running up credit card debt.

"You will be graded throughout your life; you will be graded once a month from a credit perspective," Thornton told the students.

All first-year students at UD participate in the FYE program, designed to help them succeed academically and socially in their first year at the University. All incoming bachelor and associate degree undergraduate students are required to register and successfully complete at least one FYE course.

Transfer students who registered and successfully completed at least one semester at another college or university are exempt, but certain first year seminars are required in the curriculum of particular majors regardless of transfer credits.

The lesson, which was taken by more than 20 different freshman classes during the semester, was presented by UD's Center for Economic Education and Entrepreneurship (CEEE).

During the presentation, the students participated in a true or false quiz that covered key points about credit card debt, including the fact that making minimum payments of $10 for an $800 purchase with annual interest of 18 percent would pay off the debt in 14 years and nine months with total payments of $2,034.

"Consumer credit was originally used to purchase expensive items. Good debt is that used for durables, such as furniture, appliances or education," Thornton said. "If you wear it, eat it or drink it, don't use a credit card to buy it."

Jill Leabman, a cognitive science major from West Hartford, Conn., said the lesson gave her very useful information.

"I didn't know all those things before. Nobody talked to me about all that; I learned something," Leabman said. "What I learned most about is whether to choose between paying for something up front or paying minimum payments every month."

Norma Gaines-Hanks, associate professor of human development and family studies, said many first year students -- and perhaps most college students -- do not recognize how easy it is to make uninformed financial decisions that can impact them long after they have left college

"The example of the person buying an $800 stereo and paying the minimum due each month was eye-opening," Gaines-Hanks said. "If nothing else, I think when considering a big ticket purchase, the students will either save some money first or at least pay more than the minimum due. That's a lesson from which we can all benefit, regardless of our age."

tion of high energy and skill on offense, while Lindsay played a calmer, more controlled game on defense. Neither was ever satisfied with their performance, always believing that they could be better."

McDaniel named Outstanding Athlete

The sport is really irrelevant. For Deborah McDaniel, participating in Special Olympics means so much more than hitting a tennis ball or dribbling a basketball. Like all of her Special Olympics teammates, her greatest pride comes from proving that she can play sports just like anyone else.

And it's that attitude, along with over 20 years experience competing in several sports, which has earned McDaniel the honor of Special Olympics Delaware Outstanding Athlete.

"I am honored to have been selected," says McDaniel, 37, who resides on her own in Bear. "When I first heard I was chosen I was surprised and shocked, and I still can't seem to stop smiling."

McDaniel has tried just about every sport the organization offers, but currently competes in basketball, roller skating, bowling, tennis and golf. "I think what I enjoy most about tennis is that it's an individual sport," she says of her favorite sport. "There are no substitutions in tennis so I never have to sit out."

But despite enjoying an individual sport the most, McDaniel takes great pride in supporting her teammates. "I'm a good athlete, but I'm a great teammate," she says.

survey, the formula at one time became so popular that it rose to the top of pharmacy sales for topical pain relievers. But the company marketing the product at the time changed the formula and sales plummeted. One of the inventors of the original formula has brought it back to the market under the trade name ARTH ARREST and says it can relieve pain for millions.

ARTH ARREST works by a dual mechanism whereby one ingredient relieves pain immediately, while a second ingredient seeks out and destroys the pain messenger signal before it can be sent to the brain. Considered a medical miracle by some, the ARTH ARREST formula is useful in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more. Trustees holding meeting at newly acquired plant site

By MARK CORRIGAN

MCORRIGAN@CHESPUB.COM

The University of Delaware Board of Trustees, Tuesday night, marked the purchase of the Chrysler site by holding one of its two annual meetings at the shuttered complex.

The meeting, entitled "Pathway to Prominence", brought together members of the Executive Committee to discuss and plan the next steps the university will take in the next school year and for the future of the 272-acre facility that was purchased in October.

The Grounds and Buildings Committee reported that the newly purchased property at 83 E. Main St., which will become a new university bookstore, is scheduled to be completed in 2011. The store gives UD breathing room, after the university welcomed its largest freshman class in the school's history last fall. The committee stated that book reservations increased by 713 from last year to 5,417. The new bookstore will allow more students to reserve textbooks, resulting in a faster and more efficient distribution network.

Affairs The Academic Committee reported that the average salary of graduates from the class of 2009 was $46,111. The largest numbers of jobs were within the health services, education, and business sectors. The largest employers of these graduates were Christiana Health Care System and Bank of America.

The Finance Committee reported that the university is holding onto $241 million of bond debt. These variable rate bonds are from the 1998, 2001A and 2001B issuances. There is a plan in place to move 50 percent or more of this debt into fixed rate bonds, reported the finance chairman. The committee also stated that the endowment, as of August 2009, was $1.223 billion, down from $1.479 billion in August 2008. The budget for 2010 is reported to be $820.5 million.

UD President Patrick Harker outlines the university's vision for the Chrysler site.

The meeting ended with a Holiday Celebration on the floor of the Assembly Plant, complete with guided tours of the factory floor. The affair brought together representatives from the university, local and county governments, and the governor's office. Lt. Governor Matt Denn welcomed the attendees and voiced his enthusiasm for next step in the university's evolution.

Video messages from U.S. Vice President Joe Biden and Gov. Jack Markell told of their immense pride and confidence in the university's contributions to helping in the economic recovery of Newark and Delaware.

UD President Patrick Harker discussed the future of the 272acre site and its possible transformation into a facility that will house a medical school with partners Thomas Jefferson University's Medical College, Christiana Care Health System, and Nemours.

The project, named the Delaware Health Sciences Alliance, was introduced by speaker Kathleen S. Matt, Something terrible happens when

Dean of the College of Health Sciences at UD, and leader of the Alliance.

Matt said that the university is dedicated in providing education for its students and will "translate that learning into real experiences." Matt further stated that the facility will assist in generating the "next generation of healthcare leaders.

to the plant is the housing of graduate studies programs that are done in association with Aberdeen Proving Grounds' Base Realignment and Closure project (BRAC). With their close working relationship with the U.S. Army and the Defense Department and the University of Delaware being the closest major education center to the base, UD had already tailored their graduate and certificate programs to meet the demands. of the BRAC protocols.
