Countdown parking signs intended to help drivers

Signs provide real-time count of open spaces

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

The days of pulling into a Main Street parking lot and crossing your fingers that a space is available will soon be a thing of the past.

This week, the city's parking division installed countdown signs at both entrances to Lot 1, behind the Main Street Galleria. The solar-powered signs provide a real-time count of the number of open spaces in the lot.

"It will allow the customer to be confident when they enter the parking lot that there will be spaces available," Parking Administrator Marvin Howard said. "We're trying to put a better environment out there for our parkers."

The signs, which have been in the works for more than a year, are being tested in Lot 1 only. If they work as expected, the city will install similar signs at each entrance of the other two pay-to-park lots,

A helping hand

Several groups pitch in to help those in need this Thanksgiving

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Hundreds of Newarkers had a happier Thanksgiving this year because of a number of volunteer projects that collected and distributed turkeys and other food this week.

"It's about service and giving back," Richard Williams Sr. said as he helped hand out turkeys outside Brookside Elementary School on Saturday morning. "The service we do is the rent we pay to live on this earth."

Williams and a number of other volunteers handed out approximately 200 turkeys as part of a philanthropic effort started by Kimberton natives Mark Hendrix and Jermaine Earl in 2003.

Their project started small, distributing 40 turkeys to Kimberton residents in need. Over the years, that effort has grown in scale and expanded to include Brookside and other surrounding neighborhoods.

Together in thanks

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

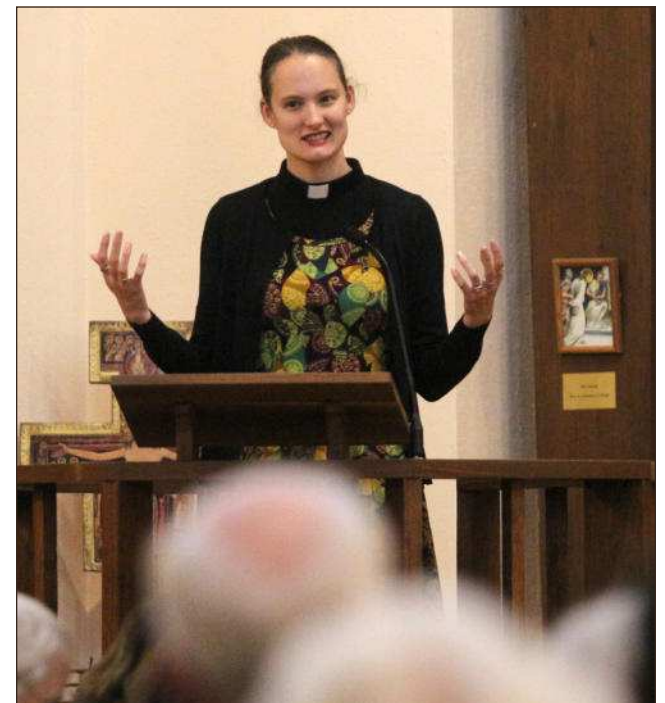

More than 100 Newarkers from numerous religions gathered Tuesday evening to give thanks.

St. Thomas's Episcopal Church hosted the annual interfaith Thanksgiving service, which each year rotates between different churches in the area. The interfaith service was first held in 1989 and became an annual event beginning in 1992.

Nearly a dozen clergy members representing different faiths and denominations spoke at Tuesday's service.

"This is truly a sacred moment," Sheikh Abdel Hadi, of the Islamic Society of Delaware, said as he noted how nice it is to see people of various faiths come together. "This is the true meaning of Thanksgiving."

During the service, The Rev. Emma Horn, associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Newark, asked those gathered to turn to the person next to them and have a brief conversation.

The Rev. Emma Horn, associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Newark, said it is important to engage with people of different faiths.

She added that most people worship with people who look like them and have similar beliefs, so it's important to take time to reach out to others.

"Keep making spaces to hear each other's stories," Horn said. "Make spaces for these conversations. That's what we're called to do as a family of faith."

Newark nonprofit Water is Life Kenya celebrates 10 years

By DARA MCBRIDE
Special to the Post

Consider how many times, and how many ways, you will use water before leaving the house for the day. Now imagine the closest water source is several miles away, and you must walk three hours to get there.

It's a mental task Newark native Joyce Tannian invites locals to do when trying to explain the work she does as founder of a nonprofit that brings water to communities in southern Kenya.

"It's hard for people to imagine that water can be such a serious issue, so you have to continuously meet people and bring it to life to people," Tannian said.

