The trusses were donated to us by Chesapeake Steel Co., Inc., of Baltimore. Plotts stated "They will support the wooden walkway and provide handrails."

Two members of the Glasgow Home Demonstration Club, Mrs. Robert Davis and Mrs. William H. Johnson, both of Newark, received top honors in a nationwide essay contest on the role of land-grant colleges or universities in our state during the past century.

Announcement of the award was made at the 26th annual National Home Demonstration Council meeting at the University of Kentucky.

Federal extension home demonstration clubs from 40 states make up the NHD, and more than 7,000 women attend the convention.

The essay contest sponsored by the national council was in connection with the convention theme "Partners in Progress," emphasizing cooperation between home demonstration clubs and the land-grant college system.

The Delaware entry was chosen from a field of 66 essays from 30 states. Each state was eligible to submit the best three entries in a statewide contest.

Other Delaware entries included Mrs. Joan Hart, Chestnut Hill Estates Home Demonstration Club, and Mrs. Marsha R. Baird, Woodland Club.

The Glasgow Club's essay reads in part:

"A Delaware homemaker discusses the Berlin crisis with her daughter vacationing from the University of Delaware but busily trying to complete a tailored suit, her project in textiles and clothing for this semester. The homemaker's attention was focused upon Berlin by a report given by the international relations chairman at the home demonstration club meeting yesterday. Through the window of her kitchen she can watch her husband spraying the apple orchard according to recommendations made at the university. Her son, a high school senior, is feeding broilers which he hopes to add to the fund he is saving toward expenses at the university next year.

"This family is one of millions in the United States whose lives are influenced by the vision of lawmakers a century ago. In particular, Justin Smith Morrill of Vermont. It was he who, 100 years ago, conceived the idea of people's colleges to provide greater educational opportunities and to promote the liberal and practical education in the several pursuits and professions of life for the working classes of just ordinary people."

Rankin To Seek Bids For Cost To Renovate School Property

Council Endorses Mayor's Offer To Obtain Cost Bids For Use Of New London School Property As Community Center; Barksdale Road, Aetna Water Mains Considered

Bids are to be sought to determine cost for renovating the New London School property for use as a community center; requested provision of city water for Barksdale Road residents and the new Aetna fire station on Oglethorpe Road was referred to the municipal water committee for prompt attention; and with a petition from Ray Street residents, a 15 mph speed limit is to be established on this street, as the result of action taken at the regular meeting of Newark City Council last Tuesday night.

Mayor Carl S. Rankin's proposal to obtain bids for construction costs concerned with the use of the former New London School property as a "full-fledged community center," was endorsed unanimously by council in view of estimates for such renovation ranging from $7,000 to $70,000.

Tentative plans for use of this property as a community center as recommended by the Newark Planning Commission and outlined by Rankin, include a check of the heating system; fireproofing of the building; a new exit for the large room to the west to accommodate 100 people; plaster replacement; over-all painting; outdoor lighting to curb vandalism; rebuilding of two flights of steep concrete steps for safe use by senior citizens; a new driveway; and a parking area for 50 cars.

Theta Chi Delegate

The Alpha Xi chapter of Theta Chi fraternity at the University of Delaware has chosen Russell L. Childress, Jr., 180 South College Avenue, Newark, as its representative to the 106th anniversary convention, at the University of Washington in Seattle, Sept. 5-8, where he will join representatives from 19 other chapters for a School of Fraternity Practices. The school is designed to instruct undergraduate members in making their fraternity chapters more effective as a part of the college educational program.

Theta Chi, founded at Norwich University in 1856, has a membership of 55,000.

Russell is a counselor at Camp Sloane YMCA, Lakeville, Conn., for his third summer. He is in charge of the athletic program.

During his first year at the University of Delaware, Russ played freshman football but injury of an old knee ailment sustained in his high school football career, compelled him to give up this sport. Last year he was a member of the varsity wrestling team.

A junior at Delaware this fall, he is treasurer of his fraternity.

Variance In Estimates

Rankin reported an estimate of $20,000 to cover such costs, but said he felt this estimate was too low. Councilman Joseph A. Shields said that he had heard of an estimate of $7,000 to renovate what he termed a building improperly designed for a good recreation center, with insufficient floor space; and City Manager J. Francis Neide cited an "ultimate estimate of $70,000" for costs in such renovation.

Councilman Charles J. Schneider endorsed the mayor's proposal to seek necessary bids for presentation to council, and council agreed.

Residents of Barksdale Road, requesting provision of city water, reported willingness to pay $2 per front foot assessment charges for installation of what is to be part of a 12-inch loop already recommended for completion by 1963.

A resident reported living on Barksdale Road for 35 years with "water all around us, and we still don't have any, and in response to Neide's question, councilman immediate need for water in this area, a spokesman replied "people are borrowing water from neighbors and hauling it in from other places—the race track, and the Chrysler plant."

