City of Newark water is safe

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

EWARK OFFICIALS SAID this week, that despite reports of odor and taste problems as well as possible contamination in the city water system, there never was a danger to the public.

Carol Houck, assistant city administrator, said city staff first learned about the problem when water customers began calling on Monday, Aug. 17. "We started trying to find out what was hap-pening from DNREC and the Department of Health," Houck said. "We also tried to call the Pennsylvania Environmental dairy farm in West Grove, Pa., on Friday, Aug. 14, would have arrived Newark Sunday afternoon. On Aug. it was already too late to keep it out of Newark's homes. "The minute the firemen saw the water went into the creek, if they had thought, 'hey, we've got to let someone know this is coming,' United and Newark (water Houck said the city realized companies) could have shut

The city tests the water supply for bacteria every Tuesday. Tests for fluoride, chlorine, PH and turbidity are run four times a day, while tests for iron are done occasionally.

Houck said city staff went into crisis mode to obtain information and protect the customers. Houck and Charles Zusag, assistant to the city manager, helped to answer phones and even went out to houses themselves to taste and smell water flowing from the taps. "We had 240 calls, some of them duplicates, in five days," she said. "We would immediately call one of the five crews out working and they would bleed the mains in the area of the calls."

Houck said it took four days for the affected water to get through the system. "Even then, it was mostly residences in areas

Plan could before submitted by November

Jeffrey Lang of Commonwealth Managment said his company has the 20-plus acres of the former National Vulcanized Fibre site on Paper Mill Road under agreement for development.

"We've already taken the plan through the city for technical comments and expect to go before the city planning commission in November," Lang said.

Lang's plan will convert approximately five old buildings with 400,000 square feet on the industrial site into about 220,000 square feet of commercial and residential space.

"Our proposal makes use of the same footprints as the existing buildings," Lang said. "We'll also try to reuse a couple - most notably the the big stone struc-

We're talking to the city building department vis-a-vis historic structures like at the Farm and Home site."

Lang said mixed use of old timber frame buildings like these can cause more code problems. "For that reason, we'll designate separate buildings for residential or commerical use to avoid that problem."

While discussing the plan with the city, Lang said he spent a lot of time redoing the site and greatly reduced the density. "We downscaled the density from 240 units to 180 because we're not sure from a marketing standpoint that it makes sense to have more," he said. "Also we're trying not to overbuild the site and want to save a lot of open space with as many existing trees as possible and additional landscap-

Some of the site is in the floodplain and Lang said he plans to make the White Clay Creek a feature. "Every residential unit will have a view of the stream."

Lang is still not sure what the residential component will be. "We're saying apartments but considered townhouses as well. A lot of the property is on slopes and that complicates things.'

Appraisals done for this and other recent developments indicate to Lang that people presently living in Maryland and other areas outside of Newark will move in closer if they have a little more upscale choice. "By upscale we're not necessarily talking more rent, just some more aesthetically pleasing elements," he said. "People from places like MBNA will choose a nice, new apartment community close to

A rash of car break-ins hit Newark

Police said it appeared thieves targeted unlocked vehicles in some of the flood of car break-ins this week.

Between 12:30 and 10 a.m. on Aug. 23 a cellphone was taken from an unlocked vehicle at a home on Indian Road.

Police recommend always locking vehicles and garage doors. Roll windows up tight. Don't leave valuables in vehicles and don't hide spare keys - they can be found. Trim shrubbery and install lights for outside areas. Use deadbolts on all outside entrances.

Look after your neighbors homes where they are away and ask them to do the same for you. Report unusual activity to police.

Arrests made in car break-ins

Following a series of burglaries and thefts from vehicles in neighborhoods throughout the city, Newark Police arrested two adults on Aug. 24 in connection with many of the incidents.

Police charged Damon Anthony Anderson, 18, of Varlano in Christiana and Owen Ellis Russell, 18, of Abbotsford with three counts of burglary, 10 counts of theft and seven counts of conspiracy.

Charges are pending against two juveniles and additional charges could come against all four suspects.

"We recovered items reported taken from many of the recent vehicle break-ins and are in the process of trying to get identification," said Officer Mark Farrell.

Police also recovered over 80 pieces of stolen electronic equipment, cellular phones, cameras, watches and jewelry. The public can view the recovered property on Monday, Aug. 31 between 4 and 7 p.m. at Newark Police headquarters in an attempt to identify the owners. Main Street Court approved for development

Newark Lumber site finally ready

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

PLAN TO REDEVELOP the former Newark Lumber site on Main Street was approved by city council this week but not without two more hours of discussion.

In July, Newark's city planning commission spent over two hours dissecting and amending the rezoning, subdivision and parking waiver for the site before making a recom-

RTD Investments Inc. intends to renovate the existing two-story 4,900-square-foot retail store on Main Street and remove all other existing buildings on the 2.1284acre site, including a now-empty house converted to apartments on Chapel Street.

Access to the complex called Main Street Court will be from Main Street and Delaware Avenue

Several members of the community made requests to table the plans to allow further consideration of saving the old Queen Anne-style residence, as well as decreasing the size of the plan and putting apartments on the ground floor of the new building in place of parking.

Following the planning recommendation, principals Richard and Mary Dudek had already added a landscaped walkway, additional bays to the interior facade and a steeper-pitched roof on the building portion that faces Delaware Avenue, reconfigured parking, and a landscaped buffer between the property and Burger King.

Newark resident Michael Fagan said the plan ignores every design guideline and visioning session Newark has had. "This building is two times as high and four times as long as any other building in the downtown and it's surrounded by a sea of asphalt," said Fagan. "The citizens of Newark want the city to maintain it's small town charm.'

However, architect Lee Sparks of the Design Collaborative said the developers adhered strictly to the design guidelines. "We did not change and merely fixed up the exterior of the old building on Main Street," said Sparks. "As to the Delaware Avenue facade, we put in details like gables and bays to reflect architectural details from other buildings in the community."

David Athey of Tetra Tech added that according to the Hyett-Palma study commissioned by the city, "Newark is a large city with a dynamic downtown.

City planning director Roy Lopata also said he sent copies of the Dudek's plan to one of the Hyett-Palma consultants. "In a letter sent to me in August, he stated that this plan is consistent with the recommendations of the Downtown Economic Strategy prepared for the city," said Lopata.

Main Street Court will have a 15,000 square-foot, four-story "Lshaped" building with retail on the first floor of the section facing Delaware Avenue and parking on the first floor of the longer wing.

Mary Dudek said the developers already have letters of intent from "specialty shops" for some of the retail space in the complex.

The upper three floors of both wings will contain a total of 45 apartments, some of which will be two-story, according to Mary Dudek.

The old building on Main Street will have six apartments, 4,500 square-feet of retail space, and maintenance and storage for the Council approved a 54-space parking waiver for the site which requires 162 parking spaces. Prior to issuance of the first certificate of occupancy, the developer must also pay $21,697.20 to be used at the city's discretion for improvements to downtown off-street parking.

Delaware schools safe for now

Under 10 percent feel unsafe

Less than 10 percent of Delaware high school students responding to a survey felt unsafe on school property in the past year.

According to a 1997 Youth Risk Behavior Survey, administered to high school students from 24 Delaware schools, only eight percent had been threatened or injured with a weapon on school property within the past 12 months while five percent reported that they skipped school because they felt unsafe.