And it's a challenge Tannian has been meeting for the past 10 years. Her charity, Water is Life Kenya, recently celebrated its 10th anniversary with a gala earlier month.

Tannian's journey started a few years before that, when she was living in New York City and witnessed the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. The experience made her question what she could be doing to make the world a more positive place.

"What if more people used their life's energy to help others? What would the world be like?" Tannian, who is a trained singer, asked. "And all you can do is start with your own self, right? So that's what I decided to do."

She traveled to Kenya as a volunteer in 2006, and learned of the need for clean, accessible water in rural communities. A year later, she founded the nonprofit – which gets its name from a Kenyan saying – and since then Water is Life Kenya's 16 major water projects have brought water to nearly 50,000 people, Tannian said.

Looking back, Tannian said she had no idea where the idea would take her or the work involved in organizing a water project. She spends several months each year in Kenya, but must regularly return to Newark, where the nonprofit has an office at 314 E. Main St. Tannian will return to Kenya in January and then be back in Newark in April for the annual Water Walk at the Newark Reservoir.

Only in recent years did the nonprofit add staff members in the form of a U.S. program director and Kenyan field manager. Tannian estimates the nonprofit has a donor base of between 700 and 800 people, 40 to 50 dedicated volunteers and a cash budget of $200,000.

That work and money goes into assessing a community's needs, digging wells and mentoring leaders to manage the resulting water supply. Beyond the water projects, by bringing in resources and freeing up a community's time, Water is Life Kenya also helps community literacy, opens up business opportunities and improves hygiene.

"Clean water transforms communities," Tannian said.

Communities that Water is Life Kenya aids continue to be involved with the nonprofit, Tannian said. In 2011, the nonprofit added the Livestock as Business project to train and grant microloans to organized trading cooperatives.

Another arm of the nonprofit buys beaded handiwork from Kenyan women, giving them another source of income, Tannian said. From now through Dec. 16, the Water is Life Kenya office will host a Holiday Warehouse Sale – Fridays, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. – with purchases supporting the Kenyan artists behind the purses, jewelry and decorations.

Looking forward to the next 10 years, Tannian said her goal is for all the people in Water is Life Kenya communities to have strong resource management skills, hopefully protecting them from future devastating droughts. She imagines the nonprofit may also be able to someday serve other parts of Kenya.

Having seen how bringing water to a community can help in many ways, Tannian said she thinks there are more layers that can be added to Water is Life Kenya's mission.

"Instead of doing something additional," Tannian said, "I would like to do something deeper."

Newark woman sentenced to four years for embezzlement scheme

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

A Newark woman will spend the next four years in federal prison after embezzling more than $6 million from her employer to support her gambling habit.

Roberta Czap, 67, was sentenced last week after pleading guilty earlier this year to one count of wire fraud, one count of money laundering, and one count of making false statements on tax returns.

While working as the vice president of accounting at a financial services company in Newark, Czap made nearly 500 unauthorized transfers from the company's accounts into her personal bank account, according to court records, which do not identify the company.

She disguised these transactions, ranging from $1,000 to $38,527, as payments to corporate health insurance or payments to corporate marketers and altered the company's ledger to further conceal her actions.

She and her husband spent nearly $3 million on tables games and slot machines at a casino, according to court documents. They also used casinos to launder money.

Earlier this year, her husband, Matthew Czap, was sentenced to a year in prison for his role in the crimes.

"Ms. Czap's four-year prison sentence should serve as a warning to others contemplating similar crimes that such conduct will eventually catch up with you and you will be held accountable," David C. Weiss, acting United States attorney for the District of Delaware, said in a prepared statement.

Police believe these men stole from the GameStop in Suburban Plaza.

Police seek help identifying College Square shoplifter

Police are searching for a man who stole $250 worth of merchandise from a grocery store in College Square Shopping Center last week.

The theft happened at 10:15 p.m. Nov. 11 at the Acme, according to Sgt. Gerald Bryda, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department. The man entered the store and stole several boxes of Crest Whitestrips.

Bryda released a surveillance photo of the man and asked for the public's help identifying him. No detailed description was provided.

Anyone with information about the identity of the shoplifter is asked to contact Master Cpl. Jay Conover at 302-366-7100 ext. 3443 or jconover@newark.de.us.

Police believe this man stole $250 worth of Crest Whitestrips from the Acme in College Square.

Man charged with 4th DUI after striking pole in motel parking lot

An intoxicated man who allegedly was acting disorderly at a Newark motel and then crashed his truck into a pole outside has been charged with his fourth count of DUI, police said.