Inconsistency

Councilman William M. Coverdale cited inconsistency of the city's financial embarrassment with inability to provide a water main to serve residents within the city while a case concerning municipal right to extend water sale facilities into the county was pending before the Public Service Commission.

Coverdale referred to a section of the city charter which provides for borrowing money against anticipated revenue, but Neide said "it is not necessary to borrow for this particular expenditure," reporting a current surplus of $32,700 in municipal funds.

Councilman Henry R. Folsom, Jr., asked if there were other areas within the city limits where water was needed, and Neide reported an estimated $10,000 expenditure required for water and sewer extensions to serve the new Aetna fire station on Oglethorpe Road, and $1,000 for another municipal well within the next year.

Shields cited past council action in "finding money" for street paving and other projects, and stressed "these people want water — a necessity for life" in urging immediate, favorable action for Barksdale Road residents.

The mayor pointed out that people concerned had suffered from an unusually dry summer, but that relief was to be expected with normal, pending rainfall at this time of the year, and promised that they wouldn't be forgotten with referral to the problem to the water committee and subsequent attention by council at its next regular meeting in two weeks.

Councilwoman Betty M. McClenahan scheduled a meeting of the water committee for next Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Concerning petition from Ray Street residents for a 15 mph speed limit, Police Chief Arthur S. Hausler reported that there was a "tendency to speed" in this area with resurfacing of the street, and City Solicitor F. Allyn Cooch, Jr., reported a resolution establishing the 15 mph limit.

Douglas MacArthur

FROM THE PAGES OF
THE NATIONAL OBSERVER

GENERAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S

"DUTY, HONOR AND COUNTRY"

A patriot's quietly-spoken convictions can thunder louder than a giant fire-cracker. Such a detonation occurred on May 12, 1962, when General of The Army Douglas MacArthur addressed the cadets of the Military Academy at West Point upon his acceptance of the Sylvanus Thayer Award for service to his nation. A few words of this stirring address were enough to inspire the editors of The National Observer with the realization that here was more than a speech, here was more than a passing headline. General MacArthur literally had spoken "from the heart." He had no prepared text, not even notes. Fortunately, a tape recording had been made and was available. From this tape, The National Observer was able to present to its nation-wide audience General MacArthur's moving farewell address. The address appeared exclusively in The National Observer of May 20. It evoked a huge and enthusiastic response from grateful readers everywhere.

As I was leaving the hotel this morning, a doorman asked me, "Where are you bound for, General?" and when I replied, "West Point," he remarked, "Beautiful place, have you ever been there before?"

No human being could fail to be deeply moved by such a tribute as this. [Thayer Award] Coming from a profession I have served so long and a people I have loved so well, it fills me with an emotion I cannot express. But this award is not intended primarily for a personality, but to symbolize a great moral code—the code of conduct and chivalry of those who guard this beloved land of culture and ancient descent.

Duty, honor, country: Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying point to build courage when courage seems to fail, to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith, to create hope when hope becomes forlorn.

Unhappily, I possess neither that eloquence of diction, that poetry of imagination, nor that brilliance of metaphor to tell you all that they mean.

The unbelievers will say they are but words, but a slogan, but a flamboyant phrase. Every pedant, every demagogue, every cynic, every hypocrite, every troublemaker, and, I am sorry to say, some others of an entirely different character, will try to downgrade them even to the extent of mockery and ridicule.

But these are some of the things they build. They build your basic character. They mold you for your future roles as the custodians of the nation's defense. They make you strong enough to know when you are weak, and brave enough to face yourself when you are afraid.

What the Words Teach

They teach you to be proud and unbending in honest failure, but humble and gentle in success; not to substitute words for actions, nor to seek the path of comfort, but to face the stress and spur of difficulty and challenge; to learn to stand up in the storm, but to have compassion on those who fall; to master yourself before you seek to master others; to have a heart that is clean, a goal that is high; to learn to laugh, yet never forget how to weep; to reach into the future, yet never neglect the past; to be serious, yet never to take yourself too seriously; to be modest so that you will remember the simplicity of true greatness; the open mind of true wisdom, the meekness of true strength.

They give you a temperate will, a quality of imagination, a vigor of the emotions, a freshness of the deep springs of life, a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, an appetite for adventure over love of ease.

They create in your heart the sense of wonder, the unfulfilling hope of what next, and the joy and inspiration of life. They teach you in this way to be an officer and a gentleman.

And what sort of soldiers are those you are to lead? Are they reliable? Are they brave? Are they capable of victory?

Their story is known to all of you. It is the story of the American man at arms. My estimate of him was formed on the battlefield many, many years ago, and has never changed. I regarded him then, as I regard him now, as one of the world's noblest figures; not only as one of the finest military characters, but also as one of the most stainless.

His name and fame are the birthright of every American citizen. In his youth and strength, his love and loyalty, he gave all that mortality can give. He needs no eulogy from me, or from any other man. He has written his own history and written it in red on his enemy's breast.