Student conduct reports compiled by the Department of Education reported the number of incidents involving dangerous weapons has decreased by almost half since the 1993-1994 school year. The rate of incidents occurring in schools in New Castle County is less than two percent of all of the students

To promote continued school safety during the first week in August, more than 220 Delaware principals, district administrators, school counselors and police agency youth aid and school resource officers spent two days learning how to react to crisis and how to identify and respond to warning signs in order to avoid tragedy in

Fischer ready for first school year at Christina

By LAURA SANKOWICH everything will be ready to

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

ITH more than 30 years of experience in the education system under his belt, Christina District superintendent school Nicholas Fischer will be able to put his experience to the test as he tackles the school year ahead. Since beginning his job more than five months ago, Fischer has been busy working on academic achievement and accountability as well as visitsummer schools and acad-

So far Fischer said the transition into his job has been great. "People have been helpful and the staff is extremely committed," he said, "They spend tons of hours

One of Fischer's accountability

'We've got a number of goals we will be working on," he said. 'Over the next several years we want the schools to develop new and innovative ways to measure school progress."

Fischer explained that this means student progress will be measured by having them show what they know by applying their knowledge - perhaps by giving a speech or performing a play. "It gets you away from paper and pencil fill in the blank and fill in the bubble tests," he said.

The tests will compliment the state accountability tests which are administered to children in grades three, five, eight and 10. The district tests will look at achievement in the areas of English, math skills, science and social studies for students in grades six, seven, nine and

The superintendent said he wants to enhance current programs. 'I'm going to be clear to teachers and principals, that they must be clear with students about behavior in school," he said. "There will be an emphasis on what we want them to do, not what we don't want them to do. We have to tell them what we want and reinforce these rules constantly."

Fischer said other key steps to improving behavior in school were to recognize warning signs of troubled students, preventing problems and having the principals be visible and active when it comes to interacting with students.

In the months ahead Fischer will also be teaching two classes a month, one each at the secondary and elementary levels. He said teaching in classrooms throughout the district will give him a better sense of going on as well as meet another of his goals. "I'm trying to highlight the importance of teaching as the most critical activity in the school district," he said.

What to expect

Surprise can be fun, but every child and most parents like to know what to expect when students enter the schools on the first day of the 1998-99 school year. Major capital improvements are being made at Glasgow, Newark, Shue-Medill, Gauger-Cobbs, Bancroft, Bayard, Stubbs, Pyle, Douglas and Sterck School for the Hearing Impaired. "(But) all of these schools will be opened on time, with be starting site work outside of the buildsome work carried on after school hours until it's completed."

Some construction projects will be ESPITE several months of site continued during the school year but only improvements and some after school hours. "We have three playground replacements at Maclary, Jones and Wilson which will be done by the time schools open," Riley said.

Additional elementary playground construction will be finished in phase three construction. "We are totally changing or upgrading all elementary playgrounds in the district," Riley said. He said 75 percent of all of the playgrounds have finished upgrading them to this point. "The rest will completed by the beginning of next school year."

Capital improvements at Newark High School include finishing the outdoor track, Riley said, where two new coats of surface were being put in place. The football field also has been sodded and is ready to be used. A final paving of all of parking lots and lining will be finished. Riley said there will be some work on the inside of the building that will have to carry on, but everything will be situated so the school can open on time.

"(At Christiana High School) we will ing toward the end of August and during the school year," Riley said.

Roadways and parking areas will be paved and sidewalks and curbs will be replaced, according to Riley, and the fencing around athletic facility will be replaced. Due approval from the state, Riley said the track at Christiana will not be worked on until the spring. Home track meets will be transferred to either Newark or Glasgow high schools.

Riley said a portion of the lot at Christiana will be shut down. "What we're doing in no way will interfere with school activities, however," he said.

Portable classrooms ready at Brader

Some fourth graders at Brader Elementary School will begin the school year in portable classrooms. Despite earlier concern by the public as well as members of the Christina School Board, the classrooms are in place and ready for the students.

"We're having six of our fourth grade classrooms in the trailers, there are seven altogether," she said. Sharp said there will be about 27 students in each room.

"They are very nice, they're regular class-room size," said Sharp. "They are actually three buildings that will hold two classrooms

She said each classroom is separated by a door and has its own bathroom. "They will have all the things the regular classrooms have such as computers, shelves and desks."

Sharp said the students should do well taking their classes in the portable classrooms.

"Since they are fourth graders, they are our older students in the building and I think that the responsibility of children changing from building to building for classes excites them."

Sharp said the trailers will be a two year project. "The board will determine what happens after that," she said.

Sharp mentioned one possible solution that may relieve overcrowding in the school. There is construction on a new school (in the Bear/Glasgow area between 896 and 40) and there has been discussion about (making it an elementary school), but no plans have been made yet.

Parents and students at Brader who will be affected by the portable classrooms will be able to look at them on Sept. 2 between 5:30 and 7 p.m. when Brader has its orientation for the coming year.

New feeder patterns now in effect

Secondary feeder patterns approved by the Christina District School Board in April 1998 will go into effect this September. Based on enrollment growth in middle and high schools, students in Arbour Park and Academy Hill have been assigned to Shue-Medill Middle School and Newark High School.

Some students in the Polly Drummond Hill Road area who attended Christiana High School will also attend Newark High School. According to the redistricting plan, students will be phased into new schools.

Students already in a school will remain there, while those making the transition to a new school, such as seventh and ninth graders will follow the new patterns.

At the last board meeting on Aug. 11, concerns over the reliability of the enrollment figures were disputed by both Charles Mullin and Spring Davidson. "I made a decision based on the original numbers I saw," Mullin said, noting a discrepancy in enrollment figures presented at the time the decision was made.

The projections for Glass w and Christiana High mools were off by an approximate total of 210 students at the time of the school board meeting.

School superintendent Nicholas Fischer noted that the projections the school board used were probably the best estimate of growth in the district and that the amount the numbers are off is a concern, but not a major one.

'Look at the numbers over a five year trend," he said. He also noted official enrollment figures once the school year starts may also account for current inconsistencies.

Dress codes make the grade

Parents and students at three Christina District schools will continue to enjoy a hassle free approach to dressing for school success.

Following school board assessment, Drew-Pyle Elementary School, Shue-Medill Middle School and the Early Childhood Centers at Bayard and Bancroft elementary schools will have dress codes in place again this year.

At the Early Childhood Centers, 60.2 percent of the parents surveyed said the uniform was more convenient and also less costly when it came time to go shopping for school clothes. All of the teachers in the progarms recommended a continuation of the dress code, while 85 percent felt that the dress code helped to create a positive school environment.

The dress code did not fare as well when it came to student feedback, however. Only 53 percent of the early childhood students said they liked wearing the uniform to school everyday, and 83 percent said they would like to be able to wear other clothes to school sometimes.

Although the Early Childhood Center will be incorporated into the Bayard and Bancroft schools this fall, former principal Harriet Billops said the dress code will continue for pre-K through first grade students.

According to the 46 surveys returned, parents of Drew-Pyle students agreed the dress code made it easier for their child to dress, saved them money, helped their child become a better student, and improved overall self esteem and behavior.

Overall, parents indicated they would like to see it continued for another year despite feedback indicating that the majority of Drew-Pyle students wanted to do away with the dress code.

All except one teacher at Drew-Pyle concluded that the dress code had been successful. The remaining teacher was unsure of the results. Data submitted by the school administrators indicated an overall decrease of inappropriate issues based on dress occurring between students.

A few minor changes have been made to Drew-Pyle's code for the school year. Brown shoes will be permitted, pants must be belted if they have belt loops, and Drew Pyle shirts and shorts in white, gray or blue can be worn in the gym.

Shue-Medill Middle School, the first school in Delaware to have a dress code, submitted data which showed that there was a 13 percent reduction in school suspensions for the 1997-98 school year, with a 24 percent reduction overall since the code was implemented in 1996.