Police were called to the Red Roof Inn, 1119 S. College Ave., just after 2:30 p.m. Sunday after motel employees reported a drunk man acting disorderly in the lobby because he was upset that his room wasn't ready, according to Sgt. Gerald Bryda, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The man then left the motel and sped away in his pickup truck, striking a pole and a flower pot, Bryda said. Officers arrived and found the man and his damaged trunk in the parking lot of the nearby Friendly's restaurant.

The driver, identified as Henry B. Smith, 53, of Port Deposit, Md., had a bottle of vodka in his back pocket, Bryda said.

Smith was charged with fourth-offense DUI, criminal mischief, open container of alcohol and failure to report a collision. He was released after posting $2,000 secured bail.

Police seek men who stole from GameStop

Police are searching for two men who stole items from a video game store in Suburban Plaza earlier this month.

A customer at GameStop reported seeing a man take a game controller off the shelf at around noon on Nov. 7, and employees confirmed that report by looking at surveillance footage, according to Lt. Fred Nelson, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department. While reviewing the tape, the employees noticed that the man and an accomplice also stole two baseball caps.

The stolen items are worth a total of $115.

Police released surveillance images of the two thieves but did not provide detailed descriptions.

Anyone with information about the identities of the suspects should contact Det. Taras Gerasimov at 302-366-7100 ext. 3474 or TGerassimov@newark.de.us.

Vandal damages Newark church's van

The Newark Police Department is seeking the public's help identifying the person who smashed the window of a van belonging to a Barksdale Road church last week.

The incident happened sometime between the morning of Nov. 15 and the morning of Nov. 16 outside Pilgrim Baptist Church, said Sgt. Gerald Bryda, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

"After reviewing surveillance footage, a small, dark-colored pickup truck is seen stopping several different times on the shoulder of Barksdale Road near the van, and staying idle for approximately one minute," Bryda said. "The van then drives off."

No description of the suspect is available.

Anyone with information on this vehicle is asked to contact Officer Alex Whitt at 302-366-7100 ext. 3483 or AWhitt@newark.de.us.

Hundreds run in annual Turkey Trot races

Ashley Whitte, of Bear, waves as she heads down Barksdale Road at the start of the Turkey Trot 5K on Saturday morning.

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

More than 600 people, some wearing colorful turkey hats and other Thanksgiving-related costumes, participated in the Turkey Trot 5K and 10K races on Saturday morning.

The races, organized by the Newark Parks and Recreation Department, began at Handloff Park and snaked through the neighborhoods in northwestern Newark.

Now in its 45th year, the Turkey Trot is the second-oldest consecutively-run race in the state and raises money to give assistance to kids who would otherwise be unable to participate in activities and programs through Newark Parks and Recreation Department.

Iddriss Iddriss, 19, of Middletown, won the 5K for the third-straight year, while Evan Massa, 19, of Wilmington placed first in the 10K. Leah-Kate Lounsbury, 30, of Newark, was the top female finisher in both races.

Matthew Curtis Porter, of West Grove, Pa., runs the Turkey Trot wearing a pumpkin pie hat.

Runners head down Barksdale Road at the start of the Turkey Trot 5K on Saturday morning.

UD tennis team 'signs' inspirational 7-year-old

By JANE BELLMYER

jbellmyer@chespub.com

He's still in elementary school, but 7-year-old Trace Coudon has signed a letter of intent with the University of Delaware to become an honorary member of the tennis team through a program called Team IMPACT.

The Rising Sun, Md., second-grader didn't say much but was all smiles as he wrote his name on the papers at the Bob Carpenter Center on Nov. 16 along with Pablo Montana, coach of the team.

"We're signing a star recruit to our team today," Montana said as he introduced the youngster at a press conference. "We're thrilled to have Trace as part of our team. He has earned a spot through all his hard work."

Team IMPACT connects children with life threatening or chronic illnesses to college teams. The nonprofit based in Quincy, Mass., has 1,300 kids enrolled across the United States according to Ellen Augsburger, relationship manager.

"We work on a referral basis with families, through a social worker or child counselor," Augsburger said.

Once the child is enrolled, Team IMPACT searches for a college either near the home or the place where the child receives treatment.

"We do work with community colleges, universities," she said, adding that it is up to the school and the coaching staff.

Trace has a rare form of epilepsy called autosomal dominant nocturnal frontal lobe epilepsy, which strikes at night. When he was 3, Trace began having clusters of seizures in the middle of the night and become disori-ented and agitated. Sometimes it would take days to recover.