Witness to the Fortitude

In 20 campaigns, on a hundred battlefields, around a thousand camp fires, I have witnessed that enduring fortitude, that patriotic self-abnegation, and that invincible determination which have carved his stature in the hearts of his people.

From one end of the world to the other, he has drained deep the chalice of courage. As I listened to those songs of the glee club, in memory's eye I could see those staggering columns of the first World War, bending under soggy packs on many a weary march, from dripping dusk to drizzling dawn, slogging ankle deep through mire of shell-pocked roads; to form grimly for the attack, blue-lipped, covered with sludge and mud, chilled by the wind and rain, driving home to their objective, and for many, to the judgment seat of God.

I do not know the dignity of their birth, but I do know the glory of their death. They died unquestioning, uncomplaining, with faith in their hearts, and on their lips the hope that we would go on to victory.

Always for them: Duty, honor, country. Always their blood, and sweat, and tears, as we sought the way and the light. And 20 years after, on the other side of the globe, again the filth of murky foxholes, the stench of ghostly trenches, the slime of dripping dugouts, those boiling suns of the relentless heat, those torrential rains of devastating storms, the loneliness and utter desolation of jungle trails, the bitterness of long separation from those they loved and cherished, the deadly pestilence of tropical disease, the horror of stricken areas of war.

Swift and Sure Attack

Their resolute and determined defense, their swift and sure attack, their indomitable purpose, their complete and decisive victory—always victory, always through the bloody haze of their last reverberating shot, the vision of gaunt, ghastly men, reverently following your password of duty, honor, country.

You now face a new world, a world of change. The thrust into outer space of the satellite, spheres and missiles marks a beginning of another epoch in the long story of mankind. In the five or more billions of years the scientists tell us it has taken to form the earth, in the three or more billion years of development of the human race, there has never been a greater, a more abrupt or staggering evolution.

We deal now, not with things of this world alone, but with the illimitable distances and as yet unfathomed mysteries of the universe. We are reaching out for a new and boundless frontier. We speak in strange terms of harnessing the cosmic energy, of making winds and tides work for us... of the primary target in war, no longer limited to the armed forces of an enemy, but instead to include his civil populations; of ultimate conflict between a united human race and the sinister forces of some other planetary galaxy; of such dreams and fantasies as to make life the most exciting of all times.

And through all this welter of change and development your mission remains fixed, determined, inviolable. It is to win our wars. Everything else in your professional career is but corollary to this vital dedication. All other public purposes, all other public projects, all other public needs, great or small, will find others for their accomplishment; but you are the ones who are trained to fight.

The Profession of Arms

Yours is the profession of arms, the will to win, the sure knowledge that in war there is no substitute for victory, that if you lose, the nation will be destroyed, that the very obsession of your public service must be duty, honor, country.

Others will debate the controversial issues, national and international, which divide men's minds. But serene, calm, aloof, you stand as the nation's war guardians, as its life guards in the raging tides of international conflict, as its gladiators in the arena of battle. For a century and a half you have defended, guarded, and protected its hallowed traditions of liberty and freedom, of right and justice.

Let civilian voices argue the merits or demerits of our processes of government: Whether our strength is being sapped by deficit financing indulged in too long, by Federal paternalism grown too mighty, by power groups grown too arrogant, by politics grown too corrupt, by crime grown too rampant, by morals grown too low, by taxes grown too high, by extremists grown too violent; whether our personal liberties are as thorough and complete as they should be.

These great national problems are not for your professional participation or military solution. Your guidepost stands out like a tenfold beacon in the night: Duty, honor, country.

You are the heaven which binds together the entire fabric of our national system of defense. From your ranks come the great captains who hold the nation's destiny in their hands the moment the war tocsin sounds.

The long, gray line has never failed us. Were you to do so, a million ghosts in olive drab, in brown khaki, in blue and gray, would rise from their white crosses, thundering those magic words: Duty, honor, country.

Prays for Peace

This does not mean that you are warmongers. On the contrary, the soldier above all other people prays for peace, for he must suffer and bear the deepest wounds and scars of war. But always in our ears ring the ominous words of Plato, that wisest of all philosophers: "Only the dead have seen the end of war."

The shadows are lengthening for me. The twilight is here. My days of old have vanished—tone and tint. They have gone glimmering through the dreams of things that were. Their memory is one of wonderful beauty, watered by tears and coaxed and caressed by the smiles of yesterday. I listen vainly, but with thirsty ear, for the wailing melody of faint bugles blowing reveille, of far drums beating the long roll.

In my dreams I hear again the crash of guns, the rattle of musketry, the strange, mournful mutter of the battlefield. But in the evening of my memory always I come back to West Point. Always there echoes and re-echoes: Duty, honor, country.

Today marks my final roll call with you. But I want you to know that when I cross the river, my last conscious thoughts will be of the corps, and the corps, and the corps.

I bid you farewell.