Other data showed a two percent increase in attendance over the previous year as well as almost a 63 percent increase of students who were admitted into the National Junior Honor Society for the 1997-98 school year.

A few changes were anounced for the Shue-Medill policy, including only collared shirts can be worn, belts are not necessary as long as pants are kept at waist level, and the length of skirts, dresses and shorts must be at the level of the wearer's fingertips or lower when arms are held by the student's side.

CHRISTINA SCHOOL DISTINCT

Educating Each Student To Succeed

Principally speaking

TUDENTS and parents can expect a new face in the principal's office at four Christina district schools for this coming school

Maclary Elementary School, Shue Medill Middle School, the Early Childhood Center at two sites, and Gallaher Elementary School all have changes in the status of their principals.

At Maclary Elementary, principal Patricia A. Martin retired after 10 years and will be replaced by Richelle Talbert. Formerly the assistant principal at Drew/Pyle, Talbert has worked in the education system for the past 20 years. "I have been, and still am at heart, a special education teacher," said Talbert although she was an adminstrator for the past seven years.

Talbert said her first focus is to develop a strategic plan. "We're also going to continue to to use our resources to improve literacy for students," she said. "I am excited, and am very much looking forward to a new school year."

Robert Adams, formerly the principal of Shue Medill, will be leaving to go on to become principal at Dover High School. "I'm from Dover so I have been commuting here for the last six years," Adams said. "It's a good opportunity to be closer to home and closer to my family, and that's the only reason why I took the job."

Although Adams will be moving on, he said he will not forget his time at principal at Shue Medill anytime soon. "I've enjoyed myself here tremendously. The Shue community has just been wonderful."

According to Christina District spokesperson John Holton, there has been no decision made at this time as to who will become principal at Shue Medill.

Harriet Billops, principal of the Early Childhood Center, has resigned from her position. Billops, the principal of the school since its establishment last year, has also been an administrator in the district for seven years.

Billops said she will be leaving the district completely to work in the private sector.

"I am leaving because a variety of things happened in my private and professional life that led me to this decision," she said. "I am not ruling out working with schools as an option, and will do what best suits the skills I have acquired."

Because the Early Childhood Center has been incorporated into the Bayard and Bancroft schools, dsitrict officials said there will be no replacement for her position.

Principals Maurice Pritchett of Bancroft and Steve Lee of Bayard will assume the role of principals of the Center at their respective schools.

At Gallaher, acting principal Joe Clark has been named as principal of the school.

"I feel very good about the up and coming year," Clark said, "because we have a very good and highly knowledgeable staff. They want the best for the school and the students are the best."

Clark said that Gallaher's PTA has been nominated as the top in the state for the last 4 or 5 years. "We're always trying to improve academics," he said. "We want to improve academic status for students of diverse backgrounds and I will be meeting with teachers, parents, and the community to address that."

Red Lion Christian adding high school

An aggressive expansion program is underway at Red Lion Christian Academy in Bear which includes an early education center and the construction of a $3.5 million high school beginning this fall.

"Parents in this area are recognizing the need for a comprehensive, quality Christian high school," said headmaster, Dr. David Thompson.

The Academy was started in 1980 as a ministry of Red Lion Evangelical Free Church under the direction of Rev. Irvin Pusey who has seen the area change around the 37-acre church property.

In the mid 80's, there was an unsuccessful attempt to start a high school. However, the area's population explosion has caused enrollment to jump from the present 380 to 520plus for next year.

Thompson anticipates the enrollment to be between 1,500-1,800 students once the 46,000-square-foot upper school is in full operation. Groundbreaking for the upper school building will take place in December with occupancy by August 1999.

A new 9,000-square-foot early education center has been put on the site that formerly housed temporary classroom trailers.

"The new facility will enrich the present program," said Linda Graham, director of early education, who has been with the school from day one.

Dear Newark Resident:

I am writing on behalf of the City of Newark and our Water Department staff to thank you for your patience during last week's unfortunate situation involving our water system. As I assume you are aware, the runoff from a fire in West Grove, Pennsylvania on Friday, August 14, inadvertently made its way into the White Clay Creek and, due to lack of notification, into our water system.

Immediately following our identification of the occurrence on Monday, August 17, we began a "no holds barred" attack on this problem, working crews late into the evening to flush this annoying odor and taste from our mains. In addition, immediate testing was conducted by both the City and the State Department of Public Health to ensure the safety of our water.

Thankfully, all tests reported that there was no need for special actions or restrictions to be implemented. Throughout last weekend, we continued a systematic bleeding of the deadend areas of our mains - a targeted sweeping if you will - to release the affected water from the system. After a full week of constant and aggressive actions, we are happy to report that this problem is behind us.

I thank you again for your patience and apologize for the inconvenience this past week. If you have any questions or further concerns, please do not hesitate to call.

The flow of information needs more work

THE EFFORTS MADE BY state and local authorities to lock the barn door last week after possibly contaminated water entered local water supplies were comprehensive and admirable.

Between Monday and Friday, both the Delaware Division of Health and Social Services and the city of Newark conducted repeated tests to try to determine if water flowing to consumers contained materials hazardous to the public health.

According to both agencies, the chances of that happening were exceedingly small.

Nevertheless, the city even went so far as New York City to get independent confirmation that their product was safe. As it turned out, after five hectic days of frantic concern and flushing the city's mains, the water remained safe to drink even if unappealing to smell or taste.

In addition, despite a warning issued to hospitals by Health and Social Services, no one reported any instances of illness that might have resulted from ingesting polluted water.

But among all this good news, there still remained questions about why it took unofficial reports of dead fish in the White Clay Creek to alert Delaware officials to the prob-

Three days after the water runoff from the Pennsylvania fire entered the White Clay Creek was three days later than local water companies should have been informed.

And ten days after that, Delaware officials still could not explain how notification would be better the next time. That is unacceptable.

DNREC and other state agencies responsible for the public health must set up an arrangement immediately that can assure everyone in Delaware that the water is safe to drink.

The next time, the systems in place to protect us from other people's mistakes may not work as well.

ONE PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE

A parent's teacher wish list and other thoughts

By RUTH KELLY

L happily skipping down the store aisles buying back-to-school supplies with his two children looking on with long, sad faces at the thought of school starting is back on the air.

I love this commercial and at this time of year feel as exhilarated Kelly as this dad counting the days til the first day of school. This has indeed been a long summer with boredom setting in with my child shortly after the 4th of July.

The highlight of the summer early on was celebrating birthdays. Kim turned 12 in June and had a roller skating party with her friends. Sassy, our dog, celebrated her 1st birthday in July and she had a wonderful party too. Her's was a small intimate affair. The "poodle princess" was the belle of the ball on July 11. A pair of poodle pals named Chewey and Harley came decked out, freshly groomed, and bearing gifts. They all dined on scrambled ground beef and rice, romped around for a while and finally lapped up some vanilla ice cream for dessert. They left tired and full with party bags in paw which included some doggie treats, cookies in the shape of a cat and some chew toys. A fun time was had by all, canine and human.

I'm the only one who did not have a party. Mine came and went quietly on Aug. 2. Quiet is more and more appealing as I get closer to September is a time of excitement and anticipation at our house. This year starts out on a downer - somewhat. Last year the school my daughter attended had a dress code policy. It was the best school year yet for not fussing about what to wear. Shopping THE STAPLES TV COMMERCIAL was easy, and it was the most economical year we've ever had.