Over the summer he got Hulu, a yellow Labrador retriever mix. The family raised $15,000 two years ago to obtain the service dog through 4 Paws for Ability. Heather Coudon, Trace's mother, said the two continue to train and bond. She said Trace is still getting acclimated, and Hulu has not yet gone to classes with him.

"The school is really excited to have her," Coudon said. Hulu has accompanied Trace to several after-school activities and did well, she added.

Hulu's job is to alert the family when Trace will have a seizure and to provide a calming and secure presence during and afterward.

Montana said tennis season would begin in the spring. In the meantime, he and the team hang out with Trace, teaching him about their game while he schools them on Wiffle ball.

"They are amazing," Coudon said of the young men and women on the UD team. "He asks when he's coming back."

Whenever Trace works out the with UD team, a parent is present. His interaction is based on his physical, emotional and mental abilities, Augsburger said.

"They can be part of all activities and practices," she said, adding that some teams will invite their youngster to end of season celebrations and award ceremonies. The contract lasts two years.

"Then they will have a graduation and celebrate the accomplishments the child had made with Team IMPACT," she said. "But that's not to say the relationship has to end."

After the ink was dry on the letters, Montana handed Trace his own tennis racket, a team hat and a team shirt with COUDON printed across the shoulders.

"They gave him his own locker in the locker room and they played Wiffle ball with him for two hours," Heather said.

Six months into this relationship Team IMPACT will check in with the Coudons, the UD team and the medical people in charge of Trace's care, Augsburger said. Other Team IMPACT participants report success and she expects the same for Trace.

"They'll see a huge difference," she said, and that the kids usually gain more self confidence and build relationships with the players and coaches. "These are changes that medicine couldn't do."

The one downside to this is that Trace can't play tennis for the Blue and Gold when he finishes high school.

"It does affect his NCAA eligibility at that university," Augsburger said, adding that does not negate his eligibility to play for another school, or a different sport at UD.

Newark High coach inducted into track hall of fame

Gordon Thomson was recently inducted into the Delaware Track & Field Hall of Fame.

The Delaware Track and Field Hall of Fame has officially become a family affair for the Thomson family.

Gordon Thomson joined his father Bill, mother Anne, and sister Carol as a member of the Hall of Fame during an induction ceremony held at Cavaliers Country Club on Tuesday. He is now part of an elite group of 125 total individuals and three teams enshrined in the Hall of Fame, which was founded in 1984.

"I was happy mainly for my father and mother, since they were the onslaught of what's cooking here in the family as far as track goes," Thomson said. "I was so happy they could enjoy it. More happy for them than for me. I'm not one for public accolades, but that's the way it rolls."

Bill and Carol Thomson were inducted as part of the inaugural class, and Anne Thomson was inducted in 2010.

Also inducted this month as part of the 24th Hall of Fame class were Alexandra Coppadge (Wilmington Friends/University of North Carolina), Eric Eckstrand (Salesianum/Navy), Melissa Grubb (Concord/Villanova) and Pam Hohler (Glasgow/University of Delaware).

Unlike many coaches, who begin at the high school level and work their way up to the collegiate ranks, Thomson chose the opposite path.

After an All-State running career at Newark High, Thomson went on to compete at the University of Florida in the 3,000-meter steeplechase event. And it was then, at his alma mater, that Thomson began what would become an illustrious 30-year collegiate coaching career.

"It was a nepotistic move," Thomson said with a laugh. "I was hired at Florida by my sister Carol. It was fun working with blood."

After helping put the Florida girls team on the map, Thomson's next step took him out of the heat and humidity of the Deep South up to Northwestern University in Illinois, where he was enticed to become an assistant under Mike Muska, who had just arrived from Auburn University.

And then, in 1984 at the age of 24, Thomson became the youngest cross country/track and field head coach in the country when he was hired by Loyola University-Chicago.

"Building the teams at Loyola while recruiting kids from the same area code and having those guys to build the program together as a family was a phenomenal experience for me as a young coach," Thomson said of his 15 years at Loyola-Chicago, where he was named Conference Coach of the Year several times.

Thomson then moved across town to become the head coach of the men's and women's programs at DePaul. He left the Blue Demons program after seven years and moved back to the south to become an assistant with the men's and women's programs at Clemson University.

"I really liked the small town setting at Clemson," Thomson said of the move. "It had easy-going country folks who loved their college athletics. Clemson was so easy to recruit to, all you had to do was invite them to a football game. There were 85,000 people dressed in bright orange. It was quite a sight."