I am sure many parents who have experienced dress code will feel like I do. It is my hope that a uniform dress code policy be made district-wide in the not too distant

This year finds my daughter and I embarking into the world of middle school. She and I both have been fearing the unknown but that fear has eased into a nervous anticipation and not the fierce anxiety felt earlier this summer.

Kim attended Kirk's Summer Academy and this program was a huge success. She had fun and I very much appreciated having her attend. It gave both of us an opportunity to meet teachers and staff at Kirk. The welcome and warmth which I received from the Kirk family as a new incoming parent was very gratifying. I had always heard of Kirk's fine reputation in the community and I found out first hand how true everything I heard

This year will be the continuation of monumental challenges all of our students will be facing and I plan to be more involved. I am deeply concerned on the effects of education reform and how it will affect my daughter and others. The ever-widening gap between white and minority students is always a worry to me and finding ways to narrow this gap is something that I want to work on with other concerned parents.

Effective teaching can make all the difference in the world to minority students. The most highly qualified, caring and dedicated teachers can take a low-performing student and with ingenuity and patience turn that stu-

Plans to let contract for Kemblesville Road before winter

One of the most important road improvements in this section, slated for completion next year, is one that will particularly benefit Newark and vicinity.

It is planned to advertise for and let bids for the completion of the 2 1/4 mile stretch of dirt road from the Maryland line to a point a half mile from Kemblesville.

With the completion of the new macadam, and the recent paving of New London Avenue, the town will have a much greater drawing power from the rich sections of lower Chester County.

It now appears that the business conditions of Newark will be greatly boosted by the opening up of an almost new section.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To: Editor
From: Rep. Pamela S. Maier
R-Drummond Hill
21st Representative District

Ten years in the making, an agreement just officially announced between the state and the University of Delaware will ensure the preservation of over 500 acres of open space in northern New Castle County

The acquisition of the 504-acre Judge Morris property, near the intersection of Polly Drummond Road and Kirkwood Highway, is an impressive achievement on the part of state and university officials, as well as members of the community, who put in a lot of hard work to make this agreement a reality.

As the state representative of the district where this new property is located, I couldn't be happier. I believe the $12.5 million the state is spending to buy the land is a wise investment, saving from the threat of development the largest remaining parcel of open space along Kirkwood Highway.

Added to the existing White Clay Creek State Park holdings, the new tract will increase the park's size to nearly 2,900 acres. When considered with the Middle Run natural Area, which lies just to the west of the new property, there now exists a lengthy tract of fields and mature hardwoods extending northwest from Kirkwood Highway to beyond the Pennsylvania border.

Open space isn't the only thing the purchase has secured - we've also saved a piece of our historical heritage. The new acquisition includes the Andrew Gray House, which dates to the early 1800s and is eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places. No long range plans for the house have been made, but state park officials say they plan to initially stabilize the structure to prevent any further deterioration.

Many of the existing hiking and biking trails already on the property will be preserved and upgraded to state park standards. Ultimately, I and many other people would like to see these trials networked with other greenway trails throughout the county.

In an era where we are constantly grappling with the challenge of losing open space to sprawling development, this acquisition rates as a considerable victory that will provide area residents with additional recreational opportunities and an improved quality-of-life. To: Editor; From: Andrea Polukis Our Redeemer Preschool

Among the many bills recently passed by our legislators aimed at improving public education, I applaud the long overdue legislation to reduce class size. It is a fact that our classrooms in the Christina School district are overcrowded, and I am anxious to see reduction in class size at all levels, but most particularly at the K-4 level where it is needed the most. District officials continue to stress the overcrowding and the need to build more schools at the elementary level, yet the district continues to operate preschool classrooms in some elementary school buildings.

I am sure the district is well intended by offering preschool services. I am an advocate of Early Childhood Education, as I am a preschool teacher at Our Redeemer in Newark. However, the district is offering preschool services in the Newark area, and is duplicating services that are offered through many long established church and community based organizations. The district does not have enough space to accommodate students in grades K-4, but it continues to operate preschool classrooms.

I can understand the intent of the public schools to offer special education services to preschool age children, and provide service in areas where preschools do not exist. However, the Newark area has an abundance of preschools, and in my opinion, the need for the three preschool classrooms at Jennie Smith is not justified. Along with many other area preschools, we now face a declining enrollment due to the need for full time daycare services, and duplication of services by the school district. The district is competing with services already offered in the community by many excellent preschools. Redeemer's program has been a highly regarded, quality program for over thirty-five years. I am proud to be a member of their team, and committed to keeping alive the small, intimate, family-involved preschool concept that is offered in schools such as ours.

Although some parents at district-run preschools pay tuition that is competitive with surrounding preschools, how many of our tax dollars are used to supplement district preschool classrooms (for utilities, maintenance, supplies)? The use of the school buildings alone makes it difficult for private schools to compete financially. Is use of public school space for preschool a necessity when we can use the district space for alternative education, special education, parent resource rooms, and most especially, smaller classes for our school age students?

I trust that our district officials will review the need for public preschool as they continue to deal with the overcrowding issue in future school years.

Each year I continue to pray that my daughter be assigned to that high-quality teacher who will make learning fun for her. Some of the most influential people in my life have been teachers. I hold the profession with the utmost admiration and respect. They can make all the difference in the world in the life of a child. Good teachers, involved parents and the help of the entire village can bridge this gap. It's my hope that we can all work together and make it happen.

Stay off the train tracks

RAINS AND TRAIN tracks hold a certain fascination for many children and adults. For some, however, the train tracks also seem to invite risky behaviors. In May of this year, a student was seriously injured on the CSX tracks behind the New Street Cemetery. He was struck while trying to see how close he could get to the moving train and, as a result, suffered a fractured arm and contusions. Lucky does not come close to describing this student's narrow escape from more serious injury or death.

While driving through Newark, I have witnessed children, teenagers and college students walking along side or even on the tracks that thread throughout Newark and the University of Delaware campus. This is a dangerous pastime, and one that soon could earn violators a fine.

"Most people are unaware that walking on railroad tracks or along the right-of-way is trespassing on private property," explains Newark Chief of Police Bill Hogan.

To prevent further injuries and death in the city, the Newark Police, University Police and CSX Transportation are collaborating on a program to educate the public about the dangers of trespassing on railroad property.

In a bold step, the City of Newark has passed an ordinance establishing regulations regarding this kind of trespassing. The new ordinance allows Newark police officers, UD police and railroad law enforcement personnel to arrest individuals who trespass on railroad property. A person found on or near the train track for any reason other than crossing over the tracks at a marked and identified public crossing will be considered a trespasser.

Anyone found in violation of the ordinance and convicted of trespassing on railroad property will be subject to a minimum fine of $100 and a $250 fine or more if convicted of trespassing on the train or any part of the train.

Iron Hill Park is a hidden treasure

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

IDDEN BEHIND TREES AND somewhat off the beaten track on curvy Whitaker Road lies Iron Hill Park. Drivers racing up and down Route 896 seem oblivious of such a peaceful place little more than a mile away down Old Baltimore Pike. In fact, so do most Newarkers.

Bought in 1971 and one of the 195 parks operated by New Castle County, Iron Hill Park offers trails, playground equipment, a sheltered picnic area, and park benches scattered around its four parking lots.

Without ballfields or a camping area, the 335-acre park lends itself to a more sedate atmosphere than some other parks. "It's mostly a passive use park," said Jonathan Husband, development planner for the county. "There's some beautiful natural wooded areas."

But, it is the park's history and its natural land features that make it unique, Husband said.

Dating back to the 1600's, the park was originally called "Marettico" by the Minquas Indians who lived in the area, meaning "hill of hard stone," according to the history marker placed in the park by the county.

And although there are huge amounts of iron present in the area, it was Jasper rock which the Indians found there to make many of their tools.

The early Welsh settlers, who had received a grant from William Penn in 1701, first mined the iron ore which gave the park its current name. An old forge, built by Sir William Keith, a colonial Governor of Delaware and Pennsylvania, stood along the west bank of the Christiana at the foot of Iron Hill. In later years, ore was hauled to Principio Furnace near North East, Md.

Mining operations were conducted until about 1891 by the McConaughey, the Cooch, and, lastly, the Whitaker family. The large bowl-shaped ore pits and the spoil mounds can still be seen today at the Iron Hill Museum on Old Baltimore Pike.

But it's not just the iron pits that make the area famous. On Aug. 27, 1777, Generals George Washington, Nathaniel Green and Lafayette reportedly watched the movements of the British Army from the top of Iron Hill.

A week later on Sept. 3, 1777, the only Revolutionary War engagement between the British and American armies on Delaware soil took place "at nearby Cooch's Bridge at the foot of Iron Hill," according to the county history.

It is also claimed that Caesar Rodney camped at Iron Hill with his troops during the War of 1812 seems only fitting that the park was dedicated on Sept. 3, 1977, following a reenactment of the Revolutionary skirmish.

Included in the celebration was the opening of an observation tower for the first time that day. "The tower has since been torn down for liability and safety reasons," Husband said, "but at that time it was a big attraction."

Now the trails are the big attraction. Ed Yalisove of the Sierra Club said he has taken many hikers along the Mason-Dixon Trail running through the park and connecting it to White Clay Creek Preserve. "They were amazed that such a park exists among all the developments surrounding it," said Yalisove.

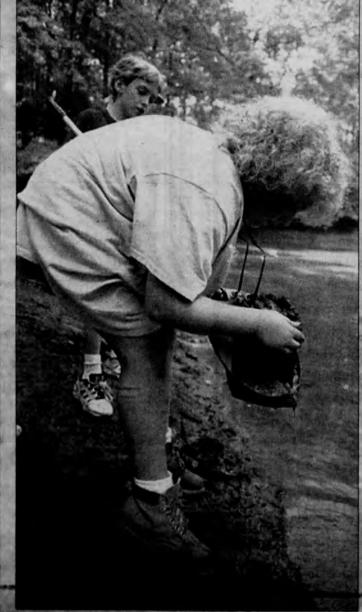

Pete Brakhage, president of the Delaware Trail Spinners, said mining disturbed some areas of land leaving unique landscapes and a series of roller coaster hills that are great for mountain bikes. "There are some fun trails to ride on in the park," said Brakhage.

There are no park rangers there and maintenance crews must share the responsibilities of all the parks in the county. The Sierra Club, and the Trail Spinners who use some of the profits from an annual mountain biking race for trail maintenance, are a large part of the volunteer base that helps keep the park in shape.

Children come to play on the trails from surrounding neighborhoods, Husband said, but the county would always like to see more families in the park.

A proposed expansion of the Iron Hill Museum, which the county is reviewing, would possibly bring even more people in. "Hopefully once they realize the park is there, too, they will come back." Hus-

Nicholas & Alexandra exhibit continues

By PHIL TOMAN

NEWARK POST ARTS WRITER

HE BROUGHTON International exhibit "Nicholas and Alexandra: The Last Imperial Family of Tsarist Russia" has been open about a month now and drawing huge crowds. Each one of the 14 galleries has much beauty and many riches to offer us but I have been fascinated by displays of materials from the official religion of Tsarist Russia, the Russian Orthodox Church. It is very interesting to find how many artifacts of what Lenin called "the opiate of the people" survived his Bolsheviks.

I think that Dr. Mikhail Piotrovski, director of the State Hermitage Museum in St. Petersburg, and Jim Broughton, president of Broughton International, did a superb job of selecting the items and that Dr. Robert S. Bianchi, director of academic and curatorial affairs for Broughton International and the curator of Nicholas and Alexandra, has done an equally fine job in setting up the displays. Today I would like to share with you some of the items I found of interest in the display now open at 800 South Madison Street in Wilmington.

The icon shown with my column today was particularly interesting. It shows the relationship between the church and Tsarist government very well. It was created in 1898 and shows St. Nicholas the Miracle worker with St. Tsarina Alexandra. These are both saints of the Russian Orthodox Church who have the same name as the then tsar Nicholas II and tsarina Alexandra.

There were a number of beautiful priest's vestments in the exhibit. I found a 19th century one of violet velvet with spun gold threads a real thing of beauty. The work of opulent embroidery has the representation of an all-seeing eye surrounded by angels heads on the back shoulder piece of the chasuble. Below are liturgical symbols and the horn of plenty, signifying the divine nature Kiev Caves Monastery. of the secular as well as the church rule. The entire surface of the garment is covered with flower garlands and vine branches. The cross on this vestment signifies the Order of Alexandere Nevsky which was established in 1725.

There is a lovely gold brocade miter decorated with pearls with nine enamel medallions showing saints and Jesus. All that is framed by bands of precious stones. The green silk cover of the head piece is the perfect compliment to everything else.

Another interesting icon is called "The Icon of the Chosen Saints" and dates from the early part of this century. The top part of the icon features the heavenly patrons of the heir apparent to Nicholas II and to the children of the imperial couple. The saints shown are Marie, Princess Olga, the Moscow Metropolitan Alexi, Tatiana, and Anastasia. The lower part of the icon shows the heavenly patrons of the tsar and tsarina, Nicholas and Alexandra.

Easter is a great feast in the Russian church. Easter eggs, not the kind you dye for the kids to find the gold kind often designed by Faberge — played an important role in the Easter celebration and many are shown in the exhibit. One egg, made by the Imperial Porcelain Factory was very beautiful. It has the monogram of both Nicholas and Alexandra on it. In 1910, the monograms of all the imperial children were added as well. Up to 5,000 of these beautiful eggs were presented by the tsar to various courtiers during the Russian Easter celebration each year.

Books, particularly church books, were as ornate as everything else. There is a book of gospels done in silver with a gilded mounting. Nothing was left to chance in decorating this book which was gift to the tsar from the monks at the

Another chasuble was made entirely of spun gold. It must have weighed heavily on the priest during the liturgy, but they wore them. In Russia most of the fabrics for church vestments was imported until the 18th century. It was not until the 19th century however that such magnificent and expensive church ceremonial garments were produced.

There is much more to see. Today I covered just a FEW items in one of 14 galleries. You owe it to yourself to see the rest. My column only serves to whet your appetite to get in and see the exhibition which will continue through December 31. It will only be closed two days during that period, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

For ticket information you may call 302-777-1600 or you may drop by the box office located in the exhibit area at 800 South Madison Street in Wilmington. It is important to note that tickets are sold by both date AND time. You must be prepared with both choices before you may purchase tickets.

This icon, "St. Nicholas the Miracle Worker and St. Tsarina Alexandra" is one of many beautiful artifacts of the Russian Orthodox Church presently on exhibit as part of the Nicholas and Alexandra exhibit at 800 South Madison Street in Wilmington.

Cowtown rounds up bargains

By JACQUI KIRCHNER

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

A variety of values awaits the thrifty shopper at Cowtown Farmer's Market and Rodeo in Woodstown, N.J.

As shoppers approach the gates at Cowtown, an enormous cowboy statue stands to welcome customers to an unusual day of farming and fashions. A sign with the slogan, "Often imitated and never equaled," hangs proudly over the first sales barn. With more than 20,000 visitors a day, the vendors suit everyone from head to toe. Hats and sneakers, purses and T-shirts rule fashion seekers looking to save money on name brand and discounted items.