Three years later, Thomson would make his final collegiate coaching move, back into the role of head coach. This time at St. Francis University (Pa.).

"The new head coach that I worked under [at Clemson] was young and raw," he explained. "As a result, I had a strong desire to lead my own program again. When the Saint Francis position opened, I hopped on it because [the town] had much of the same country atmosphere that Clemson did."

Thomson's coaching experiences during those years also included stints with USA Track & Field. He worked with runners at the Pan American Junior Championships, IAAF World Indoor Championships and IAAF World Junior Championships. Thomson also served as the Olympic Development Chairman for the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

"That was the fun part of the labors of coaching," Thomson said of the international experience. "When you get on a USA team, it's all about connections and being an assistant coach on that [2006] Moscow trip with John Carlos, who is perhaps best known for his protest on the medal stand [at the 1968 Olympics], and getting to be close to him was one of the highlights of my life because I always revered those guys and what they did at those [1968] games."

But after all those years of coaching at elite levels, the idea of returning to his high school alma mater lured the former Newark great back in 2012.

"I was at a point of finding the end of one career and starting another," Thomson reflected. "The time was right."

That first year back in town, Thomson became an assistant boys cross country coach under current coach Mike Mooney and then took over the girls cross country and track and field teams the following year.

"Gordon has brought a lot of best practices to Newark, learned during his many years of coaching college and national athletes," Mooney said. "He has made a big impact teaching the finer details of the more technical events, such as throws and hurdling."

An alternative teacher at Newark during the school day, Thomson has coached some of the area's finest runners in the afternoons and on weekends. He rattled off a long list of distinguished runners who were successful under his tutelage, but in the next sentence talked about his true passion for coaching at the high school level.

"The most rewarding part is building a philosophy on a cross country team where pack-running is something enjoyable to do."

As for his own running these days?

"I putz, I don't run," he said, smiling.

Glasgow football players promote literacy at Brader Elementary

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Several Glasgow High School football players returned to their roots last week to donate magazine subscriptions and promote literacy at Brader Elementary tary School.

The team raised nearly $2,000 for the school by soliciting donations from relatives, friends and other community members.

"I'm trying to get my guys to understand they need to give back to the community," Glasgow head coach Michael Richardson said.

Many of the players spent their early years at Brader, which is in Glasgow's feeder pattern and located just a mile away from the high school.

"It's good for them to come back and help out where they started," Richardson said.

The players visited the school Nov. 13 to present the donation and talk to several classes of Brader students who gathered in the school's cafeteria. The players discussed their favorite books and took questions from the students.

Richardson reminded the students to pay attention to their studies.

"You have to exercise your minds as well as your bodies," he said.

Brader Principal Jeanette Ganc said the magazines will be distributed to each classroom, with others going to the school library.

"It was so heartwarming," Ganc said. "It feels really good that they gave back."

She added that she is working on establishing a mentoring program in which Glasgow students would come to Brader once a week to work with the students.

Dyan Kaufmann, Brader's reading specialist, said the donation will help advance the school's recent literacy initiatives. Brader is also raising money for a school-wide book program, in which all 560 students will receive a copy of the same book to read with their parents.

Brookside volunteers aim to send message to graffiti taggers

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

As traffic zipped by on a sunny but breezy afternoon, Bill Wheatley stood alongside East Chestnut Hill Road rolling brown paint over graffiti on a fence that separates the Brookside community from the busy road.

Wheatley – who, in his words, “eats, sleeps and drinks crime prevention” – said it’s important to send the message that the neighborhood won’t tolerate graffiti.

“It’s very simple. The faster you get it off, these graffiti taggers know they are being watched,” he said. “They won’t come back for a while because they are afraid they will get caught.”

Wheatley, who has lived in Brookside’s Little K section since 1977, was part of a small group of volunteers who gathered Sunday to take care of the graffiti located near the corner of East Chestnut Hill Road and Old Newark Road. The effort was organized by State Rep. Ed Osienski, who represents the area.

Osienski said the state has a program in which those sentenced to community service, often for graffiti offenses, help paint over graffiti. However, it takes a while to get on the program’s schedule, and he was worried it wouldn’t happen quickly, especially as the weather gets colder.

Instead, the Delaware Department of Transportation offered to supply the paint and rollers if Osienski recruited some volunteers.

“I’m hoping the person who tagged this fence has either matured or gotten it out of their system so they don’t come back and hit it again,” Osienski said as he helped paint the fence.

It’s refreshing to see community members willing to step up and help, he added.

“Maybe it will catch on,” he said. “It doesn’t take a lot. A couple hours can make a big difference.”

State Sen. Bryan Townsend, who also pitched in Sunday, echoed those sentiments.

“It shows taggers that the community will come together and paint right over it,” Townsend said. “Little things like this can make a big difference in community pride.”

City to pay $1,000 to shuttle Beast of the East attendees

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

When the Beast of the East wrestling tournament comes to town next month, the city of Newark will fund a bus to shuttle the wrestlers and their families to the restaurants on Main Street and elsewhere.

“It’s a good opportunity to enhance and showcase our businesses and restaurants,” Councilman Jerry Clifton said last week as council informally agreed that the city would take on the expense.

Acting City Manager Tom Coleman said it will cost approximately $1,000 to run a Unicity bus along a special route on the weekend of the tournament, which is set for Dec. 16-17 at the Bob Carpenter Center. The free Unicity buses, a collaboration between the city, the University of Delaware and the state, typically only run on weekdays.

Now in its 25th year, Beast of the East is one of the largest high school wrestling tournaments in the country and last year drew more than 850 wrestlers from 16 states.

Coleman said the tournament’s organizers asked if the city would consider running the bus.

“They’ve had issues with people being unable to get downtown to eat during the event and get back in time,” he said.

Coleman said he will work to devise a route that will include stops on East Main Street, South Main Street and Suburban Plaza. The money will come from the planning and development department budget for bus operations.

Though council generally was in support, Councilman Mark Morehead suggested Coleman ask the Downtown Newark Partnership to pitch in to help pay for the bus, considering that downtown businesses will benefit from the bus bringing them customers.

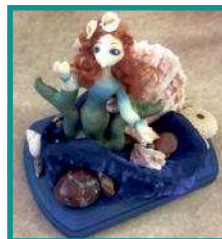

Councilman Stu Markham told Coleman to ask the tournament organizers to provide the city with space or airtime for a public service announcement in exchange for funding the bus.

A representative of Beast of the East did not respond to multiple requests for comment.

HELP

"It's definitely a blessing to give back to the families," said Hendrix, who now lives in New Jersey but still returns to his old neighborhood each year to participate in the turkey distribution.

The turkeys were purchased with funds donated by The Journey Church, as well as several Brookside businesses. Volunteers from Journey and the Newark High School football team were on hand to help out Saturday morning.

At White Clay Creek Presbyterian Church, volunteers packed 36 Thanksgiving meal bags, complete with a turkey, all the fixings, dessert and a Bible. Each year, the church receives names of families in need from local social workers.

Church members shopped for the food and assembled the bags. On Tuesday evening, social workers picked up the bags from the church and delivered them to the families.

"It's such a blessing to be able to do this," said Katie Melville, who organized the effort this year.

By far, though, the largest food distribution effort was undertaken by the Food Bank of Delaware.

Spokeswoman Kim Turner said that last Friday, the Food Bank handed out 1,100 meal boxes to churches, schools and other organizations that, in turn, distributed them to people in need. The Food Bank also gave turkeys and other food to shelters, food closets and other efforts in the area.

The Food Bank's "Thanksgiving for All" drive began Oct. 1, and since then, donors have contributed 77,000 pounds of food as well as significant monetary donations.

"It's always nice to see the outpouring of support from the community during the holiday season," Turner said.

Several local schools got into the act, as well.

Thurgood Marshall Elementary has a strong partnership with the Food Bank, and this year, the school collected corn and corn bread mix which was used in Thanksgiving food baskets for needy families. The students ultimately collected more than 800 pounds of food, teacher Nancy Ventresca said.

Keene Elementary donated 35 Thanksgiving meals to the school's families in need. Principal Mariellen Tarabotti credited donations from Keene staff members and students as well as Delaware State Police Troop 2, the YMCA and Word of Life Church.

Students at Leasure Elementary traveled to the Food Bank's warehouse to help pack Thanksgiving food boxes.

The Christina Early Education Center provided 30 of its families with Thanksgiving meals. Members of the Dover Air Force Base Lodge #28 and employees of JPMorgan Chase donated dinner boxes, and the school's staff purchased additional items such as juice, peanut butter, macaroni and cheese and crackers to add to the boxes, Principal Rebecca Ryan said.

Meanwhile, the city of Newark also did its part, hosting a Food Bank collection barrel in the lobby of city hall.