Although customers won't find climate controlled, carpeted boutiques with gentle background music, they will find friendly salessatisfied repeat customers.

"Hey, there's our Hat Man again," shouted a repeat customer to Mr. Irvin as he stood with his display of garments. For the past 35 years, Irvin has earned his reputation as the top "Hat Man" at Cowtown. As a retired truck-driver from Morrisville, Pa., he has seen the same customers return year after

What he enjoys most about being a vendor is not the part-time hours, but meeting the public.

Customers often reflect their appreciation for his services with letters and special requests for hats during the year.

"I like the public. They are interesting. Mr. Irvin, the Hat Man, that's what they call me," he said with a people with years of experience and farmer's market. Farmers brought surplus items from cows to corncobs to the area to be sold and auctioned.

During World War II, the market gained great popularity. With money in short supply for all Americans, the farmers at Cowtown provided an inexpensive way to purchase food and supplies.

Rodeo activities include Calf and Team Roping contests, Bareback Riding and Saddle Bronco.

For those who really enjoy the down and dirty, cowboys participate in Steer Wrestling and Bull-Riding. One of the most popular events includes the Cowgirl race. Female riders run their horses through a tight configuration of barrels at top speeds.

near the end of lines that were affected," said Houck.

According to Houck, the city acted proactively despite the belief that the water was safe. "We relied on the Department of Public Health which told us there was no need to issue any warnings to the public."

Jennifer Castleberry, communications director for Delaware Health & Social Services, said there should have been better communications between Pennsylvania and Delaware. "We found out on Monday (Aug. 17) about the fishkill like everyone else," said Castleberry, but added that it was not until Tuesday that state officials realized something could have entered the utilities' water systems.

"We knew Newark had a good system in place," she said. "But our department also went out to Newark that day and started testing the taps for bacteria and nitrates.'

Tests received back on Wednesday indicated a false positive for coliform bacteria which led state officials to retest. "A gentleman in our department who remembered a similar farm fire in Milwaukee, also suggested we test for cryptosporidium and send letters to hospitals to alert them of possible symptoms."

Since all test results ultimately came back negative, Castleberry said notification of medical professionals was "probably alarming" as well as needless. "We didn't think there was any public health threat at all, but wanted to do the right thing, just in case."

According to city water and waste water director Joseph Dombrowski, Newark's water system is designed to filter out all particulates, including cryptosporidium. However, extra testing was done to preclude malfunction of the system. Houck said when Newark officials found out on Tuesday, Aug. 18, that the fire was at a dairy farm, they hired a firm in New York City to test water from Newark's system for cryptosporidium in addition to city tests for nitrates, ammonia and volatiles. "The results from those tests came back negative on (Aug 21)," said Houck.

Both Houck and Castleberry said any illness from contaminated water would have shown up over the weekend of Aug. 22-23. "But there were no unusual reports of diarrhea or fever in the affected neighborhoods," Houck said.

Castleberry said firefighters in West Grove were supposed to notify water companies downstream of the runoff into the creek. "We are trying to find out how that can be done in the future," said Castleberry. Houck said it was not until Thursday that the city of Newark even got confirmation from United Water Company that they had similar problems in their system. "We're going to be working with DNREC and other state agencies to see a procedure is in place," said Houck. "Newark doesn't want this to happen again without immediate notice."

Blue Hens gear up for season opener

Patrick, Pressey together again

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

T TOOK A LITTLE WHILE but the duo of Butter Pressey and Butch Patrick are together

After spending much of their junior high years racing and competing against each other in gym class, they moved on to Newark High. The two explosive running backs helped Newark High reach a state championship game in 1995.

Together, they went from Newark to Hargrave Military Academy in Virginia for a year of prep school.

A successful season at Hargrave landed both of them scholarships to Virginia Tech. That's, however, where their paths diverged for the first time in a long while.

Pressey, after just a brief stint at Virginia Tech, transferred back to the University of Delaware last fall. He redshirted last season and spent most of the fall as a running back, demonstrating the opposition's offense against the Blue Hens' first-

Patrick remained at Virginia Tech all year. He didn't see action for the Hokies during the season but moved his way up to second team cornerback during spring drills.

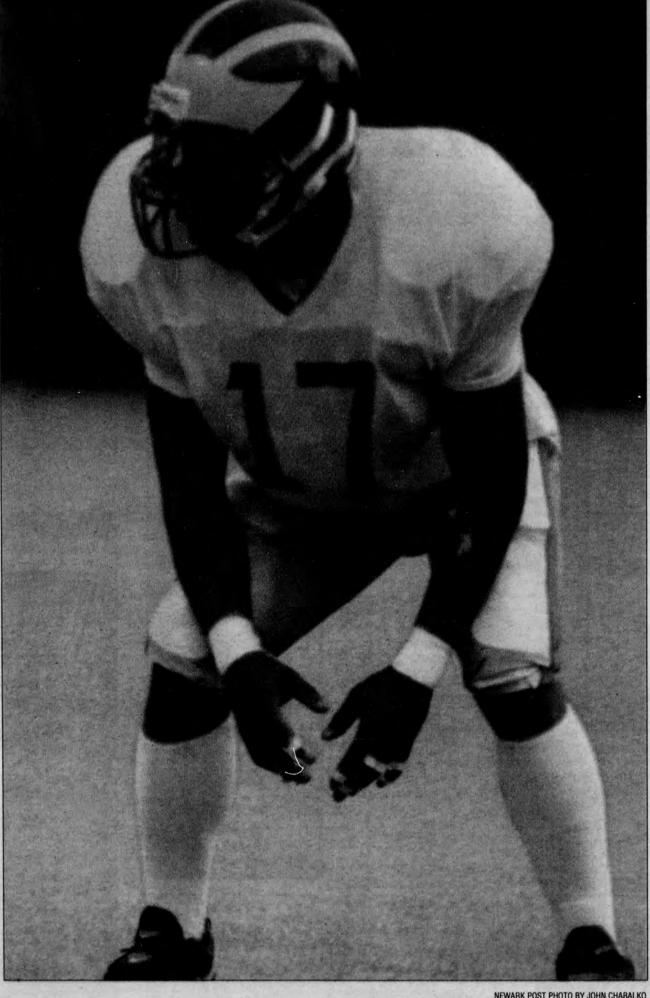

Following the spring, though, Patrick decided to transfer. His first pick was Western Carolina. But after spending some time near the campus during the summer, Patrick realized he was just too far from

That led him back to Newark and back with Pressey.

"It's really good to be home," Patrick said. "I feel I'm now right where I should be."

The Blue Hen coaching staff is obviously pretty happy to see Patrick as well. As of last Saturday afternoon's scrimmage, he had NIVERSITY DELAWARE football fans can get an early look at the team as it opens its season in a rare night game Thursday at 7 at Delaware Stadium against the University of Massachusetts.

The Blue Hens enter the contest as the preseason pick to win the Atlantic-10 conference championship and with a No. 3 national ranking. The game was moved from Saturday afternoon to Thursday night in hopes of drawing fans that would normally be away for Labor Day weekend.

There are good reasons for fans to be as optimistic as the preseason prognostications. Delaware recorded a 12-2 record last season on its way to the Division I-AA semifinals. Only a last second field goal by McNeese State kept the Hens from the national championship

A host of weapons return from last year's team including the two quarterbacks, the backfield and a strong corps of receivers. Defensively, the major losses came at linebacker but a strong corps of young players is expected to bolster that position.