Volunteers help hand out turkeys in the parking lot of Brookside Elementary School on Saturday.

"This is the time of year when many of us reflect on what we are thankful for, while recognizing there are others who are less fortunate," Acting City Manager Tom Coleman said in a prepared statement. "Partnering with the Food Bank of Delaware and serving as a collection site allows us to support those in need and we hope our friends and neighbors join us in this effort."

Those who missed out on contributing to the Thanksgiving drives needn't worry. There are a number of collection drives planned for Christmas as well.

The Newark Area Welfare Committee is collecting food for its annual holiday food boxes, which are distributed to hundreds of Newarkers during the week before Christmas. Non-perishable donations can be dropped off at Minsters Jewelers in Newark Shopping Center or First Presbyterian Church of Newark at 292 W. Main St. Frozen turkeys can be taken to Pro Foods at 136 Sandy Drive.

Newark's city hall, 220 S. Main St., is also hosting a second collection barrel for the Food Bank through Dec. 20. The most needed items include: canned fruits, hot & cold cereal, canned meat, peanut butter, grains, canned & dried beans, canned vegetables, 100 percent fruit/vegetable juice and healthy snacks.

New countdown signs were installed this week at the entrances to Lot 1 behind the Main Street Galleria. Once activated, the signs will display a real-time count of how many parking spaces are empty.

SIGNS

From

Lot 3 behind Caffé Gelato and Lot 4 behind Panera Bread.

Eventually, the city will install a sign toward the beginning of Main Street – likely just past Newark Shopping Center – that will display the counts from all three lots, allowing drivers to make a decision about where to park as they enter the central business district.

A future stage of the project could involve displaying the counts on a mobile app and/or website, which could also provide real-time information on the location of vacant parking meters.

"We've got a lot of big plans for this," Howard said, adding that he hopes to install the rest of the signs by early next year. "It's something we need here in the city of Newark."

Lot 1 previously had a sign that indicated when the lot was full, but the countdown signs will provide more detailed information. Officials say that simple "lot full" signs are often ignored but hope parkers will give more credence to the countdown signs and recognize that the system is keeping accurate track of spaces in the lot.

The installation of the signs comes as the city is considering doubling the cost to park in city lots during the busiest times of the day. Under the proposal, the cost to park would double to $2 per hour Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The current $1-per-hour rate will remain on weekends, nights and during the summer. Additionally, meters in the central business district would permanently increase from $1.25 to $2 per hour, while the cost of some meters in less-trafficked areas would decrease to $1.

Officials were ready to implement the lot increases last month but delayed the price hikes amid backlash from business owners. City council is slated to discuss the increases on Dec. 11.

Meanwhile, the long-discussed proposal to build a parking garage in Lot 1 remains stalled.

In January, five developers proposed their ideas for a mixed-use parking garage. No formal vote was taken, but a majority of council members signaled their desire to move forward with the process and release a second request for proposal seeking more detailed plans.

Nearly 11 months later, though, city administrators have yet to bring an RFP to council for a vote. Over the summer, officials said the RFP would be ready for a vote in late July or early August, but that never came to fruition.

Biden recounts losing son and finding hope once more

Former VP's book tour makes stop at UD

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

After two New York Police Department officers were murdered in 2014, Joe Biden traveled to New York to speak at their funerals. At the home of officer Wenjian Liu, the vice president consoled his father, Wei Tang Liu.

"All he would do is hug me, grab me and hold me," Biden recalled last week, adding that Liu knew Biden was no stranger to the grief of losing a child. "He said, 'I know you know, I know you know.' He was talking about the accident that killed my wife and daughter."

Six months later, after Biden's son Beau died, Liu repaid the favor, driving to Wilmington and waiting in line for hours outside St. Anthony of Padua Church to pay his respects to the Biden family during a public viewing.

"All he did was grab me and hug me and start to sob. He was there to give me the support I gave him," Biden recalled.

"I can't tell you how much it meant to Jill and I."

That sense of grief was the theme of Biden's talk at the University of Delaware, part of a tour to promote his book, "Promise Me, Dad," in which he writes about Beau's cancer diagnosis and May 2015 death.

Novelist Lea Carpenter, a close friend of Beau and the Biden family, moderated the Nov. 16 discussion, which focused primarily on Beau's life and the impact his death had on the former vice president. Biden and Carpenter largely avoided discussion of policy or any future political aspirations, though Carpenter did tease the audience.

"I have time for one more question, which really must be asked, which is when are you going to announce..." she asked, pausing as audience members cheered, "...that Finnegan Biden will be the first United States president that's a woman?"

Finnegan – Biden's college-age granddaughter and the daughter of his son Hunter – took an interest in world politics from an early age, Biden said.

Biden held up a card he carries that lists the number of troops killed and wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan. Their families, too, are grieving and need the nation's support, he said.

"I didn't write this book to talk about our family's grief. I wrote this book so people could learn about my Beau and Hunter," he said. "I also wrote the book to make it clear that there is hope, that you can find hope and purpose."

After the 1972 crash that killed his wife and daughter, and again after Beau's death, countless people offered their condolences and said they knew what Biden was going through.

"You know they mean well but you feel like saying 'You have no idea how I feel,'" he told the crowd gathered at the Trabant University Center. "I hope you never get to that place."

He recounted advice he received after his wife's death: Each day write down on a calendar a number from one to 10 to indicate how you felt that day, and after six months, chart the numbers on a graph.

"What you'll find is the down days are just as down but they get further and further apart," he said. "I did that, and it's true."

Historical marker honors 1st Delaware Regiment

SUBMITTED PHOTO

Bill Conley, president of the local chapter of the Washington-Rochambeau Revolutionary Route Association, stands with a new historical marker in Christiana.

POST STAFF REPORT

A new historical marker in the town of Christiana pays tribute to the 1st Delaware Regiment, which fought in the Revolutionary War.

The sign, developed by Delaware Public Archives and the local chapter of the Washington-Rochambeau Revolutionary Route Association, was unveiled earlier this month at the entrance to Lewden Green Park on Christiana Road. It marks the last mustering spot of the regiment.

The 1st Delaware Regiment, known for its fighting blue hens, was established by the Second Continental Congress in December 1775 and quickly grew to include more than 700 men.

The regiment was initially commanded by Col. Jon Haslet, then Col. David Hall and eventually Capt. Robert Kirkwood. The men fought in every major campaign of the main and southern armies.

Following the war, the regiment was officially mustered out on Nov. 3, 1783, at or near the Christiana Bridge.

Out of the Past

Editor's note: Volunteers at the Pencader Heritage Museum have been digitizing old Newark City Council meeting minutes. They share excerpts with Newark Post readers in a weekly column.

June-September 1937: Council agreed to a request by police officers for alternate Sundays off instead of a weekday.

The tax rate for all property abutting the unpaved portion of East Park Place was set at $6 per foot. President of Council Frank Collins asked that the assessment on his Dallam Road property be raised from $500 to $1,000. John Johnston's request for a reduction of the assessment on his rental properties was denied. The tax rate was set at 40 cents per $100 valuation.

A larger water main on Wilbur Street between Prospect and Cleveland avenues was authorized. Ira Shellender was reimbursed $2.95 for ambulance supplies. A public fund drive for the ambulance service raised $1,358.78. Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company wanted all correspondence addressed to the company rather than individual members.

The resurfacing of Main Street from the Pomeroy Railroad east to the end of the present hard surface was needed. Rittenhouse and Dennison Motor Companies were told to stop storing company cars on public streets. Council had no legal right to withhold building permits for gas stations on Main Street.

The quality of Blue Hen Farms' milk was improved. The University of Delaware wanted to be reimbursed for water and electricity charges since its swimming pool was open to public during summer. Action was deferred.

For health reasons Mr.

Shew would no longer be able to continue his work with the Light and Water Department. A new truck was badly needed, as expensive repairs were imminent on the present Ford. Bids would be sought.

El Maguey Mexican Cuisine & Bar LLC has on November 15, 2017 applied with the Alcohol Beverage Control Commissioner for a restaurant liquor license that includes Sunday and permits the sales, service and consumption of Alcoholic Beverages on the premise located at 3320 Old Capitol Trail Wilmington, Delaware 19808. Persons who are against this application should provide written notice of their objections to the Commissioner. For the Commissioner to be required to hold a hearing to consider additional input from the persons against this application, the Commissioner must receive one or more documents containing a total of at least 10 signatures of residents or property owners located within 1 mile of the premises or in any incorporated areas located within 1 mile of the premises. The protest(s) must be filed with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commissioner at the 3rd Floor, Carvel State Office Building, 820 North French Street, Wilmington, DE 19801. The protest(s) must be received by the Commissioner's Office on or before December 15, 2017. Failure to file such a protest may result in the Commissioner considering the application without further notice, input, or hearing. If you have any questions regarding this matter please contact the Commissioner's Office.