The preseason has done nothing to dampen the enthusiasm. Through the first week and a half of double sessions, Delaware held two scrimmages in which the team performed well.

"I keep telling the team that everyone expects them to be good, so they better struggle to get there," said Delaware coach Tubby Raymond, who will begin his 33rd season as the Hens head coach. "We've gotten better and are progressing to where we want to be.'

St. Mark's soccer preps for state title defense

Spartans must replace nine starters

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

St. Mark's High's soccer team is trying for its second three-peat as state champions.

In order to do that, however, the Spartans must fill nine starting posi-tions from a team that went 18-1-1

But before anyone counts the Spartans out, they're hardly bereft of talent, as coach Tom DeMatteis will have plenty of players returning who saw plenty of action.

DeMatteis has been through a similar rebuilding process. In 1992, coming off two consecutive titles, the Spartans also came back with only two starters to win it all.

"(Repeating) depends on so many things," DeMatteis said, "like who else is in the (tournament) mix, how well we come together; fill in for the guys we lost., and, deal with being the defending champs and with probably playing the toughest schedule of any team in the state.'

PREVIEW

The two returning players who started every game last season are hardly slouches: senior forward Jason Dzielak, a first team All-State selection, scored 27 goals last season, while junior goalkeeper Pete Ferrante was a third team All-State

With 43 career goals, Dzielak needs 12 to tie the school record for

"He'll have even more attention drawn to him," DeMatteis said. That means another guy will-have to step up. In years past when we've had this situation, someone has stepped up."

Other returners who started in some games last season are sophomore forward Adam Stuller; junior Stephen Mangat and senior Jeremy Doucette, both fullbacks; and junior Joe Lazorick and senior Greg Czerwinski, both forwards.

Sophomores Adam Flanigan and Andrew Gibbons - who played on the 11-0-1 JV squad last season - are battling for starting halfback spots.

Also vying for starting roles and playing time are Will Hohman, Eric Gregg, Dustin Marion, Seth Fay, Mark Benson, Cavan Wilk, John McConnell, Nicola Chicci, Joe DiDiego, Brad DiMascio, Chris Foraker; and Matt Fanuele.

The Spartans open their season Sept. 12 at home against Bishop Ireton of Washington.

"I think we have good depth and I'm optimistic that they're going to play well as a team, although it's a little early," DeMatteis said.

"I hope the pieces will come together. The potential is there. There's a number of strong players, but you have to be determined, too."

Returning assistant coaches are Steve Bastianelli, Mike McFarland and Travis Ciriaco.

Christiana hockey team eyes state tournament berth

The Christiana field hockey team is ready for the school's first ever playoff appearance.

"We're going to the state tournament," senior Jenn Carey, who will most likely start as a link, said. "This will be the first year Christiana ever went to the tournament. So we're going. That's all there is to it, we're going.'

Head coach Gayle Gibson, in her fourth year with the team and second as head coach, was more conservative, not making any predictions. Nonetheless, because of the team's experience and dedication she has confidence in the team's ability.

"Honestly, I think we're here to build a tradition," she said. "Field hockey hasn't been a real tradition at Christiana.

"I don't talk about [making the tournament] too much. But the kids are ready to go. They have dedicated themselves over the summer. We had 11 players go to summer [training 'camps], and with the experience, we should improve on last year's record."

Last season the Vikings amassed a 5-5 record in the Blue Hen conference, and 5-11 overall. This year, Christiana returns all but five players. The team will consist of 10 seniors, most of them with substantial playing experience.

Senior Jenn Robinson will be in goal for the third consecutive sea-

"I'm really excited about our goalie," Gibson said. "This is her third year [in net] and she has really done great things for our team. With what she has learned over the past two seasons, we should be solid in goal."

Offensively, the story is one of good news, bad news for the Vikings. The good news is the team returns the most experienced players on this side of the field. The bad news is that Jennifer Weiner, the team's top scorer and best player last season, graduated.

Gibson will look to seniors Anna Germain, Holly Sloniewski, Sarah Noonan and junior Corinne Oakes to provide the scoring this season.

According to Gibson, Carrey will be expected to control the flow of the game on the field.

"She is able to see [the plays] well and understands how they work. So we will look for her to control the play on the field."

Most of last year's graduating seniors came from the defensive side. Still, Gibson feels the defense should be a team strength.

Last year, Kathryn Willaman and Leslie Woods moved from attacking positions to defense when the team suffered injuries to defensive starters. This year, Willaman, Woods and junior Erika Smith will be expected to lead the defense, Gibson said.

The players feel their experience together both on and off the field should help them this year.

"We can respond together," Germain said. "We know what each other is going to do. We're a close group and really good friends. [The friendships] gives the team a sense of togetherness. We all have the same goal."

Gibson said it's important for her team to come out strong. The Vikings open with a home game against Newark on Sept. 11.

"The Blue Hen conference is a really hard conference. The two toughest teams in the conference are William Penn and Brandywine. They are perennial tournament teams. already worked his way up to a second team cornerback.

"I'm happy with where I am right now," said Patrick of his position. "I need to learn the defense more. You can have all the talent in the world, but if you don't know the technical parts of the defense, you won't be able to play.

"I don't mind being second team right now. I don't deserve to start and wouldn't feel comfortable right now. It's the only thing holding me back, but I know I'm going to keep getting better.'

Pressey has had the advantage of a whole extra year to learn the Blue Hens offensive system and should be a key contributor this season.

He's been running with the second team offense much of the preseason. In the team's second scrimmage, however, Pressey got some time with the first string backfield.

"I've been running with the second team most of the practices," Pressey said following Saturday's scrimmage. "But I also have been getting time with the first team. This was the first time I got to play with the first team during a scrimmage."

After running the demo offense all fall, Pressey got his first crack at the Hens Wing-T attack during spring drills. The complexity of the offense was what caused him trouble in his first go-around.

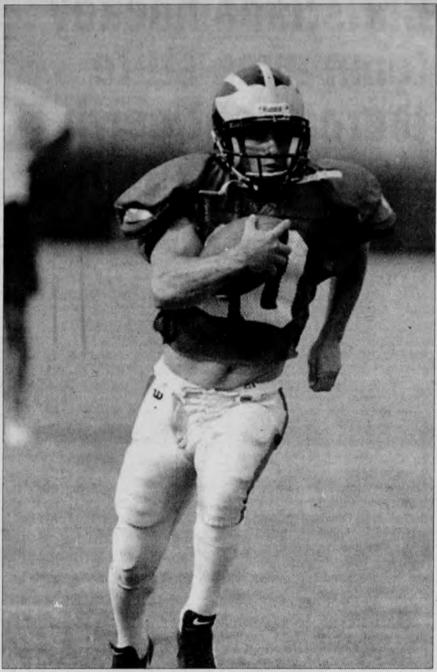

"I've improved a lot since the spring," said Pressey, who rushed for over 1,200 yards in his final season with the Yellowjackets. "Over the summer I worked with the team and I've been putting a lot of time in with the playbook. Now, I feel I know just about everything. It's starting to become where I don't have to think about what I'm going to do on every play.

"I think I'm on the right pace to play. I'm gradually improving. It's a step-by-step process. If I'm not starting against UMass (the Hens opener on Thursday night), I won't be disappointed. I think I'll be able to play during the season."

Pressey is also happy that Patrick has joined the squad.

"Basically, I think we both wanted to come to Delaware all along," he said. "But we got that offer from Virginia Tech. But now we're both here and looking forward to playing in front of the home crowd.

UMass is coming off a 2-9 season and has a brand new head coach in Mark Whipple. Whipple, who was also an offensive coordinator at the University of New Hampshire in 1986-87, compiled a 72-33 career record and comes to Amherst from Brown. He also was head coach at Division II powerhouse New Haven.

Minutemen's strength appears to be a defense that returns six starters including All-Conference candidate Kahri Samuel.

UMass was picked to finish

HIGH SCHOOL FIELD HOCKEY

Experience should help Newark High

By STEVE WESTRICK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Newark High field hockey team is loaded with experience this year. According to second year head coach Jennifer Rowles, 14 players who saw significant playing time last year are back for the 1998 season.

"This is an experienced team," she said. "I didn't think it was going to be [an experienced team] but now that I see them play and realize who's on the field, they're pretty experienced."

Leadership responsibilities will fall to senior captains Jen Deptula and Caroline Muir. In all, Newark will have eight seniors ready to contribute Offensively, the team will have a more attacking approach, said new Newark assistant Krista Boettler. Boettler will work with the varsity offense and coach the junior varsity team.

"On offense we have a lot of talent on the offensive line," said Rowles, who played collegiate field hockey at Central Michigan. "So, I think we will be a scoring team and proficient in putting the pressure on the other goalie."

This offense will be led by the wings, Deptula on the right side, and Jessica Commbs on the left side. Rowles will look to Jen West and Meggin Lynam to get the most work at the two inner positions.

Defensively, Muir, Stephanie Drew, Jen Mindrup, Lia Yohannes and Bridget Callahan should all get time in the backfield.

Rowles said most of the players that will contribute this year played in the William Penn summer league. Under rules, Rowles is not permitted to coach the team, but the players were able to compete together.

Rowles said the league helped both individual players and team chemistry. Individually, she said junior defensive back Yohannes made the most improvement.

And as far as chemistry, she likes what she has seen.

"Over the summer I saw them get comfortable with each other," Rowles said. "They know how each other works and can feed off each other."

Last year's starting goalkeeper Rachel Sklut graduated leaving a void in the net.

"It's going to be tough to replace [Sklut], but I think we have potential," Rowles said.

To realize that potential, Newark will look to junior Megan McMillian. If McMillian is not effective, Rowles will turn to sophomore Stephanie Hartsoe.

Newark will open its season at Christiana on Sept. 11

"We're going to surprise some people," Rowles said. "I think this team definitely has the potential to have a good season and reach the tournament."

HIGH SCHOOL SOCCER

Defense key to Glasgow success

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

If Glasgow High's soccer team was in the legal profession as defenders only, it might not lose a "case" this season.

But winning soccer games also requires offense, and if the Dragons are going to make it back to the state tournament, that's what they'll have to show evidence of.

Glasgow, which finished 13-5 last season and lost to eventual champion St. Mark's in the state quarterfinals, opens its 16-game schedule Sept. 11 at William Penn.

"Defense will be our strength, and if a core group of players play the way they're capable of and stay focused, we could win as many games as we did last season," said Glasgow coach Bob Bussiere.

"If we don't, we also have the capability of self-destructing. Things have to go well for us. We're going to do a lot of positions by commitee."

Bussiere faces the task of replacing two of his offensive giants for the past four seasons: David Hudson, now at the University of Delaware, and midfielder Ivan Vidanovic, who was killed in an automobile accident last January.

Defense will be our strength."

BOB BUSSIERE

GLASGOW SOCCER COACH

Even though Vidanovic was a senior, his presence is still being felt, Bussiere said. And the team has and will continue to be in contact with Ivan's mother, Milinka, through visits and phone calls.

Goalkeeper David Scruggs, a junior who was second team

All-State selection last season, leads the defense.

Others who either started or saw plenty of playing time last season include: fullbacks Chester Harding and D.C. Lavender, midfielders Jody Martin and Brian Scholl, and forwards Justin Iacono, Ryan Bordas, and Abe Nimroozi.

Bussiere also may get help from some players from last season's junior varsity team that went 12-0-2.

Bob Varell will be an assistant coach for the second consectuive season.

Bussiere said Christiana should be the team to beat in Flight A as well as a favorite to win the state title along with St. Mark's.

"In order to win the conference, you almost have to go undefeated; one loss at the minimum," said Bussiere, who led the Dragons to the state title in 1995. "We finished with a 6-1 record two years in a row and didn't win it."

Iron Hill Brewery introduces new ales to its beer line

Iron Hill Brewery & Restaurant introduced cask-conditioned ales to their beer line this summer. Caskconditioned versions of Iron Hill's regular beers, including their pale ale and porter, as well as specials such as Extra Special bitter, will be available late this month.

Iron Hill's cask conditioned ales will be served at 55 degrees Fahrenheit. This is the temperature that beers were served before the advent of refrigeration, when beer was stored in the pub's cellar, and pulled to the bar using a hand pump known as a beer engine.

"One of our goals was to provide our customers with fresh, handcrafted beers that are brewed in traditional ways and to classical styles," said Mark Edelson, one of Iron Hill's brewers and partners. "Cask conditioned ales are one of the styles that have been revived by the small brewers in the United States and England."

Cask conditioned, or real ales, draught beers that are served using traditional ingredients, are matured by secondary fermentation in the container they are dispensed from, and are served using only the carbon dioxide that is produced from fermentation. Casks were traditionally made of oak, but today stainless steel and aluminum are more comfermentation in the large fermentation tanks before being filtered and transferred to large serving tanks (265 gallons). But Iron Hill's cask conditioned ales will be racked to firkins (11-gallon metal casks) before they complete fermentation.

We continually try to educate our customers to new and traditional styles of beer."

MARK EDELSON

This allows the ale to be naturally carbonated using the gas produced in fermentation. The casks are vented to release pressure.

The most obvious difference to the discriminating beer drinker is the way the ale is served. The bartender "pulls" the ale using the traditional English beer engine. The long neck of the beer engine reaches the bottom of the pint glass, where it is forced through a "sparkler" (an outlet typically made Normally, the beer completes with 16 holes of 0.6 mm each). This forms a tight head on the beer, which makes the beer taste smoother and less bitter.

All beer was cask conditioned until the advent of mass production and refrigeration, two conditions that helped lead to the demise of small brewers. Just 25 years ago cask conditioned, or real ale, was about to go the way of the dinosaur, but a brewing revival was about to take place to save real ales and the publican way of life. CAMRA, the Campaign for Real Ales, convinced Englishmen to request real ales at their local pubs, and slowly revived the style. Before CAMRA was founded, no new ale breweries had opened in England for over 50 years. Since it's founding over 25 years ago, over 300 breweries have been started in England that produce real ale.

In the United States, the style is being revived mostly by a few brew pubs throughout the country.

"We don't see it as a style that will spread to the mainstream microbrewery and brewpub fan," says Edelson. Because cask conditioned ale is served warm and has a higher flavor profile, he feels that there is only a small market for the product. "But we continually try to educate out customers to new and traditional styles of beer," he said.

Labor office collects record wages

The Department's of Labor's Office of Labor Law Enforcement announced that it collected a record total of over $1,327,000 for 1,095 unpaid or underpaid workers and victims for discrimination in Fiscal Year 1998. This represents a 105 percent increase over 1997.

is a result of the outstanding efforts of the staff of the office of Labor Law Enforcement," says Lisa Blunt-Bradley, Secretary of Labor. "Their continued diligence on behalf of Delaware workers is commendable.'

Wage claims, such as money "This record breaking collection recovered for unpaid wages or fringe benefits, accounted for 50.3 percent of the total collected and discrimination cases announced for 49.78 percent. The agency received 1,064 wage claims and 314 charges of discrimination during Fiscal Year 1998. The office enforces 24 state and federal labor laws.
